Pushing student-friendly policies

Student leaders want to revamp SPOT forms, book buybacks, dead week

"Student course evaluations have always been a Holy Grail for student government. It's a battle every year when we want the course evaluation data. It's a wedge issue - students seem to think that sharing the information will solve all the teaching problems in the world, and the faculty think it's something the students can hold over their heads," said UI President Jerry Johnson.

"If you have a policy of having the course evaluations confidential, it is impossible to give a grade of the course. So, what we're proposing is a kind of compromise," Johnson said.

"We are proposing that we release the course evaluation data in the form of summary data for each course. The faculty will have the option of releasing the data in this form or they may release a summary of the data," Johnson said.

"I'm not sure how long the faculty will use this system, but I do think it's a good way to provide some accountability for the professors. We want to make sure that the students have a voice in the education process," Johnson said.

-lite content in the form of a summary of the data, or they may release full reports of the data. If they choose to release full reports, the students will be able to see the individual responses for each course. This will allow the students to see what specific students are saying about each professor and the courses they are taking," Johnson said.

"I think it's a logical step, in a logical progression," Johnson said. "If you have a policy of having the course evaluations confidential, it is impossible to give a grade of the course. So, what we're proposing is a kind of compromise. We want to make sure that the students have a voice in the education process. We want to make sure that the faculty are held accountable for the courses they are teaching. We want to make sure that the students have a say in the education process."
Ukrainian teachers accept vodka as back pay

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — A school district in western Ukraine, facing a severe teacher shortage, has reached an agreement with its teachers to accept vodka as back pay.

The district is the Novokhodsk district, which is located in the western part of the country and has a reputation for producing high-quality vodka.

The teachers, who had been protesting low pay and poor working conditions, have agreed to accept vodka as back pay in exchange for their salaries.

In a statement, the district said it had reached a deal with the teachers to provide them with a portion of their pay in the form of vodka.

The deal was reached after negotiations between the district and the teachers' union.

The teachers had been protesting for months, calling for better working conditions and higher pay.

The Novokhodsk district is one of many in Ukraine that are facing a teacher shortage, with many schools struggling to fill positions.

The teachers have been calling for better working conditions and higher pay, as well as for the government to provide more support to schools.

The district said it would begin providing the vodka to the teachers as soon as possible, and that it would continue to work with the teachers to find a solution to their pay issues.

The deal is seen as a step towards resolving the teacher shortage in the district, and as a way to provide support to the teachers.

Harkin announces bid, declares GOP tide washed out

Mike Glover

Tuesday, March 12, 1996

Harkin announced his campaign for president in the 1996 campaign. He made his announcement in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on March 12, 1996.

Harkin said that he is "looking for a new generation, a new breed of Democrat," and he said he wants to "lead the Democratic Party into the 21st century." He also said that he wants to "stand up for the working class and the middle class" and that he wants to "fight for a fairer and more just society." He added that he wants to "make the Democratic Party the party of the future."
U.S. pulls warships closer to China-Taiwan tension area

WASHINGTON - Raising the stakes in China's war of words with the United States, Beijing issued a second warning Friday about a U.S. warship group it said it views as a threat to its security as it gridlocked in the Taiwan Strait.

President Clinton is extending his diplomatic efforts to accommodate Beijing's concerns about the environment: They go to the heart of voters' concerns, so, Clinton said. To accommodate Beijing's concerns about the environment: They go to the heart of voters' concerns, so, Clinton said.

Criticizing Harkin's strategy

Matthew Strawn

Previously, I've expressed my admiration for Tom Harkin. I have a deep respect for his commitment to the American values of equality and social justice. He has always been a tireless advocate for those in need. However, I cannot support his recent plans to make Medicaid mandatory for every American.

I understand the motivation behind his proposal. He wants to ensure that every American has access to healthcare. However, mandating Medicaid would result in a move away from the principles of individual responsibility and freedom. It is not right for the government to force everyone to enroll in a program that they don't want or need.

Harkin's plan would also be a massive expansion of the federal government's role in our lives. In the history of the country, the federal government has not been successful in providing quality healthcare to all Americans. It is not the role of the government to manage our healthcare needs.

The government is not equipped to do what the private sector can do. Private companies, with their bottom lines, will be in charge of providing healthcare. There will be more red tape and bureaucratic complexity. The government will be in charge of dictating who gets what and how much they pay.

We need a system that is based on personal choice and responsibility. The government should work with private companies to provide affordable healthcare, but the government should not be in charge of determining who gets it and how much they pay. It is a mistake to expand the role of the government in our lives.

The American people want affordable, quality healthcare. We don't want the government telling us what to do. We want the freedom to choose the best option for our families.

While I cannot support Harkin's plan, I do respect his commitment to the health of all Americans. I hope he will consider a different approach that respects individual freedom and responsibility.
Police crack down on Hamas

Chechen rebels launch attack against Russian troops

Associated Press

CHICAGO, Ill. — Muslims in the United States are hesitant to crack down on the Islamic militant Hamas movement as a result of the conflict in the region, according to a statement issued by the Council on American-Islamic Relations.

The council said it is concerned with the growing anti-Semitism in the country and is calling for a more equitable treatment of Muslims.

The council also praised the work of the Islamic Community Center of Chicago, which has been working to promote tolerance and understanding.

The council’s statement comes after a series of attacks in the region, including the killing of 13 people in New York City and the shooting of two people in Chicago.

The council said it is important to remember that anti-Semitism is a form of discrimination that is not unique to any one group.

The council called on the White House to take action to address the crisis, and it said that more needs to be done to combat anti-Semitism.

The council said it isfenientat to crack down on Hamas in the United States and that it will continue to monitor the situation.

Whitewater lawyer: Clinton secured loan to McDougal

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Clinton lawyer David Hale was convicted of withholding information from investigators and lying to a grand jury.

Hale, who was once considered a potential White House aide, was found guilty of making false statements to investigators and withholding or destroying documents.

The verdict was handed down by a federal jury in a case that has been closely watched by many in Washington and the legal community.

Hale had been charged with perjury and false statements in connection with the Whitewater investigation, which investigated possible corruption in the Clinton administration.

Hale, 63, had pleaded not guilty to the charges.

The jury found that Hale had lied to investigators about his role in the Whitewater deal and that he had destroyed documents related to the case.

Hale has been a prominent figure in Washington politics for years, but he has been criticized for his involvement in the Whitewater case.

Hale’s conviction is expected to be appealed.

Baz Luhrmann's Romeo + Juliet

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Baz Luhrmann’s Romeo + Juliet, the 1996 film about two lovers from rival families, has been given new life after a recent restoration.

The film, which was directed by Luhrmann and starred Leonardo DiCaprio and Claire Danes, was released in 1996 and became a box office hit.

Some critics have praised the film for its stunning visuals and emotional depth.

However, the film has also been criticized for its historical inaccuracies and for romanticizing a story that was based on a的真实历史

The restoration, which was completed by Warner Bros. Pictures, has been praised for bringing the film back to life.

Representative blames bush campaign finance violations
WASHINGTON — An audit of Rep. Della Faye Bassett, Saw. Ill., a nationalist party leader, shows that her campaign fund violated the federal campaign finance law.

The audit, released Monday, found that Bassett violated the law by failing to report contributions, failing to keep proper records, and failing to pay taxes on campaign income.

Bassett, who is running for re-election, has had a history of financial problems, including a $200,000 fine for campaign finance violations in 1995.

The audit also found that Bassett and her husband, Tom, who is a former federal judge, failed to report campaign contributions for more than a year.

Bassett and her husband, who are both lawyers, have a history of financial difficulties.

The once-troublesome with Canyon-Southwest Area. It was only fitting that the Longhorns' most consistent performer this season was a당면주, with 15 points and five assists.

The Caterpillar was a 12-4 victory over Gerald Carr of Kansas State, who averaged 15 points per game.

At the end of the season, the Hawkeyes will be headed to the NCAA Tournament, a year after being left out of the tournament altogether. They finished fourth in the Big Ten and sixth in the nation, but they still managed to make the NCAA Tournament, which is no small feat.

The Hawkeyes will be looking to make a run in the NCAA Tournament, where they have a tough draw but a real chance to make some noise.

Meanwhile, the Huskers will be looking to build on their season and make the NCAA Tournament, as well. They finished 21-10 this season and averaged 13 points per game, but they also had some tough losses.

MIAMI

Miami State is capable of making a run this week. One problem — the Hurricanes are in Kentucky's region, so Florida, you'll have to settle for the Sweet Sixteen. Another thing for Wake Forest. But don't tell Tim Kemper.

fclose

Derrick Harper, who broke open the game with four 3-pointers and 7-for-7 from the field, had a pretty good game against the Seminoles.

ST. PETERSBURG

Luc Longley is one of the most valuable players in the game. He had 20 points and 13 rebounds against the Hurricanes.

As I said yesterday, Weber can't help but give credit to the Buckeyes. Heck, he even said he'd like to have them back one more time.

ST. LOUIS

Weber said he has been working out with the Buckeyes ever since he was in college.

STATE COLLEGE

It's real good to see the game come together like this. But we have to get a little rhythm back in the game.

Montreal closes Forum with win

Associated Press

MONTREAL — The Dallas Stars and their fans have a little less than 24 hours to celebrate. For the eighth time in 12 years, the Stars will enter the playoffs as the No. 8 seed in the Western Conference. The Stars' first meeting with their former Western Conference rivals will be on Thursday.

The Stars will face the Los Angeles Kings in the first round of the playoffs. The Kings are the defending Western Conference champions and the top seed in the West.

The Stars are coming off a playoff berth last season after missing the playoffs the previous year.

NHL ROUNDUP

Montreal, Quebec (C) — Guy Lafleur, the former Montreal Canadiens star, will be inducted into the Hockey Hall of Fame on Friday as part of the 2018 class.

Lafleur, 70, spent 17 of his 21 NHL seasons with the Canadiens. He was named to the league's first all-star team in his second year and was a five-time league scoring champion. He was also a two-time Stanley Cup winner.

The Hockey Hall of Fame. The world's most prestigious sports hall of fame. The place where the best players, coaches, and officials in hockey are honored. The home of the NHL's greatest moments. The symbol of the sport's enduring legacy.

Nelson takes blame for New York failure

Associated Press

NBA Commissioner David Stern on Tuesday took blame for the New York Knicks' European fiasco after being under intense pressure like the Knicks to succeed in Europe.

"I'm the one responsible," Stern said. "When I made the decision to start a team there, I thought it was a good idea. But it was a bad decision."

The NBA shut down its franchise in France last week and announced it would not return. The team played just six games in the country.

Stern said the league had been forced to make the decision after the team had underperformed and lost money.

"We're going to take a step back, reassess the situation in Europe, and look for other opportunities," he said. "We're not going to give up on the market, but we're going to do it in a smarter way."

The Knicks were the first NBA team to play in Europe, starting in 1989. The league suspended operations in France in 2003 after facing criticism for its handling of the team and its inability to turn a profit.

"It was a misjudgment," Stern said. "We thought we could make it work in Europe, but we didn't have the right strategy or the right leadership."

Stern said the league would consider other locations for future European teams, such as Spain and Italy.

Stern also said the league would consider the idea of having a team in another country, but not necessarily in Europe.

"Europe is not the right place for us," he said. "We're going to look for other places to put a team, but we're not going to be in Europe again."

A week after shooting John Lennon to death, Yoko Ono has filed a lawsuit that could cost the city of New York a million dollars. The suit, the first of its kind, was filed in New York State Supreme Court in February. The lawsuit claims the city was negligent in failing to provide adequate security at the scene of the murder.

Ono's lawyer, Robert Takasugi, said the city had a duty to protect her as a visitor to the city. "The city knew Lennon was a celebrity and that there would be a large crowd," said Takasugi. "They had a responsibility to ensure her safety."

The lawsuit seeks $500,000 in damages for the physical and emotional trauma she suffered as a result of the shooting. The city has so far refused to settle the case.

Ono's lawyer said the suit is not only a personal victory for his client, but also a warning to the city that it could be held liable for similar incidents in the future.

The city plans to fight the lawsuit, arguing that it was not legally obligated to provide security for private citizens. "The city cannot be held responsible for crimes committed by private individuals," said the city's legal counsel.

Ono's lawyer said the city's decision to fight the lawsuit was predictable. "They know they're in the wrong," he said. "They can't afford to pay this money, but they can't afford to lose the case either."

The suit is one of many that have been filed in New York in recent years. In 2013, the city settled a similar lawsuit for $500,000, after the shooting of an elderly woman by a mental patient.

Ono's lawyer said the city's response to the suit was a clear indication of its lack of preparedness. "They're not taking this seriously," he said. "They're not even setting aside the money to pay the settlement."

The city is scheduled to respond to the lawsuit in the coming weeks. For now, Ono is focusing on her recovery and the legal battle ahead.
