A theme of Bill Clinton's 1992 campaign was "It's the economy, stupid." And in many ways, the economy will continue to be a campaign issue in 1996.

U.S. Labor Secretary Robert Reich, who will be in Iowa City today for a questionand-answer session with UI students, said the Clinton administration has improved job growth but deserves a second term to jumpstart stagnant wages.

"Our agenda is not finished," Reich said in

The Daily Iowan Everyone seems to want Sue Kriz's 48 monkeys; but not the peo-

whether 24 of the animals should go home with Kriz and the other 24 to the home of Kriz's half-sister in Guthrie Center, or if all of the monekys should head to a protected natural environment.

The monkeys were found Dec. 2 in unsanitary conditions at Kriz's home. Veterinarians at the UI's Oakdale campus are caring for the monkeys until their fate is decided. Judge Larry Conmey said he would need time to review his notes and would submit his decision by Friday.

Peggy Parker, Kriz's half-sister, is petitioning the court to allow her to care for half of Kriz's primates until Kriz can complete needed improvements to her Swisher, Iowa, home. People are concerned about the location of Parker's pet store, which is in an old building near other businesses, Kunkle said. The owner of a clothing store, which shares a wall with Parker's store, is worried the monkeys may get loose in his store. When Jon Crain, senior 200 keeper of a state zoo in Alamgordo, N.M., saw the pictures of the conditions of Kriz's house as they were found on Dec. 2, he said the monkeys would be better off in a sanctuary than the dirty conditions of Berry insisted he didn't steal the batteries; he found them among the junk under the freeway.

On Wednesday, after five days in jail, he was released without bail. Prosecutors recommended him for a program that will allow him to keep the arrest off his record as long as he stays out of trouble.

UI appoints new head of pharmacology department

Gerald Gebhart, professor of pharmacology at the UI College of Medicine, has been appointed head of the department of pharmacology, effective March 1.

"The UI department of pharmacology is one of the top-ranked departments in the country," he said. "I am excited about our potential to maintain a leading role in the field, committed to sharing our enthusiasm about new knowledge with the students we teach, and enthusiastic about the opportunity to be part of a bright future for the department and the college.

Gebhart joined the UI pharmacology faculty as an assistant professor in 1973, after earning his doctorate from the UI in 1971 and completing two years of additional study at the Universite de Montreal.

He was promoted to associate professor in 1977 and full professor in 1981.

Pharmacology is the science that deals with drug actions in the body, including the study of how drugs work, drug therapies, toxicity and development of new chemicals as medications.

Gebhart's focuses his research on nociception, or how the body senses and responds to pain, and how pain can be controlled.

He and his colleagues are pioneers in mapping the body's intrinsic pain-modulation system and in the study of pain originating from internal organs.

His current projects include the study of pain pathways in the spinal cord and brain, mechanisms of visceral pain and chemical transmitters that mediate pain, particularly those that lead to hyperalgesia - when normally nonpainful stimuli produce pain.

Haman, who owns Haman Welding & Repair, 609 Olympic Court, plans to participate in the second Fast Trac session, an 11-week program that begins Feb. 5. Sponsored by the UI Small Business Development Center, the program is designed to help small-business owners learn to develop business, marketing and operating plans.

Kathryn Kurth, associate director of the development center, said the program deals mostly with business management.

"Each week, the owners have homework," Kurth said. "Each assignment is a piece of their business plan, and by the end of the 11 "I have a lack of knowledge in the weeks, it is complete."

Most owners starting a business don't really know what it involves, Kurth said.

They want to do something they enjoy," she said. "But people like artists, for example, know about their product but have to do things they don't have much experience in. This helps them understand part of their business that is important."

Through the second session which will meet once a week and consist of lectures, workshops and guest speakers — Haman is hoping to further refine his business skills and learn to set his profit margins more accurately.

"I can get some ideas on how things work," he said. "I will also be purchasing a computer and will do book work. I hope to gain better ideas of actually operating the business end of things.

Play market without going broke

Ann Haggerty

The Daily Iowan Nearly 100 UI students are investing $1,000,000 in the stock market - with their eyes on a $500 prize.

"Investment Challenger," a three-month program starting today, allows UI students and faculty to trade in the stock market using $1,000,000 of play money, UI finance Professor Doug Foster, who organized the program, said.

The student with the most money at the end of the program will receive $500 in real money, and second through 10th places will also receive monetary prizes. The money was donated by a UI alumn.

"They'll work with data on real exchanges and real companies. The only thing that is not real is the money," Foster said. "It gives students a chance to try out some of the things they learned in class."

Any UI student or faculty member not involved in organizing the program can participate. Participants had to sign up at the Pappajohn Business Administration Building.

UI graduate student Greg Schafer said he will use a different trade strategy during the program than when he trades on his own for real money. He said he will invest in low-price and high-gross stocks to make a lot of money on a short-term basis rather than choosing safer companies that will succeed over a long period of time.

"Patience is usually the most important characteristic of being an investor because you have to think long-term," Schafer said. "For someone like me who is young, this is especially important. I'd like to invest until I

Lugar feels tone of race could sour candidates

Mike Feinsilber Associated Press

SIOUX CITY, Iowa - Sen. Dick Lugar told Iowans on Tuesday they've been exposed to more negative advertising than "anybody ought to have to endure" in this year's presidential race.

The Republican presidential candidate expressed fear that the tone of the GOP primaries could sour Americans toward their next president. Lugar was asked about the negative nature of the television air war while talking to citizens in Hawarden, Iowa, near the Nebraska border, and again in a Sioux City Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

The amount of television advertising in the New Hampshire primary and the Iowa caucuses has ballooned over previous election years, and much of it has been derogatory, Lugar said.

"Given the sheer amount of money involved, it's a diet that nobody ought to have to endure," Lugar

He said the effect is to undercut president.

"I think negative campaigning always discourages candidates, and may discourage the whole process," he said. Lugar said advertising in which one candidate tears down another rather than asserting his own abilities "sows seeds of doubt and disgust so that many voters who were only marginally interested now become totally disenamored and simply say, 'I'll show them. I won't

The problem is, "if you polarize the electorate" to that degree, the new president takes office without the broad base of good will he must have to bring about broad and genuine reforms, Lugar said.

He won nods of approval from audiences who raised the issue of negative advertising.

Although he still shows only single-digit numbers in polls in Iowa and New Hampshire, Lugar refused to be discouraged. He said 55,000 Iowans have been sent a 15minute video tape, and follow-up phone calls reveal that about 60 percent of them watched the tapes and a substantial number said the entire process of selecting a they would be inclined to favorably

Before Buchanan's first-place showing Monday in Alaska's straw poll, the conservative commentator had considered Texas Sen. Phil Gramm as his chief obstacle to a clear shot at the front-runner, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole.

Now it's Forbes, who narrowly trailed Buchanan - 31 percent to 3 percent - in the nonbinding Alaska vote.

"We definitely see Forbes as a formidable candidate," Buchanan ress secretary Greg Mueller said.

Interest-rate cut triggers other banks to follow suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve cut a key interest rate Wednesday, the second such move in two months, amid persistent signs of a weakening economy. The cut was expected to translate quickly into lower borrowing costs for millions of Americans.

In an announcement at the end of a two-day closed meeting, the central bank's Federal Open Market Committee said it was cutting its target for the federal funds rate, the interest that banks charge on overnight loans, from 5.5 percent to 5.25 percent. The latest rate cut followed similar quarter-point reductions in December and last

The cut in the funds rate triggered reductions in commercial banks' prime lending rate, the benchmark rate for many business and consumer loans, such as home equity loans.

Less than an hour after the Federal Reserve announcement, Southwest Bank of St. Louis rolled back its prime rate to 8.25 percent from 8.5 percent. Other banks, including Chase Manhattan in New York, quickly followed suit.

The Federal Reserve also said it was cutting the discount rate from 5.25 percent to 5 percent. The discount rate is what the central bank charges for direct loans to banks and is basically symbolic.

Du Pont may plead insanity

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — John du Pont saw Nazis in his trees, heard the walls talking to him and cut off pieces of his skin to remove the bugs from outer space.

"Doesn't take a rocket scientist or even a psychiatrist to say the guy was crazy," law professor Eddie Ohlbaum said.

But that doesn't mean the mulmillionaire accused of murdering an Olympic wrestling champion is crazy under the law.

Lawyers rarely pursue the insanity defense, and if they do they rarely succeed. Even Jeffrey Dahmer couldn't convince a jury he was insane when he killed and dismembered 15 men and boys.

"An insanity defense in general is an uphill battle," said Dr. Neal Blumberg, a Baltimore psychiatrist who evaluates about 60 criminal defendants a year. "There's a public perception that people are getting away with murder and this is an easy defense to fake."

Du Pont's legal team, which includes Richard Sprague, a leading defense lawyer and former Philadelphia district attorney, has not disclosed whether it will pursue an insanity defense. The heir to the chemical fortune faces a preliminary hearing Feb. 9.

Clinton aide testifies about Whitewater meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) - A senior adviser to President Clinton twice questioned a White House aide about a conversation between Clinton and his Whitewater partner a decade ago, the aide testified Wednesday.

As Senate Whitewater Committee Republicans tried to show that Clinton had knowledge of a sham real estate deal, White House aide Bob Nash testified about a five- to 10-minute conversation in 1986 between Clinton and James McDougal, owner of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan.

Nash said Clinton, who was governor of Arkansas at the time, and McDougal engaged in "pleasantries" in McDougal's office trailer at Castle Grande, a real estate development that failed at a cost to taxpayers of nearly $4 million.

Niresh Eliatamby Associated Press COLOMBO, Sri Lanka - In one of the worst attacks in Sri Lanka's 12-year civil war, a truck packed with explosives rammed into the central bank Wednesday, igniting towering fires in the business and tourist district. At least 53 people died, and 1,400 were wounded.

Authorities blamed the attack and a fireball caused by a rocketpropelled grenade moments earlier, on the Tamil Tiger rebels, whose 12-year armed campaign for an independent homeland has killed nearly 40,000 people. There were no claims of responsibility.

In the chaos after the midday attack, dozens of people were trapped atop burning buildings waving for help. Helicopter gun ships tried to pluck survivors from rooftops but were repelled by the heat. Many were rescued by ladders; those on the streets were taken away in public buses and private cars.

As darkness fell, soldiers armed with assault rifles patrolled the center of Colombo, and a drizzling rain forced rescuers to scale back their hunt through unsteady buildings for bodies and survivors.

Explosion rocks Sri Lanka's capital

The director of the National Hospital's trauma unit, Hector Weerasinghe, told the AP that 53 people died. Another 1,060 injured people were admitted to two hospitals, 100 in critical condition. Scores of people released after treatment raised the estimated number of injured to 1,400.

Most of the dead and wounded were in the Central Bank building, where Sri Lanka's gold reserves are held and the country's financial policy is made. Bank guard Prasanna Wijew-ardhana said a blue truck with three men drove into the security barricade outside the bank. Two men leaped out and started firing automatic weapons. Some guards returned fire, but many of them fled, Wijewardhana said. The attackers "had the advantage of surprise," he said.

During the gunfire, a rocketpropelled grenade landed in front of a nearby office building, gouging a crater and shattering windows at the AP office 100 yards

Police said the driver of the truck died in the explosion. Hours later, they arrested two others seen fleeing with automatic rifles.

LOS ANGELES - During closeddoor deposition sessions, O.J. Simpson denied under oath he ever beat his ex-wife, telling attorneys he was only trying to restrain her from hurting him, sources said Wednes-

Simpson also stuck to the nightgolf alibi presented by his criminal trial defense, testifying he took two full swings with a club in his front yard around the time of the murders, the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, told the AP.

completed next month.

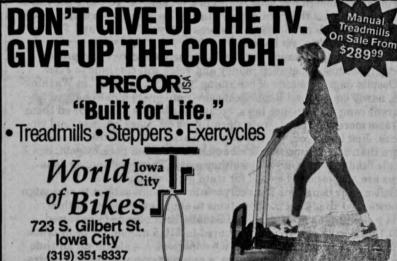

Simpson was acquitted in criminal court in the June 12, 1994, knife slayings outside his ex-wife's Brentwood condominium, but attorneys for Goldman's family and the estate of Nicole Brown Simpson have filed a wrongful death suit against him nevertheless. The civil case is set to go to trial April 2.

Plaintiff attorneys have said they intend to make a major issue of allegations Simpson beat Brown Simpson during an often-rocky relationship. Attorneys have said they intend to argue, as prosecutors did at the criminal trial, that her murder was Simpson's final, ultimate Rather, Simpson portrayed his exwife as the aggressor, sources said.

This description of their relationship mirrors what Simpson wrote in his famed letter to the public the day of the slow-speed Bronco chase. In that note, Simpson said he sometimes felt like a "battered husband." And during his televised interview last week, Simpson played down reports of violence, saying they only had the kinds of disagreements normal in a relationship.

Money baggage

Steve Forbes has been singled out as the big spender in the presidential race, but Republicans as a whole are raising more money than ever.

A recent poll from New Hampshire shows Sen. Bob Dole trailing Steve Forbes among Republican and independent voters likely to vote in New Hampshire's presidential primary on Feb. 20.

Dole's response to the poll results: "It shows that if you've got enough money and you don't get any scrutiny from the media ... I don't know, maybe he owns stock in all those networks and 'Time' and 'Newsweek.' But somehow, they don't seem to bother him. They'd rather focus on Bob Dole, the front-runner ... What else is this fellow except a bag of money?"

It's ironic Dole is complaining about another candidate's finances. By June of last year, Dole had already amassed a bag of money of his own, totaling $14 million. And just last week, he was given valuable and free prime-time national television exposure on all three major networks in order to respond to President Clinton's State of the Union address. Dole's response was stiff and uninspired when compared to Clinton's speech. His poor response to Clinton's address probably has as much to do with his fall in the polls as Forbes' wallet does. Forbes' campaign has Dole frightened because, since 1980, the candidate who raised the most money during the primaries has not failed to win his party's nomination. The presidency is for sale, and Forbes just may be the highest bidder.

Until campaign finance laws are reformed, the direct and proportional relationship between money and votes will continue to exist.

Despite empty rhetoric of reforming "business as usual" in Washington, newly empowered Republicans are unlikely to make changes to current campaign finance laws, because such laws have allowed them to raise more than Democrats since 1994's off-year Congressional victories. Just last week, the Republican National Committee raised more than $19 million in soft money, or money not back by gold, in a single fund raiser, a record for either party. These soft-money donations are supposed to be used for state and local elections.

Soft-money donations from corporations are not subject to campaign finance laws that limit contributions to single candidates. In their first year running the House and Senate, Republicans have raised $20.1 million in soft money, compared to $10.5 million for Democrats.

Political Action Committee (PAC) donations are also at an all-time high, according to Common Cause, a non-partisan watchdog organization that tracks campaign spending.

And don't hold your breath for those feisty and reform-minded Republican freshmen to do anything about PAC contributions. According to Common Cause, the 73 Republican freshmen have raised $4.1 million from PACs, which is higher per member than previous fresh-

When one of those freshmen, Rep. Linda Smith, introduced finance reform in the current House, she was told by Newt Gingrich that American politics needs more money, not less

So while Bob Dole may claim that the "presidency is not for sale," recent history suggests that not only is the presidency for sale, but the House and Senate are as well.

What Bob Dole is really worried about is that he's going to lose at his own game; he can't afford this year's price tag, and Steve Forbes

Cruel and unusual?

■ The death penalty has been called cruel and unusual punishment, but the families of victims suffer undeservedly when criminals receive life sentences.

On Jan. 27, convicted child-molester and murderer John Albert Taylor faced a firing squad in Utah. Taylor stated he preferred to die on his feet rather than "flipping around like a fish out of water."

Taylor wanted to make a point that by killing him by firing squad, the state of Utah would be committing state-sanctioned murder. By killing him in this way, rather than the routine lethal injection, he would cause the state a costly inconvenience.

Anti-death penalty groups have pointed to Taylor's execution as an example of how "cruel and unusual" the death penalty is in this nation. The question that should be asked of these groups: How cruel and unusual of a punishment is it to allow someone who has committed a heinous crime to be kept alive to serve as a reminder to a grieving family? John Taylor was diagnosed as a "remorseless pedophile" and was convicted of murdering an 11-year-old in 1989.

An 11-year-old. A lifetime of agony for a family. It is more barbaric and cruel for a family to live with the knowledge that the murderer of their child will live to see another Christmas, another birthday, another day. Letting a convicted killer such as John Taylor spend the rest of his life in prison is a far greater punishment to the victim's family than to the convict. The usual arguments against the death penalty argue that holding a person waiting for execution costs more than a life sentence. This is because a person who has been sentenced to die files more appeals and court motions than a life-sentence convict. Death-row inmates are held, fed and allowed to exercise in the same way that regular convicts are.

If we wish to make the death penalty work in America, we must do one of two things: either get rid of it totally or streamline the appeals process. The latter is the most sensible way to do this. We must find a way to keep an inmate's right to appeal available while making the system work faster. The number of appeals do not need to be reduced, but the process should move more quickly and fluidly for all parties involved. The frivolous appeals should be weeded out of the system quickly, and those appeals which warrant more investigation should receive the proper treatment they so deserve.

If we do not reform the court system in this way soon, the death penalty will continue to languish and be seen as an unnecessary form of punishment in this nation. This cannot happen. It would be a greater crime to force victims' families to know their loved one's killer

Indigenous people fighting alone

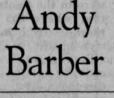

A chief of the Amungme tribe on the island of New Guinea recently addressed the board of directors of Freeport, a U.S. mining company: "Take our land and kill me because I can't stand anymore to see these problems ... Slice the left side of the body and bury each piece from here up to Grasberg Mountain. On your way back, round up all the Amungme people, our pigs and every piece we have, and make a huge hole to bury us with all our belongings. You cover that and then do anything you want.

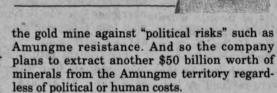

This powerful statement may seem overzealous, but thousands of indigenous people have lost or will lose the land which sustains them if their struggle continues to go unnoticed. The Amungme chief stands against Freeport, which operates the world's largest gold mine on Amungme territory. More than $50 billion worth of resources has been extracted from their land without compensation. The area was opened to foreign investors in the 1980s after Henry Kissinger, one of Freeport's board of directors, negotiated with Indonesian officials.

Freeport security and the Indonesian army have subsequently dislocated thousands of native people, burnt their villages and contaminated water and food supplies. Peaceful corridors of negotiation were exhausted in the 1980s and Amungme activists began sabotaging operations. Several thousand Amungme have since been killed in retaliation by Freeport security and the Indonesian army.

Effects of sabotage and maintaining private security forces would make mining operations exceedingly expensive in the remote jungle mountains - if it were not for the World Bank, which sold insurance to Freeport that protects ment. It was Saro-Wiwa's attempt to make oil Viewpoints Page.

Indigenous people on every continent know this course of events. The abuse of indigenous people and the environmental fitness of their ancestral lands has remarkably escalated in a period when open elections and free markets are known to most people of the world.

Timber, gold and oil - three of the most significant trends affecting indigenous people. In the new era of global capitalism, government policies encourage mining and logging on lands occupied by politically dormant indigenous people. With the help of litigators and concerned groups from mainstream society, indigenous people are sometimes heard. Jim Anaya, UI professor of law, recently spoke about his efforts to gain human and legal rights for indigenous people. Noting that native people around the world suffer the worst economic, health and social conditions of society after being dispossessed of their ancestral lands, Anaya emphasized the need to recognize the rights of indige nous people today. He also said that legal aid is rare or nonexistent in most cases when indigenous people lose control of their lands.

Protecting the rights of indigenous people is difficult when worsening economic conditions fuel the push for development in their resourcerich territories. A wider role for international organizations is therefore needed to equal the balance between indigenous people and the governments and corporations that threaten their

It's hard to consider raising a question over facts, which accumulation has been blurred by general confusion and frequent disinformation. I find myself writing about upcoming changes in student-fee expenditures find myself writing about upcoming changes in student-fee expenditures as much in bafflement as concern. It would be nice to find no cause for the latter. With that in mind, I want to draw the reader's attention to a couple of considerations about The Daily lowan.

Back in July 1974, the UI began an agreement with Student Publications, Incorporated (SPI) — the group that disperses student fees to The DI. According to this agreement, the UI agreed to pay $5 per student per calendar year to the DI ($2 per student for fall and spring, $1 per student in the summer), as well as provide facilities and other material support. According to Paragraph 4:

"In exchange for the facilities, services and money provided for in paragraph 3, SPI agrees to furnish to the university students copies of The Daily Iowan newspaper delivered to residences or appropriate distribution point ... " with provisions for students in more distant residences.

Over the years, this $5 has grown substantially with little or no reference to this contract, or to the distribution which it requires. As a matter of fact, this past calendar year saw an excess of $10 per student per semester. Inflation? Perhaps. At this point I can only ask questions based upon the budget requests of this and the previous fiscal year. Over the years I've heard DI Publisher Bill Casey argue to increase the DI's cut of limited student fees in order to get new computers (to make a better paper), to get raises (to make a better paper) or to do full-color printing in the sports section (to make a better paper).

What makes a paper funded by students for nearly twice the amount (FY '94) of its entire reported circulation budget "better?" The DI was contracted for your fee money only to provide distribution — as a matter of fact Paragraph 3, Subsection C notes that the "university will not advance funds to SPI for operation expenses." So it seems that the extra money beyond circulation costs contributed by students — (about $46,000 — the combined total budget of more than one-third of all stunt cultural and interest groups,) should be serving them better. The feedback from students and student groups which prompt me to write this letter say otherwise. Or maybe it's just that $5,000 publisher's bonus (enough operating budget to start 50 new student groups) that prompts me.

Actually, we've never even seen a DI budget and we can't — not unless some average student requests one through legal channels, like those provided for in the Union with student fees.

Soon the DI is to renegotiate its contract with the UI. Once again, your student fees, and your student paper, will be at issue. Perhaps another local paper more in tune with the UI campus and its people would like to enter the bidding. Then again, maybe there's nothing to worry about and this will all turn out to be just a little misunderstanding.

John Robert Gardner Graduate and Professional student UI Senate Executive Officer

Editor's note:

The student fee for The Daily Iowan (SPI) for fiscal 1995-96 is $4.89 per student per semester and $1 per student for the summer session, which is equivalent to our circulation and trucking costs. As a non-profit 501C3 educational corporation, our audit is available in Room 111 of the Communications Center.

On the sports desk ...

To the Editor:

Snippets from last Friday's DI Sports section:

Wayne Drehs wrote the "Big Ten Conference appears to have the perfect remedy for the struggling attendance at it's women's basketball games ... " Mike Triplett's article on the lowa men's basketball team noted that the Big Ten "shows it's parity with the conference leading team being Penn State ... " David Schwartz suggested that the novelty of the Bud Bowl has worn off, and noted that "even one of it's originators think so."

And Chris Snider wrote that the lowa men's swimming team's scheduled trip to Minnesota last weekend would have been "it's first competition since the winter training trip to Florida."

Uh, guys, perhaps "it's" time to grab your AP "Stylebook" and review the section on correct use of possessives.

A TA's perspective

To the Editor:

I've read the articles in the DI about TAs teaching, and I have noticed a few things missing from the analysis. Hopefully, I can add a little based on my experiences at several universities.

I sympathize with students' concerns about education and the quality of TAs. I have taken two classes taught by essentially worthless TAs (not at the UI). These TAs did nothing to help me understand the material in the classes. Eventually, I chose not to attend class; my time was better spent elsewhere. It's natural to be skeptical about the quality of teaching TAs provide based on experiences like these.

However, I have taken at least 10 college classes with professors who were equally as bad in the classroom (also not at the UI). In addition, I've seen some TAs who are great in the classroom. In my experience, teachers' rank has had little to do with their teaching effectiveness. TAs who are good teachers tend to stay effective teachers. Some have little knowledge and no functional experience for some classes they teach. Others hate the classroom and want to spend as little time there as possible. These teachers condemn their students to term after term of frustration and wasted effort.

Students: Unfortunately, the quality of teachers for a class is sometimes a random draw. You have some power in that you can transfer to sections/classes taught by higher quality teachers. You should worry less about the rank of your teachers and more about how well they teach. Gather and use lots of information from friends and from direct observation. Also, take the SPOT forms seriously. Give your teachers objective and constructive criticism, and praise them when they deserve it.

TAs: The best way to eliminate criticism is to reduce the number of bad teachers. Dedicate yourselves to teaching well. The university provides resources to improve teaching; use them. Unionizing and/or sniping at other university personnel won't lead to better classroom performance (the two bad TAs I had were at a university that was, and still is, unionized). It's time for us to take full responsibility for our teaching performance.

Keyes makes sense

To the Editor:

Thank you for the article on GOP presidential candidate Alan Keyes. I felt it was a fairly well-balanced and informative portrayal of a strong, but largely overlooked, presidential contender. I am more convinced, each time I hear Alan Keyes speak, that the message he brings so desperately needs to be heard in our country today.

I would like, however, to clarify one point that reporter Jay Dee raised in his profile of Keyes; the issue of tax cuts. The article states, "Keyes favors a national sales tax." This statement is true, but Keyes favors a national tax, a "failed experiment" that was imposed on the American people early in this century when the 16th Amendment to the Constitution was ratified.

Keyes' idea is the only tax plan that really makes sense. Americans could be able to save more for their children's college tuition, for example, without worrying that the government is going to cut student loans. Americans could be able to save more for their retirements, without worrying about whether Social Security is going to be around when they got older or not. A family could give more support to a local church or charity, without the government taking its share to practice its brand of "compassion" (i.e., a welfare check generated by a computer in Washington, D.C.)

I support Keyes because his message is true, clear and unwavering. Few people who hear a Keyes' speech go away unmoved or indifferent. Recently, he has spoken to Cedar Rapids' crowds in excess of a thousand people, in November and again in January. Iowa City residents have the opportunity to hear him speak this Friday night at the University Athletic Club on Melrose Avenue at at 7.

Mariners' Griffey becomes highest-paid ever

SEATTLE (AP) - Ken Griffey Jr. became baseball's highest paid player Wednesday, signing a fourear contract extension worth $34 million.

The contract for the Seattle Mariners center fielder has an average annual value of $8.5 million, topping the $7.29 million annual average of the six-year deal Barry Bonds signed with San Francisco in 1992.

The extension starts with the 1997 season, meaning Griffey will be under contract with the Mariners through the 2000 sea-

"I cannot tell you how excited the Mariners organization is to have the best player in baseball under contract through the turn of the century," Mariners president Chuck Armstrong said.

Griffey gets a signing bonus of $2.5 million. In 1997, he will be paid $7.25 million; in 1998, $7.75 million; in 1999, $8.25 million; and in 2000, $8.25 mil-

THE PRICE IS RIGHT

Dollars dominate NCAA meetings

Anyone who thinks money isn't top priority in college sports need look no further than the 1996 NCAA Convention to change their minds. From gambling to Pell Grants agents, the convention made decision after decision with regards to student athletes and money. Concern about increased gambling on college campuses led the convention to adopt a law prohibiting student-athletes from gambling on professional sporting events. Current NCAA rules prohibit studentathletes from gambling on college sports, and the new legislation will begin on Aug. 1.

While this rule has good intentions, don't expect too many athletes to be banned for gambling on the NBA Finals or other sporting events. Catching student-athletes gambling, unless they are part of some elaborate set-up, will be tough, if not impossible. You may think this is going a little far, but at least one person wanted to go further, namely Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delany. Delany would have preferred a ban on all forms of gambling by athletes and athletic department Banning athletes from gambling on college sports is obviously necessary, but making it illegal for them to place a wager on the Super Bowl is a bit excessive. These athletes do have brains and do not need this much sheltering.

Delegates also voted to allow athletes who are eligible for federal Pell Grants to receive those grants, as well as their athletic scholarships.

The days are getting longer, spring is getting closer and the Iowa men's tennis team is getting ready for action.

The Hawkeyes are hoping that last weekend's first scheduled tournament wasn't an omen for the upcoming season. Iowa never made it out of town due to the blizzard and was forced to miss the Big Ten Singles Competition in East Lansing, Mich.

Iowa is scheduled to host Northern Iowa in 1997, most likely the last meeting between the two However, with agents offering schools for many years to come. While this decision may not look like a big deal, it does keep money out of the hands of UNI's program. When Iowa played UNI last season, Hayden Fry commented that Through games with schools like Iowa and Iowa State, UNI is able to gain necessary money and recognition it can't get playing Division I-AA schools. It's better for the state's economy to give money to Northern Iowa's program than New Mexico State's program.

Another rule that will make an immediate impact on colleges across the nation is an increased entrance requirement for athletes.

Beginning Aug. 1, high school recruits will be required to have a 2.5 GPA and a minimum 820 on the SAT or 17 on the ACT. Those with a 2.0 GPA will need a 1,010 on their SAT or a 21.5 on their ACT to Critics have said this could cause as much as a 30 percent decline in qualifying recruits, but it will also cause a 30 percent increase in the quality of student-athletes.

Perhaps it's worth sacrificing a few great athletes for great student-athletes.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. - Chad Austin scored 16 of his 23 points in a dominating first half Wednesday night that helped carry No. 17 Purdue to an 80-59 Big Ten victory over No. 20 Michigan.

The win kept the Boilermakers (16-4, 6-2 Big Ten) within a game of Big Ten leader Penn State.

Michigan (15-6, 4-4) lost its third straight and also saw a 15-game home winning streak end.

No. 12 Wake Forest 66, NC State

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. -Wake Forest squandered a big second-half lead for the second straight game, but Ricky Peral's 3pointer with 3:55 left Wednesday night helped save the 12th-ranked Demon Deacons in a 66-62 victory over North Carolina State. Ohio St. 63, Wisconsin 55

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Rick Yudt scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half and Ohio State overcame an error-filled first half by hitting 14 consecutive free throws in the last 1:35 to beat Wisconsin 63-55 Wednesday night.

The teams combined for 41 turnovers. With eight minutes left, they had totaled 69 points.

No. 9 G'town 91, West Virginia

LANDOVER, Md. - Allen Iverson led four Georgetown players in double figures with 18 points, and the ninth-ranked Hoyas used a 31-10 second-half run to defeat West Virginia 91-67 in a Big East game Wednesday night.

The Mountaineers played tough team defense in the first half and trailed by just five points at the break, but Georgetown (18-3, 8-2 Big East) played even stronger defense in the second half, and the 31-10 run sealed the outcome. No. 15 Texas Tech 78, Oral

Phoenix heats up in Atlanta

Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Phoenix Suns shot 64 percent from the field and routed the Atlanta Hawks 120-84 Wednesday night behind Wesley Person's 22 points.

The Hawks, whose 10-game winning streak ended the previous night at Indiana, suffered their worst loss since a 135-96 defeat to the Los Angeles Lakers nearly three years

Phoenix has won five of its last seven under Cotton Fitzsimmons, who took over Jan. 17 after Paul Westphal was fired.

Reserve Waymon Tisdale scored 19 points for the Suns, while Charles Barkley and Kevin Johnson added 18 apiece. Andrew Lang led the Hawks with 21 points. Cavaliers 81, Bucks 71

CLEVELAND - Terrell Brandon scored 23 points and blocked a career-high five shots as Cleveland handed Milwaukee its fourth straight

The Bucks matched their season low for points and shot just 35 percent from the field. Cleveland has won its last eight meetings with the Bucks. Brandon, at 5-foot-11 the smallest player on either team, had five of the Cavs' 10 blocks. He also had eight rebounds and nine assists, one day after he was named to the All-Star team for the first Glenn Robinson scored 21 points for Milwaukee. Celtics 131, Grizzlies 98

BOSTON - Todd Day scored 24 points as the Boston Celtics rolled to their most lopsided victory of the season.

Vancouver was coached by assistant Rex Hughes, who filled in for Brian Winters. Winters missed the game due to the death of his mother-in-

Bryant Reeves, Byron Scott and Eric Murdock each scored 16 points for the Grizzlies, who lost their third straight points for Boston.

The Celtics used a 9-3 run in the final two minutes to take their biggest lead of the night, 131-96 with 19 seconds left.

After Vancouver's Anthony Avent was ejected for getting two technical fouls in the third quarter, Boston went on a 9-2 spurt. Pervis Ellison capped the run with a layup that gave the Celtics a 78-45 lead with 8:46 left in the quarter. Jazz 98, Trail Blazers 94 PORTLAND, Ore. - John Stockton sank five of six free throws in the final 1:17 as

WORLD SERIES Indians attack the media Ben Walker Associated Press NEW YORK - It wasn't just too much pitching or too much hitting by the Atlanta Braves that threw off the Cleveland Indians in the World Series. It also, was too much media. At a meeting two weeks ago with major league baseball officials, the Indians contended that the crush of reporters disrupted their pregame workouts at the World "We don't want this in any way perceived as an alibi or an excuse for what happened. The bottom line is we got flat-out beat by the Braves," GM Dan O'Dowd said.

Nevertheless, the Indians had off-the-field concerns.

"We didn't play - for whatever reason - as well as we had during the season and we, as an organization, are looking at all aspects at how to improve in the event that we are fortunate to get back there again," he said. "The media issue is only one of several things we are looking at. We just want to make sure we understand the process.'

O'Dowd, executive vice president Dennis Lehman and special assistant Bud Black represented the Indians, who lost the Series in six games. The half-hour session took place during baseball's winter meetings in Los Angeles, and major league officials acknowlthat will be considered in the ot all beers were created equal, as local bars and breweries can attest. Drinking beer isn't just slamming Schlitz: beer aficionados will say it's something like an artistic endeavor. They'll try all kinds of beer, from thick and staunchy imports to the lighter domestic beers.

"I'm not a good one to ask about which beer is the best, because I rarely meet a beer I dislike," Chad Davis, a UI alumnus who considers himself a local beer connoisseur and periodic town drunk, said. "But if I was forced, I'd have to say Schild Brau is my all-time."

Since beer is available in so many styles, with so many tastes and in so many packages, how does an inexperienced drinker pick a beverage when confronted with an array of choices?

Categorizing beer can become a task of zoological proportions. And trying them all can become terribly expensive. Still, experimenting with what beer you like and dislike can be relatively painless.

A simple guide

Schild Brau, an Iowa beer which comes from the Amanas, only 30 miles west of Iowa City, is considered an amber beer - meaning it's the color of a low sunset and goes down very smooth. The aftertaste is slightly sweet. Schild Brau might not be as exotic as other beers, but it's exceptionally

If you're less of a co noisseur, remember this simple phrase: Pilsners are easy to drink. Unlike the obscure Schild Brau, beer brewed in the pilsner style is one of the more popular of the fine beers. The main attraction: They're lighter beers and don't have quite the thrust of oth- ty brews can be found at Fitzer imports, such as Bass Pale Ale or Guiness Stout. But they often leave the drinker wanting more

"Personally, I don't like pilsner," UI senior Robert Howell said after trying a Dinkel Acker Pils, a greenish-gold German beer. "It's like 90 percent water and 10 percent thrust."

"It tastes like half-digested Budweiser," added Davis.

"And it smells like grandpa." Dedicated beer aficionados often characterize their first beer love as a stout beer. Providing more taste than a pilsner, stouts are top-fermented brews. But they go down surprisingly easily, and the aftertaste is even a little

Top-fermentation gives the stout a thick consistency and a dark onyx color that doesn't look quite right to most

"Guiness is a beer that scares people," Davis said. "It's thick and dark and intimidating, and people aren't used to their beers looking so dark."

Samuel Smith's Nut Brown Ale

Brown ales are typically produced in England. They are richer beers than standard domestic beers, with a reddish hue and a near-honey taste.

Dinkel Acker Pilsner

Pilsners are fresh and highly hopped beers with half the body of the other featured beers. Pilsner derives its name from Pilsen, Czechoslovakia.

Guiness Stout Stouts, especially Guiness, are the dark-bearded grandfathers of all beers, with an exceptionally full and often bitter taste.

"Sense and Sensibility," Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St., 337-9151.

This stately Jane Austen romance, written by and starring Emma Thompson and directed by Ang Lee ("The Wedding Banquet"), very well may win the best picture Oscar this year, but I was mostly underwhelmed. It's a solid, if slight, story, and all the elements of the genre are here: beautiful photography, repressed emotion, frail young women who fall ill after running through a rainstorm. But despite solid direction by Lee and a wonderful performance by Thompson, I was left cold. Probably the biggest problem is the casting. Alan Rickman and Hugh Grant are disasters; they both seem to think being repressed calls for them to look constipated all the time. And without strong leading men the climax is ruined.

"Grumpier Old Men," Englert Theatre. "Mister Holland's Opus," Campus

I almost gave in to this astonishingly faces at 101 Becker Communication earnest, epic weepie just on the sheer relentlessness of director Stephen Herek's sentiment machine. Richard Drevfus gives a pretty good performance as a would-be "serious" composer who ends up a highschool music teacher, thus finding his niche in life. Lots of details are good, though the movie doesn't really come close to capturing what high-school bands are like. The last of the many emotional climaxes (which comes after almost 21/2 hours) is pure mush. And that final "symphony!" Good thing Mr. Holland kept his day job.

This sci-fi/horror film is frustratingly close to being a good movie. The script is based on a Philip Dick short story ("Second Version"), so the plot is wonderful, intriguing, complex and creepy. The movie is about a "race" of machines, called "screamers," programmed to attack all life forms. The "screamers" start to reproduce themselves in more advanced forms. Great idea, but director Christian Deguiy blows it. The mind boggles at what a more visually imaginative director like David Cronenberg ("Videodrome") or David Fincher ("Seven") could have done with this material.

"Jumanji," Campus Theatres.

"The Juror," Campus Theatres. Opening this weekend.

"12 Monkeys," Coral IV, Coralville, 354-4229.

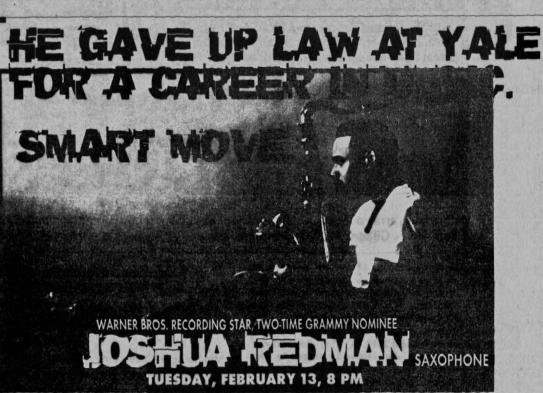

This sci-fi adventure from director Terry Gilliam ("Brazil," "The Fisher King") isn't anywhere near as good as its source material (Chris Marker's amazing 1962 short "La Jetee" - get it at the public library), but after a slow start it turns into an entertaining, even moving, action movie. I don't think Brad Pitt deserves an Oscar nomination, but he's fine here as a crazed animal-rights activist who may have caused an epidempic that wiped out 99 percent of the earth's population. Bruce Willis, however, turns in the best performance of his career by far; he's soulful and funny, like the movie.

"Big Bully," Coral IV.

"Bed of Roses," Coral IV.

More fallout from "When Harry Met Sally." Mary Stuart Masterson does her Meg Ryan-est as a lonely workaholic who gets courted by wonderful guy Christian Slater. This romance isn't terrible, just terribly slight. The obstacle to the relationship isn't very substantial or believable; the two are perfect for each other - you wonder why they didn't just get together at the beginning.

"From Dusk Til Dawn," Coral IV. Opening this weekend.

This weekend, John Lynch will present his surreal interpretation of technology in "teKnowledgey 'I know ... I know ...' " at Space/Place Theater in North Hall. The seeds for Lynch's original performance work were planted when Lynch met Alan Sener as a student in Sener's Improvisational Movement class through the dance department. As an actor with a specific interest in movement for the theater, Lynch tailored his undergraduate course work at the Naropa Institute in Boulder, Colo., and now his graduate work at the UI, to combine the disciplines of theater and dance.

In creating this unique masters degree through the UI Theatre Arts Department, Lynch decided to pursue an Independent Study through the UI Dance Department. Sener agreed to advise the project and throughout the fall semester of 1995, it grew.

The culmination of the project, which has also developed into Lynch's M.F.A. thesis, will be realized Feb. 2 and 3 at 8 p.m. in a multimedia performance in North Hall's Space/Place Theater when Lynch and Sener present "teKnowledgey 'I know ... I know "Everything was arrived at through improvisation," Sener said. "It was created like a patchwork quilt. Sometimes the text came before the movement or the movement came before the music." Sener served as both the advisor for the Independent Study and as a director or "creative consultant" for the work's development. Lynch and Sener brainstormed together and Lynch would take ideas and write text or improvise movement to set the section. Lynch said he developed a great

'Solitude' author reveals demons

Joshua Ferris The Daily Iowan

To read Gabriel Garcia Marquez is something akin to the way one might listen to the wind or the rain through a crack in the Marquez's stories are elemental and historic - dealing with the great throes of love and decay. There is also nostalgia, exile, madness and the organic drunkenness of slaves and royalty.

BOOK REVIEW

Marquez is the Nobel Prizewinning author of "One Hundred Years of Solitude" and "Love in the Time of Cholera," both great stories of sweeping force. His most recent novel, "Of Love and Other Demons," condenses his usual epic mastery into a shorter form, sacrificing a grand saga for a most tender love story.

The setting is typically Marquezian: the colonial era, alive with priests and lepers; marketplaces teeming with rabid dogs; the torpor of entire cities. Marquez recreates a time and place North Americans are usually unaware even existed and does so with such deft and beautiful words to make readers feel like they were born into these cities.

The story involves a soft-spoken priest, Father Cayetano Delaura, who is dedicated to the word and work of God and has become the bishop's protégé. When readers first encounter Delaura, he has dreamed of a girl with a train of red hair undulating behind her.

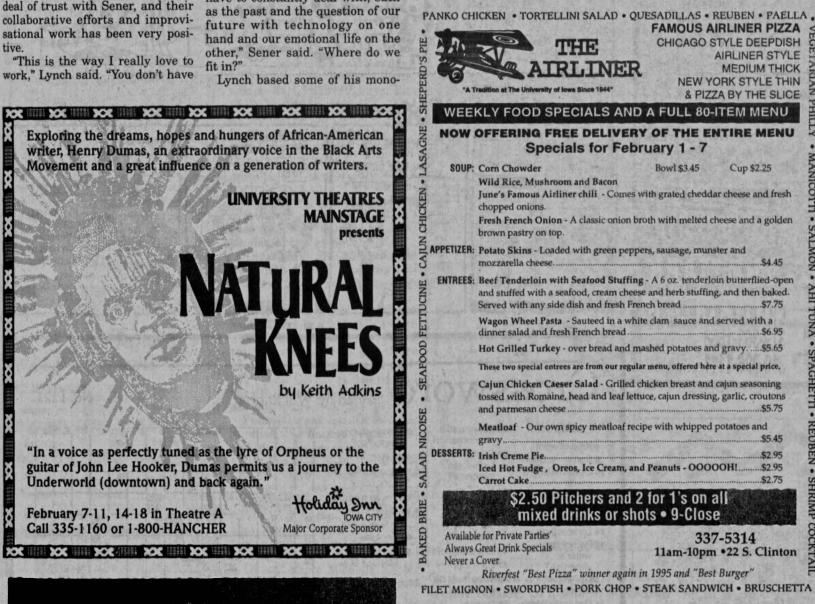

She is Sierva Maria, daughter of a dying family. She runs with the slaves and sleeps in a hammock. She is as beautiful as a red her 12th birthday, she is bit by a rabid dog, and after treatments, immemorial tale.

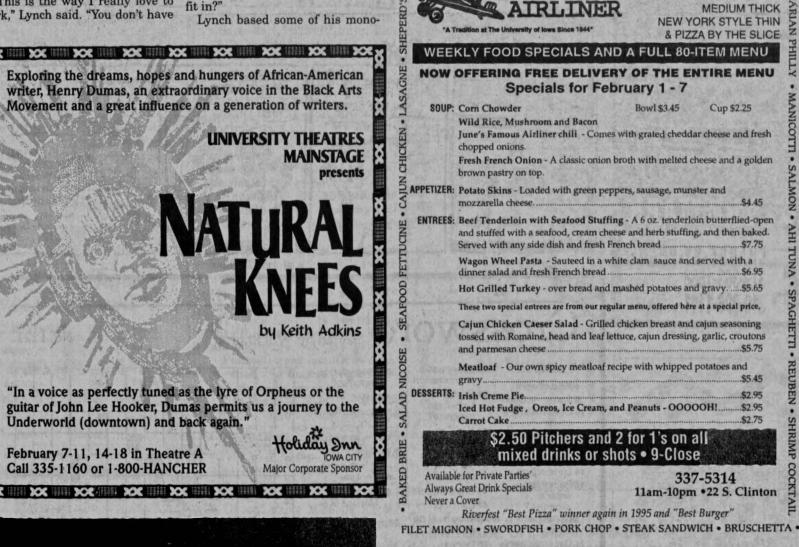

she is assumed to be possessed. The demure Delaura is sent to Sierva Maria to oversee her exorcism, when he discovers she is the girl in his recurring dream. Soon, "the most terrible demon of all" is growing inside of him, rabidly,

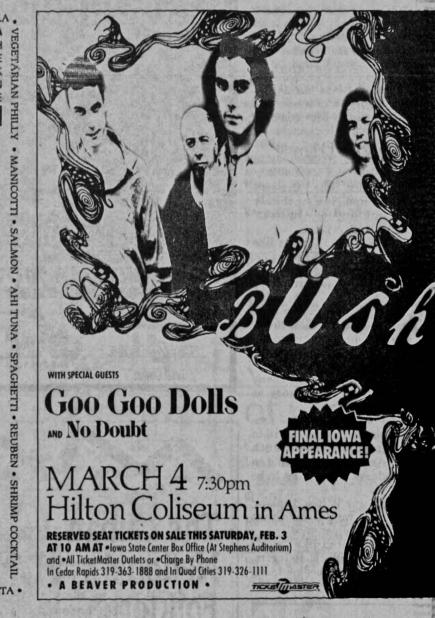

"something immense and irreparable." Love has been sent to him by the Holy Spirit to test his faith. "Of Love" is the rendered tale of love and fate of a young girl and a hapless priest. Love, Marquez knows, is inexplicable and hard, and he treats it unconditionally, almost clinically, but always with the searing passion of his South American sun. Along the way, readers also meet with a heretical doctor of unending knowledge, rumored to have resuscitated a dead man, and an unforgiving bishop dying of asth-

Get a glimpse of Afro-Cuban culture this Friday when one of the world's most prestigious folk-dance companies visits Hancher Auditorium.

The Cuban National Folkloric Dance Ensemble has returned to the United States for the first time after a 15-year absence, reintroducing American audiences to Cuba's carefully preserved traditions that have been virtually unknown to us for more than three decades.

The ensemble has performed on stages throughout the world and is always received with standing ovations. The Parisian press reviewed the performance as a wild festival in which dances remind us of melodies of the plains, of voodoo rites and carnival

There will be a free pre-performance discussion with Rogelio Martínez Furé, company artistic director, for all performance ticket holders at 7 p.m. The audience will also be invited to stay for a post-performance dance featuring eastern Iowa's Latin big band, Orquestra de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maîz.

The dance ensemble will perform works showcasing the richness of Cuba's diverse religious and cultural traditions. The repertoire includes dances dedicated to deities of the Santería religion and more familiar dances such as cha-cha, mambo and rumba.

Thanks to Furé, an acclaimed Cuban folklorist and ethnomusicologist, the company has stayed true to the traditions of the Afro-Cuban culture and the Santería religion. This heritage includes influences from the Caribbean, Europe and Africa.

UI professor Ozzie Diaz-Duque, who will be interpreting for Furé, describes Santería as "an embodied religion, one that is felt with the entire body, that in turn feeds the soul. The rhythmic patterns of Santería drumming are said to cause sympathetic reactions in the human body, ranging from sedation to arousal, depending on the song.

The Cuban National Folkloric Dance Ensemble will perform Friday evening at 8 at Hancher Auditorium. The dance troupe is performing its diverse Afro-Cuban repertoire for the first time in 15 years in the United States.

Guiness is indeed dark. It's a stout that comes from Ireland, where it's often served at room temperature. In America, Guiness is refrigerated and available in pints at most bars, but it's nowhere near as popular as domestic beers.

"If Guiness tastes like a diluted distilled wood bark," Howell said, "it's a very, very good wood."

However reserved the praise of Guiness is, there are some stouts that aren't as smooth as Guiness still probably the most popular of all stouts. Schmaltz's Alt, a

"Drinking Schmaltz's Alt is like drinking a cup of coffee through a mouthful of pennies," Howell said. "It's so thick it almost requires mastication.

Lagers — like Red Stripe from Jamaica - are more similar to pilsners and far lighter than stouts. Both Harp's, from Ireland, and the Chippewa Falls beer Leinenkugels fall under this category, and many people find lagers are as easy as milk to get down.

Lager means "aged" - an expression so overused in regard to beer that it no longer has much meaning. And, like it's name, a lager often leaves something to be desired.

"Drinking lager is like drinking water when you want soda," Grant Rosenberg, a UI senior, said.

Weiss (pronounced like "vice") beers are a little fuller than lagers, providing a more full-bodied taste, and are commonly served with a

"Pre-lemon, the weiss tastes like burnt rubber balls," Howell said, drinking from a Tucher Dunkel Weiss, a German import.

If the weiss, the lager and the pilsner are "smoother, lighter beers," and the stout is "darker and richer," the ale falls inbetween. Ales have more prickle and chaff than the lighter lagers and pils, but the taste is also fuller, placating the need for body the weaker beers leave behind in sweet as Bass or Sam Smith.
