DEB MURREN — Republicans of low class the final voting matchups, Republican presidential candidate Dole claimed an impressive victory over Buchanan in the Iowa caucuses this year, which will be his big political victory in the nation.

The race was neck-and-neck Monday night, with Buchanan leading nationwide among the top-three finishers.

“There is something about Alexander that doesn’t reach for politics like the rest of the field,” said Dan Davis, a supporter of Steve Forbes.

“I have this state with a heart full of love,” said Pat Buchanan.

Sen. Bob Dole was called a sho-in to grab the No. 2 slot and Lamar Alexander finished with 23 percent of the vote. Pat Buchanan was considered the clear front-runner, carrying 26 percent of the state.

“Dole’s got a real light on this hand,” Alexander, who does not have a good showing in New Hampshire, told.

“Thank you, Iowa, on to New Hampshire — let the future begin.”

USIG works to maintain student groups

Metro & Iowa

Newser

The Daily Iowan.

Though alternatives to defending U.S. expression programs were discussed at a University of Iowa freshman assembly Tuesday, USIG President Dennis Johnson said the groups are quickly running out of options.

"We need to act - and let it be a big party," Johnson said. "We're really scared about how this new law will affect us."

Class III organizations will not be allowed to allocate funding funds for the 1995-96 fiscal year in response to a recent Supreme Court decision - Bauscherg v. University of Virginia - in which the court ruled that the university was within its rights to shut down the group.

Funding cuts will eliminate all group-specific allocations, such as grants and seed budgets, but will provide, as a reward, a small amount of money to each student organization to conduct business and programming.

Class III representatives described getting a position within a university organization as their only opportunity to be involved at all.

"We need to be relevant to our offices," USIG members community associating the University of Iowa, said, "and the student is very important, too."

For her first day as a reporter at a Democratic caucus, sophomore Allison Miller said she was nervous and didn’t know what to expect. But as she traveled to the State Assembly Hall in Des Moines to attend Monday night’s caucuses, Miller was surrounded by supporters.

“I clearly made mistakes that I will learn from,” she said. “But I had more people than I expected.”

Miller is one of many students who attended Monday night’s caucuses. Polling showed that, among the 308 students who participated in the caucuses, Buchanan was the front-runner. Supporters of Buchanan said his appearance in Iowa City is one of the reasons why he is leading in the polls.

Miller said Clinton’s campaign has already started to work on the next set of caucuses and that she is planning to attend the next one.

“I really believe in the issue of education and I think being a first-time voter is important for students to be heard,” she said. “This doesn’t end.”

Dole victories in Iowa; Buchanan gains ground

Iowa is a swing state, and both candidates have been working hard to win the state that squashed Dole’s 1996 presidential campaign. Iowa Republicans gathering to vote on presidential candidates this week are not the only ones facing an important election. People in Peru, Iowa, and other small towns in the state are also preparing to vote on local issues.

The town of Peru, with a population of about 1,000, is holding a special election to fill a vacancy on the city council. The election is scheduled for Feb. 12.

"It's an important issue for us," said入りa city council member. "We need to have representation from the community."

Serb officers taken to face war crimes prosecutors

SARAJEVO, Bosnia - Two military officers were being moved from a prison in central Sarajevo, and under heavy security, were driven to a stadium to enter the court to face war crimes prosecution.

But the officers had expected to be released from custody, which upset some of their colleagues.

Serb officials have said there is enough information to warrant holding them for investigation, but they have not been charged. Still, the two officers were treated as suspects, preventing them from cut off from their families.

The NATO-led international forces in the Bosnian government had ordered the two officers to face trial for crimes they said were committed last week.

The U.S. envoy, Richard Holbrooke, traveled to the region over the weekend and was listened to the anonymous charges from the Bosnian government on the attempt to define the situation.

The verdict, which has only one second, is expected in custody, restored the spirit of the Bosnian Serbs.

But the U.S.-led and NATO-led forces were driven to a stadium to hear the Verdict.

The helicopter took them to the Sarajevo airport, where they got aboard a Croatian C-130 transport plane, which left for Zagreb, where Holbrooke was to be in a meeting with the Bosnian government.

Djukanovic and Krsmanovic were Representatives from the Bosnian government. The case was brought to court on the basis of an arrest warrant.

The Serbian army spokesman, who was named by NATO-led forces, said they would not be charged.

Four other prisoners held by the Serbs were facing war crimes charges.

The two men were removed from a prison on suspicion of war crimes and are now being moved from a prison in a region where the Serbs retaliated last week for the arrest of two officers.

The announcement was made that the officers would be released, and that they would not be charged.

GUANAJI, Guinea — When the president of this downtown nation addressed residents Friday, the result was: what one official described as a couple hundred people who stayed for a few minutes, then left.

Rather than finish the job, the coup leaders curtailed President Lansana Conte's power, and instead installed a military junta which promised to hold elections in 18 months.

President Conte, who was underpaid — base pay for his people preferred "freedom in officers," said Conte's failure to implement reform in the 8,500-man army is about "the Palace." He accused of neglecting their needs and the parliamentary vote of no confidence on March 9.

In a bid for a strong performance overall, Dole joined Pat Buchanan on the Donahue Show yesterday where he said he would not campaign in Iowa for the next two weeks.

Although many Dole supporters were disappointed, it was reported that Dole's performance had been strong and that he would be represented in Iowa on the eve of the Caucuses.

"The electorate that we're targeting today is the same electorate that we have been targeting throughout the campaign," Dole said.

Iowa and Michigan collide in Ann Arbor

When Michigan hosts No. 19 Iowa tonight, the Wolverines will be facing a completely different team than the Hawkeyes they met in the Big Ten opener earlier this month. The change comes from the top as Hawkeye head coach larry Williams and his Michigan counterpart, John Beilein, have both completed major overhauls this season.

Some people might say that Iowa State's Fred Hoiberg is the most successful coach other than Williams, but he does not have the same kind of personnel as Williams and Beilein do. Iowa State has had some key injuries this season and they have been able to adapt to those situations.

Iowa's James Jones is a beast on the court, and he is a huge part of the Hawkeye success. With Jones on the court, the Hawkeyes are much more of a force than they were last season.

CRITICS HAVE IT IN THEIR CONTROL

Go to that slogan. You’re in it for the right reasons.

You’re going to see the words “Fill Carver” because The Daily Iowan wants to make sure that every reader knows how important it is to support Iowa’s athletics programs.

Fill Carver.

And it would be a shame if you didn’t.

* For a full-Carver experience for Friday night’s Iowa women’s basketball game against Penn State, try filling the Carver field with 10,000 fans.

* For a student-Carver experience for Saturday’s men’s game, try filling the Carver field with 10,000 fans.

* For a Carver-Citrus Bowl experience for the basketball tournament in Orlando, try filling the Carver field with 10,000 fans.

But, for the most part, it would be a shame if you didn’t. it’s not a good deal for a team that has repeatedly exceeded expectations, one of the few teams in the nation that has consistently filled the Carver field to near capacity. A team that needs all the support it can get.

Iowa’s women’s basketball team has enjoyed a lot of success in recent years, including a trip to the Elite Eight in the NCAA tournament. But the team has also faced some challenges, including injuries to key players and a lack of depth in the lineup. But with the support of the fans, the Hawkeyes have been able to overcome these challenges and climb back up the ranks.

The Hawkeyes have a strong team this year, and they are looking forward to playing in front of a packed house. With the support of the fans, they are sure to have a great season.

The Danger of Immersing Yourself in a Kind of Disciplined, Methodical Practice Routine and Becoming Intoxicated.

By Joshua Redman, tenor saxophonist

I'm not the only one who's missed the point. This is a wave of young technical virtuosos. But the most exhilarating part is to break through tempos. I'm not a mastermind of music, but I'm a master of experience. During a New York gig, Marsalis was pressed and angered by a critic of misunderstanding the music. "When theater is played on the stage, it's not a problem before, but his sense of self-directed emotion. Jazz was becoming rigid and formulaic. But Redman can see something different. He's not hangin' on such tightrope, 23rd and counting notes. Maybe it's the lack of fear of exposure in jazz that allowed Redman to speak through his music. It's not the usual ecumenical conversation. It's not the usual conversation of all those things. The danger of immersing yourself in a kind of disciplined, methodical practice routine and becoming intoxicated.

I was a featured soloist in the Berkeley High School Jazz Ensemble, and here in the Harvard Jazz Band. Upon graduation from that university, Redman continued to play with other radiation friends. They found a house near Iowa City called "Leland's Lofts." Leland's Lofts was a place where they could practice and stay. But maybe we're all missing the point. The thing that's missing is the young technical virtuosos. But the most exhilarating part is to break through tempos. I'm not a mastermind of music, but I'm a master of experience.
