Car safety a top priority driving home

Evelyn Lauer
The Daily Iowan

Finals may be over, but before you pack up and head home this weekend, there is one test you still need to pass — getting home safely. UI sophomore Andy Friedlieb is venturing home Saturday to Glenview, Ill., and said many cars traveling this weekend on slippery roads will probably make his 3 1/2 hour drive a little longer.

"I'm more worried about the way other people are going to be driving," he said. "They're going to be more cautious than normal and that slows traffic down a lot. The cops will also be out."

UI students need to be extra careful when they're driving home for the holidays, said Scott Falb, fatal accident reporting system administrator with the Iowa Department of Transportation.

Many times people don't realize road conditions may change while they are driving, Falb said.

"On the days after a snowstorm, people run into problems because they cruise along the highway," he said. "They're OK at how they are driving until all of a sudden, they hit patchy ice or snow. On the long stretches, there's a lull of sleep and the conditions change and boom — they're not ready for it."

The best winter traffic safety tip is to drive at speeds and at a level of awareness set for the worse road conditions, Falb said.

Drivers should also maintain a safe following distance and lower their expectations for how long it will take to get home.

"If you're leaving Iowa City and going to Des Moines, for example, it's usually a two-hour trip," he said. "You should figure three or 3 1/2 to make sure you're ahead of schedule. If you set it for two hours and then the conditions deteriorate, then all of a sudden you're running late."

Temperatures are expected to remain below freezing for the next five to six days, but will be high enough to keep the moisture off the roads, said Sgt. Robert Teneick with the Iowa Highway Patrol.

The DOT places a liquid on roads before a storm to help remove ice and snow. These chemicals work well in 27- to 30-degree temperatures, which most of Iowa is expected to have in the next few days, Teneick said.

"The chemicals eat up the ice rapidly," he said. "If the temperatures were below zero and there were blowing winds, they wouldn't work and we'd have accidents."

Despite some icy conditions, there were few accidents on the highway Wednesday afternoon due to the below freezing, but not below-zero temperatures, Teneick said.

If temperatures stay this way, UI students can expect a smooth ride home, he said.

"We can't put our fingers on it right now," he said. "They may run into patches of ice, but if the temperatures are what they're projected to be, accidents should be light."

Tips for fun trips

Editor's note: This is the fifth in DI reporter Chad Graham's five-part Top 10 lists. Clip 'n read while you're celebrating tonight — you made it through alive and you deserve it.

Top 10 Things to Do on the Way Home

10) Listen to "Jingle Bells," as sung by those barking dogs.

9) See how many blankets, pillows and tray tables you can carry off the plane without getting caught.

8) See if the fake ID you use at the Iowa City bars will work on the airplane beverage flight attendant and her various assortment of holiday spirits.

7) Throw frozen eggnog balls at the cars that drive in the left-hand lane at 40 mph.

6) Count the number of times you see the billboard for that truck stop on Interstate 80. Come on, is it really the world's largest?

5) See how long you can shut your eyes continually and still stay on the road. If you're traveling in Nebraska, it can be done for a half-hour.

4) Stop at McDonald's and scream, "By golly, I've hit the million-dollar jackpot! Round of free cheeseburgers for everyone!" After getting your free cheeseburger, laugh and say, "Oh, I guess it's just a free Coke."

3) Chinese fire drill in the middle of the highway. If time allows, leave one of your friends. They'll laugh at the whole incident someday.

2) Walk into a truck stop wearing fishnet pantyhose and see if you can get a free dinner from the truckers.

1) Go into the bathroom at a highway rest area, stand next to the only other person at the urinals, calmly say, "The German screams at midnight, be ready," and walk away.

Peace for war-torn Balkans

Clinton makes plea 'for things to work'

Terrence Hunt

PARIS — It was an awkward moment for President Clinton. The Serbian president blamed for inciting the Bosnian war reached out his hand and Clinton shook it, explaining later, "You don't make peace with your friends."

After a dawn-to-dusk Paris trip to witness the signing of the historic peace accord, Clinton said his handshake with Slobodan Milosevic "was difficult" but showed once-warring parties that the time for peace had come.

"This is a moment of hope," he said in an address at the signing ceremony. Making a point to shake hands with the Bosnian and Croatian leaders, too, Clinton told the Balkan trio, "You have seen what war has wrought. You know what peace can bring. Seize this chance and make it work."

HOLIDAY BEGINS SUNDAY

Hanukkah reminder: Miracles can happen

Kristen Smith
The Daily Iowan

At sundown on Sunday, Dec. 19, a celebration will begin. But a different kind of holiday miracle will be celebrated — it is the beginning of Hanukkah.

Hanukkah, which means "rededication," commemorates the Maccabees' victory over the Syrians in 165 B.C. When the Jews repossessed the Temple at Jerusalem, they found a day's worth of oil left in the temple lamp. Miracu-

Baboon-to-human transplant last hope for AIDS activist

Richard Cole
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A man dying of AIDS went past the point of no return Thursday in his desperate two-year fight to receive a baboon bone marrow transplant that might save his life.

Jeff Getty, 38, underwent a final round of radiation treatment at San Francisco General Hospital that knocked out what was left of his immune system. He was to receive the marrow injection later in the day.

"It's about time," Getty said. "I'm lucky to still be alive."

Getty, an AIDS activist and former policy analyst at the University of California at Berkeley, had labored to win permission for the highly experimental surgery, which has never been tried before.

In August, the Food and Drug Administration approved the surgery despite warnings from the agency's scientific advisers that the procedure would probably kill Getty and could spread baboon diseases to humans.

3 charged in fraternity house death

The Daily Iowan

Late Friday night on Sept. 8, Lambda Chi Alpha associate member Matthew Garofalo died due to a chain of events set off by excessive alcohol consumption.

"He would do anything for anybody," said Dominic Garofalo,

Matthew's uncle. "He was there for anybody who needed him."

The autopsy report attributed the death to pulmonary edema, or fluid in the lungs.

"What usually happens is that a person becomes so intoxicated they pass out. ... They vomit, but they can't do the normal things you and I would do to keep from aspirating," said Dr. Susan Goodner, a family physician in Coralville.

Garofalo's blood alcohol content at the time of death was .188. A blood alcohol content of .10 means a person is legally drunk.

"You have to take into consideration that's the level at the time of death ... It would have been considerably higher at the time he quit drinking," County Medical Examiner Dr. Victor Edwards said.

The fraternity was placed on interim suspension Sept. 11 by the UI, pending an investigation. The fraternity was also suspended the same day by the Lambda Chi Alpha international headquarters, based in Indianapolis, Ind.

However, after appeals, the suspension was overturned, and the fraternity can make an alcohol-free return pending the UI's decision.

"At the heart of the fraternity is the Christian ritual that believes in second chances," said Tom Helmbock, the executive vice president for Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity, Inc.

"This is an opportunity, if the UI agrees, to make good on some serious mistakes."

Three Lambda Chi members were charged with making alcohol available to persons under the legal age in connection with the death.

UI junior Chad Diehl was found guilty and paid a total fine of $34.50. The other two defendants, Brian Rinehart and Brian Garcea, will go to trial Dec. 28.

Attorney's representing Garofalo's parents were also investigating the circumstances surrounding Garofalo's death, an action that may be a preliminary step in a civil lawsuit.

The UI is still investigating whether the Lambda Chi charter will remain on the UI campus.

The death also resulted in a self-inflicted ban on alcohol at parties in fraternity houses on the UI campus.

Recapping the year in UI news

Presidents join to dedicate National Czech and Slovak Museum

Sat., Oct. 21 — For the first time in Iowa history, the leaders of three sovereign nations — President Bill Clinton, Czech Republic President Vaclav Havel and Slovak Republic President Michael Kovac — met for the dedication of the National Czech and Slovak Museum in Cedar Rapids.

Extra tailgating time turns fans into 'a bunch of clucks'

Saturday, Oct. 21 — Hawkeye fans had extra hours to tailgate before the Iowa-Penn State football game. Rowdy fans in the UI student section threw an assortment of items — including a hog's head, a raw chicken and a beer can that hit defensive ends coach Milan Voleteich — onto the field. Head coach Hayden Fry said those few rambunctious Hawks left TV viewers with the impression that Iowans "are all a bunch of clucks." At the Iowa-Indiana home game, UI officials stepped up security and frisked fans for alcohol — and other things that could be thrown onto Kinnick Stadium's field.

Field hockey team dominates conference

Saturday, Oct. 28 — The Iowa field hockey team shut out the entire Big Ten Conference when it beat Northwestern, sealing the perfect 10-0 record, lifting Iowa to its 10th straight victory and giving the Hawkeyes their 17th win of the year.

Roommate charged in fake suicide

Friday, Oct. 27 — After leaving a suicide note saying he was going to jump into the Iowa River, prompting police to drag the waters for two days, UI junior Kevin Michael Joyce Jr. was found alive Oct. 27. His roommate, UI junior Robert Kooima, who knew Joyce planned to fake his suicide, was charged with making false reports to a law enforcement officer when he reported Joyce missing.

Alcohol — hazardous to athletic careers

Iowa men's basketball guard Chris Kingsbury was charged Nov. 10 with public intoxication at the Holiday Inn. That same day, several members of the UI women's gymnastics team were kicked off the squad for violating the team's alcohol policy. Several drinking incidents at the UI have prompted UI administrators to hold a town meeting tentatively titled "The Use of Alcohol in a Learning Community" in the Main Lounge of the Union on Jan. 21.

Billion-dollar baby on the way for Microsoft mogul

REDMOND, Wash. (AP) — Bill Gates is rolling out yet another product — this one's nine months in the making.

The Microsoft Corp. chairperson's wife, Melinda French, is pregnant. The baby is expected in late May.

"Bill and Melinda are very excited about the baby," spokesperson Erin Carney said Wednesday. "They both come from close families and have been looking forward to having children."

The 40-year-old software pioneer — listed by Forbes magazine in October as the richest American, with a fortune of $14.8 billion — has said he intends to give away 95 percent of his wealth rather than burden heirs with it.

Gates and French, 31, were married on New Year's Day in 1994.

She has worked at Microsoft since 1987 and has not decided whether to give up her management job when she has the baby, Carney said.

Madonna: 'It's a cultural thing'

NEW YORK (AP) — Madonna says the black men she has dated have treated her more disrespectfully than others, and "I think it's a cultural thing."

"So many black men grow up without fathers, without strong male figures, without a sense of romance and seeing a man treat a woman with respect," she said in the December issue of Spin magazine.

What got the 37-year-old singer onto the subject of black men was the O.J. Simpson verdict.

"I think he's guilty, but it's our karma as a nation that he walked," she said, "because we have mistreated blacks and judged them unfairly for so long."

But she also said: "I believe that I have never been treated more disrespectfully as a woman than by the black men that I've dated."

Bond puts himself in 'intimate danger'

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The newest James Bond, Pierce Brosnan, was shaken, not stirred, when an interviewer asked him whether 007 is embracing safer sex in the era of AIDS.

"Engaging in safe sex. I don't know. I really don't know how to answer that question. Actually I just don't have the words. They fail me," Brosnan said.

"It kind of ruins the moment in a Bond movie: 'Excuse me darling, where is it? I've got it here somewhere. My God.' The only gadget that doesn't work."

While Brosnan said the 17th Bond movie, "Goldeneye," is a film for the '90s, he said the newest Bond is closest to the earliest Sean Connery version — the typical "sexist, misogynist, dinosaur relic of the Cold War."

L.A. police chief makes crime pay

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police Chief Willie Williams has received a reported $250,000 advance for a memoir of his crime-fighting career.

"Taking Back Our Streets: Fighting Crime in America," written with Bruce Henderson, is scheduled to be published in April.

Williams ran the Philadelphia Police Department before taking over the Los Angeles force during the fallout from the Rodney King case.

He would not confirm or deny the size of the advance as reported by publishing industry sources quoted by the Los Angeles Times.

Margaret Thatcher still fuming over Gulf War

LONDON (AP) — Five years after the Gulf War, Margaret Thatcher is feeling cheated.

President Bush, who took on Iraq, and Thatcher, the prime minister who urged him on, are out of office. And Iraq's Saddam Hussein is still there.

"I wonder who won?" Thatcher says in a new British Broadcasting Corp. documentary, "The Gulf War."

Reporters on Thursday saw a preview of the series, which will air in January.

Thatcher says she believes she convinced Bush that Hussein had to be taken on militarily after Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990.

She reportedly told Bush, "This is no time to go wobbly."

By the time the huge multinational force was ordered into war in 1991, Thatcher was gone — ousted by her Conservative Party two months earlier because of her growing unpopularity.

Gramm's wife in I.C. on campaign trail

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

If her husband becomes president, Wendy Gramm said more people could achieve the "American dream" — just as she has done.

Gramm, wife of Republican presidential candidate Sen. Phil Gramm, met with supporters in Iowa City Thursday.

Wendy Gramm's grandparents emigrated from Korea to the United States near the turn of the century to work in the sugar cane fields of Hawaii.

"They didn't even know the language," she said. "They only came looking for freedom and opportunity."

After earning her doctorate in economics and serving on the faculty of Texas A&M University, Wendy Gramm was appointed by former President Reagan to chair the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the national regulator of commodities, including the sugar cane her grandfather once harvested.

"That is really the American dream," she said. "It's what we can do in this country if we only let it."

Gramm said her husband's call for a smaller government will open opportunities for more Americans to realize their dreams.

"Americans are willing to vote Republican if we have a nominee who they believe will make a change," she said. "If we don't, we could have a replay of 1992. "Phil is the only one that can really defeat Bill Clinton in 1996."

A Gramm administration would make changes in education and health care. Gramm favors introducing more competition in both, Wendy Gramm said.

"Our university system is the best in the world because universities have to compete (for students)," she said. Gramm would allow parents to make the same choice of schools at the K-12 level.

Wendy Gramm also touted Gramm's role in killing President Clinton's health-care reform bill.

"He opposed it when Dole hadn't yet," she said.

While Gramm's campaign has slipped in recent Iowa caucus polls, the Texas senator is still the leading challenger to Dole nationwide, she said.

Gramm is running stronger in the South and West, and Wendy Gramm indicated support in Minnesota.

"Sen. Dole closed down his Minnesota offices," she said. "They're conceding Minnesota to Phil."

Iowa City Republicans also thought Gramm would do well in Johnson County.

"I think he's going to do like he did at the straw poll and surprise some people," said Diana Braughn, who hosted the event. Gramm tied front-runner Dole at the Iowa GOP Straw Poll held in August.

REVERSING GOP TREND

Clinton quietly laying groundwork for Iowa caucus

Jay Dee
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa caucuses will not just be a Republican affair. While the nine GOP presidential candidates have been grabbing headlines, the Clinton-Gore campaign has been quietly laying the groundwork for the 1996 Iowa race, said Mike Tramontina, President Clinton's Iowa campaign manager.

Even though Clinton will be unopposed in the Democratic caucuses, he is organizing an Iowa campaign. Tramontina said Democratic efforts now will help their candidates later.

"We're going to run a full-blown, caucus-style campaign," he said. "We're going back to the fundamentals."

Clinton's caucus campaign will focus on grassroots organization and rebuilding a Democratic Party structure that was in decline, he said.

While Democrats were soundly defeated in many 1994 elections, Tramontina said the Republican Congress is making voters take a second look at Democratic candidates.

"The way the Republican Congress conducts itself has really created a backlash," he said.

Tramontina said recent Democratic wins in Kentucky, Virginia and Mississippi state elections and in Iowa special elections are good signs for Clinton-Gore.

"There's clearly a Democratic wind blowing out there," he said.

College Democrats deserve some of the credit for reversing the trend, he said. Tramontina praised their efforts organizing a rally to support college loans at the Iowa Democratic Party's Jefferson-Jackson Dinner.

"In that one night alone we took back the momentum from the College Republicans," he said.

Tramontina said he is confident Clinton can carry Iowa in November 1996 even if the GOP nominee is Bob Dole, a senator from nearby Kansas who has been popular for his support of farm programs.

A strong farm economy should help Clinton, he said.

"At the Iowa Farm Bureau annual meeting, the Republican (presidential candidates) couldn't find one thing about the farm economy to complain about," he said.

Aide's Whitewater notes to be revealed to Senate

Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A bitterly divided Senate panel voted Thursday to give a former presidential aide less than 24 hours to turn over his disputed Whitewater notes, rejecting a last-minute White House offer to provide the documents with certain conditions.

The Senate Whitewater Committee's 10-8 vote, along partisan lines, came as the escalating dispute between President Clinton and the GOP-controlled Congress inched closer to a dramatic court battle.

The committee gave the White House and former aide William Kennedy, author of the notes, until 9 a.m. today to produce the records.

If they refuse, the panel likely would seek Senate permission to challenge the Clinton administration in federal court.

The vote came after hours of partisan wrangling, during which Republicans sought to draw parallels between Clinton's current claim that the notes are protected by attorney-client privilege and President Nixon's attempts to withhold documents during the Watergate scandal.

"We all know that claim was bogus and they were hiding something then, as perhaps they are now," Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., told his colleagues.

But Democrats scoffed at the comparisons. Sen. Paul Sarbanes of Maryland, the panel's ranking Democrat, called the vote a "purely political exercise" designed to "provoke a confrontation" even after the White House offered a last-minute compromise.

Clinton and his wife had invoked attorney-client privilege in refusing to turn over notes taken by Kennedy, a former associate White House counsel, at a Nov. 5, 1993, meeting on Whitewater between presidential aides and the Clintons' private lawyers.

But the White House relented Thursday morning, faxing an offer to the Senate committee just as it prepared to vote.

The White House said it would still insist the meeting was covered by attorney-client privilege, but would turn over the notes and also let senators question the four presidential aides who attended the meeting hosted by private lawyer David Kendall.

However, it stated the Clintons' private attorneys at the meeting could not be questioned, the committee would have to agree the meeting was privileged and senators would have to get other investigative bodies, including Whitewater prosecutors, to agree to the terms.

Republicans scoffed at the terms, saying for one that Congress should not tell prosecutors what to do.

Before the vote, the panel's chairperson, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., told his colleagues they have a right to the information "with no strings attached."

White House spokesperson Mark Fabiani said that if Clinton waived his attorney-client privilege on the meeting, he would no longer be able to keep confidential any discussions with his private lawyers in the Whitewater matter.

By insisting the committee and prosecutors recognize the meeting was still covered by privilege, the president had hoped to preserve the right to keep other Whitewater conversations with his lawyers confidential, Fabiani said. However, Congress and prosecutors would be able to use the released notes and the testimony of the four aides any way they chose.

Finally, the White House insisted the committee's Republicans and Democrats agree before taking up future matters covered by attorney-client privilege.

D'Amato said the documents were essential in determining whether the administration did anything improper in 1993 or 1994 after obtaining confidential information about two ongoing Whitewater criminal investigations.

The White House insists it never used the information it gathered to interfere with the investigations, and that its position has more to do with preserving precedents.

"I believe that even the president ought to have a right to have a confidential conversation with his minister, his doctor, his lawyer," Clinton said Wednesday.

If the committee votes today to enforce the subpoena, the issue of a court challenge would be sent to the full Senate. D'Amato predicted a floor vote as early as next week.

The next step would be to initiate civil proceedings in federal court.

The Justice Department, meanwhile, disclosed it is already making plans in case the dispute heads to court, and is weighing whether to hire an outside lawyer to represent the executive branch.

Ordinarily, the Justice Department would represent the executive branch while Clinton's lawyers would represent his private interests.

But Attorney General Janet Reno is concerned that if she were to state a legal opinion in the dispute, she might appear to be pressuring Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr, whom she has the power to limit or even fire.

"What we want to make sure is that the Justice Department does not interfere with the independence of the independent counsel in the Whitewater investigation," Reno said.

The Kwanzaa Karamu is a potluck feast held on the last day of the Kwanzaa celebration. In some families, special "good luck" foods are prepared, such as mustard, kale and collard greens and a black-eyed peas and rice dish called "Hoppin' John." The family sips from the "unity" cup, starting with the oldest and ending with the youngest, in honor of their ancestors.

Hoppin' John Soup

A southern tradition for New Year's eve to bring good luck for the new year!

1 T. unsalted butter	1/4 tsp. dried thyme
2 T. olive oil	1 bay leaf
1 large onion, minced	1 qt. chicken stock
1 large clove garlic, minced	1 qt. water
1 lb. black-eyed peas	1/2 cup brown rice
1 ham hock	juice of 1 lemon

Heat butter and olive oil in a large pot. Add onion, cook one minute. Add garlic and cook five minutes. Stir in black-eyed peas, ham hock, thyme, bay leaf, chicken stock and water. Heat to boil. Reduce heat and simmer one hour. Add rice, stir, cook until rice and peas are tender, about 30 minutes. Remove ham hock, chop meat and return the chopped ham to soup. Stir in juice of lemon and lemon zest. Add salt and pepper to taste. Sprinkle with chives. Serve steamed collard greens and yams on the side.

Some scholars believe decorated evergreens became popular in Germany when they were featured in the miracle plays of the 15th century. These "paradise trees" were hung with apples to symbolize the knowledge of good and evil on the tree of Eden. Hessian troops serving in the American revolutionary war missed the Christmas Tree tradition of their native Germany. They introduced the first Christmas trees to America. In 1926, we celebrated the first official American Christmas tree.

Your Celebration! Hanukkah

Hanukkah, the Jewish Festival of Lights, which is observed this year beginning at sundown on December 17, commemorates the rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem after the expulsion of the Syrians in 165 BC.

Jewish families observe the eight-day festival of Hanukkah by lighting one additional candle each night on a special candelabrum called a Menorah.

Hanukkah is celebrated with special songs, dances, games, and food. One special treat is potato latkes, or pancakes, made with pure vegetable oil to symbolize the oil found in the Temple.

Potato Latkes

2 large potatoes
1 medium onion
2-3 T. parsley
3 eggs
1/3 c. flour
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
1/2 tsp. baking powder
canola oil

Grate the potatoes and onion and mix together. Chop the parsley and add to the potato/onion mixture, set aside. In a second bowl lightly beat the eggs and then mix with the next three ingredients. Combine with the potato/onion mixture, mixing well. Fry in canola oil and serve with applesauce and plain yogurt or sour cream.

Judge orders teen shackled to mom

Bruce Smith
Associated Press

SUMMERVILLE, S.C. — All day, every day, for the next month, Deborah Harter will lead her teen-age daughter around on a 2-foot chain — to school, to the store, to bed.

A judge ordered the security measure for Tonya Kline, a rebellious 15-year-old who kept getting in trouble with the law.

"I lead her around like a puppy dog," Harter said.

The 38-year-old homemaker doesn't particularly like it. But on Thursday, sitting next to her daughter beside the Christmas tree in their suburban Charleston house, she said it beats sending her daughter back to a detention center.

Tonya wears a belt normally used for shackling prisoners. Since Dec. 7, her mother has been required to hold on to a chain attached to the belt.

Tonya can shower and go to the bathroom alone at home, where the bathrooms have no windows. Her mother has to sleep next to her on a couch in her bedroom. Everywhere else, they are linked by the chain.

In class, her mother sits next to her or behind her.

"It's not as bad as it seems," Tonya said. "I think about the positives, not the negatives."

The girl has to behave and go to school every day, though she said a migraine kept her home Thursday. And she can't sneak out at night.

If her daughter leaves, Harter faces 30 days in jail. Tonya said she isn't planning an escape.

"It's taught me a lesson," she said. "I'm already straightened out."

Tonya spent two months in juvenile detention awaiting sentencing on charges of truancy, shoplifting and breaking into a house with her 16-year-old brother.

At a Dec. 7 hearing before Family Court Judge Wayne Creech, the judge set sentencing for Jan. 27. When it looked like Tonya would be sent back to juvenile detention until then, her mother offered to do whatever it takes to keep her daughter home. But the judge worried that she'd run away again.

Harter was expecting the judge to order electronic monitoring.

"When he told the fellas to go get

Tonya Kline, 15, fidgets with the shackles that attach her to her mother Deborah Harter Thursday in Summerville, S.C. A family court judge ordered her to wear the shackles for a month in lieu of being sent to a juvenile detention center in Columbia.

the shackles, I was kind of shocked," she said. "I never thought of this."

The judge told WCIV-TV in Charleston on Wednesday that he did some checking before he imposed the punishment and found no law against it. He recently ordered the same measure for a 10th-grade boy.

Other judges barely raised an eyebrow.

"It's obviously unusual," said state Supreme Court Justice Ernest Finney Jr. "The times in which we live are different."

"If it works, let's look at it," said state Attorney General Charlie Condon.

Family Court Judge A.E. Morehead III, a former president of the South Carolina Conference of Family Court Judges, said judges sometimes need unusual solutions.

Once he ordered parents of truants to go to school with their children. "It had a dramatic effect," he said.

The executive director of the state chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, Steven Bates, said the agency objects to shackling prisoners but won't fight this case because neither mother nor daughter wants to.

"Our concern is that it not become a routine incident," he said.

As for Harter, she said she and her husband, Richard, Tonya's stepfather, never get any time alone anymore. She misses going out with him and spending time with friends.

Microsoft, NBC become multi-media tag team

Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — NBC and Microsoft are joining forces to start a 24-hour all-news cable channel plus an on-line service that will enable computer users to watch the news on their PCs.

The network and the world's largest software company announced plans Thursday to start MSNBC Cable, a round-the-clock news channel, and MSNBC Online.

"This is the very beginning of the interactive world. By bringing the power of these two operations to bear on this, we'll be able to be a leader and make the news far more attractive than it's been."

Microsoft President Bill Gates

"This is the very beginning of the interactive world," said Microsoft President Bill Gates, speaking via satellite from Hong Kong. "By bringing the power of these two operations to bear on this, we'll be able to be a leader and make the news far more attractive than it's been."

Microsoft will pay $220 million for half of America's Talking, NBC's all-talk cable subsidiary; over the next six months, the Fort Lee, N.J.-based cable network will be converted into the 24-hour news operation.

In addition, NBC and Microsoft will each put up $200 million over the next five years to run both ventures.

"We'll try to be up this summer, officially, with the new service," NBC President Bob Wright said.

MSNBC Online's goal is to provide NBC News video, sound, graphics and text via the Internet's World Wide Web, accessible through high-speed cable modems soon to reach the market.

"We're taking the long-term view here that, over time, video will be an important data type, as well as the audio and text that are already available," Gates said.

A user could see a story on "Dateline NBC," then explore it in depth on MSNBC Online, with "point-and-click" access to video clips, sound bites and historical background from NBC archives.

NBC News will have exclusive editorial control of both the cable channel and the on-line service.

In the United States, MSNBC Cable will reach nearly 20 million homes, with 35 million locked-in by the year 2000.

Overseas, it will reach as many as 200 million homes through NBC Super Channel in Europe, CNBC in Asia and Europe, Canal de Noticias NBC in Latin America and NBC Asia, scheduled to begin operations in January.

To offer video on-line, NBC and Microsoft are counting on the development of faster access to the Internet.

Most people with home computers connect to the Internet over phone lines with a modem. But several cable companies are working on allowing Internet access through cable, which moves data hundreds of times faster than a phone line.

CNN, received by 67.5 million households in the United States and millions more worldwide, has had the all-news cable field to itself since Ted Turner launched CNN in 1980.

Two weeks ago, News Corp.'s Rupert Murdoch said he would launch an all-news channel. On Dec. 5, ABC said it would enter the global, 24-hour cable TV news business in 1997.

CNN was not impressed by NBC's bid. "Every service they announced today, we've already got out there," said Steve Haworth, a CNN spokesperson. "Our home page on the Internet ... is getting 3 million hits a day."

"A 24-hour all-news cable network? We've got a few of those on the air as well," he said, citing CNN, CNN Headline News, CNN International and a financial service, CNNfn, that debuts next month. "And if you're trapped at the airport, Airport Network."

Treaty brings reluctant peace to Balkans

Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

PARIS — After 3 1/2 years of shooting and shouting, Balkan leaders officially ended Bosnia's war in total silence Thursday.

Their troops guided by hatreds and conflicts far older than their nations, the presidents of Bosnia, Serbia and Croatia chose the path of peace reluctantly, and only after U.S. intervention.

They did not smile, and that was understandable; there was little to celebrate. Bosnia's Alija Izetbegovic, Serbia's Slobodan Milosevic and Croatia's Franjo Tudjman said nothing to one another before, during or after the silent signing of a treaty drawn up to end the war.

The treaty, signed in Paris after intensive negotiations in the United States, was endorsed as the best hope for peace in a situation of few options. The pact, brokered after uncounted attempts at peace bore no fruit, allows the deployment of 60,000 NATO peacekeeping troops — including 20,000 Americans — into the Balkans.

They will enforce the end of a war stoked by traditional hatreds that has left 200,000 people dead or missing and nearly 2.5 million men, women and children displaced both inside and outside Bosnia as part of what has been dubbed "ethnic cleansing."

The U.S.-sponsored accord was drafted and initiated in Dayton, Ohio, on Nov. 21. It was carried across the Atlantic to be signed in Paris by Bosnia's warring factions, its neighbors and all major Western powers — a demonstration of the broad, multinational resolve to ending the conflict.

The Dayton pact calls for the division of Bosnia roughly in half between Serbs and the Muslim-Croat government with small remnants of central rule, free elections within nine months and the prosecution of war criminals. The agreement also gives refugees the right to return home, though lingering hatred makes it unlikely many will.

Presidents Alija Izetbegovic of

"My government is taking part in this agreement without any enthusiasm but as someone taking a bitter yet useful potion or medication."

President Alija
Izetbegovic of Bosnia

Bosnia, Slobodan Milosevic of Serbia and Franjo Tudjman of Croatia reluctantly accepted the accord because it ends the war without a definite winner or a loser.

"My government is taking part in this agreement without any enthusiasm but as someone taking a bitter yet useful potion or medication," Izetbegovic said.

He added, though, "that the signing of this agreement is being done with full sincerity on our part, and the agreement will be duly respected."

Tudjman called the signing "a major stride forward which should make it possible to end one of the most serious political and military crises of our day."

Milosevic had encouraged the war for years with his dreams of a Greater Serbia.

He became a reluctant peace-maker after a U.N. embargo battered his country and NATO air strikes hit Bosnian Serb positions this summer.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan

President Bill Clinton, second from right, rests his hand on the arm of French President Jacques Chirac, who shakes the hand of the Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic following the signing of the Balkan peace treaty at the Elysee Palace in Paris Thursday. Looking on at left is Spanish President Felipe Gonzalez.

Karadzic and his top military chief, Gen. Ratko Mladic, were absent from the signing. Both have been indicted by an international war crimes tribunal, and France vowed to arrest them if they tried to show up.

Milosevic negotiated on their behalf in Dayton.

The Balkan leaders and President Clinton joined French President Jacques Chirac and other European leaders in signing the plan at the 18th-century Elysee Palace.

Then, with the stroke of a pen, Clinton committed some 20,000 U.S. troops to Bosnia as part of a 60,000 NATO force which is to implement the agreement.

The White House also announced a total of $117.6 million in emergency aid to Bosnia. Clinton also plans to ask Congress for an additional $600 million to help Bosnia rebuild over the next several years.

Clinton was committing the first American troops to Bosnia to join the NATO-led peacekeeping force after winning grudging acceptance from Congress this week.

France and Britain will each commit about 10,000 troops and Russia 1,500. Other European nations will contribute most of the rest.

Hey, you wouldn't give your money away to just anyone, would you? Neither can we. Offers expire January 15, 1996. No payment of principal or interest will be required for 90 days. Interest accruing during this 90-day period will be added to the principal and will bear interest which will be included in the repayment schedule. The monthly payment quoted above is an estimate based on a total loan amount of $1,662.09, which includes a sample purchase price of $1,662 for the Performa 6214CD system shown above. The total loan amount also includes a 6.0% loan origination fee. Interest is variable based on the Commercial Paper Rate plus a spread of 6.35%. For example, the month of October 1995 had an interest rate of 12.17% with an annual percentage rate (APR) of 13.95%. Monthly payment for the total loan amount described above would be $30.36. Monthly payment and APR shown assumes no deferral of principal and does not include state or local sales tax. Monthly payments may vary depending on actual computer system prices, total loan amounts, state and local sales taxes, and a change in the monthly variable interest rate. Prequalification expedites the loan process, but does not guarantee final loan approval. Subsequent acceptable verification documents must be received before your loan is approved. Army says hate is acceptable if well-hidden

Two white U.S. Army officers allegedly shot an African-American couple in their heads Dec. 7. As a result, an Army internal task force is conducting an Army-wide investigation of officer membership in hate groups.

Army regulations forbid active involvement in hate groups, including white supremacist organizations. And yet, officers are allowed to be members if they are not involved in public rallies, distribution of literature, raising funds, recruiting members or attending meetings.

The Army is fighting for its country, which is composed of a variety of people. But behind the scenes, racist officers are the enemy.

The hypocrisy is ridiculous. If these soldiers are representatives of the United States, a nation filled with various ethnic and racial backgrounds, they should be prohibited from belonging to hate groups. Although people have the right to their individual beliefs, it is overstepping bounds when they inflict those views on others in a physical way. "It's not wrong if it doesn't hurt other people" doesn't apply in this case because potentially, racist views result in hate crimes. If the Army is aware of these officers' beliefs, which can result in physical harm, action should be taken. Intolerance is supported in other cases — homosexuals are not allowed to be open about their lifestyles.

EDITORIAL POINT OF VIEW

If the U.S. Army cannot support gays then there is no reason officials should protect white supremacists.

If the Army cannot support homosexuality, there is absolutely no ground for it supporting white supremacists.

It seems this country still looks to a certain image of an "American," try as it might to be diversified. Heterosexual white officers are preferred to homosexuals. Perhaps white officers are also preferred to minority officers. Hate lives at all levels of the game; intolerance knows few boundaries when applied to gender and race.

Or perhaps hate is not wrong unless it is exposed. Homosexuals are not allowed to be openly gay in the Army. Officers can be Ku Klux Klan members, so long as they don't parade their beliefs. But if this country seeks to be accepting of every citizen, how can it allow intolerant people to hold power in their hands and represent the United States of America?

The recent murder of Michael James, 36, and Jackie Burden, 27, has coerced the internal task force into researching officers and their involvement in such organizations. Although this is a start, action needs to be more strict. If an officer belongs to an organization, they should not be allowed to represent the United States. They cannot honestly represent both groups.

The officers, James Norman Burmeister II, 20, and Malcolm Wright, 21, are being charged with murder. The actions of these officers, however, do not just reflect upon them. The Army holds some responsibility, as well.

Police report that James Norman Burmeister II, 20, and Malcolm Wright, 21, are both privates at Fort Bragg. The Army admits there have been other cases of intolerance it has failed to investigate. But the outright killing of a black couple is too significant to ignore. Why does it take the murder of a black couple to get reaction? If the Army was aware of the intolerant undercurrents before, it should have dealt with them sooner. Perhaps some lives would have been saved.

Now, it appears the Army is trying to save face. Taking halfway measures will ultimately result in no action at all. If the Army is serious about purging itself of overt racism, it must rid itself of overtly racist officers. The results of the investigation of officers involved in hate groups is due March 1, 1996. Action taken on the consequences must support the ideals of the United States Army and the multicultural society it represents.

University ignores plight of freshman mother-to-be

This is a true story, about a real woman, on a real campus, who went to get some real help at a real office and was basically told she was really stupid.

Her name is Nicole and she lives in Burge. She's 18 years old and when she graduated from high school she was graciously accepted into the UI as an out-of-state student. She went to orientation with hope in her heart like all freshman and signed up for a ton of GERs. She was happy and excited for school.

Then, a week before she moved into the residence hall she found out she was pregnant.

Now, the circumstances of her pregnancy are not important to this story. This story is instead a tale of how Nicole, who pays $4,318 in out-of-state tuition, tried to get some help from people employed through the money she pays the UI, and was shamed for her condition.

But Nicole is a strong woman. She bought herself an "Iowa Mom" sweatshirt and kept waking up for class. At her first ultrasound she got so excited, she had to know her baby's gender. It is a boy.

Nicole is smart. With her baby due in March, she knew she couldn't (and didn't want to) live in her residence hall room with her newborn child. She went to the housing office to get out of her second-semester dorm contract and to ask for advice on what to do.

In the UI Residence Hall Guidebook there is no official policy on pregnant women with dorm contracts. It is a rule that you can't live in the residence halls with any of your dependents, and it is also a rule that you can't break your contract unless you pay at least 80 percent of the fee up front before you leave, get married, withdraw your registration or die. The policy on pregnant women is unclear, and Jane Dorman, assistant to the residence hall director, said "decisions are made on a case by case basis." She said residence hall residents who get pregnant can find alternate housing reasonably quick in family student housing (university housing that is not a breach of contract), and exceptions are sometimes made in other matters concerning room and board when the individual talks to the head of the UI Housing Office.

In Nicole's case, the first time she went to the housing office the woman behind the desk said there was absolutely no way she could move out. Confused Nicole asked for an explanation of the current policy and explained that she was due to deliver in March. Instead of having the "case by case" policy explained to her, Nicole said she was told by the woman, "You should have thought about that earlier."

Nicole thought the only way she could get out of her contract was to drop out of school. She began making plans to do so.

But Nicole had made a promise to her mother, her baby and to herself that she was going to stay in school. She went back to the housing office after receiving the handbook and asked again about alternatives to her housing contract.

According to Nicole, the lady behind the desk (a different one this time) said, "This is your fault not mine." Nicole asked if there was someone above this woman she could talk to. The woman, with the head of housing office directly behind her and in Nicole's plain view said, "No, and she would tell you the same thing."

Case by case basis. Exceptions made. Caring about students. No exceptions were made for Nicole. She didn't even get a chance to speak to the person who makes the exceptions. She was treated rudely by other women whose salary she pays with her U-bill.

Nicole finally got her financial aid and went back to the Burge food line. She called the family housing manager herself, secured a two-bedroom apartment that she can move into in January, and took her last final yesterday. But she can't walk by the housing office without cringing and she can't help feeling like a paying student who got the shaft. She still feels like the university which told her it didn't treat its students like numbers or dollar signs did exactly that, and that her pregnancy was their excuse to turn her away.

Merry Christmas to you, Nicole. May your baby grow up to be beautiful and happy, and may his spirit soar above all those who didn't believe in his mom.

Giving thanks and praise for daily acts of kindness

Nice things happen to me a lot. I always fantasize that, in my spare time, I will acknowledge these nice things and let those who are nice to me know I appreciate their kindness. I want to write letters, publicly acknowledge people and generally make it known how great people are. Of course, time runs out. I have something due or my daily agenda gets in the way, so kindness goes unacknowledged.

Lea Haravon is featured Fridays on the Viewpoints Pages

Today's column, the last column of the season, valorizes some of the many kindnesses I have experienced this year. This is the time of year to recognize, thank and love people who are good to us. So, here is a partial list of kindnesses, large and small.

1) Robert A. Lee Community Recreation Center pool, Gilbert Street, Iowa City: This place is my solace. Twice a week at 6:30 a.m. I brave the frigid temperatures and bike over to the pool. I am always amazed at my good-natured early-morning swimming compatriots, as well as the staff who make sure we neither drown nor fall asleep while we make our way up and down the lanes. They try to memorize our names, always say hello, thank us for coming as we leave the pool — and a trail of drips — behind.

Today's column, the last column of the season, valorizes some of the many kindnesses I have experienced this year. This is the time of year to recognize, thank and love people who are good to us. So, here is a partial list of kindnesses, large and small.

We can watch the sunrise over Burlington Street, feeling warm in the water as we see the cars pass snow drifts outside. There is an early morning camaraderie at that hour. Although I am the youngest swimmer there, I always feel welcome. One of the first times I went, a gentleman welcomed me, saying "It's nice to have you join us," which I found interesting because I think of lap swimming as such an individualized thing. At the rec center, it's not. I look forward to going there, thanks to the warmth of the swimmers and staff, if not the water. I hope some of you are reading this while enjoying a hot cup of coffee after your early morning dip.

2) My friend Rita. I was feeling sad a few weeks ago. Very sad. I called Rita. "Can you come over?" I asked her. She said she would. "And, could you bring me a little present?" I said in a wavering voice. She said she would. It is a rare friend that one can call up and ask for a present and know this is not an imposition. Even if it is one, she will do it anyway, putting away her dissertation research to come and listen to me. Not only did she listen, she brought over the greatest presents! Wonder Woman Pez, bubble bath, and Kids' Cocoa, vanilla flavor. I felt better. Having Rita in my life makes me wonder why friends don't have "commitment ceremonies," promising each other their love and friendship until they die. I'd love to stand up and tell the world I'll be her friend forever.

3) People who read my column. I am so grateful when people on the street or at a restaurant stop me and say "Hey, do you write for the paper?" Even if they don't like my stuff, it is nice to know people actually read some of it. I often feel like I send my words out into a void, never knowing if, and under what conditions, people see them. When readers come up to me and say "Hey, I liked the one about the ..." it makes me happy for the rest of the day.

4) My parents. Even though they get on my nerves, like all parents do, they are always, always there for me. That is invaluable to me as I move through this world where almost everything is uncertain.

5) My students in Introduction to Women's Studies. I had the best class I ever taught this semester.

You are an incredible group of young women and men.

6) My partner. I am a pretty exhausting person to be around. I would never, never date myself; I just wouldn't have the energy or the patience. But my partner is a fountain of energy and patience. Lucky me.

7) Mary Fain, KUNI morning disc jockey: This woman makes my mornings. I am in love with the sound of her voice. If you like classical music and soothing tones, check her out. Hers was the first radio voice I heard when I moved to Iowa City. She made me feel at home.

8) People I am friends with but thought I would never be able to be friends with. These are people who hurt me and from whom I cut myself off for months or even years. This past fall, I have reunited with several people from my past who I thought I would never speak to again. I am glad that we can forgive and remember what we liked about each other in the first place.

This holiday season, as you leave town to be with those you love, remember the small and large ways people care about you. Recognize these ways. Honor them. Write them. Speak them.

Students cannot escape university nonsense

One's experience of Iowa City is unique, each of us brings and takes away our own baggage. There are, however, a number of institutions and environs which confine, structure and shape each of our experiences, of which the town and the UI must be aware.

Work-study students, for example, are put in a position of working with full-time workers, many of whom commute to Iowa City, give nothing to the community and perceive the student as a threat. They forget or don't care that a student's work is part of a financial-aid package. Students earn much less than they do, have no benefits and are left with the worst work and unclear requirements.

Iowa is a 'right to work state' that subsidizes scabbing. A subsidized scab does not belong to the union, pays no dues but is entitled to and covered by all union-negotiated benefits. No one who is a subsidized scab deserves the benefits of being in a union, including legal representation, pay hikes, a safer working environment and guaranteed pension. It is the height of hypocrisy to oppose unions but happily enjoy the benefits.

Work-study students are resented by union workers because we are cheaper labor than the subsidized scab, who resents us because we pay our and their wages through tax and tuition. The UI does not recognize our rights while ripping us off and using us as a wedge in wage negotiations. We are not scabs, but the university makes us appear to be and we have little choice but to accept the harassment because we have to eat.

I have received a 10-cent raise during the three years I have worked for the UI as work-study student.

GUEST OPINION POINT OF VIEW

UI Student Legal Services, UI Hospitals and Clinics and the work-study program are adding stress to students' lives and draining their funds.

Now, when school and home schedules permit me to work more hours, I am replaced by a full-time worker for vacation. We should have union representation!

While we pump money into the UI, we are pumping more money straight back into the economy of Iowa City. Too often the student will encounter outrageous prices with forays from merchants and servers in town or hospitals.

We, as students, pay for the hospital in more ways than one, but when we need real treatment, we are gouged. Students have been charged $600 for a routine exam at University Hospitals and Clinics after being told it would cost only $250. One of my husband's colleagues bought UI insurance only to be left with the choice of which eye he wanted to save after contracting cataracts in both. We are routinely made to wait for an hour or more, and then, just in case we forget our self-like status, we get a technician who knows nothing. If we complain, we get less than professional doctors, who in turn apparently regulate themselves. We are not serfs, we are not pieces of meat. We deserve to be treated fair as outlined in the AMA patient/doctor guidelines.

It does not matter if you pay your bill to the city promptly. Ask why your water bills have doubled and then doubled again. You'll get nothing but attitude — call the municipal building and ask a few questions. Rather than getting a prompt answer, you get an incredibly nasty letter that also goes to your landlord. Your rights to privacy mean nothing to some.

When a student decides these situations and attitudes, not to mention bills, are ridiculous they can go to UI Student Legal Services for help where you are to shut up and put up. If these non-solutions are not acceptable, students can pursue whatever solutions they choose on their own — between course work and other responsibilities — which adds to already mounting student stress.

The student having negotiated through all of this nonsense, having taken more courses than were really needed for graduation and having averted missing classes essential to graduation, no thanks to any adviser, now has had a full impression of Iowa and Iowa City and the UI. What do you suppose that impression might be?

We, the undersigned, are writing to second Dave Schwartz's request for a new photograph. As fellow patrons of the culinary arts, we understand that presentation is as important to a good meal (and column) as the atmosphere, company, content and croutons. In order to truly satisfy the readership, we suggest you publish a new photo daily. Dazzled as we are by David's personal growth-through-stomach-contents, we would enjoy a photo-journalistic account of the concurrent changes in his physiognomy as well. Believe it or not — Greek members are their own people

To the Editor:

I am truly amazed someone with such little evidence about the Greek community can pass judgment as though it is fact. This is in reference to "Greeks need to stop living the stereotype," a letter in the Dec. 8 issue of the DI.

Yes, it is unfair to stereotype the entire Greek community based on what a few might say, what vehicle they drive, or how they act. I myself, drive a modest '86 Plymouth Sundance, and hope that someday after graduation I will be able to afford a new car. Also, I haven't nor have I heard any woman in my house smack her gum and say "Like, oh my God." Enough for any defending of an inaccurate account of Greek life.

As for the Garofalo incident, violations of the moratorium and vandalism of university property by fraternity members, I cannot condone or justify any of these events. It is unfortunate that incidents like these occur, but the entire Greek community cannot be accountable. Believe it or not, Greek members are individuals with our own set of opinions and ideas.

As for charitable organizations, the Greek community has actively been philanthropic for decades. During my four years in my house, I — along with my sisters — have volunteered time to the Big-Brother, Big-Sister program, the Iowa City Senior Citizen Center, the Iowa City Public Library, Hospice Road Races and the March of Dimes. Probably the most notable is Dance Marathon.

And I, my two roommates and the women in my house are far from being idiots. For example, my roommates and I all hold leadership positions in student organizations, have plans to attend graduate school and held internships last summer. Two of us have scholarships, two of us have jobs, and between the three of us, our GPA is over a 3.5. This is a pale comparison to what I have seen other women in my house and Greek members accomplish within the past four years.

I do not consider myself one of the outstanding few in the Greek community since I have witnessed many others accomplish more than myself. Does this make me a part of the stench of the overwhelming majority? If it does, then the majority of the Greek community fumes of motivation, perseverance and dedication.

I am proud to be a member of this group because, from what I have seen, most members of the Greek community are academically and community-minded individuals. From my experience, the accomplishments of the majority surpass the inadequacy of the few. It's unfortunate that the uninformed view the reverse.

Iowa Supreme Court hears case on Iowa City fetus death

Tom Seery
Associated Press

DES MOINES — An eastern Iowa judge interpreted state law too strictly when he dismissed a termination of pregnancy charge against a man accused of killing a 7-month-old fetus in a traffic collision, a prosecutor told the Iowa Supreme Court Thursday.

The court heard oral arguments in the case of Chadwick Hippler, 20, of Galesburg, Ill. He was charged after a December 1994 traffic accident in Iowa City.

Authorities said Hippler was trying to elude police when the stolen car he was driving collided with a car driven by an Iowa City woman. She was seriously injured and the 7-month-old fetus she was carrying died.

Hippler was the first person charged under a state law prohib-

"This court could rule that possession of stolen property does not constitute a dangerous crime."

Defense attorney John Priester

ing nonconsensual termination of a human pregnancy. Johnson County District Judge William Eads dismissed the charge in May, saying the law did not apply because the collision did not occur during the commission of a separate felony that is "inherently or foreseeably" dangerous to human life, as required by state law.

Prosecutor Ann Brenden told the Supreme Court that the Legislature did not intend the law to apply only in cases of life-threatening felonies.

"There were people who were hurt by this crime. The Legislature recognized that those people exist," she said.

Defense attorney John Priester said the law is "ambiguous." He said that at the time of the traffic collision, Hippler's lone felony offense was possession of a stolen vehicle.

"This court could rule that possession of stolen property does not constitute a dangerous crime," he said.

Brenden said that the type of felony should not be the deciding factor.

"When you're engaged in a felony, that is a very major ingredient," she said.

lously, the oil burned for eight days.

The eight-day Jewish festival of Hanukkah begins on the 25th day of the month of Kislev, the third month of the Hebrew year.

"(Hanukkah) is a minor holiday," UI junior Ian Dubin said. "People turn it into a big production because it is the same time as Christmas."

UI graduate student and Aliber-Hillel Jewish Student Center President Erik Snider agreed that Hanukkah serves as an equivalent holiday to Christmas.

"Hanukkah is important for Jews in the United States for two reasons," he said. "One, I think it serves as a reminder that miracles can happen, and two, it offers an alternative to Christmas."

UI graduate student Lyone Fein said Hanukkah should be celebrated for the message it conveys, not with symbols and gifts because it occurs near Christmas.

"Most people really don't understand the teachings of their religions," she said. "They don't understand the rituals and customs are just superficial symbols of deeper truths. It seems that most people focus on the superficial symbols."

"The nontraditional realm is more important, they spread light that can't be extinguished, just as God's law cannot be extinguished. God's law is about turning away from the material world."

Rabbi Jeff Postman, Agudas Achim Congregation, 602 E. Washington St., agrees Hanukkah is a minor holiday.

"There are no special services, and there are no restrictions about work," Postman said.

Dubin is going to be home for Hanukkah this year because it falls over semester break.

"I'll light the candles, but it is just another holiday," Dubin said.

The major symbol of Hanukkah is the Menorah. A Menorah holds nine candles in memory of the miracle, and is supposed to be displayed in a window for all who pass by. The ninth candle is used to light the candles, Postman said. Each day a new candle is lit and a blessing is said.

Another Hanukkah symbol is the dreidel. A dreidel has four letters representing the phrase, "a great miracle happened here." The dreidel, which is shaped similar to a top, is played as a gambling game, usually for gelt, which are coin-shaped chocolates covered in gold foil, Dubin said.

While many Jews see the dreidel as symbolic of Hanukkah, Postman says the dreidel has nothing to do with the holiday.

"It is just a nice way to waste time," Postman said. "It is typically associated with Hanukkah, but it has no historic significance."

UI sophomore Alexis Chavis decorated her room with a Menorah, complete with candles, and has placed dreidels on her desk. She said she has begun celebrating the holiday even though she knows it isn't time yet.

"Hanukkah is big in the sense that people come together," Chavis said. "It is more of a happy celebratory holiday. It's not sad, people are not mourning anything."

Chavis said her family lights candles and exchanges gifts to celebrate.

"Every family celebrates differently," Chavis said. "My family exchanges small gifts on all of the eight days. Hanukkah is about being with family and the people I care about."

tem.

The transplant idea arose because baboons, for reasons that scientists don't understand, don't get AIDS. The theory is that the AIDS-resistant baboon stem cells will take root in Getty's bone marrow and produce immune-system cells that can fight AIDS.

Getty underwent drug and radiation treatments this week to destroy virtually all that is left of his own immune system to prevent it from attacking the bone marrow, which otherwise would be perceived as an invader.

Those radiation treatments all but ensure he will die from AIDS-associated infections if the transplant fails.

The results of the transplant will not be known for several months.

Jerome Zack, a virologist with the University of California at Los Angeles AIDS Institute, is concerned that the treatment could potentially spread baboon diseases to humans, AIDS, for instance, is believed to have originated in monkeys and mutated into a virulent human disease.

"We don't know what other viruses or diseases might be associated with baboons," he said Thursday. "And you run a risk to the patient, or other patients, if its transmissible."

The Humane Society of the United States condemned the surgery. The baboon that supplied the bone marrow was killed because scientists monitoring the transplant required a large number of samples.

"Baboons, who are highly intelligent, social and emotional animals, should not be killed for such highly questionable experiments," said Dr. Martin Stephens, vice president for animal research issues.

Two years ago, doctors at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center injected whole baboon bone marrow into an AIDS patient, but it failed to take.

In Getty's case, doctors are transplanting stem cells rather than whole bone marrow in the hopes of avoiding rejection.

Stem cells are elementary cell forms that differentiate later into a wide range of disease-fighting cells. Human stem cells have successfully been injected into baboons.

Included with the stem cells is a second class of newly discovered facilitator cells to help the stem cells take root in the body.

Getty, who has criticized the FDA for holding up the procedure, was eager to undergo the surgery. He has been infected with the AIDS virus for 14 years.

"This is for science. We could learn a lot here," he said. "I hope to make a contribution before I pass on. If there is a long-shot chance this will pull me out, OK."

PEACE TREATY

Radovan Karadzic and Serb Gen. Ratko Mladic.

"They have been indicted by the war crimes tribunal," Clinton told CNN, and "cannot be part of the political life of the country."

In an ornate hall at Elysee Palace, Clinton watched intently — and then led the applause — as the Balkan presidents signed an agreement to end nearly four years of terror.

"Today, Mr. Presidents, you have bound yourselves to peace," Clinton told them. "But tomorrow you must turn the pages of this agreement into a real-life future of hope for those who have survived this horrible war."

Skeptics believe the Balkan people "cannot escape their bloody past, that Balkan hearts are too hard for peace," Clinton said. However, the president declared, "All of you have brought us to this bright new day when Bosnia turns from the horror of war to the promise of peace."

Even as Clinton flew to Paris, Congress gave reluctant approval to sending troops to Bosnia. The president read that as significant progress compared with even stronger congressional opposition a month ago.

"The time for debate is over. The time for decision is at hand," he told reporters.

Clinton said he owed "quite a lot" to Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, a presidential rival, for backing the key Senate measure. And he said the U.S. mission will be limited to peacekeeping. "We don't want to become an occupying army."

Clinton raised the prospect of a trip to Europe to visit Bosnia-bound soldiers, whom he called "our precious resource." The visit could come as early as Christmas, aides say, but probably not until February.

The president pledged that U.S. troops won't "cut and run" as long as the treaty is being enforced. And he warned again that casualties must be expected. "When and if they come," Clinton told ABC. "I will say that I am deeply sorry but this is one of the places where America needed to make a stand."

The president stood directly over the shoulder of Milosevic as the man widely accused of stirring up Serbian nationalism signed the U.S.-brokered peace treaty. Clinton sat next to Milosevic during nearly two hours of speeches that followed the signing.

He told CNN Milosevic played "a critical role" in the peace talks at Dayton, Ohio, and has kept his commitments so far.

Of the handshake, Clinton said, "I'm reminded of what my friend, the late Prime Minister Rabin said, 'You don't make peace with your friends.'"

Rabin was assassinated in November.

Clinton said he reminded Milosevic of "other commitments" the Serbian president made in Dayton "that we expect him to follow through on."

Cowboys lead the way in Pro Bowl selections

NEW YORK (AP) — Their recent slump didn't hurt the Dallas Cowboys in the Pro Bowl voting announced Thursday.

Ten Cowboys, including starters Emmitt Smith, Nate Newton, Jay Novacek, Charles Haley and Darren Woodson, were selected in balloting by players, coaches and fans.

The other Cowboys chosen for the Feb. 4 game at Aloha Stadium in Honolulu were backups Troy Aikman at quarterback, Michael Irvin at wide receiver, Larry Allen at guard, Mark Tuinei at tackle and center Ray Donaldson, who is injured.

Not elected to the game was Cowboys cornerback Deion Sanders.

It was the third straight year Dallas had the most selections.

San Francisco added nine players on the NFC squad, including wide receiver Jerry Rice, who made it for the 10th time in 11 seasons. The other starters from the 49ers were linebacker Lee Woodall, safety Merton Hanks and cornerback Eric Davis.

Backups from San Francisco included quarterback Steve Young, defensive tackle Dana Stubblefield, linebacker Ken Norton and safety Tim McDonald. Center Bart Oates will replace Donaldson.

Denver had the most representatives on the AFC team, six, followed by Kansas City with five.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Osborne to speak on CBS about Nebraska problems

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska coach Tom Osborne will have three minutes of television time to discuss the off-field troubles and media attention given to his No. 1 Cornhuskers.

Chris Anderson, sports information director, said Osborne has taped a segment for use during the "Road to the National Championship" program that CBS-TV will air Saturday. Parts of the program may also air before and during the network's coverage of the Tostitos Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 2.

"People have wanted to know recently why I hadn't gone on a TV show, because all these people want to talk to us," Osborne said Thursday. "The reason is, if you talk to them and they have the editing machine, they can make you appear like any kind of an idiot they want to make. I just don't want to get caught up in that too much."

Barnett named college football's top coach

HOUSTON (AP) — Gary Barnett, who led a dramatic turnaround that gave Northwestern its second bowl appearance ever, on Thursday won the Bear Bryant Award as the college football coach of the year.

Barnett, completing his fourth season at Northwestern, led the No. 3 Wildcats out of the Big Ten's basement to a 10-1 record, the conference title and a spot opposite No. 17 Southern California in the Rose Bowl.

"I think all of us that were in the program knew that we had a chance to make a significant step this year," Barnett said. "I don't think any of us would have said we'd be 10-1."

Iowa prepares for the Huskies

Chris Snider

The Daily Iowan

Shortly after he came to Iowa in 1979, football coach Hayden Fry acquired a valuable assistant. Although this assistant is yet to make the journey to the sideline at Kinnick Stadium, it's more than proven its worth.

The assistant is a computer. Thanks in part to this computer, Iowa assistant football coach and offensive coordinator Don Patterson hasn't had much time for recruiting this week.

After inserting Washington's defensive tendencies into a computer, Patterson had to analyze 1,000 pages of information on the Husky defense, then reduce it to two pages of pertinent information to teach his offense.

"We refer to (the two pages) as significant tendencies. Those are the things that matter the most," Patterson said. "We don't want to cloud their minds with too many facts."

Iowa will face Washington in the Sun Bowl on December 29 in El Paso, Texas. Kickoff is scheduled for 1:40 p.m. CBS will televise.

Fry said the computer has cut the time it takes to analyze an opponent in half.

"We condense every possible segment, which takes us about a day and a half," Fry said. "Every down and situation, location on the field, formation. All of those things we feed into the computer and we get a real composite picture and personal profile of the other team."

Before his staff had a computer, Fry said the process was much more time consuming.

"The first three nights of the week, we wouldn't go home," he said. "We'd sleep in the office."

But this computer may soon be replaced by a better one, Fry said.

"There is a company right now trying to sell us a computer that several of our opponents already have," Fry said. "You can punch a button and get all the plays inside the 5-yard line, all the defensive schemes, punch a button and see who they are going to substitute."

But even a computer can't tell you everything about your opponent. That's where Fry's degree in Psychology comes in.

"You have to study the personalities of the offensive and defensive

Iowa sets for Big Ten opener

Wayne Drehs

The Daily Iowan

The No. 11 Iowa women's basketball team won't get much of a break over the holiday layoff with seven games on the schedule, including the opening of Big Ten Conference play.

The action will begin for the 6-0 Hawkeyes at the Carolina's Holiday Beach Classic in Myrtle Beach. Iowa will face 4-1 Appalachian State, out of the Southern Conference, in first-round action, with potential matchups against No. 12 Georgia and No. 22 North Carolina lurking in the later rounds.

Appalachian State returns eight players from last year's 19-9 team, including seniors Karolina Karqvist and Shannon Spencer. Karqvist leads the team in scoring with 11.2 ppg, and Spencer recently became Appalachian State's all-time steal leader with 258 takeaways.

"I look at Appalachian State and the opponents you fear the most are the unknown and again, Appalachian State is an unknown team," head coach Angie Lee said. "We do know they are extremely quick, they run the floor very well, and they penetrate."

If Iowa should advance to late-round action, Lee insists it will be the Hawkeyes doing the hunting.

"In terms of the games after Appalachian State, if things were to go our way, we will be hunting again because Georgia went to the Final Four last year and North Carolina won it two years ago," Lee said.

Following the Carolina Classic, the Hawkeyes head back to the Midwest to open up Big Ten play on the road against Illinois and Michigan. Prior to the season, the Fighting Illini and the Wolverines were picked to finish 10th and 11th in conference play by the Big Ten coaches.

Potentially easy victories won't continue for long though, as Iowa faces No. 17 Wisconsin, Western Kentucky, No. 13 Purdue, and

It hasn't been a bad year of tournaments for members of the Iowa wrestling team.

The Hawkeyes won the National Duals, their 22nd straight consecutive Big Ten Championship, an NCAA Championship title, and recently captured six of 10 individual titles at the UNI Open.

Now, Iowa (5-0) will try to make 1995 even better when it concludes its fall session at the Midlands Open in Evanston, Ill., on Dec. 29-30.

Iowa coach Dan Gable said a strong tournament performance will increase the likelihood that January's NWCA All-Star Meet will feature a large number of Hawkeye wrestlers.

"We would really like to put it together this year," Gable said. "A lot of the Midlands results are going to determine who wrestles in the all-star meet."

Seven Iowa wrestlers are currently ranked in the top eight positions at their perspective weights. Mike Mena, Jeff McGinness, Mark Ironside, and Bill Zadick each hold No. 1 rankings.

But Gable said Iowa's first-class status could be altered if the Hawkeyes become complacent at the Midlands.

"If we want to get people in the all-star meet, we're going to have to do well at the Midlands," Gable said. "If we don't do well there we'll lose our rankings. We want to come up so I think the Midlands is a little more emphasized for my team."

Sophomore Joe Williams said he's looking forward to returning to the Midlands in an Iowa uniform after winning an individual title at 158 pounds last season while wrestling unattached.

Hawks hound Tigers Saturday

David Schwartz

The Daily Iowan

The mere mention of the name — Texas Southern — fails to produce fear in the mind of the college basketball world.

But if you ask Iowa coach Tom Davis, the Tigers could offer his Hawkeyes some stiff competition Saturday.

"They're certainly not afraid to go on the road and play good, tough competition," Davis said. "They're a high scoring, get-after-it kind of ball club."

While Iowa has one of the best backcourts in the Big Ten in Andre Woolridge and Chris Kingsbury, Texas Southern brings its own tough backcourt tandem to Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Tiger backcourt is made up of Kevin Granger and Randy Bolden. The two combine for 58.3 points per game.

"They have terrific guards," Davis said. "They are really dominating with their scoring."

At the beginning of the season, Davis said he was concerned with the inside play of the Hawkeyes. Iowa has some big men, but he wasn't sure if they'd be able to step up to thwart the problems in the Making out a Christmas wish list

It's the holiday season and I've got so much Yuletide I could throw up. To help bring my Christmas spirit down from overkill to tolerable, I've decided to dole out a few gifts.

Since the best gifts are those from the heart, gifts such as Aqua Velva and Andes mints will be excluded.

They're too shallow. I'd rather give something that people will remember, like the Handi-Vac my mother was so proud of buying me last year.

My first wish is for the city of St. Louis, whose population has been tortured since Anheuser-Busch announced it was selling the Cardinals. The Cardinals are a big part of St. Louis, much like that tourist trap known as the Arch and moving the franchise would be like moving ... well ... the Bears to Gary, Ind.

To Iowa basketball player Jess Settles, I wish for him more confidence in his shot. He only took four shots against Iowa State. His wrist is ailing a bit, but as of now, the well-deserved Wooden Award candidate is playing more timid than he was even as a freshman, when he upstaged then-senior James Winters.

My wish for the women's basketball team is a sellout crowd. The Hawkeyes are an exciting team packed with big time players, a dynamic new coach and tons of untapped talent.

And for Iowa center Simone Edwards, a speedy recovery.

How about a new pool for the swimming team. I once saw this episode of Rescue 911 where a kid got his foot caught in a crack at the bottom of the pool. I could have sworn I saw William Shatner broadcasting it from the Fieldhouse.

For the Iowa pep band that plays at basketball games, I pray for a release from the chains that prevent them from playing the "Hey" song.

For Tom Dunn's men's gymnastics team — the national championship.

For the wrestling team ... oh, screw it. Like it really needs my help.

And for the red-shirted Lincoln McIlravy, a gold medal at the Olympic games in Atlanta next summer.

For the USC Trojans and their coach, John Robinson, the realization that they just did as little as humanly possible with the most talent in the country.

A tetanus shot for Dennis Rodman.

An NBA championship ring for Karl Malone and John Stockton.

For the St. Louis Blues, a one-month period in which Coach Mike Keenan doesn't make one player move. Also, reinstate Brett Hull as team captain.

For UMass basketball coach John Calipari, a little compassion. He's the only coach I've ever seen cheer as his team mercilessly runs up the score against such powerhouses as St. Bonaventure.

And last, but not least, a clue for the New York Mets. A couple of years ago, the Mets signed a gaggle of free agents — and lost big. Then they traded away all their high-priced talent and something strange happened — they began to win.

Now, however, they've already signed Lance Johnson and just lost out on a bid for Houston second baseman Craig Biggio. Will they never learn?

But the Iowa big men, led by Russ Millard's 14.5 points per game, have risen to the challenge. Now it's Texas Southern that's having the inside problems.

"Size wise, we've got some big people, but they don't play big," Tigers coach Robert Moreland said. "If we can get them to play big, we'll be fine."

"I'll probably wrestle better because I'm representing not only myself, but the University as well," Williams said. "So far I've got one loss so that hasn't been the best, but I've been working on areas where I feel that I need improve."

coordinators on the other team as well as the head coach," Fry said.

All this has shown the Iowa coaching staff that the Husky defense is pretty good.

"Some people refer to them as a gambling defense," Patterson said. "I'm sure they would probably prefer to be called a pressure defense, an attacking defense, and they are that."

Millard is second on the team in scoring, behind Chris Kingsbury's, now the Hawkeyes' sixth man, 14.8 clip. Forward Jess Settles is averaging 12.6 points a game, while forward Kenyon Murray and point guard Andre Woolridge are averaging just under 12.

Moreland is confident that his team can come out and play well, but he realizes the No. 9 Hawkeyes are quite a mouthful.

"They look like a team that's ranked where they are," Moreland said. "They are an experienced ball club. They know what they're trying to do and they've been doing it very well."

Saturday's game against Texas Southern marks the first of three consecutive home games for the Hawkeyes. Iowa tackles Western Illinois next Wednesday and Morehead State a week from Saturday.

Iowa then has one game on the road — against Colorado — before opening the Big Ten Conference season Jan. 3 at West Lafayette, Ind., against the two-time defending Big Ten champs, Purdue.

The Hawkeyes then face three more conference battles before the beginning of the spring semester, home against Minnesota and Ohio State, then on the road playing Wisconsin.

ment and that's helping a lot."

Williams said he was also excited about facing some stiff competition, including Illinois' defending national champion Ernest Benion.

"In my weight class, two or three of the top guys will be there," he said. "It will be a tough tournament and a lot of the Big Ten teams will be there."

The Hawkeyes only won two individual titles at the 1994 Midlands Open, but Williams said that is likely to change thanks to rigorous training sessions.

"We're going to keep training hard, that's always been Gable's philosophy," Williams said. "He wants all the guys to finish in the top two so they can compete in the all-star meet."

The Hawkeyes will open their 1996 season on January 20-21, when they travel to Lincoln, Neb., for the National Duals.

Recruiting update

Fry has been pleased with his recruiting efforts so far.

"It's going good, but the pickin's are real slim around this part of the country," he said.

Fry said the Hawkeyes have received "quite a few commitments."

"We're real happy right now," he said. "We've got some good commitments."

"I can't imagine having to get ready for them in one week."

Patterson is confident that his offense will be ready.

"Football is to some degree played between the ears. The guys have a lot of confidence right now and we're going to try to build on that as we approach the game."

The Huskies are equally impressive on the offensive side of the ball.

"They've got an excellent offensive attack," Bill Brashier, Iowa's defensive coordinator said. "They've got a very diversified attack. They like to play with two tight ends a lot of times. They like to play with two wide outs. They also like to play with two backs."

Injury report

Rodney Filer and Eric Hilgenberg are the only Hawkeye starters expected to miss the Sun Bowl. Filer had surgery on his knee last week and will return next fall. Washington expects no starters to be out.

ing up on us very quickly," Lee said.

The seven game stretch will also mark the first games Iowa will be without the services of senior center Simone Edwards, who underwent reconstructive surgery Monday to repair a torn ACL in her right knee. The injury will sideline Edwards for the rest of her senior season, thus ending her Iowa career. Luckily for Lee and the Hawkeyes, Iowa has been deep at the post spot all season long.

"One of the luxuries of being so deep at the post is that I've been able to try different combinations very quickly," Lee said. "I think that will be a real key."

MEN'S SWIMMING

Hawkeyes look ahead to fun, sun and work

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Coach Glenn Patton and the men's swimming team will spend ten days in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., as part of their annual training trip.

"It gets us outdoors in sunshine, which is a more natural swimming environment," Patton said. "That's why swimming in the sunbelt is so much more superlative to swimming in the north."

The International Swimming Hall of Fame will be the site of the Swimming Forum, which is put on by the College Swim Coaches Association of America.

With over 2,000 swimmers representing some 200 colleges, the Forum will take over the two Olympic size pools at the Hall of Fame and every other pool in the city of Florida for a month, according to Patton.

Iowa, which has been a part of this event almost every year since its inception in 1932, will spend December 16-24 in Florida.

"It removes everyone from distractions," Patton said. "There's no girlfriends, parents, classes, part-time jobs and no apartments to clean. We can devote the entire time to swimming."

That time will involve about six hours a day, thanks in part to NCAA time limitations being lifted. Patton and members of his staff are normally allowed only four hours a day and 20 hours a week with their swimmers.

Iowa finished the first semester with a 2-1 record, finishing first place at the Iowa Invitational.

"We've been really pleased with our first semester," Patton said.

Iowa faces Alabama and NE Louisiana at Alabama on January 13 to kick off second semester competition.

Hawks leave worries in continental U.S.

There isn't a much better way to forget about a disappointing loss than by packing your bags and heading to Hawaii.

That's just what head coach Patricia Meyer and the Iowa women's swim team will do when they venture to Honolulu for the Rainbow Invitational, January 2nd and 3rd.

Iowa is coming off a tough 158-139 loss to intrastate rival Iowa State in which the Hawkeyes were favored to win. Iowa swam well in the meet, but fell to a Cyclone team that was fresh off a taper and at its peak performance.

Honolulu will hopefully both erase the memories of the loss and bring on some new challenges for the Hawkeyes.

"We are really excited to go to Hawaii because we've been swimming well," junior Nicole Redmond said. "We are usually intimidated by the hard training, but this year we are looking forward to the trip."

A big part of Iowa's excitement all season long has been brought on by their freshman class that has given a strong contribution to the Hawkeye cause this season. Led by Kara Schmitz, Jessica Knippenburg, and Lindsay Garver, the freshmen as a group, have scored top finishes in every meet of the season.

The upperclassmen are quick to warn that things are different in Hawaii, though.

"It's going to be a lot of fun in my last year to see our freshman try to adjust to things in Hawaii," senior Rachel Bayster said.

"It's really a lot of hard work out there," said senior Rachel Bayster.

Dallas will end NFC East struggles

The Dallas Cowboys were 17 1/2-point favorites over Washington at home.

And lost. They were 9-point favorites in Philadelphia.

And lost. So what do they do as 15-point favorites at home against the Giants Sunday?

Punt? They've got a better chance if they do. There are three ways to look at this game.

1. Dan Reeves did the same thing as Barry Switzer last Sunday, although under less pressure and further up the field. He made first down on fourth-and-1 and the Giants went on to score the winning touchdown.

2. The Giants beat Washington twice and Washington beat Dallas twice, so, by comparative scores ... comparative scores work only in computers, which is why computer rankings don't work.

3. New York's season went down the tubes when Emmitt Smith broke loose for 60 yards on the first series of the opening Monday night game. The Cowboys won 35-0 and the Giants never recovered.

"It's us against the world," Switzer says. He should have said "Me against the world."

The world can't win every week.

AUTO RACING

Gordon runs away with top honor

Associated Press

LONGBOAT KEY, Fla. — Jeff Gordon, the Winston Cup champion whose earnings of $4,347,343 were the most ever for a single season in auto racing, has been selected as Driver of the Year.

Gordon received 11 of 12 votes from a blue-ribbon panel of national motorsports writers.

The panel's other vote went to Indy Car champion Jacques Villeneuve, who won the Indianapolis 500.

Gordon will receive the award from the Driver of the Year Foundation during the International Motorsports Hall of Fame's induction ceremony April 25 at Talladega, Ala.

The award went to a NASCAR driver for the 14th time in its 29 years. The 1994 winner was Dale Earnhardt, the seven-time Winston Cup champion. At 24, Gordon was the youngest winner in history.

"It's the icing on the cake ... this has been a very exciting year," said Gordon, the only driver ever to surpass $4 million in single-season earnings.

He outdid Earnhardt with a season-long blitz that included series-best totals of seven victories and eight poles.

But consistency was the key for Gordon, who led in 29 of 31 races and posted 14 consecutive top-five finishes.

"It's been unbelievable to be associated with Jeff, and to win the championship and then win the Driver of the Year is a great honor for him and for our entire organization," said Rick Hendrick, who owns Gordon's car.

Gordon also was recognized as the top driver for the first and third quarters of the year.

Villeneuve won for the second quarter, and Earnhardt for the fourth.

Packers pray for White's return

Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Reggie White's season may not be over, after all.

The Green Bay Packers said today that surgery on the defensive end's left hamstring has been postponed and the NFL's leading sack man was listed as questionable for Saturday's game against New Orleans.

The surprise reversal was announced by the Packers, with coach Mike Holmgren adding that White practiced with the team today.

"The difference between Tuesday's workout and today's is nothing short of miraculous," the Packers medical staff said in a statement. "Reggie will be further evaluated pre-game Saturday morning and a playing decision will be made at that time."

On Wednesday, the Packers said White would be lost for the season. It would have been the second straight year that Green Bay (9-5) had lost one of its stars late in the season. Last year, wide receiver Sterling Sharpe sustained a neck injury that forced him to miss the playoffs.

White has been the dominant force of the defense — physically and spiritually — ever since he signed as a free agent in 1993.

With White in the lineup, the Packers gained the NFC Central lead and remain a game ahead of the Detroit Lions.

But without White last Sunday, the Packers lost 13-10 in overtime to Tampa Bay. The Buccaneers' Errict Rhett ran for 118 yards, compared with only 11 against the Packers with White playing two weeks earlier.

When he sat out the Tampa Bay game, it marked the first time in his 11-year NFL career he missed a game because of injury.

The possibility of losing him had come as a shock to the team.

Without White to contain with double coverage, opposing offenses can alter their game plans, Packers defensive line coach Larry Brooks conceded.

"Ninety to 95 percent of the time people run away from him," Brooks said.

Third-year pro Matt LaBounty would replace White in the starting lineup as he did in Sunday's game at Tampa Bay. He had two tackles and a sack against the Buccaneers.

"He hung in there," Brooks said. "They tried to run the ball at him, and they tried a few trick plays like the statue reverse, and he played it."

Gabe Wilkins also can share time with LaBounty at White's left defensive end spot.

Holmgren said Wednesday that the operation would be to repair a disruption in the hamstring behind White's left knee. White, who turns 34 on Dec. 19, was injured in the Dec. 3 game with Cincinnati at Lambeau Field.

He sprained a knee Nov. 5 against Minnesota and didn't start the next week against the Chicago Bears, but wound up playing most of the game.

White has an NFL-record 157 career sacks, including 12 this year. He's also forced two fumbles and knocked down four passes this season.

The Packers could clinch a playoff berth if they beat the Saints at New Orleans on Saturday. They have not won a division title since 1972, except for the strike-shortened season of 1982.

DALLAS STANDOUT

Emmitt not acting like Emmitt

Denne H. Freeman

IRVING, Texas — Emmitt Smith a fumbler? Say it isn't so.

Smith had a streak of 761 consecutive touches before he dropped the ball in Minnesota in the third week of the season.

Now the fumble funk has really hit the NFL's leading rusher. He has five in the last five games, including fumbles inside the opponent's 5-yard line in each of Dallas' last two losses, against Washington and Philadelphia.

"I may have cost us the last two games with my fumbles," Smith said. "When you fumble as much as I have lately you start thinking about it. You try not to think about it, but you do."

Smith has carried 329 times and caught 57 passes. He's fumbled seven times this year, just one short of his career high in 1991.

Running backs coach Joe Brodsky believes he's found the problem just in time for Sunday's game against the New York Giants in Texas Stadium.

"Emmitt's not a fumbler," Brodsky said. "We had a problem with him not switching hands early in his career, but he does that pretty well now."

"I think I've found the problem. It looks like he is carrying the ball lower than he normally does. He has to get it back up more into his rib cage. I think he may be pressing a little, trying to help the team, and fell into a bad habit. We'll work on it, and I think he'll be all right."

Smith said he was relieved to find the problem.

"I think I probably have been carrying the ball lower," Smith said. "It's a subconscious thing. You don't realize you are doing it. That's a coach's job to find something like that and I think coach Brodsky has found it."

The Cowboys were driving for a touchdown against the Eagles when Smith fumbled after a helmet hit the ball at the Philadelphia 15.

"That might have cost us the game," Smith said. "We were about to go ahead 24-6. I've just got to cut my mistakes down."

Smith goes into the game against the Giants with 1,602 yards. He has scored 23 touchdowns and needs one more to tie the NFL season record of 24 by John Riggins of Washington in 1983.

Smith has rushed for over 100 yards in 10 of the Cowboys 14 games this year, establishing a club record. Smith is on pace for 1,830 yards this season which would eclipse his career best of 1,713 yards in 1992.

"I have confidence in my ability to shake this fumble bug," Smith said. "I'll get back on track."

MAYOR CALLS MEETING

Unstable teams: A call to arms

Rich Harris

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — With the Cleveland Browns possibly nearing their last home game at Cleveland Stadium, Mayor Michael White on Thursday convened a conference of mayors from cities where pro sports teams are threatening to bolt.

Browns owner Art Modell's decision to move his team to Baltimore next season has thrust Cleveland into a leadership role in the debate over sports team "free agency."

But White and mayors of such cities as Houston and Tampa, Fla., say the problem has been brewing for a long time.

"The issue today is no longer just the future of the Cleveland Browns," White said. "It's the stability and the future of the NFL."

"This has got to stop," Tampa Mayor Dick Greco said. Officials there fear the Tampa Bay Buccaneers will move unless they get a new, $168 million stadium.

"It's hurting the sport," Greco said. "It's just a matter of dollars. That's all it boils down to."

Houston Mayor Bob Lanier said city leaders need to work together. The Oilers are planning to move to Nashville, Tenn., next year.

"I think the owners of the NFL — and in pro sports generally — share information, share legal theories, share how to comply with and how to break a lease," Lanier said. "At the very least, I think it would be helpful to come up with some commonality of resources."

But the goal of the two-day conference is less to present a united front than to learn from Cleveland's experience, and to hear from the NFL and the U.S. Conference of Mayors on what else can be done, White said.

Indeed, not all the officials agree on the best course. White, members of the Ohio congressional delegation and some other mayors have supported giving the NFL a limited exemption from federal antitrust laws, which would strengthen the league's ability to block team moves.

Others, including Lanier and Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, are less enthusiastic about the idea. Daley said Thursday he was afraid the exemption might be used to prevent other teams from considering a move to his city.

Sunday's game at Cleveland Stadium against the Cincinnati Bengals is the last regular-season home game of the year for the Browns.

Boxer Mike Tyson raises his arms after weighing in as Don King looks on in Philadelphia Thursday.

Tyson's been Busted before

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Buster D'Amato Mathis. The name of Mike Tyson's opponent Saturday night holds so many ironies for the former world champion.

First of all, the middle name comes from the late Cus D'Amato, who took a teen-aged Tyson out of a reform school and launched him on the path to gold and glory as the fearsome heavyweight champion of the world.

D'Amato also trained Mathis' late father at one time.

"My father loved Cus," Mathis said Wednesday. "Cus was my godfather."

Mathis' late father, and trainer, also was named Buster. The younger Mathis became Buster Jr., although the father had no middle name.

And in the name Buster, there is another Tyson tie.

It was on Feb. 11, 1990, that another man called Buster — James "Buster" Douglas — pulled off the biggest upset in heavyweight history by knocking out Tyson in the 10th round to win the undisputed championship in Tokyo.

Douglas was spurred to the performance of his life by the death of his mother a couple of weeks earlier.

Mathis will go into Saturday's scheduled 12-round match with the incentive of winning for his father, who died of heart failure at age 51 on Sept. 6 at his home in Wyoming, Mich., while his son desperately tried to revive him.

Although the 25-year-old Mathis has an incentive similar to the one Douglas had, there the similarities end. He is given virtually no chance to win the fight originally scheduled for Nov. 4 in Las Vegas. It was postponed because Tyson fractured his right thumb while training.

Douglas, not always a dedicated fighter, had a lot of experience against good heavyweights.

He also was 6-foot-4, had a good left jab, knew how to stay off the ropes and had good punching power.

The 6-foot Mathis can box, but he's not as accomplished or experienced as Douglas was and he's not a power puncher.

Douglas fought a Tyson who was overconfident and worn down by a stormy marriage to actress Robin Givens and by battles for control of his career.

Mathis will be fighting a Tyson who is ring-rusty from a four-year layoff. His first comeback fight, on Aug. 19 against Peter McNeeley, lasted only 89 seconds.

But this Tyson appears focused on becoming a champion again.

Tyson has said he feels sharper than he did while preparing for the Nov. 4 match.

He weighed in Thursday at 219 pounds, five lighter than Mathis, and was listed officially as 5-11½.

The McNeeley fight was a pay-per-view event.

Saturday's fight will be aired free on a Fox telecast that will run from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., and include a junior middleweight title fight between WBC champion Terry Norris and IBF champion Paul Vaden. Both are from San Diego.

OSCAR DE LA HOYA

Young champ defends WBO title

Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Oscar De La Hoya has been warned about the pitfalls of not being focused on the job at hand. Jesse James Leija knows about them first-hand.

So both are confident they will not trip over a poor attitude when they meet Friday night for De La Hoya's WBO lightweight championship in the first fight show in the main Madison Square Garden arena in 33 months.

"Success didn't come easy, it came too fast," said De La Hoya, a national amateur champion at age 17, an Olympic champion in 1988 and now an unbeaten pro champion at 22.

With success came money, and its temptation.

"I was concentrating too much on my golf game," De La Hoya said.

Then came a title defense against veteran John Molina last Feb. 18 in which De La Hoya was forced to go the full 12 rounds for the victory.

Immediately, he decided the only hook he should worry about is his left hook.

"I told myself I've got to refocus," De La Hoya said.

Since the Molina fight, De La Hoya, of Montebello, Calif., has stopped Rafael Ruelas in the second round and Genaro Hernandez in the sixth to make his record 19-0 with 17 knockouts.

"We've seen the rainbow and we know what's at the end of that rainbow," said the 29-year-old Leija.

The gold in the pot at the rainbow's end quickly turned to brass for Leija because, he says, he wasn't properly prepared for the first defense of the WBC super featherweight title he won by outpointing Azumah Nelson on May 7, 1994.

Associated Press

WBO lightweight champion Oscar De La Hoya flexes his muscles after weighing in at New York's Madison Square Garden Thursday.

Leija was battered by Gabriel Ruelas in a 12-round loss Sept. 17, 1994.

"When I became champion, I thought, 'You busted your butt,' and I relaxed," Leija said. "I relaxed too much. I didn't train as I was supposed to. I didn't diet like I was supposed to."

"I didn't have the right sparring partners."

"When I became champion, I thought, 'You busted your butt,' and I relaxed. I didn't train as I was supposed to. I didn't diet like I was supposed to. I didn't have the right sparring partners."

Jesse James Leija,
lightweight boxer

The former 130-pound champion from San Antonio has fought twice as a lightweight (135) since losing to Ruelas.

Leija outpointed Jeff Mayweather and knocked out Rodney Gannett in the seventh round.

While Leija says he paid attention to details this time and can match De La Hoya in experience, he is giving away a lot in size and power.

Leija is 5-foot-5, six inches shorter than De La Hoya.

"What makes Oscar so good is his height and power," Leija said.

"He's a tough fighter," De La Hoya said.

"He's been up against quality opponents. He's a very smart fighter. What I have to do is just box him, I guess."

De La Hoya weighed the class limit of 135 pounds and Leija 134 3/4.

There also is another title fight on what will be the first boxing show in the main Garden since Pernell Whitaker won the WBC welterweight championship by outpointing James "Buddy" McGirt on March 6, 1993. The most recent card in the Garden complex was a show in the Paramount on Aug. 31, 1993.

Tracy Harris Patterson of New Paltz, N.Y., (53-3-1 with 38 knockouts) will defend the IBF junior lightweight title against Arturo Gatti of Jersey City, N.J., (22-1 with 19 knockouts). Gatti weighed 130, Patterson 129 3/4.

Patterson is the adopted son of Floyd Patterson, former heavyweight champion and currently chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission.

HBO will telecast the title fights beginning at 8:30 p.m.

The co-promoters are the Garden and Bob Arum's Top Rank, Incorporated.

Ticket sales indicate that the crowd could be about 16,000.

Biggio decides to stay put in Houston

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Craig Biggio decided to stay in Houston on Thursday, while Jack McDowell found a new team in Cleveland and Randy Myers signed with Baltimore.

On a day in which teams committed $57.26 million to eight free agents, Biggio got a $22.36 million, four-year contract from the Astros, McDowell got a $10.15 million, two-year deal with the Indians and Myers got $6.3 million over two years from the Orioles.

Al Leiter may have gotten the most astonishing deal of the day. After going 11-11 with a 3.64 ERA last season for Toronto and making $795,000, he agreed to an $8.6 million, three-year deal with the Florida Marlins.

Center fielder Lance Johnson got about $5 million over two years from the New York Mets, and catcher Mike Stanley was given a $2.3 million, one-year deal by the Boston Red Sox.

Outfielder Darryl Hamilton agreed to a $1.05 million, one-year contract with the Texas Rangers, and outfielder Mike Kingery signed a $1.5 million, two-year deal with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Biggio, who turned 30 Thursday, spent much of this week deciding among offers from Houston, Colorado, St. Louis and San Diego. In the end, he opted to stay with the Astros for a contract that gives him $2 million next season, $6.18 million in 1997, $6.12 million in 1998 and $6.06 million in 1999. The Astros have a $5 million option for 2000 with a $2 million buyout.

"The decision came down to the people here," Biggio said. "I consider myself a loyal person and I've been a part of this organization for eight years. We're going to make it work. I want to win in an Astros uniform."

McDowell will be playing for his third team in three years. The 1993 AL Cy Young Award winner gets $4.8 million in each of the next two seasons. The Indians have an option for 1998 at the same salary but must pay a $550,000 buyout if they don't exercise it.

"We didn't have many pieces to fill, and I think some of the pieces we filled were from within," Indians general manager John Hart said. "And I think Jack obviously was the big piece from outside."

Myers, a 33-year-old left-hander who completed an $11 million, three-year contract with the Chicago Cubs, will receive a $1 million signing bonus, $2.1 million in 1996 and $3.2 million the following year.

"It's going to be new for me because this will be the first time through (the AL)," he said.

By joining the Marlins, Leiter gets to pitch for his hometown team. He gets $2.7 million next year, $2.9 million in 1997 and $3 million in 1998.

Florida general manager Dave Dombrowski said he wants to sign another pitcher.

"Our No. 1 preference would be David Cone. After that I would prefer not to rank them," he said.

Johnson had trouble believing the White Sox didn't want him back. He hit .306 last season with a league-leading 186 hits, 12 triples, 10 homers, 57 RBIs and 40 steals in 46 attempts.

"The White Sox never used me correctly," Johnson said. "I should have been hitting leadoff all seven years there. I never complained about it. It took them six years to realize I was the best man for the job all the time."

Stanley, 32, became a free agent after hitting .268 with 18 homers and 83 RBIs in 118 games last season. The Yankees decided not to sign him and acquired Joe Girardi from Colorado to replace him.

Remake of Hollywood classic lacks flair of Hepburn, Bogart

Dolores Barclay
Associated Press

It takes major, but major nerve to try to match the formidable combination of Billy Wilder, Audrey Hepburn and Humphrey Bogart. Sydney Pollack, an admirable filmmaker, tries exactly that with a remake of 1954's "Sabrina."

The result is not a pretty picture. "Sabrina" is the latest in Hollywood's misguided efforts to "update" old movies in a grab for new audiences. The underlying theory seems to be that filmgoers today couldn't possibly appreciate a charming romantic comedy artfully shot in black and white (in addition to Wilder and Hepburn, the cinematographer also was nominated for an Oscar). Besides, so the thinking goes, the story is so outdated, so out of touch.

Well, folks, the redo — in color — remains outdated and largely out of touch with the professional and personal life of a '90s woman. It's also painfully directed, with strained performances from Julia Ormond and Harrison Ford.

"Sabrina" is the story of a chauffeur's daughter who lives with her father above the garage on a glorious estate on Long Island. She is a young woman hopelessly in love with David (Greg Kinnear), the playboy son of her father's wealthy employer. But David hardly notices her.

Sabrina (Ormond) is sent to Paris to work for Vogue — part of a plan by her father and family matriarch Maude Larrabee (Nancy Marchand) to focus Sabrina's attention on something other than David. She works there for two years and then returns home without any plans for her future outside of happily living above the garage with daddy. This probably worked in 1954, but certainly doesn't hold up today.

Sabrina leaves Long Island a gawky young thing with frizzed hair,

Paramount Pictures

Corporate magnate Linus Larrabee (Harrison Ford) can manipulate others with ease but finds that his own heart is more difficult to control in the romantic comedy "Sabrina."

geeky glasses and a penchant for wearing peasant frocks. She returns a model of high couture — although her makeover doesn't occur until moments before she boards the plane. What was she doing all that time?

She also develops a talent as a photographer while in Paris. But there's a problem: As Ormond plays her, she takes pictures with both eyes wide open. Just try it sometime.

Once back in the United States, the first person Sabrina encounters is, of course, David. He drives her home, flirting every step of the way — unaware that she's the once-frumpy Sabrina. Smitten, he invites her to his mother's birthday party and sets her up for the same type of seduction she has watched him work on other women over the years.

David's brother, Linus (Harrison Ford), the power behind the family fortune, is an intensely serious empire-builder who lives for the perfect deal. A billion-dollar merger materializes when David becomes engaged to Elizabeth Tyson (Lauren Holly), the daughter of a man who possesses the most important technology around.

Linus wants the marriage, but Sabrina stands in the way. His solution: Why not seduce Sabrina himself?

If you can get past Sabrina's insipid crush and accept that a woman with two years' experience on one of the top magazines in the world would be content living once again as a servant girl, then you'll buy anything this movie throws at you.

But it's hard because Pollack's "Sabrina" is so lacking in charm and simple mirth. It's a joyless romp, made even more painful by Ford's tortured performance as Linus and Ormond's cardboard portrayal of Sabrina.

TLC takes top '95 musical honors

Matt Triplett
The Daily Iowan

The female trio, TLC, beat out the likes of Michael Jackson, Boyz II Men and Garth Brooks to become Billboard's top recording act of 1995. This honor was achieved by recording four hit singles and a multi-million selling album.

TLC's album, CrazySexyCool, just passed the 7 million mark in sales, making it one of the top five albums of the year. CrazySexyCool produced four Top 10 singles in '95, including two No. 1s.

TLC's No. 1 hits, "Creep" and "Waterfalls," are two of the top five singles of the year. "Creep" is the R&B single of 1995, helping TLC earn honors as the top R&B single of the year. The video for "Waterfalls" is one of the most popular and critically acclaimed videos of the year, winning MTV's Video of the Year Award.

Jackson makes debuting History

At two different times in 1995, Michael Jackson debuted on the singles chart with a song that became the highest debuting single in history.

He first accomplished this with his sister, Janet, debuting at No. 5 with "Scream," the first five singles from his 5 million selling History album. He then debuted with his follow up from History, "You Are Not Alone."

Other singles have matched Jackson's feats throughout the year. Notorious B.I.G. debuted at No. 5 the week following the debut of "Scream" with "One More Chance."

Three other singles made No. 1 debuts after "You Are Not Alone": Mariah Carey's "Fantasy" and "One Sweet Day" and Whitney Houston's "Exhale."

Hootie leaps onto scene

South Carolina rock group Hootie and the Blowfish jump into the music scene this year with the biggest selling album of 1995, the 11 million selling Cracked Rear View. Hootie edged out other multi-million selling albums by Garth Brooks, Boyz II Men, Eagles, TLC and Michael Jackson.

Cracked Rear View produced three Top 10 singles during the year. All three, "Hold My Hand," "Let Her Cry," and "I Only Wanna Be With You," were pop, rock, alternative and adult contemporary hits.

Coolio single tops year

"Gangsta's Paradise" by Coolio and L.V. is the year's No. 1 single. The single went over the 2 million mark in sales.

Other No. 1 singles among the biggest of the year include TLC's "Creep" and "Waterfalls," Seal's "Kiss From a Rose," Montell Jordan's "This Is How We Do It" and Madonna's "Take A Bow." The longest running No. 1 single of '95 was Mariah Carey's "Fantasy," which topped the chart for eight weeks.
