Early-morning blaze leaves 2 homeless

Two Iowa City residents are without a home after a fire ripped through their mobile home early Sunday morning.

The home, owned by Pat Miller, was engulfed by flames around 6:30 a.m., when the Iowa City Fire Department arrived. Both Miller and the other occupant, Angela Langenberg, were evacuated.

The fire was caused by a candle left burning after the residents fell asleep, which set the living room curtains on fire. The exact time the blaze sparked is undetermined.

Smoke from the blaze, according to a report by the Iowa City Police Department, was visible from a half-mile away.

According to ICFD officials, it took them only 15 minutes to get the blaze under control, but it wasn't fully extinguished until an hour later.

Nobody was injured in the fire, which caused $4,000 in damage.

Grad students lobby for funding

Want tuition waivers, health insurance, research funds

Ann Haggerty

The Daily Iowan

In a first-ever lobbying effort, UI graduate students will take their concerns about higher education beyond UI administration to the halls of the Iowa Legislature.

About 50 teaching, research and graduate assistants from the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students will travel to Des Moines today to ask that part of the $435 million state budget surplus be allocated to the improvement of higher education at the UI.

UI graduate student Doug Anderson said COGS is asking the state for complete tuition waivers for all graduate employees, a common practice at many higher education institutions.

Granting tuition waivers allows graduate employees to lead more financially secure lives, Anderson said. Graduate employees also could focus more attention on research and teaching, which would benefit UI undergraduates, he said.

"The UI needs to support graduate students and the work that they do here, because it is a way of improving higher education," Anderson said. "Leading stressful lives undermines even their best efforts. For undergraduates, a non-stressed TA is better than a stressed one."

In addition to tuition waivers, COGS would like to ask legislators to stop increasing state university tuition, which has gone up each year for the past 17 years.

"It has really been placed beyond the reach of lower-income students," Anderson said.

COGS also wants more funds allocated to increasing the number of UI teaching faculty, Anderson said. Over the past 10 years, the number of teachers hired has not matched increasing student enrollment, leaving many students in overcrowded classes, he said.

"One thing we want to say to legislators is you have to appropriate more money so students can have more meaningful contact with their teachers," Anderson said.

Taylor said COGS is also seeking adequate health insurance and more resources for the UI, including new equipment, research funds and expanded library resources.

In Des Moines, COGS members will participate in briefings, workshops and a rally on the steps of the capitol building.

MUCH-DEBATED ISSUES ON FLOOR

3 bills in Iowa Legislature invite sure controversy

Mary Neubauer

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa's House and Senate schedules are full of topics this week sure to start lengthy debates: same-sex marriages, assisted suicides and changes in the state's speed limits.

The Iowa House plans to debate a bill that would stop the state from having to recognize same-sex marriages. Conservatives in the House have been pushing the measure and Gov. Terry Branstad has said he supports it.

The bill would change state law so marriages in other states would only be considered legal in Iowa if they were between a man and a woman. Current law has similar language, but sponsors of the bill say it would add strength to that wording.

House Republicans are worried about the consequences of a case pending before the Hawaii Supreme Court.

The court is considering legal recognition for same-sex marriages and a decision is expected in July. Conservatives are worried that if same-sex marriages are legalized in Hawaii, gay and lesbian couples could go there and get married, then return to Iowa and be entitled to the legal and financial benefits given to married heterosexual couples.

Democrats in the Senate have said they don't support the bill.

As Dr. Jack Kevorkian goes on trial this week in Michigan, the House also plans to debate a bill that would make assisted suicide a crime in the state.

Kevorkian is accused of aiding in the 1993 deaths of two people who inhaled carbon monoxide in apartment buildings.

TRANSITIONAL HOUSING PROJECT UNVEILED

Chad Graham

The Daily Iowan

Single men and women who are living in shelters will have a place to call their own this March.

A transitional housing project was unveiled Sunday at Iowa City Emergency Housing Project's annual open house.

EHP director Pat Jordan said transitional programs do not exist for single men and women in Iowa City who need help living on their own. This group makes up 81 percent of the people EHP, 331 N. Gilbert St., saw in 1995.

"For some people, it's very difficult to move right from shelter to permanent housing," Jordan said. "Some people don't have the independent living skills, and they may Horoscopes for the week of 2/19/96-2/25/96.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Your assertiveness will pay off, as long as you keep your ego in check. A fall from grace is inevitable if you don't recognize the obvious. An immediate tightening of the wallet will lead to a loose atmosphere when it matters most.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): A crossover with your past is on the horizon. Those you have forgotten resurface in unfamiliar forms — perhaps unpleasing ones. Do not fight what you cannot stop.

Gemini (May 21-June 21): An old habit must be broken to achieve happiness. Challenging character traits is pointless, so focus on what is not essential. Make time for personal pleasure, whether reading a book or conversing with friends.

Cancer (June 22-July 22): Seek support in those who have lately been distant. They do not ignore you because of ill will, but because of cluttered schedule.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Little steps, not giant leaps, will lead to a successful week. Realize the world does not have to be yours within a single moon, but many harvests.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The matter weighing down your mind will not subside within the week. Take heed in the little things, for disappointment may reign for some time.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A morsel of self-prescribed literature has marked the commencement of a march toward peace of mind. Now that the clouds are fading, search for something concrete.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Old friends and new opportunities collide. Make sure you realize what is really important before snapping to a decision.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your caring nature makes you easy to talk to. Respect frames you like an Arctic snow. Realize that love goes in many directions, both toward and away from you.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New opportunities arrive in the form of technology. Learning will be slow, so patience must be exercised. However, an immediate need will not make patience easy.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Show compassion for those who are ill, for they may become irritable as opportunities lessen. A good heart will lead you to the proper decisions.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Greener pastures are on the horizon, but are farther off than you originally anticipated. Take time to enjoy the present and the future will blossom with glee.

If your birthday is this week: A Valentine's Day letdown will be short-lived as loved ones continue to shower you with their feelings. Don't ask for too much, for all will be provided in time. Haste can only lead to happiness.

UI professor named chief justice of the Winnebago Tribe

UI law Professor Robert Clinton has been appointed chief justice of the newly formed Winnebago Supreme Court of the Winnebago Tribe of Nebraska.

Clinton, who is the Wiley B. Rutledge Professor of Law and an internationally known expert on American Indian law, was sworn in Saturday at a ceremony in Winnebago, Neb.

The appointment was made by the Winnebago Tribal Council.

As chief justice, Clinton heads a three-person panel acting as the court of last resort for civil and criminal cases under Winnebago tribal law. The Winnebago Tribe of Nebraska has their own constitution, by-laws and legal code administered by the tribal council. In addition to written law, the tribe also recognizes customary law — legally binding tenets based on tribal customs.

The Winnebago Reservation comprises about 30,000 acres in northeastern Nebraska and a small sliver of northwestern Iowa.

Clinton, who co-authored one of the leading legal texts on tribal law, has also been an associate justice of the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribal Appellate Court since 1992. The tribe's headquarters are in Eagle Butte, S.D.

Oscar-nominated actor says childhood award was best honor

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Morgan Freeman remembers the "best actor" award he won at age 12 as his highest honor.

The accolade, for a school play performance in Greenwood, Miss., was on Freeman's mind Saturday when he accepted another Mississippi award, the Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts.

Freeman

"It was like a group pat on the back: a 'well done,'" Freeman recalled of his childhood honor. "Every time you give — particularly — young people a 'well done,' they go on to do better, and I thank you for that."

"I thank you for this 'well done,' and I will go on and attempt to do better."

The 58-year-old Freeman lives in the northwest Mississippi community of Charlestown, just north of his childhood home. His performances in "Driving Miss Daisy" and "The Shawshank Redemption" earned him Academy Award best actor nominations.

'60 Minutes' reporter reveals lighter side

has a wild side. Sometimes, though, he just needs a nudge to show it.

Like the time he told Liza Minnelli he'd always wanted to get his ear pierced, but never had the nerve because of his high-profile job.

Revealing his secret wish during the 1986 interview, Bradley also told Minnelli about his nickname "Teddy," which friends use to describe the veteran reporter's fun side.

"I said, 'You know, it's '60 Minutes' and all seriousness and gravity and all that,' but Teddy says, 'It's just an earring,'" Bradley said in the Feb. 24 issue of TV Guide.

"We were doing another interview the next day, and she gave me an earring and says, 'When you see Teddy, give it to him,'" Bradley said. "So that was when I went out and got my ear pierced."

Colleagues at "60 Minutes" had wide-ranging reactions. "Oh, there was some shock," he said. "I think the original reaction was: 'I guess he wants to have it ... but he's not going to wear that on the air, is he?'"

Flu bug bites 'devil' Jerry Lewis

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The flu felled the devil.

Jerry Lewis, starring as Lucifer in "Damn Yankees," has missed at least three performances thanks to the bug.

Lewis couldn't take the stage Friday night and missed matinee and evening performances Saturday. The shows went on with Lewis' understudy, but hundreds exchanged tickets for later shows in hopes of catching the main attraction.

"He is fighting chills and nausea," said Laurie Pomerson, a show executive.

The traveling show, which began in Columbus Tuesday, was slated to end its local run Sunday with two shows.

Lewis plays Lewis Mr. Applegate — the devil — who gives youth to an aging baseball fan in exchange for his soul.

About 300 people exchanged tickets Friday night for Sunday's performances, Pomerson said. Patrons who couldn't exchange tickets can attend the show in Cincinnati in April.

'Little House' star expresses relief after difficult pregnancy

NEW YORK (AP) — Former "Little House on the Prairie" star Melissa Gilbert says the premature birth of her son was "the most frightening adventure I have ever been on."

"Birth was supposed to be kisses and hugs," Gilbert said in the Feb. 26 issue of People magazine. "Instead, it was tubes and wires and my son sprawled out like a frog."

Michael Garrett, named after "Little House" star Michael Landon, was born three months prematurely on Oct. 6, 1995.

Gilbert and actor-husband Bruce Boxleitner weren't allowed to hold the baby for the first two days of Michael's life. And, it wasn't until seven weeks after his birth that the infant could leave the hospital.

"I was so happy, I screamed," the 31-year-old Gilbert said. The baby now weighs 13 pounds and is doing well.

The couple, who have three children from previous marriages, said they are grateful for Michael's birth but that they don't plan on having any more children.

"We think this is our last baby," Gilbert said. "His birth took a lot out of us, physically and emotionally."

Former heavyweight champ elated father of newborn

NEW YORK (AP) — Iron Mike Tyson is the proud new father of a baby girl.

His girlfriend, Monica Turner, gave birth Wednesday to an 8-pound, 10-ounce daughter, named Rayna, the Daily News reported Saturday.

The former heavyweight champion "is very, very proud. He's very excited and very happy," John Horne, his manager, said.

Tyson visited mother and daughter at the Maryland hospital before their release on Thursday, the report said.

It wasn't known whether Tyson and Turner, both 29, planned to marry.

Both already are parents. Turner has a 6-year-old daughter, Geena, and Tyson has a 5-year-old daughter, Mickey.

Tyson, who's attempting a comeback, is on four years' probation for his conviction in the 1991 rape of a beauty contestant.

Washington's boyhood farm may be replaced by Wal-Mart

Anne Gearan
Associated Press

STAFFORD, Va. — The riverside farm where George Washington romped as a boy, and where legend has it the first American president chopped down his father's cherry tree, could soon be part of a less quaint American legend.

Wal-Mart, the muscular (some say ruthless) discounter, plans a new store atop part of the old Washington farm.

"This is George Washington's boyhood home, and it is a national treasure," said Cessie Howell, one leader of a fledgling citizen opposition group. "There can always be more shopping centers, but there can never be another place like this one."

The Ferry Farm site along the Rappahannock River near Fredericksburg is the only one of Washington's three homes that is not already a park or museum.

The house burned in the early 1800s, years after Washington's death, but the foundation is preserved. Signs tell tourists a little about the family's life there. But grander plans for a visitor's center and much-needed preservation work have foundered repeatedly.

The site is mostly open fields, with a view of the river. Tract houses and a shopping center are visible nearby, but the Wal-Mart would be the first commercial encroachment on the land closest to the old Washington house.

The 30-acre Wal-Mart property would overwhelm the 15-acre historic site, with the actual store — and its promised Colonial-style facade — sitting alongside the preserved foundation, said William Abbot, editor emeritus of Washington's papers at the University of Virginia.

"In addition to sentimental reasons, this site is worth preserving," Abbot said. "It can be used to teach young people about life in the 18th century."

A Wal-Mart representative said if the Bentonville, Ark., chain does not build on the site, someone else will.

"This land has been zoned commercial for years, so I guess I'm a little puzzled as to what exactly the folks did think would be built there," spokesperson Betsy Reithemeyer said.

The nation's No. 1 retailer plans to break ground soon and open next year.

Washington lived at Ferry Farm from 1738, when he was 6, until his father's death, when the boy was 11. The young George then divided his time between Ferry Farm and two other family estates.

The legend of the cherry tree is almost certainly the fabrication of an admiring Washington biographer. But if George did actually confess to the vandalism with the words "I cannot tell a lie," the event took place at Ferry Farm, historians say.

When word of Wal-Mart's plans leaked out last month, the store seemed a done deal. The Stafford County Board of Supervisors welcomed the project, and plans for the store were already drawn.

Historians and environmentalists opposing the store say their only hope is to persuade Wal-Mart to go elsewhere.

The opponents hope to take a page from the critics who turned away the Walt Disney Co. and the American history theme park it tried to build near a Civil War battlefield in Manassas.

Although Disney seemed sure to win all necessary approvals, it pulled up stakes in 1994 after months of harsh publicity. Historians led the charge against Disney, saying the entertainment project would forever ruin the rural site's ambience and historic value.

Emergency service personnel tend to an injured person following an explosion in the Aldwych area of central London Sunday. The blast caused at least six casualties. There was no immediate indication whether it was a bomb or who might have been responsible.

Explosion destroys London bus

Audrey Woods
Associated Press

LONDON — An explosion tore through a double-decker bus in central London on Sunday night, injuring at least six people and showering the street with shards of glass and twisted metal.

There was no official confirmation of deaths, but at least six people were being treated for injuries, the ambulance service and a hospital spokesperson said.

Police said they had received no warning about the explosion, and there was no immediate indication of who might have been responsible. However, suspicion immediately fell on the Irish Republican Army.

On Feb. 9, the IRA broke its 17-month cease-fire with a truck bomb that devastated the Docklands business center in east London, killing two people and wounding scores.

Last week, police defused a bomb in a telephone booth in central London.

Ambulances and five fire engines rushed to the Aldwych area of central London Sunday night, emergency services officials said.

Scotland Yard said the explosion occurred on Wellington Street near the Strand at 10:38 p.m. (4:38 p.m. CST). It reported a number of casualties.

The red double-decker remained upright on its four wheels, but the blast had turned the top into just a few mangled shreds of metal. The bottom was gutted by fire, and all of the windows were blown out.

The explosion site, near the Waldorf Hotel, would have been filled with theatergoers on any other night but Sunday, when most London stages are dark.

Eyewitness Anthony Yates, 26, said he believed at least three people were dead.

"I was walking down the road and I saw a big white flash in the sky," Yates said. "I looked and then I saw a double-decker bus, but there was nothing left of it; it was completely blown to pieces."

"When the bomb went off, a taxi drove into the bus."

"The NatWest bank outside is badly hit. The bus driver and the taxi driver both looked dead."

He said, "There's a guy lying outside the bus saying 'my legs, my legs.' There was another guy with blood coming from his jaw."

Lawyer Raymond Levy was in his car only 30 feet from the blast.

"I thought there was only the bus driver on board and when I got out of the car and got to the bus, he had got out but there were flames everywhere," Levy said.

"The engine was still running and I was very worried that the petrol would explode."

With the help of a cab driver they opened the hood of the bus and turned off the engine, he said. "The bus driver was the only person that I saw injured and the emergency services were on the scene within about two minutes," he said. "There were a few passers-by around and one woman was in shock and was running down the road screaming."

A radio reporter for the British Broadcasting Corp., Paul Rowan, said there were pieces of metal and shards of glass "for around 50 yards all over the place."

"I saw one woman who looked in a very bad way, she was face down on the road with bad-looking head injuries."

Scott Grover, a 32-year-old tourist from Boston, said: "We were walking along when we suddenly heard this almighty bang."

"The front of the bus was completely blown away but there didn't seem to be many people in it and I don't know how many were injured. "There was debris everywhere."

Mark Johnson, 25, from Toronto, who was with friends in a pub on the Strand, said he "heard a very loud explosion and a very loud bang."

"We were all in a complete state of panic. We were crouching down away from the windows. We ran outside and asked the bar manager to call the police and ambulance."

"We knew immediately what had happened. We were all saying 'Oh my God, oh my God.' I don't know where all this hatred comes from."

Johnson said many people had rushed to help the injured, and the police arrived "almost immediately." He said he and his friends left the area "for fear of secondary devices."

Hospital spokesperson Jenny Reid said five of the casualties were not critical but a sixth person had serious head injuries and had been taken into surgery.

Commander: U.S. mission in Bosnia on target

George Esper
Associated Press

TUZLA AIR BASE, Bosnia — The 16,000-strong American contingent of peacekeepers is succeeding in enforcing the Bosnian peace accord and keeping to the timetable it contains, the commander of the U.S. forces in Bosnia said Sunday.

"I would say we did quite a bit," said Maj. Gen. William Nash, commander of Task Force Eagle, which began operating Dec. 20. Its mission is to keep Bosnian government and rebel Serb forces separated.

Nash said casualties have been relatively few. One American soldier has died thus far while attempting to disarm a mine in a known minefield. Reviewing the Americans' role in Bosnia two months after their deployment began, Nash also disclosed in an interview that steps are being taken to reduce the threat of land mines, which lace the Bosnian countryside.

He said 200 Humvee utility vehicles with extra armor were being sent to Bosnia. The mine danger is expected to increase in the next several weeks as mine fuses, now frozen, begin to thaw.

Citing U.S. accomplishments, Nash said the U.S. troops "stepped between two warring factions, got them to back up two kilometers (1 1/2 miles) on either side of the ceasefire line."

He also said the Americans had broken down invisible walls between Bosnian Muslim and Serb areas, allowing greater freedom of movement for Bosnian civilians.

But the greatest accomplishment, he said, is that the troops have met the timetable negotiators set in the accord, which was signed in Paris in December.

"They made all those things happen pretty much on time the way envisioned. They've set the conditions for other elements to bring prosperity, to start to restore the country," the general said.

Nash said the major threats facing troops are snow, cold, the mines and potential terrorism.

"The idea of terrorism and rogue elements is one we're paying a lot of attention to," he said. "I have no reason to believe there are not elements throughout Bosnia-Herzegovina that might be capable" of attacking NATO troops.

Americans will make up one-third of the 60,000-member NATO force. The remainder of the U.S. contingent is expected to arrive from bases in Hungary, Croatia and Italy later this month.

Nash said a confrontation between his troops and Bosnian Serbs on Saturday resulted from limited communications between the Serbs and NATO. Relations have been tense since the Bosnian government arrested two high-ranking Serb military officers on Jan. 30, on suspicion of war crimes. The two were later transferred to The Hague, Netherlands, site of the U.N. war crimes tribunal.

Crash investigation focuses on reason for excess speed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators picked through mangled wreckage Sunday to determine why a commuter train was moving more than twice as fast as it should have been just before slamming into an Amtrak passenger liner. Eleven people died in the ensuing fireball.

The MARC commuter train was going 63 mph when its engineer apparently sighted the approaching Amtrak locomotive and slammed on the emergency brakes Friday evening, National Transportation Safety Board member John Goglia said. It was too late to avoid the deadly pileup.

A signal a few miles before should have warned the MARC train to slow to 30 mph and be prepared to stop. Investigators want to know whether the engineer missed that signal or if it malfunctioned.

The signals are operated by radio from CSX Transportation's central offices in Jacksonville, Fla. The dispatcher on duty at the time of the wreck is coming to Washington to meet with board investigators.

World's largest snow castle opens in Finland

KEMI, Finland (AP) — The castle's tower is some five-stories high. The edifice boasts a 3,000-seat auditorium, a children's play area and an expansive restaurant capped with high, arched ceilings.

Yet, it cost only $780,000 to build and there'll never be an air-conditioning bill.

That's how it goes when the only materials used in construction are ice and snow.

Built on 2 1/2 acres along the frozen harbor in Kemi — 450 miles north of Helsinki and just that much closer to the North Pole — the gargantuan structure is billed as the world's largest snow castle.

The opening celebration on Saturday attracted some 7,000 Finns who partied, danced and shivered as temperatures plunged to 4 degrees below zero.

But the chill wasn't enough to cool the passion of at least one couple, who took their wedding vows in the castle's ice chapel.

"Our love is hot enough to survive this," said the bride, Arja Vallin, 30, dressed in traditional white and clutching a bouquet of frozen red roses.

Woman makes miraculous recovery from head wound

DALLAS (AP) — woman who had a pair of scissors embedded in her skull during an attack has astounded doctors by returning to work just weeks later.

Other than a long scar over her left eye and another behind her right ear, Tamecka Grate said she has virtually no permanent damage.

The attacker left a pair of scissors embedded four inches into her head. X-rays showed the blades somehow missed her spinal cord, brain and major blood vessels. Doctors delicately removed them 13 hours later.

"I'm living the normal routine," said Grate, 24. "People think I'm supposed to be in a wheelchair with an IV sticking out of my arm. But I'm fine, and I'm still me."

Grate, a secretary at her family's insulation firm, was attacked New Year's Day when she let a casual acquaintance into her apartment to use the phone.

She managed to dial 911 and leave her telephone off the hook during the attack. The operator heard her screams. Police kicked in the door and arrested Emanuel Moffert as he allegedly was trying to sexually assault her.

Moffert, 26, was jailed on a charge of aggravated assault. Prosecutors said they would seek another indictment for attempted murder.

Campaign '96

Associated Press

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, left, shakes the hand of presidential candidate Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., after officially announcing his support for Dole Sunday at Dole headquarters in Manchester, N.H. Gramm announced his withdrawal from the campaign last Wednesday.

Dole garners support of former rival Gramm

John King

Associated Press

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Just four days after he quit the Republican presidential race, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm endorsed Bob Dole on Sunday and warned the success and image of the Republican Party rested on keeping the nomination from Pat Buchanan.

"I believe that Bob Dole is the one Republican candidate in this race today who can bring together economic conservatives and who can bring together social conservatives and who can make the Republican Party again one united party that is committed to beating Bill Clinton and committed to changing America," Gramm said in delivering his support.

Publicly, party leaders not involved in the race have professed neutrality. "I'm not going to get in the middle," House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Saturday when asked about the contentious race. But Gingrich has privately voiced alarm to associates about Buchanan's early strength, and he is hardly a lone voice among GOP establishment figures.

"They are in panic in Washington, D.C.," Buchanan said Sunday on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley." He said he was coming under attack because GOP establishment figures feared he was about to seize control of the party.

Most senior Gramm supporters among elected Republican officials have quickly rallied to Dole's side. In addition to Gramm, this group includes Arizona Sen. John McCain and Texas Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Yet there remain deep doubts in the party about Dole's strength, with the next 10 days viewed as the crucial test. Dole's backing among senators and governors will be sorely tested if he loses New Hampshire — even more so if former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander fares well. This is the major reason Dole is closing the New Hampshire campaign with ads criticizing Alexander for raising taxes while governor and for suggesting the state create an income tax.

In accepting Gramm's endorsement, Dole shrugged off their caustic campaign exchanges. "It was never personal," the Senate majority leader said.

Without mentioning Buchanan, he picked up Gramm's theme that it was critical for the party not to be divided — a remark clearly delivered with Buchanan in mind.

"We have got to bring the economic and the social conservatives together," Dole said. "You can't divide us and expect to win in November."

"I do not believe there is another candidate in the race that can bring together both halves of our party and make it whole," Gramm said in his statement.

Gramm had planned to endorse Dole next week in South Carolina. But Dole campaign aides urged moving up the event — even though Gramm had only modest support in New Hampshire — on the belief that every last vote could matter in a tight, volatile race with Buchanan and Alexander. About a dozen prominent Gramm supporters were on hand for the event, many still wearing Gramm lapel pins as they slapped on Dole campaign stickers.

The event also reflected the concern in the GOP establishment at the prospect of a Buchanan victory Tuesday.

Buchanan's economic views, particularly his protectionist positions on trade, are out of step with the party's conservative mainstream. And his deep support among social conservatives could mean a protracted nomination battle, which could make it difficult to unite the party.

More broadly, few leading Republicans believe Buchanan could defeat President Clinton, given past controversial statements about women, immigration and calls for a "cultural war for the heart and soul of America."

Just this week, for example, Buchanan has defended his campaign co-chairperson, who took a leave of absence after it was reported he spoke at meetings featuring white supremacists and militia leaders. The campaign also relieved a Buchanan volunteer in Florida of her duties because she also recruited for the National Association for the Advancement of White People.

Supporters in Louisiana also distributed a newspaper which suggested many conservatives would not support Gramm because of his "interracial marriage." Gramm's wife, Wendy, who was on hand for the endorsement, is Korean American.

"I would expect Pat Buchanan to take the same position with his campaign and to make it clear that there is no room in his campaign for people who are anti-Semitic or people who are racist," Gingrich said Saturday.

Buchanan condemned the newspaper Sunday, and Gramm said he took Buchanan at his word that he knew nothing about it. But he said Buchanan clearly benefited from support of former Ku Klux Klan leader David Duke and other controversial figures in Louisiana.

Former Buchanan aide linked to anti-Semitic newsletter

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Larry Pratt, who stepped aside as co-chairperson of Pat Buchanan's presidential campaign over alleged links to racist groups, has connections to an anti-Semitic newsletter, a newspaper reported.

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette also reported Saturday that Pratt has repeatedly taken part in events featuring political extremists.

The 53-year-old Pratt is a contributing editor to a newsletter published by United Sovereigns of America, a group based in Del City, Okla., the newspaper reported. The group sells extremist materials, including the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion" and the handbook of the Posse Comitatus.

Pratt says he has no anti-Semitic or racist views, and Buchanan has defended him, saying he stands by his friends. Pratt also points out he is a member of Jews for the Preservation of Firearms Ownership.

"The issue today is not my beliefs," Pratt said in a statement Friday, the day after he stepped aside. "The issue today is a scurrilous attack designed to derail the success of the Buchanan campaign."

The newspaper enumerated several instances when Pratt attended events either sponsored or heavily attended by members of far-right groups. Pratt's aides said that in some cases he attended the events without knowing who else planned to appear.

Bar backing

■ Iowa City bars have no place in the election of UI Student Government candidates. In taking money from bars, it detracts from the real issues.

Since some UI Student Government candidates figure the UI campus inhales beer on a consistent basis, they've decided to push the idea of consuming alcohol some more, and make it a political action. Now that two parties of UISG candidates are asking bars to endorse their political agenda by advertising for them, what this university stands for, and the social agenda it's trying to promote, takes an entirely new track.

It's clear this election is not about issues, but about popularity. And the candidates are not asking bars for support because they need money (there are a lot of places they could go), but because they want to get their name out.

Because so many students frequent the bars, it may seem as though nothing is wrong with those businesses endorsing candidates. These particular candidates are trying to reach the average student who doesn't usually get involved with student politics. The point of advertising in bars, the candidates feel, is to promote their name, especially since such a low percentage of the students actually vote. But in simply "getting the name out," the issue of what the election stands for gets lost. Candidates who advertise in bars are catering to a mass audience, which turns the election into a popularity contest instead of an issue-oriented decision.

It's clear the bars are blatantly using a serious university function to promote their product: alcohol. It's not just the candidates receiving money; the bars are gaining something as well. The student government, even if it only affects a small percent of the student population, has a good reputation. When UISG candidates use bars to promote their campaigns, the bars themselves are, in turn, using the candidates to promote their businesses. There has been an enormous amount of political backlash on this campus in the past year concerning alcohol. The bars may not need financial support ("It's the bar owners in this town who have the money," said Pat Ketchum, director of Health Iowa); they need image support.

Getting support from bars brings the level of the UISG election to such a low point that the number of students who once took them seriously and cared about any issues would have little reason to now. It doesn't matter what the candidate stands for, or what the candidate wants to do. The student government itself becomes minimized and outrightly contradicts the seriousness of the UI and students' purpose here at the UI (to get an education). By the UISG supporting bars, the image of the drunken college student becomes even more enforced.

If UISG candidates want their voters to care, they need to make their campaigns about what they can do for the students. If they are representing the UI, it's clearly inconsistent to promote the bars as well. Far from being a financial issue, advertising in bars is a moral and a political statement.

■ Job applicants and employees may be subjected to a lot more drug testing if a new bill is approved by the Iowa State Legislature.

The Iowa State Legislature is considering changing Iowa's drug-testing law; a change that is invasive and should be rejected.

Legislation pending in the Iowa House of Representatives would make it easier for employers to test employees for drugs.

The proposed amendment isn't necessary, the current law is more than sufficient to protect the rights of business owners without excessively trampling the rights of employees.

In a perfect world, there would be no need for drug tests, much less a legal option for employers. But in our less-than-perfect state, employers are now allowed to use drug tests on different occasions.

Current drug-testing laws allow employers to test for drugs as part of a pre-employment physical. Employers can also call for a drug test if they have probable cause. For example, when a forklift operator appears dazed shortly after dropping a pallet loaded with expensive glassware, the employer could then test him or her for drugs.

The changes now being debated in Des Moines would expand the powers of employers and needlessly infringe on the privacy rights of the employees.

The proposed amendment would allow prospective employers to test as part of the application process, without a corresponding physical. It would also dilute the probable cause aspect of the current law and allow testing after an accident that causes at least $1,000 in property damage or after a personal injury which requires medical treatment away from the workplace.

So if an employee slices his thumb while cutting bagels in the office break room, under the new law he can be tested for drugs while at the hospital getting a few stitches.

Depending on the type of bagel he usually eats, the employee could face the risks of damaging false positive results due to the chemical similarities between some foods and some illegal drugs. He should try not to worry about the possible mistakes in testing laboratories.

If you aren't doing anything wrong, the argument goes, then you should have nothing to fear and shouldn't mind taking a drug test. This is an old and faulty logic. Drug tests presume guilt and are by their nature invasions, so it should be difficult for employers to use them, not easier.

For example, to best eliminate the chances of tainting the results of a drug test, the samples must be collected under the direct visual supervision of someone else. If employees haven't done anything wrong, then they shouldn't have to endure a drug test.

The House is expected to vote today on House Amendment H5078. If passed by the House, the legislation would move on to the Senate.

Iowa's current drug-testing laws are adequate, so the new law should be opposed. If you agree, then call your representatives at the Capitol. Sen. Mary Neuhouser, D-Iowa City, and Sen. Bob Dvorsky, D-Coralville, can be reached in Des Moines at 515-281-3371.

We could almost guarantee drug-testing laws wouldn't be expanded if members of the State Legislature had to take drug tests as conditions of their pre-employment in Des Moines.

Marriage: It's a special privilege

I remember the most recent wedding in my family. I stood in the church basement in a formal dress after the Mary Kay lady had been all over my face. I weaved where I stood like a dazed boxer as this woman, the dry waller of the beauty industry, labored to create a work of genius where I once had been visible. By the time she finished with me, I looked only slightly less flamboyant than "Priscilla: Queen of the Desert." But I faced the video camera like a good scout because this was my sister's wedding day. Besides, it's not often you get an in-law for your nutty family made to order in heaven.

The aftermath of a wedding infuses you with such warmth you wish everyone you love could have the experience. It is hard to imagine an emotional miser cruel enough to hoard such a fine thing, but the misbegotten devils do exist.

Later that afternoon, I watched my father and five of his brothers — all of whom are in the 6 feet 6 inches tall league — cower in a corner of the Legion Post. They were shielding open beers from the sharp glance of sister Gertrude, crusader for temperance. I flounced right up to Gertrude with my can of Miller Lite in hand to make wedding chat. Toward us, from the other direction, came the radiant bride, also cradling a beer can. Thirty feet away, Dad shook his head and covered his face with his free hand. He figured the roof was about to pop right off the Lone Tree Legion.

I knew better. Weddings are magical. On that day, nothing came between anyone. Our consumption of beer did not faze Gertrude. Everyone stayed to dance into the night, and I slept as soundly as ever before or since.

The aftermath of a wedding infuses you with such warmth you wish everyone you love could have the experience. It is hard to imagine an emotional miser cruel enough to hoard such a fine thing, but the misbegotten devils do exist. In Iowa and 18 other states today, they are moving fiercely to promote the idea that marriage can be too much of a good thing. For the first time in history, we are being told that proper, decent marriages can't involve just any two reasonably unrelated people who love each other. Specifically, if two people of the same gender wish to undergo a civil ceremony recognizing their commitment to living a faithful and loving life together, they may soon be told there is no room at the justice of the peace's.

This is odd, considering most couples of questionable repute are not only free to voluntarily wed, but in most states are deemed married under common law after the mere passage of a specified amount of time! Like it or not, the state says to them, you are now considered married. Whence cometh the jealousy with which the nouveau misers of joy guard the treasures of matrimony, then?

We can be sure of one thing. The misers have a hidden agenda that reaches far beyond marriage. They are out to expunge innumerable sources of joy from the Book of Life. Sex for the sake of pleasure. Books they find objectionable. (These tend to be any books reflecting reality from a vantage point other than the top of Mt. Ararat.) Films that upset them. Musical recordings that frighten them. Religious beliefs that unnerve them. Halloween. "Friends" episodes. Therapy. Women who fly fighter jets. Women in the futures pits. Women who know what they want in bed. Men who like any of the preceding types of women. The list could go on forever. What's more, it will go on forever — unless we stop it here and now.

If we have learned anything since we discovered our opposable thumbs, it is that humankind is one big family. No group can be allowed to take the fabric of that family into its hands and rip from the heart of it those with whom they disagree. For as long as we've had a country, we've known that we must all hang together lest we hang separately. Never has it been so true as it is today.

Equal rights for all, special privileges for none. Even Pat Buchanan says it. Historically, civil marriage has hardly been treated as a special privilege, as noted above. Yet, America's misers are now working to hoard it just beyond the reach of one category of people. That is called discrimination, and it is against the law. The state has a compelling interest in recognizing as many committed couples as come forward seeking recognition. Same-gender couples must enjoy equal rights to civil marriage or there are no equal rights — only special privileges.

What goes around comes around

Steve Forbes spent a lot of money on a negative campaign in Iowa, and this gained him a lot of national attention. He was on the cover of magazines, the subject of countless editorials and a guest on many radio and television shows. However, one thing his campaign didn't bring him was a strong finish in the Iowa caucus. Forbes finished a distant fourth in the voting — behind Bob Dole, Pat Buchanan and Lamar Alexander. There are certainly lessons to be learned here.

Forbes attacked Dole, Phil Gramm and Alexander in ads aired frequently in Iowa. These ads centered on tax increases, wasteful spending and the "Washington values" that each of his opponents represented. Dole fired back with negative ads of his own, calling Forbes "more liberal than you think" and chastising him for his untested and questionable ideas. What did this get Dole? He still won in Iowa, but it was far from a solid victory, edging Buchanan by a narrow margin.

Jamey Pregon

Dole and Forbes were not alone in negative campaigning. Gramm slammed Dole whenever possible and Morry Taylor criticized virtually everyone. Both had poor showings in the caucus. Bob Dornan got a little publicity when he blasted Iowa's favorite Democrat, Sen. Tom Harkin, for his trip to Vietnam last summer. Dornan garnered a hearty 0 percent of the vote, finishing well behind the "no preference" voters. And Richard Lugar, after his ridiculous nuclear terrorist ads, came in just ahead of Taylor, "no preference" and Dornan.

While the majority of the candidates were engaging in mudslinging, the two big winners of the caucus — Buchanan and Alexander — were taking the high road to appeal to voters. Rather than bashing the others in the field, they were talking about themselves and where they stood on the issues. Buchanan and Alexander emerged from Iowa as the main challengers to Dole, and this should serve as a critical illumination to the GOP as it prepares for the eventual battle with President Clinton.

The last big defeat for the Republicans should reinforce this latest lesson in campaigning. The 1992 presidential election saw Clinton easily defeat George Bush; 370 electoral votes to the 168 won by the same candidate who walloped Democrat Michael Dukakis in 1988. Bush used a very negative campaign against Clinton, just as he had done against Dukakis, but this time it was unsuccessful. While Clinton was making such promises as health care and welfare reform, Bush was chiding Clinton for his draft dodging and suggesting that "his dog Millie knew more about foreign affairs." Whether or not Clinton actually made good on his promises is beside the point; they still got him elected. Such promises will get Clinton elected again in November if the GOP candidate resorts to the same type of approach used by Bush in 1992.

The Iowa caucus should serve as an important lesson — and a warning — to the GOP about the dangers of negative campaigning. "A politician who is constantly bashing another politician doesn't have anything to say about what he's going to do," an Iowa Republican remarked after casting a vote for Alexander. Voters are clearly getting tired of the venom candidates spew out at each other, and their message should be heard. Forbes has done his party a great service by helping to expose this early in the election year. The other candidates should learn from his shortcomings and from Buchanan and Alexander's success, and take a more positive approach to voters. Otherwise, they are doomed to travel down the same road Bush did in 1992.

GOP candidates answer questions about their pasts

Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — Republican rivals Bob Dole, Pat Buchanan and Lamar Alexander wrestled with their pasts Sunday as they tried to shore up prospects for winning — or just surviving — the New Hampshire presidential primary.

With one day to go before the pivotal contest, the race has grown increasingly volatile. For Dole, deadlocked with Buchanan for first place in weekend polling data, every vote is crucial.

Dole moved up a planned endorsement by former rival Phil Gramm even though polls showed the Texas senator had minimal support here when he quit the race last week.

Some surveys released last weekend included Alexander in a three-man tie for first, while others placed him solidly behind Dole and Buchanan. Publisher Steve Forbes has sunk to a distant fourth.

Fighting for an outright win, Buchanan defended controversial statements on women and race from his earlier campaigns and editorial writings by saying Sunday "the statute of limitations has run out on those things."

Dole, haunted by the 1988 loss here which knocked him out of that race, tried Sunday to lower the stakes in Tuesday's balloting — though he earlier insisted it would determine the nominee.

"I probably should have said if Bob Dole wins New Hampshire, Bob Dole would be the nominee," the Senate majority leader said on ABC. "If we don't win New Hampshire, we'll win North and South Dakota."

In his own appearance on the television news shows, Alexander was again dogged by questions about his lucrative financial dealings and his 1985 proposal to enact a state income tax — issues raised in new Dole ads.

"Senator Dole is running a negative, desperate campaign. His campaign must show me moving up very rapidly if that's all he has to say about our future," Alexander said on NBC's "Meet the Press." He denied any financial wrongdoing and pledged not to raise marginal income tax rates if elected.

In terms of raw exposure, Forbes outdid his rivals with at least three campaign stops sandwiched between two network appearances and a paid half-hour of live evening television broadcast statewide.

Hopefuls stuck in the bottom half of the eight-man pack were participating in an afternoon forum snubbed by the Top Four.

In endorsing Dole Sunday — instead of next week in South Carolina as planned — Gramm warned the success and image of the Republican Party rested on keeping the nomination from Buchanan.

Picking up that theme without naming Buchanan, Dole said "We have got to bring the economic and the social conservatives together. You can't divide us and expect to win in November."

Gramm gave Dole an even bigger lead in the endorsement game; he's backed by 24 governors and 29 senators. Dole also got the nod Sunday from The Boston Globe, one of the most widely read papers in the state's voter-rich southern tier. And his campaign trumpeted an endorsement by popular Boston Red Sox legend Ted Williams.

Earlier, Dole visited Manchester's West High School, where he was briefed on local anti-drug impromptu stop at the Exeter, N.H., bandstand Saturday afternoon. Polls now rank Forbes fourth in the GOP race.

efforts teaming students with police. Dole pledged to continue federal funds for the fight against drugs and violent crime, but said specific solutions should be left to local communities.

Alexander, whom Dole labeled "liberal" in a new ad, appeared to tack right in remarks outside a bait and tackle shop.

"The assault-weapons ban was passed and hasn't worked," Alexander told a crowd of about 75 people and twice as many media types. He also called for protecting the environment without bowing to "environmental extremists."

After a breakfast stop at a Manchester blue-collar restaurant President Clinton had claimed a good-luck charm, Buchanan characterized his surge as a political revolution of "peasants with pitchforks."

He brushed aside charges of "extremism" as evidence that he's on the verge of winning.

"They are in a terminal panic," Buchanan said, speaking of both Republicans and Democrats. "They hear the shouts of the peasants over the hill. All the peasants are coming with pitchforks. We're going over the top."

His remarks to a rally of more than 1,000 supporters in Nashua came at the close of a week of tough scrutiny after two campaign aides were accused of links to white supremacist groups. The Dole campaign also began airing ads that recall a Buchanan column about women, which some critics consider sexist.

On ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," Buchanan opined that local communities should decide for themselves whether to teach creation science or evolutionism in public schools.

"I believe children should not be forced to believe the Bible but I think every child should know what is in the Old and New Testament," he said, adding that parents should have the right to keep their children from being taught "godless evolution."

In Sunday editions of the state's largest newspaper, Alexander and Forbes were confronted by accusations of "dodging" and "straddling" the abortion issue in a full-page ad by the National Right to Life Political Action Committee. Both advocate a step-by-step approach to curbing abortion, while anti-abortion activists insist on a constitutional ban on the procedure.

CLINTON VOWS PROGRESS

President promises to avoid 'siren song of simple answers'

Ron Fournier
Associated Press

KEENE, N.H. — Fighting for re-election against voter cynicism, apathy and economic insecurity, President Clinton pledged Saturday to avoid "the siren song of simple answers" and hollow promises if handed a second term.

Revealing surprisingly modest expectations, Clinton told New Hampshire voters, "If you vote for me I won't solve all the problems. I won't give you a miracle. But I will give you progress."

The remarks, his most direct plea for re-election so far, highlighted a one-day, five-city New Hampshire visit designed to steal attention from Republican rivals as they scratch and claw for votes in Tuesday's primary. Clinton, who drew huge crowds at each city, has the luxury of no major primary opposition, but still must energize his political core for November.

Wind and ice grounded Air Force One at Andrews Air Force Base for two hours with Clinton aboard, getting his second New Hampshire trip this month off to a sluggish start. The day's careful script was mangled again in Manchester, N.H., when AIDS activists heckled the president.

Ticking off a list of AIDS-related administration initiatives, Clinton responded to the hecklers with a slap at Republicans. "You might ask, 'Why is this demonstration going on in our rally, instead of their rally?'" he said.

An icy wind pinched the reddened faces of 10,000 people who huddled in the Keene town square as Clinton declared, "I come here today to ask for your support, not ... because of the achievements of this administration, but because of the challenges that lie ahead and because we dare not face those challenges unless we are willing to face them with vision — and to face them together."

In stop after snowy stop, Clinton rolled out his stump speech, honed for a series of trips to GOP primary states. In it, the president defends his record on crime, the economy and the environment and issues a broadside against GOP opposition to a host of administration proposals, including AmeriCorps, a minimum wage increase and a measure allowing people to transfer their health insurance from job to job.

Critics who say his gun control efforts took weapons away from hunters "are not telling the truth," the president said. And he demanded Congress heed an angry electorate and embrace election-year campaign finance reforms to "clean up our act."

Taking a partisan swipe, Clinton reminded voters of the New Hampshire handshake he shared eight months ago with House Speaker Newt Gingrich, sealing their pledge to name a bipartisan panel on political reform.

The commission never materialized; Clinton and Gingrich blamed each other. Frank McConnell, a restaurant and ski shop owner who proposed the idea in a question to Gingrich and Clinton last June, met with the president so Clinton could "bring him up to date."

"We need to pass campaign reform and we need it now," the president said. He also devoted his weekly radio address to the topic.

Earlier, 3,000 foot-stomping, pompon-waving supporters filled a Rochester, N.H., gymnasium with chants of "Four More Years!" and "No Newts!" as Clinton made an emotional plea for another term.

"My fellow Americans, by any standard, we have made progress," he said.

New Hampshire offers Clinton practice on the political tightrope of 1996: He must take credit for good news on the economy and other fronts without seeming oblivious to problems Americans still face. It's a trick George Bush never mastered, allowing Clinton to take the White House four years ago with the credo, "It's the economy, stupid."

"They say there is no opposition in the primary," Clinton said in Rochester, his voice rising. "Oh, yes, there is. Cynicism is our opponent. Apathy is our opponent. The siren song of simple answers that are wrong is our opponent."

Later, he told the Keene crowd, "America is on the move!"

higher education.
COGS members also want to talk about their specific needs as graduate students, she said.
"When the governor announced the surplus, it seemed the opportunity time to make these needs known," Taylor said, "and to put faces on this big mass of people called graduate students."

Although COGS members are lobbying for some things specific to graduate students, they will not take funds away from other institutions in Iowa to meet their goals, Taylor said.

"Our goal is not to pit our needs against others," she said. "We want to see the budget increased — to expand the pie, not narrow the slices."

BILLS DEBATED

The measure up for debate in the Iowa House already has passed the state Senate. Legislators say they don't know of any assisted suicide cases in Iowa and they want to keep it from becoming a problem in the state.

"There are instances in the law where things you wouldn't even think about do occur. And so, it's a pre-emptive type of thing," House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs, said.

Under the bill, it would be a felony to knowingly help or cause someone to commit or attempt suicide. The maximum penalty would be 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

In addition, changes in the state's speed limits are on the Senate debate calendar this week.

A Senate committee has passed a bill that would increase the speed limit from 55 mph to 65 mph on four-lane, divided highways generally known as expressways.

Sen. Wally Horn, D-Cedar Rapids, said he thinks some senators will try to change the bill.

"I would suspect that there will be someone wanting to raise the speed limit on the interstate and there probably will be a debate on that," he said.

But Horn said he's been contacted by trucking companies that don't want the speed limit raised for 18-wheelers on the interstate if it's raised above 65 mph for other vehicles. He said the companies are concerned about traffic safety and fuel economy.

"I think that's fast enough for trucks, myself," Horn said.

The House Transportation Committee is working on its own speed limit bill but hasn't approved one yet.

Siegrist said he thinks the House will vote to raise the speed limit on interstates in Iowa.

"That's truly a nonpartisan issue. We're just trying to work out some of the details," he said.

Two other controversial topics are up for debate this week:

The House plans to debate a bill that would establish several crimes for violence against pregnant women that causes them to miscarry. The bill was requested by an Iowa City couple and a Davenport couple who lost their unborn children after they were involved in traffic accidents.

The Senate plans to debate a bill that would increase the penalties for possessing or selling methamphetamine. Illegal use of the drug is increasing in Iowa and legislators say something needs to be done to stop that.

March 1 is the first deadline of the session for legislation. House bills die that day unless they've been approved by a House committee and Senate bills die if they haven't gotten approval from a Senate committee. After that, the subject can only come up if it's requested by legislative leaders or it's added onto another bill.

BUCHANAN

room.

Several hundred more surged outside into a lobby after police shut the ballroom, declaring it a potential fire hazard.

His voice hoarse, Buchanan proclaimed himself the man of the hour — and of the month — and predicted victory on Tuesday and in November over President Clinton.

Multimillionaire publisher Steve Forbes was "Mr. January. I'm Mr. February," Buchanan boasted.

"History is about to be made in the state of New Hampshire," Buchanan asserted. "The establishment in Washington is shaking in its boots at what's going on here."

Buchanan continued to direct his appeal at social conservatives and economic conservatives, with just one day to go to the crucial first-in-the-nation primary.

Earlier, on a television interview show, Buchanan said parents should have the right to protect their children from the teaching of "godless evolution," suggesting that he questions the theory of evolution.

The conservative Republican said parents "have a right to insist that godless evolution not be taught to their children or their children not be indoctrinated in it."

"I believe these things are best decided at the local level. That's why I am going to shut down the U.S. Department of Education," he said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Asked by ABC reporter Sam Donaldson whether he accepted the creationist belief that God made the world in six days, Buchanan responded, "God did it according to the Bible. You may believe you are descended from monkeys, I don't believe it."

Buchanan, a Catholic, said he

"God did it according to the Bible. You may believe you are descended from monkeys, I don't believe it."

Pat Buchanan, on the subject of evolution during an ABC interview with Sam Donaldson believed "the New Testament is literally the word of God and the Old Testament is the inspired word of God."

"I believe that children should not be forced to believe the Bible but I think that every child should know what is in the Old and New Testament."

Buchanan has won a strong following from Christian conservatives for his advocacy of the rights to school prayer and his outspoken criticisms of alternative lifestyles.

Later, at the rally here, he mentioned his appearance and ridiculed panel member George Will, a conservative columnist. "He started lapping at me like a little poodle," Buchanan said. "I had to take a newspaper and roll it up..."

Buchanan stood on a stage with about a dozen former New Hampshire supporters of Texas Sen. Phil Gramm and suggested that, even though Gramm had endorsed Dole, he had the backing of much of Gramm's rank-and-file organization in the state.

"Phil's organization will join us in rallying behind 'a new conservative that will provide voice for the voiceless,'" Buchanan said.

The former broadcaster predicted victory over Dole, saying that Dole's lead in Iowa was three percentage points but that "he's not going to have a three-point lead in New Hampshire."

CIVILITY

day life at The Geneva Lecture Series' 20th anniversary Friday night. He was the original speaker at the first Geneva Lecture Series in 1976.

He offered five suggestions for being more civil to your fellow humans: increase honesty, empathy, teachability, patience and humility.

"It's not easy to live at peace with people with whom we disagree," he said. "The American experiment is an ongoing effort at civility and it continues to get more complicated. The texture of the challenges of civility are constantly changing."

UI junior Sarah Stertz said she thought it was possible to bring together UI student organizations who disagree.

"I would certainly hope they

"It's not easy to live at peace with people with whom we disagree. The American experiment is an ongoing effort at civility and it continues to get more complicated."

Richard Mouw, President of the Fuller Theological Seminary

could get together," she said. "I think it could happen on a group level. I would certainly be open to seeing that happen. It's just a matter of both sides being willing to talk."

Mouw said politicians can increase their civility, but recent Republican candidates have a long road ahead of them.

"It would take the rather radical commitment of a politician who cares more about telling the truth than about winning an election," he said. "There's just so much dishonesty and instability and distortion of people that I think we're facing a crisis of character in the political arena."

UI campus minister Jason Chen said during his 25 years at the UI, he's seen people become less civil to each other.

"Even for people to say 'Hi' to one another, there's a lot of deep-rooted fear," he said. "I see a difference between the kind of dynamics between males and females. That really saddens me because there was a time on the university campus here when you could say 'Hi' and people would say 'Hi' back, and people were very nice."

Stertz said people at the UI are civil to each other — most of the time.

"If issues are raised, like what happened this fall when Campus Crusade did that big ad about gay and lesbianism and there was a lot of response from the other side and people kind of got into a battle," she said. "But overall, I think things here are fairly civil."

Mouw said though he takes a conservative view on abortion and gay rights, people on both sides of the issue can learn from each other.

"We need to drop the labels," he said. "Everyone is broken and on a journey to wholeness."

HOUSING PROJECT

residents to live there for up to two years.

"It will be in a regular boarding house owned by the city," Jordan said. "They gave Theresa Kopatch (on-site counselor at EHP) as the private landlord $125,000 towards the mortgage. She will pay that mortgage back through subsidies, so (the tenants) will pay 30 percent of their rent."

EHP will provide the tenants with basic living skills, Jordan said.

"Emergency Housing Project will be out there meeting with these people once a week," she said. "We will be giving them help in whatever area they may need, whether it be budgeting, mental health assistance, learning how to cook, clean or maintaining a house in general. All of those skills will be provided through EHP."

The project will start out with five apartment units, and the city anticipates 15 such units by summer, with EHP providing support to those as well.

Jordan said EHP's open house also allowed the community to see the facility and learn more about its programs.

"It's important for the community to see the shelter," Jordan said. "This is really the community's shelter. Sometimes people are surprised at how bright and clean it is. People think that when you are housing 29 people that it has to look really bad."

Iowa House Assistant Minority Leader Dick Myers, D-Iowa City, said he applauds EHP's efforts, but the homeless issue in the Iowa Legislature has been put aside due to the economy's rapid growth.

"It's very clean and well-maintained," he said. "It answers a need and a way to go about it. I'm especially interested in the issue of children and it is serving a definite need to them."

AUTO RACING

Jarrett keeps title out of Earnhardt's hands

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt just couldn't do any more — on the track or off.

He and the Richard Childress Racing team did thousands of miles of winter testing, built a car just for the Daytona 500 and put in hundreds of hours of engine work. All for another second place.

Dale Jarrett held off Earnhardt on Sunday for the second time in three years on the way to victory in NASCAR's biggest event.

"We did everything we could do to be ready for this race, but it's Daytona," Earnhardt said with resignation and defeat in his voice. "We just didn't have enough for 'em."

Earnhardt stayed at or near the front all day, leading six times for 32 of the 200 laps on Daytona International Speedway's 2 1/2-mile oval.

Jarrett, in a Robert Yates Ford Thunderbird, drove past Earnhardt's Chevrolet Monte Carlo into the lead on lap 177, with the Chevy of Ken Schrader following.

Earnhardt then got back to second place the next time around and chased Jarrett the rest of the way, trying to force a mistake that would allow him to win the Daytona 500 for the first time.

Earnhardt, known to NASCAR fans as The Intimidator, turned up the heat on the last lap to the delight of an estimated 150,000 spectators, who stood and cheered.

Coming off the final corner, Earnhardt drove his car low on the banked oval. Jarrett dodged in front.

Earnhardt went high, Jarrett went higher.

Low again, Jarrett again.

And for the second straight year, Earnhardt was second again — a virtual replay of the 1993 finish.

Jarrett crossed the finish line 0.12-seconds — 2 1/2 car-lengths — in front of Earnhardt, who was just in front of Schrader.

"The last 15 laps felt like they were a minute and a half apiece," Jarrett said. "The last lap was close to 500 miles in itself. I think I'd rather see anybody else in the mirror but the No. 3 car."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

NCAA votes to add overtime tiebreaker

The NCAA football rules committee voted Thursday to require a tiebreaker in all college football games starting next season.

The system was used in Division I bowl games last season.

Under the tiebreaker system, each team gets the ball on its opponent's 25-yard line. The team winning the coin toss will choose whether to start on offense or defense or which side of the field the possessions will take place on. Each team gets possession at the same side of the field.

A possession ends when a team scores, turns the ball over or fails to convert on four downs. The game ends when the score is no longer tied after an overtime period.

Any score by the defense, with the exception of the return of an extra-point attempt following a touchdown, wins the game.

Pulling away from the pack

Hawkeyes stake their claim on Big Ten

Jon Bassoff
The Daily Iowan

As far as Angie Lee and her Iowa team is concerned, it is now safe to forever close the book on last year. The future is now.

The Hawkeyes came away with a pair of huge conference wins over the weekend. Friday night, Iowa topped No. 9 Penn State at home, 81-69. Then on Sunday, the Hawkeyes traveled to Madison and edged No. 11 Wisconsin, 67-63, before a sold out crowd of 11,522.

With the victories, Iowa clinched at least a share of the Big Ten title.

It was a two-person show for No. 7 Iowa (22-2, 13-1) in the second-half against the Badgers (19-5, 11-3). Nadine Domond and Tangela Smith combined for all of Iowa's 33 second-half points, 18 from Domond and 15 from Smith.

Domond finished with a career-high 31 points. She hit 12-of-16 from the field for the game, including five-of-seven from three-point land.

Smith led the Hawkeyes with eight rebounds and five blocks. Her last block was the biggest as she swatted Ann Klapperich's shot away with four seconds left that could have tied the game at 65.

"What a fabulous event this was for women's basketball," Iowa coach Angie Lee said. "Both teams absolutely put it on the line. You couldn't have asked for a better showing."

Iowa battled back from early shooting woes to tie up the Badgers at halftime, 34-34.

The second-half was a battle of wills as neither team led by more than four points. The score was tied at 63 with 1:48 remaining, but Smith hit a short jumper with 47 seconds left, to give Iowa the lead. Smith then blocked Klapperich's shot to seal the victory.

Domond was the story of the weekend. She finished with 57 points in the two victories.

"You don't know who's going to show up on a given night," Lee said. "All we did was take shots in rotation and Nadine hit them when it was her turn."

On Friday night, Domond led a

Opposing coaches dazzled by Domond

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

Caution Big Ten teams: Iowa sophomore Nadine Domond may be hazardous to your defense.

Just ask Wisconsin coach Jane Albright-Dieterle. After Domond lit up the Badgers for 31 points during Iowa's 67-63 victory Sunday, she seemed a little deflated.

"Domond broke our zone, she broke our man-to-man, she broke us," Albright-Dieterle said.

Maybe it was just Albright-Dieterle's turn to find out what other Big Ten coaches have found out the hard way after playing the Hawkeyes: Domond can dominate.

In Iowa's 81-69 win over Penn State two days earlier, Domond scored 26 points, 18 in the first half. Penn State coach Rene Portland said it could have been much worse.

"It's a good thing we guarded her in second half. Who knows what she could have done? When she's on, she can hit from anywhere. If you don't get somebody out on her, then you're going to pay," Portland said.

Domond said after the Penn State game that sometimes she just feels it.

"I've felt like this before. I just knew that the shot felt good and I took it. I have to give credit to my teammates for getting me the ball when I was on," Domond said.

It's not like Domond misses a lot either. In the Wisconsin win, Domond hit 12-of-16 shots from the field, including five-of-seven from three-point range. Iowa coach Angie Lee said it's not that Domond is the only weapon in the Hawkeye arsenal, but it's more of Domond just waiting for her turn to take the shots.

"Nadine is very patient," Lee said. "All we do is take shots in the rotation and when it's Nadine's turn, she just flat out hits them."

Domond has come through big in important games. In a pivotal contest back on Feb. 2 at Ohio State, Domond exploded on the Buckeyes for 24 points in the second half to lead Iowa to a 82-75 victory.

Ohio State coach Nancy Darsch had only praise for the 5-9 guard.

Iowa rips Cyclones in final home meet

Shannon Stevens
The Daily Iowan

Iowa State wrestling coach Bobby Douglas had seen this before.

After only four matches, the Cyclones were trailing by a score of 16-0, but Douglas just sat on the Iowa State bench with an emotionless stare.

He already knew the outcome. The top-ranked Hawkeyes (17-0) closed out their undefeated regular season by walloping intrastate rival Iowa State 33-4 before 11,679 fans at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Sunday afternoon.

The victory was Iowa's 18th-straight over the Cyclones (12-5-1) and extended Iowa's consecutive win streak to 33. Earlier this year, Iowa defeated the Cyclones, 22-12, in Ames.

Douglas said his squad was simply overwhelmed by the Hawkeyes.

Hawkeyes stop rally in time

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

It's not over 'til the fat lady is off the horizontal bar.

The Fighting Illini took the No. 3 Iowa men's gymnastics team down to the last event, but the Hawkeyes prevailed to win the Big Ten clash 223.875-222.00 Saturday at the UI Fieldhouse.

The Hawkeyes were clinging to a 2-point lead heading into the final event, the horizontal bar, but clutch performances by Aaron Cotter, Mark Kuglitsch, and Pete Masucci sealed the victory for Iowa. Either way, it was too close for comfort for head coach Tom Dunn.

Julie Bill/The Daily Iowan

Iowa gymnasts finished in the top four spots on the pommel horse Saturday during a victory over Illinois at the UI Fieldhouse.

"I'm a little disappointed with how we ended the meet," Dunn said. "We dominated the first part of the meet, then things started to go south from there. Luckily, we were able to pull it out."

Iowa dominated the meet early, with the top three finishes in the floor exercise and the top four on the pommel horse. Junior Mike

Michigan shakes off auto accident

Harry Atkins
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan badly needed some heart. The Wolverines got that and more from Albert White and Maceo Baston.

Michigan shook off the effects of a potentially tragic auto accident as White and Baston, two players who weren't involved, combined for 39 points and led the Wolverines to an 80-75 victory over Indiana Sunday.

White scored 21 points while Baston had 18 points and 13 rebounds for the struggling Wolverines (16-9, 6-6 Big Ten), who kept their hopes alive for an NCAA tournament berth.

Five Michigan players, plus a highly touted recruit, escaped serious injury early Saturday during a rollover accident as they returned from a party in Detroit.

The 1996 Ford Explorer, driven by Maurice Taylor, flipped after Taylor apparently fell asleep. Police said alcohol was not a factor. Also in the vehicle were Willie Mitchell, Robert Traylor, Louis Bullock, all starters, and Ron Oliver.

The most serious injury was Traylor's broken arm, which ended the 320-pound freshman's season.

Pippen, Jordan light up

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Michael Jordan scored 44 points and Scottie Pippen had a season-high 40 — just the ninth time in NBA history that two teammates had over 40 points in the same game — as the Chicago Bulls defeated Indiana 110-102 Sunday.

The win extended the Bulls' current winning streak to five and bringing their league-best record to 46-5.

Dennis Rodman, the league's leading rebounder, contributed 23 rebounds to the victory as Chicago had a 52-44 edge on the boards.

Indiana, which had defeated the Bulls 103-97 in their first meeting at Market Square Arena this season and three straight wins over the Bulls at home, had five players in double figures.

Tupac needs help from friends

Nathan Groepper
The Daily Iowan

Oil and water. Tupac and the Fugees. Although the two may feel very similar, their differences are nearly immeasurable.

Tupac Shakur's fourth album, All Eyez on Me, is a classic example of West Coast rap. As the first double CD in rap history and Shakur's first album for mega-rap label Death Row Records, the majority of the album's two hour, 27 track content centers on tired themes such as cruising, smoking weed, players and a debate over whose corner of the world is stronger.

Fortunately, Shakur's guest list reads like an all-star ballot of today's rap industry. Over 11 producers, including Dr. Dre, DJ Quik, Dat Nigga Daz and Johnny "J," and 26 guest artists such as Snoop Doggy Dogg, E-40, Rappin' 4-Tay and KC help push All Eyez on Me out of its thematic restraints to being a slick and entertaining album.

On a few tracks, Shakur leaves his world of intolerance to focus on universal concerns. From the reconciliation of "I Ain't Mad At Cha" to "Life Goes On," a reminiscence of friends, Shakur again proves to be the master of the rap ballad. His ability to connect to the listeners with simple, concise lyrics goes beyond the tracks' funky grooves. Somehow, listeners understand his point of view and see a little piece of themselves in a man mourning for lost souls.

The album's less serious tracks are not as noteworthy. Exceptions include the lyrically dense "Got My Mind Made Up," which includes brilliant cameos from Method Man and Redman, and the driving "Holla At Me." The fast-paced tempo of "Holla At Me" fits Shakur's rapid, machine-gun delivery with a tune worthy of his style. On the track's catchy chorus, Shakur flows: "Gotta be careful, can't let the evil of money trap me/So when you see me, n****a, you betta' holla at me!"

Tupac Shakur's recent release, All Eyez on Me, lacks the musical diversity of the Fugees' The Score.

Shakur's Death Row debut is much stronger than the lukewarm release from Tha Dogg Pound. All Eyez on Me will make a huge commercial splash. However, the overall product is not engrossing enough to make the cultural waves in the mainstream which its predecessors did.

On the other side of the country and the other end of the rap spectrum is the sophomore release from the Fugees, The Score. On their new album, group members Lauryn, Pras and Wyclef have created a style and a sound like no one else in hip-hop. The Fugees' unique Haitian sound is embellished by scenic, active lyrics, gorgeous vocals and engrossing, creative production with the intent of raising rap to another level of artistry. The Score is a message to rappers nationwide: You better step up or get out of the Fugees' way.

The group's stylistic diversity helps create impressive tracks such as "Ready Or Not." Talented singer and rapper Lauryn sparkles on the song's soulful, yet seductive chorus, as Pras shows off his newly honed writing skills: "I refugee from Guantanamo Bay/dance round the border like I'm Cassius Clay."

On the album's first single, "Fu-Gee-La," the Fugees explode with calm and devastating force. Wyclef's commanding verse fires while the music glides around the vocals caressing the mix. The Fugees' sound and appeal is much more subtle than artists such as Shakur. Their songs do not wallop you in the ear with overused baselines or heavily sampled P-funk. Before you will notice it, your head is bobbing, and you are humming along with the distinct sound of a Fugees' song which you have only listened to a couple of times.

The Score may not establish the Fugees as a commercial success. It does, however, fascinatingly showcase a group who promotes individuality and creativity, and tries to push the boundaries of hip-hop.

Would a performer like Shakur ever collaborate with a group such as the Fugees? Sorry, but oil and water don't mix.

Campaign '96 — the latest story arc

Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Everybody knows who won the 1992 presidential campaign. It was Larry King. Phil Donahue. Tabitha Soren. Arsenio Hall.

It was they, holding forth on TV, who were party to some of the most memorable moments of the race. (Can you ever forget Bill Clinton playing the saxophone on "Arsenio" or Tabby interviewing President Bush for MTV News?)

More than ever before, the campaign in '92 wasn't just a story, but a show.

Now comes "Campaign '96 — The Sequel."

Granted, presidential campaigns — and coverage of them — never really stops or starts. But the latest "story arc" (to use a TV term) commenced with last week's Iowa caucuses, leading into next Tuesday's New Hampshire primary.

If you're just tuning in, you missed the story line starring Colin Powell.

"There were suicide watches on journalists' homes all over the country last November when Powell decided not to run," jokes Susan Zirinsky, executive producer of CBS News' campaign coverage.

They needn't have worried. With a wax-museum smile, "flat tax" mantra and scads of money, a certain magazine publisher soon stole the show.

"This was supposed to be a boring election cycle and, in fact, it has been anything but," Tim Russert, senior vice president of NBC News, was saying last week. "What happened? The Steve Forbes phenomenon."

Based on Forbes' surprise emergence, already conclusions are being revised, and winners and losers all but being declared. For instance, a CNN pundit last week pronounced Republican front-runner Bob Dole "in deep trouble," while conceding, "of course, no votes have been cast yet."

Of course, once votes were cast in Iowa, Dole was back on his feet. Forbes, far behind, was being dismissed by many pundits. But never fear. It's all part of the show.

Phil and Arsenio may have been turned out of office by the Nielsen electorate since last time, but as the '96 race gets going full-blast, MTV is back with its so-called "Choose or Lose" coverage, which in 1994 put its news division — and newcomer Soren — on the map.

Comedy Central is back with "Indecision '96," although the network pledges to do more this time than dub wisecracks over candidates' stump speeches. With "Politically Incorrect" host Bill Maher on board, Comedy Central will report from certain primaries and even plans to attend both parties' national conventions.

Lifetime's "Go Vote: '96" initiative will build toward what it hopes in the fall will bring the parties' nominees together for a televised debate on women's issues.

And as a "new media" extension, TV's Big Three network news divisions and CNN are supplementing their television presence with election-oriented World Wide Web sites on the Internet — something no one had heard of four years ago.
