Professor evaluations to change

UI to define amount of teaching, research and service expected

Jay Dee

The Daily Iowan

Citing a growing concern about faculty productivity, an Iowa state Board of Regents report recommends universities take a new approach to evaluating professors.

Alceste Pappas, director of the report, said the regents universi-ties — the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa -should create individualized portfolios for each faculty member in order to track their performance. Portfolios could define the amount of teaching, research and service expected of professors, Pappas told regents Wednesday.

Productivity reviews would be more helpful when evaluating faculty performance than simply counting the number of hours professors spend in the classroom, regents President Marvin Pomerantz said.

A January regents report showed relatively few full professors were teaching undergraduate courses, but Pomerantz and UI officials said that report was not an accurate reflection of faculty workloads.

We as regents do not hear more about any other issue than faculty productivity," he said. "Administrators need to measure that." UI President

"I think we will have some discussion about each recommendation," she said. "This will help focus our attention, and this gives us some new issues.' One of those issues is improving the core of undergraduate courses, Coleman said.

Pappas, president of Pappas Consulting, asked regents and UI officials to move from a teachingcentered curriculum to a learningcentered environment. Renewed emphasis on the student is necessary as the nation moves toward a more technology driven economy, Pappas said.

DOLE NEEDS WIN

Race for GOP bid down to the wire

John King Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Fresh from the tumult of New Hampshire, the entered a 10-day stretch in which voters in five states will test Pat Buchanan's momentum and Bob Dole's ability to rebound.

For former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, who placed a solid third in New Hampshire, this next phase of the campaign could prove frustrating. He is not well-organized in any of the next five states to vote, and some Republicans wondered if he could raise sorely needed funds.

As the campaigns made quick tactical adjustments, Buchanan's victory sent shivers through a GOP establishment that views him as a threat not only to retaking the White House but to maintaining Republican congressional majori-

The consensus view in Washington and among most Republicanelected officials remained that Buchanan would not - and some argued fiercely, could not - capture the GOP nomination and either Dole would recover or Alexander would emerge as the nominee.

Former UI Student Government presidential candidate Dan Pinegar is questioning the process which eliminated him and the rest of his ticket from the March 4-5 elections.

Pinegar was forced to withdraw after UI sophomore Amanda Kunz, who was the vice presidential candidate, decided she did not want to run for vice president. She wanted to become a senatorial candidate candidate on Pinegar's slate.

Pinegar believed the move would be acceptable because UISG President Jeremy Johnson and UISG Vice President Tim Williams switched positions during the semester break.

"The slate system is still new," Pinegar said. "I thought the board would have some leniency in the adaption and use of the rule."

The slate system requires voters to select one ticket, which is com-dential and three executive candidates. In previous years the student body voted only for a presidential and vice presidential candidate.

Pinegar said the newly adopted slate system gives an unfair advantage to incumbents who already have established name recognition.

"It requires high-school popularity tactics and keeps qualified candidates away," he said.

Student Elections Board Chairperson Todd Versteegh said while didates on the ticket does not exist, it was the board's interpretation that such a switch should not be allowed because of the petition process required to secure a nomi-

people on the petition. Kunz said she changed her mind and because she didn't realize her decision would be a problem.

"I regret that my decision affected Dan's campaign," she said. "I didn't think it would.'

UISG presidential candidate Marc Beltrame said the narrowing of the candidate field will not change the focus of his campaign.

"This won't change our approach much," he said. "We want to focus on the issues, not our opponents.

A lower voter turnout and a less diverse candidate pool are two ways Pinegar and Kunz's withdrawal could hurt the elections, UISG presidential candidate Suzanne

"I think it will be a tighter race," she said. "It makes things more intense. It's better for the student body to have a larger choice than they have now.'

Gramm endorsements bring new policy for city employees

DES MOINES (AP) — A campaign advertisement in which Des Moines police officers appear with Texas Sen. Phil Gramm has prompted the city manager to call for tighter restrictions on the political activities of city employ-

Eric Anderson labeled the Gramm ad "disquieting" and said it required a further clarification of policy concerning the use of city property, city uniforms or city equipment.

The draft policy, which has been sent to the city council, also would prevent city employees from appearing in political ads while on city time.

City employees have the constitutional right to hold political views and act on those beliefs, but they should be careful to avoid the perception that their political activity represents a position of their department or the city as a whole, Anderson said.

Police Sgt. David Murillo, chairperson of the police political action committee, said there was nothing inappropriate about the commercial.

The officers filmed in the former presidential contender's commercial were not on duty and were paid by the Gramm campaign to provide security, Murillo said in a letter to the city council. He said traffic was moving slowly until the officers took control of key intersections and a small entourage of the officers accompanied Gramm "to keep well-wishers, supporters and protesters at an arm's length away from the senator."

The commercial aired live from outside a local pool hall where a man was gunned down Aug. 6. It showed Gramm, R-Texas, putting his hand up to a bullet hole at the Cafe Divang. Gramm, who was advocating tougher crime policies, was surrounded by police officers.

Gramm last week withdrew from the race for the GOP presidential nomination.

The ad also posed problems because it refers to gangs. Polk County District Judge Glenn Pile dismissed a juror in the trial of suspects in a slaying after the juror said he could vividly remember the commercial.

Iowa Democrats to unveil state budget plan today

DES MOINES (AP) - After weeks of meeting, Senate Democrats said they have a state budget plan that includes more spending than the governor's . budget proposal, but cuts taxes less than House Republicans want.

"We'll have more tax cuts than the governor and we're going to spend more than the governor," Sen. Larry Murphy, D-Oelwein, Murphy is chairperson of the Senate Appropriations Committee that handles budget bills. Today, he and other Senate leaders intend to announce their budget plans. Their proposal will come weeks after those from the governor and House GOP leaders, and Murphy said the House plan has been the major holdup, as Democrats have tried to work out their budget.

Murphy said the House plan, with its $114 million tax cut, would quickly cause the state to dip into its cash reserve or force a tax increase to keep the state out of debt.

"The message I've gotten from lowans all over is that it's far better to be careful and use common sense in both spending and tax cuts," Murphy said. "In fact, all the people I've talked with so far have said, 'Don't give me a tax cut, just make sure that you keep the state budget in line so you don't come back and ask for a tax increase in the future."

"And if you follow the House tax plan, you would be in a position in three to five years of looking at some type of tax increase," he said.

Gov. Terry Branstad has proposed a tax cut of about $60 million in his $4 billion budget plan. But House Republicans contend that lowa's economy is strong and the state has enough reserve cash to cut taxes beyond the $100 million tax cut approved

Oil spill surrounds British isles

Associated Press

ST. ANN'S HEAD, Wales - A dozen straining tugs pulled a anker off a cluster of rocks Wednesday after salvage experts reported it spewed an estimated 19 million gallons of oil, far exceeding the 11 million spilled by the Exxon Valdez in 1989.

British conservationists said they feared it may be too late to avert an environmental catastrophe in the Milford Haven estuary, near one of Britain's most important wildlife conservation areas.

"We have moved from a very serious incident to very close to disaster. We believe the management of the whole process appears to have been inadequate," said Tony Prater, deputy officer in Wales for the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

Salvage workers were attempting to disperse a 12-mile-long oil slick, as well as smaller slicks and other oil patches along a 25- to 30mile front off Milford Haven and eastward across Carmarthen Bay in southwestern Wales.

"We are delighted Sea Empress is off the rocks at last," a coast guard statement said. "Much work still needs to be done, both at sea and ashore, to clean up after this incident."

The tanker ran aground at the mouth of the estuary at St. Ann's Head Feb. 18 en route to a Texaco Inc. refinery at Milford Haven, about 8 miles into the estuary.

On Wednesday evening, a fleet of 12 tugs attempted to drag it clear at high tide after salvage experts worked throughout the day to increase the tanker's buoyancy. The effort was apparently successful, as the tanker moved off the rocks "very slowly," the coast guard

16 black children register at formerly white school

Donna Bryson Associated Press

POTGIETERSRUS, South Africa Seven-year-old Karabo Kekana shook his head "no" when asked if he wanted to be one of the first black children to join 700 whites at Potgietersrus primary school. His mother had other ideas. She woke him up from his afternoon nap Wednesday to register him after a judge upheld last week's landmark ruling that the school's whites-only policy - a holdover from apartheid - was unconstitutional.

"I want my child to get a quality education, just like whites," said Meiki Kekana.

She and other parents defied the cold stares of whites who gathered to watch them register 16 children, who will begin classes today.

"I'm not afraid," Kekana said. Not that she doesn't know what is in store for the children on the first day of classes. Police plan to journalists are in place to record the students' arrival.

The school drew international attention last month when a black family insisted on sending its children to the school and the school replied blacks were not welcome. It was the most blatant challenge yet to post-apartheid equal rights laws promulgated two years ago.

The parents oppose mixing races and fear blacks will erode the culture of Afrikaners, the Dutchdescended settlers of South Africa.

Government officials joined black parents in a court challenge to the admissions policy and won a judicial order last week for the blacks to be enrolled. An appeal by school officials was rejected Wednesday.

The governing body of the school said in a statement it would try to take the case to the Constitutional Court, the nation's highest, and it believed its whites-only admission policy should remain intact until guard the students and dozens of the case is finally settled.

But a delegation of provincial government officials, black parents and journalists pulled up anyway Wednesday, guarded by about 20 policemen at the front gate.

Only Karabo and one other child, 8-year-old Moshabi Ledwaba, joined the adults filling out registration forms in the school.

The last time black students tried to enter the school, angry whites ran them off. Karabo saw a videotape of that confrontation on the evening news, and ever since he has been asking his mother for a gun to protect himself from bullying whites.

He told me he was afraid of those khaki-clad white men." Kekana said.

Report: Traditional breakfast big on fat, calories

WASHINGTON - The most popular breakfast at family-style restaurants has more fat and calories than two McDonald's Quarter Pounders, a consumer group said Wednesday.

A restaurant association dismissed the report as misleading, "the dumbest" of a series of headline-grabbing studies by the Center for Science in the Public Interest. Chinese, Mexican and Italian

The center's latest survey found two days' supply of cholesterol, 49 fat grams and more than 1,100 calories in specials such as "Denny's Original Grand Slam Breakfast" of two eggs, two sausages, two strips of bacon and two pancakes.

The government's recommendation for an adult's daily fat intake is 65 grams.

"The Grand Slam-type breakfast is a strikeout," said Jayne Hurley, senior nutritionist for the consumer-advocacy group. The center's previous studies have taken a critical look at food in $1.99, compared with more than $4

WASHINGTON - As a seventhgrader, Mike Walters was more interested in girls than his studies. Now, he's getting an A-minus in environmental science.

The difference, his teacher says: Walters is now in boys-only classes at J. Hayden Johnson Junior High School, a public school in one of Washington's poorest neighborhoods. The girls study in separate classes down the hall.

Although single-sex schools have always existed, teaching boys math, science and English separately from girls is new in public schools. More than a dozen states are testing the concept.

"It's like a secret, underground educational development that people are afraid to talk about because of the legal repercussions," said David Sadker, education professor at American University.

The Education Department doesn't want to stifle innovative ideas, so it is keeping an open mind on various versions of the idea, said Norma Cantu, assistant secretary for civil rights. "Our bottom line is whether they're providing equal educational opportunities without discrimination," she said.

Gwen Paramore, the principal at Johnson, looked at single-sex classes as a way to remove distractions caused by raging teen-age hormones. She said she would honor parental requests to return children to a mixed class. So far, no

GOP politicians across the country are beginning to contemplate however fleetingly - life with Patrick Buchanan atop their ticket this fall.

The words were Dockery's first since undergoing surgery last Thursday to remove infectious fluid from his lung.

Family members were contacted, and were allowed to visit him in pairs. Doctors said his physical condition was improving, but they didn't want to rush his recovery, since he is still quite ill.

Dockery, 42, was moved from a nursing home to Columbia Parkridge Medical Center on Feb. 11 for treatment of life-threatening pneumonia. He amazed everyone the next day by unexpectedly speaking for the first time since

Train derailment in Rockies kills 2

RED CLIFF, Colo. (AP) - A freight train derailed near a snowy pass high in the Rockies Wednesday, killing two crew members and spilling thousands of gallons of sulfuric acid down a mountainside and across a highway.

Rescuers trudged through waistdeep snow to reach the wreckage of the Southern Pacific Railroad train near 10,400-foot Tennessee Pass, south of this village and 10 miles north of the historic mining town of Leadville.

"At this time, we do not know what caused the derailment," said sheriff's spokesperson Kim Andre.

Nearly 21/2 feet of snow had fallen Tuesday night and more snow fell Wednesday, Andre said.

The National Weather Service said several avalanches were reported in the area. But sheriff's spokesperson Jeff Beavers said there was no obvious sign of an avalanche near the tracks.

■ Gambling in Iowa has created revenue, but no new gambling ventures should be allowed unless we want to turn Iowa into Nevada.

hen people are asked what is in Iowa, more than likely they will tell you there are a lot of farms, small towns, a few big cities and corn. However, if some people have their way, Iowa will soon be known as a Midwest gambling mecca.

Iowa was never known for gambling until the mid-'80s, when the state Legislature approved the Iowa Lottery. The lottery was seen as a way to generate revenues for important programs in education and infrastructure. It took off quickly and became a prosperous venture for bringing in additional state revenues.

At around the same time, the Mesquaki tribe opened a small casino on their tribal property near Tama. It too gained rapid popularity. The state Legislature, seeing this as a sign for a possible way to expand Iowa's economy, legalized pari-mutuel betting at dog and horse tracks, which were beginning to spring up in Iowa as well.

Then the riverboat casino idea began to be debated in the late '80s. After a tough fight in the state Legislature, low-stakes gambling on riverboats was passed. However, neighboring states such as Illinois allowed unlimited riverboat gambling.

Gambling in Iowa soon began to hit a period of bad times; riverboats weren't able to compete against other boats, the horse and dog tracks were running into large debts and the Native American casinos were doing far better than any of the commercial gambling ventures.

So, Iowa was in a bind. Should they open the floodgates and allow unlimited gambling on riverboats. Should voters allow dog and horse tracks to be turned into casinos to save the government from an expensive bailout? The answer was yes to both questions, and the gambling industry in Iowa began to get back on its feet.

However, now that Iowa's gambling industry is running again, should the state allow new gambling ventures in Iowa? No, it should not. Iowa is not Las Vegas. If you want gambling, go to Nevada. Iowa already has enough here.

If more gambling ventures open their doors, the law of supply and demand will force several existing gambling establishments to close. Since many of these establishments received bonds and tax breaks from local and state governments, it will become very expensive to

For example, Prairie Meadows horse track in Altoona was on the verge of shutdown about two years ago. The voters in Polk County had approved the sale of over $100 million in bonds to help pay for the construction of the track in the late '80s. If Prairie Meadows closed, Polk County taxpayers would feel a significant increase in taxes to help bail out Prairie Meadows.

In a last ditch effort to save the track, voters in Polk County approved a referendum allowing the track to become a 24-hour casino and to use the profits from the casino to pay off the cost of the track. This plan so far is working, but the track is still far from being paid. If we need to have more gambling to save other gambling establishments, this state will soon look more like Las Vegas than Iowa. This would be a disgrace to the legacy Iowa has built during its first 150 years, which we celebrate this year.

We don't need more gambling. More gambling won't solve the problems gambling has already brought to this state.

Instead of trying to press the odds, the state of Iowa should follow the rule Kenny Rogers sings about in his song "The Gambler": "You've got to know when to hold 'em, know when to fold 'em, know when to walk away and know when to run."

Cast your ballot and leave' won't work

To the Editor:

In response to "Christian caucus" by Joe Ranft, Feb. 15, I do not disagree totally with the author. It would be more convenient if the caucus would be changed to a day-long vote. However, the purpose of a caucus is not just to choose a delegate. The platform of the delegate is also discussed. This would be impossible to accomplish through a "cast your ballot and leave" procedure.

The principle of "government for the people and by the people" indicates people need to get involved. It is a right and a responsibility to do so. Yes, we need to get out and vote. But without people in different communities getting together to discuss what they want their government to do and who they want to represent them (and consequently their beliefs), who will decide those things? Who decides who will be your party's nominee or the platform on which that person will run? If we at the local and state levels don't do it, the national leaders of each party will. And we all know about how politicians in Washington are out of touch with what Americans really want. Even if they do know, it's not their place to choose for us.

As far as the Christian right having a monopoly on the caucuses, there is nothing to stop any other group from showing up to stand for what they believe. Just because one group does not make the effort does not mean another group should stay away so that the results will be "fair." The responsibility to make the caucus result accurate of what lowans believe falls on all lowans. If someone was not happy with the results, they have to ask whether they participated. If not, then how can they

Yes, it is inconvenient to have "to show up exactly at 7 p.m.," but no one ever said everything would be easy. If something is important to us, we are generally able to make room in our schedules. The next time we want to complain about how government is working, we need to ask ourselves if we did anything to change it.

Mardi Gras mistakes

To the Editor:

Purely for the sake of thoroughness, I would like to point out two errors in Feb. 15 issue of "80 Hours" on Mardi Gras. When writing about the parties at the "University of Toulane," I assume you meant Tulane University. I thought Tulane was so well-known that a misspelling like this could not occur in a newspaper, but I evidently was mistaken. Also, the writer states New Orleans is 600 miles from Iowa City and takes 18 hours to drive. It's actually 934 miles from Iowa City to the French Quarter. If it takes the DI staff 18 hours to drive 600 miles, expect to be pulled over for driving dangerous-

When smoke gets in your eyes

Last Friday, after a stressful week of work and classes, a friend and I decided to relax and go out for dinner. I kicked my feet up on the booth opposite from me and slouched back in my seat. Ah! Finally, the weekend was here.

Then it happened. I could barely detect it at first. It just lingered a little. But once I was aware of it, I couldn't miss it. Soon it was right in my nose. The distracting smell of smoke.

I anxiously scoped the room searching for the guilty person who dared to light up in my nonsmoking section. Less than six feet away, in the apparent smoking section, a young girl dangled a cigarette between her two fingers, as she chattered away.

An elderly couple sat in the booth next to me. The man began coughing lightly at first. Then he began wheezing uncontrollably. The elderly woman looked nervously around the room, pulled an inhaler from her purse and passed it to her husband. The man stumbled up from the table and his wife clutched his arm as she helped him to the door. They left full plates of food on their table.

Finally, the girl stamped her cigarette out, and I breathed a sigh of relief. My meal finally arrived, but instead of savoring it, I rushed to finish before the girl whipped out another.

I have yet to determine the purpose of smoking and non-smoking sections in open spaced areas. Smoke has a mind of its own. It goes right through the invisible walls that are meant to divide the two sections. When I sit in a nonsmoking section, breathing in everyone else's tobacco, I might as well be smoking myself.

Despite suggestive evidence of developing lung cancer from secondhand smoke, I certainly don't believe this will be my fateful death. I also don't go out to eat eight hours a day, five days a week. But what about the restaurant workers? In their job environment, they are forced to breathe in smoky air daily. Field studies show wait staff in restaurants encounter air pollution levels similar to levels found in coal mines and steel mills. Yuck! That's what I'm forced to breathe every time I go out to eat?

Unless the smoking section is in a closed-off room, separate sections obviously don't work. Even the very ignorant are aware of the dangers of cigarettes to smokers and non-smokers. There's no question about the harmful effects to our health. So why else should smokers refrain from smoking in restaurants?

While I have the right to not stick a cigarette in my mouth, it also should be my constitutional right to smoke if I want. Well, I don't care about smokers' rights. Why should I? They're stepping all over mine!

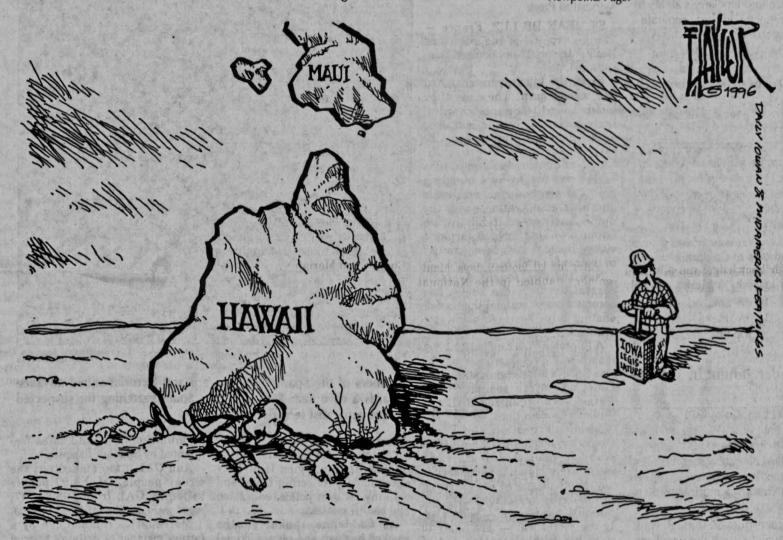

According to our sacred Constitution, we as Americans have many rights and personal liberties. Yet, we are to forfeit our liberties for the protection and safety of our citizens. We also have the right to practice freedom of religion. But, if a religious group practiced kidnapping and sacrificing teen-age boys, they would lose their right to practice freedom of religion for the well-being of society.

All right, that's a little extreme when compared to smoking. The point is smoking is dangerous to non-smokers and it impinges on our right to breathe fresh air in an indoor, enclosed environment. When cigarettes were first introduced their dangers were not yet known. Now we know about the consequences of firsthand and secondhand smoke. So what's stopping the Supreme Court?

By refusing to protect the freedoms of nonsmokers, the Supreme Court encourages the abuse of our rights. Needless to say, smokers will continue to light up. Their smoke will still drift into the non-smoking sections and nonsmokers will still get irritated.

My dream is to find the restaurant where the brave owner declares his or her establishment smoke free. I am certain they would have no need to worry. The loss in die-hard smokers would quickly be offset by more numerous ranks of die-hard non-smokers.

Foreign language GERs: Less is better

College is a training ground, correct? Much like elementary school, junior high and the tumultuous years of high school — we are training for the next step. And with each step, we all come much closer to our goal, or our career. It is as if education is a great pyramid which we slowly ascend.

As we leap into college, we have, or at least should have, the essential tools to live by. Beyond this, we also hopefully have an inclina-tion towards our field of interest. And that, in my eyes, is what college is here for; to serve as the last few steps of the pyramid; refining our general knowledge, but above all, mastering our specific knowledge over our specific field of study. That is to say, I, as an English major, am not here to learn as much about science and math as I am here to study English. And it is on this premise which I now question the validity of the four-semester foreign language requirement. Not that the knowledge is altogether useless, but rather that it has overstepped its boundaries as that of "general education." For do we consider foreign language to be more important than history, humanities, complete, I only have to complete a mere six hours of historical perspectives, nine hours of humanities (including the only course one must take in literature) and four hours of math. So, I may not be able to balance my checkbook, I may have no idea who Stalin or Mussolini or Marx are and I may be out of shape with only four hours of P.E., but God knows I'll be able to conjugate verbs in Italian. Even the almighty UI faculty, who, last semester, voted down the pleas for a two-semester program, must acknowledge and admit these requirements have been ludicrously ill-proportioned.

One supporter of the current four-semester requirement suggested she had changed her major to Spanish after being forced to take four semesters of that language. This point is totally irrelevant since only a small percentage of students will follow this pattern. And for those very few who do make this decision, it will certainly not take four semesters to do so. If one has a great interest in something, it is usually recognized early on. Yet, we are nonetheless being forced to grind out four semesters and, in doing so, missing the opportunity to explore mathematics and literature? Apparently so. other areas which we may excel in. Who knows Compared to the 16 hours of Italian I must how many great scientists and writers were never realized because of an overload in other tedious requirements?

Although English is not the official language of the United States, it is rare that other languages are taught at an elementary level. This is a problem, and it does need to be addressed, but at what time is my question. Is it logical to force language studies on already bogged-down college students? I must say no. College is one of the final steps in formal education; the place for fine tuning of a specified area. And when hour after hour of GERs are thrust upon students, whose main concern is not with foreign language but with their major, the tool of foreign language will inevitably be lost. It becomes burden and proves useless without constant training. Just ask someone who has fulfilled their requirement to recite a story in that language. They won't be able to unless they have continued to use the language on a regular basis. Thus, it would be all the more advantageous for foreign languages to be taught in elementary school when the mind sponges up knowledge and further training can be continued as one climbs the educational pyramid.

In closing, let me reiterate the fact that forign languages do, indeed, need to be taught. We live in a world changing more rapidly than our ancestors could have ever imagined. However, the decisions being made by UI faculty and the requirements being upheld are purely futile. Now, it is time for us, the students, to make our voices heard. Let us not forget, the university is here for us.

SAN FRANCISCO — As California prepared for its first execution by lethal injection, a federal judge's ruling barring use of the state's gas chamber was upheld by an appeals court Wednesday.

The ruling, the first by any U.S. court to declare a method of execution unconstitutional. was properly based on evidence of extreme and sometimes prolonged pain suffered by prisoners in the San Quentin gas chamber, said the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The October 1994 ruling by U.S. District Judge Marilyn Patel requires the state to conduct future executions by lethal injection, until then an unused option under a 1993 state law.

At 12:01 a.m. Friday, William Bonin, the "Freeway Killer," is scheduled to die by injection for the murders of 14 young men and boys.

"It's an important decision in that it prohibits the state from torturing people to death," said Michael Laurence, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer who represented prisoners challenging the gas chamber. "It recognizes that even people on death row who are going to be executed deserve some humanity.

"It's an important decision in that it prohibits the state from torturing people to death. It recognizes that even people on death row who are going to be executed deserve some humanity."

Michael Laurence, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer who represented prisoners challenging the gas chamber

"It is not a challenge to capital punishment. It is a challenge to torture," Laurence added.

Gov. Pete Wilson called the ruling "shortsighted and misguided" and said he would urge 'California should not be prohibited from using the gas chamber to perform executions to society's most brutal and heinous killers," Wilson said. The constitution's ban on cruel and micromanage the state's performance over its on cruel and unusual punishment, Patel said.

constitutional duty to put vicious criminals to death," he said.

Patel heard from a battery of scientific experts and expert witnesses and examined a half-century of official execution records during an eight-day trial in her San Francisco court. She found that prisoners in the gas chamber are likely to suffer excruciating pain for between 15 seconds and several minutes.

The primary cause of pain is cellular suffocation, experienced as an intense "air hunger,"

"Symptoms of air hunger include intense chest pains, such as felt during a heart attack, acute anxiety, and struggling to breathe," the judge said. She said there may also be other types of pain, including "the exquisitely painful muscle spasms" of a condition called tetany.

She also noted that 10 states, including California, used gas as the sole method of execution in 1970, and none does so today. That trend, along with the evidence of pain, shows that gas chamber executions violate "evolving standards unusual punishment "was not designed to of human decency" and the constitutional ban

Deadwood patrons were joined in their jubilee by customers from other bars in the area.

"These people are from bars all over," UI junior Erika Robinson said. "They saw us and came down when they closed. This is fun pure fun! Everyone's dancing with everyone - even strangers."

Deadwood co-owner Holly Bell said the Iowa City Mardi Gras celebration at her bar has never gotten as wild as Tuesday's. When officers from the Iowa City Police Department arrived, they blocked off the street - but then just stood aside and watched the dancers. Several bargoers broke apart their necklaces and threw the colorful beads at the officers.

Rowdiness after bar hours is not unusual, but bedlam on a Tuesday night is a bit out of the ordinary, ICPD Officer Paul Jacobs said.

"I've been here and a few other places," he said. "I don't know if it's Mardi Gras-related or what."

The two ICPD officers on the scene let the partiers have their fun for about 20 minutes before breaking up the crowd and making the band stop playing.

"It's kind of like Iowa City's own controlled little version of Mardi Gras," UI senior Neil Reicher said.

Softball team kicks off 1996 season

After a month of looking at the white walls of their inside practice facility, the Iowa softball players are ready to test their skills out-

The Hawkeyes open their 1996 campaign this weekend when they travel to Tempe, Arizona. Iowa will face Mesa Community College and South Mountain Community College in single games today before starting the Arizona State Tournament on Friday.

"One of the goals we will have is to play with a greater consistency," Iowa head coach Gayle Blevins said, "To have a better approach day-to-day out of everybody."

Despite a few days of nice weather, the team has not been able to get outdoors to practice, but has been able to simulate a field inside the bubble.

"There are a lot of things that we can do in there because of the size of the facility." Blevins said. "But it's always an adjustment that first day (outdoors)."

Blevins said she has been pleased with the progress the team has made, but is still looking to fill a couple of positions defensively.

One of those positions is catcher. Junior Brandi Macias and freshman Lyn Nance are vying for the position. If Macias, a starter in the outfield last season, makes the switch, it will leave another gap in the Hawkeye outfield.

The Arizona State Tournament will be a round-robin tournament. Iowa will face Cal-Poly on Friday morning at 9 a.m. On Saturday, the Hawkeyes will face Arizona State at 5 p.m. and Iowa State at 9 p.m. and action will conclude against Wisconsin at 10 a.m. Sunday.

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) -Oklahoma State defensive coordinator Ted Gill is leaving the Cowboys for a spot on the Carolina Panthers' coaching staff.

Gill's resignation was announced Wednesday and was effective immediately.

Gill had been with the Cowboys for one season after serving as defensive line coach for lowa for five years.

"This was an opportunity in the National Football League that Coach Gill felt he couldn't pass up," coach Bob Simmons said.

Bielema joins Hawkeye coaching staff

Bret Bielema became the newest addition to the lowa football coaching staff, Hayden Fry announced on Wednesday.

Bielema, a former player and 1992 captain of the Hawkeye squad was asked to join the fulltime staff after working as a graduate assistant for the team the past two years.

"Bret has done a tremendous job as a graduate assistant the last two years," Fry said. "We feel very fortunate in being able to keep him as part of our full-time staff. He's a good teacher and the players like him. But, most important, he knows our defensive system as well as anyone."

What a difference a suspension

After a Feb. 3 overtime loss to Penn State, the Iowa men's basketball team stood at 4-5 in the Big Ten, 15-6 overall and with Chris Kingsbury starting a three-game suspension.

They had hit rock bottom.

But the Hawkeyes refused to give in, winning their next four games, including Wednesday night's 83-47 victory over Michigan State.

"We pulled together," senior Kenyon Murray said. "I think a lot of us were thinking of other things, going in all different directions. We all wanted to win, but we weren't on the same page.

"Coach Davis took it upon himself to get us together and rally around the fact that Kingsbury would be gone and we needed people to step up. Now, it's just a team effort. We're going out there and playing team basketball." The difference for the Hawkeyes has been defense. Iowa has held its opponents to an average of 51 points per game over the last three "The seniors know that our sea-down and play. I think we figured out that if we play some defense and shut some teams down, we're going to win some ball games and we've been doing that in the last three or four ball games.

Another key has been the play of Millard, who has averaged nearly 17 points and nine rebounds over the past three games.

"We realized that we have to shut people down and post up on the block," senior Mon'ter Glasper said. "Our big men have stepped

THREE-TIME PRO BOWLER

Cox adds muscle to Bears' defense

Rick Gano

LAKE FOREST, Ill. - Bryan Cox plays football with a fury, and sometimes his anger spills over, out of control. His temper has landed him in trouble, but his talent has landed him in three Pro Bowls.

Now the free agent linebacker's search for a new team has landed him in Chicago after five years with the Miami Dolphins.

He's agreed to a four-year contract that sources say is worth $13.2 million and includes a $5 million signing bonus. The Bears see him as a cornerstone middle linebacker who can rush the passer and prop up a sagging defense. "I'd been very happy in Miami and was not looking to move. With the changes in coaches and the way things are going, it was like you're now hit with the reality that you're not going to be in Miami and. OK, what's the best place for me?" Cox said.

"I've often said during the course of this recruiting thing I didn't enjoy being called by a lot of different organizations and stuff. I felt my best opportunity to win would either be Green Bay or Chicago. Chicago seemed to be the most

Hawkeyes have no intention of sharing

Wayne Drehs The Daily Iowan

The No. 7 Iowa women's basketball team doesn't want to share.

With the biggest weekend of the season behind them, head coach Angie Lee and her Hawkeyes have their eyes set on just one thing: an uncontested Big Ten Conference championship.

The No. 7 Hawkeyes clinched a tie for the Big Ten title last weekend following victories over No. 9 Penn State (81-69) and No. 11 Wisconsin (67-63), but they'll have none of this co-championship stuff. Iowa wants the title all to itself.

There really is no comparison to a co-championship and an individ-ual one," Lee said. "Our motivation this weekend is not to share that title. To go through the long haul of the season and be able to come out on top would really mean a lot."

With a victory over either Illinois or Michigan this weekend, Iowa can gain its first unshared title since the 1991-92 season when it went 25-4. An added boost to the Hawkeye cause should be playing both contests this is our house and this is a sacred place," Lee said. "So it is the opportunity to claim sole possession of the title here at home."

cut down the nets though, Lee does have some concerns. This weekend's games could present a lull for the Hawkeyes since the contests fall in between last weekend's victories and next week's Big Ten Conference tournament. The ingredients are ideal for an Illinois or Michigan upset.
"Naturally, you have to worry about the letdown factor," Lee said. "Last weekend was very high emotionally for us after we came back

"We talk every game about how from the Purdue loss to beat two difficult teams, but this weekend presents a new challenge. We have really nice to know that we have to come down after a big weekend and beat two very hungry teams." A big key to Iowa's dominance

Before Iowa climbs the ladder to this season has been the ability of various players to step up and carry the Hawkeyes when necessary.

Sophomore Tiffany Gooden is one of the players who puts it on the line when her team needs her. The 1994-95 Big Ten Freshman of the Year is Iowa's leading scorer at 14.3 points per game, but has really stepped up her game on the defensive side of the floor.

It's not whether you win or lose during the regular season, but how you finish at the Big Ten Championships that counts. That's just what the Iowa women's swimming team hopes to prove when it travels to the University of Minnesota Aquatics Center today to compete in the conference championships.

The Hawkeyes enter the meet with a 2-6 record on the season, with their last meet a 190-91 loss to Purdue on Feb. 3. Although Iowa doesn't plan to steal the show this weekend, a strong performance at the Big Ten meet is usually seen as a positive sign for next of the Big Ten cellar, a spot the year's squads.

No. 3 Michigan comes into the meet 6-4 overall and 6-0 in the Big Ten, and is favored to win the meet, having won the last nine Big Ten Championships. The Wolverines aren't expected to walk away with the title though, as No. 14 Northwestern and No. 15 Minnesota could present challenges.

"Michigan is the clear-cut favorite, but I think Minnesota, Wisconsin and Northwestern will all be in the running," Iowa coach Patricia Meyer said.

The Hawkeyes won't challenge for the Big Ten crown and are expected to finish in the lower division of the standings. One goal for Meyer and her squad is to get out Hawkeyes earned at last year's due.

One key for Iowa's success will the divers. Juniors Kelly McCready and Jessica Riccobono have both had extremely strong seasons and will be looked upon to carry Iowa in the Big Ten meet. McCready broke the Iowa Fieldhouse pool record at the Iowa Invitational earlier this season with a score of 413.75 in the one-meter competition. In last year's Big Ten meet, McCready finished 10th in the three-meter competition.

Riccobono also tallied a 10thplace finish last year on the threemeter board at the Big Tens. Riccobono is in peak form now, having just come off a first-place finish in the one-meter dive (170.62) at Pur-tradition of professional athletes, ol' No. 23, Ryne Sandberg, is making one of his own. With a new wife and a new love of the game, nothing can deny Ryno that ring he has long been due.

Even if he is only a shadow of his former self, Ryno will still be one of the best second basemen in the game. And if I know Ryno, which I don't, he'll still be the best.

But not even Sandberg can do it all. That's where one of the best offenses and defenses in baseball come into play.

At first base, there are few better than the man whose name says it all - Mark "Amazing" Grace. Grace smacked 51 doubles on his way to the best season of his career in 1995 and with a new three-year contract, will undoubtedly remain

Despite the fact that Dunston had the Shawon-O-Meter hovering around .300 all last season, the Cubs had little choice but to let him go. With Ryno back, Rey Sanchez gets the chance to move from second base back to his natural position.

The outfield is stacked. Brian McRae and Sammy Sosa are two of the best. When McRae joined the team last year he gave the Cubs two things it had been lacking for years - a leadoff hitter and an everyday center fielder.

If he continues to do well in those areas this year and increases his runs scored, the Cubs will be in great shape.

In right field, Sosa is one of the best. He has speed, power and a great arm. His only downfall is that he is a bit streaky, but if the who gave the Cubs a rarity last year, a catcher who could hit the ball. Servais hit nine homers in his first 25 games with the team and showed signs of brilliance.

"Do you remember?" Dave Magadan will take over duties at third base. I'm not exactly sure if that is a good thing, but it sure seems like he used to hit the crap out of the ball at Wrigley Field. Unfortunately, that was against Cubs pitching, which brings us to the Cubs' down-

STILLWATER, Okla. - The inside play of Jerome Lambert and Jason Skaer and a stout second-half defensive effort gave Oklahoma State a 58-46 victory over No. 22 Iowa State on Wednesday night.

Iowa State (18-7, 7-4 Big Eight) started the second half with a 14-5 run to get within 35-32 with 141/2 minutes to play. The Cyclones were held to 14 points the rest of the way in losing their second in a row after winning six straight.

Oklahoma State (14-9, 4-7) clinched the win by making four of six free throws over the final 2:22.

Lambert led the Cowboys with 13 points, while Skaer and Chianti Roberts had nine each. Skaer also had 10 rebounds.

Dedric Willoughby had 16 points to lead the Cyclones. No. 10 Wake Forest 68, Clemson 48

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. -Steve Goolsby and Tony Rutland fueled a second-half run that helped No. 10 Wake Forest remain perfect at home this season.

Goolsby scored all 14 of his points in the second half, including eight in a 22-2 run that helped the Demon Deacons (18-4, 10-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) extend their school record of consecutive home victories to 18.

Rutland had five of his 12 points in the surge as Wake Forest guaranteed that for the sixth year in a row, Clemson (15-8, 5-8) will not have a winning record in the ACC.

Oklahoma State's Chiante Roberts loses control of the ball as he drives past Jacy Holloway (10) and Kelvin Cato (13).

Boston College 89 NEWTON, Mass. - Seldon

Jefferson and Greg Simpson each scored 23 points as West Virginia beat No. 20 Boston College, damaging the Eagles' NCAA hopes in the process.

West Virginia (11-13, 6-10 Big East) never trailed against the Eagles (16-7, 9-6), who were thought to need easy wins over the Mountaineers and Rutgers to earn an NCAA at-large bid.

Damian Owens scored 21 points and Gordon Malone had 17 for West Virginia.

The 'Que is trying to fill a dance hall void by giving urban music a night of its own

Nathan S. Groepper The Daily Iowan

he newest hip-hop, rap, dance and rhythm & blues music, open mikes and well-known DJs will soon become staples on Friday nights for urban-music fans in Iowa City. Following in the footsteps of Club Hangout at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., is Auras and Vibes, a new hip-hop theme night from the 'Que Sports Bar, 211 Iowa Ave., which promises to give enthusiasts what they have been

Corey Steward, club booker for the 'Que, said it became obvious a hip-hop night was needed in the bar's line-up after he noticed there was no outlet for the popular genre.

"My friends and I enjoy the music," Steward said. "It's really great to dance to, but, unfortunately, there isn't much diversity if you want to go dancing. Auras and Vibes was created to play the good, new, raw hip-hop that isn't being played at these other clubs.'

Auras and Vibes not only celebrates hip-hop music, but also provides a showcase for hip-hop culture, as well. The ue's upper level is adorned with art from urban creators ,in hopes of opening minds and ending negative stereo-"I tell anyone to go and look at the intense work on those walls and tell me that's vandalism," Steward said. Steward promises Auras and Vibes' Friday night debut will offer "a lot more hip-hop than other clubs. "Our focus will be slightly broader than Gabe's," he said. "We plan to play not only hip-hop, but R&B, house and dance. Basically, we're going to play the stuff people want to hear but isn't being played at other clubs for some reason or another." UI student and Toronto native Chris Davis said he's excited about the addition of more diversity in Iowa City's dance scene. "The clubs here do not play popular dance music until it is already behind," Davis said. "They're pretty weak. This new night sounds like a good idea." The opening night will feature a DJ, but following weeks may include open microphone opportunities for patrons to display their talents in poetry and freestyle. Over the past few years, Gabe's Tuesday night Club Hangout has been Iowa City's source for hip-hop. Gabe's self-proclaimed "hip-hop dance party" has featured some of the Midwest's hottest DJs, including performances from DJ

The New Pickle Family Circus

Nathan Groepper The Daily Iowan

here'll be tumbles. There'll be spills. And audiences are sure to find thrills when the New Pickle Circus bounds into Hancher Auditorium this weekend. "Jump Cuts!" follows the story of a hapless clown, Raz (Jeff Raz), and his lively, pint-sized partner, Pino (Diane Wasnak), who embark on an innocent tour of Mon-U-Mental Studios only to find themselves lost and alone. Soon, Pino and Raz find themselves in a flurry of acrobats who leap, tumble and dive through one film genre after another, ranging from classic westerns to detective tales, colorful musicals to costume dramas. Raz and Pino's adventure is brought to life through a combination of American and Russian circus skills, Chinese dancing and settings and original music performed by a live on-stage jazz band.

Along with the cultural diversity, director and choreograoher Tandy Beal ("The Nightmare Before Christmas") has blended the elements of burlesque, ballet, slapstick and gymnastics, which provides the New Pickle Circus with a unique theatrical flare not usually associated with family circus entertainment.

The New Pickle Circus began as the Pickle Family Circus in 1974 with a group of performers drawn primarily from the San Francisco Mime Troupe. Beginning as a onering tent and street circus, the Pickle Family Circus was formed with the intent of returning modern circus entertainment to wholesome, family-friendly values, with an emphasis on the classic circus skills of acrobatics, clowning and juggling. READ, THEN RECYCLE

the Big Apple Circus and Cirque du Soleil, the Pickle Family Circus moved beyond its West Coast home, and, in July of 1983, Hancher Auditorium proved to be the site of the ensemble's first performance east of the Rockies

Only three seasons ago, the New Pickle Circus brought the imaginative production of "Tossing and Turning" to an enthusiastic audience in Iowa City.

This year's production is bound to include enough humor, drama, music and circus skills to interest anyone, no matter how broad tastes are.

A dramatic change of direction occured with the arrival of Tandy Beal, whose choreography has long been noted for its humor and playfulness. While Beal has been creating entertaining dances for more than 20 years, the work that has been seen by millions throughout the world is her choreography" for the Tim Burton film "The Nightmare Before Christmas."

Under Beal's direction, the New Pickle Circus has long since left the tent behind to become a dazzling theatrical stage show, with intricately designed sets and lighting that showcase the skills of its versatile circus performers. Her second Pickles production, "Tossing and Turning," which took the circus into dreamland, was enthusiastically received in Hancher three seasons ago.

The San Fransisco Examiner recommeded her new "Jump Cuts!" production as "a quirky fantasia in cinematic wonderland."

In addition to the three performances at Hancher, the circus will present a number of additional activities in the

From 10:30 to 11 a.m. today, clowns will entertain preschoolers and their parents at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St. On Saturday, the circus will participate in, or perhaps disrupt, the Bowl for Kid's Sake/Big Brothers Big Sisters event at Colonial Lanes.

FILM

More fallout from "When Harry Met Sally." Mary Stuart Masterson does her Meg Ryan-est as a lonely career woman who gets courted by wonderful-guy Christian Slater. This romance isn't terrible, just terribly slight. The obstacles to the relationship are practically non-existent; you wonder why we have to see the two struggle.

"Black Sheep" *

More dumbness from the hot comedy duo Chris Farley and David Spade, except this lame farce makes "Tommy Boy" look like "The Seventh Seal." The plot concerns Spade's attempts to keep a candidate's dorky brother (Farley) from ruining his campaign. But the movie's main concern is showing Farley falling or bumping into things as much as possible. I'm not sure its misfires are worth pondering over, but I think the main problem is Spade, who seems to be on another planet. A few 12-year-old boys in the audience I saw it with seemed to be enjoying themselves, though.

"From Dusk 'Til Dawn" **

This schlocky suspense/horror flick, written by the ubiquitous Quentin Tarantino ("Pulp Fiction") and directed by Robert Rodriguez ("El Mariachi"), by Robert Rodriguez ("El Mariachi"), has been getting a lot of bad press, perhaps because it is excessively violent and not very deep. But if you enjoyed Rodriguez' "Desperado," you'll like this just fine. The first half feels like a Tarantino film, with loquacious bad guys on the lam (played by George Clooney of "E.R." and Tarantino himself) terrorizing and murdering several innocents. Then, without warning, it turns into a full-blown vampire gore-fest (think "Evil Dead vampire gore-fest (think "Evil Dead 2"). This effectively destroys any stake the audience has in the characters, but I didn't mind. If the violence is occa-sionally in bad taste, it's also often clever, funny and exciting. Not for everyone, but a lot of fun.

"Happy Gilmore" *1/2

It seems I'm forever whittling fine distinctions between the latest dumb comedy and its predecessors. So: "Happy Gilmore" is much better than "Black Sheep," a little better than "Billy Madison," but worse than any Jim Carrey flick. If it matters, the plot deals with a hockey-player-wannabe (Adam Sandler) who, on the basis of brute strength, becomes a golf pro. You know the rest. More important to the filmmakers, no doubt, is the endless stream of subway plugs.

"The Juror" *1/2

Demi Moore continues her losing streak with this dismal Grisham-esque thriller about a mob-trial juror (Moore) who is coerced by a mentally unstable hired killer (Alec Baldwin) into convincing her peers to vote "Not Guilty." The script is rife with cliches and hopelessly convoluted storytelling. Baldwin is great at playing arrogant characters (his performance in 1993's "Malice" is hilarious) but not so good at playing crazy ones, and Moore is blandly competent, as usual. The bottom line is: It's boring. Halfway into this debacle, I was longing for the little red bird from "The Scarlet Letter" to show up and guide me out of the the-

"Leaving Las Vegas" 1/2

I guess this movie was a little too much of a downer to get a best-picture nomination. It follows an alcoholic/failed writer (Nicolas Cage) as he burns his possessions and moves to Las Vegas with the intent to drink himself to death. In Vegas, he meets a hooker with a heart of gold (Elisabeth Shue) and the two spend some quality time together. Though the film, directed by Mike Figgis, is handsomely put togeth-er, it's still a little too glamorously depressing for my tastes, and I could have done without Sting on the sound-

"Mr. Holland's Opus" **

I almost gave into this earnest, epic weep just on the sheer relentlessness of director Stephen Halek's sentiment machine. Richard Dreyfus gives a pretty good performance as a would-be serious" composer who ends up as a high-school music teacher, thus finding his niche in life. Some of the movies's details are good, though the portrait of high-school band life isn't entirely accurate. The last and most shameless of the film's emotional climaxes (and this includes Dreyfus singing John Lennon's "Beautiful Boy" to his deaf son) is pure mush. And that "symphony!" Good thing Holland kept his day

"Muppet Treasure Island" ***

Yep, all the Muppets are here: Gonzo the Great, the Swedish Chef, Dr. Teeth, the Electric Mayhem and even that guy with the flying fish rou-tine. Jim Henson's death hasn't seemed to lessen their fun slapstick and sharp one-liners, and this is a better kids' movie than any of that Disney crap ... oh, wait, this is a Disney movie. And, really, it's not better than "Toy Story." And — what would this review be without a little Statler and Waldorf? - it's a bit too long and has one or two too many songs. Still, I had a good time, and you will too.

"Sense and Sensibility" ***

This stately Jane Austen romance, written by and starring Emma Thompson and directed by Ang Lee ("The Wedding Banquet"), may very well win the best picture Oscar this year, but I was mostly underwhelmed. It's a solid, if slight, story, and all the ele-ments of the genre are here: beautiful photography, repressed emotion, frail young women who fall ill after running through rainstorms. But despite a wonderful performance by Thompson, I was left cold. Probably the biggest problem is the casting. Alan Rickman and Hugh Grant are disasters; they both seem to think being repressed calls for them to look constipated all the time. And without strong leading men the climax is ruined. capsule reviews by Mark Pittillo

First performed on stage in New York in 1987, "Steel Magnolias" takes six small-town women of Louisiana and exposes the audience to the comical, yet emotional richness of their lives. The story takes place in Truvy's beauty shop and centers around the relationship of M'Lynn Eatenton and her daughter, Shelby.

Adding to these rich characters are: Annelle, a shy beauty school graduate with a past; Clairee, the town grande dame; and Ouiser, a bitter woman with a hairless, old dog and an ornery temperament.

These characters are played by GeorgeAnne Evans, JoDeen Mozena, Lynnette Mozena, Cara Jeffries, Mary Beth Schuppert and Beverly Mead.

The beauty of this play, director Susan Short Gilbert said, is the all-woman cast.

JoDeen and Lynnette Mozena are very different from the characters they play in the Iowa City Community Theatre's production of "Steel Magnolias."

But they share one important bond with their characters they're real-life mother and daughter.

JoDeen plays M'Lynn, one of the six women in the cast who congregate in a beauty shop and bear their lives in witty and touching dialogue. Lynnette portrays Shelby, M'Lynn's daughter.

Much of the play centers on M'Lynn and Shelby's power struggle over decisions in Shelby's life - a common occurrence in the lives of mothers and daughters. Their scenes together are funny and touching with the tired sighs, rolled eyes and snappy retorts of typical mother/daughter interac-

"We've done this before," JoDeen said in an interview with both women. "There are a lot of parallels in the feelings that are generated between the mother and the daughter."

They've enjoyed working together as mother and daughter.

"I was surprised because you know how we don't agree on a lot (in real life), but the thing that makes it fun for me is that you're good," JoDeen said to Lynnette.

Lynnette smiled. "Well, Mom, that's because you're amazing," she said. "It makes me happy because it makes you happy."

Though they are mother and daughter, their characters in 'Steel Magnolias" are not at all like their real selves. For instance, Lynnette's character Shelby loves pink; it's her "signature color." In real life, Lynnette refuses to wear pink. "The first time we read through the show and she said that I laughed so hard I couldn't go on," JoDeen said laughing.

"I hate pink," Lynnette said. "Pink sucks."

A scene similar to one in the play happened differently in real life, JoDeen said. In the play, Shelby gets her hair cut and tries to pretend she likes it.

The hair cutting scene was much more dramatic in real life,' JoDeen said. "Lynnette had this long, gorgeous hair. I was doing the dishes and I heard her (crying noises) at the door. 'Mom! Mom!' My first thought was did she lose an arm? She had cut it so short it was awful!"

"But she said, 'I love it,' " Lyn-

She also has seen this play as a chance to pull pranks on her mom.

"Two weeks into the show, I pierced my belly button," she said. "A line was changed in the play to: 'JoDeen have you seen this belly button ring?' At that line, I whipped my shirt up."

Lynnette laughed. JoDeen frowned.

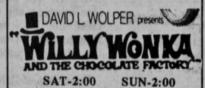

"I didn't think it was funny." JoDeen said.

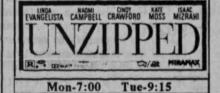

"Steel Magnolias" is funny and also touching. The dynamic performances of this mother/daughter duo make the characters mirrors of everyday life.

stuff coming up.

Well, what can I say? If you have plans to do things this weekend other than sitting, please disregard this article. But for those of us who like weekend TV, there's some good

Let's start with NBC tonight. On "Friends," it's time for Chandler (Matthew Perry) to get a new roommate. Joey (Matt LeBlanc) has become a big star (yeah, right!) on "Days of Our Lives," and has decided to move out. The new roommate will be played by Adam Goldberg - like all of you know

OK, I'll help refresh your memory. He's the guy who plays Mike, the neurotic, hyperactive dork who gets his ass kicked by Clint, the '50s greaser wannabe, in "Dazed and Confused." Look forward to another neurotic, hyperactive character, like the one he portrayed in an episode of "ER" earlier this sea-

Speaking of "ER," this week's edition has been called "one of the series most harrowing episodes to date" by TV Guide. Nurse Hathaway's flaky (but cool) boyfriend, paramedic Shep (Ron Eldard), rushes into a burning apartment building with no safety equipment and gets trapped. I can make no smart-ass comments about "ER." It always leaves me wanting more.

ny? Just tune in.

Friday nights have become "Freaky Friday." Urkel is as dead as disco, so be smart like the people who watch FOX.

The season finale of "Strange Luck" will answer why Chance (D.B. Sweeney) has strange luck. Better catch it while you can, 'cause after this week, that piece of crap, "Sliders," returns, starring Vern, the fat kid from "Stand By Me." And I don't think I need to tell anyone to watch "The X-Files." So I won't, because you will.

Big news, "90120" fans (I'm so excited, I have to tell you now!). Just because Kelly (Jennie Garth) is in rehab now doesn't mean the latest "Oh-no-one-of-the-gang-is-usingdrugs!" plot is over. If you recall Wednesday night, her boyfriend does it with Valerie. So she reportedly looks for some snort to help her cope. Yes!

I mean, we all know that drugs make that show better, because it's so ... hmm ... realistic (?). Who can forget when Steve was pumping 'roids, or when usually dorky David became strangely intriguing once he started using crystal meth? And, last and certainly not least, who can forget the classic episodes when Dylan fell off the wagon? He was getting loaded and laid every night. And, hey! Those episodes taught us all a valuable lesson. So don't forget to watch - that's why I'm telling you days in advance!

You might have noticed I didn't mention And "Seinfeld" ... who cares what it's Saturdays, because if you watch "Dr. Quinn" about? Has it ever not been hysterically fun- and "Matlock" (is that still on?), you need a
