MTV to UI: Choose or lose in '96

Network asking how students will vote

The Daily Iowan

Five UI students might get a chance to "Choose or Lose" on national television when MTV's bus rolls into Iowa City for President Clinton's State of the Union address tonight.

MTV's 45-foot "Choose or Lose" bus - filled with tables geared for voter registration, pamphlets on political issues and music videos will be parked outside the Union beginning late this afternoon as part of MTV's second "Choose or Lose Voter Outreach" campaign.

The bus will remain at the Union through President Clinton's address, which will air on network television at 8 p.m. and will be shown in the Wheelroom.

MTV Comes to Town

MTV will be on the UI campus today as part of its "Choose or Lose Voter Outreach"

They will be at the Union from noon until after President Clinton's State of the Union address, which begins at 8 p.m. After the address, students will be interviewed about their reactions to the speech.

After Clinton's address, five UI students will be invited to be interviewed about their reactions to the speech. Some of the footage MTV tapes tonight may appear on MTV later this semester, said Sheryl Jones, director of program publicito political issues because of Clinton's address, said Dave Anderson, a tour manager for MTV.

"The University of Iowa is unique," he said. "We'll have monitors up during the State of the Union to get the reaction of students. This reaction will become the focus of the stories that could be seen on MTV."

MTV also will set up voter registration tables in the Wheelroom of the Union, where even out-of-state UI students can register to vote. Interactive information kiosks, which will feature survey questions on a touch computer screen, will allow UI students to record their opinions on issues and candidates.

CEDAR RAPIDS - On the 23rd anniversary of the historic Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion, the nation's most outspoken anti-abortion political figure spoke in Cedar Rapids.

Republican presidential candidate Pat Buchanan preached to about 450 devout followers on issues including the condition of his campaign, Roe vs. Wade and not surprisingly - President Clinton.

While he touched on a variety of issues, Buchanan's rally focused mainly on the importance of the anti-abortion move-

"The Roe vs. Wade decision was an abomination that scarred our beautiful nation," Buchanan said. "Every year, 1.4 million unborn children are murdered. I'm going to keep this party pro-life - win, lose or

By appointing pro-life Supreme Court justices and doing away with organizations such as Planned Parenthood. Buchanan would be the most pro-life president in history if elected, he said.

"In 1996, I believe we can elect a good, strong, pro-life president and he's standing right here in front of you tonight," he said.

The candidate also discussed other changes that would be made under a Buchanan administration, zeroing in on foreign relations and the condition of the American soul.

We here in America are in the middle of a war over the cultural soul of this country," Buchanan said. "We've got to do battle with the bureaucrats in Washington, and the refugees from the '60s. It must be clean, but we must win."

Buchanan's promises of canceling the North American Free Trade Agreement, dismantling the Federal Department of Education and giving states more power in the decision-making process stirred rousing applause from the crowded room.

'We will cancel NAFTA," he said. "There will be no more $50 billion bail-outs of Mexico. Our

NIGHT SERVICE MAY SHRINK

City Council considers raising bus fares to $1.50

Sarah Lueck

The Daily Iowan

Increased costs for running the Iowa City transit system drove the Iowa City City Council to lay out options for increased fares and decreased nighttime service at a work session Monday night.

If the transit service continues running at current levels, night service costs will increase by $150,000, and it will cost $150,000 more to run SEATS, which serves physically and mentally disabled people.

One possible plan that a majority of the councilors were comfortable with as an option was a 75-cent fare, with a $22 monthly pass available. Several councilors were interested in seeing at least partial nighttime service in this case. Iowa City bus fare is currently 50 cents, with an $18 monthly pass. The proposed options will be open for discussion by the public at a hearing on Feb. 6. It's important not to take too many benefits away from Iowa City public transit customers, said Councilor Dee Norton.

"The natives are going to get restless," he said. "I don't see dropping night service altogether. The fare SEATS services and decreasing the increase is justified, as much as I hate it. I say 75 cents reluctantly."

Maybe the current level of service isn't necessary, said Councilor Dean Thornberry. "I've never lived in a town ... that has more public transit available than Iowa City," he said. "We may not need everything we've got." Councilor Karen Kubby is concerned that raising fares will decrease ridership, which could result in a further price hike and fewer riders as time passes. "I see the transit system as an integral part of people's lives. I would like to see a prevention program for the downward spiral (of its use)," she said. "I will not support an increase in fares if there is a complete elimination of night ser-The increase in the SEATS service costs comes from Johnson County, which runs the program

Abortion foes march as court deals blow

Marcy Gordon Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Emboldened by the Republican majority in Congress, tens of thousands of yelling, chanting abortion opponents marched in protest to the Supreme Court building Monday, the 23rd anniversary of the court's decision legalizing most abortions.

The marchers used the annual protest to urge President Clinton to sign legislation limiting a woman's legal right to end a pregnancy.

As they demonstrated, however, the Supreme Court dealt a new blow to efforts to enact new abortion curbs.

An estimated 60,000 people participated in the march, U.S. Park Police spokesperson Sandra Alley said. The March for Life Fund, the event organizer, claimed 125,000

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina - Pressured by a U.S. official's dramatic tour of suspected mass grave sites, NATO and one of the men blamed for whipping up Bosnia's ethnic slaughter proclaimed their support for humanrights investigations in Bosnia.

John Shattuck, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for human rights, told reporters that Milosevic had told him that investigators would receive "full cooperation."

Milosevic is regarded as a prime mover in fomenting the Bosnian war, but has taken on the role of peace-maker in recent months.

Smith meanwhile said in a statement that he is confident his troops "will be able to provide appropriate assistance at the appropriate time to ensure area security for tribunal teams carrying out investigations and activities at mass grave sites."

It was the first time NATO seemed to clearly commit itself to securing the actual visits of war crimes investigators to the sites. Smith had earlier said he would do

GOP mulls yet another shutdown

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Republican congressional leaders searched Monday for a way to avoid a new federal shutdown at week's end, but showed little desire to heed President Clinton's pleas for a quick extension of the government's borrowing authori-

Eager to avoid election-year blame for a third partial closure of federal agencies since November, top Republicans hoped for congressional passage as early as Wednesday of legislation keeping programs functioning for perhaps another month. Without such a bill, dozens of agencies would once again have to put some operations in mothballs after the close of business Friday.

The trick for Republican leaders, especially in the House, was balancing conservatives' demands for budget slashes with a bill Clinton would sign. They were considering financing affected agencies at about 75 percent of last year's levels and eliminating some minor programs Clinton might accept - House Speaker Newt Gingrich said 12 to 15 small agencies might be killed. GOP aides listed one possibility as the Bureau of Mines.

The focus on keeping the government open and on federal borrowing reflected a belief by many Republicans that their effort to reach a budget-balancing agreement with Clinton may be over. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., more optimistic than many, said there was "still some glimmer of hope" that a deal could be completed.

Gingrich, R-Ga., was more blunt. "Since the budget negotiations are for all practical purposes not functioning ... we're trying to work for first of all how to get a down payment to get to a balanced budget," Gingrich told reporters. Dole predicted Congress and the president would approve a bill keeping the government open, but in a way true to the GOP struggle for a seven-year balanced budget. "Our responsibility this week is clear: Keep faith with our principles, keep our word to the American people and also keep faith with federal employees, who shouldn't be the pawns in this game," Dole said on the Senate floor.

But GOP leaders said there would probably be no quick congressional action to extend the debt limit, without which administration officials have said an unprecedented, jarring federal default might occur.

Dole said the Senate would not consider a debt-limit measure this week, and House leaders said they saw no reason to push such legislation soon. In this parallel track of their budget battle with Clinton, Republican leaders seemed willing to call the administration's bluff, citing warnings of imminent default by Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin in recent months that have not borne "Putting default in play isn't what anybody wants, but none of us feel right now that that's a possibility," said Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, a leader of the House GOP.

Gingrich said that if a debt-limit extension is sent to Clinton, the president would have to accept limits on future spending - or the impasse over borrowing would con-

"He has an obligation to put on the table what substantial reforms he is prepared to sign as part of getting a debt ceiling, and in the absence of that frankly we are temporarily at an impasse," Gingrich

GOLDMAN RELATIVE: 'PROGRESS IS GOOD'

Simpson finally questioned under oath

Michael Fleeman

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - With Ron Goldman's father looking on, O.J. Simpson was questioned under oath Monday for the first time about the slayings 19 months ago of his exwife and her friend.

The questioning took place at the law offices of Fred Goldman's attorney. Goldman, along with Nicole Brown Simpson's estate, has brought a wrongful-death lawsuit against the former football star.

Fred Goldman told reporters that his lawyer, Daniel Petrocelli, questioned Simpson "very meticulously." He would not discuss Simpson's specific answers or demeanor but said he was encouraged by the session, which was closed to the public.

"I think there have been some very interesting things that have come up," Goldman said. The deposition was "necessary but difficult," of killing his ex-wife and her friend Ron Goldman, never testified at his trial. His only detailed statement about the case was made to detectives the day after the slayings on June 12, 1994. But the jury never saw a transcript or heard the tape.

In a deposition, a witness is placed under oath and the proceedings are recorded by a court stenographer. Simpson cannot invoke his Fifth Amendment right against selfincrimination because he has already been acquitted of murder.

Simpson arrived at Petrocelli's office in West Los Angeles at about 9:30 a.m. A black Ford Explorer took him past dozens of reporters

He was accompanied by Robert Baker, his chief lawyer in the lawsuit, and Robert Blasier, an attorney from the criminal trial.

Senate exodus

■ During the 104th Congress political positions have become more extreme, leading 13 of the more moderate Democrats in the Senate to resign or retire.

The future of the Senate seems to be moving farther toward polariza-tion. On Jan. 16, Sen. William Cohen of Maine announced he would retire at the end of the 104th Congress, making him the 13th senator to do so, thereby breaking the retirement record set by the Senate in 1896. One hundred years later, the exodus from the Senate has to do with an increasing congressional movement away from the center and toward bipartisan extremes.

So far, there have been 25 retirements and resignations from the House, but this is a small percentage of the 427 seats. The Senate, however, is supposed to be the tempering arm of the legislative branch of government. Consequently, the loss of a veteran centrist - in Cohen's case, a 24-year Republican centrist - endangers the Senate's ability to be a moderating influence in the legislature. A balance is hard to maintain without a solid center. In a heavily bipartisan paradigm, we would witness the extremes of both parties hopping madly up and down on their respective ends of the scale in the attempt to tip it in their favor. That is what is supposed to happen in the House, as we saw in the first year of the 104th Congress. The resulting centerless Senate would be even less able to compromise with the president than it is now, especially if, as in the current situation, the president were of a different party than the majority of Congress.

Up until about a century ago, bloodletting was the physician's favored method of treating a diseased body. As a political procedure, it is still sound. Out with the old, tired blood and in with the new, is an appealing idea to voters, but the problem with this procedure, in actuality and as a political metaphor, is that bloodletting does not discriminate between good (productive) blood and bad (unproductive) blood. And a constant influx of freshman legislators, eager to make their marks as party players, counteracts the legislature's ability to find a common center within itself and with the executive branch.

One alternative is to set term limits - an old idea which has received widespread attention among the constituency, but little serious consideration in Congress. Limiting senators to two or three terms and representatives to perhaps five would ensure a steady stream of incoming new legislators, while maintaining the element of constancy, which is amicable to a center-based Senate. The resulting Congress would be more flexible, more attuned to the Zeitgeist, and still inclined with an eye toward the long-term.

As with most well-intentioned ideas, however, reality has a way of finding the chinks in the armor. Newt Gingrich and company claimed to have a mandate from their constituency when the Republicans swept into the majority with the election of 1994, but a voter turnout of less than 25 percent is not a mandate. Fifty percent is still not good enough. If Americans want to establish a mandate, if we want to be the compass for legislation, we need to turn out and vote in droves - at the very least, 75 percent of us. Sitting around and bitching about it after the fact doesn't mean a thing to the men and women on Capitol Hill

The Gramms belong in the White House

To the Editor:

The focus of Phil Gramm's entire political career has been to reduce federal spending, reduce taxes and to make the federal government smaller and less intrusive.

Just as important as his political leanings is the "first lady," Wendy Gramm. She is a warm, caring wife and mother. She has a Ph.D. in economics and a very successful career of her own. She is a delightful, positive bundle of energy. I say HEL-LOOOOOO Wendy and Phil; Goodbye Hillary and Bill.

UI basketball program needs a change

To the Editor:

Does it worry you the preseason Big Ten favorite Hawkeyes are now 3-3 in the conference? Well, it

It is time for a changing of the guard. This year's version of our hardcourt warriors are the finest group of Hawkeyes since the days of B.J. Armstrong, Roy Marble and Ed Horton. Dr. Tom Davis has Jess Settles, Chris Kingsbury, Kenyon Murray and Andre Woolridge playing as if the Hawks belonged in the Sun Belt Conference.

Davis has let his players go on drinking binges in Madison before their road game against the Badgers. He has let Kingsbury tour the Iowa City bar scene only to be arrested, and then will let this loose cannon take 20 shots from beyond 30 feet. Davis continues to run lowa's offense in anemic fashion by running plays which consistently flood the far side of the court and lead to wild passes into the post (always bounce passes, of course). He has decided not to teach his players how to set picks so Kingsbury can get some open looks at the hoop.

It is time for a changing of the guard. The Hawkeyes held a 12-point lead on Duke and lost. The Hawkeyes held a 12-point lead on Michigan State and lost. The Davisled Hawks almost blew it against Illi-nois at home, got blown out by Purdue, lost at perennial cellar-dweller Wisconsin and nearly lost to both Iowa State and Northern Iowa. The inability to put opponents away and the lack of intensity can only be blamed on one man: DR. TOM

It is time for a changing of the guard. While Davis may be a good basketball coach, he is not the great basketball coach who can bring a Big Ten championship to lowa for the first time since 1979. Other coaches in the Big Ten, such as Gene Keady, Bobby Knight and Steve Fisher, seem to always make average players rise above mediocrity to help their superstars. Davis may be able to handle the intensity of coaching at Drake. Unfortunately for Iowa, he cannot get his players excited about being ranked in the Top 10 and having a legitimate shot at the Big Ten title. The Hawkeyes have no killer instinct, no intensity. They have a coach who badly needs to be replaced. Davis is a great man and has made great strides in getting lowa basketball to this level. However, he is not the coach who can take our beloved Hawkeyes to the next level. It is time for a changing of the guard.

Riding the wagon independently

Don't know how it happened, really. I'm not a member of a substance-free fraternity. I'm not part of the U.S. troops stationed in Bosnia, forbidden from imbibing by NATO. I'm not banned from the bottle by religious beliefs, a medical condition, or the law. I have just, in the past week, decided to peel myself off the ladies' room floor of the Dublin Underground, wipe the vomit from my chin and climb aboard that big

I do have reasons, though. Mostly they're personal. I've spent too many nights doing stupid things: giving beauty secrets on perky bust lines to bearded bartenders, falling on strangers who wince at the smell of my breath, waking up in the bathtub. I want to prove to myself that at least some of my idiocy comes from Captain Morgan.

I also want to prove that despite a college culture which pushes students into bars like a malicious older brother, one does not have to drink to have a good time. In fact, from what I hear, one doesn't even have to watch TV, eat a bag of Doritos, or fly to Padre for Spring Break. So much I've learned!

And I want to prove the strong arm of the UI, blatantly tattooed with the words "WELCOME BACK TO PRESCHOOL," won't keep me from alcoholism. Tons of research, town meetings, moratoriums and official university rhetoric won't stop me from getting sloshed.

Neither will Greek prohibition. On Monday, the Greek system instituted what the Panhellenic Association Council called a "selfimposed" ban on alcohol. How brilliant and deceiving. The word self is singular, implying each individual Greek member signed a D.A.R.E. pledge card and ceremoniously emptied their bottles of Heineken into sinks. Actually, the ban is imposed by the Greek system and not by individuals. By calling it "selfimposed," fraternity and sorority members are playing the same media game which put them in the spotlight to begin with. They're making themselves look truly sober, when in fact they still drink as much as other UI students. They just have their parties in hotels.

This ban is not self-imposed. It is institutionimposed, public-relations imposed, and another Stephanie Wilbur shining example of people telling other people

It takes the downward spiral of a good friend to get me to self-impose a ban on alcohol. It takes waking up in the wrong apartment. It takes the realization that I've got more empty liquor bottles than credit hours. It's not the UI, or the Greek system, or Iowa City's place to tell me I'm a drunk. That's my own job.

At Sunday's town meeting, titled "The Effects of Alcohol Abuse in a Learning Community," Peter Nathan, professor of psychology, said, "In this room half of you have had a problem with alcohol, or an immediate nuclear experience with an alcohol problem."

At first, I thought Nathan was exaggerating. Did he think he was talking to the John Belushi Fan Club? Then I examined the realm of my personal experience. Within my circle of friends, there are cocktailers, weekend celebrators, lushes, full-fledged winos and three sober

I decided to look at some criteria for alcohol abuse and/or dependence. I found these 12 prerequisites to alcoholism in a pamphlet at the public library. They are sobering.

· Having an accident at home while drunk. Ever try and slice a lime while seeing double? Ever pass out with a lit cigarette between your fingers? Ever spill anything?

· Drinking too much when there is an important reason to stay sober. Hello,

 Missing an appointment because of drinking. Hello, class

· Getting into a fight because of drinking. My friend came home one night with a black eye because a drunk guy thought he was looking at his girlfriend. My friend is gay.

Being told to leave a place because of drinking. The obvious place here is a bar, but I was once asked to leave a laundromat.

 Having blackouts — not remembering things from the night before. Probably triggered by my deep psychological wish to forget that on the way to the bar, I hitched a ride from two strangers with a gun rack and a pick-

• Drinking in the morning. Welcome to the Kinnick Stadium parking lot.

· Being told by a doctor that drinking has been affecting your health. Yes doctor, and so has smoking, eating fatty foods, sniffing

Wite- Out, bungee jumping ...

• Buying alcohol with money which should have been used for more important things. Like rent.

· Having shaky hands in the morning. Hard to tell when the room's spinning, isn't it? · Feeling the effects of alcohol on the job. Wait - is that hung-over or drunk?

It's not easy being dry. Smoking isn't as enjoyable without a rum and Coke. At parties my wit goes over everyone's head after 10. People are uglier. There's no escaping this real life for a flashier hammered one.

But I wake up earlier, and I go to class. I don't have to lie to my parents about where I was when they called last night. I don't have to worry about dying from alcohol poisoning.

I still go to bars, especially the Deadwood, where I can kick the butts of drunk people in Trivial Pursuit. I don't tell others they can't drink, but I've dragged some friends into sober bliss and we're having fun reinventing our collegiate culture. We plan on waiting until Spring Break before jumping off the wagon and landing in a big puddle of Riunite. Or maybe we'll keep on riding.

My 22nd birthday was Friday and one of my ifts was a beautiful bottle of red wine. My boyfriend whined, "Can't you just fall off the wagon for one night?"

I said no. I am a rock.

UI has given red light on energy saving

The UI is doing a good job of being energy efficient. However, there are many places where the university can still save millions of dollars on electricity consumption. Such savings might help to keep the tuition from rising every year! Why then has the UI not taken advantage of such a money saving offer?

The Environmental Protection Agency's

money-saving Green Lights program seeks to upgrade kilowatt-crunching lighting systems with modern, energy-efficient lighting systems. Under the program, the university would upgrade the lighting systems in at least

The Environmental Protection Agency's money saving Green Lights program seeks to upgrade kilowattcrunching lighting systems with modern, energy-efficient lighting systems. Under the program, the university would upgrade the lighting systems in at least 90 percent of the building.

90 percent of the building. The program guarantees the upgrades will be profitable and will maintain the light quality in the buildings.

Green Lights is not a risky, untested venture. The University of Minnesota was the first Big Ten school to join it. Since joining, UM has saved an estimated 25 million kilowatt-hours of electricity. Such savings in electricity help reduce emissions of two primary greenhouse gases: sulfur dioxide by 77 tons and nitrogen oxides by 93 tons. Minnesota is not alone; other schools - Harvard, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of Missouri at Columbia - are also using Green Lights.

After reviewing Minnesota's success with Green Lights, why then has the UI not joined and reaped similar savings? Prasanna Kumar, with the UI Facilities Engineering Services, understands the money-saving potential of energy-efficient lighting. Kumar has performed lighting upgrades in the Engineering, Dental Science, Bowen Science, Biology and Chemistry buildings. However, even with the upgrades, some of these buildings still use many inefficient lighting systems. Macbride Hall runs entirely on inefficient lighting. Such inefficient lighting systems need to be upgrad-

Why is Green Lights not being met with open arms by the UI? Kumar said he does not want the extra work of dealing with the EPA. Just ask one of the hundreds of schools which are Green Lights partners and they will tell you the EPA is easy to work with. Also,

Kumar does not think the university needs the technical expertise of the EPA. The EPA tests all lighting products and rates them in an unbiased consumer reports fashion. This information requires thousands of hours of testing and is only available to Green Lights partners.

Jim Howard, associate director of the Physical Plant, said he is not necessa-rily against Green Lights, but rather is neutral to the pro-

Kumar said the administration wants two good reasons for why the university should join Green Lights. One reason, which Kumar accepts, is publicity. The EPA gives its partners media attention by hosting a signing ceremony on campus with EPA officials. The university is recognized as an environmental leader in saving energy and reducing pollu-

The second reason, which Kumar does not accept, is especially important to the students. By joining Green Lights, the university makes a commitment to get the work done. A memorandum would be signed with the EPA saying the work will be completed in five years. Without this memorandum, there is no guarantee the upgrades will be completed.

By joining Green Lights, the UI will make a statement that it is making a serious effort to save money and protect the environment. There is no logical reason for the UI not to join this program. Perhaps with a new president, students, faculty and the world will all benefit from Green Lights.

The subpoenas come after a tumultuous two weeks in which Rodham Clinton's popularity has dropped sharply amid GOP attacks on her honesty and new disclosures about her roles in Whitewater and the White House travel office firings.

Reacting to the continuing questions about Rodham Clinton's work for a failed Arkansas savings and loan, the Clintons' personal lawyer sent a letter to Whitewater Committee chairman Alfonse D'Amato earlier Monday.

"Mrs. Clinton has responded" to the committee's written questions in the past, and "she is certainly willing to do so again in an effort to bring your inquiry to a conclusion," Kendall said in the letter.

In reply, D'Amato said the panel "looks forward to hearing Rodham Clinton's responses," but only after investigators gather more evidence. They want electronic mail generated at the White House on Whitewater, for example, and doc-

Candidates challenge Congress pensions

Larry Margasak Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Some Republican presidential hopefuls are making lucrative congressional pensions a campaign issue as they try to paint GOP front-runner Bob Dole and other senator-candidates as pampered Washington insiders.

Commentator Pat Buchanan says lawmakers are "looting" the Treasury. Millionaire publisher Steve Forbes opposes any taxpayer-financed retirement program for Congress and tweaks Dole for wasteful "Washington values."

Dole, the Senate majority leader, stresses that he voted last year for a budget bill that would have curbed future pensions, and insists, "I didn't get into public service for a pension."

The pension controversy is getting new scrutiny as a handful of lawmakers renew efforts to make the retirement system less generous and as large numbers of lawmakers are quitting, including senior members who will leave with a large pot of retirement mon-

The retirements include 34 House members, seven of whom are running for the Senate, and a record 13 senators.

The National Taxpayers Union, the conservative watchdog group which has pushed hardest for congressional pension changes, has been estimating the pension of each lawmaker who announces

One reason congressional pensions are controversial is that legislators gave themselves a retirement system superior to that of federal workers. The federal system, in turn, is more generous than many private systems, according to Labor Department figures.

Iowa pro-life group deems Forbes 'unacceptable'

Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa - Leaders of Iowa's major anti-abortion group Monday said publisher Steve Forbes "is not pro-life" and is unacceptable to the group's members.

"We've passed that information on to our grassroots," Samona Smit, lobbyist for the Iowa Right to Life Committee, said:

Smit said anti-abortion activists were trying to counter the heavy advertising campaign Forbes is running by alerting the group's potent grassroots organization, warning that Forbes is unacceptable.

What we have found is that he is doing a tremendous amount of advertising on Christian radio with a pro-family message, but what he's not telling those pro-family people is that Steve Forbes is not pro-life,"

Forbes has been using his own money to seek the Republican presidential nomination and has been banking heavily on television and radio ads. Many of those spots put forth his proposal for a flat tax or attack the other GOP candidates, like Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole or Texas Sen. Phil Gramm.

Polls have shown that tactic has had some success, and Forbes has risen as high as second in some sur-

Forbes rarely discusses abortion on the campaign trail, and when asked about the issue, he is vague. He refuses to accept the pro-choice label but does not favor a constitutional amendment to ban abortion.

Smit said anti-abortion activists are clearly not satisfied with Forbes' position and are spreading the word. Asked if Forbes was an acceptable candidate, Smit said, "I don't believe so." Smit has endorsed Gramm's campaign, though anti-abortion activists in the state have split among several of the contenders.

She said the Forbes position on abortion is clearly pro-choice, though he backs "moderate" propos-tions in the first six months of pregnancy," Smit said. "That's not a pro-life position. We are getting that information out." Mike Wild, who runs Forbes' Iowa campaign, said officials were pondering a response. "Forbes is pretty clear he wants to avoid labels," Wild said.

The group's action could spell trouble for the millionaire publisher. While he has seen his poll standing grow in the state which holds caucuses next month that launch the presidential election season, Forbes has not built an organizational structure as solid as some others.

The anti-abortion group, on the other hand, has one of the strongest grassroots organizations in the

Buchanan invokes ties to mentor Nixon for support

Mike Feinsilber

WASHINGTON Nixon ran for president on the sloan "Nixon's the One." For Pat Buchanan, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, Nixon's still the one.

Buchanan invokes his ties to "my mentor" at almost every opportunity. His first New Hampshire television commercial opens with a scene of Nixon's farewell arm wave on Aug. 9, 1974, the day of his utmost disgrace, the day he resigned and

"Who the hell would have thought that possible 15 years ago?" muses Stephen Ambrose, Nixon's biographer. "It's just unbelievable to anybody over 30 years old that this would ever happen."

Ambrose recalls the way Republicans kept their distance from Nixon in his years in the wilderness after the resignation. He was never invited to address a Republican national convention.

But Buchanan, a TV pundit, needs credentials if he is to persuade Republicans that he is more than a gadfly candidate. So he stresses his ties to both Nixon and Ronald Reagan. He wrote speeches for both and was Reagan's communications director.

Buchanan acknowledges "grave mistakes" were made by both but argues that his candidacy is still strengthened by having survived "the two biggest train wrecks in presidential history" — Watergate and the Iran-contra.

"Through triumph and tragedy, war and peace, I served the two most important presidents of our time," he says in the New Hampshire commercial. "Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan were not men of compromise, and neither am I."

In a recent interview on C-SPAN, Buchanan singled out Nixon aide H.R. Haldeman as a model presidential chief of staff. And in an October speech to the American Conservative Union, Buchanan made light of the wiretaps and illegal break-ins that were part of the Watergate saga.

To laughter and applause, he jokingly told of one conservative who had criticized Nixon severely for perceived leftish tendencies wage-price controls, arms-control agreements, the opening to China.

The same conservative showed up, contrite, in Buchanan's office after the Watergate shenanigans had come out and said, "Pat, I want to apologize for all the attacks on the administration. I would never have done anything like that if I knew you were into all that good stuff!"

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) Boxing champion Roy Jones Jr. is trying to fulfill his dream of becoming a two-sport athlete by signing with the Florida Beachdogs as a player-conditioning coach.

Jones, however, may be doing more coaching than playing when he reports to the team, which plays in the Continental Basketball Association, the NBA's developmental league.

The IBF super middleweight champion from Pensacola will not be activated as a player unless a spot opens on the 10-man roster.

"Like if somebody is called up to the NBA," the would-be point guard said. "They're in first place. I didn't want them to cut a player or change their chemistry.'

Jones, 27, an avid amateur basketball player who lacks college experience, said this will not affect his boxing career.

Gable ponders the end

Iowa coach may retire after 1996-97 season

Shannon Stevens The Daily Iowan

Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable told The Daily Iowan Monday that the 1996-1997 season may be his last at the helm of the Hawkeyes.

After winning 19 Big Ten Championships and 13 National Championships, Gable said he wanted to spend more time with his family and pursue two of his other passions: hunting and "I just don't think I want to continue until I can't do anything else except go to my grave," Gable said.

But Gable said he'd have to quit coaching completely if he was to spend more time away from the mat.

"If I do take the opportunity to do those sort of things it takes away from this (wrestling) and I don't think that's fair," Gable said. "Some people say Why don't you go ahead and back off a little bit, get some other things done and you'll have just as good of a team?' I don't

During the National Duals, Gable had to console defending national champion Jeff McGinness after his 43-match winning streak was ended. He was later forced to forfeit a finals match at heavyweight after Erik Stroner asked to be

Pizza Hut creates national basketball tourney

Chris Snider The Daily Iowan

It's time to lace up your sneakers because you and four of your closest friends could be on the road to the Final Four, courtesy of Pizza Hut and the University of Iowa intramural program.

The only catch is the Iowa basketball team must qualify for the NCAA tournament and you must win the Iowa intramural basketball championship.

Pizza Hut will fly five members of Iowa's intramural basketball championship team to the site of the Hawkeyes' first-round NCAA game for a separate tournament featuring intramural teams from the 64 qualifying schools

"If our men's basketball team is sent out to California to play, they're going to fly our intramural team out there to play the same team in the same pairings," University of Iowa Intramural Director Warren Slebos said.

Just as Tom Davis' Hawkeyes would move on to different sites with continuous victories, so will the intramural winners, with airfare, hotel accommodations and food all paid by Pizza Hut.

"Once the pairings are set, whoever wins, there will be a separate tournament," Slebos said. Streetball Partners, best known for their Hoop It Up and Air It Out competitions, is one of six organizations working on the three-week event.

The tournament, officially called the Pizza Hut Hoops 3-on-3 Road Trip Invitational, will be the main attraction of mini Hoop It Up festivals, to take place in the same cities as each round of the NCAA tournament.

"I think Pizza Hut has been a long-standing sponsor of the NCAA tournament and they wanted to put together a grassroots tournament that would mirror the NCAA tournament," Program Directory of Pizza Hut Hoops Rick Nogues said.

Sign-up for intramural basket-ball begins Wednesday, Jan. 24 at 1 p.m. at the UI Fieldhouse and runs through Thursday. Competition begins on Monday, Jan. 29, also at the Fieldhouse to be played through spring break.

True or false, Iowa's basketball team is ranked in the Top 10.

True. Yeah, the men may have slid out of the Top 20, but the women have cruised into the nation's No. 8 hours of the Hawkeyes' loss at Michigan State

Saturday, I heard it all: "They need a new coach. What's with all the substitutions? They can't win unless they run because they don't have any halfcourt offense. They need to learn how to rebound. They need to learn how to make free throws. Millard needs to learn how to box out. Why is Woolridge taking that shot? Why is Kingsbury taking that shot? Why didn't they take a timeout at the end? Why doesn't Davis give them a tougher preseason schedule? They must be reading their own press clippings. Why can't they win on the road? They need to figure out how to win close games. ...' It seems everyone's an expert. I however, am not going to try and solve the men's problems. The truth is, I don't know why the Hawkeyes aren't living up to their preseason expectations. I just know that some people who know a lot more about basketball than I do are working things out and trying to get the team back on track.

But if you're not a "sit back, wait and hope" kind of person, then I have a suggestion for you. Start following a team that's already figured out how to win. The Hawkeye

Not only are they undefeated in the Big Ten, but they just beat their nearest competition, previously undefeated Northwestern, by 13 points on the road. The Hawkeye women haven't been without their problems. A year ago they finished a disappointing 11-17, then lost legendary coach C. Vivian Stringer in the offseason.

But new coach Angie Lee wasn't overwhelmed by the rebuilding task in front of her. The former Stringer assistant took a 1994-95 underachiever and made it into a 95-96 overachiever, one that may land in the Final Four.

The Hawkeyes, at 16-1, have the second-best winning percentage in all of women's basketball. They've taken care of Northwestern, Wisconsin and Purdue, all ranked Big Ten opponents. And their only loss

Denne H. Freeman Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. - While the Pittsburgh Steelers traveled, the Dallas Cowboys practiced, studied tapes and planned for a no-curfew evening on the town with a dozen limousines ready for standby duty at the players' beck and call.

The Cowboys were using the same Super Bowl preparation game plans they first devised under Jimmy Johnson in winning efforts in 1992 and 1993 against the Buffalo Bills.

Barry Switzer inherited Johnson's staff and didn't want to change a successful formula.

It's play and have fun early in the week, then get down to business starting Wednesday and Thursday. Emmitt Smith, Michael Irvin and other players had the limos ferried from Dallas.

FORT MILL, S.C. - Kenny Anderson is a Charlotte Hornet finally.

Anderson's weekend wait to become a Hornet ended the way he wanted Monday, with the news that New Jersey had agreed to finalize the deal that ended his stay with the Nets.

The Nets informed the Hornets at 3:35 p.m. CST Monday that an MRI showed no long-term or significant injury to the ankle and that they were considering the trade official.

The extension meant that all four players were barred from playing or practicing with their new teams.

"I'm excited about being here,"

Anderson said. 'We have a lot of pieces here. I'm just one of the pieces to the puzzle. Hopefully, I can come in and be a good fit for the team and play the way Kenny Anderson is capable of playing and just have fun and let everything else just work out for itself." News of New Jersey's decision to finalize the deal came too late for Anderson and reserve guard Gerald Glass, the other player the Nets sent to Charlotte, to practice with their new team Monday morning. While the Hornets went up in Charlotte on Saturday and through a 90-minute workout, Anderson and Glass had to stay on the sidelines.

Anderson already is looking ahead to the Hornets' game Friday in New Jersey, where he's aware some people think he failed to live up to his potential.

NBA nearly hooked John Wallace. After an impressive junior season at Syracuse, he made himself available for the 1995 draft. But two days before the selections were made, Wallace had second thoughts and pulled his name from consideration.

Now, he is profiting from his decision to play out his college career. And his return is paying dividends for the Orangemen as

Wallace, who averaged 14.3 points and 8.3 rebounds his first three seasons, was expected to go no higher than the middle of the first round in last year's draft.

At the moment, there is little doubt among the college basketball community that he will be a lottery pick. And, depending on how many other players join the throngs of NBA prospects, he could be an early lottery pick.

Through 17 games this season, Wallace has sharply increased his stock by raising his average to about 24 points and extending his game out to the 3-point arc. He is giving opponents a handful from the perimeter while remaining a menace inside.

"My outside game is better by leaps and bounds from last year," the 6-foot-8 power forward said. "That's the part of my game I wanted to improve. I think I have."

And by becoming a more well-rounded player, Wallace has helped keep Syracuse in the national rankings and among the top tier in the Big East.

The Orangemen, ranked No. 17, are 13-4 overall and in second place behind Georgetown in the Big East 7 with a 4-3 record.

"He's having a tremendous year. There have been a lot of games where he has put us on his back," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said. "He has just been a monster for

Wallace has to play that way if he wants to grab a piece of the limelight in a conference that boasts three more of the most talented players in the country.

Wallace has by no means faded in the Big East shadows cast by Connecticut's Ray Allen, Villanova's Kerry Kittles and George town's Allen Iverson.

But what is frustrating at times, Boeheim says, is that Syracuse doesn't have enough balance to fully capitalize on Wallace's heroics. 'He's not had enough help," Boe-

"You take John Wallace away from us and we don't play. You take those players away from those teams and they still win."

Boeheim gave the example of how Kittles played less than a minute at West Virginia, and Villanova still won.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Nutty as it sounds, it almost worked. What's more, having his players sleep on the court the night before a home game may not be the last trick new Colorado coach Ricardo Patton has

"I had spoken with the team about protecting our home, and I said to them even the meekest of men will protect their home if you break in it," said Patton, who came within a whisker of upsetting No. 4 Kansas on Saturday in his debut as Colorado coach.

"We've been allowing people to break into our home and get away Scot-free," he said during Monday's weekly Big Eight coaches' telephone conference. "So I thought it would be a good idea as a team.

Rollaway beds were borrowed from a local hotel and at 11:30 p.m. Friday it was lights out in the Coors Event Center.

"A few of the beds were kind of short for the guys," said Patton; who was elevated from the assistants ranks when Joe Harrington resigned Jan. 16.

"Nobody complained. They were quite comfortable," said Patton.

The idea came to him while tossing and turning the first two nights after getting the job.

"I was thinking how I could reach the guys and bring about the mentality of protecting our home. It just came to me that maybe we ought to spend the night. I didn't want it to get out prior to the game because I didn't want it to sound like a gimmick."

Kansas had to score the last six points of the game to escape an 80-78 winner. What else does Patton have in mind for his team?

There are some things I'd like to do later with the team," he said. "I really don't want to talk about them now. It will be based on our performance the next few games."

KANATA, Ontario - The Chicago Blackhawks handed the Ottawa Senators their ninth straight loss Monday night, 7-3 in the second game in the new $217 million Palladium.

Chicago won despite registering only eight shots on goal in each period, as Jeremy Roenick and Joe Murphy both scored twice, Bernie Nicholls had a goal and two assists and Murray Craven and Brent Sutter scored once apiece.

Goaltender Jeff Hackett improved to 12-5-3 with a 22-save performance for the Blackhawks.

Alexei Yashin scored his first goal in eight games since ending a season-long holdout, and Radek Bonk had his first goal since Dec. 9 for the Senators.

Chicago improved to 24-15-9, the second best record in the Western Confermark fell to 8-35-1.

Rangers 3, Kings 1 NEW YORK - Mark Messier and the New York Rangers picked up where they left off at the All-Star break, beating the Los Angeles Kings 3-1 Monday night to extend their home-ice unbeaten streak to 21.

Messier, who had eight points in three previous games before the break, scored the clinching goal against the Kings as the Rangers improved their impressive streak at Madison Square Garden to 17-0-4 since a loss to Ottawa on Oct. 22.

The streak is the longest in the NHL this season and the second-longest in club history for the Rangers, who lead both the Atlantic Division and Eastern Conference with a 29-11-8 record for 66 points. The Rangers are 18-2-4 at home

Messier, who won the sharpshooting event at the NHL skills competition this past weekend, made it 3-1 at 7:13 of the third period with his 32nd goal of the season. Pat Verbeek, another All-Star, and Luc Robitaille also scored for the Rangers, who extended their overall unbeaten streak to six (4-0-2).

Lightning 4, Canadiens 1
MONTREAL — The Tampa Bay Lightning scored three third-period goals to remain undefeated for the season against Montreal with a 4-1 victory over the Canadiens on Monday night.

Brian Bradley, Mikael Andersson and Michel Petit, with his second of the game, scored in the final period for Tampa Bay, which ended its season series against Montreal at 3-0-1.

Pierre Turgeon scored for Montreal ence, while Ottawa's league-worst (21-19-6), which lost for the first time in six games (2-1-3).

Panthers 1, Flyers 1, OT

PHILADELPHIA Brind'Amour scored late in the third period to give the Philadelphia Flyers their sixth tie in their last 11 games, 1-1, with the Florida Panthers on Monday night

Brind'Amour got the Flyers' only goal with 2:39 left in the third period, his 13th of the season. Neither team had a particularly good chance in over-

Eric Desjardins carried the puck into the Florida zone along left wing and banked a back pass off the boards to Eric Lindros, who shot at the net from just inside the blue line.

Brind'Amour, cruising through the middle slot, slightly redirected the puck past Panthers goalie John Vanbiesbrouck, who made 30 saves.

Jody Hull's 15th goal of the season snapped a scoreless tie 6:58 into the third period and put Florida ahead. Penguins 7, Bruins 6 OT

PITTSBURGH - Mario Lemieux scored a shorthanded breakaway goal at 1:54 of overtime as the Pittsburgh

the last minute of regulation and beat the Boston Bruins 7-6 Monday night.

Lemieux took the puck from Jon Rohloff at the blue line and put his 42nd goal over Bill Ranford's glove on Pittsburgh's only shot in the overtime.

Tomas Sandstrom and Jaromir Jagr scored in the last 53 seconds of the third period to force overtime. Sandstrom got past two Bruins to beat Ranford from close range and Jagr beat the diving goalie to the loose puck and scored his 40th.

The Bruins had gone ahead on thirdperiod goals by Cam Neely, Jozef Stumpel and Shawn McEachern. The Bruins are winless in Pittsburgh (0-9-1) over the last six years.

Defenseman Ray Bourque, coming off his MVP performance in Saturday's All-Star game in Boston, had a shorthanded goal and three assists.

Avalanche 4, Islanders 3 DENVER - Jon Klemm scored 48 seconds into the game and Peter Forsberg added the eventual game-winner in the third period as the Colorado Avalanche held off the New York Islanders 4-3 Monday night.

Adam Deadmarsh and Claude Lemieux also scored for the Avalanche, who ended a four-game home winless

New York's Wendel Clark scored his 20th and 21st goals. Zigmund Palffy scored his 18th to extend his consecutive point-scoring streak to nine games as the Islanders lost for just the second time in their last eight games (4-2-2).

The Avalanche totaled 37 shots against Tommy Salo (1-5-1), who was the IHL Rookie and Player of the Year Penguins overcame a two-goal deficit in last season for the Denver Grizzlies.

15-year-old Hingis takes care of business

Peter James Spielmann Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia -Martina Hingis, taking a page out of the Michael Chang playbook, pulled an underhanded trick at the Australian Open.

The circumstances were much different, with Hingis laughing and fooling around at the time, and the surprise serve didn't really lead to her victory.

But Hingis' joke caught Brenda Schultz-McCarthy off-guard and provided a little levity Monday night in an otherwise brutal 6-1, 6-4 beating of the fastest server in women's tennis.

Hingis, a 15-year-old Swiss prodigy who advanced to a Grand Slam quarterfinals for the first time, led 5-1 in the first set when she slugged her fastest serve of the match - a 99-mph ace, her only one of the night.

Schultz-McCarthy, who replied, "So maybe I have to stay back."

Schultz-McCarthy retreated to prepare for another hard serve. She was standing maybe about 2, maybe 3 meters behind the baseline," Hingis said. "It was fun, like Michael Chang at Roland

Garros, I just put a little more slice in there.'

Chang tried the same trick on Ivan Lendl at the 1989 French Open after suffering a cramp in a fourth-round match that stretched to 4 hours, 37 minutes. Chang, 17 at the time, won that point, completely throwing off the topranked Lendl, and went on to win the match and, eventually, the tournament.

Schultz-McCarthy recovered from her surprise, dashed in and managed to return Hingis' underhander, then won the point.

"But it was 5-1, so ..." Hingis said, then broke into giggles.

The smiling, laughing Hingis barely broke a sweat on a cool, windy evening.

Schultz-McCarthy expressed a mixture of admiration and exas-peration after the match. "That's typical Martina," she "My record!" Hingis called to said. "For her, it's just a game, which is great, I think. I wish I could see it like that. I'm 25. You fight for every point, and then this > serve. Lack of control was Schultz-McCarthy's undoing. She made 34 unforced errors to Hingis' four.

First, there were three.

Three bands full of angst, nationalistic pride and an eye toward spirituality stormed out of the Celtic Headlands: Big Country, U2 and the Waterboys.

The early '80s, for whatever reason (Reagan backlash, for example), were a fertile sowing ground for anthem music, and these bands had anthems in spades, beginning with U2's initial declaration, "I Will Follow."

But then, Big Country faded a little, got a lilttle less strident and a little more concerned with harmonies. And U2 ... well, you

That left the Waterboys to carry the torch, which they did with equal parts passion and skill through several albums. Under the musical leadership of singer/songwriter Mike Scott, the Waterboys consistently documented the music of the Celts combining bombast with sweet, ancient-sounding melodies.

Now Scott has gone solo. His new album, Bring Em All In, is a sparse recording, virtually devoid Oddly, Bring Em All In does just the opposite of what its title suggests. It utterly lacks bombast, which is both good and bad: bad because Scott is, after all, a man who has dealt in bombast, and he seems slightly ill-at-ease without a backing band; good because the spare arrangements of this album aren't overwhelming to his thin, George Harrisonturns-into-a-lizard voice, as they sometimes were on Waterboys

Some songs on "What Do You Want Me to Do?," notably, sound like Scott is going for Dylanesque postures. Scott is a good songwriter, but his lyrics don't have the tension Dylan's have. When these songs are stripped down, it's like holding a bright light behind them: their lack of substance becomes more pro-

The lyrics from the title song indicate Scott is simply too selfimportant: His desire to contain the world in his music is hubris. But I think it would be more accurate to see the song and the album as infinitely hopeful. By paring down to sharp, acoustic textures, perhaps he's just trying to remove one more layer of obstacles between himself and

Hot diggity: Windy City hits the spot

Never before has a single bite provoked such intense emotion in such a short period of time as did a Windy City Dog. From the second I entered, I realized this was a place I would frequent.

The person behind the counter greeted me with a smile. After I put on my sunglasses to protect my retina from the twinkle in his eye, I glanced up at the menu and discovered that while the establish-

Not only that, these weren't even Iowa City prices - far from it. Instead of my usual trek to the ATM just so I can order a slice of pizza, I had enough money left in my wallet for a down payment on a new car. Of course, I had just cashed my Stafford Loan, but that's beside the point.

This chili-cheese dog was bursting with such flavor that all I could think of was taking my clothes off and rolling naked in the batch of chili that was brewing in the back. And if it weren't for Iowa health codes and social values, I would have done it right then and there.

I could hardly contain my excitement; someone, everyone had to know about Windy City Dogs. I wolfed down my meal and did my best Carl Lewis out the door.

The first person I saw was less than receptive. As I raised my Then I asked if he was the ownhand to offer her a high five, all resounding, "Yes, I am," the front she could do was adjust her habit door swung open, since the small and pass by, leaving me hanging.

Normally I tend to stay away from volatile food on mornings like that, but they sounded so appetizing I couldn't pass them up, later realizing that if I had bypassed the dish which should come complete with an angioplasty, it would have been the biggest mistake since David Caruso left "NYPD Blue."

Here's the bottom line: Windy City Dogs offers a previously unexplored utopia in the realm of Iowa City casual dining. While it may not be the healthiest of eateries, it is one which should come to the tip of your tongue when trying to decide on a comfortable and delicious place to grab a quick bite to

'Punk You': A crash course in the punk genre

Jonathan Hansen

The Daily Iowan If you've wondered just what it is everyone is talking about when they throw around the word

"punk," Punk You, volume 1, will explain it all. This is not a compilation of contemporary "punk" bands. Instead, Punk You is a retrospective crash course in a musical genre. It includes some of the best and most influential bands of punk music: the Buzzcocks, Stiff Little Fingers and X-Ray Spex, to name a few. Producers Vincent Vero and Bruce Harris deserve credit for
