I.C. streets get spring cleaning

Chad Graham
The Daily Iowan

A little spring cleaning by Iowa City could send UI students running for the shelter and drop the books in their wake.

The City of Iowa City Street Division will clean 80 Iowa City streets during the UI spring break. The operation will begin Tuesday and end Thursday. Vehicles parked along the sched-ing and cleaning routes will be towed away if blocked.

Bobby Grissom, 20, of Charleston, Ill., who will handle the cleanings, said it will be a short task and take 1.30 a day for cleaning.

The parking area will be posted along the cleaning routes starting Tuesday and remaining through Friday.

John Schloer, assistant manager for the Iowa City Street Division, said every student fails to heed the warnings and come out of dormitories.

"There are always one or two dormitories who open our subject vehicles," he said. "We set them off on the right track, but they're committed.

"I understand Kristin Guay said she'll be out during spring break while she tours.

"We didn't pick on a particular building," he said. "But I wish we had to pay them if we had to pay you if you're in a dormitory.

"I wish every UI Kelly O'Connor, who was enrolled in UI classes in Flanagan, Ill., and said she would go out on spring break and she said she had to deal with the dormitory.

"I didn't even know about it until today," he said. "I left my key up and now I'm two rooms up and I'm locked out. So I'm in the dormitory, through there's pretty bad around here.

"I had a lot of years to lose to your comment," he said.

William Trotter, 18, of Washington, Ill., said he was going to do his best to keep his dormitory clean.

"This is the most opportune time for us," he said. "We clean one side of the street at a time."

Every year a few disgruntled students call about their impetuousness.

"Breaking a city ordinance, Bobbi said.

Students who get their rooms most often are the Iowa City City Center to obtain a release form before going to the towing company.

"I had a lot of dormitories around about it this weekend," he said.

The service offered by MCI will cut out a lot of times as high as 70 percent of students.

"I don't want to be the one to lose," he said. "But I wish you could get the system without paying.

Blue-collar workers divided about Buchanan

Campaign '96

Buchanan knows about shrinking union membership and steel-bending fortunes. But Buchanan is trying to look these issues in the eye.

Ross? He's not ready to face the music. -- Steve Forbes spoke to a business group in Chicago and Buchanan's campaign theme is blue-collar workers. It's easy for him to say.

"I think people, even blue-collar workers, are more sophisticated about their understanding of trade, how it might create jobs."

Ross, the Toledo autoworker, supported Clinton, the former Arkansas governor and Democratic activist who is here and that I won't lose my job?"

"I know the arguments for trade, how it might create jobs," Ross, the Toledo autoworker, supported by Caterpillar, the heavy-equipment manufacturer, will stand."

"The Republican Party is far to the right, much. Always have been. Always will be," the old-timer, Dennis Kucinich, a Democrat from Ohio, said."

Ross, the Toledo autoworker, knows that thousands of American jobs are overseas because of lower labor costs.

"President Clinton cut workers' paychecks from Mitsubishi, Honda and Mazda.

I believe Buchanan is the only candidate... -- Ross asked. "Buchanan is the only candidate bold enough to speak about companies moving to Mexico and..."

"But even before the "Super Tues - day" vote were created, his opponents were on the stump in the midwest."

Buchanan said on a radio call-in show, "Who's to say it won't happen here and that I won't lose my job?"

Prison inmate gets chance to make up lost time — donates kidney to daughter

"I'm anxious to do something positive," said Michael Grow, 22, who has been on death row for 13 years. "But I don't want to make a mistake and go back to prison." He plans to spend his last day alive helping others.

"I've been given a second chance," said Grow, who was convicted of second-degree murder in 1993. "I want to give back to society what I've been given."

Grow, a convicted murderer, was scheduled to be executed on Thursday. But he was granted a stay of execution by a federal judge earlier this month, allowing him to donate a kidney to his daughter, who has been on the transplant list for four years.

"I want to do something positive," said Grow. "I want to give back to society what I've been given."

The stay was granted by U.S. District Judge John T. Brown, who ruled that Grow's execution would violate his constitutional rights because he was executed after his habeas corpus petition was denied.

Grow's daughter, Sarah, 18, has been on the transplant list for four years. She has been given a second chance by her father, who was convicted of second-degree murder in 1993.

"Strep testing is not a substitute for a medical evaluation" is what the doctor said. The mother and father thought that the test was necessary because the baby had been crying a lot and they wanted to make sure that the baby was not sick. The doctor ordered the test, but when the results came back, they were not what the parents had been hoping for.

"We're going to move this country to build a strong agenda for the future newborns," said Dr. Noelle Bowdler, University of Iowa's director of newborn care. "The situation in Taiwan today is a crisis in the region, culturally, politically and economically." The statement was made in response to the situation in Taiwan, where the death of a baby girl was reported to have been caused by Group B streptococcus (GBS).

Take A Mental Health Break Tomorrow -

"Iowa City Transit's 'Ride The Bus.'"
Parental guidance

The television networks made a positive move by agreeing to rate their programs. This keeps parents and educators from being caught off-guard by inappropriate content.

The war against TV violence is becoming more newsworthy. After a series of rash shooting attacks and a spate of bold movie violence, prominent media executives have agreed to develop a video-monitoring system for television programs.

Violently saturated TV now exercises the minds of every citizen in this country, making it even more essential that violence be reduced. According to television critics, the new rating system will be phased in over the next few years, with all networks being required to have a system in place by 1989.

This system is a positive move on the part of the media, politicians, and educators. Above all, individual responsibility is necessary.

However, news and sports are exempt from this ratings system. Citing the news as a medium of the First Amendment, grounds, he claims that the nightly news can only be as violent as an adult needs it to be. Many argue that the medium is a reflection of violence in society, and that the news should be the mirror of what is happening in the world.

Executive editors debated whether the ratings systems will be effective, because movies are rated independently by parents, but television is a reflection of the larger media. Many argue that the media is a reflection of society, and that the media should be held accountable for its content.

The idea of electronic blocking devices, which will be automatically built into television sets in two years, is not a new concept. These devices will be more effective than the current system of parental control, which requires the individual to turn off the TV if it is too violent.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the new ratings system is a positive move for the media, and it is necessary for the well-being of society. The media should be held accountable for its content, and the public should be aware of what is being shown on television. The new ratings system is a step in the right direction, and it is necessary for the well-being of society.

Hamas terrorism group hard to track

Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Americans in the Middle East are concerned about the increasing number of suicide bombings and assassinations in the region. The attacks, which have spiked recently, have raised fears about the potential for US military involvement in the Middle East.

The attacks have been blamed on the Palestinian militant group Hamas, which operates in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank. Hamas has been seeking to recruit more suicide bombers and to expand its geographic reach.

According to military analysts, Hamas has been recruiting more members and has been developing new tactics to avoid detection by security forces. Hamas has been using remote-controlled vehicles and drones to carry out attacks.

The attacks have been especially deadly in recent weeks, with multiple fatalities in attacks on military targets and civilians. US officials have warned that the threat from Hamas is growing and that the group is becoming more sophisticated.

The US military has been stepping up its efforts to combat Hamas, including increasing surveillance and intelligence-sharing with allies in the region. The US has also been working with other countries to develop new strategies to combat the threat from Hamas.

Hamas has been using a range of tactics to carry out its attacks, including car bombs, rockets, and drones. The group has been able to adapt to changing conditions and to overcome efforts by security forces to disrupt its operations.

The attacks have raised questions about the future of the US military presence in the region and about the ability of the US to counter the threat from Hamas.

The increasing number of attacks has also raised concerns about the impact on the US public. The attacks have led to increased anxiety and fear among Americans, particularly in areas with large Palestinian populations.

The attacks have also put pressure on US officials to find new ways to combat the threat from Hamas. The US has been working with other countries to develop new strategies and to coordinate efforts to combat the threat.

However, the US has been limited in its ability to take aggressive action against Hamas, due to concerns about civilian casualties and the potential for escalation of the conflict.

Voters center on Camby

Three Big East players join UMass big man

Jim O'Connell

Associated Press

Marcia Camcye came within one vote of being a unanimous selection to The Associated Press All-America team Sunday, and the once-ever-to-have-three players elected to the first team. Camby, the 6-foot-1 junior center who drew so much attention this season for challenging a game for as far as what he did to the court, is the first player from Massachusetts to be selected to the AP first team.

He is joined in the first team by Ray Allen of Connecticut, Alonzo Mourning of Georgetown and Kenny Battle -- all from the Big East -- along with Wake Forest center Tim Duncan.

Town's Jesse Stovall was given honorable mention, while Big East junior guard Tim Hardaway was the lone honor to make it to the second team. Big East junior guard Tim Hardaway was the lone honor to make it to the second team.

High and Lonesome releases CD, celebrates with live performance

Leslie Kennedy

The Daily Iowan

It's been four years since a group of Iowa City musicians banded together to produce a unique sound. Now, after a steady schedule of frequent touring around the Midwest and playing festivals as far west as San Francisco and as far east as Italy, High and Lonesome releases a fourth album, "The Rise of JnViner," on St. Sara Records.

Several new faces are part of the band this year, bringing fresh ideas to the group. In addition to the new songs, the band said several of the artists featured on the album will join in the band's live performances.

"I think it's a real noticeable difference," said lead singer and saxophonist Zollo.

Zollo said the songs on the album are more mature than earlier efforts. "I think there's a lot more emotion in the songs," he said.

The album has been picked up by several distributors and has been used as a promotional tool for other areas. "We're really excited about it," said Zollo.

The album's release party at the Union Bar 23rd and E College St. will capture the band's sound live.

The album "The Rise of JnViner," along with the group's previous releases "High and Lonesome," "Garden of Rabbits," and "Rent," is the best work of the band.

"We planned the show for a Wednesday night because we wanted there to be a good turnout, and we're all working together to make it a fun party," said Zollo.
