Tenured professors rare in low-level classes

Daily Iowan

Although 75 percent of senior professors at the UI teach undergraduate courses, fewer than onethird are teaching freshman and sophomore courses, and some UI students are less than pleased with these numbers.

"You come to a state university, you think you'll get a higher class of education," Mike Hansen, a UI freshman, said, "and you find out you receive your education basically from other students. That's discouraging." The numbers come in a recent report to the Iowa state Board of Regents which will be discussed at today's telephonic meeting.

Continuing construction on the UI campus may force students through a maze of wooden and plastic orange fencing, making that cold walk to class in the morning even more difficult.

Among the most visible projects now underway is the renovation of Schaeffer Hall - an $8.9 million project expected to be completed in July 1997. A gray wall has been built around the perimeter of the building's construction to protect pedestri-

Larry Wilson, associate director of UI planning and adminisment is doing as much as it can to keep pedestrians and bicyclists informed of closed streets and sidewalks.

"We're doing all we can to make it as friendly to users as possible," Wilson said.

Signs have been posted near the most prominent construction sites so users can re-route their paths as the different phases of the projects get underway, he said.

Drivers wishing to avoid construction zones may want to avoid Madison Street, where traffic is limited to one lane each way, and Jefferson Street, which currently is limited to one lane near the Pentacrest.

What's it all about?

Jefferson Street construction is the first part of a four-phase chilled water pipeline project that will provide air conditioning to the UI Main Library and the English-Philosophy Building. The project will be completed June 1.

Wilson said the new pipeline will replace the buildings' current cooling systems. It will be more efficient and less costly because water will be cooled at a central location rather than at the individual buildings.

WE'RE GETTING FATTER

Americans: Pass the salsa, forget fruit and veggies

Robert Greene

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Americans are eating four times as much Mexican food and three times as much popcorn and pretzels as they did two decades ago. We are managing to eat less fat, but putting on the pounds anyway.

An Agriculture Department survey of 5,500 Americans in 1994 found half ate no fruit on a given day. They readily passed up dark green and deep yellow vegetables, despite official advice to eat more. One in three adults was overweight. Children were getting off to a sweet start, switching from milk to soft drinks or apple-based juices.

The survey came out two weeks after the government issued updated guidelines telling people to eat more grains, eat five helpings of fruits and vegetables a day and try to get 30 minutes of moderate exercise a day.

Americans did report eating a lot more grain, but that category included a 200 percent increase in snacks and a 60 percent increase in ready-to-eat cereals. Consumption of "grain mixtures" such as pizza and lasagna more than doubled. Ethnic foods such as Mexican cooking added to the mixtures.

Because many foods were listed, ethnic foods included low-fat items like salsa and rice, or fattier ones such as refried beans.

The reported tripling in snack foods such as crackers, popcorn, pretzels and corn chips astonished even the industry.

"Wow!" said Jane Schultz, of the Snack Foods Association, based in Alexandria, Va. The industry estimates the average American ate 22 pounds of salty snacks in 1994, up from 17.5 pounds in 1988. But the industry numbers don't go any farther back. "I wouldn't say it's out of the realm of possibility," she said.

The most progress came in the fat department, where the message See WHAT WE EAT, Page 9A

Foreign student enrollment at the UI is down for the fifth straight year, and UI officials are now putting their heads together to find a way to counter this trend.

The presence of foreign students on the UI campus is vital, UI Associate Provost Michael McNulty said. As a result, a committee has been formed to directly deal with the recruitment and retention of

"There's always been an important part of the university body made up of foreign students and faculty," McNulty said. "Any university in the 21st century must continue to recruit foreign students and faculty members. We at the UI are no different."

A committee has been formed to look at the population of foreign students, why the number has decreased and what the changes mean for the UI, McNulty said.

The consequences of a continuously decreasing number of foreign students at the UI are more serimore difficult to reach. Without foreign students and faculty, we don't benefit from different perspectives and different world views. American students and faculty members need interaction with foreign students and

Fraternity votes to become substance-free chapter

Alpha Tau Omega fraternity voted Tuesday to be a substance-free

"Primarily our chapter decided as a whole to get back to the traditions we were originally founded on," said Brian Eddy, vice president of the chapter. "We want to place more emphasis on traditions, leadership and scholarship."

Alcohol or tobacco will not be allowed on the fraternity's grounds, Eddy said.

"We have more to offer the community, university and students than just drinking," Eddy said.

Matt Ross, president of the UI Interfraternity Council, said substance-free policies seem to be the trend on the national level and he is not surprised with Alpha Tau Omega's decision.

"I would have to commend the ATO chapter for that move. It shows that they didn't need alcohol to have a good time," Ross said.

Friday, the rest of the Greek community will decide on a substance policy, in wake of the alcohol-related death of Lambda Chi Alpha associate member Matthew Garofalo Sept. 8. The meeting will be held at 3:30 p.m. in the Indiana Room in the Union.

Eddy said he did not expect other chapters to follow in their footsteps and didn't want to put pressure on them.

"It is in the best interest of our chapter at this time," he said.

Bomb threat temporarily empties Statehouse

DES MOINES (AP) — The Statehouse was evacuated for an hour at about 9 a.m. Tuesday after a man called Des Moines police with a bomb threat that was specific enough to be credible.

Fire Marshall Roy Marshal said authorities combed the ornate building the best they could and asked workers there to check their own areas to make sure nothing suspicious was left behind.

"It's almost impossible to say 100 percent. It can't be done, especially with a building of that nature, with stacks of boxes and bags everywhere," he said.

Officers on the scene speculated that the bomb call was a diversion by someone connected with a bank robbery about a mile away.

Iowa State Patrol troopers said that about 20 minutes after they got a call to report to the Statehouse, Des Moines police began broadcasting a description of a man who robbed a branch of West Bank near Veteran's Auditorium.

The evacuation sent employees, lawmakers and others at the capital scrambling for their coats. Some huddled outside, but most walked to nearby state buildings or cars.

SPRINGFIELD, III. - An abused wife who had demanded she be put to death for killing her husband was spared Tuesday by Gov. Jim Edgar hours before she was to become the second woman executed in the United States in at least 20 years.

Guinevere Garcia apparently had had a change of heart: "Thank God that this has happened," her lawyer quoted her as saying after Edgar commuted her death sentence to life in prison with no chance of parole.

Garcia, 37, was to have been executed shortly after midnight for shooting her husband during an argument which grew from a botched robbery.

Death-penalty opponents, including Bianca Jagger, had campaigned for clemency over Garcia's objections, arguing she had a har-rowing life which included alcoholism and sexual abuse in childhood and prostitution as a teen-

As late as last week, Garcia had angrily denounced efforts to win er Review Board, "This is not a suicide. ... I am responsible for these crimes.'

Garcia's attorney, Manos Kavvadias, said Garcia never really wanted to die but was "drained" after losing an appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court last year. "She was ready to accept the sentence as it was," he said.

After prison officials told her of Edgar's decision, "she was relieved · like a big weight had been removed from her," Kavvadias

Orphaned as a toddler by the apparent suicide of her mother, Garcia was raised by her grandparents in Chicago. An uncle began sexually abusing her at age 6, and by 11 she was an alcoholic, according to court records.

By 16, Garcia had become a prostitute, married an Iranian student to keep him in the United States and conceived a daughter. Eleven months after Sarah Swan was born, Garcia suffocated the baby with a plastic bag.

The girl's death was treated as an accident for years until an arson investigator got Garcia to admit she killed her daughter and set fires near the anniversaries of the child's birth and death.

She served 10 years in prison for the killing. When she got out, the former prostitute married George Garcia, a one-time john who, according to court records, physically and sexually abused her. Within four months, she had killed

"Fuhrman was the trial," Bess wrote. "Fuhrman found the hat.

Fuhrman found the glove. Fuhrman found the blood. Fuhrman went over the gate. Fuhrman did everything. When you throw it out, what case do you have?"

Fuhrman was portrayed by the defense as a racist who tried

Iowa remains key for Gramm, GOP

Jay Dee The Daily Iowan

U.S. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., national chairperson for Phil Gramm's presidential campaign, said Iowa Republicans still have a large say in who will be the next GOP nominee.

Even though the Alaska caucus and the Louisiana caucus may take place ahead of time, it's still the Iowa caucus that will have a tremendous impact on the chances of the candidates," McCain told a group of Gramm organizers in Iowa City.

Gramm had been criticized by the Iowa Republican Party for campaigning in Louisiana, but McCain said the results in Iowa will impact the primary held in his home state. Arizona holds one of the early primaries in the nomination process, just one week after the New

"Phil Gramm will win the Louisiana caucuses," he said, "but I don't think that will have one-one hundredth of the effect that a good showing in Iowa will have.

McCain said momentum is in Gramm's favor after Saturday's GOP debate in Johnston, Iowa. Several candidates, including Gramm, used the debate to attack publisher Steve Forbes, who has replaced Gramm in many states as the top challenger to Bob Dole. McCain continued the anti-Forbes rhetoric.

McCain said Forbes' rise in the polls is based on huge commercial buys, not campaign

"Mr. Forbes has got the media, but he doesn't have the organization," he said.

"People get a call (from a poll) that asks who they like for president, and they say, 'I just heard 27 Forbes commercials in a row. I guess Forbes," he said.

Gramm, however, has a stronger grassroots organization than Forbes, which will mean more Gramm supporters turning out on caucus night, McCain said.

McCain said he and Gramm will remain opposed to a budget deal with Clinton.

"It's not in our interest to cut a deal, because the president of the United States is not moving in our direction," he said. "I'm beginning to believe that we may leave some of these issues to the voters in the November election."

McCain has served in Congress since 1982 and was a prisoner-of-war in Vietnam for 51/2

WASHINGTON - Eager to make bold tax reform a 1996 campaign centerpiece, most Republicans were quick to embrace the flat tax and the marketing charm of its postcard simplicity. But that support has cracked and could crumble because of brewing class warfare among GOP presidential hopefuls.

There is considerable irony to this: When it comes to mixing politics and economics, Republicans are usually quick to pillory Democrats for trying to pit the poor and middle class against the wealthy.

But for now, that is the theme of an internal GOP fight. The outproposal, finds its way into the 1996 GOP platform.

Dole warned that Republicans need to make sure they don't embrace a plan in which "the middle class take it on the chin." Not to be outdone, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm casts himself as "a bluecolfar Republican," trying to distinguish himself from the bluethe flat tax the most contentious issue in the GOP presidential

"I do not believe it is defensiblooded Republican who has made ble," Gramm said Tuesday of that idea. He also said it was unfair to take the mortgage interest deduction away from the middle class.

Little kid, big voice

■ The biting humor and insightful social commentary of "Calvin and Hobbes" will be missed. Its absence leaves a void which America's journalists should fill.

7th the entry of the new year, America's cynical 6-year-old and his happy-go-lucky tiger have left the syndicated cartoon scene. After more than 10 years of sarcastic commentary on the media, politics, egoism and human nature, "Calvin and Hobbes" have criticized to their full extent. Bill Watterson, their creator, says

It's disappointing that an extremely well-read cartoon is leaving the newspapers. Perhaps the 6-year-old's voice has been exhausted. Nevertheless, his viewpoints are essential in an age that is becoming more and more money-orientated. Extensively critical of a medium that caters to advertising and visual art, Calvin proves his point by loving television for that very reason. Pointing at the faults of political parties, Calvin and Hobbes' tree-house club G.R.O.S.S. (Get Rid Of Slimy girlS) mockingly illustrates leaders who can't work cohesively and function by excluding certain members of society (in this case, Calvin's next door neighbor, Susie.)

Watterson comments that Calvin - who remarks on ethics, lying and cheating - is the voice we frequently attempt to ignore within ourselves. Distinctly opposite from Hobbes' simplicity, Calvin's caustic opinions contain the element of truth most people try to ignore.

So although the popular comic strip has been discontinued, hopefully the impact of Watterson's criticisms won't be lost. The Calvin in all human beings - contemptuous, derisive and mocking - is a necessary voice. The grumpy 6-year-old, who is an absolute terror to his parents, speaks on a regular basis to aliens, imagines outer space as a place in which he belongs and designs weird snowmen, has definitely made a realistic stab at society's downfalls. The truth of his social observations cannot be ignored. Calvin is, in many ways, America's best social critic. While he epitomizes the typical 6-year-old by throwing temper tantrums, refusing to take baths and eat certain foods, there is something charmingly attractive in his obstinacy. It's easy to laugh at him and difficult to ignore him. He also illustrates the perpetual child in human beings by being afraid of monsters under the bed: He is scared of that which he does not know and what he imagines but has never seen.

The world needs more Calvins. Watterson's cartoon is exactly what critical journalism should be. It's a shame he's pulling out because there is always more to be said. Every society has its problems and Calvin has captured many of America's troubles. If Calvin's voice has left the scene, the cartoon world can only hope to gain a similar voice in a similar manner: a voice so young it's older than most.

Congress should have say in sending troops

To the Editor:

President Clinton claimed in Presidential Decision Directive (PDD) Nov. 25 that he has the constitutional authority to place American troops under the temporary operational control of the United Nations commanders. This authority has never been tested in our federal court system.

President Truman faced a similar situation at the onset of the Korean War. when U.S. troops were placed under United Nations command.

Veteran groups' position on this issue is that Congress needs to be more involved in the decision-making process as to whether U.S. troops should be committed, particularly in socalled peace operations. Their position stated that U.S. military forces should not be placed under foreign or United Nations command except in exceptional circumstances where Congress grants specific approval.

There was a provision in the National Defense Authorization Act of fiscal year 1996 which stated that the president must certify that such a command and control arrangement was in the national security interests of the United States. As I am aware, the president vetoed the entire bill, as this provision was seen by the president as an attempt by Congress to restrict his constitutional powers as commander-in-chief. Information received from the staff of the Senate Armed Services Committee that a revised defense authorization bill will be drafted, but it is not likely to address the president's authority to place U.S. troops under foreign or United Nations command. Meanwhile, there are bills in the House and Senate to prohibit American troops from wearing U.N. patches and headgear.

Johnson County SEATS is appreciated

To the Editor:

I am writing to express both concern and appreciation for the Johnson County SEATS program, which provides accessible transportation for disabled people in Iowa City.

In stepping off an Iowa City bus last September, I broke my foot and had to use casts and crutches for more than four months. Especially because of how the injury happened, I was unable and afraid to use the city buses to get to work, so I used SEATS.

My concern for SEATS arises from the fact that city officials often say it would be more efficient for city buses to replace SEATS service. These officials either don't know or don't care that the buses simply can't perform that service in cases like mine. I also wonder why Iowa City officials should object to the expense of SEATS since my understanding is that the city doesn't even pay its fair share for the program. It is instead subsidized by the rest of Johnson County.

My appreciation is for four months of SEATS service that - despite overworking and understaffing — was always prompt, considerate and courteous. I'd like to say thank you to the SEATS drivers and dispatchers who did more than they probably realize to help me through a hard time. And to the many anonymous lowa Citians who stopped to let me cross, slowed to let me pass, hurried to open doors and offered to carry packages, thank you very much. If I can ask you for just one more favor, please support SEATS and other programs that reflect the caring spirit of our community.

Picture worth more than a colu

Almost two years ago to this day, I got up extra early to get a copy of the paper; my first column was to appear that day, and I wanted to be the first one to see it. I opened to the Viewpoints Page, wincing in advance of actually seeing anything, just in case it was really bad. I breathed a sigh of relief, not when I read the article, but when I saw my photo. Then I read what I had written.

The whole week before the column was to come out, I thought not about what I would write, or how I would say it or even if I would remember to check the spelling, but about the photograph of my head that would accompany my words. Did I look OK? Was my smile fake? Would people think I was a dork?

Even though I had wanted to write a column to express myself and not to get dates, my appearance, or rather the image this little black and white photo projects, was very impor-

This is not very fun to admit.

I am a feminist. I believe writers should be judged, not by the color of their lipstick, but by the content of their journalistic character. I have nothing against trying to look attractive, or even sexy, in a social setting where it is appropriate. But here I was at my job, secretly hoping that my photo would render me attractive. An occasional bad column my readers might dismiss, but a bad photo? The columns change from week to week. The photo, after all,

I decided to resolve this inner conflict of truly being concerned about my appearance while thinking I shouldn't be by not telling anyone about it. "Great column!" a few friends said to me that day. "Thanks," I smiled. "Great photo; thank GOD," I thought inside.

A few days ago at our staff meeting, the editor gave us the bad news. "We are retaking photos today," she told the group of columnists. I squirmed. Two years without a new picture, and now I have to give up my passable mug shot for a new photographic rendition of myself? What was I wearing? Did my hair look

Lea Haravon

More importantly, why did I care? Wasn't I a writer, not a model? I wondered if models got uptight before they had to write something. I tried to imagine a beautiful woman stressing out as she picked up a pen. The photographer interrupted my shallow thoughts.

"Sit here," he said. Seated, I was so short that the background didn't show. I stood.

Oh, God, I hope I can smile right. Please just let me look natural, I thought as he held flashes and other equipment before me. Why was I smiling, I wondered. What if I write a really sad column? Won't I look inappropriate?

"OK, turn your body away from me and look

Have you ever had a photographer try to arrange your body so that you are facing away from and looking toward the same thing? There must be some photographic reason for this directive, but I never understood it. I did my best, turning away from what I was looking at.

Oh, God, I hope I can smile right. Please just let me look natural, I thought as he held flashes and other equipment before me. Why was I smiling, I wondered. What if I write a really sad column? Won't I look inappropriate? Why do women always smile? I bet the men aren't going to plaster idiotic grins on their faces for these shots. They will look like serious writers.

Then an interesting thing happened.

"Do you want a serious one?"

"No," I told him.

"OK, we're done." And he left.

I am a feminist writer who likes to debunk female stereotypes. I am also a woman who is concerned with her appearance in a professional setting. The photographer gave me the opportunity to avoid a feminine stereotype by not smiling, and I refused it. The refusal was a reflex; I did not pause for a moment to think about his question. I knew my answer right

By the time this column goes to press, I still will not have seen my photo. I imagine I will have seen it at the same time you did, that is, when we opened the paper today. Although I have not yet resolved or understood my concern with appearance or how it relates to my wanting to be judged on my merits and not my smile (or grin, whichever this one turned out to be), at least you can get a good laugh out of knowing what was going through my mind when this picture was taken. Maybe, knowing that you know this, I will take my appearance less

Conquering fear of ER fires, explosions

I will frankly admit I am afraid of medical care. I trace this fear to my childhood, when as far as I could tell, the medical profession's reaction to every physical problem I developed, including nearsightedness, was to give me a tetanus shot. Not only that, but the medical professionals would always lie about it. "You'll hardly feel it!" they'd say, coming at me with a needle the size of a harpoon.

As a child, I was more afraid of tetanus shots than, for example, Dracula. Granted, Dracula would come into your room at night and bite into your neck and suck out all your blood, but there was a positive side to this: namely, you could turn into a bat and stay out all night. Whereas I could see no pluses with the tetanus

Of course, today I no longer have this childish phobia, because, as a mature adult, I can

"I just had a tetanus shot this morning!" I can say, if the issue ever arises. "Eight of them,

But I'm still afraid of medical care. And I'm not encouraged by TV medical dramas such as "E.R." If you watch these shows, you've probably noticed that whenever some pathetic civilian gets wheeled into the hospital emergency room on a stretcher, he or she is immediately pounced upon by enough medical personnel to form a hospital softball league, all competing to see who can do the scariest thing to the victim. Apparently there's a clause in the standard Television Performers' Contract stating that every character in a medical drama gets to take a crack at emergency patients:

FIRST DOCTOR: I'll wash his mouth out with a toilet brush!

SECOND DOCTOR: I'll pound on his chest! THIRD DOCTOR: I'll stick a tube way up his

FOURTH DOCTOR: I'll find an unoccupied section of his body and cut it open for no good

JANITOR: I'll wash his mouth out with a toi-

Now you're probably saying: "Dave, you big baby. Those are just TV shows. In real life, bad things do not happen to people who fall into the hands of medical care.'

Excuse me for one second while I laugh so hard that my keyboard is short-circuited by drool. Because I happen to be holding in my hand a bulletin-board notice that was sent to me by a Vermont orthopedic surgeon named either "David H. Bahnson M.D." or "Oee Bali," depending on whether you're reading his letterhead or his signature.

Dr. Bahnson told me, in a phone interview, that he found this notice over the "scrub sink," which is the place where doctors wash their hands BEFORE operating, and Dr. Bahnson said this notice had been prominently displayed there for several months. It is titled - I am not making this up — "EMERGENCY PROCEDURE; FIGHTING FIRE ON THE SURGICAL PATIENT."

Yes, you read that correctly. Dr. Bahnson told me that, although it has not happened to him, fires sometimes break out on patients during surgery, particularly when hot medical implements accidentally come into contact with surgical drapes.

The bulletin-board notice discusses two types of situations: "small fire on the patient" and "large fire on the patient." There are step-bystep instructions for dealing with both of these; Step 3 under "large fire on the patient," for example, is: "Care for the patient."

I was surprised the procedure was so defi-nite. You'd think that, what with all these medical lawsuits, the instructions would call for more caution on the part of doctors. ("Mrs. Dweemer, we think you might be on fire but we won't know for sure until we have a specialist fly in from Switzerland to take a look.")

Now, before I get a lot of irate mail from the medical community, let me stress that not all surgical patients catch on fire. Some of them also explode. I am referring here to a November article from The Medical Post, sent in by alert reader Lauren Leighton, headline: "BEWARE EXPLODING PATIENTS." This article states. that nitrous oxide - which is sometimes used as an anesthetic in stomach surgery - can get mixed up with intestinal gases, which have proven to be highly combustible in countless scientific experiments conducted in fraternity houses. If this mixture is ignited by a spark from a surgical implement such as an electric cautery, the result can be what the article. refers to as "intra-abdominal fires."

In what could be the single most remarkable statement I have ever read in a medical article, one expert is quoted as saying - I swear this a real quote - "Patients aren't exploding all over, but there is the potential for it."

Ha ha! I certainly am feeling reassured! No, really, I'm sure we're talking about a very small number of patients exploding or catching on fire. So if you are scheduled to undergo surgery, you needn't give this matter another thought, assuming you have taken the basic precaution of having a personal sprinkler system installed on your body.

No, seriously, I'm sure your operation will gojust fine. And even in the unlikely event that you do explode, you may rest assured that, no matter how many pieces you wind up in, every one of those pieces will, in accordance with modern medical standards, receive a tetanus

There is no time estimate when renevations — if funded — would be finished, but Coleman said setting priorities for what the UI will fix first is a good practice.

Although the UI has placed biology and engineering at the top of its priority lists, Coleman said other buildings will see future improvement projects as well. "The university has to have a

'Big Daddy' found guilty on charges

CINCINNATI (AP) - Cincinnati Bengals defensive lineman Dan Wilkinson was found guilty Tuesday of striking his pregnant girlfriend during a Sept. 13 argument, but evaded jail when the judge gave him a suspended sixmonth sentence.

His girlfriend Shawnda Lamarr, 20, who is to give birth to the couple's first child on March 11, told Hamilton County Municipal Judge Dennis Helmick she did not want to prosecute Wilkinson nor see him go to jail. The couple are planning to be married but have not set a date, said Wilkinson's agent, Jimmy Gould.

Wilkinson, 22, the NFL's top draft choice in 1994, pleaded no contest to the misdemeanor charge of domestic violence. The judge found Wilkinson guilty and warned him that since he has been convicted, he would face a felony charge if he is ever again charged under Ohio's domestic violence law.

The NHL's leading career scorer, who turns 35 next week, is pressuring Los Angeles Kings' management to acquire a top veteran who could help win the Stanley Cup or he will leave next summer as a free agent.

Gretzky's agent, Michael Barnett, was scheduled to meet Tuesday with Kings owner Edward Roski and Robert Sanderman, a top associate of the other owner, Philip Anschutz. Gretzky did not plan to attend because of Tuesday night's game against Calgary.

San Antonio's Robinson earns weekly honors

NEW YORK (AP) — David Robinson of the San Antonio Spurs won the NBA Player of the Week award on Tuesday.

Robinson, last season's MVP, averaged 22.5 points, 16 rebounds, four assists and 3.75 blocked shots per game as the Spurs won all four of their games last week. For the season, he leads the NBA in rebounding with 12.4 per game, is second in blocked shots with 3.73 and third in scoring at 25.8.

Other candidates for the award were Boston's Dino Radja, Chicago's Michael Jordan, Denver's Dale Ellis, Detroit's Grant Hill and Golden State's Latrell Sprewell.

Mike Triplett

The Daily Iowan

Four games into the Big Ten season might be a little premature to count the Hawkeyes out of the conference race, but at 2-2, the preseason favorites feel some shake-up may be in order.

Following a lackluster performance in Wisconsin Saturday, Iowa coach Tom Davis spoke Tuesday about the possibility of mixing up the starting lineup and players expressed the need to play better basketball.

"Any time you lose some games that you think you probably should have won, there will be some changes," junior Jess Settles said. "I know that Coach Davis wants to win as much as anybody and I trust that he'll do the right thing in every single situation."

Davis didn't announce any specific lineup changes, but did say that both the frontcourt and backcourt would be looked at. Davis discussed freshman J.R. Koch's per-

Whatever changes are made will not be drastic. With Iowa's rotation pattern, no replaced starter will sit

"I don't think it's anything very big because at this point you already know who your top eight or nine players are," Davis said. "You have to, as a coach, find ways to move your ball club forward. And sometimes that's worth a shot, to try different combinations and see if that will spur your ball club to go beyond where they're currently playing."

Davis isn't dreading the task at hand - he called trying to get the team to move on to the next level the "fun part of coaching."

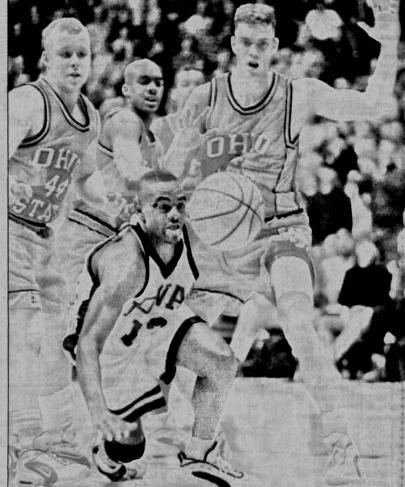

But, he added, "If you get a team that thinks they've already arrived, that's not a good sign. You call that formance in practice, but Koch said reading your own press clippings. In this league, this year, you're going to get hammered, because whoever is really good and whoever's the worst out of the 11, that difference isn't really that great."

Davis called that kind of thinking, "human nature," and said it happens at every level of sports. But senior Kenyon Murray doesn't feel that the press clippings have necessarily boosted any egos or put any additional pressure on the

We just have to start playing better basketball than we have been," Murray said. "It's not like we're not capable of achieving everything that was written about us. But we have to make some changes on offense and on defense. We have to be more productive on both ends of the floor. We have to rebound a lot better. And the writers can't control that on the basketball court."

Baker was her usual dominant self as she won the vault (9.800), finished third on the uneven bars (9.625) and fifth on floor (9.600).

Whitwer was also superb. She won the balance beam (9.675), finished third on the floor (9.750) and third on the vault (9.650).

Good things come to those who wait, and that's just the way it worked out for the Iowa women's swim team, which came upon its first two victories over the winter

The Hawkeyes (2-5), defeated Hawaii in the midst of their twelve-day training camp in Honolulu and followed the vacation with a victory over the Illinois State Redbirds.

"ISU is a good team and I felt we were really in control of that meet," head coach Patricia Meyer said. "The win felt good following the eight-hour flight home and all the hard work the girls did in Hawaii."

The trip to the islands isn't a new one for Iowa, which has par-ticipated in the Rainbow Invitational nine of the past 10 seasons. The trip has become notorious for the team as a result of not only the hard training, but the camaraderie it brings to the team also.

"I really think our workouts went well," Meyer said. "Twelve days was the ideal time to spend there, and I really feel we gelled well as a team and got to know each other better."

Meyer hopes the knowledge gained in Hawaii combined with the heightened confidence following the two recent victories will be applied to Iowa's crucial final month. The Hawkeyes' first test will come this weekend at the Illinois Invitational, followed by dual-meet action at Minnesota and Purdue, all of which lead up

February 9 and 10 at Minnesota. "It is a very opportunistic time for us to gel as a team, now that we are preparing for the Big Ten meet," Meyer said. "A strong performance at Big Tens is real important for us because it's the only meet we shave and taper to the Big Ten championships

The upcoming meets present some tough competition for the Hawkeyes, so Iowa has its eyes set on a goal different from finishing on top.

ATLANTA - Waving dog bones and chanting "no team, no peace," hundreds of Browns fans descended on an NFL meeting Tuesday to demand that their beloved franchise remain in Cleveland.

The league, however, said the owners would not have enough time to properly consider the move to Baltimore, and commissioner Paul Tagliabue was not expected to make a formal recommendation.

"I think it's highly unlikely that we'll have a vote on the Browns at this meeting," NFL spokesman Joe Browne said.

Robert Tisch, co-owner of the New York Giants, reserved judgment on whether he would support Art Modell's plan to move his team from Cleveland to Baltimore.

"I can see both sides," Tisch said. 'We have to look at Cleveland, which has been a fantastic football town over the last 50 years. We also have to think about Mr. Mod-

Cleveland Mayor Michael White led a caravan to the airport hotel, where Modell was planning to make his case to a league committee Tuesday evening. They brought petitions calling for the Browns to stay in Cleveland and returned lat-

him. Added Barkley: "I think it's sad anytime anybody gets fired. If the world was full of people like Paul Westphal, the world would be a better place."

Colangelo said he could wait no longer to make a move following the Suns' fifth straight loss at home, an 89-74 defeat to Cleveland on Sunday night.

The team, playing without injured stars Barkley, Danny Manning, John Williams and Kevin Johnson, shot 38 percent, matched the franchise one-game low of 28 field goals set in 1990 and scored the fewest points since the record low of 68 at Kansas City in March

Meanwhile, Dan Majerle, the player traded to Cleveland for Williams during training camp, got a three-minute standing ovation from Phoenix fans before the game and scored 20 points.

Colangelo told Westphal a month ago he was unhappy with the team. He said Tuesday he had been considering a move since the Suns took a 2-0 lead in Houston in the second round of the 1994 playoffs, then fell to the Rockets in seven games. The Rockets also ousted the Suns in seven games in the same bait.

"I've been concerned about the path we were taking the last couple of years, and I was just biding my time, hopeful that things would take a turn for the better," Colangelo said. "It didn't happen that

Ironically, Fitzsimmons groomed Westphal as an assistant for four years before turning over the reins on July 1, 1992 - only to take the reins back Tuesday.

A four-time All-Star, Westphal played six of his 12 seasons in Phoenix, where his No. 44 was retired in 1989. He had a 191-88 record in 3 1/2 seasons coaching the Suns.

When the Suns acquired Barkley in June 1992, it set the tone for the team to reach the NBA Finals before losing in six to the Chicago Bulls. Along the way, Barkley earned the league MVP award and the Suns set a franchise record with 62 victories. They won 56 games the next season and 59 games and the Pacific Division title in 1994-95, but Barkley was hurt each time the Suns met the Rockets. He has missed five games this season, is "That flat-out isn't going to happen," Colangelo said. "The calls you get from teams are from those that are looking to steal a talent because they think we are looking to get rid of Charles Barkley. That is the furthest thing from the truth. It makes a lot of these teams look good when they say they are trying to get Charles Barkley."

Fitzsimmons was 97-67 with the Suns from 1970-72 and 217-111 from 1988-1992, successes which helped him to an 805-745 record in a 19-year career with the Atlanta Hawks, Buffalo Braves, Kansas City Kings, San Antonio Spurs and Barkley supplanted Johnson as the team leader when he arrived, and the point guard said he was excited to be playing for Fitzsimmons, who in 1988 told him he was in charge.

"He said, 'Here's the ball. You're going to take us as far as we're league's biggest payrolls. Barkley going to go," Johnson said. He predicted the Suns will return to their fast-breaking, high-scoring ways and still improve defensively shooting a career-low 46.7 percent, because of Barkley and Williams four seasons.

"We're going to be doing a lot Colangelo said he told Barkley more pushing up court. No doubt about it," Johnson said.

> Fitzsimmons has a reputation as a coach who coaxes maximum effort from his players. The poor defensive record of Westphal's team has been attributed to his laid-back style and lack of emotion.

> "I am not promising anything," Fitzsimmons said. "I don't ever say that we are going to win. I would say that we will play hard, we'll play together, and we'll outhustle our opponents."

> He said he has no problem with the roster, which has been down to the league-minimum of eight players in uniform for the last four

"We've come to tell them that in this age of sky boxes and club seats and free parking and free concessions and multimillion-dollar deals for free agents and domes and new stadiums ... your best asset is the fans," White said at a lunchtime rally for Browns fans.

While the owners are not expected to vote on the Browns move, they may take an informal poll to see where they stand for the formal vote at a later meeting. Also scheduled to be discussed is a new collective bargaining agreement through the year 2002. The contract already has been approved by the players. A Cleveland delegation led by White, Ohio Gov. George Voinovich tee revealed its evidence that the team should remain in Cleveland: 2.2 million signatures on petitions that were hauled into the hotel on luggage carts and placed on the floor of the lobby for the owners to see as they checked in.

"The Cleveland Browns are my life," said Paul Serbu, a season ticket-holder from Dayton, Ohio, who was decked out in a full Browns uniform, including the helmet. "This is morally wrong."

One NFL source said a possible compromise is to leave the Browns name, logo and colors in Cleveland and allow Modell to take his franchise to Baltimore with a new nickname. That would clear the way for and city business leaders will another team to move to Cleveland, address the owners, including Modwhere voters have approved a $176 ell, in a one-hour session Wednesmillion tax package to renovate the aging, 80,000 stadium that Modell says is inadequate.

Tampa Bay, Seattle, Cincinnati and Arizona, all unhappy with their current stadiums, have been The Save Our Browns Commit-mentioned as possible candidates for relocation.

> "The biggest issue, first of all, it we'd like to keep our Browns," said former Cleveland running back Greg Pruitt, who accompanied the delegation to Atlanta. "But realistically, we have to look at it like it's the Cleveland Browns name and the Cleveland Browns history that we're fighting for."

Pruitt said he would settle for another team in Cleveland as long as it was named the Browns, and he thinks most fans feel the same

"I don't know how we'd get a team in there, but at the beginning of next season I think we'd take any team named the Cleveland Browns," he said.

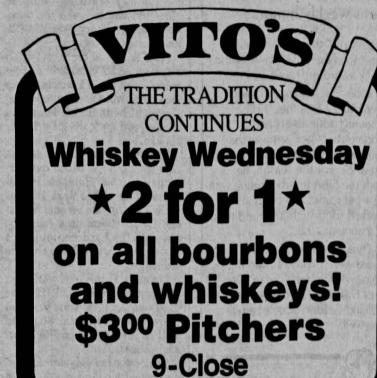

But Cleveland's mayor continued to insist he'll demand nothing less than the entire franchise remaining in the city, and other Browns supporters said the NFL should demand that Modell sell the team to someone who would keep it in Cleveland.

"I have not come to Atlanta to accept a non-binding piece of paper that we will get a team sometime down the road," White told the fans, some wearing jerseys with the names of past Browns like Lyle Alzado and Brian Sipe stitched on Pittsburgh owner Dan Rooney has complained that Cleveland is hurting its case by encouraging fans to bombard the owners with millions of e-mails, faxes and letters. White disagreed.

"I know it was an inconvenience to many of them, but I don't think we burned any bridges," he said. "I think they'll be open to what we have to say."

LOS ANGELES - Interleague play, perhaps the most revolutionary change in baseball since the lively ball, appeared to be gaining support Tuesday as owners started arriving for the winter meet-

Philadelphia Phillies Bill Giles had proposed a schedule in which teams would each play 15-16 interleague games that count in the standings starting in 1997.

"It's building up momentum," Atlanta Braves general manager John Schuerholz said. "It's a subject that's been talked about now for many years. It's sort of filtered its way up to the top of the agenda."

Under Giles' plan, each team from the AL East would play three games against each team from the NL East, each team from the AL Central would play three games against each team from the NL Central, and each team from the AL West would play four games against each team from the NL West.

Teams in the East and Central would play their four division rivals 12 times each and the other teams in their league 11 times each. Teams in the West would play their three division rivals 13 times each and the other teams in their league 10 times each.

"If I had to vote right now, without hearing anybody else speak, I'd vote in favor of it," Chicago White Sox chairman Jerry Reinsdorf said. "But I'd like to know what other people

Interleague play will be discussed during Thursday's final

It requires the approval of the Major League Baseball Players Association, making a final vote unlikely this week. Owners remember that when they voted in September 1993 to expand the playoffs the following year, the union demanded - and received - 80 percent of the ticket money from the first three games of each new series.

In addition, interleague play would necessitate a decision about the designated hitter. NL owners still oppose it and AL owners are split. Eliminating it would require the approval of the union, which is unlikely to give up a high-salaried posi-

"These are issues that have been discussed at the bargaining table and I assume will continue to be discussed," Lauren Rich, the union's No. 3 official, said in New York.

Owners think interleague play will spark more interest in the game, which experienced a 20 percent attendance drop last season following the 232-day

"The game is still recovering in a lot of cities," Cleveland Indians general manager John Hart said. "This could be a strong factor in growing."

Hart also said the idea was hard for him to accept.

"You might have your World Series clubs play ... during the season," he said. "You might get away a little from the mystique of the World Series."

Teams in Chicago, Los Angeles, New York and San Francisco stand to benefit the most.

"I think it will appeal to a lot of teams - particularly teams in two-team markets," New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said.

Schedule formats will have to change in 1998 when Arizona and Tampa Bay start play. Owners still haven't decided which leagues to place the new teams in.

If one is added to each league, creating two 15-team circuits, interleague play would be a must in order to keep teams from having off-days on weekends.

There was just one minor deal on the first afternoon of the three-day session. San Francisco traded infielder Chris Wimmer to St. Louis, completing the Dec. 14 deal that sent pitchers Allen Watson, Rich Lucia and Doug Creek to San Francisco for shortstop Royce Clayton.

'Hot shot' Pierce heckled in Open

MELBOURNE, Australia - It must mean something when a fan with a spiky mohawk has "Mary" written in blue block letters on both sides of his head, "Pierce" on both his muscular arms, and he's waving a sign that reads: "Sexy Hotshot Mary.'

Is it crazy love or sick infatuation, something to be appreciated, laughed at, or feared?

In an age of celebrity stalkers, in the aftermath of the Monica Seles stabbing, security guards at the Australian Open looked at that fan Tuesday night with wary eyes. Pierce, the defending champion, took a more benign attitude, taking it as flattery and autographing the "It's pretty interesting here," Pierce said after a 6-3, 6-1 victory over Petra Schwarz. "It's a young crowd and I like that because they really get into the matches and yell and clap and have fun." For Pierce, it was another indication that she's "arrived," become more than just a tennis player. She became a Grand Slam champ here a year ago, a star.

Yet, even as she pursues another title, and some fans pursue her, Pierce is trying to figure out where the magic went the rest of 1995.

She won the Australian, then, poof, she vanished. Lost in the fourth round at the French, second round at Wimbledon, third round at the U.S. Open. A year of promise evaporated into a year of puzzling

Pierce's game had been as subtle as a train wreck. She pounded with two-fisted backhands and onehanded forehands.

And if that didn't work, she pounded the ball harder. When she was on, as she was at the Australian last year, she could beat anyone in straight sets. In the final here, she did it to Arantxa Sanchez

She had to shorten some points, not keep them going forever with side-to-side groundstrokes.

PITTSBURGH - Finally, Pittsburgh and the Steelers an quit living in the 1970s.

Disco and polyester suits an die a deserved death. Fans an dismantle those game room shrines to Franco and Mean Joe. And the Steelers an escape the time warp that began with the Immaculate Reception and seemed desined to encapsulate the franhise and its fans forever.

It's been a long time coming, 16 years to be precise, but the Steelers are going to the Super Bowl again, and there's not a single player named Bradshaw, Ham, Stallworth or Blount on their roster. The coach is Bill Cowher, not Chuck Noll, and the players are long removed from those that earned Pittsburgh its cherished nickname of City of

At last, Generation X has a Super Bowl team of its own to embrace. Many in Pittsburgh would say it's about time.

"I think we've been going through a process here, the road to the Super Bowl," defensive end Ray Seals said. The first time (1995) we came close, and now we're going there. We know what's gone on here before, and there would have been no hooray, hooray stuff until we got there.'

Cowher, 38, himself never played for the Steelers, but he grew up in Pittsburgh in the 70s and saw how the Super Bowls electrified a city. He remembers Terrible Towels twirling by the thousands and the tornado-loud roar of noise

Even when he infrequently returned home from playing football at North Carolina State, his father, Bill, a Steelers' season ticket holder, kept him updated on team news.

Now, his father still offers coaching advice, just as he did from the grandstands when Noll was the coach, only his son is the recipient.

"He still tells me what I should have done," Cowher said. "And it's great. Like I said before, there's a tradition that's been here, and we think it's great. We recognize it's a different era and a different time, and we've kind of got our own personality. But at the same time, what coach Noll and the Steelers were able to do in the 1970s revitalized this Tormented by three oh-soclose Pirates' pennant runs from 1990-92 and the Steelers' excruciating AFC championship game loss to San Diego last season, Pittsburgh finally has a winner to cheer again.

"The greatest joy is to see Dan Rooney go through this again," Cowher said, referring to the Steelers president. "That's special to me. He's a special man, and a special person, and this is a great city. To see this come back, the Pittsburgh-Dallas Super Bowls, it's going to be special."

Of course, those Steelers teams of the 1970s set a precedent that this team and those that follow can match only with perfection. The Steelers are 4-0 in the Super Bowl, the only AFC team with so envi-He saw it again Sunday, able a record, and are 2-0

Like its hit counterpart, the soundtrack zeroes in on the emotional highs and lows of love from the perspective of four women. With the help of more than a dozen Jim's Journal acts under the direction of megaproducer Babyface, the disc offers some memorable music.

Want to know what's wrong with Nashville? Or the star-making machine of the music business in general? Give this formulaic second release from Faith Hill a listen. Hill has a nice enough voice, and on the closing number, "Keep Walkin' On," she sounds fine, but she gets a push from Shelby Lynne there. Left to her own devices, Hill sounds about as exciting as cheezin-a-can. "It Matters to Me," sounds like product carefully designed to recreate the smash success of Hill's first album.
