UISG looks at reorganizing

Graduate students seek more government representation

Sara Voreis
The Daily Iowan

A potential reorganization of UI Student Government has senators questioning the representation of graduate students at the UI.

In a resolution passed Tuesday night, UISG decided to form a committee to look at how, or even whether, to restructure the organization in order to better serve graduate students.

"We want more autonomy," Graduate Student Senate President Paul Young said. "A lot of the issues in UISG do not involve grad students at all. We want to reorganize in a more representative and reasonable way."

Under the present system, three branches make up the UISG. Undergraduate Activities Senate and Undergraduate Collegiate Senate represent undergraduate students while the Graduate and Professional Student Senate represents graduate students.

GSS is a Class II organization that represents 70 percent of the UI's 5,600 graduate students, Lano said.

"GSS represents more grad students than GPSS, but GPSS makes all decisions," Graduate Student senator Ralph Lano said. "GSS has no say whatsoever in fiscal issues.

Our real concern is the power of GPSS without real representation."

The committee will examine the concerns of the GSS and develop a proposal to be discussed in March. The committee will be made of two representatives from each of the three senates of the UISG, three members of GSS and the president and vice president of the UISG.

One proposal the committee will consider is based on the student government's structure at Iowa State University, where half of graduate-student activity fees are allocated to the graduate student senate and the other half to the university's student senate, Young said.

"We're striving for a simple model," Young said. "The UISG does many things that benefit both so

DEADWOOD CELEBRATION

Mardi Gras alive in Iowa City!

Evelyn Lauer
The Daily Iowan

Masked and beaded, UI senior Greta Pollpeter and UI alumna Beth Ketelaar sat at a booth at the Deadwood Tuesday night drinking hurricanes in the spirit of Mardi Gras.

"There's no place better to go — except for New Orleans," said Pollpeter, who has been part of the Deadwood's annual Mardi Gras celebration for three years. "There always seems to be a strong Mardi Gras spirit here. I've been wearing my beads all day and no one has noticed."

For the past four years, Deadwood owners Jim and Holly Bell have thrown a costume party on Fat Tuesday, the day before the first day of Lent, for regulars and those searching for Iowa City's version of a great hurricane.

"It's grown on its own," Jim Bell said. "The employees like it and have a good time. The regulars talk about it and have a good time. We even get thanked."

Fat Tuesday has developed as a feast before the beginning of Lent, Ash Wednesday, which is traditionally a time of fasting for Catholics.

However, even if the Deadwood's annual crowd isn't there to indulge before seven weeks of fasting, it's still a good time, Bell said.

"It's a great theme for a party," he said. "It's like Halloween. It's an excuse to put on a mask and step out of character. People can be a little looser than usual. The timing is great, too. Everyone has cabin fever and during Mardi Gras they can kick up their heels."

Each year a line forms outside the door of the Deadwood as patrons with painted faces clad in costumes and loaded down with beads come to enter the contest,

UI junior Stephanie Bakosh said she and a few friends plan on driving to Vail, Colo., for break.

The group plans to stay with Bakosh's aunt. "We'll probably ski a little but the main thing is to

DOLE A CLOSE SECOND

Buchanan takes New Hampshire

John King

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Conservative rebel Pat Buchanan won a narrow victory Tuesday in New Hampshire's leadoff primary, knocking Bob Dole from his perch as Republican presidential front-runner and throwing the race into three-way turmoil.

Late-charging Lamar Alexander, former governor of Tennessee, was a close third and trumpeting his challenge to Dole as the campaign turned to a five-week, 30-state burst of primaries.

Alexander argued it was time for the Republican Party to turn to him, not "a weakened Senator Dole," as the alternative to the unorthodox economic and social programs developed by Buchanan.

For Buchanan, the commentator-turned-candidate, it was another dramatic New Hampshire night. Four years ago, he scored 37 percent against an incumbent GOP president here, asserting himself in national Republican politics.

With 86 percent of precincts counted, Buchanan had 45,802 votes, or 27 percent, to 44,232, or 26 percent, for Dole. Alexander had 38,691, 23 percent, Publishing heir Steve Forbes was a distant fourth at 12 percent, and said by associates to be reassessing his campaign but likely to press on for another week because of his strength in Arizona, which votes next Tuesday.

New Hampshire's results were likely to winnow the field at the bottom of the ballot, though none of the struggling candidates would admit as much in advance. Forbes, particularly, had to be disappointed. He was tied for the New Hampshire lead a month ago but his effort to promote a flat income tax willed as moderate voters chose between Dole and Alexander.

Indiana Sen. Dick Lugar was fifth at 5 percent, and Alan Keyes had 3 percent. Illinois businessmen Morry Taylor and California Rep. Robert Dornan had even less to show for their New Hampshire efforts.

"We have made history again tonight," Buchanan said in celebration. Buchanan delivered a

Pot use affects attention long-term

CHICAGO — People who smoke marijuana heavily — at least two out of every three days — may have trouble paying attention and performing simple tasks even a day after going without the drug, a study found.

Researchers compared 65 college students who smoked at least 22 days a month with 64 similar students who smoked nine days a month at most.

A day after going without the drug, the heavy marijuana users performed significantly worse on tasks that involved sustaining and shifting attention.

The ability to remember things newly learned did not differ significantly between the groups, the researchers reported in today's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

Internet University — prepare to party

Joe Ranft
The Daily Iowan

When Mark Levy was an undergraduate at the University of Pennsylvania, he was fed up by the high prices the school's bookstore charged for textbooks.

This doesn't make him different than students at every other university in the country, but unlike most students, Levy did something about it. He started his own bookstore — Campus Text — with lower prices.

Campus Text thrived, and when Levy graduated in May 1995 from Penn's Wharton School of Business and College of Arts & Sciences, he wanted to expand Campus Text and sell books to college students all over the country.

"Campus Text put me in the mode of looking for ways to provide valuable services to college students," Levy said. "First I thought about how I could provide students around the country with discounted textbooks. Then I developed the much broader concept of Internet University."

Last November Levy began work on Internet University. By the end of January 1996, the site was up and running at www.internetuniv.com.

Visitors to the site will be either disappointed or pleased, depending on what they expect from a university.

If Internet University's virtual students expect to visit a party school, they'll be happier than a freshman with a fake i.d.

But if they log on to Internet University looking for last minute help on their term paper about the symbolism in Hamlet, they'll be better off buying a copy of Cliff's Notes.

Internet University's resources focus on the lighter side of college life, and they do so better than any site of its kind. The opening screen provides grungy and colorful graphics listing Internet University's various "Departments," including Arts & Entertainment, Lifestyles, Sportz, Career, Knowledge for College, Money, Travel and a virtual Outlet Store.

But what's a university doing without a philosophy department?

It's obvious from the start this site is about having fun.

Users are encouraged to send an e-mail pizza to friends, with 60 different toppings ranging from Spam to cash to fried eggs. Users write a message, view their pizzas and send their creations on the way. Electronic delivery is no doubt faster than 30 minutes.

Or users will be encouraged to check out Internet University's link to "recipes that can be made in '15 Minutes or Less with Ingredients from 7-Eleven.'" One such recipe — The St. Louis Bombshell — includes one box of corn flakes, one half gallon of chocolate ice cream and Hershey's syrup. Don't look for these recipes on the American Heart Association's diet.

This is Levy's idea of fun. "We never take ourselves too seriously," he says.

Others might find such fun cutting into their study time, which according to Levy, a lot of people are doing at Internet University. In the last week more than 19,000 unique visitors have been to the site, spending an average of 1 hour and 35 minutes.

Besides annoying friends with electronic pizzas and cutting years off their lives with disgusting recipes, users will find links to nearly every conceivable interest they have. This is the most valuable aspect of the Internet University — college students who have tried and failed in the past to find their interests located in one place on the Internet will need to look no further.

For example, the Art link will take you to a directory listing sites for art archives, movements, museums and artists. Digging into the Arts and Entertainment section will yield links to cartoons such as "Calvin and Hobbes," "Bloom County," "Dilbert" and "This Modern World," to name a few.

Visitors to the "Take a Break" area will find Internet University hawking package deals to various Spring Break destinations.

Levy promises more academic content in the future.

"Users will be able to type a question — any question — and get a list of newspaper and magazine articles, photos and more to help them answer that question," he said.

This sounds promising, but for now students at Internet University will have to be content with slinging Spam pizzas via e-mail, as well as finding a jumping point for all of the information they could want outside of class.

Engineering college to honor Distinguished Alumni

The UI College of Engineering will induct 18 charter members into its newly formed Distinguished Engineering Alumni Academy Saturday at the Union as a part of National Engineer's Week.

Election to the Academy recognizes alumni who have made significant contributions to their profession and society through scientific achievement, leadership and service. All of the charter members have previously received Distinguished Alumni Awards from the UI Alumni Association.

The inductees are: Lilia Abron, chemical engineering doctorate, 1972; Mikio Arie, mechanics and hydraulics master's, 1955; James Ashton, civil engineering bachelor's, 1964; David Buchanan, electrical engineering bachelor's, 1958 and masters, 1963; Frank Chrenkic, chemical engineering bachelor's, 1937; Thomas Daniels, electrical engineering bachelor's, 1948; and Richard Emmer, chemical engineering bachelor's, 1951.

Also to be inducted: Phillip Hubbard, electrical engineering bachelor's, 1946; Bingnan Lin, mechanics and hydraulics master's, 1947; Randall Meyer, mechanical engineering bachelor's, 1948; Harry Olson, bachelor's, 1924 and master's, 1932; Margaret Petersen, civil engineering bachelor's, 1947 and mechanics and hydraulics master's, 1953; Gary Seamans, electrical engineering bachelor's, 1971; Clifford Smith Jr., civil engineering bachelor's, 1954; Robert Smith, civil engineering bachelor's, 1947; C. Maxwell Stanley, general engineering bachelor's, 1926; and Himie Voxman, chemical engineering bachelor's, 1993.

Three members, Harry Olson, Robert Smith and C. Maxwell Stanley, are being honored posthumously.

The induction ceremony will take place following a 10 a.m. breakfast at which UI President Mary Sue Coleman will give the keynote address.

Lin, 33, has played for the Boston Symphony since 1985 and is on a leave of absence to serve as co-concertmaster of the London Symphony Orchestra.

"We are still dealing with the question of where the wedding will be, although it is safe to say that it will probably take place outside of Boston," Lockhart said Monday.

Danish royalty visit Mandela's cell, pay tribute to struggle

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Danish Queen Margrethe II, Prince Consort Henrik and Crown Prince Frederik visited Robben Island Tuesday to see the prison cell where Nelson Mandela was held for 18 years.

Ahmed Kathrada, an aide to Mandela, led the royal visitors on the tour of the prison off Cape Town.

They visited the cells, a recreation area and bathrooms of Block B, where the future president of South Africa, Kathrada and other African National Congress leaders were held as political prisoners.

Kathrada said the visit was a gesture of thanks to the queen and all of Denmark for supporting the anti-apartheid struggle.

"I love being engaged in conversation with this man because he's so terribly clever," she said. "What is the key, I think, to anybody's heart, because who doesn't like to laugh? Who? Show me the person who doesn't like to laugh and I'll show you a person with a toe tag."

Snoop avoids 'Dogg pound'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Snoop Doggy Dogg, whose best-selling rap albums portray the street-gang lifestyle of sex, drugs and violence, was acquitted of murder Tuesday in the 1993 slaying of a gang member. Snoop's former bodyguard also was acquitted of murder.

The panel deadlocked on a lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter against the two men and an accessory-after-the-fact charge against Snoop, whose real name is Calvin Broadus. The jury of seven men and five women were to resume deliberations today.

In returning the partial verdicts, jurors also acquitted Snoop, 24, and McKinley Lee, 25, of conspiracy to commit assault in the Aug. 25, 1993, shooting death of Philip Wolde-mariam, an Ethiopian immigrant.

The rapper, whose first album "Doggystyle" hit No. 1 in sales just months after the shooting, stared straight ahead as the court clerk read the verdicts.

Later, Snoop told MTV: "I feel very remorseful. But you know, I mean, God made the decision. And he did what he did."

"We're just gonna encourage everybody to just keep praying for us and supporting us, fearlessly, and keeping our heads up high and realizing that everything's everything."

After the foreman said jurors couldn't agree on the manslaughter charges in 15 ballots, Superior Court Judge John Flynn ordered the panel to resume deliberations on those counts. About an hour later, jurors went home for the evening with orders to return today.

Deputy District Attorney Ed Nison would not comment on the ongoing case.

Skating star Hamill on thin ice financially

PHOENIX (AP) — A bank is suing former Olympic skating star Dorothy Hamill and her husband for repayment of nearly $621,000 in loans that went toward a skating-arena business

Bank of America Arizona filed suit last week against Hamill, her husband, Dr. Kenneth Forsythe, and Hamill Camel Productions. It contends they defaulted on the loans.

The loans date from 1994 and financed Dorothy Hamill Skating Centers Inc., which runs a skating arena in Scottsdale and has filed for bankruptcy.

UI statistics professor: As years add up, so does his energy

Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

After spending nearly 50 years in MacLean Hall, statistics Professor Robert Hogg is planning on making the big move in 1997.

No, he won't be retiring. He will just be moving to Schaeffer Hall.

With one trip to a Statistics and Society lecture, anyone would see that Hogg is not your average 71-year-old, and his love for students and statistics is present at each lecture.

Statistics Teaching Assistant Jeff Isaacson said Hogg doesn't fit the typical stereotype of a statistician, but that helps make him a great professor.

"He brings an energy to class and lecture," Isaacson said. "I think that helps show that if he can get excited about statistics, the rest of us can, too."

A typical lecture for Hogg is one where he sits down next to a student and checks to see how his work on the overhead looks. He always jokes with a student or two, and he usually has at least one random story to share with everyone.

"This teaching profession and the University of Iowa have been wonderful to me," Hogg said. "Working with these young people keeps me young."

UI freshman Erin Hallberg said she likes how Hogg takes time to attend discussion sections to see how students are doing outside of lecture.

Hogg received his doctorate in statistics in 1950 from the UI and was hired by the statistics department after his studies were complete. Hogg said the UI rarely hires its own doctoral students after they graduate.

"It is rare for us these days to hire our Ph.D. students unless they return here after working outside the UI," Hogg said.

Over the years, Hogg has taught a variety of math classes, including calculus, but he has always taught a statistics class.

Hogg said he's had several opportunities to leave the UI but likes Iowa City and the UI community.

"Iowa's treated me well, and I've done well for Iowa," Hogg said, "so I'll just stick here. Iowa is a great university, and the diversity is just tremendous. It's an exciting place."

Hogg served as chairperson of the statistics department for 18 years, but his real love is in teaching and research, he said.

"We do need good administrators, but for me I love to teach and do research," Hogg said. "And within the last 10 years, I have been interested in total quality management."

And students have responded well to his style of teaching.

"I think Professor Hogg really cares if you succeed, and he really seems like he wants you to learn the material," Hallberg said.

Outside of teaching, Hogg enjoys attending shows at Hancher Auditorium with his wife, and he makes it to as many athletic events as he can.

Hogg said he plans to continue teaching as long as his health allows. He is also looking forward to a milestone in his career.

"I sort of think that since I got my degree in 1950, that if I can be on the faculty until 2000, that would be a neat 50 years," Hogg said.

Cyndi Griggs/The Daily Iowan

After almost 50 years in the teaching profession, UI statistics Professor Robert Hogg still manages to keep classes and education fresh.

Public pressure sparks campaign-spending legislation

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Republican legislative leaders Tuesday proposed new limits on how much groups and individuals can give candidates and proposed limiting candidates to spending $5,000 of their own money.

They said the measure was sparked by public cynicism and frustration about the influence of special interest groups in elections.

"We have not had any problem with corruption with the campaign laws," House Speaker Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids, said. "I think people in general are frustrated. There appears to be too much influence by the special interests."

The GOP leaders said their proposal was serious, and they were willing to bargain with majority Democrats in the Senate to approve a revision this year of state laws governing campaign finances.

The measure they proposed would be effective after this year's election. Candidates running for election this year are already deep into raising money under rules in existing law.

Under current state law, there's no limit on how much individuals or political action committees can give to candidates, but the donations are made public.

Under the proposal offered by Republican leaders Tuesday:

- Individuals and PACs would be limited to giving $500 to legislative candidates and $1,000 to statewide candidates.
- Candidates would be limited to spending $2,500 of their own money running for the Legislature and $5,000 running for governor or other statewide office.
- In-kind contributions would count toward the contribution limit.

"We think this type of legislation would do something toward starting to ratchet down the cost of campaigning," House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs, said.

In addition to the spiraling cost of campaigning, Siegrist said the measure is aimed at special-interest groups — through their PACs — which have too much power.

"We don't think they have undue influence, but the public perception is that way," Siegrist said.

Limiting the amount of personal wealth a candidate can invest has gotten increased attention this election because of Steve Forbes' self-financed run for the Republican presidential nomination. Corbett conceded that section of the proposal was aimed at "a Steve Forbes-type candidate."

None of the proposals apply to congressional races, which are governed by federal election laws.

Gov. Terry Branstad has twice vetoed campaign finance revisions, arguing those measures included taxpayer financing of elections.

Aides said he viewed the latest proposal in a more favorable light. "In general he has favored the concept of limits," spokesman Eric Woolson said.

Last year, Branstad proposed a $1,000 contribution limit for individuals and $5,000 for PACs.

Senate Majority Leader Wally Horn, D-Cedar Rapids, said Democrats continue to favor public financing of campaigns.

Siegrist said Republicans can't be accused of pushing campaign finance revisions out of self-interest. He argued the measure Republicans are pushing would cut into the financial edge enjoyed by incumbents, who generally have a greater ability to raise money from PACs than do challengers.

The limits on spending personal wealth could skirt up against legal hurdles as well. The Supreme Court has ruled that candidates have broad free speech rights, including spending their own money, in seeking office.

Woolson said the governor was worried that the limits on spending personal wealth could leave the measure vulnerable to a court challenge.

Judge moves Oklahoma bombing trial to Colorado

Paul Querey
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — A federal judge moved the Oklahoma City bombing case to Denver Tuesday, saying the need to protect the defendants from a vengeful public outweighs the desire of the victims' families to attend the trial.

Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols "have been demonized" in the news media, U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch wrote. "There is so great a prejudice against these two defendants in the state of Oklahoma that they cannot obtain a fair and impartial trial at any place fixed by law for holding court in that state."

He did not set a trial date. Prosecutors had urged Matsch to move the trial to Tulsa, about 90 miles from the bomb site, so that victims' families could easily attend. But Matsch, chief federal judge in Denver, sided with the defense, which wanted the trial held in Denver.

"The interests of the victims in being able to attend this trial in Oklahoma are outweighed by the court's obligation to assure that the trial be conducted with fundamental fairness and with due regard for all constitutional requirements," the judge said.

The April 19 bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building killed 169 people and injured more than 500 in the deadliest terrorist attack on U.S. soil.

Matsch said news coverage of the bombing was extraordinarily heavy in Oklahoma and went into great detail about the investigation and the victims.

"Because this was a crime that occurred in their state, Oklahomans wanted to know every detail about the explosion, the investigation, the court proceedings and, in particular, the victims," the judge said. "There is a fair inference that only a guilty verdict with a death sentence could be considered a just result in the minds of many."

McVeigh and Nichols could face the death penalty if convicted of murder and conspiracy.

Victims' families said it will be hard for some to attend the trial 500 miles away.

"I plan on going several times during the trial, but not every day," said Aren Almon, whose 1-year-old daughter Baylee died in the bombing and was photographed in the arms of a firefighter.

Keith Coverdale, whose sons Aaron, 5, and Elijah, 2, died in the building's day-care center, said: "We in Oklahoma didn't choose for them to come here and for this bomb to blow up here. We are all victims in this state, and this will bring hardship on some families to attend."

Attorney General Janet Reno said the government will not fight the move to Denver and will do everything possible "to provide survivors and loved ones with an opportunity to observe and follow events in the courtroom." Gov. Frank Keating said he, too, will work to see that the families have ways of getting to the trial.

Under the broad definition used by prosecutors, anywhere from 750 to more than 2,000 people are considered victims of the blast. That includes the families of those killed and survivors of the bombing, some of whom weren't actually in the building.

Oklahoma Attorney General Drew Edmondson said he has asked federal officials to provide money to help victims attend the trial in Denver.

"Every defense witness will be provided with a plane ticket and lodging to attend the trial, and I think it's appropriate that same right be granted to victims and families of victims," Edmondson said.

Keating also said he has called the governor of Colorado and the mayor of Denver to line up lodging for the victims' families.

In Denver, Mayor Wellington Webb said a city safety team already has held preliminary meetings in anticipation of the move. "People in Denver, given their Western ethic, will work with those families and work with the courts," Webb said.

Defense lawyers were pleased by the move to Denver.

"Colorado appears to be a district where we can get a fair trial based on the evidence," Rob Nigh, one of McVeigh's lawyers, said.

WHITE HOUSE ORDERS CHANGES

Crash brings new rules for trains

Randolph Schmid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Four days after a fiery crash outside Washington killed 11 people, the government issued emergency rules Tuesday requiring passenger trains to restrict their speed after leaving stations.

Passenger trains must limit their speed to 30 mph while leaving stations, engineers will have to call out red or yellow signals to another crew member and railroads must ensure emergency exits are clearly marked and working.

"While the National Transportation Safety Board has not reached a final conclusion, enough questions have been answered to take actions now," Federico Pena, transportation secretary, said at a White House briefing.

The Federal Railroad Administration rules were to take effect at 12:01 a.m. today.

The deadly wreck occurred Friday evening after a Maryland Rail Commuter, or MARC, train passed a signal that was supposed to be yellow, requiring the train to limit its speed to 30 mph. The train then stopped at a station in Kensington, when a train stops or slows to 10 mph, Pena said. "Think of it as traveling on a yellow light every time you leave a station."

This limit will remain in force until the engineer sees the next control signal — speeding up only if it is clear.

Concern about whether the yellow signal had been overlooked in the wreck led to the rule that engineers call out any signal they see that is red or yellow. If another crew member sees such a signal but doesn't hear the engineer's call, they could point out the signal to the engineer.

The requirement to test emergency exits and improve the labeling follows reports that some passengers were unable to escape the burning train.

Pena said all railroads carrying passengers will also be required to prepare a safety plan to make improvements in the future and must submit it within 45 days.

These plans must cover such items as the safety of locomotives pushing passenger cars in front of them, a common practice and the way the MARC train was traveling at the time of the accident.

One railroad union official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Tuesday that engineers on the MARC route have made several complaints about the signals, especially since a second signal between Kensington and the crash scene was removed during an overhaul a few years ago.

If the second signal had been in place, it might have reminded the engineer after the Kensington stop that he was still operating under a caution when he resumed his last run of the day.

Safety board investigators have been testing the signals to determine whether they had been working properly at the time of the crash. As of Tuesday they had found no problems.

In Baltimore, medical examiner John Smialek said drug tests on the train crew had been completed. He said the engineer, Richard Orr, had no evidence of drugs in his system. Both of the other crew members had traces of over-the-counter drugs in their systems.

Federico Pena, U.S. transportation secretary

Md., but when it left the station, it sped up to 63 mph.

Investigators don't know if the engineer forgot the earlier warning, overlooked it, or the signal malfunctioned.

A short time later, the train rounded a corner in Silver Spring, Md., and saw the Amtrak liner on the same track, but it was too late to stop.

Study: Alzheimer's may form in younger years

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Alzheimer's disease may stalk its victims early in life, decades before it destroys the mind, a study of nuns who are donating their brains to science suggests.

Alzheimer's may be like hardening of the arteries, resulting from a lifelong biological deterioration that becomes apparent only when people are older, authors of the study say.

The study analyzed nuns' youthful writings and found that those women who showed low linguistic ability when they were in their 20s had a much higher risk of Alzheimer's when they were elderly.

The findings could indicate Alzheimer's impairs language ability when people are young, the researchers said. On the other hand, greater linguistic ability early in life might indicate a healthy brain resistant to Alzheimer's later on.

The findings were published in today's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

The researchers studied the autobiographies of 104 nuns from the School Sisters of Notre Dame. The order's 678 nuns have agreed to donate their brains for the federally funded research.

The women wrote one-page accounts of their lives for the order's archives just before taking their vows, at an average age of 22.

Scientists performed autopsies on the brains of 25 nuns who died, 10 of whom had Alzheimer's. Those who had low linguistic ability when young had abundant neurofibrillary tangles — the lesions of Alzheimer's disease — when they were old.

Nine of the 10 nuns who developed Alzheimer's disease — 90 percent — showed a low linguistic ability in their autobiographies, compared with only 13 percent among those who did not have Alzheimer's, the researchers said.

LOOPHOLE IN LAW

Kevorkian's intent could decide case: To kill or ease pain

Brian Akre

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Dr. Jack Kevorkian stuck his fingers in his ears in a gesture of disdain Tuesday as lawyers at his assisted-suicide trial argued over whether his primary intent was to relieve suffering or simply to kill.

"Are you listening to this crap?" Kevorkian said. He said he was instead reading a list of words to strengthen his vocabulary.

The 67-year-old retired pathologist is accused of assisting in the 1993 deaths of Merian Frederick, 72, of Ann Arbor, and Dr. Ali Khalili, 61, of Oak Brook, Ill. They died by inhaling carbon monoxide.

The case is expected to hinge on what some see as a loophole in Michigan's now-expired assisted-suicide law, under which Kevorkian was charged.

It provided an exception for someone who administered "medications or procedures if the intent is to relieve pain or discomfort and not to cause death, even if the medication or procedure may hasten or increase the risk of death."

During opening arguments Tuesday, defense attorney Geoffrey Fieger said relieving pain was the doctor's intention.

He told the jury that for Kevorkian's patients, death was the only choice. He asked the jurors what they would do if they took a sick pet to a veterinarian and were told the only humane option was to put the animal to sleep.

"The best thing to do is to put it out of its pain and agony," he said. "Your intent isn't to kill."

And he said the right to die is an inalienable one.

"By your verdict, you will send a message, not only to the world but to the prosecutor: 'Do not tread upon us,'" Fieger said.

But prosecutor John Skrzynski said there is only one reason to use carbon monoxide: to kill.

"Carbon monoxide has no medical, therapeutic value," he said.

Holding up Kevorkian's own book on assisted suicide, Skrzynski said that the doctor had made his intent clear in his writings.

"This trial is not a debate on the merits or lack of merits of assisted suicide," he said. "If there is to be a debate on that issue, it must be among all the people of Michigan."

"What this trial is about is the deaths of two people, Merian Frederick and Ali Khalili. And what this trial is about is the conduct of the defendant, and whether that conduct is illegal."

DI readers respond to Strawn

To the Editor:

In his column "Same-sex marriages: Too much" (DI Feb. 20) Matthew Strawn writes: "I contend Iowa must implement legislation to prohibit same-sex marriages because these marriages fail to enjoy the support of its citizens."

To support his contention he cites a survey that "found nearly 70 percent of Americans have no desire to allow same-sex marriages on a national level."

If we use popularity as a guide as to what is right or wrong, blacks would still be slaves in the South and women still wouldn't be allowed to vote. Abolishing slavery and giving women suffrage weren't very popular with the people either, but they were the right thing to do.

Using popularity to make decisions might be an acceptable way for a politician or a coward to decide what to do, however it doesn't always lead to the right decision. Of course, the irony here is that most of the people and politicians screaming the loudest about passing laws prohibiting same-sex marriages are also the same people who want less government involvement in their lives.

After reading Strawn's article I wonder if we shouldn't just stop trying to evolve and crawl back into our caves. Of course, there would have to be separate caves based on sexual preferences.

Esmail Bonakdarian
Iowa City resident

To the Editor:

I was just wondering what Matthew Strawn is so afraid of ("Same-sex marriages: Too much," DI Feb. 20)? His arguments against same-sex marriages don't really make any sense. First of all, how does a marriage between a gay couple make a difference in Strawn's life? Why does he feel obligated to tell us his opinion? Probably for the same reason upper-class white men feel they have the right to tell women what to do with their bodies. Even if he and the "majority of Americans" don't support same-sex marriages, that doesn't make their position correct.

The will of the majority doesn't equal what's right. Remember slavery? How about isolationist foreign policies? The ignorance of the majority has been well-established and shouldn't be relied upon to make progressive social policy. Strawn's arguments never make it clear why homosexual couples shouldn't be afforded the same rights as a heterosexual couple. Saying the Bible doesn't sanctify such marriages seems a little out of step with the times. Not to mention that not everyone believes in the same God or the same Bible. In the future, it would be nice if opinion writers would reserve their space for issues which directly affect them and not for issues about which they have no first-hand knowledge or sensitivity.

Tom Vinson
UI senior

To the Editor:

Monogamy in marriage has always been encouraged and supported for heterosexuals as an answer to sexually transmitted diseases. Encouraging monogamy for homosexuals would likewise contribute to preventing that ill. Yet, society not only doesn't expect or encourage gay men to be monogamous, it actively discourages gay relationships.

Gays face discrimination in employment and housing, disgust and condemnation in church and violence on the street. A straight couple holding hands in the park is likely to be met with smiles and romantic gestures, while a gay couple often meets taunts, slurs and assault. If the popular stereotype of promiscuous gay men has any grain of truth, it no doubt results in part from the fact that no socially acceptable alternatives exist.

You could say lightning struck twice in my family's case. However, gays marrying straights because of a pressure to conform or hide is far more common than being struck by lightning.

Charles Godwin
Davenport

To the Editor:

In his Feb. 20 column Matthew Strawn throws in the oft-cited Leviticus 18:22 as part of his argument against same-sex marriage.

It is unfortunate that many people do not focus on the overriding message of the Bible, which is love and compassion, but on specific verses that justify their existing prejudices. We must be careful not to legislate like that, or to be consistent we will have to create a lot of new laws.

People like Strawn, who quote from the Bible on homosexuality, ignore other verses in the same sections which, for example, forbid a woman to wear the color red or a man to shave. They no longer quote the parts of the Bible that say witches must be put to death but always seem to know exactly where that old passage is about man lying with man.

The Bible also says widows must not remarry (I Timothy 5:5) or be admitted to church if under 60 years old (I Timothy 5:9). It says women may not have authority over men (I Timothy 2:8), and it forbids working on Sunday (Exodus 35:1,2 and Numbers 15:32-36), blasphemy under penalty of death (Leviticus 24:10-14,23), killing cattle without bringing an offering to priests (Leviticus 17:2-5), or kindling a fire on Sabbath day (Exodus 25:2,3 and Exodus 31:14).

Caucuses don't need to change ... voters do

To the Editor:

Joe Ranft's Feb. 15 editorial about Iowa's caucus system is troubling: not because a large proportion of the caucus-goers are conservative Christians, but because Joe Ranft wants to eliminate the entire caucus system solely because caucus-goers are indeed Christians.

Whose fault is it that caucus results represent motivated voters rather than couch potatoes? I went to the 3rd Precinct Republican caucus — the 3rd district consists of the west-side residence halls and many private homes. Out of more than 2,000 residence hall students on the west side, only 50 showed up at the caucus.

You get the government you deserve. If you are upset that Pat Buchanan was second in the Iowa caucus, maybe you should have gone to the Republican caucus in your precinct, registered as a Republican and voted for Steve Forbes. Heck, you should have gathered all of your friends together and convinced them that the Christian Coalition is taking over the country. Then you could have gone to the polls as a motivated group! Oh, but I forgot. We don't like motivated groups at caucuses ...

Iowa, MSU collide

David Schwartz
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Tom Davis said a 10-8 Big Ten Conference record should guarantee an NCAA tournament berth.

By Davis' estimation, the Hawkeyes can go 3-3 over their final six games to secure a spot in the big dance. By no means is Iowa's coach shooting for a .500 record down the stretch, but if the Hawkeyes do cash out at even money, he feels his squad will be in pretty good shape.

Michigan State, also in the hunt for a tournament berth, will go for the season sweep tonight against Iowa (18-6, 7-5) at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Game time is 7:05 p.m.

The Spartans edged Iowa, 62-60, Jan. 20 in East Lansing, Michigan, providing an all-too-familiar feeling of narrow Hawkeye losses dating back to last season.

But the two teams find themselves in different positions than a year ago. Last season, Michigan State (14-11, 8-5) was a lock for the postseason while in battle for the Big Ten title with eventual winner Purdue. The Hawkeyes were just hoping the NCAA tournament selection committee would be kind to Iowa, which was making a late-season run.

Ice Hawks cap successful season

The Iowa ice hockey team finished its season 11-3-2, just a couple of points behind first-place Northern Iowa, narrowly missing the district playoffs.

Bill Noonan, junior defenseman, was a first-teamer in the Great Plains College Hockey Association.

Ohio State assistant assigned Bucs post

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State defensive backs coach Lovie Smith said Tuesday he has accepted an assistant coaching job with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Smith interviewed on Sunday and Monday with new Buccaneers coach Tony Dungy.

Smith, 37, has been at Ohio State for about a year, coming from Tennessee.

He also has been an assistant at Wisconsin, Arizona State and Kentucky and played for and worked for Cooper at Tulsa in the early 1980s.

"The people I worked with around here are second to none," he said.

"But one of my goals was to get to the NFL."

Smith's departure means Ohio State's senior defensive backs will have their fourth position coach in as many seasons next year.

Prosecution rests in Moon trial

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors rested their assault case Tuesday against Warren Moon after the quarterback's wife acknowledged she passed up several chances to tell her side of the story.

Felicia Moon in earlier testimony repeatedly characterized the Fort Bend County district attorney's office as overzealous and not interested in her version of the July 18 argument that resulted in scratches and bruises along her neck and shoulders.

Calf injury sidelines Magic

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson strained his right calf in the first quarter of the Los Angeles Lakers game against the Los Angeles Clippers on Tuesday night and was declared out for the remainder of the contest.

Lakers spokesman John Black said Johnson's calf started bothering him in practice on Monday.

He left Tuesday night's game after playing just 1:03 and running up and down the court three times. He had no shot attempts, rebounds or assists.

Stockton breaks Cheeks' steals record

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — John Stockton broke Maurice Cheeks' NBA career record for steals Tuesday night.

The Utah Jazz guard reached steal No. 2,311 when he snatched the ball from the hands of Boston's Eric Williams with 8:21 remaining.

Stockton's big play came after Boston's Rick Fox had passed to Williams on the baseline.

Q&A with Mike Mena

Every Wednesday a Daily Iowan reporter sits down with a sports figure for a Q&A session.

This week, Shannon Stevens spoke with 118-pound Iowa junior wrestler Mike Mena.

DI: Are the expectations different for an Iowa wrestler than someone wrestling for Central Missouri?

MM: Definitely, this isn't a rinky-dink program. This is a top-notch program. There is definitely a higher standard here. There are guys in this room that probably would be all-Americans or national champions at another school or in another division, but they chose to stay here and test their skills. I think that's good. Essentially, I think you're going to be the best wrestler you can ever be if you stay here.

DI: Do you like wrestling first or would you prefer to wrestle later in the match?

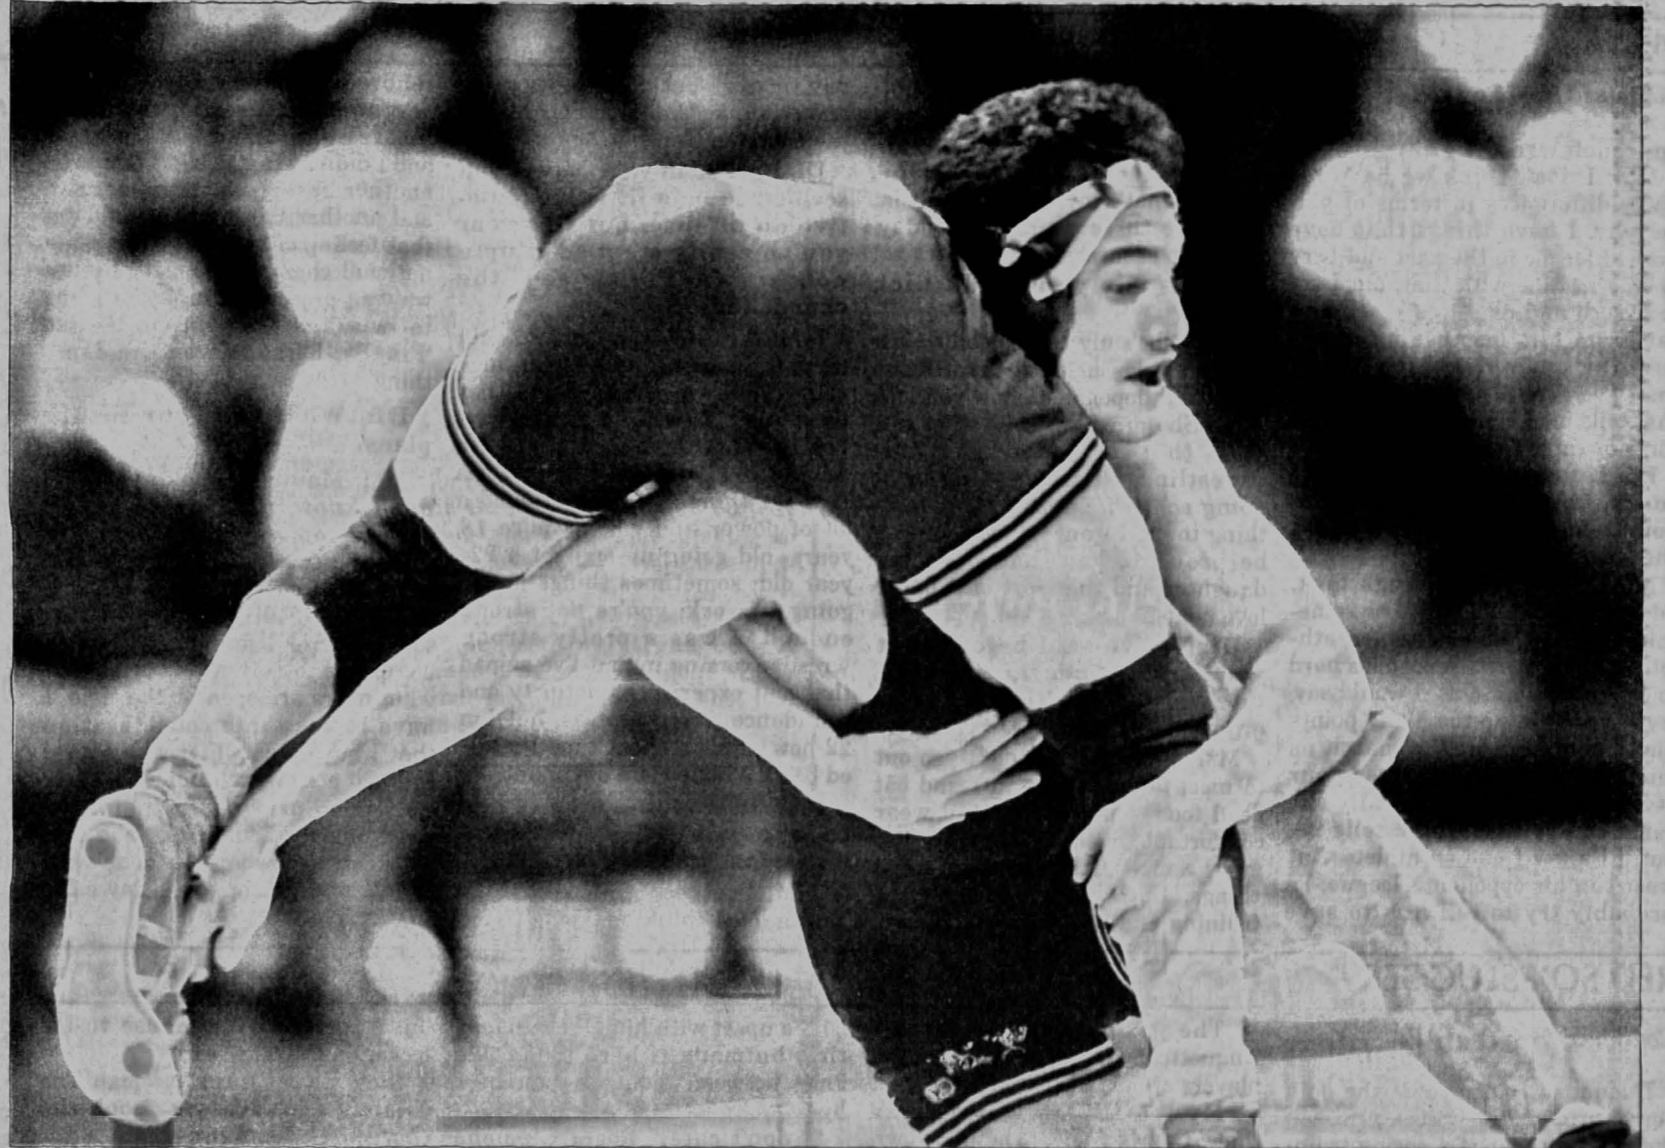

MM: I'd rather wrestle first. It gives me an opportunity to garner the fans attention. Being first out gives you an awesome opportunity to create the tone of the match and the momentum. Basically, it gets the whole thing started and it's nice when you can have a good leadoff guy. I like that role and I can do it, so I feel comfortable with it.

DI: Excluding Coach Dan Gable, which current or former Hawkeye wrestler would you least like to meet in a dark alley?

MM: There have been a lot of Hawkeyes that were simply not in my time, but with the wrestlers around here I wouldn't want to tangle with Royce Alger. He's a pretty strong guy and he could probably hurt you.

DI: Are there any differences in the way you and Gable

SPRING TRAINING

After taking his time, Canseco arrives

Howard Ulman
 Associated Press

FORT MYERS, Fla. — No Jose? No problem.

Jose Canseco was missing from the Boston Red Sox first full-squad workout Tuesday morning, and general manager Dan Duquette was miffed.

"Jose has a flair for a dramatic entrance so when he does show, I'm sure it will be very dramatic," Duquette said as he stood in foul territory with players practicing behind him.

As the day wore on, the mystery deepened.

Where was Jose? He lives just two hours away on Florida's east coast and hadn't called to say he'd be late. He had signed a two-year, $9 million contract in the offseason, so that wasn't a problem.

The drama reached its climax at 1:10 p.m.

As manager Kevin Kennedy told a crowd of reporters he wasn't upset with the no-show, Canseco strode into the clubhouse. The manager's office quickly emptied and Jose became a Pied Piper, cameras and writers trailing him.

"I don't know what's so dramatic about this," Canseco said.

The Red Sox reporting date for pitchers and catchers was Monday. The rest of the team was due Tuesday. Infielder Wil Cordero didn't show up either, but he had a snag at an airport in Puerto Rico and left a message for Duquette.

"These guys need to make a commitment to the team and the time to do that is when you start spring training," Duquette said. "They owe it to the rest of the team to show up on time."

The standard player agreement, however, has a deadline of next Tuesday, so a fine seemed unlikely. Canseco preferred that interpretation.

"I've never come in early before, so (Duquette) should be extremely ecstatic," he said.

"It all depends on your perspective," Duquette said with a smile.

Super Bowl MVP selects Oakland

Anne M. Peterson

OAKLAND, Calif. — Cornerback Larry Brown, whose worth on the free-agent market soared after being voted the Super Bowl's most valuable player, is leaving the Dallas Cowboys for the Oakland Raiders.

Brown, who had two interceptions in the Cowboys' 27-17 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers, would not disclose details of the contract, except to say it was for more than one year.

"There's a point in your life when you have to realize it's time to move on. I think I came to that page," Brown said Tuesday at a news conference.

The Cowboys were not expected to re-sign Brown because of salary cap restrictions and the available cornerback combination of Deion Sanders and Kevin Smith.

Sanders, who has juggled football and baseball, was planning to concentrate exclusively on the Cowboys next season.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Roy Hairston scored 23 points as No. 7 Purdue held off Illinois 74-71 Tuesday.

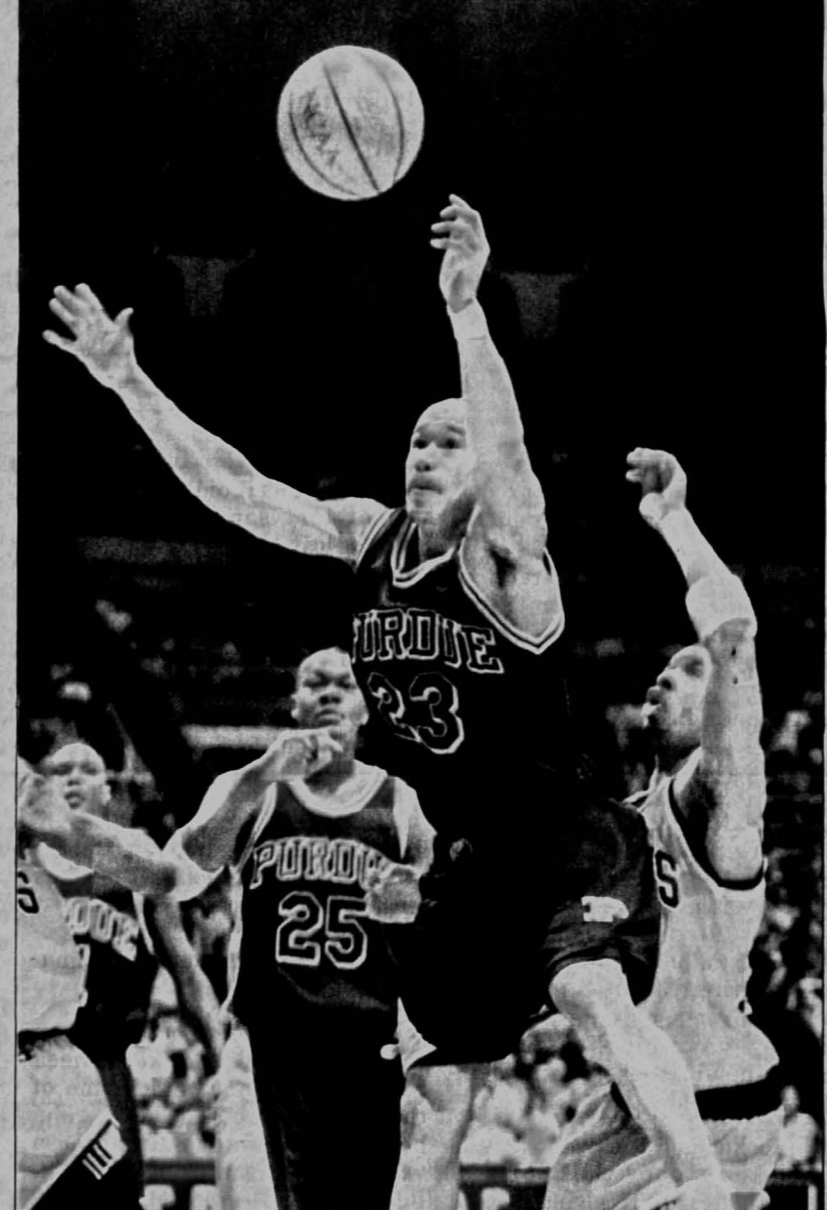

The Boilermakers (22-4, 12-2 Big Ten) led by as many as 10 points in the second half. The Illini (16-9, 5-8) used outside shooting to come close but couldn't score enough points to make up a five-point deficit in the final minute.

Illinois closed to within one point, 67-66, on Matt Heldman's two free throws with 1:41 to go. Purdue responded with a bucket from Hairston and two free throws from Porter Roberts to take a 71-66 lead with 32 seconds to go.

Kiwane Garris hit a 3-pointer and Chris Gandy got an inside layup in the final 30 seconds, but Purdue got clutch free throws from Chad Austin and Roberts to preserve the win.

approach wrestling?

MM: I don't think we have too many differences in terms of philosophy. I have things that have worked for me in the past and I try to stay in tune with that, but I try to absorb and digest as much as I can from him because he's been winning championships longer than I've been living. So obviously that tells me I can probably learn a thing or three from him.

DI: If you were an opposing coach, how would you prepare your team for a match against the Iowa Hawkeyes?

MM: Wow, that's a tough task. I'd probably try and stall or something. We're well conditioned athletes and we work hard, so it's hard to compete against us. I would say, try not to give up too many points and try to stay in the match as much as you can and force your style. I'd tell them basically the same things that Gable tells us, but if I knew I had an athlete that wasn't in his opponent's league, I'd probably try to tell him to save points.

DI: Who's the little girl you always tote around Carver-Hawkeye after your matches?

MM: That's my daughter Elisia. She'll be three years old in May. She's a pleasure, she's a joy.

DI: Is she your good luck charm?

MM: She's my responsibility, but she provides a lot of inspiration and it all depends on how you look at it. She provides inspiration in a way that if I don't do this (wrestling) than I'm going to be doing something else. It's a hard thing to do. I want her someday to be proud to say that she's my daughter and that sort of thing. I love her, she's a good kid.

DI: You've said before that you like the finer things in life, do weigh-ins hinder your enjoyment of life?

MM: Immensely. I like to go out to nice, fancy restaurants and eat good food, healthy food and wear comfortable clothes. Basically, just enjoy a nice buzz and do the social things. But when you're constantly training and you spend 3/4 of your day in work-out clothes sweating and stuff like that is not my idea of the most fun things to do.

DI: Earlier in your career you seemed to be a little bit tentative on offense, but this year you've really stepped it up a notch. What's caused the change there?

MM: Basically you come in with certain things that worked in high school and you get here and they don't work as well on college guys because they're stronger and have a lot more experience. Strength is a real big thing. Your moves hold a lot of power and when you're 18 years-old going up against a 22-year old, sometimes things aren't going to work, you're not strong enough. I was a pretty strong wrestler coming in, but I've gained that mat experience, maturity and confidence. It's a process, but I'm 22 now and it's about time I started being a little more dominant.

DI: What's it going to feel like to win your first national championship?

MM: I've been thinking about that a lot. I think I'm going to feel relieved, simply because I should have won it last year. I was seeded No. 1, I was ranked No. 1 all year and I didn't win it. Then I had to go another spring, another summer, and another fall before I could get that feeling of how it feels to win a national championship. It's been a waiting process. I think I'm going to win and I'm going to be like 'Finally, I finally won the damn thing'

DI: What are your future plans?

MM: Mainly, to make money. I don't know, it's hard to say. It depends on where I'm at in my wrestling career. I might continue to wrestle and I might try to get a civilian job selling real estate or something or I might try to get a coaching job. It all depends on what doors are open at the time. I have to take into consideration that I have a daughter who I need to keep a close relationship with. So I have priorities other than wrestling that I have to take into consideration when I'm done with school and finished with my college career.

Duquette seemed to be the only person upset that Canseco missed the first workout of a spring training in which he's expected to prepare for a return to right field after being a designated hitter the last two years.

"The club is disappointed," Duquette said. "I know a lot of the players are disappointed."

"My teammates will not say that," Canseco said. "They're grown men."

He was right. "This team is not really concerned about little things," Mo Vaughn said. "I don't think anybody's upset with him. We're happy that he made it here today. We knew he wasn't going to come here by 9."

"I don't care," Roger Clemens said. "As long as he's ready to play and hit some bombs, we're glad to have him."

Teammates wasted no time getting on Canseco as he walked from one end of the clubhouse to his locker on the other end.

"Hey, Elvis," third baseman Tim Lincecum said as he shook the charismatic Canseco's hand. "Hey, Diesel, what have you been doing? Would you wake up?" Vaughn said, as Canseco sat down next to him.

"Tomorrow," Canseco said.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

The game turned into Iowa's most convincing win of the season, a 79-78 buzzer-beater over the No. 9 Spartans. And while the Hawkeyes went on to settle for the NIT, they could at least revel in knowing they played the role of the spoiler, costing Michigan State the Big Ten crown.

Davis said the Spartans, just a half game ahead of Iowa in the Big Ten standings, would like nothing more than to push the Hawkeyes a step further away from the NCAA tournament.

"I know they felt we cost them a chance at or a share of the Big Ten title a year ago with that win down here," Davis said. "I know that was on the minds of their veteran players when we went up there (in January)."

The Hawkeyes and Spartans traditionally play close games, a trait Davis and his team know all too well. While Davis thinks the two teams match up fairly evenly, the close games are more of a coincidence.

"We've been pretty evenly matched," Davis said. "They've been pretty good games, but it's just the luck of the draw, I think, having those buzzer beaters."

Hawkeye players also realize the battle they could be in for tonight. "It's going to be a tough game," guard Andre Woolridge said. "I've only played against them three times, but every time we've played them it's been a tough game and come down to the final seconds."

"So I expect another tough game come Wednesday, but if we have 15,500 going crazy, that's our sixth man, our extra player and I think we're pretty tough in this arena."

It was Woolridge who hit the winning shot in last year's barn burner, but don't expect him to bask in the feeling forever.

"It feels good, but it's in the past," Woolridge said. "When I get older I'll probably watch it, but it's really no big deal right now."

Davis said Michigan State's biggest weapons could be inside, where forward Quinton Brooks and center Jamie Feick create a formidable presence.

Not only are the two players big, they are also quick, which is what makes them so dangerous, Davis said. Brooks is the league's third-leading scorer, while Feick leads the Big Ten in rebounding.

free throw by Miller. Illinois went on a 13-4 run that included 3-pointers from Heldman and Garris during the next five minutes.

Brad Miller scored 11 points and Roberts added 10 for Purdue. Heldman came off the bench to lead Illinois with 20 points, and Garris had 19.

Purdue shot 49 percent from the floor and 50 percent from 3-point range, while Illinois shot 44 percent from the floor and 37 percent from 3-point range. Illinois' scrappy zone defense outrebounded the Boilermakers 37-31.

Purdue led 34-32 at the half after Miller's jumper with 23 seconds to go in the half. Miller's basket at 1:11 in the half after Brian Johnson blocked Roberts' fast-break layup had tied the score at 32.

Illinois had led by five points, 29-24, with 4:05 left in the half on Garris' jumper from the top of the lane. But Miller's free throws and a basket and free throws from Hairston helped Purdue close the gap.

Jerry Gee also missed three free throws in the final 3 minutes of the half which could have helped Illinois maintain the lead.

for all but the Cowboys' 1995 season opener with an Achilles tendon injury, was expected to return.

That left Brown open to offers. Brown would not say whether Dallas offered as much as the Raiders ultimately did.

"I wanted to get it behind me," he said. "It wasn't all about money."

Brown, 26, played a lot last season, finishing with six interceptions, including two for touchdowns.

Brown first attracted attention in 1991 when he went from 12th-round draft pick out of Texas Christian to starter.

He went on to start on Super Bowl-winning teams over the next two years.

Brown said he hopes to provide some leadership, especially during rough times, as it did in the second half of last season, when the Raiders lost their last six games after opening the season 8-2.

"I think the Raiders' potential is as a Super Bowl team," he said. "When I got to the Cowboys, they hadn't made the playoffs yet."

Brown said "the Raiders are a very confident football team. They know what they are capable of, they just haven't gotten it done."

On Monday, Oakland lost offensive tackle Greg Skrepenak to the Carolina Panthers. The unrestricted free agent had spent five years with the Raiders.

But the Raiders did hold on to running back Harvey Williams, who rushed for 1,114 yards and nine touchdowns last season.

SALARIES

best players in baseball. He wasn't some snot-nosed rookie who demanded that kind of money before he had even played one down, made one basket or hit a home run.

There is something seriously wrong with today's attitude about sports salaries and contracts. It goes with the saying "What ever you can do, I can do better," except now it's more like "No matter how much money you can make, I can make more." It's a damn contest, with the ultimate loser being the owners. Sometimes I can side with the owners when you have some 22-year-old asking for $70 or $80 million over 10 years. Plus, don't forget the $5 million signing bonus for signing their John Hancock — something most kindergartners can do — and all they get is a scratch-n-sniff sticker that smells like Prince's hair.

No rookie, and I mean nobody, is worth the money that some of these athletes are receiving. People should play sports for the love of the game and the rewards that come on the field. Don't get me wrong, playing sports to make a living is a great way to go. But an athlete shouldn't give a half-ass effort in the competitive arena just because his contract is being negotiated. That's ridiculous and immature.

Most of us coming out of college would be excited to make between $25 and $30 thousand. Some of these athletes won't report to camp because they want 3.6 million a year and the team is offering 3.4. Respect? Who cares? Maybe they won't be able to buy that house in the Hamptons. Awwww, poor baby. If some of these guys knew what they were really worth, they would be playing for 1/10 of that.

This destructive trend continues to grow every time some athlete upstages another one.

"He makes how much? Well, then I'm worth more than that. Renegotiate my contract or else I'm going to pout and prove to everyone that I'm the best."

Sound familiar?

One last thought to leave you with: If you played sports, would you like to be remembered by the world championships you won, honors received or the fact that you were the highest paid player?

Pirates fend off Syracuse & streak

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Adrian Griffin and Levell Sanders each scored 17 points and Seton Hall held off several challenges from No. 15 Syracuse for an 80-79 victory Tuesday night that ended a six-game losing streak.

The Pirates (11-13, 6-10 Big East) came up with points every time the Orangemen (19-7, 9-6), who had won five straight, came within striking distance.

Seton Hall scored on five of its last six possessions and it was just enough.

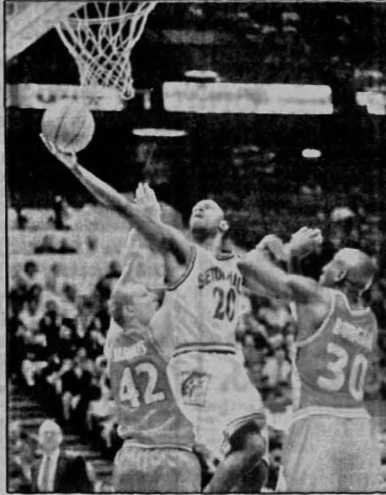

Griffin missed two free throws with 10 seconds left, the one time the Pirates didn't score in the last 2:45, and the Orangemen called a timeout down 80-79. After another timeout with three seconds left, Syracuse got the ball to John Wallace, whose baseline turnaround nicked the front of the rim as the buzzer sounded.

Wallace finished with 13 points and 10 rebounds but he didn't score over the final 13:14. The final shot was his only shot during that span.

Danny Hurley had 15 points and eight assists for Seton Hall, which beat a ranked team for the second time this season.

No. 9 Texas Tech 75, SMU 54 share of the Southwest Conference title.

The Red Raiders (23-1, 12-0) had to come from behind early in their first-ever game as a Top 10 team.

The Mustangs (6-17, 2-9) were down just 44-40 before Texas Tech went on an 8-0 run to take a comfortable lead with 11:44 to go. A slam dunk by Cory Carr gave Texas Tech a 60-45 lead.

Jay Poerner led SMU with 19 points. Jemeil Rich added 11 for a team that shot 19-of-58 from the field.

Carr scored 14 points for Tech — including three 3-pointers — while Tony Battie scored 12. Darvin Ham had 11 rebounds.

SMU took an early lead and went ahead 12-8 on Poerner's jumper with 13:44 remaining. But Tech went on a 10-point run, capped when Jason Martin scored off a steal to put the Red Raiders ahead 18-12 midway through the half.

A basket by Mohammad Tijanni brought the Mustangs within three, but five free throws and Sasser's 3-pointer helped Tech build a 33-23 lead.

Magic makes short work of Philly

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Orlando didn't miss its shot at NBA history.

The Magic set an NBA record for home wins at the start of a season, improving to 28-0 at Orlando Arena with a 123-104 rout of Philadelphia on Tuesday night.

Orlando, which got 24 points and 13 rebounds from Shaquille O'Neal, broke a 49-year-old standard set by the 1946-47 Washington Capitols team coached by Red Auerbach. The Atlantic Division leaders have won 35 straight regular-season games on their home court, three shy of the league record held by the Boston Celtics.

But even though the Magic encountered little resistance in remaining unbeaten at home, a three-game road trip that begins Wednesday night at Indiana will be a better gauge of the team's progress since the All-Star break.

Bulls 102, Cavaliers 76

CHICAGO — One game after Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen had almost all of the Bulls' points, the two sat back and let Ron Harper score a season-high 22 as Chicago defeated the Cleveland Cavaliers 102-76 Tuesday night.

Dennis Rodman added 15 rebounds for the Bulls, who used a 53-30 advantage on the boards to improve to 47-5 overall and 24-0 at home. Chicago has won six straight games and has a 31-game home winning streak dating to last season.

Terrell Brandon scored 21 points for the Cavaliers, whose eight-game winning streak was stopped.

Jordan had 44 points and Pip-pen 40 in Sunday's 110-102 victory at Indiana. This time, Jordan and Pippen had only 14 apiece as five Chicago players finished in double figures. Averaging an NBA-best 30.8 points — including 36.6 over the previous five games — Jordan made only 6-of-19 shots Tuesday.

Harper, a former Cavaliers star who has become a role player with the Bulls, was 10-of-14 from the floor. He also had six rebounds and four steals.

Harper scored 18 of his points in the second half. He made Chicago's first three baskets of the third quarter and then capped an 8-0 run with a rebound and spinning bank shot that gave the Bulls a 57-45 lead with five minutes left in the period. The Bulls then pulled away.

Bucks 92, Knicks 87

NEW YORK — Glenn Robinson scored 27 points and Vin Baker had 23 to lead Milwaukee to a 92-87 victory over the New York Knicks on Tuesday night, giving the Bucks their fourth straight victory at Madison Square Garden.

The visiting team has won the last eight games in the series.

The Bucks bounced back after losing their previous two games by 23 and 30 points. Robinson and Baker each had 11 rebounds, and Robinson was 12-for-12 from the free-throw line. As a team, the Bucks were 21-of-23 on foul shots and won despite making no field goals in the final three minutes.

The Knicks, whose six-game home winning streak ended, made only one field goal in the final three minutes and shot just 38 percent from the field.

NHL ROUNDUP

Ottawa clubs St. Louis

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Alexei Yashin had three goals, including two of Ottawa's record-breaking five in the first period as the Senators beat the St. Louis Blues 7-1 Tuesday night.

The scoring outburst set records for the quickest three, four and five goals in a single game for the Senators, who have been in the league since 1992.

The Senators also tied their record for goals in a game, set in 1993, and broke the record for largest margin of victory, set last season.

Ottawa scored four times on five shots in a 2:38 span in the first period, breaking the mark of 9:01 for the fastest four goals, set in 1994.

The three goals in a 2:08 stretch broke the previous mark of 3:06, set in 1993.

The Senators established a record for most goals in a period, and for scoring five goals in the least amount of time, when Yashin scored at 18:01. The previous team record for scoring five goals was 25:27 last April 27.

The Blues allowed five goals in a period for the third time this season.

The loss snapped a four-game undefeated streak for the Blues, who had won three straight.

Ottawa, with the worst record in the league, is 4-6-1 in its last 11 games.

Pavol Demitra started the scoring at 2:03 from a pileup in front of the net.

Grant Fuhr, starting his 59th straight game, was replaced by Bruce Racine at 3:14 after Randy Cunneyworth scored the second goal.

Tom Chorske, who scored twice, gave Ottawa a 3-0 lead after 4:11 when Dave Roberts lost the puck to Daniel Alfredsson, who gave it to Chorske at the end of a 2-on-1 break.

HAWAIIAN BEAUTY ADDS JOY TO FILM

'Bride' shows harshness of planned marriage

Aaron Han Joon Park
The Daily Iowan

In "Picture Bride," first-time director Kayo Hatta chronicles the unmentioned aspect of the Asian immigration experience.

"Bride" addresses the practice of obtaining brides from the homeland by Asian immigrant male laborers who were forbidden to marry outside of their race by strict American miscegenation laws.

With the aid of photographs, matchmakers in the home country found brides who then undertook the long journey to America. The narrative follows 16-year-old Riyo (Youki Kudo of "Mystery Train"), who arrives in Honolulu as a Japanese picture bride only to find that the dashing young Matsuji she expected to marry was really a 43-year-old man — older than her own father.

Shocking as this may be, Riyo herself has her own secret. Her parents died of tuberculosis from working in the factories — a fact which would nullify her prospects at marriage.

Life on the sugar plantation is filled with bitterness. Riyo, employee #3939, decides to save her money to return to Japan. On her wedding night, Riyo rejects her husband's amorous advances by biting his fingers. Despite her frailty, she overcomes her Yokohama "city girl" image to emerge as a bastion of strength.

Tribulations include backbreaking physical labor for 65 cents a day, exploitative working conditions, manager-instigated ethnic divisions, an uneasy co-existence with her husband and the tragic death of her best friend Kana.

However, within hardship and struggle, there is also unexpected joy. Kana (Tamlyn Tomita of "Joy Luck Club" and "Welcome to the Paradise") becomes Riyo's mentor and best friend.

They watch a fellow laborer save enough money to open her own tofu shop in Honolulu, and Valentino-inspired Matsuji romances Riyo in the best Hollywood tradition. Look for Toshiro Mifune's ("Seven Samurai" and "Yojimbo") cameo as a silent-film "benshi." You will enjoy Mifune's advice on proper samurai sword technique to two little boys named Toshiro and Akira.

Five years in the making, "Bride" premiered as the sugar plantations in Hawaii were closing due to international market forces.

The film itself ran out of money midshoot. Filming was saved by a long-distance phone call placed by Kudo from the middle of the sugar cane fields of Wailua.

Kudo secured $500,000 from the president of a Japanese lingerie company. Further funding was forwarded by Miramax.

The tropical lushness of Hawaii comes through complete with rainbows, waterfalls and wave-pounded beaches.

The cast's valiant effort to speak broken Hawaiian Pidgin English completes the atmosphere.

No. The majority of my friends are of the drinking age and alcohol is not a big deal to them.

FRIENDS AND DRINKING "IS THERE A PROBLEM?"

EVER BABYSIT A FRIEND?

Yes. It made me angry because at age 20, I felt I didn't need to babysit anyone. It puts a hamper on my night as well.

Yes, I was mad because it ruined my fun for the evening, yet happy that I was in condition to help them.

Yes, I was very embarrassed and upset when this happened because I had to take him home right away.

EMBARRASSMENT CAUSED BY A FRIEND

I felt helpless since I couldn't really control their actions.

I was embarrassed for them because everyone just stared.

I removed the person from the situation, not only for their benefit, but to save all who are with them from an awkward situation.

DID YOU KNOW?

96% of UI students were not arrested in the past six months because of drinking. Based on survey data collected in the 1993 UI Health Interest and Practices Survey, Health Iowa.

Spring Break '96 Fast Facts

- Smartest thing to do on spring break: Use a condom.
- Price of a 3-pack of Trojan condoms at Island Pharmacy in Padre: $2.89.
- Price of two condoms at the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women in Iowa City: 25 cents.
- Spring break dates at your friends' schools: University of Northern Iowa: March 16-21; Iowa State University: March 9-17; University of Illinois: March 9-17.
- Number of bars at Club LaVela in Panama City Beach, Fla.: 48.
- Annual snowfall at Winter Park, Colo.: 350 inches.
- Best spring break quote: "Students should treat our Mexican alcohol like medicine — a little makes you feel better and a lot will make you sick." — José Chiortic, a representative from the Cancun Board of Tourism.
- Length of South Padre Island, Texas: 34 miles. Diehard morning joggers can have fun running across Padre after a night out at the bars.
- Highest mountain peak at Breckenridge: 12,998 feet — the Imperial Bowl is there. Takes 30-40 minutes to climb to top.
- Average number of partying students per night at Charlie's in Padre: 12,000.
- Lift capacity at Breckenridge: 24,830 skiers per hour.
- Most popular spring break spot when your parents were in college: Fort Lauderdale, Fla. The 1960s classic "Where the Boys Are" started the hype.
- Most unique swimming pool: a guitar-shaped pool at Charlie's Paradise Bar in Padre.
- How spring break originated: During the classical period, when Greeks and Romans welcomed the return of spring — in rituals celebrating Dionysus (Greek)/Bacchus (Roman), the god of wine.

Dodging heinous vacations: Hints from a disaster master hhhh. Another spring break — but this year, you've decided to party your heinie off in an exotic destination. I have travel tips that could possibly save your life and a great deal of embarrassment.

(They're taken from the times I've made a fool of myself on vacation, and I'm just looking out for you, the faithful DI reader.)

If you're going to another country, learn the language.

I had an unfortunate experience in France three years ago when I meant to ask a guard — in French — at Père-Lachaise cemetery where to find Jim Morrison's grave. What came out was "How do I get you and Jim Morrison to fall all over me and roll on the ground?" Without blinking, she pointed toward the grave. Have other Americans done this?

If you're going to an out-of-the-way destination, stay at the local Howard Johnson.

After a riveting trip to Pigeon Forge, Tenn. (the home of Dolly Parton), we decided to spend the night at a "rustic lodge" in the Smoky Mountains. We pulled up to a shack with chickens running in the yard, which was a cross between the house in Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho" and the one in "The Addams Family." After hearing someone say, "Look mother, we have guests," it was back down the mountain to the safety of the local Hampton Inn and their continental breakfast.

Remember, as the esteemed columnist Erma Bombeck said, "When you start to look like your passport photo, it's time to go home."

Choose the people who you will share a bed with very carefully.

All I have to say is remember the scene from the 1987 movie "Planes, Trains, and Automobiles," where Steve Martin and John Candy are sharing a bed. Martin asks Candy where his hands are, and Candy says they're between two pillows. Martin then looks over in terror and says, "Those aren't two pillows."

Bring Duck tape and rope for the car ride.

No, I'm not getting any kinky ideas here. They're meant for that one cheery person in the car who starts playing the I-Spy game. You know, it's the same person who got up at 5 a.m. for the trip, and who starts looking for mountains in Kansas. This idiot also counts the number of cows you have passed and has an unhealthy craving for turkey jerky. I've found these people to fit nicely, bound and gagged in the trunk or on the luggage rack.

Take lessons before skiing.

I didn't — and I learned sliding down a mountain while doing the splits is an uncomfortable experience. Just pray you lose consciousness like I did. I woke up to find a group of 4-year-olds huddled around me, laughing hysterically and giving me the finger as they skied away. Oh, and lift your ski tips up before getting off the chair lift. I scoffed at the sign and did a face plant into a large snowbank.

Don't play craps with the seagulls at the beach.

I'm not talking about the casino game. I'm talking about standing too close to the birds and getting hit with bombs. I made the mistake of feeding them and watching the majestic birds soar over us — until they unexpectedly dropped their loads. There's a lot to do at the beach — bury a friend in the sand or spell dirty words with suntan lotion on people's stomachs as they're sleeping and tanning. Just don't mess with the birds.

Make a Travel Tape

This is more important than bringing along clean underwear, no matter what your mother taught you. Record a tape of favorite travel songs. Might I suggest the soundtrack to the movie "Tommy Boy," with such hits as Dexty's "Midnight Runner," "Come on Eileen" and REM's "It's the End of the World as We Know It (And I Feel Fine)." If you do not heed my warning, you are doomed to listening to Rush Limbaugh and the greatest hits of Liberace in the middle of nowhere. I have been there — it's not pretty to listen to two hours of "Dueling Banjos" on the Country Music Hour.

Remember, as the esteemed columnist Erma Bombeck said, "When you start to look like your passport photo, it's time to go home."

Or at least go home when you've run out of Duck tape and rope and have resorted to playing I-Spy.

WHEN THERE'S A STRAIN ON YOUR WALLET

The ultimate $pring break $cam

Make no mistake about it. UI freshman Bob Graham is going to Mexico for Spring Break.

On March 16, Graham and about 25 of his companions are hopping a plane to Mazatlan, Mexico, for a week of fun in the sun. He can't wait to join the mass exodus of students who annually leave campuses for the world's more tropical climates.

But Graham has one problem he must solve before he jumps ship. "I'm tapped out. Like, literally — 23 cents," he said.

Strained personal finances are causing trouble for Graham, whose spring break package totals $498 — including airfare, seven nights' lodging at the Hotel Tropicana and nightly free beer parties.

Graham had originally planned to call his parents for cash, claiming he had been arrested and needed some bail money. Instead, he drained his own account and plans to tap his parents later.

"With every U bill, I'm going to call and tell them that it's $100 more than it actually is," he said. "My parents are pretty clueless people."

Graham also expects to coerce his parents into providing him with extra spending money for his vacation.

"I'm planning on going home and telling my parents that if I don't get to go, it will make me mad and adversely affect my schooling," he said. "So it's to their benefit to pay for me to go."

Earning his own money for the trip is virtually out of the question for Graham.

"I was going to get a job, but I have classes every day and I have to watch 'Days of Our Lives' as well. Besides," he added, "I usually get my way. I'm a good kid."

Graham's not too worried about running out of funds south of the border.

"I have a credit card in a drawer some-

It's gonna cost ya!

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, TEXAS

How UI senior Shawn Greve is footin' the bill: Cost of his package: $169 per person for six nights in a condominium with both a Jacuzzi and a kitchen. It's more than a mile from the bars.

What he'll spend: About $550 total. The trip requires $50 per person for gas, and Greve plans to get his food at a grocery store so he'll have more money for the bars.

How he's paying: With credit cards.

Any extras?: Possibly a side trip to Matamoros, Mexico, to drink and shop.

SON, ARIZ.

How UI junior Liza Blas is footin' the bill: Cost of her package: Blas doesn't have one. She's staying at a friend's apartment on the University of Arizona campus.

What she's spending: No more than $500 for food, shopping and nightlife. Her round-trip plane ticket costs $209.

How she's paying: With money she saved.

Any extras?: Possibly a few days in Mexico.

LAUDERDALE, FLA.

How UI sophomore Matt Cardoni is footin' the bill: Cost of his package: Cardoni doesn't have one. He's staying with relatives.

What he'll spend: About $300 per person — and he'll share in $400 for gas both ways for two cars.

How he's paying: Cardoni plans to charge his entire trip to credit cards.

Any extras?: A day trip to the Everglades and a one-night party cruise.

BOAT SPRINGS, COLO.

How UI junior Erin Burkart is footin' the bill: Cost of her package: About $320 per person. The package purchased through Sunchase Ski and Beach Breaks includes five nights in a condo and four days of lift tickets.

What she'll spend: About $500 total. Burkart is bringing $150 for spending money and plans to buy all her food and beer at a grocery store.

How she's paying: With money saved from her job as a cashier at John's Grocery Store.

Any extras?: Burkart isn't planning to buy any souvenirs. She might save room for a case of Fat Tire beer.

NECO

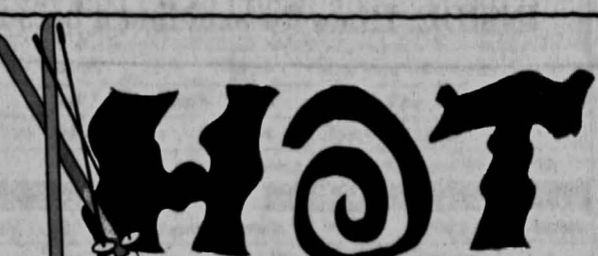

How UI sophomore Karl Dolder is footin' the bill: Cost of her package: $650 for flight and motel.

What she'll spend: About $500 in spending money.

How she's paying: She's saving the money herself.

Any extras?: Dolder is looking at a party package for $99, which includes free cover and all-you-can-drink alcohol specials.

Long arm of the law: Ready for '96 revelers

So you're planning to party this spring break. You're thinking about drinking on the beach, swinging from the balconies, trying out your foolproof fake ID and making noise until the sun comes up. Police in spring break spots everywhere are ready for people like you.

Find your spring break destination and see what the local police are watching for:

Policing the Panama pandemonium

Spring breakers who are heading down to Panama City Beach, Fla., should be forewarned that local police will be prepared for thousands of drunken revelers, Lt. Howard Parks of the Panama City Beach Police Department said.

"We have total control," he said. "We don't let it get out of hand so we don't have to go out and put it back together."

Parks said the PCBPD does see its share of problems in all the spring break chaos.

"We get a lot of traffic accidents, people who get drunk and fall out of pickup trucks, people who get drunk and fall out of balconies and people who get drunk and drown in the gulf," he said. "If you're looking for riots, we don't have them here."

The PCBPD doubles the size of their force during the last three weeks in March, the peak time for spring breaks, Parks said.

"Our job is to keep them from being killed," he said. "We have to prevent them from drowning or falling off a balcony. There may be some fights or a little rowdiness. But we can only do so much."

Every spring, the police arrest a number of underage drinkers who come to the beach to booze, Parks said. The minimum fine for this offense is $125, which covers court costs, but the fine can be as high as $625.

Fake IDs aren't a major problem, but the misuse or alteration of a Florida ID is considered a felony — punishable with up to a $1,000 fine or five years in jail — and violators will spend the night in jail, Parks said. The use of fake IDs from other states is considered a misdemeanor.

UI students should use common sense to keep themselves out of trouble, Parks said.

"We want them to behave themselves while having a good time," he said. "It's the expectation rather than the rule. Use the same common sense you would at home. If you can't ride on top of the roof of a car at home, don't come down here and think you can. You'll get arrested."

breakers can expect to pay about $100 plus court costs.

The worst incident that occurred in Padre last year was when an 18-year-old student fell to his death while throwing a football from one sixth floor balcony to another, Atkinson said.

"He reached over for the ball, didn't get it and fell over," he said.

Atkinson has two words of advice for students planning on coming to Padre.

"Party smart," he said, and added that this includes using common sense, designated drivers, the buddy system and when to draw the line on consumption of alcohol.

Atkinson reminded spring breakers that no camping is allowed on the beach within the city limits, but camping outside the limits in county jurisdiction is OK.

Staying calm in Steamboat Springs

Steamboat during spring break isn't as rowdy as it used to be, Capt. J.D. Hays of the Steamboat Springs Police said.

"It's really calmed down from the mid '80s," he said. "At the Sheraton hotel here, 40 to 50 students crammed into an elevator and tried to burn up the brakes. They were never able to succeed."

Students in the past have also gone crazy on the ski gondola, Hays said.

"They would kick windows out of the gondola, rock it and jump out of the darn thing when it got close to the ground," he said.

The big problem at Steamboat Springs is false identification or "criminal impersonation," Hays said. Impersonators land in jail, have their driver's licenses confiscated and must post a $2000 bond to get out of jail, he said.

In recent years, police have also dealt with excessive noise, fights, open containers and underage consumption of alcohol, Hays said. These offenses bring potential jail time and a municipal ordinance fine of $50.

No age limit: Celebrating a Cancun tradition

Students can put their fake IDs away in Cancun, Mexico — anyone of any age can drink alcohol, Capt. Raul Gonzales of the Cancun police said.

"It's been that way for 60 years," he said.

During spring break, about a dozen people are arrested for drunken and disorderly conduct, though no one is usually hurt, Gonzales said.

"This is the big problem — students getting drunk," he said.

This behavior will land students in jail for one night and a fine of P100 — or about $14, he said.

Help! We've gotta handle 40,000 Padre partiers!

Officers from the highway patrol, sheriff's department and the state liquor control board will help Capt. Tommy Atkinson, assistant chief of the South Padre Island Police Department, and his officers handle the 30,000-40,000 students per week who show up for spring break in Padre.

Atkinson estimates 400 to 600 people will be arrested during spring break this year. The usual laws broken include drunk and disorderly behavior, public intoxication and disorderly conduct, he said. For a first-time offense, law-

UI STUDENTS SNAG FREE CREDIT, SPECIAL EXPERIENCES

Vacations off the beaten path

Dozens of UI students are opting not to hit the beaches or the slopes for spring break. To them, earning college credit and doing volunteer work for the underprivileged sounds like a better way to spend their vacation.

Biology in the sun

A 29-hour bus trip to the Florida Keys may sound like the beginning of a typical spring-break voyage, but for about 40 UI students, it will be preface to three hours of UI credit.

Geology Professors Brian Glenister and Robert Brenner will be leading a group of geology majors and other students to the Florida Keys to see marine biology in its natural habitat. The trip combines special skills, such as snorkeling, with knowledge of marine biology and familiarity with the Southern Florida coastline.

The students will be studying the Keys and both ancient and modern day organisms found in the Atlantic Ocean near Southeastern Florida. The students will examine ancient sediment samples, rocks and organisms; and study the process of forming limestone and the growth and evolution of animal and plant life.

While the trip may sound like a lot of fun and an easy way to earn some science credit, Brenner said it's much more than that.

"The students have to write a short article that is put into a guidebook, which is then studied," Brenner said. "Labs are also held on either Mondays or Fridays for the nine weeks before spring break and last two hours each. The labs are to prepare the students for the trip, by learning the organisms which they will see in Florida. Each student then becomes an expert in one area and they will collect the samples while picking them out and identifying."

UI junior Matthew Kooperman is one of the students going on the trip and is excited about the experience.

"They are easy credits, and they are solid academic classes," Kooperman said. "The field trips become hands-on, and you witness things firsthand and you see things that you have been studying."

The class is graded on participation, along with the student-kept notebooks, Brenner said.

"We toss out questions and observations and the students have to answer these questions with evidence," Brenner said. "We are trying to get them to think instead of just observe."

Along with the lab work, there are also five snorkel training sessions to get everyone comfortable in the water, as well as a half-dozen other special meetings.

UI students going to the Florida Keys for spring break get some final instructions on different types of mollusks Friday afternoon at Trowbridge Hall. The students will be identifying many different species while snorkeling in the Keys.

"It is a serious, expensive, exhausting endeavor," Glenister said. "We want everyone to be well-prepared."

The students are paying about $400 for the trip, which includes transportation, breakfast and lunch, and five nights in a motel.

"The university does not pay a penny into this trip," Brenner said. "The students pay two-thirds of the cost, while the alumni fund the other third. On top of that, the students have to pay the three hours of tuition money, so actually the university is making money."

The professors and the Teaching Assistants in charge of the trip volunteer their time, and their expenses come straight from their own pockets.

"Seeing students discover things for themselves, things that they have only read about — that is the great thing," Brenner said. "You can see that light, light up inside of them — it doesn't happen at once, but gradually over the week."

"It is about seeing what it all comes down to in the end," Kooperman said. "It is a restricted marine environment — we are going to be seeing something that is rather special in nature."

Service over substances

UI students looking for a more spiritual slant on their week-long break should check in with the United Campus Ministry, which is offering a multi-denominational trip to the south side of Chicago.

"It's really going to be broken down into two parts," campus minister Darrell Yeane said. "We'll be doing hands-on volunteer work by staffing homeless shelters and tutoring disadvantaged kids, and we'll be learning about social work by meeting with social service organizations and learning how they help Chicago residents in their immediate situations and how they empower them for the future."

In addition to the United Campus Ministry, both students and ministers from the Newman Center, the Wesley Foundation and the Episcopal Church will be attending.

The cost of the trip is about $150, which includes food, transportation and housing at the McCormick Theological Seminary near Hyde Park.

"I don't really know what to expect on this trip because right now our responsibilities are pretty open-ended," Julie Burger, a student peer minister at the Wesley Foundation, said. "In a way, I'm really happy it's set up this way, because then I'll be forced to build community interaction and get to know the people I'm helping by talking to them instead of just working on a house all week."

Before the students leave, they will attend three orientations and after they return, they'll be debriefed to allow both the students and the minister-chaperones time to reflect on their experience.

"Everyone involved will be given time to decide how they are going to use this experience," Yeane said. "It could be on a personal, academic or spiritual level. I believe in the Christian message, however, that to touch God is to touch people."

Marilyn Buchanan, a campus minister, will be representing the Wesley Foundation on the trip. She anticipates real growth as an individual and as a Christian.

"I know some healing will take place and I will gain a broader perspective on what I can do as an individual to help those less fortunate than myself," Buchanan said.

The trip also is being supported by the School of Social Work.

"When I get back from spring break this semester, I want to be able to look back and feel like I really accomplished something," Burger, who is majoring in bio-chemistry and participating in the alternative spring break trip to Chicago, said. "I want to learn more about myself and become a more service-oriented person in the process."

Party or chill out?

Party Chill

You're ready for Padre, Panama City or Cancún. Bring extra money and a strong stomach.

Try quieter places like Scottsdale, Ariz., or the Florida Keys. You can find action if you want it, and you'll have the hot tubs all to yourself.

- Start saving now! If you make $5.25/hour and work 20 hours/week, you'll make about $315 in three weeks — before Uncle Sam takes over.
- Beg parents for an early graduation present — won't work if you're only a freshman.
- Open a new credit card account, but don't forget that sneaky thing called a finance charge.
- Grit your teeth, stay home and catch up on homework. You have enough reading to last through the entire break.

AVOID PEAK SUNLIGHT HOURS

Slather on sunscreen: 'There is no such thing as a safe tan'

Melanie Mesaros
The Daily Iowan

UI sophomore Alison Galatte is one of many UI students who will be hitting the tanning booths before hitting the beaches this spring break.

"I go before vacation because I think it helps so I won't burn," she said. "Burning is not good."

But neither is any sort of tan, dermatologist and UIHC chief resident Sandi Eivins said.

"There is no such thing as a safe tan," she said.

Eivins advises students who are looking for the perfect tan to do it the safest possible way, and she said tanning booths may not be it.

"The tanning booths are a different kind of light," she said. "They give you a UVA tan. It really doesn't protect you that much."

Walking around pasty-white the first few days of break is worth it in the long run, Eivins said.

"The worst thing you can do to your skin is to burn it," she said. "To prevent that is to start out very slowly and use a lot of sunscreen at first."

Eivins also suggests avoiding the hours of the strongest sunlight between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., and limiting sun exposure to between a half-hour and an hour.

Many spring breakers, though, dismiss dermatologists' warnings and the risk of skin cancer, and hit the beaches with little or no protection.

"I never get any color if I use 15," said Galatte, who is planning on using SPF 8 on her face and SPF 4 on the rest of her body.

Other students said they've tried to protect themselves on past trips, but the sun won out in the end.

"I went straight down there and put a little sunscreen on and still got burned," said Jeff Trask, a UI senior who went on spring break last year.

Students should use a sunscreen of at least SPF 15 on their bodies and an SPF 30 on their faces, Eivins said.

Whatever kind of sunscreen sunbathers choose to use, Eivins said they need to apply it 30 minutes before going out in the sun for it to be most effective, and look for the brands that are non-comedogenic.

"Oils are going to make the sun sink deeper into the skin," she said. "Oils can actually make the skin burn faster, even with a sunscreen."

After students start getting tan, they can lower the SPF, Eivins said.

"If you start getting tanner, it is going to be able to handle more sun," she said.

Too much sun can result in more than just unsightly red skin. Eivins said some people experience an abnormal reaction to the sun, which is commonly known as sun poisoning.

"The most common rashes are called polymorphous light eruption," Eivins said. "It can be itchy and look like anything."

If symptoms occur, Eivins advises getting out of the sun and applying sunscreen to the rash. If the rash is very irritated and is causing discomfort, medical attention should be sought, she said.

Overexposure to the sun can also cause heat stroke, and spring breakers should watch for signs that include chills, headaches and nausea, Eivins said. If students experience any of these signs, they should visit a doctor.

Consuming excessive alcohol may lead to a risk of burning, because people may either forget to apply sunscreen or fall asleep in the sun, she said.

The sun is more intense in southern locations, so it is much easier to burn, Eivins said.

"It has more to do with the angle of the sun and the earth. You get more direct rays," she said.

Students who are taking prescription medicine should check with their doctors to make sure it is safe to be in the sun while they are taking them.

Photosensitizers are medications causing the skin to burn faster than normal, and they include tetracycline — an antibiotic used for treating acne — or Retin-A cream, Eivins said.

Crispy Parmesan Roughy

Prep: 10 min., Cook: 10 min.
2/3 cup whole wheat bread crumbs
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese, grated
1/2 tsp. dried oregano
1/2 tsp. paprika
4 6 ounce orange roughy fillets
1/4 cup skim milk
nonstick cooking spray

Preheat oven to 450°. Mix first 4 ingredients in a shallow pan. Dip fillets into milk, then coat them with crumb mixture. Place fillets on a lightly oiled baking sheet. Bake about 8 minutes, or until coating is browned and crispy and fish flakes easily with a fork.
