Child-murderer, rapist faces Utah firing squad

Matthew Brown Associated Press

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah - A child-killer who said he would rather die at the point of a rifle than fastened flat on a gurney awaited the nation's first execution by firing squad in 19 years earlier today.

John Albert Taylor, 36, was scheduled to be shot at 12:01 a.m. at Utah State Prison by anonymous marksmen firing the same type of deer rifle used to execute Gary Gilmore at the same institution in 1977.

Taylor had his first cigarette in six years as he was led from maximum security to the death-watch cell, prison spokesperson Randy Ripplinger said. As he waited there Thursday night, he ate pizza with his family and met with the Catholic priest who baptized him

Under Utah law, Taylor was offered the choice of lethal injection or firing squad. Utah is the only state to have the firing

Taylor said he chose the firing squad because it would be a costly inconvenience to the state and because he feared "flipping around like a fish out of water" if given an injection. He also hoped the method would more dramatically underscore his claim that his death would be state-sanctioned murder.

Gov. Mike Leavitt said the state had an obligation to make the execution dignified and orderly.

There is nothing but sadness in this event." Leavitt said. "This is the highest penalty that society can exact and the most See EXECUTION, Page 7A

It's a 1-hour 'Friends' fix

The Daily Iowan

For Thursday night television diehards, Sunday's one-hour "Friends" special just might outscore the Super Bowl.

The episode, slated to start after the game at about 8:30 p.m., will feature special guest stars Julia Roberts, Brooke Shields and Jean-Claude Van Damme.

"Friends," a campus phenomenon drawing thousands of UI students to their couches each week, has become a time for lessfamous friends to meet, laugh and relax. And "Friends" fanatics are psyched for an addi-

But "Friends" is only the beginning for some Thursday night couch potatoes. UI junior Christie Meyerdirk's entire apartment building gets together to watch all the shows that air from 7-10 p.m. on NBC.

"All homework, working out and going out gets put aside so we can all sit and watch the shows straight through," Meyerdirk said. "Only if there is a travesty do we not watch 'Friends' - and then we make sure to tape

Meyerdirk thinks "Friends" appeals to college students because it has the elements of a college situation.

Iowa's beef king: Rocking the vote for red meat

Chad Graham The Daily Iowan

I want to be a beef king.

I have this warped dream of walking into a beef-king convention wearing a Styrofoam hamburger on my head and sitting on a throne of pure ground round as a local high-school band plays "Hail to the Beef."

Now that's privilege. Just ask Iowa's 1996 beef queen, 19 year old Kim Lynch, about all the perks of traveling around Iowa representing the Iowa Cattlemen's

"It's called an ambassadors program," she said. "There is an open age limit of trained myth stoppers (about beef misconceptions)."

I asked Lynch how she got started in all of this beef PR." Did she eat a 96-ounce piece of meat Outdoors," win a free T-shirt and become a shooin for beef queen finalist?

"I was raised on a farm," she said. "My senior year of high school, I was crowned as a princess. They make you go through a year of preparation before becoming the beef queen. Last January, I was crowned the county queen."

At the same time, Republicans who control the Iowa House said they'd go ahead with their own plan to cut Iowans' property and income taxes by $151 million. The competing plans have set the stage for a tax "showdown" during the 1996 legislative session.

"The piece of the puzzle that we think needs to be focused on now is tax relief," House Speaker Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids, said. "The governor has his plan, we have our plan. We still haven't seen a plan from the Democrats. Hopefully, by passing our tax relief package next week, they'll at least have to come forward with how much they want to provide in tax

Even as Corbett spoke Thursday, Senate Democrats were developing the tax plans he'd asked for. And the Democrats had some harsh criticisms for the Republicans.

Technology for disabled stars in UI open house

Kristen Smith The Daily Iowan

Computerized voice scanners, braille embossers and book scanners for students with disabilities will be among the technologies demonstrated at an open house

The open house, sponsored by the UI College of Education Computer Resource Lab, will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Room N188 of the Lindquist Center. All students, faculty and staff are wel-

"My big objective is to make them independent learners, as much as any other student on campus," Achrazoglou said.

The most popular piece of equipment in the lab is the book scanner. The book scanner transfers information from books to a cassette tape for later use. The information can also be heard through

"We have students who use the technology, who are eager to show others how to use it," Achrazoglou said. "It adds legitimacy to our efforts that when students are so enthused and have had positive experience with it, that they are willing to show others how this stuff works."

David Dawson, a UI graduate student who frequently uses the equipment in the lab, is one of the driving forces behind the open house.

"We wanted as many students on campus to get to know about this equipment early," Dawson said. "We want to get students active, and to make acquisitions that can meet student needs. We'd like to turn it over and make our lab a model for the rest of the uni-

Achrazoglou is excited about the future of the lab, even though not all of the equipment he would like to see is available.

'About $5,600 of equipment and software is on order for the lab and we are impatiently waiting for it to arrive," Achrazoglou said. "Right now, I believe we are lacking. None of the machines are networked and this closes doors for disabled students - no Internet, e-mail or even the Oasis system."

GOP candidate Gramm: Bumper-sticker support means more than polls

The Daily Iowan

UI freshman Scott Hultgren liked what Republican presidential nominee Phil Gramm had to say about his tax program at Thursday's rally. But he's not ready to plaster a Gramm bumper sticker on his car just yet.

explained his tax program. I'm Phil Gramm beginning to see differences in people's plans." At the end of Gramm's earlymorning speech at the UI Athletic Club, he encouraged supporters to put bright blue Gramm bumper stickers on their cars.

"If a poll tells me I lost that doesn't mean anything to me,' Gramm said. "But if I see a rusty, dirty old truck where the driver took their hand and wiped off a place on their bumper to put my sticker on - that's a victory."

Gramm, like Forbes, who entered the Athletic Club about eight hours after Gramm left, has a flat-tax plan. But his would also tax capital gains, unlike Forbes'.

"In my plan, all income would be taxed, not just wages and salaries," Gramm said. "Why should someone who educated themselves to get a good job have to pay taxes, but someone who makes their living off investments doesn't? Do we want to discourage people from earning human capital?'

Gramm said taxing capital gains as well as income would allow the flat tax to be 16 percent, rather than Forbes' proposed 17 percent.

However, Gramm wouldn't promise one change many tax payers would like to see. 'We may have to get to heaven before we get rid of the IRS," he said. "I'm not gonna promise what I can't deliver.'

What Phil Gramm says about ... past wrongs by perpetuating wrongs going the other way."

"(Gramm)

"He's familiar with college life,"

Banger said. "He knows exactly what he's doing in that area."

"Plus, in three or four years we're going to be out of college and we want families and good lives and he wants to give us that dream," Brown added.

Gramm said the key to that dream is new jobs, and he would create $1.2 million a year by lifting small business regulations and balancing the budget by lowering taxes and cutting programs.

"Tell me a social program that equals a job," he said.

Hultgren and Gemignani weren't won over by Gramm's platform, but other UI students attending the rally think Gramm is the man to take over the White House in '96.

"Gramm's proven he can win," said Hans Gullickson, UI sophomore and campus coordinator for Gramm's campaign. "He's won every major straw poll, except Florida where he got second. I have a lot of faith in straw polls because you have to actually go out and vote like a real election. It's not just someone calling and since you just saw a Forbes commercial you said.

Banger and Gullickson said

Gramm is the strongest candidate among the GOP field of nine.

"Forbes only represents one issue, but Gramm is really the goto guy because he represents so many different interests to American people," Banger said. "He's the only candidate who's serious about balancing the budget, Gullickson said. "He's a real conservative, not a fake conservative."

Gramm also tried to appeal to the outh vote in a teleconference in North Hall Thursday. Iowa highschool students from Waverly, Keosauqua, Ankeny and Mount Vernon asked Gramm to explain his position on issues ranging from U.S. soldiers in Bosnia to the role his wife Wendy would play as first lady.

Wendy, Gramm said, would act as his "eyes and ears" outside Washington to keep him informed of the nation's thoughts.

"I often seek her advice and when I'm smart, I take it. But I want to be clear that when you elect me you're not electing her," he

Once again, Forbes' message was the flat tax, but this time Forbes spent more time defending his proposal against critics than convincng voters to support it.

Forbes defends his flat tax by saying it will allow people to keep more of their money to spend on homes and give to charity. He also says his plan won't break the bud-

"Just look at history. Don't take my word for it," Forbes said as he pointed to tax cuts in the 1960s by President Kennedy and in the 1980s by President Reagan.

Both tax cuts actually increased the amount of money the government received through economic growth. Forbes said his flat tax would have the same effect and not run up the deficit.

Forbes' opponents have criticized him for using the flat tax as a solution to all problems. Now, as Forbes fights back, he says his opponents see the flat tax as the source of all evil.

"If you have a drought this summer, they'll blame it on the flat tax. If you have a flood, they'll blame it on the flat tax," Forbes said. Forbes' Iowa City supporters also rallied to his cause.

Thiersch said Forbes is strong enough to defeat Dole. A strong grassroots effort is necessary to turn voters out to a caucus.

14-year-old pregnant runaway lies about age

Michael Graczyk Associated Press

HOUSTON - A girl who disappeared after claiming she was 10 years old and 8% months pregnant was found with a phony birth certificate and is probably about 14, authorities said Thursday.

Cindy Garcia's flight from social workers earlier in the week prompted a desperate hunt because of fears that she was endangering her life and that of her unborn child.

Police found her with her 22-yearold boyfriend, Pedro Sotelo, hiding in a Houston apartment Wednesday night. Sotelo was jailed under $200,000 bail on a charge of aggravated sexual assault and could get Thursday. life in prison.

"The certificate that we had is the only documentation of her age and apparently a fake," said Linda Edwards, a spokesperson for the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services. "We think she's about 14. We don't know exact-

As far as Sotelo is concerned, it wouldn't make any difference. A 14year-old in Texas can legally have sex only with someone no more than three years older.

Edwards said they determined the birth certificate was forged after social workers interviewed the girl A copy distributed to reporters shows her date and place of birth as Sept. 13, 1985 in Houston, although the certificate was not issued until July 31, 1989.

"Nobody in this family has given helpful, consistent information," said Judy Hay, Harris County Children's Protective Services. "Whether she's 10 or 14, she's been sexually abused and we will protect her."

Edwards said police are looking into the possibility that she was carrying the forged documents because she's an illegal alien.

when confronted by officers four days after she ran away from a shelter for abused children. They were found after a woman took them into her apartment and had a friend call 911.

Cindy had been taken to a shelter by authorities after she turned up a welfare office with the phony birth certificate to qualify for food stamps and child support.

Social workers panicked when Cindy ran away because she was just two weeks shy of her due date and her body would be unlikely to withstand childbirth without a Caesarean section. Cindy didn't even know what that was.

CALLS POLITICAL CLIMATE 'DIFFICULT'

Rodham Clinton talks in N.H. as Whitewater hearings begin

Associated Press

LEBANON, N.H. - Hillary Rodham Clinton left the tangled Whitewater affair behind for a few hours of nostalgic retreat into happier campaign memories, on the eve of her unprecedented appearance before a federal grand jury.

"It's not a first I'm proud of," Rodham Clinton told WMUR-TV.

Under oath, Rodham Clinton will explain to a grand jury today what she knows about long-missing Rose Law Firm billing records that suddenly turned up in the Clinton White House residence. But Thursday was devoted to a morale-boosting political trip to

New Hampshire. She spoke first to an enthusiastic crowd of political supporters, then to an admiring troop of Girl Scouts who peppered her with questions about how difficult it was to balance her professional, personal and political lives.

"Some days it feels good and other days it is kind of hard," she said when asked how she likes being first lady, lamenting that "the political climate in our country oday is kind of difficult.

Addressing a supportive crowd at Keene State College, Rodham Clinton gave a reprise of her husband's State of the Union address and fondly recalled earlier campaign trips to New Hampshire. Bill Clinton labeled himself the "Comeback Kid" after he placed second in the state's presidential primary, and Rodham Clinton said: "Today, you make me feel like the come-home kid."

Without referring to her own powerful administration role, she told the Girl Scouts not to be afraid to embark on nontraditional career paths.

"I think the important thing for women's lives today and for girls thinking about their own future is to work for the opportunity to make whatever choices are right for your life and not be constrained by what other people think you should do," Rodham Clinton said.

Rodham Clinton couldn't escape the Whitewater controversy completely. "No," she said flatly when views with several New Hampshire media outlets, she pledged to cooperate fully with the grand

In Washington, a state regulator warned one of President Clinton's aides the federal government was about to crack down, the regulator testified Thursday.

Confronted with a handwritten note she sent to the governor's office, Beverly Bassett Schaffer said she knew S&L owner James McDougal had been a friend of the governor and "I believe ... abused his relationship with Bill Clinton."

As Schaffer testified, the Senate Whitewater Committee released another note written 12 days after hers, this one by Clinton aide Betsey Wright asking about Clinton's Whitewater real estate venture.

Wright's note to Clinton asked whether, in light of McDougal's "current problems," Clinton still had stock in the Whitewater real estate venture. "If so, I'm worried about it," Wright wrote.

Clinton scribbled back, "No, don't have any more," with the word "any" underlined. In fact, the Clintons didn't sell their stock in Whitewater until late in 1992, after it had been an issue in the presidential campaign.

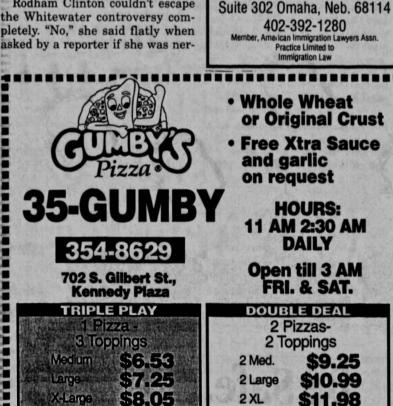

Schaffer said she didn't know at the time that Clinton and McDougal were partners in the Whitewater real estate venture. She said McDougal had bragged about his relationship with Clinton and she had heard that he tried to exert his influence on the governor's Schaffer, the former Arkansas securities commissioner, testified that she was concerned McDougal might try to approach the governor's office for help. She said she sent the July 2, 1986, note to aide Sam Bratton so that the governor's office would have nothing further to do with McDougal.

The note says, "Madison Guaranty is in pretty serious trouble.
Because of Bill's relationship w/McDougal, we probably ought to talk about it."

Tax forms could be filled out on a postcard under a flat tax, Forbes says. Income would be taxed at 17 percent under his plan, and all deductions would be eliminated. Families with incomes under $36,000 would pay no federal tax.

"If you can do it simpler, in a way that moves people ahead, why not?" Forbes said.

On the basis of his tax plan and a massive television ad campaign to promote it - Forbes has mped to second place in Iowa and New Hampshire polls, despite being the last Republican candidate to enter the race

Steve Forbes likes baseball and shops for his own groceries.

However, Forbes Jr. did inherit his father's penchant for politics. Forbes Sr. was a New Jersey state senator and ran for governor twice.

The younger Forbes developed a taste for Republican politics - as a child he played "elections" with his stuffed animals - and for supplyside economics.

Supply-siders believe that when the government reduces taxes, the economy will grow and produce even more tax revenue, reducing

"Every time in American history that we've reduced the burden on the American people, reduced their tax rates, our revenues have gone up, not down," Forbes said.

Fellow supply-sider Jack Kemp is his political mentor. If Kemp, a former New York congressman and Bush cabinet member, would have run for president, Forbes would not have, he said.

"I tried to get him to run," Forbes Although Forbes received his said, "and I was disappointed when

"No other candidate was putting forward the message of hope, growth and opportunity," he said of his decision.

Like any other presidential candidate, he began to spend a lot of time n Iowa, but unlike Pat Buchanan, Phil Gramm or Lamar Alexander, he shot up in the polls. Forbes is now the leading GOP challenger to front runner Bob Dole. Because of that, he and his flat tax have been the target of attacks.

It's a rich man's tax, says It will run up the deficit, says

Forbes said college professors should work more and members of Congress should serve less.

"We do indeed need to put pressure on universities and colleges to reduce costs," he told Iowa voters. There is no reason why professors in the classroom, especially in the undergraduate level, are teaching less and less than they have before.

For members of Congress, Forbes would limit the number of terms they can serve and lower the amount of pensions they can receive after they leave office.

But it is the flat tax that is the focus of his campaign. It is Forbes' vehicle to cut taxes and the power of Washington.

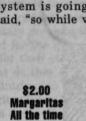

"Many of the provisions (of the tax code) are simply a form of legalized cheating," he said.

A career with a challenge

A Doctor of Podiatric Medicine (D.P.M.) specializes in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of diseases and disorders affecting the human foot. A D.P.M. makes independent judgements, administers treatments, prescribes medications, and when necessary, performs surgery. The need for podiatric doctors is great and income opportunities are excellent.

A recruiter from the College of Podiatric Medicine and Surgery will be on the University of Iowa Campus on January 30, from 9:45 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the Business Science & Liberal Arts Placement Office, 24 Phillips Hall. Please register at above.

We invite all students, regardless of grade level, to explore our program. We are one of seven colleges of podiatric medicine in the United States and the only college located within a major medical university.

Practical law

■ Law school's have continued to use teaching methodology first implemented in 1870. It's time to make changes which reflect law practice today.

The way law is currently taught to students has not changed much since 1870. According to Anthony Chase in "The Birth of the Modern Law School," the students at Harvard Law School in the fall of 1870 were abuzz with rumors that a new professor would start a "novel approach to legal education." The first words uttered by this revolutionary educator was what to this day raises fear in the heart of any less-than-well-prepared law student. Christopher Columbus Langdell started his lecture by calling on an unsuspecting student, "Mr. Fox, will you state the facts in the case of Payne v. Cave?"

Such was the beginning of what is referred to as the case method teaching of law. The students were to be taught "law" by reading cases decided by eminent judges in different jurisdictions, which purported to explain distinct principles of law generally accepted in most states. Unlike other revolutionaries, Langdell had modest expectations for the acceptance of his teaching methodology by other law schools. In the preface of Langdell's first case book, he wrote that he had not yet formed an opinion "as to how far the design will be carried out." His "design" has since been carried out beyond his expectations; arguably Langdell's teaching method, which requires students to read cases then recite the facts and points of law, is accepted dogma at law schools throughout the country. Few law schools, in fact, are able to abandon this approach in favor of more innovative ways of teaching. Their curriculum is closely controlled by the American Bar Association. The ABA's accreditation is vital to all law schools. Without it, all states, with a few exceptions, will not permit their graduates to take

Today's law schools do not prepare students to practice law to the best of their ability. In fact, most of the learning of practical law is done after law school. Students learn the real law by taking preparatory courses for taking the bar exam, as well as in the real world of practicing law. Langdell's supporters say that in law school students are taught to think like a lawyer. However, how beneficial is learning to think like a lawyer when one is not sufficiently familiar with the law?

Law has changed much since 1870. Yet, its teaching has remained unchanged. In 1870, judges played a greater role in shaping law. Thus, was the emphasis on reading cases decided by eminent judges. Today, most law is written in the form of statutes. Yet, reading and finding statutes is not as emphasized as it should be. In 1870, there was a period of apprenticeship all law graduates had to participate in before they were admitted to the bar. Today, graduates delve into the profession without such experience.

Much about law has change since 1870. It is time to re-evaluate how we teach law in a way that reflects the changes in law, and its practice since that fateful beginning in the fall of 1870.

Djalal Arbabha is a third year law student at UI.

The Norman Thesis

■ The number of Congressmen resigning and retiring may be because of more than "family time" or Newt Gingerich, according to James Norman.

ames Norman, a former senior editor of Forbes, is trying to blow the lid off the biggest government corruption story of the 20th Century, but as usual, the mainstream-lapdog press is sitting on its hands protecting its political darlings. Instead, Norman is relying on the hard-hitting magazine Media Bypass and the Internet to get his story to

Have you noticed there are a lot of powerful Washington fat cats retiring? There have been more than 50 members of Congress who have either resigned or retired since 1994, including Republicans and Democrats from both the House and Senate. The typical excuses have been: "I want to spend time with my family" and "That nasty Newtonian reign of terror in the House makes it no fun to be in the minority." Well, Norman says that's a lot of bunk.

Think about it: This is not the time to resign. The Republicans might be voted out in 1996, and Democratic senators retain a lot of power with the filibuster. It makes no sense for the liberal senators to be bailing Norman's article in the December 1995 issue of Media Bypass sheds light on a group of five ex-intelligence operatives who call themselves the Fifth Column and have discovered a vast network of political slush funds, kickbacks and laundered drug money in Swiss and other overseas bank accounts that are tied to many powerful, long-time politicians, military officers and intelligence bigwigs. Norman's sources include more than a dozen respected, retired intelligence officers, including Charles Hayes.

The Fifth Column, operating since 1989, has access to its own Cray supercomputer, and have hacked into off-shore bank accounts through PROMIS computer software. They have been conducting a two-prong operation. First, they hack into the accounts, raid them and send the money to the U.S. Treasury. Second, they download the evidence, and send the crooks a manila envelope with the information and give them an option: either retire or they go to the media in 24 hours. According to Norman's sources, the Fifth Column has 300 names on its list and has raided more than $3 billion.

So, who's allegedly in the political bodybags? Well, on the Internet, Norman fingered Pat Schroeder, Bill Bradley, Ron Coleman, Sam Nunn, Nancy Kassebaum, Alan Simpson, Mark Hatfield and Jack Fields, to name a few. But, the big surprise, and the name that killed his article for Forbes, was former Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger. Norman's sources say the Fifth Column does not cut deals with anyone to save them; they are doing this for the "betterment of country.

If it takes Machiavellian tactics to get rid of the entrenched, corrupt Washington fat cats, so be it. The Fifth Column might just be the broom we need to sweep the scum - the weenie moderates and the socialists out of Washington.

Don't just take my word for it, check out Media Bypass at 1-800-4-BYPASS, or get on the Internet political or conspiracy newsgroups and place an inquiry about "The Norman Thesis" or "Hackers Whack 45

Taking a stand: A conversation

It's a Tuesday afternoon between classes. Tara and her boyfriend, Malik, are sitting in the Union talking. In walks Tara's best friend, Malik: Man, there was much love at the march! I've never been around so many brotha's before in my life!

Tara: Well, I wish I could have been there. I think it was stupid to have just invited black men. We're all strugglin' and we all need to "atone." They act like black men are the only people with problems.

Malik: This was just a time for the bro's. You all had that female meeting in China and you didn't hear no men talkin' about "that's sexist, we wanna go." There are just some things that are for men only. Like bathrooms and shit.

Victoria: I believe that it's all nonsense. The longer we keep dividing and having special groups for these people and another group for these people, the longer racism and sexism will persist in America. If we would all just forget our color and our sex, and just treat each other like human beings, we would all get along much bet-

Malik: So, you don't want to be a black woman anymore?

Victoria: I would just like for once to be treated as a regular person. I don't want any special privileges because I'm black or any special privileges because I'm a woman. That's why I like the Republican candidates. They all believe in the human race. Their whole agenda is about regular people competing in this world. There shouldn't be a separate competition for blacks or Jews or Indians. Why can't we all just be regular people?

Malik: Wait a second now. So you're saying that the only "regular" people out there are noncolored and nonfemale, which leaves the only "regular" human beings to be white men! And talk about special privileges: White men get privileges everywhere they go!

Tara: How can I not look at you and see that you're black or that you're a man? It's impossible to put race and sex aside. It's here, it's in our face, and we need to deal with it.

Tysie McDowell

Malik: You see that's part of the problem now. Black women can't even agree with each other. You always arguin' and fightin'. If you can't get along with yourselves, how do you expect to get along with black men?

Victoria: I know I can't get along with black men. You all are triflin'. That's why I don't mess with 'em. All the brotha's I've dated were

Malik: Maybe you just have a bad choice of Victoria: No, there's a difference between black men and white men. Black men don't have time for women. They're too concerned with their own personal problems. My white boyfriends treat me like I'm a precious jewel.

Tara: I don't need to be treated like some prized possession. As long as my man is honest, ambitious and he respects me, then I'm all good. Ain't that right baby?

Malik (smiling): Yeah, but you know what a brotha' really needs!
Victoria: You see that's what I'm talking about. Triflin'.

Malik: I'm just jokin'. But that is probably why Farrakhan called for only black men. If ladies were there, then the brotha's wouldn't have been paying attention. It would have been Freaknik up on the Capitol!

Victoria: If they have another march, I'm not

Tara: Why not, Victoria?

Victoria: Because it just divides us even more. It's unrealistic to have all black people together, getting along. This world is definitely not all black, so we need to learn to get along with all people, not just ourselves.

Tara: You don't hear those exclusively white clubs, schools, businesses or neighborhoods saying "let's open our doors to black people." There is so much opposition out there that we have to come together, talk and come up with a plan to truly "overcome." Just singing about overcoming ain't got us anywhere.

Victoria: Oh Lord, here she goes again.

Malik: Leave my baby alone. All she is saying s that we have to get our house in order first, then maybe we can build houses with white

Tara: Not only getting our house straight, but planning for the future. A plan to make sure we don't slip back into the days of chattel slavery; a plan to make sure that "equality and justice for all" isn't just an empty sentence in our Constitution, but a truth that is practiced across the Victoria: How in the hell are we going to go back into slavery?

Malik: Who says we're out of slavery now?... Victoria: I know I'm not a slave. You don't see any shackles on my feet or whip marks on my

Tara: Many slaves back in the day didn't have those either. Malik: Being a slave is totally depending on someone or some group for food, shelter and clothing - the basic necessities of life. Victoria: I don't depend on anybody but my damn self. I have my own job, my own apartment and I buy my own food.

Tara: Who owns the land you live on and the business you work for? And who owns the grocery store you shop at?

Malik: Definitely not black folks.

Victoria: I don't care what you say. I'm not a

Just another day in the life of a journalist

Yesterday, as I was sitting on the toilet at Van Allen Hall, I had a depressing thought.

I was occupying my time by reading graffiti about some friendly girl named Candy. Anyway, I looked down and saw a copy of The Daily Iowan on the floor of the stall.

The paper was covered with muddy footprints and loogies. The articles and photos were ripped and torn. Basically, the paper was

Anyway, the depressing thought was this: By the end of the day, this column that you're reading will be in the same toilet stall. Chances are, if anybody is reading this it will be in a public bathroom. All my not-so-profound thoughts and my boxer's mug will become, well, I'll be honest with you. When I first got a job writing sports columns at the DI, I was pretty psyched. I called all my friends and told them the big news.

"Guess what?"

"What is it?" they asked. "I've got some big news!

"Did you finally get that wart removed?" "No, I got a job at The Daily Iowan!"

So, the first few columns I wrote I really took my time on. Every word, no, make that every sound, had to be perfect. And every sound was indeed perfect.

I walked down the hard streets of Iowa City with a strut to my step. I had my black leather jacket on and my hair combed just right. I could feel the eyes watching me wherever I went. I knew what it was like to be a celebrity. Along with Jess Settles and Hunter Rawlings, I was the most recognizable face on campus. I went home and threw my clothes off and sat on the couch naked with only a pair of sunglasses on. My roommate came home and said, "What the hell are you doing? That's disgust-

I just smiled and said, "Oh, I guess you didn't see the paper yet today."

He said, "Oh, you mean The Daily Iowan? I never read that. Nobody ever reads that. Now put on some clothes.'

Suddenly, I started feeling very self-conscious. I looked down and realized I was naked with sunglasses on. I didn't feel as cool as I did a few minutes earlier.

So the next day, walking around campus, the strut in my step wasn't as evident. My black jacket didn't seem as cool and my hair looked really dorky. Reality had set in. My dream of being famous hadn't been realized. Nobody knew who I was after all.

Little by little, my columns began to get worse. Where as once I had been conscious about every sound, I began to not even care. I sat at the computer with a carton of cigarettes and a bottle of cheap whiskey. I finished the articles in about 15 minutes and dashed out of the office before anybody saw me.

While my columns once were exploding with symbolism and metaphors, now my work was just words. I would come home and look at myself in the mirror. I didn't see the man I wanted to be. Rather, I saw a broken-down phantom of the man I used to be.

I knew I had hit rock bottom this past Thanksgiving. I was home in Boulder, and as usual I was drowning my sorrows in a bottle of poison. At our annual Thanksgiving bash, where all of my parents' important friends were invited, I got up and said I wanted to make a

I proceeded to collapse into the huge bowl of gravy on the table. I had indeed hit rock bot That night, I had a strange experience. An angel came to me dressed all in white. He woke me up with a strange embrace, and began speaking in a ghastly voice.

"Jon," the voice said. "Pull yourself together: You will be successful. People do read The Dais ly Iowan. On any given day, more Iowa students read your column than they read Niet zsche or Freud. Even though you have absolutely no qualifications to shape people's opinions, you have been given a gift. The gift of free press.

I proceeded to wrestle with the angel all night, asking him who he was. In the morning he was gone.

Since that night, I've managed to put my life. together. It does amuse me that I'm able to force people to read nonsensical material like this. I think the freedom of the press was great idea - as long as you are a part of the press. I pity those who have to read this "free" dom" from people like me.

One great thing is that I am able to lie about myself everyday in my columns. Since so few people read my columns, I never get charged with libel. Why just the other day, after I beat Jess Settles one-on-one, we were talking about that exact subject.

It's been an interesting experience working for the DI. I've learned some things about myself and about others. Still, it was pretty depressing to see that paper in the toilet. And just think, that's where this column will be in a few minutes.

CAF helped in fight for freedom administration showed a flagrant disregard for civil rights by imposing a "classroom materials policy" on undergraduates, Teaching Assistants and faculty. The policy trampled academic freedom under foot and stigmatized gays and lesbians as "unusual and unexpected." Two years later, on Martin Luther King Jr. Day in 1996, our campus can claim a victory in its fight against such a shameful attack on human rights.

■ Other organizations besides the UI Faculty Senate/Council were instrumental in the final repeal of the classroom materials policy.

As reported in the DI during exam week in December, the classroom materials policy has now been repealed and will be replaced by a restatement of several longstanding policies that provide for students to receive adequate syllabi describing course content, methods, goals, requirements and grading criteria. But the DI reported only part of the story.

DI articles emphasized the crucial role of the UI Faculty Senate/Council in obtaining a repeal of the classroom materials policy, as well as the willingness of the regents to reconsider their original directive for a policy. Senate/council members certainly deserve a large amount of credit. Special recognition should be given to senate/council President Warren Piette and senate/council Secretary Miriam Gilbert for extraordinary work. The regents, too, should be publicly

Other groups and individuals played important roles. The November 1994 Queer Theory Conference provided significant national publicity and local orga nizing opportunities. The about-face of former UI President Hunter Rawlings in January 1995 - coming out against his own policy after the November 1994 Faculty Council vote to repudiate it -contributed as well.

But none of these valuable efforts to repeal the policy would have happened without the activism of the Campaign for Academic Freedom.

A coalition of undergraduates, graduate students and faculty, CAF organized to protest the classroom materials policy within days of its decree. Over the next 12 months, hundreds of individuals devoted many hours to leafletting, dorm tabling and other informational activities. More than 3,000 signatures were collected on petitions opposing the policy.

Scores of CAF members risked dismissal from the university by taking part in actions aimed at defend-

On Martin Luther King Jr. Day in 1994, the UI ing CAF's right to place literature tables and displays on the Pentacrest at a time when the administration had banned them. Campus police photographed students and faculty while asking for their identification > CAF demonstrators in numbers of 150 and 250 twice interrupted regents' meetings in Iowa City vocally demanding repeal of the policy. CAF sponsored many other events which also succeeded in drawing campus and media attention to the policy's injustices. One such event was a "Canned Film Festival." Another was a picket of President Rawlings' office by more than 70 demonstrators.

> UI community members may recall a DI special feature on the policy published the first day of classes in fall 1994. The article quoted university officials who claimed the policy was here to stay. And, indeed, the general opinion on campus was that little more could be done, since demonstrations the previous spring had failed to win the policy's repeal.

> At this very moment, however, CAF began to orga nize its "No Policy Zone" drive. This drive eventually won the support of strong majorities of faculty and TAs in a dozen campus buildings and departments. Those who signed the "No Policy Zone" petitions did so because they were not afraid to declare their classrooms to be spaces of academic freedom, tolerance and

> In just two short months, the momentum generated by CAF's "Policy-Free Zone" movement created a climate of renewed opposition to the policy. From there a series of events involving several groups and individuals helped to influence the outcome of this struggle. Activism from below had pressured elected and appointed officials to move in a different direction.

This is a timely lesson for an election year. Voting is an important political right, but it is also the lowest form of political involvement. Voting often makes no real difference at all - especially when the only political debate between Republicans and Democrats is over how much and how fast to butcher health care, welfare and student services.

Welcome back to school, graduate students! character will be trashed.

And do you have any supporter among administrators or faculty? I haven't heard many strong voices coming to the defense of the hundreds of TAs without whom this university would simply not run.

Some heads of departments are apologetic for the use of TAs on budgetary grounds; this is not enough. I want to be defended for the quality of my work. For most TAs, concern for their class is a priority. When TAs meet TAs, what do they talk about? TA stories: How badly the administration treats us and how satisfying/fun/challenging/difficult teaching can be. We care for our students and we are damn good.

What this whole smear campaign clearly demonstrates to me is that we are more than ever in dire need of a labor union for graduate students on this campus. If you agree, call COGS and get involved.

Chang disposes of Agassi in straight sets

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) -Defending champion Andre Agassi ran out of miracles at last Saturday when human backboard Michael Chang overcame a rib injury to reach the Australian Open final.

The top-ranked Agassi, who clawed from behind in four matches and won three fivesetters, played indifferently as a nearly flawless Chang beat him for the first time in a Grand Slam event, 6-1, 6-4, 7-6 (7-1).

Chang, unhampered by strained rib cartilage, served 13 aces against the best returner in tennis, and made only 22 errors to Agassi's uncharacteristic 60.

Also, Anke Huber beat Amanda Coetzer 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, and will face Monica Seles in the final.

Rhodes named Coach of the Year

PHOENIX (AP) — On Thursday, Philadelphia coach Ray Rhodes was honored as the NFL's Coach of the Year for rebuilding the Eagles and guiding them to a 10-6 record and a playoff victory.

Rhodes, who won The Associated Press' Coach of the Year award last month, beat Green Bay's Mike Holmgren and Carolina's Dom Capers for the honor.

Gable stresses focus

Shannon Stevens The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Hawkeyes appear to have it all.

They start six current or former all-Americans, they currently hold the nation's top ranking and they just won their second consecutive National Duals championship last weekend.

Yet, even paradise has its prob-

In a press conference Thursday, Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable said he needed to make sure the Hawkeyes were maintaining the proper focus in their quest for a second consecutive national cham-

"I'm trying to get all of my team focused, hungry, prepared and ready to be the dominant No. 1 team," Gable said. "It's a matter of realizing that things aren't going to happen because you're rated No. 1 in the country. Just because you did it before doesn't mean you're oing to automatically do it again.

Gable is primarily concerned with lightweight wrestlers Mike Mena (118 pounds) and Jeff McGinness (126) who both failed to make weight before the National Duals finals, saying that the two wrestlers were having a negative influence on each other.

Gable said McGinness failed to make weight at 126 thinking he could fill in at 134 for Mark Ironside, who was suffering with a back injury at the time. Mena then followed suit figuring he could wrestle at 126 in McGinness' place. However, Ironside ended up wrestling which forced McGinness to sit out.

"If I were to go rob a bank and you were my best friend I might be able to talk you into going," Gable said. "We know obviously it's not the thing to do, but you might have

The CBS-televised game is scheduled for a 12:05 p.m. tip-off.

"The depth that they have at those (frontcourt) positions makes them increasingly difficult," Davis said, "because their first three are so hard to match up with, but then the next two that they bring in are equally as strong and, in some ways, even better players."

The Hawkeyes haven't had much trouble looking bad on their own. They've been outrebounded in each of their three conference men starting for the Wolverines.

Physically, "Tractor" is the most threatening. However, Michigan coach Steve Fisher has admitted that Traylor might not be as tall

"We've played six and we've got 12 to go and I'm not giving up on this ball club, Coach Tom Davis said. "Some people are going to give up on them and criticize them and criticize us, and I understand that ... but if we're not where we want to be, we'll just keep working harder.'

Added senior Kenyon Murray: "I know we can do it. Everybody on this ball club knows we can do it, from the coaches down to the managers. I think this ball club is going to make a real good push for the

Super Bowl could keep fans at home

The Daily Iowan

The Big Ten Conference appears to have the perfect remedy for the struggling attendance at it's women's basketball games...schedule a game during the Super Bowl.

That's just when the No. 8 Iowa Hawkeyes will play this Sunday when they host the Minnesota Golden Gophers in Big Ten Conference action. In a sport where attendence is a problem, Iowa will compete for attention with the greatest watched event ever on television. "That's the cards we've been dealt with and that's the way it is," head coach Angie Lee said. "Obviously, the Super Bowl is something you always turn on, but if we have our loyal fans there, we're still going to feel pretty good about that."

Although the Cowboys-Steelers match-up may keep some fans away, Lee isn't worried about the big game distracting her team's focus on Minnesota.

"To be honest, I don't think I have enough football fanatics to realize the Super Bowl is going on the same time their game is going on," Lee said. "They're more excited about the Michigan men being in the building (after their noon game against Iowa) the same time that they are going to be in the building.

The similarities between the two teams stop with the fact that they are both in the Big Ten and playing opposite each other on Super Sunday. The Golden Gophers come into Carver-Hawkeye Arena 4-13 overall, and occupy the Big Ten cellar at 0-7. Iowa enters the contest 16-1 overall, perched atop the conference standings at 7-0.

"Anytime you have a team that is 0 and anything, they come in hungry, feisty, and scrappy," Lee said. "They take personal pride in the record they have and they want to change it every single time," Lee said. "We're going to have to go at Minnesota as if they're 7-0."

After a seven-day rest, Iowa will start back up when it hosts Michigan Sunday afternoon. Then the Hawkeyes hit the road and battle Indiana Tuesday night before returning home Saturday to welcome Penn State.

All three of next week's opponents stand ahead of the Hawkeyes in the Big Ten standings. And all three stand in the way of any plans for a conference championship.

"It's pressure on them to win," Murray said. "If they're in first place, second place, third place, the pressure's on them."

When players met with the media Thursday for the final time before Sunday's Super Bowl, they seemed to do so with a contentious edge. And an agenda.

"People want problems to occur." Dallas star running back Emmitt Smith said. "When you've been on top so long, people don't want you there anymore. So they are trying hard to get at us, get us to turn our backs against one another and get us at the internal side.

"They tried it with our owner, our coach and now the players. You can keep trying all the time, I won't let it affect me in the way I

But now, as the big game approaches all too slowly to suit them, they are closing ranks rather than opening their arms to the thousands of fans that follow them everywhere they go. And the thousands more seeking autographs. And the millions who make their merchandise the best selling in the

The Cowboys are ticked off. Nobody makes their case better than the articulate, classy Smith, who needs 115 yards Sunday to become the career rushing leader in Super Bowls.

"We have to try to tune out all the negative stuff and not fall into traps people have set," he said. "I try not to let it bother me mental-

What's bothering some of the steelers is the likelihood Rod Woodson, their star cornerback who tore right knee ligaments in the season opener, is going to see significant action. No NFL player ever has come back in the same season from such an injury.

Woodson is likely to play in Pittsburgh's dime packages, although coach Bill Cowher has been noncommittal.

"It's too valuable a game to play games in," strong safety Myron

"You have to be careful not to mess up the chemistry we have back there," strong safety Darren Perry said. "We're just starting to gell back there. If you're going to gles out black players as targets for

I was just kidding about that San Francisco vs. Cleveland preseason prediction. What I meant to say was, both teams will be disappointing in '95 when San Fran falls in the first round and Cleveland decides to move to Baltimore. Anyway, this score, unlike that original prediction, is guaranteed, stamped, perfect.

Hawks head north to Minny

The Iowa women's swimming team will get a taste of what's to come this weekend when it travels to Minnesota for dual meet

Not only are the Golden Gophers welcoming the Hawkeyes this weekend, but they'll be hosting Iowa, along with the rest of the Big Ten, at the conference championships in two weeks.

"There isn't any added pressure swimming at Minnesota, but it's real exciting to swim in the pool where the championships are going to be," freshman Lyndsey Lewman said.

Iowa will bring its 2-5 record into the meet, and will look to acclimate itself to Minnesota's facilities to be best prepared for the upcoming championships.

"Our main focus is just to get used to the facility and the pool, head coach Patricia Meyer said. "It will really be a nice chance to get familiar with that place."

Don't think the No. 16 Golden Gophers are going to roll out the welcome mat for Iowa. Minnesota enters the meet with a 4-1-1 record, and is also looking to get geared up for the Big Ten meet.

"Minnesota is a very good, strong team," Lewman said. "We are just going to have to take a positive attitude and swim the best we can.'

Both Iowa and Minnesota probably won't be in top form this weekend due to their preparation for the Big Ten meet, so the teams will be forced to rely on their stronger assets to carry them. For the Hawkeyes, that means junior diver Kelly McCready. McCready has finished first in three-meter diving competition during her last five outings. - Wayne Drehs

Women's tennis opens Spring season No sugar, no preservatives, no artificial flavoring.

The Iowa women's tennis team will open its spring season with a Herculean challenge when it begins play at the Arizona Invitational this weekend.

Two of the Hawkeyes' three tournament opponents are nationally ranked in the Top 50 and the third is hovering in the same vicinity. No. 10 Arizona is the host and tournament favorite. Iowa will also play UC-Santa Barbara and SMU.

her team is ready for action after making great strides in recent practice sessions.

We've really accomplished all that we could hope for in practice in a short two-and-a-half weeks," Mainz said. "The focus is there, the intensity is there and I think they're ready to play."

When the Hawkeyes traveled to the tournament a year ago, they received a rude awakening losing matches to Arizona, UC-Santa Barbara and Rice after going 3-0 during the fall season. - Shannon Stevens

Men's swim team gears for the stretch

With the Big Ten Championships only three weeks away, the Iowa men's swimming team is gearing up for the final stretch.

And after going strong throughout the year, it's also finally getting a chance to rest.

"We've just got three weeks left and we've started to get some easier workouts and get more speed training," Iowa assistant coach John Davey said.

By easing their workouts, the Hawkeyes are hoping their times will drop.

"We're looking forward to resting, or tapering, because we've been swimming hard throughout the year," junior Jory Blauer said. "We're excited to finally be able to rest and go faster in meets."

Iowa travels to Minnesota for a dual meet with the Golden Gophers Saturday afternoon. Last year, the Hawkeyes beat their neighbor to the north, 145-138.

"Minnesota is very good and this will be a big test in our first meet back," coach Glenn Patton said. "Minnesota is the first of three dual meets within a one week period, and it will begin the final preparation for the Big Ten Championships."

Iowa's first meet was canceled, making this it's first competition since the winter training trip to Iowa coach Jenny Mainz said peting on the east coast in the Boston Invitational.

> Iowa is looking to improve on last week's fourth-place finish at the Missouri Invitational. This weekend's invitational in Ames is not scored, but still is an important event early in the season according to Hawkeye junior Briana Benning.

"We're definitely hoping to improve from last week," Benning said. "Iowa State usually has a solid squad and I know they want to do well against us just like we want to do well against them."

For Benning and her fellow distance runners, this week's invite will seem just like home. Benning set her personal-best time of 2:11.35 in the 800 meters at the 1995 indoor event. Iowa senior Erin Boland won the 3,000-meter race in 1994 and also ran a personal best in the 1,000-meter run. Hawkeye junior Becky Coleman finished second in the 1,000meter race at the 1995 Invitation-

Benning said past success is the main reason why the team wants and needs to do well.

"Since it's so early in the year it's important that we perform well. If history holds true then it should be a productive weekend," Benning said.

Men's tennis team heads to Michigan

The Iowa men's tennis team opens the '96 spring season with the Big Ten Singles meet in East Lansing, Mich. this weekend.

The meet will not be flighted, as each player's draw will be done on a random basis. The meet will not be scored on a team basis.

The Hawkeyes are trying to bounce back from a disappointing injury filled campaign in 1995. Iowa finished 8-14 overall and 1-9 in the Big Ten.

"Injuries just killed us last year," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said. "Right now we're very conscious of being injury free.

No excuse to not jam this weekend

The Daily Iowan

So, you're having a hard time figuring out what to do with your weekend? The snow is too deep to golf, and the prospect of renting yet another video is making your lower lip tremble? Why not get up, and out, and get yourself an earful of live music? Option No. 1:

Dayroom, a band which is getting accolades and support from the locals in their hometown - the peachy musical mecca of Athens, Georgia - is scheduled to make a stop at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St., tonight. This is only one stop in an endless series of tour dates which has, surprisingly, not dulled the band's enthusiasm, either for the music or for live per-

Dayroom formed while attending frenzy. If dancing frenzy is somethe University of Georgia (listen thing you crave, this may be the up, UI bands-on-the-cusp-of-breakshow for you. The show is for ages and this show highlights that commitment. Sal Monella, owner/manager, of B Js for the last 12 years or through). Jimmy Riddle (key-boards), Michael Winger (guitar and vocals), Brad Zimmerman (drums) and Ryan Kelly (bass) practiced between finals and over breaks. After finishing school, it was clear that they were serious about music ... serious enough to throw themselves into a maniacal tour schedule which would take the band from Athens to Colorado to Washington D.C., to New Mexico, and now, voila, to Iowa City.

Perpetual Smile captures the humor of the band, and some of the groove, which is an amalgam of ska and funk, with a little bit of Primus thrown in for good measure. The word on the street is that they can 19 and up.

Option No. 2

Okay, so let's say that you're bored and under 19, and really not a dance-happy freak, but you still want great tunes

I'd say go to B J Records, proudly serving Iowa City for 25 years now.

As part of their 25th Anniversary Celebration, B J Records, 6 1/2 S. Dubuque St., is bringing in some very cool live music, first for an instore performance on Saturday at 5 p.m., and then at the 'Que, 211 Iowa Ave., Saturday evening at 9 for a measly $3. Slated to perform are Bo Ramsey, Moonshine Willie and the Volebeats.

BJs has always been committed get a crowd worked into a dancing champions of alternative music, so, says the store really wants to be the alternative to "cookie cutter, corporate-type music stores. We want to expose our customers to some new music, some lesser known stuff." Monella said that one example of that very stuff, something that he's trying to "ram down people's throats right now" is a band called Whiskeytown out of North Carolina, who are part of the new country twang with the attitude of the punk days.

In an effort to keep putting the "alter" in "alternative," BJs plans to remodel in the coming year, and to continue bringing off-center music, like Demolition Doll Rides, for in-store appearances.

Saturday's shows promise to be

Posters create in-home galleries

Stephanie Wilbur The Daily Iowan

Where does Uma Thurman smoke a cigarette and give you the evil eye, while Kurt Cobain stares at your derriere?

Where are Bob Marley and Garth Brooks neighbors?

Where else on campus can you admire the work of Salvador Dali and learn how to mix a Screaming Banana Banshee?

Simple: the annual poster sale in the Ballroom of the Union.

As dependable as a student loan check and as distracting as a store wide markdown at the GAP, poster sales on every college campus lure students into a 20 x 16 world where Rachel Hunter and Brad Pitt can be bought for $8 each.

The sale, which ends today at 5 o.m., is part of a six week tour of Midwestern campuses, said Barbara Thompson, who works for the Prolific Arts Company and runs the poster bonanza.

tastes in wall decor are as diverse as the thousands of posters on dis-

Thompson said UI students

"[UI students and residents] buy

Where else on campus can you admire the work of Salvador Dali and learn how to mix a Screaming Banana Banshee?

a lot of fine art and some of the rock 'n' roll posters. A variety, definitely covering across the spectrum I'd say.

"There are some universities where we sell more rock 'n' roll, or sometimes if you're in Chicago, you're selling more fine art. But here we're really selling just about everything."

Freshman Jesse Gallagher searched for posters of "Backdraft" and "Platoon," his two favorite movies. He praised the poster sale for great prices.

"It's cheap and easy to deal with cause it's right here."

Cheap is definitely the word. Full poster size prints cost $6 to $9 at the sale; the same prints could cost more than $25 at art stores.

Bargains can be found on other items, too. Poster frames are cheaper at the poster sale than at any other discount store, and smaller 5 x 7 prints and postcards are also sold.

Still, the lure of the sale is its selection. There are posters of Sting, Green Day, kittens, cars, sexy women, sexy men, beers of the world, still lifes of fruit bowls, nudes, babies and nude babies.

Julie Bill/ The Daily Iowan

UI students flipped through the classical art posters in the Union Thursday afternoon. A poster can be referred to as "student fine art," or as an affordable alternative to gallery pieces. The poster sale runs until 5 p.m. today and offers many poster choices, from Van Gogh to Nirvana.

There are even posters of The Bea- wearing jewel-toned suits and tles standing in a Technicolor field sporting shaggy beards.
