Davenport — A parental notification ordinance targeting teens wishing to abort abortions in scheduling to take effect in Davenport, Iowa, has two legal hurdles which will fight its legality with a lawsuit against the City Council of Davenport. The ordinance was defeated Tuesday night by the City Council of Davenport.

The Department of Physics and Astronomy of Iowa State University has been notified that the Galileo mission, which was launched in 1989, will begin its final mission on January 6th. The Galileo spacecraft, named after the Italian astronomer Galileo Galilei, will make a close flyby of Jupiter, the largest planet in our solar system. The mission is expected to last for several hours, and will provide scientists with valuable data about Jupiter and its moons.

The Galileo spacecraft was launched by NASA in 1989 and has been orbiting Jupiter for over 20 years. During its mission, Galileo has made numerous flybys of Jupiter and its moons, providing scientists with a wealth of information about the planet's composition, atmosphere, and magnetic field. The spacecraft is equipped with a suite of scientific instruments that are designed to study the planet's magnetic field, gravity, and atmosphere.

The final mission of Galileo is expected to be a significant event for astronomers and space scientists. It will provide valuable data about Jupiter's inner regions, which are not well understood. The mission will also provide an opportunity to test the spacecraft's ability to function in a harsh, radiation environment.

Scientists are especially interested in the mission because Galileo will make a close flyby of Jupiter's moon Europa, which is believed to have an ocean beneath its icy surface. Researchers hope to learn more about the composition and potential habitability of Europa's ocean.

The Galileo mission is scheduled to end in late January, after which the spacecraft will be destroyed to prevent it from becoming a hazard to future missions. The spacecraft will be destroyed by a controlled re-entry into the Earth's atmosphere.

by March 1, Iowa City residents will have a chance to vote on how much their water bills will increase over the summer. The Iowa City Council met on Tuesday to approve a 20 percent increase in water rates and a 10 percent increase in water rates for those who have a meter installed in their homes. The council also discussed the possibility of a 25 percent increase in water rates, but decided that it would be too expensive for the city to implement.

The increase will be effective April 1 and will remain in effect until the end of September. The council voted unanimously to approve the increase.

Although the Israeli government discarded its ban on African blood in 1966, it continues to show contempt toward blacks. This is illustrated by the recent court case involving two black Israeli students. These students were expelled from Hebrew University in Jerusalem for allegedly segregating others in their dormitory. The students argue that they were only trying to establish a separate dormitory for black students. However, the Israeli government has not officially acknowledged the students' claim.

The issue of racial discrimination is not limited to Israel. In the United States, African-Americans continue to face discrimination in housing, education, and employment. The government has not done enough to address these issues.

In conclusion, the government must take stronger measures to address the issue of racial discrimination. This includes providing equal opportunities for all citizens, regardless of race. The government must also work to promote understanding and respect among different racial groups.

WASHINGTON - Executive salaries of taxpayers. A costly opportunity of the living room for the political correctness of the day. The public is not likely to learn about the salaries paid to those who oversee the government's campaigns, even as it pays for them.

A Social Security System of $600,000, headed by Jack Kemp, spent $400,000,000 between 1989 and 1994. The campaign is responsible for spending $300,000,000 on marketing for the publications. In 1992, $400,000,000 was spent on advertising, including $30,000,000 more on after-tax spending. Forbes said that corrective actions were taken for the improper spending.

Forbes also said that the improper spending was due to the Clinton administration's decision to dispense tax dollars to the Social Security System, which was responsible for $300,000,000 in improper spending.

If Forbes is correct, then the IRS is responsible for $300,000,000 in improper spending. The IRS, which was responsible for $300,000,000 in improper spending, is the only major government entity that spends money.

Indiana’s John Wooden. The Hawkeyes survived an eighth- minute stretch without a field goal. He had scored 13 of the four three-pointers and had 16 points in the first half. "It was an offensive game, the kind of game that he would have loved before the final seconds," said Mujezinovic, a 47-year-old Bosnian who is in his fourth season as a men’s basketball coach.

"I didn’t think we could do that," said Mujezinovic, who added that the team had spent the first half of the season practicing for such a game. "We have a lot of experience, but we need to play well in the first half to have any chance in the second half." The Hawkeyes made 10 of 16 three-pointers in the first half, but only scored 13 in the second half.

"The key to winning is to have a good bench," said Mujezinovic. "We have a lot of depth and can count on our bench to keep us in the game." The Hawkeyes’ bench contributed 16 points in the first half and 15 in the second half.

We were playing pretty well at the end of the first half, we had been the better team and were in the lead. But, unfortunately, the Bulls came back in the second half and we couldn't get back into the game.

The victory improved the Bulls to 30-30 on the season and 8-2 in the Atlantic Division. The Bulls move on to face the 31-23 Orlando Magic on Thursday in Orlando.

Bulls win sweet 16th in champs’ house

CHICAGO - Scottie Pippen scored 20 points and Michael Jordan finished with 18 as the Chicago Bulls pulled out a 91-78 victory over the Houston Rockets in the Eastern Conference semifinals Wednesday night.

Jordan had 20 points and Pippen 16 when the Rockets won the first game of the series in Houston 92-88 on May 7. But the Rockets scored only 14 points in all of the third quarter in Game 2, and Jordan and Pippen scored 19 of Chicago’s 24 points in the period.

The Bulls’ 18-point victory was their largest margin of victory of the series.

Jordan had 20 points and 10 rebounds, and Pippen also had 10 rebounds. The Bulls wore black jerseys to honor the five Islanders who died last weekend in a plane crash.

The victory gave the Bulls a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series and improved their record to 32-5 in the playoffs.

The Bulls never trailed again, among their nine baskets during the first five minutes of the game. They went on a 13-0 run to open the game and took their first lead when Jordan scored a basket.

As impressive as the offense was, it was the defense that kept the win going.

The Rockets made 3-of-10 shots in the first six minutes and were 1-of-13 at one point in the first quarter. Bulls guard John Starks made 1-of-7 FGs but had eight rebounds.

The Bulls’ defense held the Rockets to 32 percent shooting for the game, and Houston committed 21 turnovers.

The Bulls are the first team since the Los Angeles Clippers in 1971 and the Phoenix Suns in 1988 to win four straight conference series.

The Bulls, who won Game 1 92-88 in Houston on May 7, have a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

The victory gave the Bulls a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series and improved their record to 32-5 in the playoffs.

This was the Bulls’ 18th playoff victory, tying the Chicago Bulls’ NBA record 69 victories in 1995-96, and the fifth consecutive victory.
