Caucus day: All eyes on Iowa

In today's race 'expect the unexpected'

Jay Dee

Daily Iowan political reporter

DES MOINES — Today's Iowa caucuses are anybody's ball game.

Although Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., has increased his lead over publisher Steve Forbes in the latest caucus polls, a large number of undecided voters throws the contest open, Iowa Republican Party chairperson Brian Kennedy said.

Polls show one of every five likely Republican caucus voters is undecided. Kennedy said if a majority of them break for one candidate, Dole will be in for a fight.

"You can expect the unexpected," Kennedy said about tonight's results. Although Dole is the likely winner, Kennedy said spots two through five are wide open.

Both Pat Buchanan and Lamar Alexander have momentum going into the contest.

"Buchanan seems to be consolidating the undecided conservatives," Kennedy said.

At a Des Moines press conference Sunday, Buchanan pointed to a California straw poll held that day in which he finished a strong second to Dole. Buchanan drew 25 percent of the vote, while Dole finished with 36 percent.

Buchanan said his recent victories make him the conservative challenger to Dole.

"With the victories in Alaska and Louisiana, and these straw-poll results from California, I believe it is time for Republicans to unite behind the one conservative who can win," he said.

Alexander was also in Des Moines Sunday. The former Tennessee governor has been telling Iowa crowds the negative campaigning between Dole and Forbes will help his campaign.

"As far as I can tell, some of the commercials that have been on could be used for fertilizer," Alexander told a crowd of more than 400 at the Embassy Suites. "I think the people of Iowa and New Hampshire appreciate my sticking to the high road."

After needling Forbes and Dole for their television ads, Alexander addressed issues normally discussed in Buchanan's campaign — immigration and trade.

Alexander said he would create another branch of the military in order to protect America's borders. Buchanan has long argued for greater border enforcement.

But the two differ on trade. Buchanan opposes free trade and says he would overturn the North American Free Trade Agreement. However, Alexander said free trade increases exports and helps the economy.

Alexander's focus on Buchanan may be a sign that both campaigns realize they are locked in a battle for undecided voters. Polls show support for both Buchanan and Before 15,000 people saw President Clinton in Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday, UI sophomore Erin Barber saw him sitting backstage with his reading glasses on, pouring over his speech.

"That's when it really hit me," said Barber, who introduced Clinton and Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa. "The history of his office and how many other men had sat in similar situations going over their speeches. It was a very special moment. It really came to life for me."

Barber spoke for two minutes about financial aid and the Federal Direct Loan Program, without which she wouldn't be able to attend the UI. Barber got a raucous ovation from the 55 percent UI crowd.

"I was glad that I was able Barber to tell part of my personal story," she said. "So many students are in the same situation as me and they responded in that way. I was so proud. It was a great crowd and a great event at my school with my fellow students."

Barber, fund-raising chairperson for the UI Democrats, found out late Friday afternoon she was chosen by the President Advance Team, which is based in Washington, D.C., to speak at the presidential visit. Barber said she moment in her life. "It was really emotional," Fuhrman said. "I felt chills through my body. It felt like I was part of history. It's something I can tell my grandchildren — that I saw the president while he was in office."

UI graduate Clint Ball said his 25-minute wait in line before the speech was worth it.

"I thought it was awesome," he said. "I would have liked to have seen him talk a little bit more about Bosnia and what's going on over there."

UI President Mary Sue Coleman, who greeted the president on behalf of the UI, said he looked taller in person.

"I did get to shake his hand," she said. "He looks very distinguished. I thought his speech was good and it really resonated with students. He talked about student loans and environmental issues that are

Horoscope

Here's your life; It's all in the stars

Horoscopes for the week of Feb. 12- Feb. 18.

Aries (March 21-April 19): A Saturday evening revelation has left you stunned. March forth at a decent pace, but continue to consult your feelings, for eccentricity and too much emotion could lead to a spiritual plummet.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): A generation gap may be just what you need to pull things together. You're spinning your wheels; look for stability, which — unfortunately — is not near.

Gemini (May 21-June 21): An alter ego may be the best escape from your mounting problems. Disillusionment with this world will not thin for another month, but when it does, you'll exist in a utopia.

Cancer (June 22-July 22): Stress and lack of personal time plague your thoughts. Put faith in those you work with, even though past experience may tell you not to. Excessive alcohol consumption pacifies that which could be stronger.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Loyalty is a strong trait, but concentrating on your relationship instead of trying to mend others should be your task. Watering the plants, not reviving a corpse, will make life meaningful.

Astral Boy & Star Girl's Horoscopes

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Happiness is just days away. Don't lose focus of immediate goals. Doing so will haunt that which you are waiting for. Don't rush; time will provide.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pace yourself. You've already rushed into things once and disaster was narrowly averted. There's no harm in questioning important statements, but don't be afraid to let yourself feel.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stop trying so hard. The one who teases your emotions is in more pain than you, but he/she has brought it upon himself/herself. You'll get what's coming to you, but patience must be exercised.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are lonely and longing for the one who lives two states to the east. Your only piece of mind will come from understanding that the one who cares very much for you is of strong character. Vindication will come in less than two weeks.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your willingness to take on responsibility is bound to pay off. A weekend excursion has left you with many questions, but strangers will provide the answers.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If he/she is willing to smuggle food for you, you know you've found someone more loyal than the sunrise. Concentrate on immediate agenda — such as future shelter — then bask in the glory of knowing there is someone who cares for you with all his or her heart.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): As a milestone event grows closer, tension mounts. You are a strong person with valid feelings of concern. Time off may not be the best idea, but if a return is made, all will be yours.

If your birthday is this week: Your sweetie is cheap. The one you love will use this week as an excuse to combine Valentine's Day with your birthday. Don't let your sweetie get away with this atrocity.

UI professors' scientific instruments will be launched into space

The work of two UI space physics research teams will be carried on the Polar Spacecraft, which is scheduled for launch by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Feb. 22. The spacecraft will carry a package of scientific instruments into an elliptical orbit passing about 25,000 miles above the north pole. The visible imaging system, a set of three cameras designed and built by a team led by UI Professor Louis Frank, will capture images of the northern lights. Also, a plasma wave instrument, designed by UI Professor Donald Gurnett and his colleagues, will measure waves in plasma — a thin, electrically charged gas — in the polar regions of the Earth's magnetosphere.

Jodie Foster, French director may unite for next project

PARIS (AP) — Jodie Foster has given French director Mathieu Kassovitz a boost by agreeing to distribute his film "La Haine" in the United States. Now she says she may star in his next movie.

Their collaboration remains in the early stages, the two-time Academy Award winner told the French newspaper, Votre Dimanche.

"At the moment, I've only received the first 50 pages of the script," she said, offering no details. "If this project succeeds, it's my company that will produce it, and it isn't out of the question that I'd take a role in this film."

Foster's company, Egg Pictures, produced her latest directorial effort, "Home for the Holidays." Her best-actress Oscars came for "The Accused" and "The Silence of the Lambs."

Foster

"La Haine" ("Hate") earned writer-director Kassovitz best director honors at last spring's Cannes Film Festival. The black-and-white film covers 24 hours in a working-class Paris neighborhood where a Jew, an African and an Arab endure run-ins with the police and skinheads.

Gates' book selling big in China

BEIJING, China — Big-time capitalist Bill Gates is a big hit in communist China.

A translation of his book "The Road Ahead" has become popular with young people and computer experts in China, the Xinhua News Agency reported Sunday.

About 200,000 copies have been sold since it was published in China in January, Xinhua said. Gates is listed by Forbes magazine as the world's richest man.

The Beijing University Press predicted sales might top 600,000 copies. The book went on sale in the United States in November.

Sandra Bullock does it her way

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — Barefoot and looking "as if I had just gotten out of bed," actress Sandra Bullock showed up for work as director of a 30-minute film she wrote in just two days.

"I have control over this film. If I don't like it, I can burn it," Bullock said while shooting "Making Sandwiches" last week.

She and "Dazed and Confused" actor Matthew McConaughey star in the comedy about her "theory of life and relationships."

The low-budget movie, expected to make the film festival rounds, contrasts dramatically from Bullock's usual multimillion-dollar movie efforts.

"It's a good excuse to hang out with friends," Bullock said. "I just get up every day and say, 'How can I suck the nectar out of life today?'"

Retired general honored for courageous fighting cancer

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Norman Schwarzkopf beat more than Saddam Hussein. He also whipped prostate cancer.

The retired general who commanded allied troops in the Gulf War received the Gilda Radner Courage Award on Saturday at the Roswell Park Cancer Institute.

The award recognizes a cancer patient whose courageous public battle with the disease gives hope to fellow patients and focused attention on the fight against cancer.

It's named for Radner, an original "Saturday Night Live" cast member who died from ovarian cancer in 1989.

"I am honored to have been selected for this award even though I don't think it has taken a great amount of courage for me to publicly discuss my fight with cancer," Schwarzkopf said. "If by openly discussing prostate cancer, I can save one person's life, that is all the reward I need."

Schwarzkopf has been a national spokesperson for prostate cancer awareness for the past few years. He is chairperson of the Florida Executive Advisory Council of the American Cancer Society.

Actress Irving trades New Mexican adobe for New York

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Amy Irving is really getting away from Santa Fe. The actress, who has been living primarily in Los Angeles, is selling her New Mexico hideaway and plans to buy a home in New York.

Irving and her steady, Brazilian director Bruno Barreto, used the 4,480-square-foot pueblo-style home mainly for vacations.

Irving lived in Santa Fe from 1980 to 1984, then moved to Los Angeles. In 1985, she married director Steven Spielberg in Santa Fe. When they divorced 3½ years later, she bought the Santa Fe home.

Irving, whose credits include "Yentl" and "Crossing Delancey," has a sister in Santa Fe she'll miss, but few other regrets.

"Everything looks the same there anyway; the vigas, the adobe, the white walls," she said. "You can rent a place there for a month and have a similar experience."

Rio officials try to 'do the right thing'

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Spike Lee was baffled. Michael Jackson had asked the film director to shoot a music video in a Rio slum and officials here reacted indignantly.

"What do Rio authorities think, that it's a secret there's poverty in Brazil?" Lee said in an interview with the Rio daily Jornal do Brasil.

Not exactly. They were following an old Brazilian custom of dealing with embarrassing problems by pretending they don't exist. Officials create what are known as facts "para ingles ver" — for outsiders to see.

The squalor of Rio's notorious Dona Marta slum is definitely not what authorities want outsiders to see.

Ronaldo Cezar Coelho, the Rio de Janeiro state secretary of industry, commerce and tourism, called Jackson's video "commercial exploitation of misery that could stigmatize Rio."

Comedian Miller apologizes to man, avoids lawsuit
MAYSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Dennis Miller never says he's sorry for kidding Newt Gingrich or O.J. Simpson on his TV show. It took an unknown comedy victim named Russell Newsome to get an apology.

"Y'know, I did a joke on The Big Screen last season about a man named Russell Newsome," Miller said Friday night on HBO's "Dennis Miller Live." "He didn't like the joke and I'd like to apologize."

The apology warded off a threatened lawsuit against Miller for the Aug. 18 broadcast of a candid news photo showing Newsome swigging from a milk jug and Miller saying: "Nothing tapers the heat than to drink your own urine."

Under a settlement signed by Miller on Friday, Newsome agreed to drop any legal action in exchange for the apology, said Ron Rigg, Newsome's attorney.

Clinton's Visit to Iowa City

Clinton addresses student concerns, defends college loans

Cary Jordan
The Daily Iowan

President Clinton dove headfirst into an ocean of Democratic support Saturday, rallying more than 15,000 people who packed Carver-Hawkeye Arena behind his vision for America's future.

Clinton's 40-minute address seemed to serve a dual purpose for those who attended. It revitalized the Democratic stronghold for the Clinton re-election campaign, while taking some of the air out of the messages given by the slew of GOP candidates who have bombarded the state in the past week.

Clinton touched on a variety of issues, but one anthem that continuously echoed throughout the arena was the importance of each voter.

"This election is not about me," Clinton said. "It's not about the folks running the TV ads about each other. It's about you — you are the boss, you have the power and you must have a vision."

The importance of low-interest college loans was another of Clinton's focal points. He discussed the large number of students on college campuses who wouldn't be there if not for low-interest college loans.

"Who wants a weak student-loan program?" Clinton said. "I don't think anyone wants that. This election is not about the government walking away and letting people fend for themselves."

Several times during the address, Clinton lashed out at Republicans who he said spend too much time focusing on the negative aspects of the country without acknowledging the strides forward. He also pointed out the dangers of a divided nation.

"I'm sick and tired of seeing us divided," he said. "I want this country to grow and work and live together. How are we doing? Better than we were, but not as good as we could be doing."

Clinton challenged the audience, as well as the nation, in several areas of recent social turmoil. He explained the importance of strengthening the family, making quality health care available to all Americans and giving everyone a "world-class" education.

"Every state should have as low drop-out rates and high attendance and performance rates as the state of Iowa," Clinton said. "I want to have every classroom in America hooked up to the Internet."

Raising the stagnant minimum wage, a policy Clinton has strongly supported, was also a major area of concentration.

"If we don't raise the minimum wage, this year it will fall to a 40-year low," he said. "If we are pro-work and pro-family, we ought to raise the minimum wage."

Prior to Clinton's speech, Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin gave a brief speech which discussed political activism. Harkin failed to pull any punches regarding his message, and those who oppose it.

"Newt Gingrich wanted to be here with us today, but as you can tell he's not too popular here in Iowa City," Harkin said. "I like to call those guys Newtie and the Blowhards."

When Harkin wasn't roasting Republicans, he was praising UI athletics. After ribbing the president about the success of his own Arkansas Razorbacks in comparison to the Hawkeye basketball team, he redirected his focus to the political issues at hand.

"A democracy is not a spectator sport," Harkin said. "Do you want low-interest college loans? Do you want a healthy environment? Do you want to keep the woman's right to choose? Then get involved, get organized, get to the caucuses."

Harkin received an ovation after calling for equal pay for equal work, and said Clinton is the candidate to support these issues.

"Right now women make 70 cents for every dollar a man makes," Harkin said. "This is wrong. It must change. We must close the pay gap."

"(Clinton) hasn't walked away from students, and he hasn't walked away from our future. We're gonna open the door to four more for Clinton and Gore."

UI sophomore Allison Miller — who helped organize Clinton's visit and introduced U.S. House of Representatives candidate Bob Rush — said after a week of chaos that seeing everything come together was well worth it.

"There was nothing better than watching it all work," Miller said. "We pulled this thing off in less than a week, so when it all came together it was absolutely exhilarating."

"I thought all the speeches were very energetic. They knew who they were speaking to. They talked a lot about rural life, education and college loans."

Even though Clinton's speech may have been slightly long for some people, the message is what's most important, Miller said.

"We desperately have to face the fact," Clinton said, "that we have to go forward together and your future will be the glory of all American history."

The crowd goes wild in anticipation of President Clinton's speech Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

was recommended by the Clinton/Gore campaign in eastern Iowa.

"At first I thought I would be speaking at a pre-program show before the president," she said. "And I was excited and thrilled. When I found out I would be walking up with him, it blew me away even more. I don't think I've ever been more surprised in my life."

Walking into Carver-Hawkeye with the president of the United States was an incredible feeling, Barber said.

"I wasn't that nervous," she said. "But my legs were quivering. My lips were quivering. Fifteen thousand people were going to give me their full attention. That was the first time that many eyes have been on me and that many ears listening to me."

After she gave her speech, Clinton put his arm around Barber.

"It's so hard to monitor how I was feeling at that point," she said. "I was happy, fulfilled, excited and energized as I was walking around later that day. It was quite an honor to spend that with him."

Meeting the president was a satisfying experience for Barber, who said she has been interested in politics since kindergarten.

"Both my parents have had an interest in politics," she said. "They made a strong impression on me. There was never a feeling in our home that we couldn't do something about our government."

Barber said she even remembers the 1980 election between Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan. She was in kindergarten then.

"I was the only kid in my kindergarten class — a.m. and p.m. — whose parents voted for Carter," she said. "I cried when Jimmy lost. My parents let me stay up and watch the results on TV. They trained me well."

Years of political devotion paid off when she met Clinton, Barber said.

"To me he's just an average guy," she said. "He has such a heart and I think it really showed on Saturday."

important to students at Iowa."

The speech was a little less exciting for Republicans like UI freshman and pep band member Michelle Stotz, who was required to attend.

"I was forced to be here, so it wasn't the highest on my priority list," she said. "I didn't feel that he said that much; he said a lot of what we wanted, but not exactly how he's going to give us that."

Stotz, who is from the East Coast, said Clinton's statements were very misleading to Iowans.

"I'm from the Washington, D.C. area, so I see more up-close politics," she said. "We're a lot more informed because it's our hometown news. We're much more aware of what's going as far as issues of Whitewater, and things that aren't of national importance to the Midwestern people."

UI graduate student Katherine Braun said the excitement at the mostly-Democratic rally wouldn't rain on her Republican parade.

"I'm a Republican, so it was interesting to come and see a Democratic president," she said. "I thought he had a very nice speech, but I didn't agree with what he said. His speech didn't have any effect on my political views."

Slayton Thompson, a Cedar Rapids resident, said he was ecstatic to be on the floor of Carver-Hawkeye carrying the banner for Clinton.

"I'm pumped up about it just like anyone for basketball," he said. "He can't do it alone. He says, 'Slayton, I want you.' I'm a national delegate; I was an electoral delegate, so I've been to the caucuses before. So let's do it — we got to do it."

Thompson said he wanted to hear in Clinton's message a positive understanding of what the American public wants.

UI diversity — forum participants disagree on progress

Kristen Mullin
The Daily Iowan

Some believe diversity on the UI campus has improved in the past few years.

Some don't.

However, 70 people representing both sides gathered Friday at the Union in a two-hour open forum sponsored by the UI Office of Affirmative Action and Opportunity at Iowa to discuss how to increase the diversity at the UI in the future. The forum was originally scheduled for Martin Luther King Jr. Human Rights Week, but was postponed due to weather.

Interim Provost Samuel Becker said the UI has made strides in diversity on campus.

"Six years ago the UI would never have had a woman president," Becker said. "Look around, we have a woman as president and we do have an African-American as head of the Department of Chemistry."

UI senior Jonathan Carter had a different point of view.

"It's my fourth year here and I am appalled at the lack of commitment to diversity at this university," Carter said. "If (UI President Mary Sue Coleman) sticks to what she says, then there is hope for diversity, but she has to make sure the people beneath her are committed."

Rusty Barceló, interim director of Opportunity at Iowa, said when the office was first established, 300 faculty members applied to be mentors to minorities. At that time, there weren't enough minorities enrolled at the UI for all mentors to advise.

As of this year, the UI exceeds the regents' mandate of 8.7 percent minorities with 9 percent.

Barceló stressed the importance of the UI's cultural centers.

"Six years ago the UI would never have had a woman president,"

Samuel Becker, UI interim provost

"The centers operate for the retention of students," Barceló said. "They get to listen to their music and eat their food, but the center is not only for that specific group. People don't know that there is also wonderful art work at these centers."

UI dean of students Phillip Jones said cultural centers are not the only solution for cultural diversity and may possibly be a solution that has outlived its usefulness.

"Student populations have matured beyond the walls of a center. A new concept of redesigning space is needed," Jones said. "There need to be places where people can have psychological space. There need to be fewer walls. We need to begin to plan to make one community."

DISPLAY OPENS NEXT YEAR

Mini-books become mega-gift to library

Kristen Mullin
The Daily Iowan

The latest treasures in the UI Special Collections Department in the Main Library may be able to fit in the palm of your hand, but they're worth a bounty.

A display of 3,000 miniature books, all less than three inches in height but worth $250,000, will be ready for viewing next year.

The books, donated to the department in December by Charlotte Smith of Newton, Iowa, include Dante's "Comedia," written in Latin; "Practical Cooking," published in 1906; and the Bible, published in 1780. One book in the collection is a limited edition Edgar Allan Poe work equipped with deluxe, leather binding, gilt-edges, and a protective box.

"I've read all my life," Smith said. "I love books. I love the way they smell, I love their bindings and the end papers, I love the different fonts and the different textures of paper used — I love everything about books."

Smith started collecting the tiny books from specialized book dealers in the early 1970s and belongs to the world-wide Miniature Books Society. She knows of only one other Iowan who collects miniature books.

Collecting the books is not an inexpensive hobby, Smith said. The books cost from $10-$1,000, with the average price between $30 and $60.

She donated the miniature books to the library because of the helpfulness and generosity she has received with her collections from Frank Hanlon, the former head of the UI Special Collections, and Robert McCown, present head of the department, she said.

"I'm 77-years-old, so there are two things that could be done: sell them or give them away. I'd rather decide about them now instead of make my children decide about them later," Smith said.

Although the department has been receiving donations from Smith over the last 30 years, the library was not expecting this particular gift, McCown said.

The books were originally made as religious and devotional texts printed to study while traveling on horseback. The books, some the size of a thumbnail, could be carried in a pocket.

The miniature books, which are now made for fun, will be valuable tools of the past, McCown said.

"The books have great research value and will help to understand the history of printing and book-making," McCown said. "The paper is handmade and the type is handset."

GOP LAMBASTE LEGALIZATION

Conservative rally denounces same-sex marriages

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — More than 1,000 social conservatives launched a rousing assault on gay rights Saturday, demanding GOP presidential candidates oppose same-sex marriages.

"Tonight we begin to raise our voices and we raise them with the might of our numbers," said Bill Horn, a conservative and anti-gay rights activist.

The church-based conservatives are an important force in Republican politics in Iowa, and they demonstrated that clout with support from some of the major GOP presidential contenders.

Commentator Pat Buchanan, who has made strong showings in key early tests, warned the crowd against "the false god of gay rights" and said conservatives in Des Moines already have made their point by ousting an openly gay member of the city's school board.

Drawing rousing cheers, Buchanan saluted "the cultural warriors of Fort Des Moines."

Commentator Alan Keyes denounced contenders who focus on economic issues, saying the Republican Party can build on its gains only by paying more attention to social and family issues.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, considered the front-runner for today's precinct caucuses, did not attend but sent organizers a letter of support saying that cutting the out-of-wedlock birth rate must be a priority.

"To achieve this goal, government at all levels must work to support and promote the institution of marriage that unites husband and wife," Dole said in his letter.

"To achieve this goal, government at all levels must work to support and promote the institution of marriage that unites husband and wife,"

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The event was the opening round of an effort to block legalization of same-sex marriages. Organizers said an effort would be made in all 50 states to push laws banning same-sex marriages.

About 200 protesters lined the streets outside the fundamentalist church where the rally was held, accusing participants of gay-bashing.

16 HOSPITALIZED

Illness at Iowa college may be due to faulty vent

Associated Press
WAVERLY, Iowa — Wartburg College officials believe a faulty rooftop vent on a residence hall is to blame for the carbon monoxide poisoning of 16 students.

The students — 10 women on the second floor and 6 men on the first floor — were overcome by the odorless gas early Friday at the Ernst House.

They were taken to a Waverly Municipal Hospital then transported to the UI Hospitals and Clinics, where they required special oxygen treatment.

The students were kept overnight, and all 16 were dismissed from the hospital Saturday, hospital officials said.

The carbon monoxide in the building may have resulted from a roof vent freezing in an improper position, Wartburg spokesperson Sherry Parrish said.

The problem was corrected with the installation of a device on the building's boiler to dissipate air and prevent freezing, she said.

Parrish also said the school will improve carbon monoxide detection systems in the complex. Senior Jessica Krogmann, 21, of Clinton, Iowa, said she and her three roommates had headaches Thursday morning before going to classes but they didn't think much about it.

Krogmann said her roommate woke up about 6:30 a.m. Friday and collapsed in their bathroom. Krogmann said her other roommates rushed in to see if she was feeling too.

Wartburg officials said none of the residents of Ernst Hall were allowed to stay in the building over the weekend.

Forum held on farm bill

Associated Press
NORWALK, Iowa — Craig Hill listened for more than an hour Friday as farmers, bankers and U.S. senators criticized the farm bill making its way through Congress.

When at last he got a chance, he stood up, grabbed a microphone and announced he likes the bill.

"I think it's a good transition bill," he said. "It takes us away from the old supply-management schemes we've had in the past. It moves us forward to market-oriented agriculture. We have the flexibility to make planting and marketing decisions."

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who are not happy with the Senate version of the farm bill, called the meeting at a Norwalk church to discuss the changes they want.

The Senate passed a bill Tuesday that would revamp the government's price supports for corn, cotton, rice and wheat in exchange for lifting federal controls over most planting decisions.

Polls show Dole rebounding while Forbes slides

Mike Mokrzycki
Associated Press

Did Steve Forbes peak too soon? New polls find Bob Dole on a tentative rebound and Forbes skidding in Iowa and New Hampshire as the 1996 Republican presidential race is about to begin in earnest.

An Iowa survey conducted Friday and Saturday also indicated that among Christian conservatives, commentator Pat Buchanan is gaining and Dole holds steady while Forbes, who criticized the Christian Coalition on Friday, may be slipping.

The religious right likely will be a sizable force in the state's GOP caucuses today - perhaps more influential than pre-election polls suggest, if history is any guide.

Overall, Dole in Iowa led with 28 percent while Buchanan (16 percent) and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander (12 percent) edged into a statistical tie for second with publishing heir Forbes (15 percent) in the Mason-Dixon Political-Media Research poll.

Forbes, facing increasing media scrutiny and counterattacks to his self-financed ad blitz, was down 7 points from a Mason-Dixon poll last Monday through Wednesday. Buchanan was up 5 points, Dole up 4 and Alexander up 3 as the percentage of undecided voters dropped 8 points to 13 percent. The margin of sampling error was plus or minus 4 percentage points in the poll of 447 registered Iowa voters who said they were likely to attend a caucus. Sponsors were the Moline Dispatch, Cedar Rapids Gazette and television stations WQAD, KCRG and KCCL.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm was essentially unchanged at 7 percent, tied with Indiana Sen. Dick Lugar and commentator Alan Keyes for fifth place. Gramm, whom Buchanan embarrassed in Louisiana caucuses last week, initially said he would be through if he didn't place in the top three in Iowa, but backed off that statement Saturday.

As in other polls, Dole ran strongest among registered Republicans. Forbes held an edge among the 19 percent who were registered independents or Democrats; those "crossover" voters, typically less likely to actually attend a caucus, were more likely to be undecided in the new poll.

An Iowa Poll published this weekend in The Des Moines Register also found Dole leading with 28 percent and Forbes slipping to 16 percent. Buchanan had 11 percent, Alexander 10 percent and Gramm 8 percent in the Feb. 3-8 survey of 628 likely caucus-goers. The error margin was plus or minus 4 points.

Forbes' slippage was apparent in two new polls in New Hampshire, the battleground after Iowa.

Candidates downplay Forbes' popularity as caucus nears

Tom Raum

SIoux CITY, Iowa — GOP candidates hopped the state Sunday, courting the one-out-of-five Republicans polls suggest are undecided.

With Bob Dole's lead appearing to stabilize, the real battle formed around who would be second.

As the rivals moved from town meetings and rallies to TV talk shows, publishing heir Steve Forbes emerged as everyone else's favorite target.

"Forbes is falling, despite his massive amount of negative ads," asserted former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, who hoped to benefit from any Forbes decline.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, trailing in the single digits but insisting he should not be counted out, ridiculed Forbes for complaining about anonymous phone calls against him: "He can dish it out, but he can't take it."

Dole tried to take the high road, declining to criticize Forbes directly. But his campaign continued to air ads on Sunday calling the publisher "untested ... and more liberal than you think."

The Senate majority leader said he was content with polls showing him with a lead in the high 20s, far behind the 37 percent he finished with in 1988 when there were more candidates in the race.

"I want to finish first. We hope it's a strong first," Dole said during a visit to a Des Moines diner. "And somebody else will finish second and then we'll go on to New Hampshire where somebody will finish second."

Despite personal appearances, the pre-caucus day was mostly fought on the airwaves - both live television interview shows and with a blizzard of radio and TV advertising.

Forbes, who has spent about $4 million in Iowa, even bought 30-minute spots which were running on TV stations on Sunday around the state. The "infomercial," called "Steve Forbes: A True Vision and an Honest Voice," included testimonials from prominent Americans, clips of him as a child and a taped tribute from former President Reagan.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, a Dole supporter, predicted "a huge turnout" at today's precinct caucuses - predicting up to 150,000 voters, up from 110,000 in 1988. Good weather was forecast across the state.

Forbes told a luncheon in suburban Des Moines he was under "vigorous, vicious" attacks from his rivals as aides worked to play down expectations for his showing.

A new poll by the Des Moines Sunday Register showed 46 percent of likely GOP caucus-goers now view Forbes in generally unfavorable terms - an increase in 20 points since the question was first asked in a poll published Dec. 3.

A day earlier, the paper published a poll showing Dole with a 28 percent lead, with Forbes second at 16 percent, conservative commentator Pat Buchanan with 11 percent, Alexander at 10 percent and Gramm at 8 percent.

That same poll showed 19 percent of likely GOP caucus-goers were undecided.

Campaign '96

Iowa: The first step on a long, hard road

John King
Associated Press

DES MOINES — For a presidential campaign with a fragile front-runner and a cluttered pack of challengers, today's Iowa caucuses are the threshold to credibility. The results could also bring some clarity to a contentious Republican race.

This has traditionally been Iowa's role, since Jimmy Carter made the state's precinct caucuses a major event 20 years ago. But given this year's compressed primary calendar — 70 percent of GOP convention delegates will be picked in the next five weeks — Iowa gets an even bigger say in shaping the nomination chase.

It wasn't supposed to be this way. Six months ago, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., was considered the overwhelming favorite here, and New Hampshire loomed as the first competitive battle. But when Dole stumbled into a tie in an August Iowa straw poll, his rivals sensed an opening — and Iowa suddenly became a make-or-break battleground.

As always, the stakes are highest for the front-runner. Dole has that distinction, but barely. His Iowa lead has stabilized but polls suggest support well below the 37 percent he won here in 1988. And Dole is in a neck-and-neck race in New Hampshire with the phenom of the 1996 contest: multimillionaire publisher Steve Forbes.

Dole rejects the notion that 37 percent should be his credibility threshold. Even though he got that number against a sitting vice president eight years ago, no one in that race spent $4 million on Iowa television ads, most of them critical of Dole. "I think just being able to

The Iowa Caucuses

REPUBLICAN DELEGATES AT STAKE: Iowa has 25 delegates to the Republican National Convention, but none will actually be chosen today. Participants will vote for their favorite candidate in a straw poll and will elect delegates to upcoming county conventions.

REPUBLICAN DELEGATE SELECTION: Today's participants will choose delegates to county conventions, who will in turn pick delegates for congressional district caucuses and the state convention.

The 15 district delegates will be elected at the June 14 congressional district caucuses. The 10 at-large delegates will be elected at the June 15 state convention.

DEMOCRATIC DELEGATES AT STAKE: The state has 56 delegates to the Democratic National Convention. They will not be officially selected until later in the year, but the party may make a delegate projection based on the results of today's caucuses.

DEMOCRATIC DELEGATE SELECTION: 31 district delegates will be selected in district conventions April 27; 11 at-large delegates, six pledged public official delegates and one unpledged add-on delegate will be chosen at the June 8 state convention. Seven unpledged delegates, including members of the Democratic National Committee, are automatic delegates.

CANDIDATES: Republicans will field a full slate of candidates this year: Lamar Alexander, Pat Buchanan, Bob Dole, Steve Forbes, Phil Gramm, Alan Keyes, Richard Lugar and Mory Taylor.

President Clinton is unopposed on the Democratic side. This is his first campaign in Iowa. He did not campaign in 1992's contest, which was won by Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin.

GENERAL INFORMATION: The caucuses start at 7 p.m. in Iowa's 2,142 precincts. Republican officials expect about 130,000 participants. Because there is no race, Democrats expect only about 25,000. Anyone who declares an allegiance to the party and will be 18 by the election November can participate in either caucus.

hold our lead in the face of that shows strength," Dole said.

Rivals rush to disagree. "A weak Dole," is what former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander predicts Iowa will show, even if Dole wins.

"He is a very weak front-runner," said Charles Black, chief strategist for Texas Sen. Phil Gramm's struggling campaign.

That will be a tough sell for those finishing well behind, which is why second place is such a coveted trophy — assuming Dole wins.

A week ago, Forbes looked destined for second, but he has slipped steadily and finds himself clumped in an unpredictable race for second and third with commentator Pat Buchanan, Alexander and Gramm.

Forbes is paying the price of success; his rise made him as much a target as Dole. Other candidates labeled his flat tax plan bad for the middle class and suggested Forbes was a lot more liberal on social policy than he was letting on. Polls also suggest a voter backlash against negative advertising.

This has put political neophyte Forbes to the test even before the voting. His reaction has been to complain Dole and others are using negative tactics against him, evoking gasps of mock disbelief from those on the receiving end of Forbes' attack ads.

One beneficiary of Forbes' slip has been Alexander, who plodded along for months with little to show for it.

"We are peaking at just the right time," argues his state campaign manager, Mary Boote. Alexander vows to go on regardless, but is short of campaign cash and will be hard pressed to raise more if his Iowa organization fails to deliver second or a strong third.

The candidate who openly talked of quitting the race if things went sour in Iowa was Gramm. Yet it was his tie with Dole in the August straw poll that created the sense Iowa was worth contesting in the first place. Gramm has lost economic conservative support to Forbes, and social conservative backing to Buchanan, who stunned Gramm last week in Louisiana caucuses.

Gramm now vows "I'm going on" to New Hampshire regardless of Iowa's results but, like Alexander, will find the going tough if he is fourth or worse. He predicted his Iowa organization would spring a Monday surprise.

The outcome here will shape the weeklong sprint to New Hampshire, the anti-tax electorate is a lot different there from Iowa, where social conservatives dominate the GOP.

GOP candidates' ads dominate TV in Iowa

Sally Buzbee

DES MOINES — Not even late-night reruns are safe from Steve and Bob and Pat and Phil and Lamar and Dick right now in Iowa.

Sam and Diane and the gang at "Cheers" had just met Carla's new boyfriend late Saturday when Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole popped on screen, wearing a windbreaker and talking to farmers.

Minutes later, it was a stark black and white shot of a woman carrying groceries and worried about welfare. "Do you really know Steve Forbes?" the ad asked. "More liberal than you think."

On the next commercial break, the Coke deliveryman tried to sneak a Pepsi from a case. Then it was Forbes on screen with a picture of former President Reagan: "Our best days are ahead," Forbes said.

Back to "Cheers." Then: "Do You Really Know Steve Forbes?" Turn to another station and seconds later, "Do You Really Know Steve Forbes?"

Buffeted by a seemingly never-ending stream of GOP presidential ads, Iowans can hardly wait to "get back to dog food again," Des Moines Register editor Dennis Ryerson joked Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

It will after today's caucuses. But there're lots of TV to go before then, and the candidates are busy filling commercial breaks.

So much regular ad time is taken, in fact, that Forbes instead bought half-hour chunks this weekend to talk about his past and his plans. The half-hour segment aired at 5:30 a.m., 8:30 a.m. and noon on Sunday in Des Moines, sandwiched around news shows.

Forbes didn't neglect his shorter ads, either. By 8 a.m. Sunday on NBC, both Forbes and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander had run ads criticizing Washington politicians and other insiders.

At 8:15 a.m. on the same channel, Indiana Sen. Dick Lugar told Iowans, "Take a stand against negative ads." At 8:42, Pat Buchanan promised not to send American jobs overseas. At 8:43 a.m., Dole was in his windbreaker again, talking to farmers.

At 9 a.m., Lugar was back on negative ads. At 9:01, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm walked his dog and said he believed in an America with less government.

POLL DOES NOT AFFECT PRIMARY

Dole wins California straw poll, Buchanan pulls in 2nd

Doug Willis
Associated Press

BURLINGAME, Calif. — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole won a straw poll of California Republican Party leaders and activists Sunday and conservative commentator Pat Buchanan finished second.

Dole garnered 36 percent of the ballots. Buchanan was second with 25 percent and multimillionaire magazine publisher Steve Forbes took third with 18 percent.

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm was fourth with 9 percent. The other five contenders for the GOP nomination ranged from 3 percent to 1 percent.

State GOP chairperson John Herrington said the poll was not a scientific survey — it was a party fund-raising effort with ballots costing $25 each — but that it was a good reflection of the sentiment of California's five million Republican voters.

Herrington said about 20,000 ballots were received by mail from party activists and contributors out of a mailing of 390,000 ballots. The rest were cast by delegates to the state GOP convention which concluded Sunday. None of the candidates for the Republican nomination attended the convention.

The poll does not affect party endorsement or California's March 26 primary vote to select the state's 165 delegates to the national convention in August.

Herrington said the top three finishers in the straw poll — Dole, Buchanan and Forbes — also were the only three candidates to accept a party offer to send ballots to mailing lists of their supporters and that "probably had some effect" on the outcome.

"It is the mind that makes the body."

Brian Kennedy, Iowa Republican chairperson, on the results of tonight's Iowa caucus

Drug wars

The U.S.-funded war on drugs has done little to stop corruption in Colombia's government, where thousands of minor players are arrested.

A battle that ranges from opium poppy and coca fields of rural Colombia to the highest political office has left thousands dead and countless questions lurking in the minds of U.S. congressmen.

Now charged with accepting $6.1 million in drug money for his 1994 election, Colombian President Ernesto Samper is fighting not only public-image controversy, but financial problems as well. America is considering pulling the plug on the money allotted to the drug-infested government and letting the $400 million allotted this year for narcotics control to filter into other areas.

It is a war which affects all; no one is immune to the costs or the penalties of the drug trade. Peasants living in the hills of Colombia are often jailed with no cause and no trial. In 1994, 2,152 drug suspects were arrested. In 1995, the number rose to 2,885. But these "suspects" are often rural farmers, uneducated and struggling to scrape out a meager existence. Few of them are big-time dealers. The effect of these arrests, in the long run, is minor.

And so it is a ridiculous war, bent upon making a statement and hardly making a dent in the flow of drugs coming into this country. Many Colombian officials are grabbing money with both hands: one fist holds drug money, the other holds U.S. aid. Pilots trained in the United States fly American planes over coca and opium fields and spray herbicide produced here. In the last decade, the United States has forked over at least $1 billion to fight the narcotics trade in Colombia, and statistics report about $70 million has been spent on this fight during the past year. Many figures have not yet been disclosed.

The effects of this so-called war are detrimental to both countries. In Colombia, the political drug skirmishes in the major cities have left thousands dead and many politically deterred. The upper levels of the government are so ingrained financially in the drug routine that the "war on drugs" is not only futile, but foolish. For many officials, to hamper the amount of drug flow is to hinder the administration.

The "shocking" disclosure of Samper's political infidelity should come as no surprise. Rampant corruption has reared its head in ugly numbers: More than 14,000 police officers have been fired since 1990 and 14 members of Congress are under investigation. And now the president has been accused by his former campaign director and defense minister of accepting drug money for his campaign. Fernando Botero says the proof is solid.

The United States should no longer fund this "war," period.

The chambers of the Colombian government need to be swept out and cleaned thoroughly. Until then, U.S. support should be minimized. If support continues to be given to an administration, with full knowledge that hypocrisy is the head of the government, the drug lords will continue to reign and the hands holding fistfuls of money will remain clenched.

'Taps'

The death of one soldier should not deter the United States from the necessity of peace-keeping in Bosnia.

In his tent in the Union camp at Harrison's Landing, Va., Union Brigadier General Daniel Butterfield called in his brigade bugler, Private Oliver Norton. It was 1862, during the American Civil War, and just following the Seven Day's Battles outside of Richmond, Va. Butterfield was unhappy with the nightly lights-out bugle call. Thinking it inappropriate and not musical enough, he had written a new one.

Norton and Butterfield worked on the notes of the new tune until they were satisfied. That night, soldiers in the U.S. Army heard "Taps" for the first time.

No one was thinking of Butterfield and his contributions to the Army last Friday, when more than 250 people attended the memorial service for Sgt. 1st Class Donald Dugan, the first U.S. soldier killed while helping to maintain the peace in Bosnia.

Dugan died Feb. 3 in an explosion of live ammunition or a land mine; military authorities weren't sure which. His death simply underscored the cold, hard fact that former war zones, no matter how peaceful on the surface, are still dangerous places and that people die in dangerous places.

Dugan's death should not go unnoticed, but should serve as a reminder of our nation's commitment to peace for our allies and in the world.

As the world's only remaining superpower, the United States must participate in every stage of the peace plan we helped to forge, if we are to maintain a position of leadership in the eyes of our global allies. Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, President Clinton reiterated this simple reason for our involvement in Bosnia.

Dugan was a 38-year-old veteran soldier, a professional prepared to kill and to be killed. He was well aware of the dangers and risks associated with his job when he volunteered to join the Army — an army which started creating and maintaining traditions nearly 100 years before Butterfield marched into Virginia and wrote his timeless tune.

Dugan's fellow soldiers in Bosnia know the dangers they face. They also know they're the best-trained and best-equipped soldiers in the world. Despite this fact, some of them may die because sometimes soldiers die while doing their jobs.

It's the job and duty of the military to maintain and enforce U.S. foreign policy. The American public should not allow a single significant death, or several significant deaths, to derail the importance of U.S. involvement in the peace process.

When a soldier dies on the battlefield, his comrades remember him with a final roll call. His name is called, and after an appropriate pause, he is listed as absent. This tradition was observed in Buedingen, Germany, Friday during the ceremony for Dugan.

As the final notes of "Taps" rang out at Dugan's memorial service, no one thought of Butterfield's small contribution. Years from now, when a lasting peace has returned to Bosnia, Dugan will probably be forgotten as well.

Like a solemn bugle call blown by the winds of time across silent battlefields, Dugan will be remembered not for his individual contribution, but for his ultimate sacrifice.

Clinton's speech presidential

Kim Painter

In all this, the president does not resemble a typical political fighter. He carries more than brass knuckles with him when he hits the road; he carries belief. This hard-to-define quality makes him especially dynamic. Ronald Reagan had a connection with people that was warm and affable. Clinton has warmth in tandem with a vision that excites people and helps them rediscover possibilities they had abandoned as hopeless.

Clinton's great strength as a campaigner is his ability to articulate a message to a crowd in an emotionally connected tone which remains well-reasoned. He did not resort to name-calling (Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, on the other hand, had to augment a rather thin aw-shucks stump persona with references to "Newtie and the Blowhards," etc.). Clinton didn't single out any group for use as a punching bag. He simply explained what he thought America could become, how he sees us getting there and why we should care enough to vote in this election. Though he retained a stubborn blind spot regarding free speech on the Internet, he struck no other false notes with Saturday's crowd.

In short, Clinton was consummately presidential. It is an aura which suits him well, much better than we'd have guessed watching him cavort with his tenor sax as a candidate. As Republicans continue the rugby scrum which will leave only one of their hopefuls standing, the steady image of Clinton outlining a reasonable plan to strengthen and revitalize America will be hard for voters to resist.

Clinton is neither a stranger nor an enemy to big business. He made it clear, however, that he will fight to keep America a place where "those who climb the ladder don't pull it up after them with the help of Congress." He plans to leave the ladder of success available. His job as president is to help as many as possible find the means to reach out for it, pull themselves up and start climbing. Clinton sees the possibility and magic of America reflected in its economy, not mocked. He promises a fight to stave off the debasement of the American economy proposed on so many levels by the GOP.

Kim Painter's column appears Mondays on the Viewpoints Page.

There was something at work beneath the surface of campaign rhetoric as Clinton spoke. He clearly believes America can overcome the challenges it faces today. Many citizens are far less optimistic — even those more affluent, educated and inclined to vote.

reinforced my notion of American politics as the home of magic and possibility. His appearance here Saturday boosted that notion again.

The speech focused on the challenges outlined in the State of the Union address. In the areas of economics, crime, education and government, America will have to chart a course. That course, according to Clinton, will either call upon all of America's fabled reserves of innova-

Drug use and the legacy of the '60s

Jamey Pregon

There has been a lot of emphasis lately on teen-agers smoking cigarettes, as the tobacco industry has been a popular target for politicians seeking re-election. "Market your products to adults, if you wish, but draw the line on children," President Clinton warned in his State of the Union address. Unfortunately, cigarettes are not the only thing kids are smoking these days, as drug use among teen-agers is on the rise. The recent rebirth of family values suggests that the solution to most problems can be found within the family, specifically, with parents. But when it comes to the drug problem, some parents are not much of a solution. Monitoring drug use among adolescents didn't really begin until 1975, which found that a little more than 47 percent of high-school seniors had used marijuana at least once. The percentage of high-school seniors using marijuana peaked around 1981 at 59 percent, and then declined to as low as 32.6 percent in 1992. Last year's high-school seniors who used marijuana jumped to more than 41 percent, while the number of those who had tried LSD rose from 9.4 percent in 1992 to nearly 12 percent. Another scary statistic is that more than one out of every five eighth graders reported using an illicit drug during the past year.

Kids seem to be experimenting with drugs earlier, and more of them are doing it. Their parents are telling them to just say no to drugs, but the problem is that a lot of parents today said yes to drugs back in the '60s.

Kids seem to be experimenting with drugs earlier, and more of them are doing it. Their parents are telling them to just say no to drugs, but the problem is that a lot of parents today said yes to drugs back in the '60s. The message this sends to children is confusing. This is yet another legacy the social transformations of the '60s and '70s have left us to deal with, and this is perhaps the most troubling.

Drugs were defended in the '60s as a liberating experience. One user in 1967 described the effect drugs had as "like seeing the world again through a child's eye." It seems to be poetic justice that the Woodstock generation is now concerned with their children's eyes. In a recent survey, 75 percent of parents with teen-age kids said they "would be upset if my child even tried marijuana." The same survey noted that 77 percent of the parents agreed they "should forbid their kids to use drugs at any time." This is a far cry from the generation which gave us quotes like "smoking grass makes people feel very warm and tender and loving and emotional. This is why, you know, they call it the herb of love."

The baby boomers — including its counterculture — is all grown up now, and it is their children who roam the halls of our schools. Many parents today are afraid to talk to their kids about drugs because they know they may have to answer for their past. How can a parent honestly say "I don't want you to do drugs" and also say "but I tried them in college" without confusing their children? What are their kids supposed to think?

Only 77 percent of teen-agers say their parents have talked to them about drugs, and teen-age drug use is on the rise. Some of the marijuana kids are smoking today is up to 30 times stronger than the "herb of love" their parents were smoking back in the '60s. It's not difficult to see why America is losing the war on drugs — even our president admits to trying marijuana. There are many contributing factors to drug abuse in this country, but we cannot ignore the impact the counterculture of the '60s has had on our current drug problem. Sadly enough, Generation X looks to have a similar legacy to pass on to our children, and truthfully, no end appears to be in sight.

READERS SAY: Does U.S. intervention in foreign drug trafficking have an impact on adolescent drug use?

"Although there is an impact made, a more significant impact would be made by concentrating on the demand side. With these drug dealers, when you take one down, another pops back up again."
John Conlon
UI sophomore

"No, I don't think so. It seems that the drugs are still available. If you want them, you can get them."
Kathy Betts
UI junior

"Not that intervention isn't important, but with the financial constraints of the U.S. right now, money might be better placed in education for adolescents."

Car bombs kill 17 in Algeria

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Two powerful car bombs killed 17 people and wounded 93 others Sunday as bloodshed deepened in this North African nation torn by an Islamic insurgency.

The government, reacting to the widening violence, clamped down by ordering Algerian newspapers to submit reports on terrorism to a government censor.

Seventeen people were killed and 52 injured when a car bomb exploded in the Belcourt quarter of the capital, Algiers, according to official sources.

The bomb exploded as a minibus was passing a heavily guarded building that houses Algerian newspapers Le Soir d'Algerie and L'Opinion and the offices of several independent journalists.

Islamic militants began intentionally targeting journalists as enemies of Islam in May 1993, and 58 have been killed, most recently an Algerian newspaper editor shot to death Saturday.

Militant Islamic group blasts Bahrain hotel

MANAMA, Bahrain — A bomb exploded in the lobby of a luxury seafarers hotel in Bahrain on Sunday, injuring at least four people. An Islamic organization claimed responsibility for the attack.

The blast followed weeks of anti-government unrest in the Persian Gulf island state, a financial hub in the region and host to a key U.S. Navy base.

A government source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a bomb exploded at 9 p.m. (1 p.m. EST) at the 15-story downtown Diplomat Hotel, which overlooks the Gulf.

Two security sources, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said at least four people were injured and that the bomb was placed in the lobby, between the reception desk and the elevators.

New Jersey trains collide, kill 3

SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — The engineer of a commuter train that slammed into an oncoming train, killing three people, may have been fatigued after working 14½ hours with only a 4½-hour sleep break, investigators said Saturday.

John DeCurtis, 59, was making an extra round-trip run Friday morning when his eastbound train sped past a track signal that was supposed to stop it before entering a Y-shaped junction.

His train sideswiped a westbound train already barreling through the junction. The impact killed DeCurtis, another engineer and one passenger, and injured 162 people.

Northwest rescue crews begin relief as waters recede

Martha Irvine
Associated Press

BIRKENFELD, Ore. — Stranded for days by bloated rivers and washed-out roads, rural Northwesters are finding their self-reliance tested by the region's worst flooding in decades.

As rivers receded ever so slowly Sunday, brigades of emergency workers fanned out to assist flood victims in cities and suburbs. But in the Northwest's backwoods corners, neighbor had to rely on neighbor.

The same raging waters that poured through thousands of homes last week also chewed up roads and pulled down utility lines, isolating some of the hardest-hit areas of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana.

The floods took seven lives — four in Oregon, two in Montana, one in Washington.

In the evergreen thumb of the Cascade Range that pokes into Oregon's northwestern corner, winding two-lane roads often hug the banks of mountain creeks and rivers. Highway 202, for example, crosses and recrosses the Nehalem River, usually a sparkling, boulder-dotted stream, now an ugly brown band ripping through canyons.

Throughout Clatsop and Columbia counties, churning streams leapt their channels, taking out roads and catching residents by surprise.

"It's a lot worse than we ever imagined," said Ron Youngberg of the St. Helens Rural Fire Department. "The Nehalem kicked their butts."

Now, for some returning evacuees, "there's nothing left to go back to," Youngberg said. "They're having a hard time coming back to reality."

On the Oregon coast, Tillamook County dairy farmer Steve Neahring lost at least 100 of his 175 Holstein and Jersey milkers. Some drowned; some had to be shot after getting chilled to the bone or breaking their legs in panicky struggles in flooded barns.

As Neahring maneuvered a front-end loader to stack muddy carcasses through the weekend, more than 20 friends and neighbors pitched in. A deli near the beach in Manzanita donated lunches; farm wives supplied food and thermoses of coffee.

20 PEOPLE TRAPPED

Blast fails to aid in tunnel rescue

Braven Smillie
Associated Press

FURUBIRA, Japan — Rescuers blasted the side of a mountain with dynamite Sunday in an attempt to reach some 20 people trapped in a collapsed highway tunnel, but the explosion failed to topple a huge boulder into the sea as they had hoped.

The giant slab of rock, about the size of a 20-story office building, had peeled off the mountain and crashed through the tunnel roof early Saturday, apparently crushing a bus carrying people to nearby Sapporo for an annual snow festival.

Hopes were fading late Sunday, about 36 hours after the accident, that anyone would be found alive. In addition to the bus, officials believe one car was trapped under the collapsed tunnel, about 550 miles north of Tokyo on Japan's northern island of Hokkaido.

Rescuers had reached as far as the front bumper of the mangled bus early Sunday, but there were no signs of life. Officials believe 19 people were on board, including the driver, and that one person was in the car.

In an attempt to clear away the bulk of the large oblong boulder, officials planted 550 pounds of dynamite in 21 places on the boulder, hoping that the topmost part of the slab would topple into the sea.

The boulder is about 70 yards tall and 40 yards wide, and officials believe it weighs about 50,000 tons.

But the blasts only crumpled the lower part of the rock into dust, leaving the rest of the boulder slightly lower but still upright. The rock appeared to be directly on top of the bus.

It was unclear what efforts would be tried next after the failure of the blast to dislodge the boulder.

Passengers on the bus included a group of teens on their way to a snow festival in nearby Sapporo that draws thousands of tourists annually.

First computer turns 50 years old this week

Michael Raphael
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — It had no monitor, could remember only 10 numbers at a time, and filled a room with 50 tons of electricity-sucking gear.

But it could crunch numbers with what seemed like blinding speed.

Fifty years ago this week, the Electronic Numerical Integrator and Computer was demonstrated to the world for the first time at the University of Pennsylvania.

ENIAC counted to 5,000 in one-fifth of a second, shocking the world out of the mechanical age and onto the first step of the world of lightning-quick digital processing.

ENIAC's collection of 8-foot-high gray cabinets made up the first general-purpose, large-scale, electronic computer. Until then, "computers" were people using mechanical calculators who needed 12 hours to do what ENIAC did in half a minute. Other electronic machines had been narrower in purpose.

"Without it, we wouldn't have the space program, we wouldn't have modern airplanes," said Michael Williams, editor in chief of the Annals of the History of Computing. "Pilots would still be trying to fly by looking outside the window occasionally."

ENIAC, most of which is on display at the Smithsonian, long ago outgrew its usefulness as a number cruncher — a $40 calculator has more computing power.

But it has not lost its relevance.

The university planned an entire year of events to honor ENIAC's birthday, including turning on part of the original machine. Vice President Gore will throw a switch Wednesday, the day of the anniversary, and ENIAC will count from 46 to 96.

The Postal Service will unveil a stamp commemorating "The Birth of Computing." And Garry Kasparov, the World Chess Federation champion, this week is playing against IBM's "Deep Blue" computer.

The original assemblage of wires, vacuum tubes, resistors and switches was constructed in about a year and a half at the university's Moore School of Electrical Engineering.

When it was fully operational, ENIAC filled up a 30-by-50-foot room. Every second it was on, it used enough electricity — 174 kilowatts — to power a typical Philadelphia home for a 1-2 weeks.

Costing more than $486,000, ENIAC might never be attempted were it not for World War II.

"A lot of people said we were dreaming," said Herman Goldstine, who served as liaison between the Army and ENIAC team. "The electronics people said there were too many vacuum tubes and it would never run. The mathematics people said there were no problems complex enough that computers were needed."

The Army provided both the complex problems and the money.

John Mauchly, one of two masterminds behind ENIAC, knew the Army was having a terrible time working out the complicated firing tables needed to help gun crews aim the new artillery being used against German forces.

Each firing table had to list numbers for hundreds of potential trajectories. Calculating a single trajectory could take 40 hours using a mechanical desk-top calculator, and 30 minutes using a sophisticated machine called a differential analyzer.

Mauchly, then 32, bravely told Army officials his machine could do the job in a matter of minutes.

ENIAC was completed just as the war was ending, too late for those artillery tables.

However, it fulfilled another military purpose. During test runs in 1945 it did millions of calculations on thermonuclear chain reactions, predicting the destruction that could be caused by the hydrogen bomb.

Two critical concepts for future computing evolved out of ENIAC. One was the idea of a "stored program" and the other a programming tool known as the "if statement."

Today's personal computers can store numerous programs. But for ENIAC, engineers had to drag dancers and 600 volunteers who gave 30 hours of their lives this weekend for children with cancer.

Dancer pledges, corporate donations and student solicitations allowed Dance Marathon participants to eclipse last year's total of $31,000.

"People were really anxious to give," UI freshman Kelli Olthoff said. "The response was overwhelming."

Olthoff said her participation in Dance Marathon resulted from her personal experience with the cause.

"I had cancer and I've been coming to the UI hospitals since I was a baby. This is kind of a way to pay back the hospital for giving me my life," she said.

Performances, games, speeches and group dances were all used to sustain morale during the marathon, which lasted from 5 p.m. Friday to 11 p.m. Saturday.

Iowa basketball player Jess Setles also helped increase morale with an appearance Friday night.

"It's an honor to be here — what a great event," he said. "A lot of times athletes get all the attention, but it's things like this that make a difference in people's lives. You guys are the real heroes here tonight."

In the early hours of the event, UI junior Matt Leddin said he anticipated that even though the next 30 hours would be difficult, he would persevere.

"I've never done anything like this before, but I'm hoping I can make it," he said. "I'm going to get involved in the activities for the first six hours, then I'm going to look for a couch, but I don't think I'm going to have any luck."

Twenty-five hours later, Leddin was suffering from blisters and exhaustion. But he said his sponsor organization, OSCAR from Currier and Stanley residence halls, and his thoughts about his favorite bar stool at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St., were keeping him going.

UI sophomore Scott Felgenhauer said he preferred the 5 p.m. starting time this year to the 10 a.m. kick off in 1995.

"This year, the morale is a lot higher," he said. "We kept it up well throughout the night, and once the sun came up everyone was lifted a bit."

UI senior Beth Joiner, director of dancer recruitment and rules and regulations, said about 35 people had to drop out of the dance, mostly due to exhaustion.

Upon preparation for Dance Marathon, participating organizations were assigned 31 families to sponsor.

"It gives it a more personal feel," Dance Marathon Public Relations Director and UI senior Ellen Petasnick said. "It is someone specific they're dancing for."

The families were provided with an all-expense-paid weekend at the Iowa House so they could participate, as well.

"Our kids feel just as much involved as the dancers," said Julie Even, the mother of 5-year-old Casey, who has a brain tumor. "All the families that participate in this are ones who have a positive outlook."

After 29 hours of shared exhaustion and camaraderie, Dance Marathon participants spent the last hour quietly reflecting upon the triumphs of their experience.

"It's going to be a memory I'll have forever," UI freshman Kristy Motz said. "Just look at the kids, look at the cause; that says it all."

Several families chose to personally thank participants in the last hour.

"Your generation is as good as any generation out there and we thank you for it," parent Ron Damewood said.

Opportunity at Iowa is a scholarship, recruitment and retention program which targets minorities.

"We must make the university a place where minorities can feel comfortable, prosper and get their degrees," Coulter said. "To do this, minorities must identify with other people in the university."

Becker said Coulter was picked for the position because he has been an active member of Opportunity at Iowa, working on retention and recruitment of Native Americans and Alaskans. Coulter is a reason why the UI has increased its Native American student population, Becker said.

"He has been a tremendous recruiter," Becker said. "As a result of his work, the university has become known for its Native American students."

As a member of a federally recognized tribe of the Pottawattomi Indians in Oklahoma, Coulter said he has had personal experience with minority groups.

Coulter said he has kept contacts with his Indian community, which now has more than 20,000 members across the nation. He also has worked for seven years at a summer program sponsored by the UI provost office, where he prepared Native American and Alaskan high-school students for college.

Meredith Alexander, special project coordinator for Opportunity at Iowa, said Coulter is committed to diversity.

"He believes very passionately in the principles of historically under-represented groups," she said. "The Native American population has increased here with him going out there and being a face for Native Americans who come to associate him with the university."

One of Opportunity at Iowa's biggest challenges, Coulter said, is to develop the credibility Barcelo has built over the years with under-represented groups.

"Rusty has excellent relationships and communication with all minority communities, especially those from her Latino heritage," Coulter said. "You can never replace someone like her, but what you can do is do the best to maintain these relationships. That's the key to bringing diversity to this campus."

Another challenge will be increasing retention rates. While the UI has increased minority graduation rates and enrollment over the past 10 years, there hasn't been as much success in minority retention and increasing the percentage of minority faculty members during this time, Becker said.

Barcelo's resignation is an opportunity to review the operations of Opportunity at Iowa, Becker said, in order to evaluate what areas of diversity need to be improved and maintained.

Coulter is also a professor in the UI American Indian and Native Studies Program, chairperson of the UI neuroscience graduate program and former department head of the anatomy department.

Former Hawkeye earns spot on Olympic team

Former Hawkeye all-American Jenny Spangler earned a spot on the 1996 United States Olympic Team with a surprising victory at the U.S. Olympic Women's Marathon Trials in Columbia, S.C., Saturday.

Spangler, 32, pulled away from a pack of world class runners at mile 16 and held on to capture a 12-second victory over Linda Sommers in a personal-best time of two hours, 29 minutes and 54 seconds.

With only the 61st fastest qualifying time, Spangler was far from being the odds-on-favorite, but said she knew it was time to break away when she saw the competition starting to labor around the 14th mile.

"It just felt easier and easier as I went along and it was like 'When is someone going to pick it up,'" she said.

Two miles later Spangler was in front, much to her surprise.

"I got scared," she said. "I was thinking 'What are you doing out here in first?'"

Spangler recorded her previous best time of 2:33:52 at age 19. She temporarily retired from running in 1988 after a poor showing at the Olympic Trials. Her return to the sport in 1994 went relatively unnoticed and a stress fracture in the summer of 1995 seemed to all but eliminate her chances of making the Olympic team.

However, Spangler credited her coaches — UI women's track and cross country coach Jerry Hassard and 1968 Puerto Rican Olympic runner Willie Rios, with keeping her on target.

"It feels pretty incredible," she said.

"I've got a lot of good support from my coaches, family, and friends."

Hawkeyes turn up the volume

Iowa 'D' smothers Hoosiers

David Schwartz
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Hawkeyes stepped up their unstable defense Sunday and walloped Indiana by the biggest margin in the series since Jimmy Carter was president.

Iowa smothered the Hoosiers into 18 turnovers and collected 10 steals to Indiana's three as the Hawkeyes moved to 6-5 in Big Ten Conference play with a 76-50 trouncing of the Hoosiers.

The last time Iowa dominated Indiana by such a margin was 1979, when the Hawkeyes rolled to a 90-61 victory.

"We're not playing well or shooting well," Indiana coach Bobby Knight said. "I thought (the Hawkeyes) were playing better in the first half, but they weren't shooting any better."

Knight said his team was still in contention at halftime (Iowa led 31-25), but Indiana's inability to execute doomed the Hoosiers in the second half.

"We're just six down at the half and we shot with even less accuracy at the start of the second half than we did in the first half," Knight said. "Our inside people did not play very well, we got outrebounded badly. We didn't see things well inside as the second half progressed."

"It was a game where the more we got into it, the more thoroughly we were beaten."

The primary focus of Iowa's swarming defense was Indiana forward Brian Evans, the Big Ten's leading scorer. The Hawkeyes used several defenders, spearheaded by sophomore Ryan Bowen, to combat the Hoosier senior.

Evans finished with 13 points, most of them junk hoops after Iowa had put the game well out of reach. Davis deemed his squad's neutralization of Evans exceptional.

"Evans can beat you all by himself," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "And if you foul him, he's an exceptional free throw shooter. The backcourt primarily took care of him. They made him work. I'm sure he's got to be pretty tired."

Seniors Kenyon Murray and Mon'ter Glasper, along with Bowen, frustrated the Indiana star by badgering him the

Murray steps up in new role

Iowa senior Kenyon Murray moved to the bench last week — then promptly busted loose for what could be the best week of his career.

Murray followed up an 8-for-8 shooting performance at Northwestern Wednesday with an outstanding line Sunday against Indiana: 16 points (7-of-10 shooting), eight rebounds, six assists, four steals and no turnovers.

"I thought I played almost a perfect game today. I didn't have any turnovers, which has been one of my faults this year," Murray said. "I'm just a lot more focused and I'm having fun. I think when you make the game fun for yourself, things open up and everything goes well for you."

One of the reasons Murray may be having more fun is his decision to come off the bench. He didn't start Wednesday because he missed a practice Monday, but suggested to Iowa coach Tom Davis that he would like to see how it felt again Sunday.

Murray said he feels more relaxed these days.

"It's just a comfort zone I'm in right now. I don't think anybody can stop me when I drive to the basket and when Andre (Woodridge) gets me the ball on the break, those easy shots build your confidence," Murray said.

The move to the bench isn't solely to relax Murray, though. It's a strategic move as well.

"It also gives me an opportunity to see what the other team is doing, so I can come in and be a factor on defense," Murray said. "I think four steals is probably the highest I've had all season."

Murray, who also had four steals against Ohio, convincingly broke a tie with Roy Marble Sunday to become Iowa's all-time steal leader. Murray now has 187 steals with the Hawkeyes.

"It's great," Murray said of the record. "I guess I'll be able to enjoy it a lot more once the season is over, but I'm just so glad I played so well on defense today."

Murray's teammates have also noticed a difference in his game recently. Junior Jess Settles said Mur-

Iowa suffers first Big Ten loss

The No. 23-ranked Purdue women's basketball team became the first Big Ten Conference team to get the better of No. 5 Iowa Sunday with a 62-42 victory in West Lafayette.

The Boilermakers held Iowa to a season-low 30 percent from the field on 18-of-61 shooting, including 1-of-15 from three-point range for 6.7 percent.

"I think their (Purdue's) back is to the wall and they played extremely aggressive and got it done," explained Iowa coach Angie Lee. "They were playing at home and we ran into a tough crowd today."

The home cooking was just what Purdue needed as it pressured Iowa into 20 turnovers, while committing just seven.

"They were ready for our press and I thought we would be ready for their press, but we weren't," Lee said. "Their press really intimidated us and we became shy and passive."

The Boilermakers were led by Stacey Lovelace who scored 17 and Tonya Kirk who added 16. Iowa's top scorer was Tanglela Smith with 16.

Things turned out differently Friday night for Iowa though, as they defeated Michigan State 71-65. The Hawkeyes controlled the game, despite the fact that the Spartans controlled the glass against Iowa, the top rebounding team in the Big Ten.

Iowa took a 20-6 lead midway through the first half, but Michigan State used a 13-4 run to close to 24-19 and the Hawks went into the locker room ahead 34-23 at halftime. The Spartans again charged back, using a 12-2 run early in the second half to pull the game into a 42-42 tie. The score

SAN ANTONIO — Back in the All-Star Game for the first time since 1993, Michael Jordan simply did the usual — make sure his side didn't lose.

Jordan had 20 points in just 22 minutes, didn't play the fourth quarter and helped the Eastern Conference beat the Western Conference 129-118 Sunday.

Leading up to the game, Jordan had let a few hints drop that he was out to avenge the Eastern Conference's 27-point loss last season. His 10 third-quarter points were enough to give him the Most Valuable Player award for the second time in his career.

"This weekend turned out to be a great weekend and I had a good time," Jordan said over the boos of

Upsets overshadow team wins

Shannon Stevens
 The Daily Iowan

When two of the nation's No. 1 wrestlers fall in the same dual match, they'd better not be members of the Iowa wrestling team.

Rare losses by Hawkeye all-Americans Mike Mena and Mark Ironside overshadowed Iowa's 22-12 victory over Arizona State in Tempe, Ariz., Sunday.

Mena (18-2) fell to Arizona State's Danny Felix in a low-scoring affair at 118 pounds. With only nine seconds remaining and the score tied at two apiece, Felix erupted to record the match's only takedown and a 4-2 victory.

A frustrated Mena then threw his headgear as the Hawkeyes (16-0) fell behind three to negative one in the team scoring with Mena's antics costing his team a point.

"(Mena) goes out and wrestles this one particular guy at a slow pace and just kind of hangs out. He does it every time and no matter what we tell him he keeps on doing it. He thinks he knows more than me and he does not know more than me and I'm tired of it."

Dan Gable, Iowa wrestling coach on Mike Mena

The second upset of the day was scored by Sun Devil all-American Steve St. John (9-3), who handed Mark Ironside (25-1) his first loss of the season at 134 pounds. St.

John took a 3-2 advantage with a takedown midway through the final period and repelled Ironside's late offensive shots to capture a 3-2 win.

Iowa coach Dan Gable was less than pleased by the defeats, especially with Mena's.

"If you want to be a national champion, you cannot let the pace of a match dictate who's going to win," Gable said in a radio interview with KKIC-AM (800). "(Mena) goes out and wrestles this one particular guy at a slow pace and just kind of hangs out. He does it every time and no matter what we tell him he keeps on doing it. He thinks he knows more than me and he does not know more than me and I'm tired of it."

fans, unhappy that he didn't play in the final period.

In the third, however, Jordan put on the kind of show expected of him, helping the East turn a 61-58 halftime lead into a double-digit blowout. His performance, however brief, was the only bright spot in an All-Star Game with more air balls and turnovers than stellar play.

But just as Jordan reinvented the league by his return from retirement last March, he saved this game from mediocrity.

There he was driving through the lane, picking up a perfect bounce pass from Anfernee Hardaway and soaring in for a dunk.

instant he crossed halfcourt.

"That's a hell of a defensive team right there," Iowa guard Andre Woolridge said. "If I was on the other team I would hate to see those three guys out there on the court at the same time."

Murray led the Hawkeyes with 16 points to go along with eight rebounds, six assists and four steals. Senior Russ Millard added 15 points and Woolridge 14, but Woolridge shot just 2-of-12 from the field while connecting on 10-of-12 free throws.

Iowa's shooting percentage of 38.2 percent was its worst of the Big Ten season, but solid defense and a 49-33 rebounding advantage kept the Hawkeyes in charge.

"That's unbelievable," forward Jess Settles said. "We had some great hustle out there, did some great things and yet we will be the first to tell you there's a lot we need to improve on."

"It's fun to say you get to improve after a win."

MEN'S TENNIS

Hawks fall twice in conference

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

If the Hawkeyes proved anything this weekend, it proved they can play with the big boys.

The Iowa men's tennis team was edged by a powerful Minnesota team on Saturday, 4-3. Sunday, Purdue took care of the Hawkeyes 5-2.

Against Purdue, the Hawkeyes faltered in the bottom of its lineup and in doubles.

The lone singles wins for Iowa came from seniors Tom Derouin and Marcus Ekstrand.

Derouin used a strong serve to come away with his first singles win of the year, 6-3, 6-2 over Kris James.

"I hadn't won in singles in almost a year, so it was real big for me," Derouin said.

Derouin said he used a more aggressive approach against Purdue.

"I was trying to hit a lot of my first serves in," Derouin said. "I was also trying to step into my return more because (James) had a pretty big serve."

Ekstrand also took care of business in two sets. He bounced back from a disappointing loss on Saturday and beat Derek Myers, 6-4, 6-2.

"I tried to put a lot of pressure on him," Ekstrand said. "He's got a big serve, but I have a very good return."

In doubles, Ekstrand and Ryan Johnstone were the sole winners for Iowa.

Houghton said the Hawkeyes are playing well, but have yet to achieve the level of consistency they need.

"We're a good team, but we've learned that everybody has to play well every match for us to win," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said.

Saturday, Iowa had seven match points but the Gophers held on for the victory.

Ekstrand had a chance to give the Hawkeyes the win but was staved off seven times by Tom Chicoine before falling, 6-7, 7-6, 7-5.

"I don't think it was a case of Marcus losing the match as much as it was (Chicoine) doing a great job and winning the match," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said.

Senior Mattias Jonsson performed admirably and defeated Erik Donley 6-3, 2-6, 7-6.

Junior Damir Seforovic defeated Martin Kristofferson, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 and Freshman Ulf Jentler won his first singles match of the season over John Cheregi, 7-6, 6-2.

In addition to Ekstrand's loss, the Hawkeyes had several other chances to win the matches. Iowa had leads in both the number one and two doubles matches, but couldn't hold on.

Gabler and Cheregi, arguably the best doubles team in the conference, defeated Derouin and Jonsson 9-7. Chicoine and Kristofferson topped Ekstrand and Johnstone 9-7.

"This match was definitely a heartbreaker," Houghton said. "The good news is that we played Minnesota tough, but the bad news is that we didn't put them away."

Iowa has next weekend off and will resume competition Feb. 23-24 against Marquette and Indiana State in Milwaukee.

Hawks fare well against Iowa State

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

While Hawkeye alum Jenny Spangler was making history in South Carolina, the Iowa women's track team was turning heads in Ames at the Iowa State Invitational.

In Ames, the Hawkeyes continued to look solid in the Iowa State Invitational. The meet wasn't scored, but it was another fine performance for an Iowa team coming off a first-place finish at last week's Iowa Invitational.

The distance medley relay team of Briana Benning, Raquayya Raheem, Ann Paré and Becky Coleman grabbed a second-place finish with a time of 11:46.58. Benning was also solid in the 800-meter run, finishing third and setting a new personal best with a time of 2:10.40. Paré also had a personal best in the mile run, finishing at 5:00.73.

Meg Maurer led the Hawkeyes in the field events. Maurer placed third in the shot-put with a distance of 46 feet, four and one-quarter inches. Raheem also made noise in the field events, taking fifth in the long jump with a distance of 17 feet, 11 and one-quarter inches.

At the Butler Invitational in Indianapolis, Hawkeye sprinters Ellen Grant and Wynsome Cole were competing to qualify for nationals. In the 400-meter dash, Cole finished fifth with a time of 56.59 seconds, while Grant came in seventh.

Hassard said he was very pleased with the weekend as a whole.

"It's still fairly early in the year and we've accomplished a lot. I just hope we can continue to be this strong each time out," Hassard said.

In Columbia, South Carolina, the 32-year-old Spangler, a former Iowa all-American in cross country and track, qualified for the Olympic team, winning the marathon in course record time. Spangler shocked the field of world class runners, winning in 2 hours, 29 minutes, 54 seconds. Iowa track coach Jerry Hassard, who helped Spangler train last year, said he was very proud of the Hawkeye alum.

"I'm very happy for Jenny," Hassard said. "I know how hard she has worked and to know that I was a part of it makes it even more special for me."

Iowa makes quick work of Minnesota

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

There was no doubt about it this time.

After going neck-in-neck with Minnesota last year, the Iowa men's gymnastics team put to rest who was the better team, defeating the Gophers in Minneapolis Saturday 225.45-219.25.

The Hawkeyes won five of the seven events and in some cases had the top three finishes. Iowa coach Tom Dunn said it was a big win for his team.

"We had a very solid weekend," Dunn said. "It is good to see that we can dominate a meet, especially in the Big Ten."

All-American Jay Thornton returned to dual meet action for the first time since a shoulder injury sidelined him in the preseason. Thornton didn't waste any time in making an impression on the Gophers, winning the all-around, vault, and parallel bars to pace Iowa. Junior Tyler Vogt and senior Hugh Lau claimed the other two first place finishes for the Hawkeyes. Vogt won on the Horizontal bars with a 9.65 while capturing first place in the pommel horse by scoring a 9.55.

Dunn said he was glad that Thornton returned when he did.

"Jay was real strong for us today. But then again everybody was. When the top two or three finishers are from your team, it shows the strength up and down the whole squad," Dunn said.

Other strong performers for the Hawkeyes included Aaron Cotter and Mike Townsend. Cotter placed third in the vault and the all-around, tied for third place on the horizontals and came in second in the pommel horse. Townsend had a strong showing in the floor exercise, placing third with a 9.40.

Dunn said this meet should show the rest of the Big Ten who is top dog.

"Right now it's us and Ohio State," Dunn said. "If we continue to perform like we did this weekend, there's no telling how far we could go."

Infante No. 1 choice to fill Colts opening

Hank Lowenkron
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Lindy Infante is the Colts' first choice for head coach and will probably be named to the position this week, an Indianapolis television station reported Sunday.

"Lindy is the only guy that I've talked to and the only guy that I intend to talk to at this time," Colts' director of football operations Bill Tobin told WTHR-TV.

Infante told the Associated Press he met with Tobin both Saturday and Sunday to discuss the vacancy created last week when team officials decided not to retain Ted Marchibroda.

After leading the Colts to the AFC championship game in his fourth season as coach, Marchibroda was let go Friday after he refused a one-year contract extension.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

No. 12 Iowa falls up north

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

Things were not kind for the Hawkeyes in Spartan land.

The 12th-ranked Iowa women's gymnastics team finished fourth at Michigan State on Sunday. Iowa, now 5-5, had a team score of 190.725.

Michigan State, ranked ninth, was victorious with a score of 193.50. 19th ranked Towson State finished second with a 191.750 while 20th ranked Boise State scored a 191.000.

The Hawkeyes were coming off a big victory last weekend but were unable to come through with a repeat performance. Iowa's downfall came in the vault (46.950) and the floor exercise (47.150).

Iowa was led by senior Kim Baker who finished first in the vault (9.800), tied for second on the balance beam (9.800) and placed fifth in the all-around (38.500).

Freshman Lori Whitner finished fifth on the beam (9.725) and sixth in the all-around (38.350).

Michigan State was sparked by Carolyn Hecht who dazzled a crowd of nearly 600. She finished first in the all-around (39.000), second in the floor exercise (9.825), first on the beam (9.825) and first on the uneven bars (9.900).

Erin Shanley led Towson State with a third place finish in the all-around (38.675). She also finished second on the bars (9.875) and third in the floor exercise (9.725).

February 17 the Hawkeyes will take on Illinois in a co-ed meet at the Fieldhouse.

MEN'S TRACK

Hawks continue to improve

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track and field team continued to show signs of progress in competition at the Iowa State Open this weekend.

"We're on the way in the right direction," head coach Ted Wheeler said. "Things are developing that we have hoped would come along."

Iowa's 4x400 relay team of Bashir Yamini, Ed Rozell, Chris Davis and Monte Raymond provisionally qualified for the NCAA Indoor Meet with a time of 3:10.05.

Raymond also provisionally qualified in the 400 meter dash with his time of 47.36 seconds.

A total of six Hawkeyes set or tied season-best times, including Joe Estes in the 55-meter dash (6.48), Monte Raymond in the 200-meter dash (21.81), Dave Neody in the 800 (1:54.14), Chad Fevly in the mile (4:12.30), Chad Switwala in the 3,000 (8:34.33) and Steve English in the shot-put (50' 8.25").

Oscar nominations too tough to call

John Horn
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — For the past two years, the Academy Awards lacked suspense. "Forrest Gump" and "Schindler's List" both dominated — as expected. This year, it's different. On the eve of Oscar nominations, almost every category is too tough to pick. And the Golden Globes, typically Oscar indicators, only add to the uncertainty since there was only one multiple film-award winner.

The only three movies widely seen as sure bets to make the best picture nomination list when they are announced in a pre-dawn ceremony Tuesday are "Apollo 13," "Leaving Las Vegas" and "Sense and Sensibility," which won two Golden Globes.

There's no telling how the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' 5,043 voters will go regarding other contenders, which include "Babe," "Nixon," "The Bridges of Madison County," "Braveheart" and "Dead Man Walking."

Nicolas Cage is a strong favorite to win best actor for "Leaving Las Vegas." He won the Golden Globe for it, along with every major critics' award. Competition comes from Anthony Hopkins in "Nixon" and Sean Penn in "Dead Man Walking."

"Leaving Las Vegas" co-star Elisabeth Shue, also honored by critics but denied a Golden Globe award, is expected to be nominated as best actress along with Susan Sarandon from "Dead Man Walking," Joan Allen of "Nixon," Meryl Streep from "The Bridges of Madison County" and Emma Thompson from "Sense and Sensibility."

As always, some of the year's most popular films at the box office may be blanked in every major category. For all the tickets sold, "Batman Forever," "Die Hard With a Vengeance" and "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls" aren't likely to get any top nominations.

For Oscar favorites, plans are in full swing to boost their presence in theaters nationwide to capitalize on the momentum.

"Leaving Las Vegas" increased its theater run by nearly 1,000 locations Friday — putting it in a surprisingly large run of 1,310 locations.

"Braveheart" is set to be re-released this week in about 500 theaters, and about 800 theaters have reintroduced "The Bridges of Madison County" last weekend. "Sense and Sensibility" will be playing in nearly 1000 theaters, a huge number for a sophisticated British period piece.

The Italian romance "Il Postino" isn't eligible for best foreign-language film since it debuted in Italy in 1994 but wasn't submitted for that year. Yet, because it opened in the United States in 1995, it is eligible in this year's best picture and other domestic categories.

Miramax, the distributor of "Il Postino," currently is showing the film in about 100 North American theaters. If the movie is nominated for best picture, Miramax plans to add an additional 150 theaters by Friday.

The Oscars will be awarded March 25.

Kronos goes deeper with multi-media opera

Aaron Sizemore
The Daily Iowan

For an hour, members of the Kronos Quartet scampered around Hancher Auditorium's stage in their stocking feet, cracking little polished rocks together, ruffling giant strips of crepe paper, yelping, chirping and screaming lines of Shakespeare.

The Kronos Quartet offered a performance art piece, "Ghost Opera," composed by Tan Dun, at Hancher Auditorium Saturday night.

caressed, slapped, kneaded and pummeled the water. He seemed fascinated.

"Ghost Opera" was written for string quartet, pipa, water, stone, paper and metal. Composer Dun describes his piece as a reflection on human spirituality which is too often buried in the bombardment of urban culture and the rapid advances of technology.

"We are such stuff as dreams are made on, and our little life is rounded with a sleep," Harrington shouted as he dragged his violin bow across something which looked like a metal crock-pot lid. He dipped the crock-pot lid into the water. "Yao! Yao!", he yelled.

All this screaming, screeching, splashing and banging was part of a piece of multi-media performance art. According to the composer, it was meant to tie the now and the past together with the strings of forever. Get it? You see, the Kronos Quartet and the Chinese pipa are the now, and Shakespeare and Bach are the past, and rocks and water, paper and metal are the forever. Now do you get it? No?

Well, don't be too hard on yourself. It's not exactly an easy concept. It took me an entire evening of meditative, soul-searching thought to put it all together. It took me that long to realize that when Harrington was up there splashing around in the water, pulling it up into plumes and watching it fall back into itself, he wasn't just playing and having self-indulgent fun. He was being profound.
