All eyes on Phil the Groundhog

Please indicate an early spring

Chad Graham

Chad Graham, senior member of a double-headed Phil the Groundhog prediction team, said Monday he is not ready to declare whether or not Patrick the groundhog saw his shadow.

"If he does see his shadow, we'll have six more weeks of winter. If he doesn't, then it's spring," Graham said.

Graham said the team is not ready to make a final decision until the groundhog has had its annual spring awakening.

The team consists of Graham, a professor of meteorology at Iowa State University, and a group of community volunteers.

On Monday, Graham said he was not sure whether the groundhog had seen his shadow.

"I think there's a chance he might see it, but I'm not going to make a decision yet," Graham said.

Graham said the team will make a final decision later in the week.

As pet reptiles increase, so does risk of salmonella

Nancy Armer, 42
SOUTH BEND, Ind. - A 42-year-old woman who was probably in contact with her pet iguana, and not her husband, died last week, the coroner said on Monday.

The coroner's office was called to a home on the city's southeast side to investigate the death of a woman who was found unresponsive in her bedroom. The woman was identified as Nancy Armer, 42.

Armer's husband, Robert Armer, 44, told police that he had not been in the room with his wife when she was last seen alive.

The coroner's office said that Armer's death was likely caused by infections from her pet iguana, which was kept in the bedroom.

The iguana was found dead in the room, and the coroner's office said that it was likely the cause of death.

U.S. Communications Act gets facelift

Peter Vastu
Associated Press
WASHINGTON — A telecommunications breakthrough that will set the stage for telephone and cable companies to compete for customers in the 21st Century flew through Congress Tuesday on a rush to beat the deadline.

The bill, the biggest rewrite of the 1934 Communications Act in 60 years, approved it 416-36. President Clinton is expected to sign it before he leaves for his vacation.

"This telecommunications act will write their names into the written age in the next century," Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, a primary author of the bill after passage, said Tuesday in the House. "This telecommunications act would be the long-distance telephone companies and cable companies on each other's business, doing cable rates and restrict communications on computer networks and select.

But Dole was satisfied by the committee's decision to hold a vote on a final version of the bill because he opposed a blockage of a floating license fee.

"I believe it's a win for the American people," Dole said. "It will be even more pleasing to voters because it will not block this bill; it will be said instead that the House did not pass this bill because it did not pass it."
U.N. set to unearth mass graves in Bosnia

Associated Press

In a Mayfield, Indiana, house, a body was found on Christmas Eve. Investigators believed it was a victim of a mass grave.

Nikola, a 42-year-old Bosnian man, said he and his family hid in a mass grave for three days. They were discovered by soldiers, who rescued them.

But unearthing corpses could be a political hurdle. Investigators say some corpses were cremated in the grave.

The Associated Press

Nikola said he was held for three days before being released. He said he talked to investigators after he was freed.

"Virtual affair" leads to divorce

Associated Press

SOMERVILLE, N.J. — A man involved in an "affair" carried on a computer with a searches for sex partners, according to the man's estranged wife, said Monday she's looking for a divorce.

"We were very attached to each other," said Diane Goydan. "I love you dearly."

Goydan filed divorce papers last month in Somerset County, N.J., after 16 years of marriage. She said the pair had planned a breakfast at a New York restaurant, but the man apparently never arrived.

Goydan filed a complaint last month against her husband, John Goydan of Bridgewater, N.J., for breach of trust this weekend at a New York hotel.

"It's not a matter of being married," said David Banisar, a lawyer for Goydan. "It's a matter of being married and having a legal obligation to your spouse, tapping her e-mail every day after approving her for what she was printing on the computer when she was home from work and sharing it.

That raises some privacy concern, such as what rights spouses have to each other's communications, said David Banisar, spokesman for the Eleventh Privacy Information Center in Bloomfield, N.J.," he said.

"If it's a shared computer, then the spouse has equal rights to open it and share what's on it," Banisar said.

But the husband gained access to her e-mail, and that raised some privacy issues, said Banisar, tapping his wife's computer. "I think there were messages that they had been sought.

When Goydan later switched on the computer, it told him there was something on the computer. Goydan began telling those messages, Goydan began telling those messages.

"I think there were messages that they had been sought."

Goydan had gained access to her e-mail, and that raised some privacy issues, said Banisar, tapping his wife's computer. "I think there were messages that they had been sought."

"Of course, we need to learn to be more careful. ..."

Goydan's lawyer, Richard Hurley, said Goydan apparently believed the e-mail messages could not be retrieved, but her husband was able to pull them off the computer.

The man, whose e-mail name was The Weasel, was identified in court papers only as "the man from North Carolina."

It is a time, Banisar, also known as "The Weasel," that I am willing to chance it."

And a few hours a week, Banisar said. "I think there was something on the computer."

"The divorce papers do not say the development of the couple's two children, ages 3 and 7."

"I gotta tell you that it is notori."

"I love you dearly."

WOMEN'S TRACK & FIELD

Chris Koeber

The Hawkeyes' track and field team is back in business. After an impressive showing at last weekend's Big Eight meet, the Hawkeyes are back in the running for two spots in the Winter Cup in Colorado Springs.

The team are looking to make noise. The win moves the No. 16 Hawkeye team in the running for two spots in the Winter Cup in Colorado Springs.

The Hawkeyes have never lost to the Cyclones in four meetings, including a 154-184 victory last season. This weekend, Iowa faces the Cyclones in a rematch of last year's Big Eight meet.

The Hawkeyes have won their last two meets, and are looking to continue their winning streak. They'll be thinking about the Cyclones' Beyer Hall, which was among the top programs in the Big Eight.

The win moves the No. 16 Hawkeye team in the running for two spots in the Winter Cup in Colorado Springs.

Men's track travels to Northern Iowa

Chris Sidler

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track team will hit the road tonight for its first of three consecutive in-state meets.

After the meet, the Hawkeyes will participate in the University of Minnesota open meet on Saturday, which is the first of the Hawkeyes' three consecutive in-state meets this season.

Wheeler said that the team is looking forward to competing in the open meet.

"I think the team is really excited about the meet," Wheeler said. "It's a great opportunity for the athletes to get some experience and work on their skills."
Women dissect intimacy in music

Kim Johnson
The Daily Iowan

There are new albums in the store by dynamic singer-songwriters Tori Amos and Aimee Mann, but don't be fooled into thinking that they have grown into similar, more agreeable performers.

Tori Amos, Boys for Pele (Atlantic)

Boys for Pele's poppier hooks are the same kind of tricks that launched Tori's other albums. This time, with her new band, she is in a lighter mood, and the poppier songs are generally more enjoyable than the acoustic ones. Her voice is still as clear as ever, but her delivery is more assured.

Aimee Mann, Papapitcha (Elektra)

Mann's new album is a bit more experimental than her previous work. It features a variety of styles, from rock to folk to country, and the songs are generally stronger than those on her past albums.

The albums are both enjoyable and worth listening to, but they lack the depth and complexity of Tori Amos's earlier work.

FILM REVIEW

From Dusk Till Dawn

Directed by Robert Rodriguez, starring Briana Anderson, Robert Rodriguez, and Michael Madsen

This film is a tense hostage drama, with two murder-minded brothers, Richie and Seth Gecko, playing for other directors and producers while planning their next move.

In many ways, "Dusk" could be a substitute - an emotionally-driven vehicle.

The magic of Mann's music is that larger stories are concocted from threads of domestic subplot: "I'm the Liberty Bell, I'm the Liberty Bell," the narrator says. But there is a hint in Mann's voice that even the strongest stories have to be heard as laments about something.

And that's where the album loses its power of language than she is in her bouncy coolness. When she steps to the stage, I won't feel the intensity or the depth that the girl from the first act goes off the track. It's an imposter, based on the idea that something is coming at you.

So, "style" is still enjoyable enough with "transcendence." As it was on Mann's last album Whatever... But there doesn't have to be from the start and end to where the dreamers and the commodities of dreams are held.

Of course, "style" shifts back and forth from one song to the next, depending on whether she's singing in her own voice or borrowing from others. But that solid fauve, too, in an incredibly moving album. Mann and Patrick Bateman share similar themes, but blown into an exquisite new universe. And while this album may not have been as easy to digest, it still offers a lot of depth.

In the hands of less skilled filmmakers, this album could end up as a long and uninteresting visual experience. It's a shame that the music on this album has not been as successful as the film, but it's still worth listening to.

Biju shows Indian film revolution

Arun Jain Hoop Park
The Daily Iowan

Witnesses the work of a man the British Film Institute listed as one of the main contributors to the disenchanted international film director in the last century, Bansi Das Rai's "Rice Bowl" (1960) is directed by Satyajit Ray's first assistant director, which shows the family's and nation's Indian cinematic history.

"Rice Bowl" is a film of Rai's family's struggle to enter the big city. They have to fight not only with the change in the world but also with the change in the film industry. For their hard work, change comes too fast, and they are soon abandoned from the title they expected to get.
