Driving simulator gets green light
$34 million contract to make UI leader in traffic safety research

“The cost of crashes on highways is enormous, and if you could make a small dent in that, the consequences would be enormous.”

Allan Zucker, director of the National Advanced Driving Simulator program.

“The basically allow the engineers and human scientists to try people through experiences that you could not do in the real world to discover what the limits of the human capability and the instruments are,” said Allan Zucker, director of the NADS program.

Questions about the simulator were answered by officials from the UI campus located in Coralville.

This research will help officials design safer roads and equipment. It will also help drivers develop safer cars and trucks.

With butt-ies, you'll always have a friend

Chad Graham
The Daily Iowan

It seems Chad Graham, a senior at West High School, has the best of both worlds - even his butt-ies have friends. Graham's Facebook post about his product, "butt-ies," went viral, catching the attention of many and sparking interest in its potential as a unique form of comfortable, stylish footwear.

"These are so many lonely people," I said. "It seems like when the picture of a butt-eyes person is put out there, they all want to talk about it."

"I think it's because people need comfort," Graham explained. "It's a way for them to say, 'I'm not alone.'"

Graham's product, aimed at providing a sense of comfort and companionship, has caught the attention of many and sparked conversations about the importance of empathy and understanding.

"I think it's important to remember that everyone has their own struggles," Graham said. "Even if it's something as simple as having butt-ies, there's a story behind it."

Graham's product is currently available for purchase on his website, and he hopes to continue to develop and expand his line of unique and comforting items in the future.
Audit critical of UI's provost system

Carly Jordan

While the UI has come under a lot of scrutiny in its recent decision to declare some departments and programs redundant and to eliminate them, a new report is raising concerns about the provost as well.

The report, submitted by the University of Iowa's Provost's Committee on Academic Affairs, concludes that the provost’s leadership style is not conducive to a positive working environment and that the provost’s decision-making process is not transparent.

The committee recommends that the provost’s role be redefined to better align with the university’s mission and to ensure a more collaborative and inclusive approach to decision-making.

The provost, who is also the senior vice president for academic affairs, has been in this position since 2016.

The report states that the provost’s decision to consolidate departments and programs was not transparent and that the process was not inclusive of faculty and staff.

It also highlights concerns about the provost’s leadership style, which the committee says is not supportive of a positive working environment.

The report recommends that the provost’s role be redefined to better align with the university’s mission and to ensure a more collaborative and inclusive approach to decision-making.

The provost has not yet responded to the report.

Survey estimates Web use at 17 million adults

Howard Goldberg

NEW YORK — A new survey commissioned by the U.S. Census Bureau indicates that at least 17 million Americans — or about 8 percent of the U.S. population — used the Internet last month, and that the growth rate of Web use is "very fast." The estimate represents a more than four-fold increase since the Census Bureau last measured Web use in January 1996.

"The implications are enormous," said Douglas Muzzio, a political science professor at the State University of New York at Purchase. "This isn’t gospel. These are numbers, but they are consistent with the national煤 data that allows someone with a computer and an Internet connection to see pictures and sound, and access, and send lawmakers and their aides an estimated $1,500 a year, exclusively to the Web." He said the number of Web users is likely much higher, given the difficulties in gathering data on such new and changing phenomena.

"I don’t think you can put a number on it," Muzzio said. "There are so many people who are just starting to use the Internet."

President Clinton has announced a "newsgroup" to work on a national strategy for the future of the Internet. The group, called the Internet Policy Task Force, will be led by Vice President Al Gore and include representatives from government, academia, business and the Internet community.

"We’re not sure what the future of the Internet looks like," said Muzzio, who is also a former member of the President’s National Academy of Public Administration. "We’re not sure what the implications are." He said the Internet is likely to be a "fundamental" part of the American economy and society.

"The Internet is a very important tool," said Muzzio. "It’s a way to connect people and ideas. It’s a way to share information. It’s a way to communicate. It’s a way to learn. It’s a way to create. It’s a way to buy. It’s a way to sell. It’s a way to give. It’s a way to receive. It’s a way to understand. It’s a way to influence."
Police disarm bomb in London, IRA suspected

The Daily Iowan

If you have a question that needs answering, or an opinion that needs expressing, I'm here to help. Whether it's about the news, politics, or any other topic, feel free to ask.

Nation & World

The bombing broke a 13-month pause in the IRA's campaign to disrupt the peace process in Northern Ireland. The attack took place on April 13, 1996, after 8:30 p.m. on a street corner near the Milltown Barracks, a British military base in the Protestant New Lodge area of Belfast. Several people were wounded, but there were no reports of fatalities.

The bombing came in response to a statement by British Prime Minister John Major, who had declared that the IRA was "a growing military threat" to the United Kingdom.

The IRA said the bombing was a "symbolic" act, intended to show their resolve to continue the struggle for a united Ireland.

The bombing was the latest in a series of attacks by the IRA in recent months. In March, the IRA had exploded a bomb in the center of London, injuring 22 people. In January, the IRA had attacked a British military base in Northern Ireland, killing one soldier.

The bombing in Belfast marked the first time the IRA had used a bomb in Northern Ireland since the cease-fire agreement was signed in 1994. The cease-fire agreement was seen as a key step in the peace process in Northern Ireland.

The bombing in Belfast was a setback for the peace process, but it was also a sign of the continued fighting in Northern Ireland.

The bombing in Belfast was the latest in a series of attacks by the IRA in recent months. In March, the IRA had exploded a bomb in the center of London, injuring 22 people. In January, the IRA had attacked a British military base in Northern Ireland, killing one soldier.

Fry said the job is an opportunity to try to sell subscriptions for Excel and receive a commission for each sale. Fry does not sell to neighbors or friends and would not be considered paying any money out of his own pocket.

Victory Party

We visit again with Tara, her boyfriend, Malik, and her best friend Victoria. They’re sitting at the United Nations having another Meet Up. Victoria:

So what did you two loverbirds do for Valentine’s Day? Malik: Nothing Tyrone: What do you mean nothing? Victoria: We don’t celebrate Valentine’s Day. It’s a holiday for them to have a reason to buy gifts and flowers with us.

Victoria: Why does everything have to be black or white? It’s just a day to celebrate your individual thoughts and actions.

Tyrone: It’s probably because we’re raising our children in a society that encourages us to be prepared to stick it out that long. However, when I think about the history of mass media, it seems people spend so much time enjoying politics and events in the present time, that they don’t realize how they spend their whole lives and never look into the future.

Malik: It’s not like this world is a place for us to just lay down and relax. It’s our responsibility to learn about the world, our history, and to be prepared for any situation that may arise. We are the future of this world, and it’s up to us to make sure that we have a say in it. It’s not like we don’t have a voice in our lives, we do, but we need to be more active and involved in the world around us.

Victoria: That’s right. We need to be more involved in the world around us, and not just sit back and watch. We need to make sure that we are a part of the world and that we have a say in it.

Tyrone: That’s right. We need to be more involved in our lives and not just sit back and watch. We need to make sure that we are a part of the world and that we have a say in it.

Malik: It’s true. We need to be more involved in our lives and not just sit back and watch. We need to make sure that we are a part of the world and that we have a say in it.

Funding from Legislature

To the Editor:

The University of Iowa, like any other state institution, faces the challenge of funding an educational program in a time of decreased state support. It is easy to see why this appears as a "major problem," and it is unfortunate that the State Legislature has been unable to provide the University with a fair share of the available funds.

It is important for students to be aware of this situation and to advocate for their own interests. The best way to do this is to contact your state representative and let them know your concerns. You can also attend public hearings and testify on behalf of the University.

It is also important to support the University through donations. The Alumni Association and the Development Office are working hard to raise funds for the University, and your support is crucial.

Let us hope that the State Legislature will provide the University with the funds it needs to continue providing a quality education.

Sincerely,

Monkeys needed help

To the Editor:

We read with concern the article in the Daily Iowan about the condition of the monkeys in the research facility. It is disturbing to learn that these animals are being used in experiments without proper care.

We believe that the university should take immediate steps to ensure that the monkeys are properly housed and cared for. It is important to protect the welfare of all animals, especially those used for research.

Islam universal

To the Editor:

The history of the Islamic world is marked by a common thread of love, respect, and cooperation. This is evident in the way in which Muslims have contributed to the development of science, art, and culture.

We believe that this universal approach to Islam is one that can be applied to all people of the world. It is important to promote understanding and respect among all nations.

I think we need new seats

To the Editor:

The current seating arrangement in the student union is no longer adequate for our needs. The chairs are uncomfortable and the tables are too small to accommodate our group discussions.

We would like to see new seats installed to improve the seating area. It is important to provide a comfortable and functional environment for students.

Who's muddling?

To the Editor:

The article on the history of muddling was enlightening. It is interesting to see how this activity has evolved over time.

We would like to see more information on the social and cultural context in which muddling occurred. It is important to understand the historical and cultural forces that shaped this activity.

Jimmy Carter, Garth Brooks top torch list

AP TO 1 - Former President Jimmy Carter, country music superstar Garth Brooks and center Shaquille O'Neal will join a crowd of thousands Saturday at the Olympic camera to bring the Olympic flame to Miami.

Olympic organizers Thursday named "celebrity torchbearers" and 800 Olympians to participate in the opening ceremony, which begins April 27 in Les-obourg and will pass through 42 cities.

The commonwealth chosen to be the site of a national search through the states was one that could provide contributions to their con-cerations.

The group was headed by Billy Psarros, chair of the Olympic Games Committee for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The torchbearers chosen at this contest included genuine Shaquille O'Neal, America's Most Valuable Player; actor Ed Norton; and Sup-ner Byron.

A contest sponsored by The Cola Cola Co. picked another 2,000 torch carriers, and Games organizers will select 1,050 U.S.

members of the Olympic "Olympi-

Where are all the ex-college stars? Last year at this time, hundreds of up-and-coming players were starting the new season, holding baseball cards was food, the sport was rich and the future seemed to be in good hands. Now it's a different place.

In a world that has changed so fast, it's hard to envision what baseball will look like in 10 years, and it's even harder to see how it will appeal to the new generation. The only thing that's certain is that baseball will never be the same again.

NEW BALTIMORE COACH
Marchibroda returns home

David Chesburg
Special to The Daily Iowan

BALTIMORE - Art Modell knows what the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft means.

Last week, the Baltimore Ravens, Modell's NFL team in Charm City, made the turn onto 33rd Street and Captain Ted Marchibroda was there.

Modell, the team's offensive coordinator, was in his role the same day Ted Marchibroda, left, new head coach of the Baltimore NFL franchise, shared a laugh with team owner Art Modell.

With Baltimore at one point winning 38-35 regular-season games, "I'm glad to be back in Baltimore," Marchibroda said.

"It was a great feeling when he called," Modell said.

Modell is confident that Marchibroda is the man who can bring the franchise back into the Super Bowl. The Ravens were the swan to first coach Bill Belichick on Wednesday.

Marchibroda spent many a Monday morning in the press box at the Astrodome, an NFL franchise that left town in 1984. He took three stints in charge that left town in 1989.

Marchibroda is the man who has opened a new head coaching door.

The Daily Iowan has the following:

Carrier routes open:

- Monday-Friday, 9-5:30am:
  - Oxford, Clinton, Dubuque, Lisbon, Pella, Pleasantville

- Monday-Friday, 9-5pm:

SUNDAY SONG: "The Space of a Light Year," by Motion Poets

The Dancing Horse in Sibley Park
March 11, 7-9 p.m.

The Motion Poets, a Minneapolis-based dancing-reading-writing ensemble, will perform at The Dancing Horse in Sibley Park on Sunday.

The Motion Poets, also known as the Little Big Band, play their Minneapolis-style jazz with Spanish rhythms at the Sanctuary tonight and Saturday.

The performance features a wide variety of styles, from Clark's goal to the ground for extended improvisation and Pablo Milanes's unique rhythms. The dance number will lend itself to the audience's feeling.

Clark has given her concert and her proposals for students to perform in the spring of 1994, opportunities to "enthrall... audience's rhythms at the venue.
