O.J. CALLS CNN: In a surprise TV interview Monday, a combative O.J. Simpson submitted to his most extensive public questioning about the murders of his ex-wife and her friend. "I did not commit these crimes," he said in an hour-long call to CNN's program "Burden of Proof." "And it took all of my life savings, virtually, to prove that, and it shouldn't be that way."

President subpoenaed

James Jefferson
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President Clinton was ordered Monday to testify at next month's Whitewater trial for James and Susan McDougal, his partners in a failed northern Arkansas land deal. The White House said it wants the president to testify by videotape rather than in person.

Susan McDougal is accused of receiving a $300,000 loan that David Hale, a former municipal judge who ran a small business investment firm, says Clinton pressured him to make. Clinton, who has not been charged, has denied the accusation.

U.S. District Judge George Howard Jr. issued an order approving the subpoena on behalf of both the McDougals. The judge directed the lawyers to proceed in a way Secret Service agents surveyed Carver-Hawkeye Arena and The Field House Monday in anticipation of a potential visit by President Clinton this weekend.

Delbert Gehrke, facilities manager at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, said agents "walked through" the arena in order to compare the facility with The Field House.

that does not interfere with the president's official duties, perhaps by using videotape or satellite.

"We have received Judge Howard's order and we will review it carefully," David Kendall, Clinton's personal lawyer, said in Washington. "The president's intention is to cooperate in an appropriate fashion."

"We're still planning on it, but right now nothing's final."

Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations

An official announcement from the White House on whether the president will visit was postponed until today. Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations, said Iowa City is expecting the president.

"We're still planning on it, but right now nothing's final," Rhodes said.

Clinton will be making stops in Iowa on Saturday and Sunday.

A White House source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said "we expect that ... discussions with Mrs. McDougal's lawyers will result in the president providing videotaped testimony."

Susan McDougal's lead attorney, Bobby McDaniel, said he wants the president to testify in person because that is "the best way to evaluate the credibility of the witness."

Hale, the government's chief witness, "is going to testify in person and the president should too," McDaniel said.

The McDougals and Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, who had other business dealings with the McDougals, face trial March 4 on conspiracy and fraud charges.

Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr says the three concocted $3 million in loans from federally backed lenders to benefit themselves illegally.

"This is an extraordinary turn of events and underscores once again the need to get all the facts," said Republican Sen. Alfonse D'Amato.

Gramm woos UI students

Cary Jordan
The Daily Iowan

To an ovation of screaming college students and Pearl Jam playing in the background, GOP presidential candidate Phil Gramm was ushered into the Sigma Phi Epsilon house Monday night.

The cheers seemed to get even louder when Iowa wrestling Coach Dan Gable introduced the candidate.

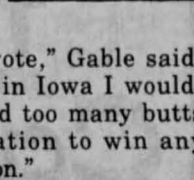

"If I ever entered politics, I would never win a vote," Gable said. "Well, maybe in Iowa I would, but I've kicked too many butts across the nation to win any national election."

Gramm spoke to an overflowing audience about his intent to win the Republican nomination, and what young people can expect from him as president.

In order to appeal more to young voters, the candidate spoke to them in their own environment, which only added to his appeal for many who attended.

"I think coming into students' homes and telling them like it is will have a great effect," said UI sophomore Hans Gullickson, who campaigns for Gramm on campus. "Speaking to them in a setting that's familiar — that's on-

Fourteen members of the UI chapter of Kappa Sigma fraternity got their 15 minutes of fame Monday when CNN filmed them speaking with GOP candidate Bob Dole following his speech in Iowa City.

The fraternity members' meeting with Dole was prompted by Kappa Sigma member Webster Crowley's mother, a CNN Senate correspondent, who relayed the idea to a Dole press secretary.

"He always has time for someone in his fraternity," Crowley said of Dole, a Kappa Sigma member during his days at the University of Kansas.

"It's really nice to meet him in a setting like this and see what kind of guy he is."

Dole spoke to a crowd of 300 at a rally at the University Athletic Club. Fraternity members stood in a semicircle around Dole while he fielded questions from the media after a question-and-answer session with the audience.

"He was a little pressed for time, but we got to meet him and stand behind him while he was interviewed," said Kappa Sigma

Students arrested for drugs in dorm

Five UI students were arrested Sunday when UI Department of Public Safety officers allegedly discovered marijuana in one of the students' rooms in Rienow Residence Hall.

UI freshmen Lonnie R. Stewart, Mark S. Wright, Edwin T. Remley, Timothy W. Fischer and Mark D. Bigler, all of Rienow Residence Hall, were charged with possession of a schedule I controlled substance.

Public Safety officers found "several containers of marijuana and paraphernalia" in Stewart's room "on the table next to Bigler," and in the possession of Wright and Remley. Fischer "admitted one of the containers was his," according to public safety reports. None of the men charged would comment on the pending charges.

Steve Parrott, associate director of University Relations, said the UI could take up a judicial procedure in such a case, and the penalties vary.

"If anyone commits the following acts, including the use or possession of marijuana, charges can be brought about — and a hearing — and (the decision) can be appealed," he said. "The punishment ranges from a warning to expulsion."

A preliminary hearing is slated for Feb. 23 at 2 p.m. at the Johnson County courthouse. Officials from Residence Services were unavailable for comment Monday.

The maximum penalty for marijuana possession is six months in jail and/or a $1,000 fine, and the minimum penalty is a $250 fine.

PROFESSOR WILL RETURN TO UI NEXT YEAR

McCloskey adjusts to womanhood abroad

UI economics and history Professor Deirdre McCloskey is beginning life as a woman in the Netherlands and preparing to undergo male-to-female sex reassignment surgery.

McCloskey, who is taking female hormones and has had some cosmetic surgery, said "everyone takes me for a woman" on the streets of Holland. McCloskey will return to teach at the UI next January after the sex-reassignment surgery.

"No one who doesn't know me thinks to question my gender — Holland has lots of tall women," McCloskey said. "I'm not fooling anyone on campus, but fooling is not the point — acceptance is."

being a woman, everything is new, she said. McCloskey compared becoming a woman to the experience of a college freshman.

"(A college freshman) rushes down to the store and buys a UI sweatshirt first thing, and it's months and months before she stops thinking to herself every three minutes, 'Wow, I'm a college woman now,'" she said.

While in the Netherlands, McCloskey will research and write a book about "bourgeois virtue." She is Timmergen professor of economics, philosophy and history of culture at Erasmus University of Rotterdam. In July, she will be a fellow at the Humanities Centre of the Australian National University in Canberra.

When she returns to the UI, McCloskey doesn't anticipate a negative reaction from UI students.

Schools reap booty from drug busts

PEMBROKE, N.H. (AP) — While Harold Schaefer sits in a federal prison cell, the equipment he used to grow marijuana is being put to good use in public schools.

Fourteen New Hampshire high schools have been given expensive hydroponic growing equipment seized in three drug busts. Instead of cultivating marijuana, the students are growing tomatoes, lettuce and basil.

The idea to recycle the crime equipment came from Raymond Gagnon, a U.S. marshal in Concord who was once a teacher.

"Nobody knew what to do with it," he said. "It's not something we traditionally deal with, like houses, or cars or weapons. We didn't even know the value."

In the past, such equipment usually was destroyed.

Hydroponic growing uses no soil, only water and nutrients. It is often used by marijuana growers because plants mature faster and can be grown year-round.

Gagnon's idea received federal approval last fall. In November, teachers from 14 vocational agriculture programs began picking up the equipment.

About $24,000 worth of gear has been given away, including hydroponic tables, 1,000-watt heating lamps, pumps, generators, timers and nutrients.

"They were like little kids at Christmas," Gagnon said. "It was as if we gave them a million dollars."

Stan Kalishman said he grabbed more than $5,000 worth of equipment for Dover High School.

"It was still tagged 'Evidence,' 'Evidence,' 'Evidence,'" the teacher said. "These people were really into it, and now it's getting proper use."

He plans to combine hydroponic farming with a fish farm, recycling the water. The biology department will also use the equipment for experiments, and the culinary department will cook the results.

Schaefer was convicted of cultivating marijuana and was sentenced Nov. 29 to more than five years in prison.

Some of the equipment he used to grow 1,126 marijuana plants in his New Hampton home went to Pembroke Academy. Matt Baron, a high-school junior, helped set up a system there and said he might make a career in horticulture.

Spotlight on Student Groups

UNIVERSITY DEMOCRATS

"I'm really excited with the interest that students have shown in the group. Students have been really active in campaigns. We have helped with fund-raisers and fund banking. We are really happy with the support we have gotten from the Democratic Party and Clinton/Core. They really helped us out with the Jefferson and Jackson event."

Charlotte Eby, group president

SOMETHING TO WRITE HOME

ABOUT: The UI group was profiled in College Democrats of America. It also took four members to the Iowa Democratic Party annual dinner (Jefferson-Jackson dinner) to meet President Clinton on Oct. 20.

WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU: It is open to anyone who is part of the UI, and encourages students to work on campaigns. The group will have a table at the Student Group Information Fair Feb. 8 from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the Rehder Lounge of Quadrangle Residence Hall with student voter registration and campaign paraphernalia.

THE INS AND OUTS: The University Democrats mobilize support for the Democratic Party, as well as make students politically active.

WHO'S INVOLVED: 60 members. PLAN OF ACTION: The University Democrats would like to encourage students to get involved with the presidential election, especially since it will be the first vote for many students. The group would also like to get the campus interested in student issues, including funding for student loans.

WHERE TO TURN: Their next meeting is on Feb. 14 at 6 p.m. in the Ohio State Room of the Union. They meet regularly every other Wednesday.

GET INVOLVED: Anyone interested in getting involved should contact Charlotte Eby at 353-0074 or attend a meeting.

Local woman contributes $500,000 to UI

Selected UI students will soon receive stipends to work with faculty members on high-level teaching and research projects, thanks to a $500,000 bequest from the estate of UI graduate Evelyn Larkin of Iowa City.

Before her death in 1993, Larkin worked with staff members at the UI Foundation to plan the Abbie Rate Bickett and Evelyn Bickett Larkin Undergraduate Scholar Assistantship (USA) Endowment Fund.

Annual earnings from the fund will support several $2,000 awards for talented UI students, giving them the opportunity to work with faculty on projects critical to the UI's teaching and research goals. The fund will help to expand the number of students who participate in the university's USA program.

Larkin earned her bachelor's degree in education from the UI in 1992. After her marriage to William Hoyt Larkin, also a UI graduate, the two moved away from Iowa City. They returned following his retirement and settled near campus.

The endowment fund also bears the name of Evelyn Larkin's mother, Abbie Rate Bickett, who had always wished to provide financial assistance to university students but never had the means to do so. Larkin's bequest qualified her, her husband and her mother for membership in the President's Club, the university's highest-level honor club for contributors.

Capriati attempts comeback after off-court troubles

PARIS (AP) — Jennifer Capriati, hoping to put her off-the-court problems behind her, will make her first tournament appearance since November 1994 at next week's Paris Open.

Organizers said Monday that Capriati was granted a wild card for the Feb. 13-18 event.

Capriati, 19, left the pro tour and returned to school after losing in the first round of the U.S. Open in 1993. She later dropped out, then was charged with marijuana possession. She was ordered to complete a drug rehab program.

A teen-ager arrested with her claimed Capriati also had been using heroin.

Capriati attempted a comeback at a tournament in Philadelphia more than a year ago. She lost in the first round to Anke Huber and has not played since.

Folk singer Collins set to wed long-time beau

NEW YORK (AP) — Judy Collins is planning a spring wedding to Louis Nelson, designer of the Korean War memorial in Washington.

The 56-year-old singer said they began talking marriage shortly after her son committed suicide in 1992. The couple have been dating for 18 years.

"All of us have losses, and as we get older, we begin to compound the losses with a searing desire to cement or weld together what it is about our lives that is good," Collins said in Monday's New York Times.

Collins met Nelson at an Equal Rights Amendment fund-raiser.

The wedding and reception will take place April 16 at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York.

Legendary tough guy raises money for Chernobyl children

SOUTH BOUND BROOK, N.J. (AP) — "City Slickers" star Jack Palance is helping raise money for victims of the Chernobyl nuclear accident.

Palance, whose parents immigrated from Ukraine, spoke Sunday night at a fund-raising dinner for the Children of Chernobyl Relief Fund, which helps victims of the April 1986 explosion and fire at the nuclear plant in Ukraine.

"Chernobyl was not an accident, it was an act of desecration," Palance told the $100-a-plate gathering.

Chernobyl is the site of the worst-ever commercial nuclear accident. Some five million people were exposed to radiation. Since then, leukemia and other types of cancer have shot up in Ukraine and in neighboring Belarus.

Palance won an Academy Award for his portrayal of a tough-as-nails cowboy in "City Slickers."

Rising country stars plan trip to Bosnia

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rising country singers Lisa Stewart and Mark Collie will perform for U.S. troops in Bosnia and Europe as part of a USO tour this month.

They leave Wednesday on a tour that will take them to Tuzla, Bosnia; Kaposvar, Hungary; and Istres, France. They will return to the United States Feb. 15.

Collie is known for his albums "Tennessee Plates" and "Hardin County Line." Stewart is co-host of "Yesteryear" on cable's Nashville Network.

'Peach Lady' sues Letterman over U.S. Open photos

STAMFORD, Conn. — A tennis fan who became a running gag for David Letterman after she was caught on camera with peach juice running down her chin is suing the comedian for ridiculing her.

The New York City woman was featured repeatedly on "Late Show with David Letterman" in September after a CBS camera caught her relishing a peach at the U.S. Open tennis tournament.

Letterman showed the footage of 54-year-old Jane Bronstein at least a half-dozen times between Sept. 5 and Sept. 20.

Letterman also started a nationwide search for Bronstein, putting her picture on the Sony Jumbotron electronic billboard on Times Square.

In a punch line for his Top 10 List, Letterman referred to her as a "seductive temptress." Bronstein, a large woman, suffers from a thyroid condition and had childhood polio and two spinal fusions, her lawsuit said.

The lawsuit, filed in Stamford Superior Court near Letterman's suburban home, claims Letterman and Worldwide Pants Inc. — the company that produces the show — violated her right to privacy.

The lawsuit cites the New York state civil rights law, which prohibits the use of someone's name or picture for advertising or trade without first obtaining their written consent.

The lawsuit claims Bronstein, a professional bridge player, suffered mental and physical pain and suffering because of the ridicule. It seeks unspecified damages.

NASCAR driver better behind wheel than microphone

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — Sterling Marlin had better keep his day job as a NASCAR driver.

The two-time winner of the Daytona 500 joined country star George Jones on Sunday in a duet of Jones' hit "He Stopped Loving Her Today."

"I've got to say he did a pretty good job," said Larry Lockamy, an organizer of the Third Annual Sterling Marlin Benefit Auction. "But I don't think we have too much to worry about as far as Sterling switching careers."

The auction raised more than $65,000 for several charities in Marlin's hometown near Nashville.

Dole praises Midwest roots

Mike Glover
Associated Press

AMES — Bob Dole said Monday his campaign has "never been off track" despite a jumbled GOP presidential field and predicted a run by publisher Steve Forbes will fade.

Trying to distance himself from the field just a week before Iowa's caucuses, Dole used November electoral math to make his case. He said the Midwest "will be the battleground" with President Clinton.

"It seems to me that with the opportunities we have in the Midwest, a strong Midwestern candidate would certainly be helpful," Dole said in a morning campaign stop at Iowa State University.

While the other candidates focused on each other — and Dole — Dole was making the case that "it's important to focus on the race in November."

Dole is known better than most of his rivals and has a much longer campaign history in Iowa. Aides said focusing on the general election appeals to a substantial group of voters who have not made up their mind.

"It's a nice contrast," spokesperson Nelson Warfield said.

There was fresh evidence Monday that Forbes has gained ground, at least in New Hampshire. A poll released by WMUR-TV in New Hampshire showed Dole and Forbes in a very tight race, where Dole had been a clear leader last month in the same survey.

Kansas Senator Bob Dole greets enthusiastic supporters after a campaign event on the campus of Iowa State University Monday. Dole has the remainder of this week to regain his lead in the polls over millionaire publisher Steve Forbes before next Monday's Iowa Caucus.

While Forbes has grabbed campaign momentum, Dole supporters say they have put together a better campaign organization to deliver activists to caucuses next Monday.

Dole says voters will reject an untested candidate like Forbes.

"I think that's what it boils down to is experience, getting things done," Dole said. "I like to get things done. I think most people in this audience want us to get things done."

At an afternoon stop in Davenport, Dole said government must get out of the education business and teachers must start demanding more of students.

"Very frankly, I think in some cases we've fallen down on the teacher's side of the equation," Dole told a crowd of about 200 people Monday, about 40 percent of whom were students and teachers from around Scott County.

"I have a lot of respect for teachers. But my view is, we've got to do better. We've got people graduating from high school who can't find where Texas is on the map," he said.

"We're failing our children and our grandchildren because we've given up on excellence," he said. "We've got to return to the three R's. It's not going to happen by throwing federal money at it. That's always the answer."

The GOP presidential race has turned contentious in recent weeks as it has tightened. Most of the contenders have sought to outdo each other with sharply conservative rhetoric appealing to party activists who are generally more conservative than Republicans as a whole.

Dole did his best to sound like a general election candidate unconcerned with such things.

"If we want confrontation day after day after day, there are probably other candidates out there who will give it to you every day, and America won't move one inch forward," Dole said.

Texas senator predicts victory in Louisiana

Greg Smith
Associated Press

MUSCATINE — Republican presidential contender Phil Gramm on Monday predicted victory in the Louisiana caucuses and said, with the Iowa caucuses a week away, it was time for conservatives to throw their support his way.

Gramm said today's Louisiana caucuses, with its 21 delegates, have shaped up as a showdown between him and Pat Buchanan.

"I believe I'm going to win in Louisiana," Gramm said Monday before a group of about 20 workers at the Iowans For Tax Relief headquarters. "Pat Buchanan has said and his campaign manager has said if they don't get 10 delegates out of 21, they're going to be disappointed."

"If I only got 11, I would be disappointed. One of us is going to be disappointed."

Gramm said if he captures more than 11 delegates, "that would be victory."

"I would claim it as victory, but it'd be kind of like kissing your sister. I've never had a sister, but I'm told it wasn't very exciting," he said. "I'm hoping to win convincingly."

He portrayed Buchanan as an isolationist, someone who talks the talk but has no idea how to do anything else.

"It is one thing to editorialize or to commentate. It is another thing to lead," Gramm said. "Pat Buchanan's trade policies would turn Texas and Iowa into dust bowls."

A win in Louisiana would give him momentum for the Feb. 12 Iowa caucuses and give voters reason to support him, Gramm said.

"I think the people in Iowa are going to look at the Louisiana caucuses as a sort of semifinal to decide who is the real conservative candidate," Gramm said. "I think if we win convincingly in Louisiana, that process is going to turn into an avalanche." "We're down to the point now where we're going to have to see conservatives unite behind the conservatives who can win. I'm the conservative who can win," he said. "I was conservative before it was cool."

Sen. Phil Gramm speaks to a group of workers at the Iowans for Tax Relief in Muscatine, Iowa, Monday. Gramm told the group that he believed he was going to win in the Louisiana caucuses.

Gramm portrayed publisher Steve Forbes as a big-money spender trying to buy the presidency with a flood of negative advertising.

"Forbes is spending money that no one has spent before," Gramm said. "I don't believe money can buy the presidency, especially not in Iowa. I don't think you can buy that kind of loyalty."

Gramm said voters are tired of the "bitter, negative tone" of the Forbes radio and television ads.

Simpson answers allegations, laments price of innocence

Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — In a surprise TV interview Monday, a combative O.J. Simpson telephoned a panel of lawyers on CNN and submitted to his most extensive public questioning about the murders of his ex-wife and her friend.

"I did not commit these crimes," he said in an hourlong call to the program "Burden of Proof." "And it took all of my life savings, virtually, to prove that, and it shouldn't be that way."

With exasperation in his voice, Simpson denied he degraded or repeatedly abused Nicole Brown Simpson, played down a "Dear John" call from a girlfriend the morning of the murders, expressed suspicions the killings were linked to the drug problems of one of Brown Simpson's friends and suggested police planted evidence.

Simpson also said for the first time that he armed himself two days after the June 12, 1994, murders of Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman for his own protection. He later pointed the gun at himself as he rode in Al "A.C." Cowlings' Bronco the day of the low-speed chase.

"I had a woman killed. I had a guy, Kato Kaelin, at the time telling me about noises at my house. When I left my house Tuesday (June 14) I had the gun with me. ... And at that time I wasn't thinking about suicide or anything," Simpson said.

In the interview, Simpson went from calm to combative, and sometimes joked. He often responded to questions by reciting an 800-number for purchase of his mail-order video.

Many of Simpson's remarks echoed those made in five days of sworn testimony in a deposition for a wrongful-death lawsuit filed against him by the victims' families.

"His lawyers have to be dying a thousand deaths," said Loyola University law professor Laurie Levenson. "Although he seems to do all right, he launches off into topics that could provide information for the other side. Even when he says things that help him, it helps the plaintiffs because it gives them a preview of what he will say at the trial."

Southwestern University Law Professor Robert Pugsley said Simpson's denials of domestic violence may be contradicted by evidence at trial.

"I did not commit these crimes. And it took all of my life savings, virtually, to prove that, and it shouldn't be that way."

O.J. Simpson

"He's digging himself into a specific position, particularly in the domestic violence situation," Pugsley said. "There's too much evidence indicating this was a spousal batterer."

The show had solicited the interview, but producers said they didn't know Simpson was going to call until he actually did.

Simpson was cut off several times for commercial breaks, and each time he returned to answer more questions from lawyer hosts Roger Cossack and Grete Van Susteren, as well as other lawyers in the studio, including a former federal prosecutor.

Simpson has granted one other long interview — with Black Entertainment Television — but at that time refused to discuss the facts of the case.

It was unknown whether Simpson had a lawyer at his side as he spoke. However, he never cut off his remarks to confer with anyone, and his lead attorneys in the wrongful-death lawsuit were involved in a deposition at the time of the interview.

Key details of Simpson's deposition testimony leaked out to the news media last week. During the CNN interview, Simpson repeatedly disputed suggestions his testimony hurt him.

During the interview, he asserted that his ex-wife concocted allegations of domestic abuse to get out of a prenuptial agreement. He said the only time he injured her was in 1989. All the photos of a bruised Brown Simpson were from that fight, he said.

The fight was "my attempt to get her out of my bedroom, which I was totally wrong for. I take full responsibility," he said. "Nicole and I went on with our lives."

Simpson suggested Brown Simpson may have been put up to writing the allegations in her diary by her divorce lawyers and her therapist.

"Nicole has never publicly to any public official, including during our divorce, (said) that O.J. ever beat me at any other time," Simpson said.

Allegations of domestic violence are expected to be a major part of the civil trial, which is set to begin April 2.

Three teens convicted of brutal 1994 assault

PHILADELPHIA — Three young men were convicted Monday in the slaying of a teenager who was beaten on the steps of a school.

Two other teenagers were convicted of conspiring on 16-year-old Eddie Polec, who was murdered in Philadelphia's Fox Chase section, attacked by teen-agers at a high school in 1994. The trial, which is set to begin April 2.

The girl later acknowledged she was never assaulted.

The ferocity of the assault stunned residents of the neighborhoods and exposed the system. Seven 1911-disciplined after that some of them were and didn't send police 40 minutes after the calls.

Parents sobbed after the verdict. Three of the defendants were Nick Pinero, 18; Anthony 18; and Thomas Crisp, third-degree murderer. The first-degree murderer, had sought.

According to witnesses, the defendant wielded the bats that lay on the steps of the Church in Philadelphia from seven skull fractures.

The jury convicted Alexander, 18, of voluntary manslaughter. Witness kicked Polec.

No cameras allowed in courtroom of Philadelphia murder trial

SAN JOSE, Calif. — Cameras will be allowed in courtroom to record a man accused in the slaying of 12-year-old Klaas, a judge ruled.

The ruling from Santa Clara County Superior Court Thomas Hastings can promise from media that there would be the furor surrounding trial of O.J. Simpson.

"The circus-like atmosphere we saw in Los Angeles occur in this particular trial," Edward Davis, representative.

The judge did say consider allowing camera background shots when witnesses were present might also allow the closure of arguments possibly the verdict.

Richard Allen Davis charged with kidnapping during a slumber party 1993, strangling her body beside a highway.

Prosecutors are seeking death penalty.

Illinois court orders obey parents

CHICAGO (AP) — Straight As and swimmers, but Galatea Kaprielian lot like other teen-agers comes to being told.

Not even the threat persuaded the 15-year-old father she says decided family in a bitter divorce.

The threat came from court that in July order year-old girl jailed for visit her father. That girl released a day later part of an appeal determine how far Illinois may go in trying to resolve disputes.

The two cases have attracted attention of family law nationwide.

"Ordering children parents ... is, except in circumstances, no business court," said Benjamin American Civil Liberties Illinois, which filed a court brief in the appeal and is watching the judge. He called the justice in both cases "a threat to the privacy of the family."

80 NATIONAL DEATHS BLAMED ON WEATHER

Record-breaking cold rattles Deep South

Roger Petterson
Associated Press

Arctic cold spread misery in the East and the Deep South on Monday, shattering low-temperature records that had stood for more than a century, imperiling Florida oranges, bursting pipes in New Orleans and freezing fishing boats to their moorings in North Carolina.

Temperatures dropped into the single digits as far south as Huntsville, Ala., at 4 degrees; Chattanooga, Tenn., at 2; and Meridian, Miss., at 8.

Thousands of people still had no electricity to help keep them warm after weekend ice storms snapped power lines. Seven people died at Newton, Miss., in a house fire believed to be caused by a kerosene heater that was fired up because of the electrical failure.

That made a total of 80 deaths blamed on the weather across the nation since the cold wave burst onto the northern Plains last week and dropped temperatures as low as 60 below zero in Tower, Minn.

The Plains and upper Midwest began to warm slightly, but the morning lows in the South rewrote cold-weather records that had been on the books since 1886, including 20 at New Orleans and minus 10 at Lynchburg, Va.

Atlanta posted a non-record low of just 6 degrees. Savannah, on the Georgia shore, shivered at 19. Baton Rouge, La., hit a record 15 degrees; Hollywood, Fla., reached 34, also a record for the date.

Cape Hatteras was North Carolina's warmest spot overnight — and it had a low of 14. One fisherman at Wanchese, N.C., was seen using a crowbar to chip his boat free of the ice that formed along Croatan Sound.

"Ice storms are disastrous for some folks in the North, but here we've never learned culturally how to deal with them because it's only been in our experience about every 10 years," said Orville Cunningham, sociology professor at Mississippi's Jackson State University.

Pipes burst in New Orleans, where houses are mounted on piers to protect them against flooding, a design that exposes the plumbing to the cold. Southerners let water trickle from the tap to keep the pipes from freezing.

Debbie Janssen said she remembered to open all her spigots except for those in a bathroom — where the pipes burst. The real problem was trying to get a plumber.

"They said they had 25 to 30 calls prior to mine and that was at a quarter till eight this morning," Janssen said.

Temperatures fell as low as 23 degrees in Florida's citrus groves. Farmers rushed to spray a protective layer of water and ice, and picked juice oranges imperiled by ice crystals. Even freeze-damaged oranges can be used for juice if they get to the processing plant before they spoil.

Citrus growers said it will be several days before they know how much damage occurred. But they believe temperatures did not stay low long enough to cause serious losses to an industry that brings growers an estimated $821 million and contributes $8 billion to the state economy.

Florida blueberry patches were just flowering when the ice arrived, destroying the blossoms.

"They will probably have a very, very small crop or none at all," said Betty Jones, county extension director for Alachua County.

People who went south expecting a break from the cold were really surprised.

"It's too cold," English tourist Barry Alston said after dipping his toe in the water at Miami Beach, which had a record low of 37. Alston, braving the chill in shorts and a T-shirt, and his wife, Pat, were the only people in sight on the sand.

In the North — where the temperature fell to a record 7 degrees in New York City — the icy temperatures taxed the endurance of office workers who aren't allowed to smoke inside.

"I don't plan on smoking the whole thing. I'm just going to be out here for a second," Charles Coleman said between puffs outside a building in Trenton, N.J.

Power lines broken by the weekend ice storms still kept more than 175,000 customers from switching on electricity Monday in North Carolina, and about 20,000 had no power in Virginia. Nearly 9,000 were in the dark in South Carolina, and about 4,000 lost power in West Virginia because demand was too high.

Among the victims of the weather, two boys, 8 and 11, died at hospitals in Tulsa, Okla. Gerar McClure and Brendon James had been pulled from the Arkansas River after falling through thin ice on Sunday.

Cold, ice and snow delayed funerals in Chattanooga. Families couldn't reach the Lane Funeral Home, graves could not be dug, suppliers were unable to deliver vaults and it was too cold for graveside services.

"We have worked with the families and they have worked with us," said the funeral home's David Cummings. Everyone "has been real understanding."

Three teens convicted for brutal 1994 assault

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Three young men were convicted of murder and a fourth was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter Monday in the slaying of a teenager who was beaten with baseball bats on the steps of his church.

Two other teen-agers were convicted of conspiracy in the attack on 16-year-old Eddie Polec.

Polec, who was from Philadelphia's Fox Chase section, was attacked by teen-agers from a rival high school in 1994 to avenge insults and get even for a reported assault on a girl from their suburban community of Abington.

The girl later acknowledged she was never assaulted.

The ferocity of the attack stunned residents of both neighborhoods and exposed problems with Philadelphia's police dispatch system. Seven 911 operators were disciplined after transcripts showed that some of them grew impatient and didn't send police until about 40 minutes after the first of many calls.

Parents sobbed as the jury convicted three of the defendants — Nick Pintero, 18; Anthony Rienzi, 18; and Thomas Crook, 19 — of third-degree murder, rather than first-degree murder, as prosecutors had sought.

According to witnesses, all three wielded the bats that left Polec lying on the steps of St. Cecilia's Church in Philadelphia, bleeding from seven skull fractures.

The jury convicted Dewan Alexander, 18, of voluntary manslaughter. Witnesses said he kicked Polec.

No cameras allowed in courtroom of Polly Klaas murder trial

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — No cameras will be allowed in the courtroom to record the trial of the man accused in the kidnapping and slaying of 12-year-old Polly Klaas, a judge ruled today.

The ruling from Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Thomas Hastings came despite promises from media attorneys that there would be no repeats of the furor surrounding the murder trial of O.J. Simpson.

"The circus-like atmosphere ... we saw in Los Angeles will not occur in this particular case," said Edward Davis, representing several media interests.

The judge did say he would consider allowing cameras to take background shots when no jurors or witnesses were present, and might also allow them in for portions of closing arguments and possibly the verdict.

Richard Allen Davis, 41, is charged with kidnapping Klaas during a slumber party on Oct. 1, 1993, strangling her and dumping her body beside a highway.

Prosecutors are seeking the death penalty.

Illinois court orders teen to obey parents

CHICAGO (AP) — She gets straight As and swims like a champion, but Galatea Kapsimalis is a lot like other teen-agers when it comes to being told what to do.

Not even the threat of jail has persuaded the 15-year-old to visit the father she says deserted her family in a bitter divorce battle.

The threat came from the same court that in July ordered a 12-year-old girl jailed for refusing to visit her father. That girl was released a day later pending the outcome of an appeal that could determine how far Illinois judges may go in trying to resolve visitation disputes.

The two cases have caught the attention of family law experts nationwide.

"Ordering children to obey their parents ... is, except in rare circumstances, no business of the court," said Benjamin Wolf of the American Civil Liberties Union of Illinois, which filed a friend-of-the-court brief in the appellate case and is watching the Kapsimalis dispute. He called the judges' decisions in both cases "an intrusion of the privacy of the family."

Pope brings peace to war-weary Guatemala

Victor Simpson
Associated Press

GUATEMALA CITY — Pope John Paul II arrived here Monday on his first visit to Central America in 13 years, joyfully welcomed by Guatemalans hopeful his mission may help ease poverty and end a lingering civil war.

"True peace beckons," said the pontiff, who called himself a "pilgrim of hope" for a nation eagerly awaiting the end of a "history of war and violence."

Escorted by two Guatemalan fighter jets, the pontiff's airplane circled the blue skies above Guatemala City and landed at 4:25 p.m. (5:25 p.m. EST) at the international airport.

The pontiff emerged smiling from the green-and-white Alitalia jet after the 13 1/2-hour flight, his white vestments tousled by a blustery wind. He walked slowly to the tarmac where President Alvaro Arzu and his wife, Patricia, were waiting.

A military honor guard stood at stiff attention in red-and-gray uniforms as the pope saluted the crowd of dignitaries and church leaders. An Indian girl in native dress and a boy in blue jeans greeted him. The pope kissed each on the forehead.

Arzu, elected Jan. 7 as the fourth civilian leader since military rule ended in 1985, greeted the pope amid a crush of journalists. The two walked side by side to a platform beneath a blue awning, where the pontiff was greeted by local church leaders and feted by military music, trumpets blowing.

The military band played Guatemala's national anthem and honor guards marched with the Guatemalan and Vatican flags. Hundreds of dignitaries sang along.

In a welcome speech, Arzu said he hoped the pope's visit would

People work on laying down a decorative "carpet" made of colored sawdust in Guatemala City on Monday in preparation for the arrival of Pope John Paul II. "You are Peter..." read the words on the "carpet" which is being laid out by thousands of Guatemalans from the airport to the city's central plaza.

help in spurring an end to the 35-year civil war, the last and longest in Central America.

"May we be inspired by your presence in soon achieving lasting peace," said Arzu. His welcoming speech referred to a people weary of war and fraternal fighting.

Pope John Paul II declared he saw great hope for ending the war that has lasted more than three decades. After his speech, the pope left to take part in a parade across Guatemala City.

Guatemalans laid a giant welcome mat of rose petals and colored wood shavings for miles through the capital to welcome the pontiff, who last visited in March 1983 when the nation was under military dictatorship.

"Welcome, Pilgrim of Peace!" read posters strung on lampposts for miles.

Many hope the pope's presence will help revive sluggish peace talks. Guatemala's leftist rebels announced a cease-fire, the third since November, in honor of the pope's visit.

"The pope's visit is a message of peace. All of us in Guatemala desire peace," said Ana Maria Saenz de Davila, 49, a mother of four who joined hundreds of others decorating the parade route.

Rising at dawn, the volunteers adorned the cathedral gates with palm fronds and strung garlands of red, pink and white flowers on an outdoor altar built for a Mass to be held today.

The mood was festive, despite the fact that at least 4,000 police and security forces were on heightened alert following an attack Sunday on Arzu.

Authorities said Arzu and his wife were riding horses on a rural road when a man tried to ram his pickup truck into the president. He knocked a bodyguard off a horse and struck two security vehicles before troops shot and killed him. A motive for the attack was not given.

"We hope this was nothing more than an isolated incident," Interior Minister Rodolfo Mendoza said. Officials gave no sign of any changes in the papal visit as result of the attack.

Inmates' escape on bedsheet rope foiled by fellow prisoner

Janine Juniga
Associated Press

DALLAS — Three killers had cut through a foot-thick jailhouse wall and were climbing down a rope made from braided bedsheets. Then a fellow inmate — possibly angry about being left behind — slit their rope with a razor blade and they tumbled to the ground.

One convict suffered broken vertebrae and was hospitalized. The others were treated for rope burns or cuts and returned to the Lew Sterrett Justice Center.

"We found the razor blade near where they anchored the bedsheets. It was a clean cut," sheriff's spokesman Jim Ewell said. Inmates are allowed to have the blades to shave.

Investigators speculated that other prisoners were angry about not being included in Sunday's breakout or thought they would be blamed if the escape succeeded.

Investigators questioned inmates and guards Monday for clues to who cut the neatly braided sheets and why. Four other inmates shared the convicts' cell block on the fifth floor.

One prisoner was near the top of the rope, one at the middle and one near the bottom, Ewell said. He said it was a miracle that the two inmates highest on the rope survived.

The injured men, Russell Nichols, Ralph Hernandez and Michael Contreras, were discovered huddling in a courtyard Sunday night by a woman arriving at the jail to post bail for a prisoner. The temperature was in the 20s.

The men were wearing white jail coveralls and were yelling for help.

"One was so injured he couldn't stand up. We think they could have easily frozen to death within minutes if she hadn't seen them," Ewell said.

They were trapped in the courtyard by 15-foot walls topped with razor wire that had been added in the past three months at jails all over Dallas County. It was the first escape attempt since the jail opened in 1983.

All three men had recently been transferred from New Mexico and had made no previous escape attempts.

Nichols, 33, was the most seriously hurt. He and Hernandez, 31, and Contreras, 29, were all serving life sentences for unrelated murders.

Potential jurors interviewed in abortion clinic shootings

Michael Tighe
Associated Press

DEDHAM, Mass. — State troopers, bomb squad technicians and metal detectors greeted potential jurors Monday as John Salvi III went on trial for the shooting deaths of two receptionists at abortion clinics.

Salvi, 23, entered the courthouse wearing leg irons, handcuffs and, as usual, a blue blazer a bit small for him. He showed no emotion in the courtroom and did not acknowledge his father or crying mother, who reached out her hand and softly called her only child's name.

Salvi used previous court appearances to espouse bizarre views, such as his theory of a conspiracy against Catholics. But he has not addressed the abortion issue since his arrest, and it was evident only on signs carried by a couple of protesters outside.

Salvi's attorney asked that his client be allowed to read a statement, but the request was denied. The statement was entered as evidence but not made public.

Salvi is charged with two counts of first-degree murder and five counts of assault with intent to murder. His attorneys do not dispute his involvement in the shootings and plan an insanity defense. Salvi has said he wants the death penalty if convicted, but Massachusetts does not have capital punishment and he faces a maximum penalty of life imprisonment without parole.

The potential jurors spent most of the day filling out questionnaires. Then Superior Court Judge Barbara Dortch-Okara began interviewing them in her chambers to get their views on abortion, mental illness and insanity.

"This will be a very lengthy process for you," Dortch-Okara told a standing-room-only courtroom of 142 possible jurors. Jury selection is expected to go on for several days, and the trial could last six weeks, court officials have said.

The Superior Court, where Sacco and Vanzetti were sentenced to death in 1921, was saturated with security. But only two protesters appeared, with signs saying "Execute Murderers Abortionists & Accessories" and "Salvi Saved Lives."

It's not too late to add a course!
You can enroll any time in University of Iowa Guided Correspondence Study courses. The semester begins any time you choose. You receive individual attention from your course instructor, set your own pace, and take up to nine months to complete each course.
GCS courses can help you stay on track to graduate on time or even early! They can allow you to balance your study and work schedules or allow you extra time to concentrate on your major.
More than 160 courses are available, including many that satisfy University of Iowa General Education Requirements.

Viewpoints

Quotable "If I ever entered politics, I would never win a vote. Well, maybe in Iowa I would, but I've kicked too many butts across the nation to win any national election."

Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable in his introduction of Sen. Phil Gramm at the Sigma Phi Epsilon house Monday.

Temp loyalty

Temp work has become an accepted part of corporate America, but businesses still expect the same loyalty that full-time workers once enjoyed.

Here's an unpleasant thought: What if the world we live in became a corporate-run state where citizens are useful only as working livestock? You can stop thinking about it; I've seen it. We call it Temp World.

A few years ago, in one of my temp positions — one in which I was on the staff of building and grounds maintenance at an educational testing company which will remain nameless — I helped build stalls for the purpose of data entry, or data processing, or something that involved repetitive, mindless labor. The similarity of these "work stations" to veal pens comes too easily to mind.

But temping is one of the unfortunate necessities we face living in a college town. It builds into us a sense of impermanence, of temporary usefulness, and invariably, we're lorded over by control freaks. They continue to expect the same company loyalty from temps that belongs to past generations. In that time, workers could expect reciprocal loyalty from the companies that employed them. This no longer the case, if it ever was.

Sure, there are problems in the changing nature of industry as we move more into a service-based economy. But downsizing is the reactionary response favored by corporations looking more at the bottom line than at creating permanent job opportunities. So the American worker, who has daily concerns other than what the length and beam of their next yacht should be, is forced to adopt the same type of cutthroat, looking-out-for-number-one attitude that dictates U.S. corporations. As a result, the traditional, hierarchical climb up the corporate ladder has been replaced by the horizontal shift from one work situation to a slightly better one.

In Iowa City, the same work ethic plays out on a smaller stage where the stakes aren't nearly as high. We try to get the most out of a job, while trying to put in the least amount of effort. This isn't because any of us has a bad work ethic; we just can't take the ephemeral jobs this town usually offers very seriously. Time controls are more constrictive than constructive since work rhythms vary from job to job (and many of us often have more than one), and none of us can put forth our best effort according to the industrial revolution's construction of work as a 9 to 5 activity. We also react to stifling work situations with cynicism and humor, often combining the two, and often in the spirit of peon solidarity against management. But how else can you expect someone to react when it's obvious the company regards that person as a disposable commodity?

Until things change — which they won't — until economic uncertainty is a thing of the past (good luck), all we have is self-reliance and attitude to help us survive in Temp World. In fact, don't even pretend that the work climate will change in this country. Start to develop your survival strategies now. Hone them to a fine, bitter edge. Be protean and forget about financial security. Corporate America is out to screw you. Make them regret trying.

DI's a deal, former UI student says

To the Editor:
An annual rate of $10.78 for The Daily Iowan? John Robert Gardner in his Feb. 1 letter purports that this is in some way unreasonable, but what can you buy these days for $10.78? Not a decent meal. Not a CD, a textbook or two tickets and popcorn at the movies. Not even 10 copies of the Sunday Washington Post.

I attended the UI for six years, and during that time, nothing did a better job of informing me of the opportunities I had on campus than the DI. On any given day, you can find out more about movies, plays, concerts, special lectures, parties, student groups, cultural and sporting information for so little, not to mention the invaluable experience it gives aspiring journalists. And now, even though I live in Washington, D.C., I can still read the DI each and every day on the World Wide Web. Not bad for $10.78 a year, huh? As far as I'm concerned, it's a smart investment, and one that I was happy to make. Keep up the great work, DI.

Sexism and Pornography aren't related

To the Editor:
I am writing in regard to Stephanie Wilbur's column, "Male strippers don't further feminism," in the Jan. 30 issue of the DI.

Wilbur inspired several thoughts for me.

In my opinion, sexism and pornography really aren't as affiliated as we like to think. Millions of people read or watch pornography and not all of them are sexist. After all, sexism is a prejudicial belief system, while pornography is for sexual arousal. I am sorry if Wilbur is feeling discriminated against, but I refuse to take on the belief that discrimination is due to the fact that there are more men or women willing to take off their clothes for money.

The bottom line is that as women gain more "rights," more of them will let loose. We will see that men are not the only people who enjoy watching others take off their clothes. I know many women who are "wilder" than some men I know; the only difference is that traditionally, it has always been more acceptable for the men to let loose.

As for male-club managers who "use" male strippers to fill their clubs with women, so what? That's business. I am sure there are women owners of clubs who would be willing to do the exact same thing.

The part of Wilbur's article I found the most offensive was the last three paragraphs, which told the story of a woman who was gang-raped in the basement of a male-stripper club in Long Island. What Wilbur is saying is that if this woman had not been in a "male-stripper" club, she would not have been raped. How absurd!

Has Wilbur forgotten about the hundreds of women who are raped every week? Those women who are doing such things as walking home, or going on a date, or even going out to a non-male-stripper bar. If we are to follow Wilbur's assumption, then a woman who is walking home and gets raped made the mistake of walking home because, after all, if she hadn't walked home, she would not have gotten raped.

The bottom line here is that Wilbur has a personal opinion and instead of doing good research in order to see if she could back up that opinion, she stretched a few facts past their limits and into absurdity. I suggest, in the future, Wilbur do more research before showing off her ignorance.

Altruism prevails in the cold

Stephanie Wilbur

"Unfortunately, (anti-government) rhetoric ignores what has historically been most valuable about our skepticism toward government — the emphasis it places on personal responsibility from all citizens," Hillary Rodham Clinton writes in her book, "It Takes a Village."

Ignore for a moment who this message comes from. Forget Whitewater and Travelgate. Disregard the impending election and the political leverage the book has in it.

Concentrate instead on the message. OK. Now a story. Yes, it's another "Winter of '96" story, but stick with me and you may get something out of it.

Saturday night brought record cold temperatures, 40 degrees below zero in Iowa City. I was lucky to be driving that night — my car started right up with only slight bronchial wheezing. No frozen emphysema disease was going to afflict my automobile.

I was driving by the Vine around midnight when I saw a guy walking, his head buried deep within the collar of his coat — trying to save his ears.

I thought to myself, "What an idiot!" Then I remembered a conversation I had a few hours before. My friends and I decided if we were unfortunate enough to have to walk home from somewhere for any reason on a night like Saturday night, we would go against every rule our mothers taught us and readily accept a ride from a stranger.

I thought, wow, what if this guy was me? But I hesitated. What if he was some kind of murderer? I saw the headlines — "Frozen tundra slasher claims third victim" — and my mother telling a reporter as she choked down the grief, "I always told her to be careful but she NEVER LISTENED!"

Then I thought, wow, what if this guy was my mother?

So I slowed, rolled down my window, and said, "Hey, man, do you want a ride?"

I half expected him to look at me like I was some kind of Frozen Tundra Slasher, and say, "No way, you crazy loon!"

I was wrong.

His face warmed up like a chestnut fire. "Thank you, thank you, thank you!" The words came out in sharp staccatos, like icicles breaking. He climbed into my car and curled up into a fetal position, rocking back and forth. This guy was cold.

He only had a few blocks to go, but it would have been another 15 minutes of exposure to the bitterness. We talked about (what else?) the weather, and the fact that he lives quite near to me and once fed my cat a can of tuna. I thanked him for his kindness. Then he thanked me for mine, shook my hand and left my car for the warmth of his apartment.

I pulled out of his parking lot with full intentions of driving home. Instead, I turned onto Clinton Street. Picking up this guy by the Vine had done something weird to me. Letting him get into my car without asking anything in return and having him accept the ride with complete gratitude made me feel, well, wonderful.

So I picked up some more people. I picked up two guys on Burlington Street and drove them a few blocks. They couldn't believe it. I drove some drunk freshmen from the Lindquist Center to Hillcrest Residence Hall, the girl without a hat or gloves. I picked up three guys and when I pulled into their driveway, one of them grabbed my hand, looked me deep in the eyes, and said sincerely, "Thank you. You are an angel." For the first time in weeks, I got chills that felt good.

I picked up a woman and drove her about eight blocks, the Iowa winter equivalent of the girth of Texas. She was hesitant — she might have been thinking about her mother — but she got in anyway. I picked up a guy with no gloves and drove him more than 12 blocks, the Iowa winter equivalent of the girth of Asia. I wondered how long it would have taken him to reach his destination on foot.

That night, I picked up more than 15 people in an hour, drove about 20 blocks. I never felt unsafe. I kept thinking any concealed metal weapon a strange passenger might have would be frozen to their skin anyway.

I can't say I know a whole lot about political philosophy or the many incriminating sheets of paper on Hillary's desk. I do know that if I were walking in Saturday night's weather, I would have accepted a ride in a nanosecond. I know that just because I was fortunate enough to have a running car doesn't make me any better than the people I picked up. I know that it wasn't my "responsibility" to help these people, but I liked it anyway. I know that once you try it, charity loses its stigma and fear, and becomes addictive.

WINNING HEARTS & MINDS IN IOWA

Winter mushing for the dogs

Dave Barry

This is the second part of a two-part series titled "Recreational Winter Sports That You Can Do Sitting Down." Last week, in part one, I discussed snowmobiling, with my key finding being that you should not go snowmobiling with adolescent boys unless your recreational goal is total cardiac arrest. Today, I'll discuss a sport that is more relaxing, as well as far more fragrant: dog-sled riding.

A dog sled is — follow me carefully here — a sled pulled by dogs. And if you think dogs are not strong enough to pull a sled, then you have never walked a dog on a leash when a squirrel ran past. Even a small dog in this situation will generate one of the most powerful forces known to modern science. In some squirrel-infested areas, it is not at all unusual to see a frantically barking dog racing down the street, wearing a leash that is attached to a bouncing arm.

Historians believe the dog sled was invented thousands of years ago when an Alaskan Eskimo attached a pair of crude runners to a frame, hitched this contrivance to a pack of dogs, climbed aboard and wound up in Brazil. This taught the remaining Eskimos that if they were going to build another of these things, it should definitely have brakes. Today, dog sleds are mainly used in races, the most famous one being the Alaskan Iditarod, in which competitors race from Anchorage to Nome, with the winner getting a cash prize of $50,000, which just about covers the winner's ChapStick expenses.

I took a far more modest dog-sled ride, up and down a smallish mountain near Hailey, Idaho, on a sled operated by Sun Valley Sled Dog Adventures. This is small company started by a very nice young guy named Brian Camilli, who plans to win the Iditarod some day, and who bought his first sled dogs five years ago with what was going to be his college tuition. ("My parents still aren't sure how they feel about it," he says.) He now owns 27 dogs, which, as you can imagine, makes it somewhat tricky for him to obtain rental housing.

I was part of a two-sled party, which required 18 dogs. These dogs were RARIN' to go. We passengers climbed into the sleds, and Brian and his partner, Jeremy, stood on the runners behind. The sleds were tied firmly to the front bumper of a truck, but the dogs were pulling so hard that I swear I felt the truck move; I had this vision of us disappearing over the top of the mountain — dogs, followed by sleds, followed by truck, all headed for the Arctic Circle, never to be heard from again.

Quickly, Brian and Jeremy untied the sleds and WHOAAAA we were off, whipping up the trail at a very brisk pace, the dogs insanely happy, Brian and Jeremy shouting traditional dog-team commands (my favorite traditional command, shouted by Brian, was: "BE NICE!").

These guys know their dogs; they watch them carefully and talk to them individually. Every dog runs a little differently and has a different personality. For example, on my sled's team, Sprocket was a good, hard worker, a steady puller with a real nice gait. Brian hardly had to tell him anything, but he had to keep talking to Suzy, who was definitely not pulling her share of the load. She was more waddling than trotting. Brian would shout, "SUZY," and she'd start trotting for a while, but as soon as she thought he wasn't looking, she'd go back to waddling. You could just tell that if Suzy worked for a large corporation, she'd spend most of her day making personal phone calls.

But most of the dogs were off to the races. In fact, the hard part is getting them to stop. Brian told us one of the cardinal rules of this sport is that you never, ever get off and walk behind the sled.

"They'll leave you behind," he said.

We trotted briskly up to the top of the mountain, then Jeremy and Brian turned the sleds around in a maneuver that had all the smooth precision of a prison riot, as the two teams of dogs suddenly decided this would be a good time for all 18 of them to sniff each other's private regions. But they got straightened out, and we roared back down the hill; even Suzy was in overdrive. The sun was shining, the valley was spread out below us, the wind (not to mention the occasional sniff of dog poo) was shipping past our faces. It was a wonderful moment, and I felt as though I never wanted to get off the sled, even if there had been some way to stop it. I'll write when we reach Brazil.

CLINTON-WHITEWATER

chairman of the Senate Whitewater Committee.

Just last month, Hillary Rodham Clinton became the first presidential spouse to be subpoenaed to testify before a federal grand jury.

The first lady appeared before the Whitewater grand jury in Washington to answer questions about billing documents from her former Little Rock law firm that showed up in the White House two years after Whitewater prosecutors first subpoenaed them.

The records from Rose Law Firm showed how much the first lady worked on land transactions on behalf of Madison Guaranty Savings & Loan, which failed in 1989 at a cost to taxpayers of $65 million. Susan McDougal's ex-husband James ran the failed savings and loan.

If Clinton appears in person as Susan McDougal's lawyer wants, she would be subject to cross-examination by Starr, who was appointed to investigate Clinton's land deal and campaign finances. Prosecutors would be allowed to introduce evidence or testimony to challenge the president's veracity.

The appearance would also afford Clinton an opportunity to confront under oath the single most serious allegation made against her — that he pressured Hale to make the improper federally backed loan to Susan McDougal.

Clinton has called the allegations "a bunch of bull" and said he doesn't ever recall talking to Hale about money.

Clinton's testimony would not be without precedent. President Jefferson testified in writing in the trial of Aaron Burr.

In modern times, President Ford testified by videotape in the 1975 trial of Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, who was convicted of trying to assassinate him, and President Carter testified by videotape in the criminal trial of financier Robert Vesco.

Two former presidents, Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan, also have testified in criminal trials — Nixon in person in the Watergate coverup trial and Reagan by videotape in the Iran-Contra trial of John Poindexter.

In asking for the subpoena, Susan McDougal's lawyers also cited a recent federal appeals court decision allowing Paula Corbin Jones' sexual harassment lawsuit against Clinton to proceed. The 8th U.S. District Court of Appeals ruled a president could be sued for his unofficial acts.

Jennifer Horan, a lawyer for Susan McDougal, said the subpoena was still being prepared Monday afternoon. Horan said she would submit the subpoena to the clerk of the court for signing Tuesday. Once the subpoena is signed, the president would be served.

The McDougals and Tucker were named in a 21-count indictment handed up last August, alleging that transactions they made through McDougal's savings and loan and Hale's Capital Management Services were designed to defraud federal regulators.

Four of the counts against the McDougals relate specifically to the $300,000 loan made to Susan McDougal in 1986 by Hale.

McDaniel said Clinton's testimony could contradict Hale's assertions about the loan to Susan McDougal and possibly other assertions Hale might make at the trial.

Last week, in asking for the subpoena, McDaniel said Susan McDougal's "liberty is at stake." On Monday, he praised Howard's decision, calling it "a significant point that the constitutional rights of an individual are of critical importance, even if it involves the president."

Starr's office declined comment, saying it hadn't seen the order.

The McDougals were partners of President and Rodham Clinton in the Whitewater land development from 1979-92.

CLINTON VISIT

though CBS is expected to broadcast the Iowa men's basketball game against Indiana Sunday at 12:05 p.m.

UI College Republicans President Bob Frick said Clinton's visit is probably a result of the increased interest in Republican candidates due to the Iowa caucuses.

"Any time you have an actual figure come to campus, he's going to pick up support," he said. "The thing is how he handles himself and how he handles the media."

Frick said the official announcement may have been delayed because Clinton was subpoenaed Monday to testify in a Whitewater trial next month.

"The media smells blood — they're going in hard and heavy," he said. "In some ways, it hurts the presidency, which I don't like to see."

campus instead of off-campus — is great."

Scott Mills, a campaign staff worker for Gramm, said when a candidate comes directly into a college environment, it should show college students how much he cares about their needs.

"We started doing this in Ames — he made several stops, including a couple of fraternity houses," Mills said. "He has a particular interest in students' needs and what they're going through, and this is an effective way of showing it."

After making continuous positive references to Iowa athletics and relating them to his own campaign, Gramm touched on why young voters should support him.

"I feel very comfortable on college campuses,"

"I feel very comfortable on college campuses. I taught economics for 12 years at Texas A&M, and I'd like you to send me to Washington so I can start teaching them."

GOP presidential candidate Phil Gramm

Gramm said. "I taught economics for 12 years at Texas A&M, and I'd like you to send me to Washington so I can start teaching them."

For UI senior Todd Berger, a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon, the candidate's presence sent this message: If any of the Republicans can relate to the youth of America, it's Gramm.

"We're absolutely thrilled he's here," Berger said. "I would definitely say this says a lot about the facets of Greek life. We are involved in politics; we are concerned."

Dee Stewart, national youth coordinator for the Gramm campaign, said Gramm's experience and ability to realistically reach young voters will make the difference in his campaign.

"He has good interpersonal skills with college students," Stewart said. "He's got two college-age sons — he knows what their problems are and how to go about resolving them."

"We're putting an emphasis on the youth vote," he said. "We've got a message that resonates the youth vote. I think we'll turn out thousands of votes for Gramm on college campuses."

member Josh Allsch. "Some of the guys wore their letters so he would know who we were."

Dole's speech centered around two familiar themes: returning power to the states by slashing the Washington bureaucracy and maintaining a balanced budget.

When asked about the complexity of the U.S. tax system, Dole said he was in favor of minimizing the Internal Revenue Service, and his colleague Jack Kemp was working on such a plan.

Kemp's plan would give Americans the ability to understand tax laws and fill out their own tax forms, Dole said.

Dole also attacked his competitors — especially Steve Forbes — for their failure to develop a farm bill, a priority issue for an agricultural state like Iowa, he said.

UI College Republicans President Bob Frick said Dole knows about leadership and has the qualities necessary to lead the United States into the 20th century.

"I was very impressed," he said. "The crowd was extremely excited. It was good to see him away from the cameras."

"It was all we hoped it would be," she said. "The student organization has been fantastic. The students are very dedicated to this man."

Questions about Dole's health and his ability to handle the rigors of a presidential campaign are unfounded, McDonald said.

a blessed one, in marriage, childhood and career."

McCloskey and former wife Joanne McCloskey, a UI professor of nursing, were divorced last fall. Deirdre McCloskey said she hopes to repair her friendship with Joanne McCloskey.

As a child, McCloskey said she was quiet and studious, but not lonely. A stutter, which plagued her throughout her life, has diminished since she began living as a woman.

"But I know many people with much worse childhoods, or lives, for that matter," she said. "I've had who I was in November," Deirdre McCloskey said. "But it's been hard for her to adjust. I hope we can mend a friendship of one-third of a century. We have a lot in common still — in some ways now, more."

McCloskey said she looks forward to forming female friendships and has already felt her bonds with other women strengthening.

Buchanan seeks victory in 'forbidden caucuses'

John King
Associated Press

WINNFIELD, La. — Bidding for an upset in Louisiana's "forbidden caucuses," Pat Buchanan labeled Texas Sen. Phil Gramm a supporter of higher taxes and racial quotas, Monday, as he tried to drum up interest in the first official voting of the 1996 presidential race.

Twenty-one delegates are at stake today in caucuses to be conducted at just 42 sites across the state, a process designed by Louisiana GOP officials who support Gramm. That made Gramm the heavy favorite, with most other GOP hopefuls boycotting the event in deference to Iowa's traditional role as host of the lead off caucuses.

Without the participation of Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, publishing heir Steve Forbes and others, Louisiana GOP officials lost their hope of staging the first major nomination fight. Still, the event — dubbed the "forbidden caucuses" by Buchanan — is not without consequences.

Whoever wins here will have the early, if perhaps fleeting, lead in a race for the nearly 1,000 delegates needed to win the GOP nomination.

There are giant stakes for Gramm in what has boiled down to a duel with Buchanan for conservative bragging rights. Anti-abortion candidate Alan Keyes is also competing here, although he did not file complete delegate slates or come anywhere close to matching spending by Gramm and Buchanan.

A year ago, Gramm won a straw poll of Louisiana GOP activists and suggested it proved he was the candidate most in touch with the party's grass roots. But he has stumbled since, lagging well behind in early polling despite heavy spending.

Still, his campaign has billed Louisiana as a major springboard to Iowa and New Hampshire. As recently as a month ago, Gramm was predicting he would win all or most of the 21 delegates to be decided today.

Buchanan's aggressive challenge has the Gramm camp trying to lower expectations.

Gramm, campaigning in Iowa, said that if he captures more than 11 delegates, "that would be victory."

Buchanan's determined effort here is anchored on courting social conservatives with his opposition to abortion, illegal immigration and affirmative action. He also has appealed to anxious timber and textile workers by vowing to "put an end to these unfair trade deals that have sold out American workers."

And, in what amounts to a one-on-one contest with Gramm, Buchanan has revived the pugnacious style of his 1992 primary challenge to then-President Bush.

A Buchanan television ad here cites five Gramm votes to raise taxes, part of an effort to call the Texan's conservative credentials into question. Buchanan spent Monday campaigning across the state, conducting radio interviews from his car phone along the way.

Gramm has surrogates at work for him in the state and is returning to be on hand for the results tonight. Speaking from Iowa, he dismissed Buchanan as an isolationist whose policies "would turn Texas and Iowa into dust bowls."

Taking sharp aim at Gramm, Buchanan noted the Texas senator's votes for two "strong pro-abortion" justices nominated to the Supreme Court by President Clinton. He also pilloried Gramm for supporting 1991 civil rights legislation that Buchanan labeled "a quota bill."

Buchanan said he would appoint anti-abortion judges and vowed to reverse affirmative action. On the latter point, Buchanan basked in the endorsement of newly elected Gov. Mike Foster, who made opposition to affirmative action a central campaign theme.

Gramm, for his part, says abortion should be legal only when a woman's life is in danger, and has promised to repeal all quotas, set-asides and hiring preferences in the executive branch if elected.

As he campaigned, Buchanan found ignorance about the caucuses as much an obstacle as Gramm's deep support among the party establishment.

At a convenience store in Jonesboro, for example, phone company worker Stanley Parker stopped Buchanan to make a $5 contribution. When Buchanan asked for his support today, Parker said he didn't think he could vote, sending Buchanan scurrying to his van for information on local polling places.

Estimates on turnout range from 12,000 to perhaps 40,000, a major reason for the uncertainty. Voters aren't casting ballots for the candidates, but voting for delegates pledged to the White House contenders. Nine more Louisiana delegates will be awarded based on results of the state's March presidential primary.

BOTH CANDIDATES' SUPPORT WEAK

Dole leads Forbes in latest poll

Mike Mokrzycki
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A national poll found Bob Dole solidly leading Steve Forbes, but both candidates with soft support in the Republican presidential contest. Dole also was seen as much stronger than Forbes against President Clinton in the fall.

In two separate polls, Dole and Forbes were tied in New Hampshire with about one-sixth of likely voters still undecided in the Feb. 20 leadoff primary.

Nationwide, a Time-CNN poll released Sunday found Dole with support from 47 percent of 1,117 Republican and GOP-leaning voters, compared with 45 percent in a similar poll in November. Forbes jumped from 4 percent in November to 17 percent in the new poll.

Thirteen percent were undecided, down from 23 percent in November. Texas Sen. Phil Gramm got support from 9 percent, commentator Pat Buchanan 6 percent and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander 3 percent.

Thirty-six percent of Forbes supporters and 31 percent of Dole backers said they "could easily support someone else" as the campaign goes on. The first GOP delegates will be chosen today in Louisiana caucuses.

The telephone poll, conducted Jan. 27-30 by Yankelovich Partners, has an error margin of plus or minus 3 percentage points for the overall sample. The respondents were picked from a fixed sample of nearly 5,000 voters whom Time and CNN will track throughout 1996.

Among Forbes's current supporters, 35 percent said they had supported Dole in November and 17 percent had been undecided then. Forbes backers also included 22 percent who said they voted for Ross Perot in the 1992 presidential election and 15 percent for Bill Clinton.

Among the overall sample, only 32 percent said they think Forbes can beat Clinton in the fall; 60 percent said Dole can beat Clinton.

In New Hampshire, a poll of 447 likely GOP primary voters found 26 percent supporting Forbes and 22 percent backing Dole — a statistical tie, considering the error margin of plus or minus 5 percent.

ACTIVE SPOUSE CAN SOLIDIFY SUPPORT

GOP candidates call on wives to help campaign

Paul Tolme
Associated Press

NEWPORT, N.H. — Married to the mob of GOP presidential hopefuls, a full-slate of first ladies-in-waiting is braving blizzards, bowling alleys and campaign casseroles in a parallel race for the White House.

Elizabeth Dole spreads the word of Bob wherever she can. At the Newport Opera House, she says her husband wants to clean up Hollywood, shrink the federal government, get America back on track. This after a 12-hour day traveling New Hampshire and wending her way through a buffet line for a bit of ham, cole slaw and something-or-other au gratin.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm's wife, Wendy, promises a Tuscon, Ariz., university crowd she wouldn't be an activist like Hillary Rodham Clinton.

"I've told Phil, don't get this job and expect me to do it. Been there, done that, and I don't want to do it again," she said, noting she once served President Reagan as chairperson of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Indiana Sen. Dick Lugar's wife, Char, holds rallies at New Hampshire bowling alleys, promising to "discuss her husband's candidacy with anyone brave enough to challenge her bowling skills."

Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander's wife, Honey, is featured in one of his recent ads: "I think that Lamar is very optimistic and I think that he brings that optimism to the campaign. He's so deeply rooted in the mountains of east Tennessee, you could never uproot him at all."

At the Louisiana GOP convention last weekend, commentator Pat Buchanan introduced his wife, Shelley, as his "nomination for first lady."

Not too long ago, Elizabeth Dole, a honey-voiced Southerner, apologized to Iowa supporters for "accepting the pinch-hitter" because her husband, the Senate majority leader, was stuck in Washington on business.

No one minded. As Dole himself explained, "Somebody wrote me a note and said, 'Send her to Iowa and you stay home.'"

Campaigns regularly employ the spouses to spread the gospel, dine with voters and speak at dinners across New Hampshire, Iowa and elsewhere in the lower 48 states and even Alaska and Hawaii this election year.

Steve Forbes' wife, Sabina, is the only candidate's wife who hasn't hit the campaign trail, but the publisher hints that may change soon, saying "she will be obviously helping out."

Wives make good sidekicks and come in handy for publicity stunts, too. There was Wendy Gramm's failed effort to Rollerblade across Maryland last summer — the heat melted her resolve. And her anti-gun control husband is fond of reminding audiences about the pistol shooting trophy sitting proudly on his mantle (pause for effect), "with Wendy's name on it."

The candidates' wives often go it alone, especially Elizabeth Dole, who has the most political and professional experience.

The Doles got stuck apart on their 20th wedding anniversary when a blizzard prevented Dole from joining his wife to campaign in Iowa. The two surprised one another with take-out food, called in from afar.

Whether a spouse can win votes is anybody's guess, but campaign aides say an active wife can solidify support in a way that no endorsement by a senator, governor or other stand-in can.

Elizabeth Dole (shown above) greets young supporters while campaigning in Spencer, Iowa Sunday. Dole was campaigning on behalf of her husband, Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole.

"It's one way when your candidate isn't here to keep the message going," said Pat Griffin, an Alexander consultant. "In our case, we don't have a hundred surrogates. We don't have a congressman or a senator."

A wife also gives voters a sense of the candidate's character. "They want to know about our four children, they want a little more intimate view of him, and that helps with their judgments about him," Honey Alexander said.

Jim Courtovich, Gramm's New Hampshire campaign manager, said, "People have always had an interest in who the next first lady will be."

Iowa receives 15 verbal commitments for '96

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

A total of 15 athletes, including two junior college transfers, have verbally committed and are expected to sign letters of intent to play football at Iowa when the week-long national signing period begins Wednesday.

The athletes hail from seven different states, six of the recruits are from Iowa, three from Missouri, two from Texas and one each from New Jersey, Illinois, New Mexico and Utah.

"Overall, we ended up getting a solid group of kids that are going to benefit our program," Iowa assistant coach and recruiting coordinator Gene Jones said.

Iowa lost a total of eight starters, four on defense and four on offense, from last season's team that finished 8-4 and ended the season beating Washington, 38-20, in the Sun Bowl.

Those lost were offensive linemen Matt Purdy, Casey Wiegmann and Aaron Kooiker, tight end Scott Slutzker, defensive back Chris Jackson, defensive end Eric Hilgenberg, noseguard Lloyd Bick-ham and linebacker Bobby Diaco.

"We needed some defensive linemen, some offensive linemen and some defensive ends," Jones said. "We really concentrated on those areas."

That concentration led to verbal commitments from three offensive linemen, two defensive linemen and one defensive end.

Most likely to make an immediate contribution from that group will be 6-foot-4, 320-pound offensive lineman Keith Rigtrug from Caseville, Utah, and 6-3, 265-pound defensive lineman Nick Thummel from Clarinda, Iowa.

Kingsbury flounders as Iowa struggles

David Schwartz
The Daily Iowan

Trying to figure out what's wrong with Chris Kingsbury is as puzzling as trying to figure out what's wrong with the Hawkeyes.

The troubles of the Iowa junior dominated Iowa coach Tom Davis' press conference Monday and shed little light on why Kingsbury, who has chosen not to talk to the press, has struggled through what was initially a promising season.

"He's showing some signs of progress, yet he's not where I want him to be by any stretch of the imagination."

Tom Davis, Iowa coach on Chris Kingsbury

Preseason magazines focused their positive attention on Kingsbury by placing him on their covers. Then came the charge of public intoxication on the eve of Iowa's first exhibition game and with it, a barrage of negative publicity directed toward the Hawkeyes' rising star.

"I think anything that happens bothers me," Davis said. "I think that's part of your thrust (as a coach) is to do a good job counseling, working — do whatever you can to help individuals both on or off the court."

"And if it's academics or if it's social things or personal problems, absolutely, it's part of the job."

After Kingsbury hit just six-of-19 shots (two-for-13 from three-point range) during Saturday's overtime loss to Penn State, Davis was surprised at the extent of his

Hawkeye bench must pick up pace

The Iowa men's basketball team may have more talent in its starting five than any other team in the league, but the Hawkeyes need to be firing on all cylinders if they expect to win.

Because one look at the bench shows that they have no back-up plan.

Mon'ter Glasper and Ryan Bowen are extraordinary role players. Both are pesky defenders and hard workers. And despite limited minutes, Bowen leads the team in blocks, while Glasper and Bowen, respectively, are second and third on the team in steals.

When Greg Helmers enters to rebound, he does a good job. He had three boards in five minutes Saturday in the first half.

But who picks up the slack when Russ Millard is struggling inside? Who picks up the slack when Chris Kingsbury misses 11-of-13 three-pointers?

A bench full of role players only works when the whole team is clicking. If Millard is having a solid game and needs to sit for 10 minutes, Helmers and J.R. Koch can substitute admirably. Glasper and Bowen can give a breather to any position player without the Hawkeyes' suffering defensively.

But none of the Hawkeye reserves can change the tide of a game.

Bulls players reflect on Denver loss

Aaron J. Lopez

DENVER — The Chicago Bulls — with the exception of Dennis Rodman — were gracious in defeat after an astounding comeback that nearly extended their team-record 18-game winning streak.

Instead of thinking about what could have been, the Bulls (41-4) talked about what's still to come.

"One day we knew we would lose, and it happened today," Michael Jordan said after Chicago erased a 31-point first-half deficit before losing 105-99 to Denver on Sunday. "We'll get back on track."

Rodman wasn't as diplomatic. After going through his usual unusual antics — he sparred with Denver players and lounged on the scorer's table after a flagrant foul call in the first half — Rodman did not concede anything to the Nuggets.

"I expected us to lose sometime, but I feel bad because we played bad," Rodman said. "That team is not that good. I'm not going to give that team any credit at all."

Freshmen put No. 6 'Nova over the top

PHILADELPHIA — Villanova coach Steve Lappas said his two freshmen were the difference in the sixth-ranked Wildcats' 79-66 victory Monday night over No. 8 Georgetown and its super sophomore, Allen Iverson.

He was referring to John Celestand, who finished with 19 points, and Howard Brown, who held the explosive Iverson to five points in the second half.

"These freshmen — both of them — just did an outstanding job tonight. It makes me feel good about our team now, obviously, and for our team down the road," Lappas said.

Celestand, whose previous best was 14 points, has been a spark off the bench for Villanova all season. Brown started in place of injured forward Eric Eberz, the Wildcat's No. 2 scorer.

"We just wanted to play mistake-free ball, take open baskets and play poised. I think we did that," Celestand said.

Villanova (19-3, 10-2 Big East) won its sixth consecutive game while Georgetown (19-4, 9-3) had a two-game winning streak snapped. "John just stepped up and did what he had to do," Lappas said. "And Howard, if you get him fired up enough, you could probably get him to eat that television set over in the corner there."

The Hoyas, who were led by Iverson's game-high 22 points, shot just 34 percent from the field — 30 percent in the second half. They had 12 steals but committed 17 turnovers. Ten of the Hoya miscues came during the second half, compared to only five by Villanova.

Iverson's two steals enabled him to break his own school single-season record of 89 steals. He has 90 thefts this season.

The Wildcats, who shot 53 percent in the game (27-of-51) and were ahead by as many as 17 points in the second half, also got 17 points from Kerry Kittles and 15 from Alvin Williams. Chuck Kornegay had 11 rebounds and Jason Lawson had five blocks.

Neither team shot well from the free-throw line, with Villanova making 15-of-31 and the Hoyas 18-of-31.

Othella Harrington had 10 points for Georgetown.

MINNEAPOLIS — Tom Gugliotta had 22 points, 11 rebounds and seven assists Monday night as the Minnesota Timberwolves defeated the Dallas Mavericks for the second time in three days, 104-92.

Gugliotta's hustling play sparked a 12-2 run late in the fourth quarter. Christian Laettner added 23 points, Isaiah Rider had 21 and Sam Mitchell had 20 for the Wolves, who got seven rebounds, seven assists and seven blocks from 19-year-old rookie Kevin Garnett.

Jason Kidd scored 22 for the Mavericks and Jim Jackson added 21.

With the Wolves trailing 86-84 with less than five minutes to play, Gugliotta was fouled on consecutive possessions. He made his first three free throws to give the Wolves the lead for good. When he missed his next attempt, Gugliotta grabbed the rebound, forcing a jump ball with Popeye Jones.

Gugliotta won the jump ball, setting up Mitchell's basket for an 89-86 lead. Terry Porter scored five points in the decisive run, which gave the Wolves a 96-88 lead with 2:02 to play.

Knicks 97, Pistons 91
NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing had 25 points and 13 rebounds, and his fadeaway jumper with 1:02 remaining Monday night helped the New York Knicks hold off the Detroit Pistons, 97-91.

The Knicks wasted most of a 16-point second-half lead, letting the Pistons get within a point in the final 78 seconds before Ewing's basket gave them a cushion. Derek Harper hit four foul shots down the stretch to seal the win.

Ewing hit 10 of 18 field goals. Hubert Davis added 15 points off the bench and Derek Harper had 14 as the Knicks beat the Pistons for the third time this season.

Grant Hill, who went 5-for-16 in his previous game, struggled again offensively, missing nine of his 13 field goal attempts and finishing with 10 points. Hill, who leads the Pistons with 21 points a game, had 12 rebounds and limited Anthony Mason to nine points, but Detroit lost for the fourth time in five games.

Allan Houston had 24 points, despite sitting out most of the third quarter because of foul trouble. Rookie Don Reid had 11 points and seven rebounds off the bench for the Pistons.

Heat 103, Kings 92
MIAMI — The outside shooting of Rex Chapman and Bimbo Coles helped the Miami Heat sink Sacramento 103-92 Monday night.

Chapman scored 24 points and Coles 21 to complement Alonzo Mourning's inside play. Mourning had 25 points and 11 rebounds even though he was limited to 33 minutes because of foul trouble.

Kings guards Mitch Richmond and Tyus Edney are bound for All-Star Weekend — Edney will play in the rookie game — but they were outplayed by their Miami counterparts.

Chapman went 9-for-19, including four 3-pointers. Coles was 7-for-10 and added six assists for the TORONTO — James Robinson's 3-pointer from the top of the key with one-tenth of a second remaining Tuesday night lifted the Portland Trail Blazers to a 90-87 victory over the Toronto Raptors.

The Trail Blazers, who trailed 71-62 with 11 minutes left in the game, pulled even at 81 on a Rod Strickland field goal with 2:49 remaining.

Arvydas Sabonis put Portland in front 87-85 with just over a minute to play before Damon Stoudamire, who finished with 16 points, hit an 8-foot running jumper to knot the game again with 22 seconds remaining.

That set the stage for Robinson's game-winner on a feed from Strickland.

Former Spurs great George Gervin talks about receiving a phone call notifying him of his induction into the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The Iceman cometh to Springfield, Mass.

Jeff Donn
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — George Gervin and David Thompson finally put their fierce scoring rivalry to rest Monday. They were elected — together — to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The other inductees were UCLA and Lakers star Gail Goodrich, Olympic champion Nancy Lieberman-Cline, the high-scoring George Yardley and the late Kresimir Cosic of Croatia.

The often-controversial Jerry Tarkanian, who owns the best winning percentage among college coaches, was passed over.

The scoring competition between Gervin and Thompson reached its height on April 9, 1978, as each was grasping at the league scoring title with one game left. Thompson scored 73 points for Denver to take the lead. But a few hours later, Gervin scored 63 for San Antonio, to win the title that season.

"It's truly an honor to be going in with David," Gervin said Monday. "We had quite a few battles."

Each of them battled in his own life, too. Nicknamed "Iceman," Gervin turned pro after slugging an opponent and losing his college scholarship. Later, while with the Spurs, he entered a drug rehabilitation program.

"Overcoming that addiction is the Hall of Fame in itself," Gervin said Monday.

Despite his personal problems, Gervin, who also played with Chicago, scored more than 2,000 points in six consecutive seasons. He averaged 26 points during 14 seasons in the ABA and NBA.

Thompson, an acrobatic player who led North Carolina State over UCLA and Bill Walton en route to the 1974 NCAA championship, also fell prey to cocaine as a pro. At the height of his drug problems, he did a brief stint at a prison camp for beating his wife.

However, Thompson averaged 22 points during a career that brought him to both Denver and Seattle. He once hit 13 field goals in a quarter, an NBA record. He is the only one to be named most valuable player in both ABA and NBA All-Star games.

Both Thompson and Gervin now do work for programs that help disadvantaged children.

"It all has been behind me," said Thompson of his past struggles. "Nobody's perfect, and everybody has skeletons in their closet. But when you're a pro athlete, you're in a position when you can have influence on people's lives."

Goodrich, another NBA marquee name, led UCLA to its first titles under coach John Wooden in 1964 and 1965, before starring with the Los Angeles Lakers. At 6-foot-1, he averaged almost 19 points a game in his 14 seasons, which included play with Phoenix and New Orleans.

Goodrich said he would ask his former coach to be a presenter at induction ceremonies May 6.

"Coach Wooden saw something in me as a little high school kid," Goodrich said. "He had confidence that if this little kid grows, he can play ... Others didn't think so."

Nancy Lieberman-Cline, an Olympic silver medal winner at age 17, helped reshape women's basketball into a more aggressive, physical game, closer to how men play. She remembered Monday how, at 5-foot-8 and 120 pounds, she came into the 1974 U.S. national tryouts boxing out players and throwing elbows.

"People looked at me like ... 'Who the hell do you think you are?'" she said.

She eventually showed who she was. Her Olympic medal two years later made her the youngest basketball medal winner in history. She led Old Dominion's women's team to two national championships. Later, she was the first woman to play in a men's pro league with the Springfield Fame of the United States Basketball League in 1986-87.

Known as "Bird," Yardley earned a place in NBA history during the 1957-58 season, when he broke the 2,000-point ceiling by one point.

Cosic, a 6-11 center, starred for Brigham Young in the early 1970s. He won a gold medal at the 1980 Olympics with the former Yugoslavian national team. He died of cancer in May at age 46.

Magic's bulk aids in comeback attempt

Robert Jablon
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Magic Johnson spent more than three years with former NBA player Lester Conner and bodybuilder Marchell Henry, sharpening his shots, adding 27 pounds and polishing his boundless confidence.

Just about every day after Johnson's 1992 retirement from the Los Angeles Lakers because of the AIDS virus, his training buddies joined him in a rigorous routine of weightlifting, stretches, sit-ups, jogging and, of course, basketball.

"He never stopped working," Conner said. "The sports world, the public, everybody's surprised at what he did that first game. We weren't surprised. We were sitting up there like two proud papas."

In his first game last week, Johnson's Lakers beat the Golden State Warriors 128-118 before a loss to the Bulls and a win Sunday night over the Jazz.

The 36-year-old Johnson has played 90 minutes, scored 55 points, pulled in 18 rebounds, handed out 19 assists and taken over as major general in his three games back.

To get ready for the NBA grind, Johnson's daily routine included an hour's morning workout with weights, followed by two hours on the basketball court and up to 700 sit-ups daily — not to mention games with his touring team and the occasional 3½-mile jog, said Conner, who is assistant coach for the touring team.

During a yachting vacation to the Mediterranean last August, Johnson kept weights on the ship, and he was mobbed by fans while jogging through the streets of St. Tropez.

Diet and sleep were important, too, Conner and Henry say Johnson sticks to afternoon naps and since last year has laid off the nachos in favor of sugarless treats.

"He's doing the egg whites, he's doing turkey sausage instead of pork sausage ... fat-free stuff, sugar-free stuff," Conner said.

Roy, Avalanche swat the Canadiens, 4-2

Associated Press

DENVER — Patrick Roy, in his first appearance against the team he led to two Stanley Cups, recorded his 299th career win Monday night, leading the Colorado Avalanche over the Montreal Canadiens 4-2.

Roy, 10-7-1 since forcing a trade from Montreal to Colorado, stopped 37 shots in a game he earlier admitted had special meaning. He and Jocelyn Thibault, who went to the Canadiens in the deal, exchanged brilliant saves throughout the game.

Valeri Kamensky and Troy Murray scored 16 seconds apart in the third period for the Avalanche.

Kamensky scored his 23rd of the year 28 seconds into the final period. Sixteen seconds later, Murray sent a shot off Stephane Quintal's skate past Thibault, who came to Montreal along with wingers Martin Rucinsky and Andrei Kovalenko on Dec. 6 in exchange for Mike Keane and Roy.

Colorado held Montreal scoreless in five power play chances.

Both goalies were tested in the first minute of the game. Thibault steared aside a low drive from Joe Sakic and Saku Koivu's wrist shot from 20 feet was stopped by Roy.

tion. Yet, the tradition is all about the communication of emotional expression, and human emotions haven't changed, just the context in which we feel them.

Kronos has urgently been moving chamber music out of the museum and into artistic reinvention, moving toward today. But it's taken the quartet time to move beyond the camouflage of flashy showmanship into something truly new, and their new two-CD set, Released 1985-95, is a 10-year documentation of this movement.

Kronos violinist David Harrington said in an earlier interview that the quartet has "always sought out music from composers with a personal vision."

During the past 10 years, the quartet has recorded pieces by Dmitri Shostakovich, Willie Dixon, Béla Bartók, Howlin' Wolf, Ornette Coleman, Astor Piazzola, John Zorn and Jimi Hendrix. The quartet's music constantly pulls the listener in different directions — toward love and beauty, loss and rage and sublime silliness.

This is what Kronos and Released 1985-95 are all about. When Piazzola's melody wanders over the vibrating strings in his composition "Asleep," the music, as Harrington puts it, "takes you to a place you don't want to go." It seems to cry for something lost. And when an amplified, distorted violin begins to saw through the opening riff of "Purple Haze," an old tradition moves out from beneath a ghostly white sheet and into today.

"Sometimes," Harrington said, "our music brings you home."

the Kronos Quartet, however, have pulled the sheet off an old tradition.

Kronos is a string quartet, but you can forget the standard repertory from Joseph Haydn to Igor Stravinsky. This is new music, reflecting the complexity of multiculturalism in modern-day life. But how can this be? After all, Kronos is a string quartet. The quartet's two violins-violoncello instrumentation is derived from a wonderful, but mostly European tradi-

'Roses' suited for insomniacs

Tasha Robinson
The Daily Iowan

It's entirely possible that some people lead such dramatic lives that they go to movies to relax with some unwavering, meditative calm. Avoiding action films, fast-paced comedies and tense dramas equally, this kind of filmgoer would be waiting with bated breath for a movie like "Bed of Roses," a romance with virtually no conflict to mar its placid surface.

Christian Slater ("Interview With the Vampire") and Mary Stuart Masterson ("Benny and Joon") star as Lewis and Lisa, two young people with very minor problems at worst. She's a successful businesswoman with a single skeleton in her closet. He's a romantic idealist with a tragic past. After one chance encounter and a second, carefully contrived meeting, they accept each other and begin the process of becoming utterly, flawlessly happy. They deal with their respective pasts through quick, where, "Bed of Roses" somehow forgot that part of the age-old tradition.

New Line Cinema

Christian Slater and Mary Stuart Masterson star in "Bed of Roses," a romance released in time for the biggest flower day of the year.

Playwright and first-time film director Michael Goldenberg delivers well both in his dialogue and his visual imagery. Slater and Masterson are in their element, as he relies on his usual boyish charm and she delves into new levels of wide-eyed, sad innocence. Together, they're convincing and touching as the too-perfect couple, and they're well-complemented by Pamela Segall, in a memorable performance as the requisite quirky friend. Overall, there's almost nothing maudlin, false or forced to blemish the film's gently romantic tone.

But it still seems like an empty, too-quiet story, best suited for easing tensions or luring insomniacs. Like "Sleepless in Seattle," or many of 1995's bumper crop of stylish, funny romances — "While You Were Sleeping," "Don Juan Demarco" and "Circle of Friends" are notable among them — this is a typically light, sweet film about two Platonic ideals rather than two people. But when Sensitive New-age Soft-hearted Guy meets Sincere Appreciative Understanding Woman, no sparks fly and no rockets go off. Everyone just smiles and drifts aimlessly into peace and prosperity.

"Sleepless" and its artistic children at least padded that peace with unexpected turns, character conflict and abrupt humor. By comparison, "Bed of Roses" has no hook and little happening. For some, this may be a pleasantly soporific break from the pains of reality. But for anyone who expects an actual story to go with their entertainment, "Bed of Roses" is just something to nap on.

perfunctory monologues, and they move on.

The only ripples in their pond are minor and internal. Lewis is a bit too good to be true — he's obsessed with perfection and making his new lover utterly content. Lisa's not sure she's a good enough person to deserve perfection and adoration. But truthfully, their worst troubles are that they're both sensitive, giving, caring, emotional people who care a great deal about each other.

Both Lewis and Lisa repeatedly make references to their fairy-tale romance, to princes in shining armor and to happily-ever-after endings. But even the dullest fairy tale usually has some sort of dragon or goblin or witch in it some-
