Bar scene makes for high ATM frequency

Evelyn Lauer The Daily Iowan

Standing behind nine other eager Automatic Teller Machine (ATM) users, UI sophomore Dustin Heintz soaked up the atmosphere in the lobby of the Holiday Inn, 210 S. Dubuque St., Friday night as he waited to "Shazam out some cash."

"People are in a good mood," he said. "They've been drinking. It's a relaxed atmosphere and everyone is talking and there's music play-

On Saturday nights, the percentage of ATM users who make withdrawals drops to 83 percent, which Heintz attributes to UI students' desire to save money.

"It's a moral thing," he said. "Most people think, 'I took money out last night and I can't do it again.' So they just pay the $5 cover and don't spend money on drinks, or they have money leftover from Friday night.'

March Madness breeds high-stakes gambling

The Daily Iowan

UI freshman John Doe says he is in complete control of his gambling activity, despite having money invested in eight different NCAA tournament pools and a little side action with a few of his on-campus bookies.

"I know it's not a problem," Doe (whose name has been changed at the student's request for legal reasons) said. "I'll just keep gambling until I'm financially incapable of betting anymore — it's fun."

The thrill and fun of placing bets on the NCAA basketball tournaments will come to a head with tonight's men's final, but gambling officials across the state and country warn of the dangers of excessive gambling.

David Gagne, project coordinator for the Massachusetts Council college betting - from both gamblers and the media - has hit his Boston office.

The increase in calls came due to the playoffs and the fact that the local University of Massachusetts men's team held a topranked seed in the tournament,

'In Massachusetts right now, there is a little more hype because UMass is in the Final Four," he said. "March Madness is a peak in sports gambling activity."

Numerous sources estimate the betting action on the entire tournament is as high as $2.5 billion. Frank Biagioli, executive director of the Iowa Gambling Treatment Program, said there's a correlation "With these last few games, people are trying to make good on past losses," Biagioli said.

Canadian comedians fool talk show host

Lindsey Tanner Associated Press

CHICAGO - If you think no topic is taboo for TV's muchmaligned talk shows, try this one: "Scam Artists Who Pose as Dysfunctional Guests. Of course, that wasn't the real title of an episode of "Jerry Springer," in which a man was said to reveal to his wife that he had been sleeping with their children's teen-age baby sitter.

The actual title was "Honey, Have I Got A Secret For You! But the secret wasn't the one Springer and his producers had counted on.

Turns out the philandering husband was really a Toronto comic, as were his purported wife, the baby sitter and the baby sitter's boyfriend, all of whom appeared on the show.

The truth was not revealed until afterwards, and the show's producer, Multimedia Entertainment Inc., was not amused. It filed suit against the four in federal court in Chicago, maintaining their hoax threatens the very integrity of shows like Springer's. But critics contend integrity is hardly these shows' strong suit. And the comics' counterclaims of generally slimy and dishonest behavior by Springer's producers essentially put TV talk shows on trial, as well.

"By trying to make an example out of us, they've laid themselves bare," said Suzanne Muir, 28, who portrayed the unsuspecting

Facing what could be a highly publicized trial where the comics promised to tell all, Multimedia has reached verbal agreement on a settlement of the lawsuit, spokesperson Robert Zimmerman said last week. But he said the settlement was not final, and added the comics might have breached it by discussing the episode with the AP.

Beyond that, Multimedia which also produces Sally Jesse Raphael's talk show - will say very little about hoaxers and even less about the comics' allegations. Springer himself declined repeated requests for an interview. And a spokesperson said a self-imposed gag order was essentially in effect. Media watchers said talk-show hoaxers probably aren't very common; a spokesperson for Oprah Winfrey said her show has been fooled by impostors just three times in 10 years.

But several shows have folded recently, with those remaining under increasing pressure "to get the man who slept with his dog and was observed by a rabbit, said Christopher Sterling, a media scholar at George Washington University in Washington, D.C.

cuts worry

nurses Al Austria

The Daily Iowan Kari Dolder, a first-year nursing student at the UI, said the recent UI Hospitals and Clinics nursing cuts are making her nervous. And although she does not plan on changing her major, she wonders if it will be worth it.

"What am I doing all this for?" she asked. "It doesn't make me feel optimistic."

One UIHC registered nurse (RN) speaking on condition of anonymity said the UIHC plans to replace some RNs with nursing assistants.

"The nurses that have been furloughed will be replaced by nursing assistants and medical technicians," the RN said. "They have less nursing skills and that's why they can be paid less.'

The job cuts will put more nurses in the market and create more competition for jobs, the RN said.

"It's not only going to affect nurses at the hospital, it's going to affect nurses looking for jobs and new graduates," said a second RN who has been with the UIHC for two years.

The second RN said the UIHC doesn't even post full-time nursing positions anymore.

"There were only three part-time positions posted," she said. "One was only for six hours a week."

"It's a very self-protective time," the first RN said. "I consider myself lucky to have a position. I don't want to jeopardize it." Dr. Kathleen Kelly, UI associate professor in the College of Nursing and past president of the Fifth District of Iowa Nurses Association, said the nurses' reactions to the restructuring is understandable. "We're in a difficult situation here since the UIHC is so large and resource-hungry that individuals could have trouble seeing what difference their salary would make," Kelly said.

Kelly said replacing RNs with unlicensed assistants is happening nationwide.

"It's not just an issue of staff mix between RNs and unlicensed assistants," Kelly said. "It's a matter of where the professional nurse is positioned to educate, assign and supervise the unlicensed person-

"Bar time is always heavy," he said. "But no one is in a hurry to take out money. It's more of a joyful time than on the weekdays, when people are impatient and are worried about getting out money fast."

Other UI students agreed with Heintz and said they believe Shazam machines are a place where everyone gathers to find out the hot spots for the night.

Sir Charles set to play different court

CHICAGO (AP) - It's back to court - state court, that is - for basketball players Charles Barkley and Jayson Williams.

An Illinois appeals court reinstated a lawsuit against the men Friday, saying a trial judge should have heard testimony rather than simply dismiss the case based on a police report.

The men, then teammates on the Philadelphia 76ers, were sued by Christopher Vincent after a 1992 bar fight in Chicago. Vincent alleges Williams, who now plays for the New Jersey Nets, hit him over the head with a beer mug.

He claims Williams and Barkley made up a story that Williams was acting in selfdefense. Barkley, star player for the Phoenix Suns, was a witness to the fight.

The UI Hospitals and Clinics' new 50,000 square-foot Eye Institute has eyes sparkling over its fiber-optic network, 12 subspecialty clinics, gallery of eye artwork and 110-seat

But the new clinic is a bittersweet achievement for the UIHC, as 121 impending layoffs were announced last week as part of a downsizing plan that will save $60 million over the next five years.

The institute, run by the UIHC Department of Ophthalmology, sits in the partially completed Pomerantz Family Pavilion, which has totaled $38 million in construction costs to date. The total cost of the pavilion, scheduled for completion in the year 2005, has been estimated at $100 million.

People have a hard time understanding why millions are being spent on new facilities when a hospital is downsizing, said Dr. Thomas Weingeist, head of the UIHC Department of Ophthalmology.

"It's progress. It's very difficult for people to understand why, when they read the newspaper, that a hos-

The clinic coordinates 53 examining rooms with sub-waiting areas, so patients can wait near their examining rooms. In addition to minor surgery, the doctors also do research, Weingeist said.

"When the person dies, the eyes are removed and they're brought here," he said. "Then the cornea is removed and put into a special solution. We then take a patient who has a cloudy cornea and remove that and suture in a clear cornea."

The institute features a small art gallery with an assortment of eye art, some of it done by doctors, Weingeist said.

The 110-seat Braley Auditorium is connected to the Iowa Cable network for broadcasting to different hospitals, and is used for lectures that incorporate audience participation, Weingeist said.

"Games People Play" A Presentation by Dr. A.M. Fink Iowa State Professor of Mathematics

Some parlor games are a lot of fun until you learn how to play them. For instance, tic tac toe is interesting only when the players do not know how to play intelligently. I will make your life less interesting by showing you how to play those games which are called finitely progressive. This does not include tic tac toe but it does include NIM and variations of it and some other "children's games" as well as some novelty puzzles. NIM was a game that con men used to play with the wealthy voyagers on ocean liners in the late 19th C. I will show you why the con men became wealthy. Also remember that children sometimes know how to play their games better than the adults around them. Time for revenge!

JORDAN, Mont. - The Freemen holed up on an isolated farm, where they claim to have their own legal system, should surrender and face an established court, a leader of another militant group said Sunday.

Others urged that outsiders stay away and not get involved in the stand-off between federal authorities and the Freemen, barricaded on a wheat farm on the snow-covered prairie of east-central Montana.

More than 100 FBI agents have been keeping watch on the Freemen's compound, 30 miles outside Jordan, since two leaders of the group were arrested on March 25.

A third member of the group surrendered Saturday. Authorities won't say how many people are still at the farm, but 14 of them are believed to be wanted on various state and federal charges.

Neighbors said the Freemen have built bunkers and openly stockpiled food, fuel and weapons - possibly including military armaments.

FBI agents have twice stopped a pair of sympathizers trying to reach the farm. "Stay home, and let the negotiators and the people on the site handle this problem, so we don't have a Waco or a Ruby Ridge," John Parsons of the Tri-State Militia of South Dakota said Sunday.

The Freemen deny the legitimacy of the U.S. government. Members call their compound, a cluster of houses and other buildings on a 960-acre wheat farm, "Justus Township" and insist they have their own laws and their own courts.

The Washington Post reported Sunday the FBI was considering an offer from white separatist Randy Weaver, whose wife and son were killed by federal agents in 1992 in a shootout at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, to mediate an end to the standoff.

And the Idaho-based Freemen Patriots of the Northwest announced plans to stage a demonstration at Lewistown, Mont., 120 miles west of Jordan, to protest the federal government's actions in Garfield County.

"If we have enough numbers, we could prevent another Waco from happening through peaceful resistance," said Edward LeStage, spokesperson for the group based in Kamiah, Idaho. LeStage said his group is not connected to the Freemen outside Jordan and does not necessarily share its views.

Gene linked to heart disease, diabetes found

DALLAS - Researchers say they have found a gene that for the first time can be directly associated with coronary artery disease and adult diabetes

The study "opens wider the possibility of genetic testing to assess a person's risk profile more specifically," Dr. Xing Li Wang and his colleagues reported.

Their report appears in today's edition of the journal Circulation, published by the Dallas-based American Heart Association.

The gene targeted by the research is a mutant or changed form of one that tells the body how to make an enzyme that turns fats in the bloodstream into a source of

In the study of 475 men and women, people carrying the mutant gene were 1.73 times more likely to have coronary arteries blocked by fatty deposits, reported Wang and Drs. D.E.L. Wilcken and R.M. McCredia. Carriers of the gene also were three times more likely to develop diabetes as adults. The degree of coexistence of the gene with the two diseases "was far more than that by chance alone," the authors wrote. However, Wang said further study is needed. The findings, while "not a breakthrough," do provide a starting point for further exploration of the link between genetics and heart disease and adult-onset diabetes, said Dr. Abhimanyu Garg. He is a professor of internal medicine at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas.

Garg emphasized increasing evidence of a genetic link makes it important that carriers of suspect genes control known risk factors such as a high-cholesterol diet, obesity and physical inactivity.

Whitewater probe may go beyond November

BISMARCK, Ark. (AP) - Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr suggested Saturday that his investigation may last beyond Election Day.

Starr, speaking at the annual meeting of the Arkansas Associated Press Managing Editors, said Justice Department policies prevented his talking specifically about pending cases. He prefaced many of his remarks by saying they were offered only in hypothetical terms.

When asked whether he saw a hypothetical special investigation based in Little Rock lasting beyond the Nov. 5 presidential election, Starr answered, "Yes."

The remark was an obvious reference to his investigation into the Whitewater land development in northern Arkansas.

James and Susan McDougal, former Whitewater real estate partners of President Clinton and his wife, and Gov. Jim Guy Tucker are on trial on charges of arranging nearly $3 million in fraudulent loans through David Hale's company and through Madison Guaranty Savings and

Agreement sets terms for new federation in Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Armed with a new flag, a fresh source of money and penalties for balky local warlords, Bosnia's Muslim-Croat federation regrouped Sunday to save a shaky union.

Croat and Muslim officials signed an agreement to jointly collect customs duties starting today and use them to finance the moribund fed-

They also agreed on a green, white and red flag, fusing financial structures and forming local governments across federation territory.

If it works, Sunday's agreement could give peace efforts in Bosnia a major boost. The 2-year-old federation shares Bosnia with the Serbs and is seen as one of the peace plan's most important — but most fragile — points.

Croat-Muslim mistrust from a year of ethnic bloodshed in 1993-94 means the federation's common defense, policing and monetary policies have existed only on paper. Tensions between Croats and Muslims occasionally threaten to erupt Warlords of both groups jealously guard roadblocks and have levied customs duties" on those passing through their territory.

Of the federation's 10 regions, known as cantons, only four have formed governments. The accord says all canton and municipal governments must be formed by April 9, including Sarajevo and Mostar, two flash points. U.S. Defense Secretary William

Perry, in Sarajevo for talks with federation Vice President Ejup Ganic and NATO officials, praised the agreement and promised the NATO-led force in Bosnia would "take more vigorous actions" to help

Cease-fire declared for Chechnya

Associated Press

MOSCOW - Desperate to show voters he will stop the war that is sinking his presidency, Boris Yeltsin on Sunday announced a halt to combat operations in Chechnya, limited troop withdrawals and a willingness to hold indirect talks with the rebels' leader.

But his long-promised peace plan stopped short of promising an end to the fighting and left scant hope for an imminent settlement.

Yeltsin refused to budge on the separatists' two main demands full withdrawal of Russian troops and independence for Chechnya and his tone was more tough than conciliatory.

Without doubt, we will not put up with terrorist acts and we will respond to them adequately," Yeltsin said in taped remarks broadcast on television Sunday

The announcement came just 11 weeks before Russia's presidential election, with the unpopular Yeltsin trailing Communist Gennady Zyuganov and voters demanding an end to the bloodshed in Chechnya.

It also capped a month of withering air and ground attacks on Chechen strongholds, apparently intended to push the rebels into the southern mountains before the plan was announced.

Thousands of troops were reportedly continuing large-scale operations Sunday in eight sealed-off mountain villages of southeastern Chechnya, and Yeltsin's open-ended statement left it unclear what would become of troops in such hot

The announcement was met with skepticism by politicians, analysts and even Russia's military commander in Chechnya, who cast doubt on the feasibility of the unilateral cease-fire, which Yeltsin said would begin within hours.

"It's unlikely that combat operations will be stopped right after the president's statement," Gen. Vyacheslav Tikhomirov told NTV Independent Television from Chechnya.

"You understand, it's impossible." A series of broken promises and defied orders throughout the 16month-old war have raised serious questions both about Yeltsin's intentions and about his control of the army.

His Security Council declared the military operation in Chechnya to be effectively completed as of Jan. 25, 1995. But fighting has raged on for another 14 months and the death toll is now estimated at over civilians. Reading a statement at his desk, Russian flag at his side, Yeltsin declared a unilateral cease-fire in Chechnya starting at midnight Sunday, along with unspecified, phased withdrawals "from the tran- cal status remains a major obstacle quil areas of Chechnya to its administrative borders.

He said democratic elections for a new Chechen parliament would be held, and he was prepared to hold talks with those loyal to rebel leader Dzhokhar Dudayev "through go-betweens."

Talks last year with rebel officials failed, and the Kremlin has refused to negotiate with Dudayev. Yeltsin appeared to signal some flexibility in linking the rebel leader's name to talks, and he acknowledged in follow-up questions by three Russian TV anchors that Dudayev enjoys "certain, though not quite unsullied, influence" among Chechens.

Yeltsin said Moscow would try to give Chechnya as much autonomy as possible — "more than to any other republic." He said Russia does not fear the autonomy of its started with the Dudayev side regions as long as they are peace- before the beginning of military

But independence remains out of

We cannot agree that Chechnya is an independent (state) outside Russia. It is a violation of Russia's territorial integrity," he said.

Yeltsin acknowledged the dispute over the southern republic's politi-

He said he was directing the government to form a commission, chaired by Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, to oversee efforts for a settlement. He also suggested an amnesty for rebel fighters, with Russian lawmakers to determine who would be eligible.

Early political reaction to the plan was mixed.

Reformist legislator Sergei Yushenkov told the Interfax news agency the plan was "undoubtedly positive but clearly a belated and insufficient step," while presidential candidate and lawmaker Alexander Lebed branded it a campaign fraud.

Zyuganov said Yeltsin's proposals borrowed from past Communist initiatives but were made far too late. "Negotiations should have been operations in Chechnya."

Sunday was baseball's opening day and though the crack of the first hit comes from an aluminum bat, it still signifies the beginning of spring for fans.

ummer must be close by. The Major League Baseball season officially opened Sunday; the earliest professional opening day since The Cincinnati Red Stockings took to the field on March 4, 1869. In one of the little idiosyncratic elements that is so closely associated with baseball, though the season opened Sunday, some teams play their opening games today, and others Tuesday. But six months from now, it won't matter when they started but how they finish.

For the first time in years, baseball is gaining a new respectability. After several years of player-management disputes - lockouts, strikes and replacement players - fans and sports writers have started to dedicate more attention to the action on the field.

proud attitude helped elevate the game and fans past the level of millionaires bickering over hundreds of thousands of dollars. This is not without precedent. Professional baseball was at an all-time low in 1920, the year after some players on the Chicago White Sox team conspired with gamblers to fix the World Series. Baseball had an increasingly negative reputation. Then slugger Babe Ruth stepped into the box and brought the fans back.

As Iowa's adopted son, Bill Kinsella, has pointed out, baseball has remained a constant in the pages of America's history books. Not only has professional baseball stayed true throughout the nation's history - the rules have remained virtually unchanged for more than 100

From the Major League Chicago Cubs to the minor league Iowa Cubs to the Hawkeyes to West High, the game is almost exactly the same. Aluminum bats are the only substantial difference. (A 100 mph Major League fastball off the end of an aluminum bat could kill a player.)

Comedian George Carlin has a routine comparing baseball and football. Sports enthusiasts can compare and contrast baseball and other sports for days, but one thing can't be denied. Like every other year in this century, the warm months of spring and summer are being welcomed with the crack of the bat. Opening day means green grass and clear blue skies, and warm, sunny days can't be far behind.

Spring may have officially started on March 20, but it doesn't seem real until opening day. For the next six months, the sun will shine brighter, the air will smell cleaner, the birds will sing sweeter and complete enjoyment and relaxation will only be a ball park away.

From Wrigley Field to Penn Meadows Park, the crack of the bat and the roar of the crowd will fill the night sky. Opening Day is here

Symbolic slavery

■ Slavery persists in the United States as racist attitudes continue to pervade society. This is the first in a two-part series on institutional rascism.

or years, students of Todd County Central High School in Guthrie, Ky., entered through a doorway over which the Confederate flag hung. The school yearbook was titled The Rebel. The class rings were adorned with the rebel soldier. A huge Confederate flag was painted on the gymnasium floor.

Today, the symbol of the flag is alive and thriving. The Civil War may have ended in 1865, but the rebel attitude white Southerners maintain has expanded into a present-day defiance.

So when anyone in this country says the days of slavery are over, they are wrong. Not while the Confederate flag hangs from courthouses, schools and museums in southern cities. Not while the Ku Klux Klan has an estimated 5,500 members nationwide and the number of white supremacists has grown from 22,000 to 25,000 since 1990, according to a group called Klanwatch which monitors racist organizations. Not while Pat Buchanan, on a crusade to win the presidency, has asked for donations from white supremacist groups such as the Confederate Society of America. Not while he has pledged to defend southern culture in the White House.

Slavery is not simply an act of oppression, it's an attitude. Anyone who promotes the idea that a certain group of people can be used and suppressed to uplift others caters to this mind frame. Slavery is a response to fear and an expression of power. It is greed. It is hate. And it is present, even now, in the United States of America. Our society, a capitalist nation, thrives on slavery - the mental, as well as economic, oppression of ethnic minorities. Affirmative action is being presented as institutional racism. Currently, there are huge debates at the University of Austin at Texas, which was not allowed to implement a program to enroll more blacks and Mexican-Americans into the law school. In California, an initiative to eliminate state programs awarding jobs, contracts and college admission based on race and gender preference is being discussed. Presidential candidate Bob Dole supports it.

What is happening in this country is a massive sweep of supremacist theory in which certain groups — mainly ethnic minorities — are being targeted and held to blame for financial downfalls. The United States supports a victim-blaming mentality in which minorities are targeted. If blacks are poor, it's their own fault; they have plenty of opportunities. If whites don't have jobs, it's the fault of the minorities. Plantation owners were rich in the days of legal slavery. No wonder they fought under the Confederate flag - they wanted to maintain their lifestyle. Likewise, the rising success of ethnic minorities in this country has caused parallel surges of fear and oppression to dictate scary mentalities and legal action against those who are not white.

More than 100 years after the Civil War, black Americans are still fighting slavery mentalities. If there is going to be change, it has to come with unity and acceptance, not with fear.

A lesson from America's game

Sunday was baseball's opening day. I always think of my grandfather on this day because it meant so much to him. Winter always was a lonely time for him, but once spring returned, his face would light up because baseball was back. From opening day on, he could be found in his basement, sitting in his old, worn-out, yellow leather recliner with his afternoon can of Hamms in his hand and the Chicago Cubs on television. He loved baseball, and in particular, the Cubs.

That is how I remember my grandfather, the man who taught me how to read box scores and baseball statistics when I was a kid. Before he was my grandfather, he was a young man from a small, Iowa coal-mining town called Pershing. He played semi-pro baseball before joining the army and fighting in World War II. After the war, he returned home, married my grandmother and moved to Des Moines to raise a family. He worked in a factory and did all he could do for his wife and son, and later, his grandchildren.

As he got older, he watched a lot of baseball, sometimes driving my grandmother crazy while doing so. She never seemed to understand why he loved baseball so much, but I think I do. Baseball is more than just America's pastime it is America.

For my grandfather, America was simple. He worked hard at everything he did, and when times got tough, he worked a little harder. He didn't have to worry about his son joining a gang or doing drugs, and he didn't have to get an alarm system installed in his house to sleep well at night. He didn't have to worry about losing his job or getting laid off because there were many jobs available as America progressed. Times were much simpler then.

Baseball was simple, as well. Men played baseball because it was fun, and even more than that, because they loved the game. Year in, year out, ballplayers took the field not for money, but with the hopes of winning the World Series someday. Everyone had a chance back then, even the Cubs. It was a lot like life in those days — play the game to the best of your abilities, and your efforts would be rewarded. That's what my grandfather did, and he was rewarded with the classic American dream: a home, a family, a job and a retirement that allowed him to enjoy the life he had built for himself and his family.

Times have certainly changed. Look at what has happened to baseball. Nearly two years ago, the game shut itself down when the owners and players could not agree on how to operate it. Owners wanted a salary cap to limit the escalating salaries which had created an unequal playing field. Small market teams could not compete with large market teams in free agent bidding, which meant some teams could afford to sign players to rich contracts, while others could not. As a result, some teams are always good, simply because they can financially afford to be, while others are doomed to Jamey Pregon's column appears Mondays on the mediocrity at best. Players wanted to protect Viewpoints Page.

their enormous contracts, and made little effort to negotiate a settlement. The owners would not budge either, and the game seemed to be on a path to destruction.

Like baseball, America has changed. No one is satisfied with just playing the game anymore. Almost everyone thinks America owes them something, and more people are unwilling to put in the work necessary to get what they want. The rewards are still there; they may have become more difficult to obtain, but they

After their work stoppage resulted in little gain, the game of baseball started up again last year. Although the deck remains stacked against the small market teams, they still take the same field large market teams do. It may not be entirely fair, but it is the only game they can play. Rather than give up and let the strike go on forever, baseball came back to life last. year. The World Series returned, and teams were again trying to win it. We all must do the same, no matter what field we step onto.

It has been more than 10 years since my grandfather passed away, but I know if he were here today, he would be watching the Cubs host the Padres in his basement. His beloved Cubs may play the game badly for the most part, but at least they play it. We all should follow their example. America may not be completely fair, but it is still the best game any of us can hope for. We must not give up because even the Cubs won the World Series once, and someday they may do it again.

Birds, bees and the Iowa legislature

Certain conceits don't allow for turning quiety away. Last week, some Iowa legislators decided to shift the focus of the state's new sexual McCarthyism. After focusing for weeks on what one disgusted Democratic legislator calls a crusade to enforce "pelvic morality," they turned to universities once again. There, the greedy eyes of the decency league lighted on back issues of the UI's Iowa Review. The prudes found objectionable content and began to howl.

It could have been funny, but the hubris of these people is salt in a wound. Rep. Kenneth

Sex is everywhere during spring, a profusion of couplings that threaten to overwhelm us. The mad and the long-considered, the traditional and the exotic, the loving and the cruel why isn't the Iowa legislature doing something about all this sexual blossoming?

Veenstra, R-Orange City, claimed such materials "are a violation of what most people in Iowa" find "prudent." Heaven forfend, sir, a state university's literary magazine print anything that might offend the sensibilities of the prudent. What a violation of the public trust that would be.

The outburst occurs against the backdrop of spring, a sensitive time for many people. Spring is tailor-made to offend the sensibilities. Nature will not be stopped in spring. Buds slip out of the plush coverings beneath which they've fat-tened and swelled all winter. Buds are surely pornographic. All the colors go vibrant and tender. Vibrant tenderness in color offends the sensibilities of the prudent, causing some to undergo actual aches and pains. Worst of all, the horses do it in the street and frighten the

Sex is everywhere during spring, a profusion of couplings that threaten to overwhelm us. The mad and the long-considered, the traditional and the exotic, the loving and the cruel - why isn't the Iowa legislature doing something about all this sexual blossoming? After all, if we can pass laws to call it 7 o'clock when it's really 6 o'clock, we can surely suspend the eruption of pornography in nature which makes for an Iowa springtime.

Instead, all we get are these paltry and insulting attacks on the written word from cretins who wouldn't recognize a profound consideration of the erotic if it (pardon me) bit them on the ass. Making cheap political hay from uninformed moral judgments is what our public servants seem to do best these days.

They don't talk about roads, or speak to us of the upkeep of state buildings. Gambling casinos proliferate across the state like phlox and they don't bat a lash. But unsheathe one penis in a short story, lift the cups of one brassiere and rhapsodize about what rests underneath, and you'd think you had painted erotic murals onto the Old Gold flags in the state Capitol building.

The worst part of all this is, there is pornography in the world. Some of it causes a type of degradation about which all human beings need to think. Most of this has nothing to do with sex. It has to do with power - the wrinkles and tentacles and tangles of power and its abuses. Every time Mid-America Construction Company contracts with the UI to heave another building up at the sky, the pockets of the president of the Iowa state Board of Regents are lined. Is that not pornographic? Every day now, women and men are being told their jobs will disappear in a matter of months while surgeons go on demanding utterly unique and stylized kits kept on hand at vast expense. Is there nothing prurient in their pompousness? A man shoots a school full of children dead. There is profanity enough here to fill a lifetime with sor row and outrage.

There are few comforts in the world of power and its abuses. Many of us are victims, even victims once removed, struggling through intimacies in lives deeply disturbed by the porneg raphy of power and abuse.

At least it is spring. In the final analysis, there is some comfort to be taken from the unsettling pornography of spring. The language of the body - the awkward and embarrassed, halting and wounded tongue that is our true first language - is more accessible in spring than any other time.

May we never lose the blessing of that rich language. May we find the courage to shout down those who would deny the voice of desire a place in the literature funded by this state.

UI students are fortunate to have the convenience of many ATMs located around campus, said Jon Mooravec, director of sales and marketing for First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St.

The UI has seven ATMs located on campus, which are owned by Hills Bank. The terminal located in the south lobby of UI Hospitals and Clinics totals the most transactions per month with 12,000 ATM transactions, 70 percent of which are withdrawals

The terminal, located near the cafeteria and the gift shop, gets a

"They're really running out of things to do," and in a rush to get the most unusual guests, they may neglect scrutiny that could weed out hoaxers, he said.

At the same time, Sterling noted, These shows thrive on the notion that these things are real. If that image disappears or is seriously weakened, it's going to put all kinds of doubts in the minds of an awful lot of folks."

According to Johnny Gardhouse, 24, who posed as the philandering husband on the Springer show, the hoax started as a joke when his roommate, Ian Sirota, responded to Springer's televised solicitation for guests who had slept with their

As their dealings with the producers progressed, the gag "took a different form," Gardhouse said. The comics' aim became "to show them how somebody could really react to something like this."

At one point a producer told him it would be safer if Gardhouse revealed his affair to his wife on television because she might become violent if he told her in private, court documents alleged.

The four came to Chicago for the Jan. 9, 1995, taping of the show. Gardhouse and Muir went on first, and Gardhouse revealed his "secret" before a jeering studio audience. Muir burst into tears quite convincingly.

A friend of Koontz's - James "Chris" Pennington, 21, who said he carried out her execution to cancel a $2,000 drug debt - goes on trial for murder and kidnapping Tuesday in Mingo County Circuit

FBI documents, citing statements from Pennington and Agent Arthur Turner, provided this account of the crime:

Koontz, who had spent part of her summer in a Huntington drug rehabilitation program, was back home with her parents in Williamson upon her release Aug.

On the evening of Aug. 25, she and her mother planned to attend a football game in nearby Matewan. But first, she told her mother, she had to run some errands and would return shortly.

DELPHI, Greece - In a cramped, steamy room toward the end of Hillary Rodham Clinton's long week in Europe, a Turkish lawmaker struggled for the right words of praise for the visiting first Her trip was such a success that "we are going to keep you here as a hostage," joked Tayyar Altikulac, a member of Parliament.

Rocking her head back, Rodham Clinton laughed. "There's a certain interest in that," she said. "This is an election year and sometimes I wish I could be kept away from

After eight days in southern Europe, with a quick side trip to a slice of Asia in Istanbul, Rodham Clinton returned home Sunday night after touring Delphi, home of the famed oracle - a hostage again to her political troubles.

Goodbye, travels overseas; hello, travel office. Goodbye, blue waters; hello, Whitewater.

The trip, designed to advance her campaign for women and children, came at a key time politically. The unexplained discovery of longsought Whitewater billing records and a memo contradicting her version of the travel office firings had chipped away at her credibility.

With the election seven months away, the first lady's poll ratings were at their lowest point. Even supporters wondered whether she was becoming a political liability to her husband.

Those conditions did not change during Rodham Clinton's sixth overseas trip without her husband, but the adventure did generate eight days of publicity about her women-and-children campaign and displayed a lighter side of a sometimes-demonized public figure.

Deft staff work developed daily schedules that tied the themes of her safe, brief speeches to sightseeing trips with her teen-age daughter, Chelsea. Some examples:

 She visited the purported home of the world's most venerated woman - the Virgin Mary -Wednesday morning and told Turkish leaders in the afternoon, "When women and children prosper, countries prosper."

· She toured houses of worship cherished by Muslims and Christians Thursday morning and asked religious leaders hours later to tand against those who would use and misuse religion.'

· She toured the cradle of democacy at the Acropolis in Athens before warning Friday that democracy cannot succeed in America while many women and children 'live on the margins of society.'

The biggest events were bookends for the trip. She began in Bosnia, making a rare conflict-zone visit to U.S. troops and carrying a simple message from home: "Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.'

The last working day of the trip was Saturday, when she traveled to the birthplace of the Olympic Games and got a rare glimpse of the quasi-religious torch-lighting ceremony. The visit came with domestic political considerations: The 1996 games are in Atlanta.

Though the overseas trip gave the business side of Rodham Clinton a boost of publicity, most Americans already knew she considered women's and children's issues a central part of her duties. But for some, this might have been the first glimpse at her lighter side.

Her aides exchanged quick, troubled glances when she joked about two sleeping rooms in a mansion at the ruins of Ephesus. "No wild parties in these rooms like Pompeii, where they had special rooms for those activities?" she said, mischievously alluding to ancient orgies. After that same tour, she picked up a photographer's camera and snapped several pictures of the press corps - then fired questions at reporters bemused by the sudden table-turning.

The most humanizing aspect of the trip was her 16-year-old daughter, a bright, maturing, poised young lady whose presence whether intended or not - underscored the first lady's commitment to the welfare of women and chil-

Couples finishes strong to run away from TPC field

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The talk all week at The Players Championship was of firsttime winners and how it can't happen here.

Fred Couples showed why Sunday with a masterful 8-under-par 64 — including an eagle on the dangerous 16th and a birdie on the treacherous 17th — for an 18under-par 270, four strokes better than Tommy Tolles and Colin Montgomerie.

Tolles, the 29-year-old trying for his first PGA Tour victory, closed with a 72, bogeying two of the last four holes. And Montgomerie finished with a 68, losing his chance when he dumped his second shot on No. 16 into the

Ivanisevic retires, Agassi and Graf take titles

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Goran Ivanisevic retired with a stiff neck in the fourth game of Sunday's final at the Lipton Championships, giving Andre Agassi a tainted title.

Ivanisevic woke up with the ailment, and the start of the match was delayed about 45 minutes while he received treatment.

The Croat's serve and twohanded backhand were both clearly hampered, and he won only five of 22 points before walking off the court with Agassi leading 3-0, 40-0.

"To beat Andre, you have to be 105 percent, and I was maybe 2," Ivanisevic said.

Agassi then played quarterfinalist Jim Courier in an exhibition.

Greg Maddux and the Atlanta Braves get their World Series rings, Ryne Sandberg returns from a 1½-year retirement and major league baseball becomes a Vegas act today on the first full day of the 1996 season.

Recently retired Dave Winfield will throw out the first ball in Cleveland, Tony La Russa will manage his first game for St. Louis and President Clinton will see Cal Ripken play consecutive game No. 2,154 for Baltimore, highlighting some of the day's 11 openers.

The season began Sunday night when Chicago played at Seattle. The March 31 opener was the earliest in major league history never before had a regular-season game been played before April 2.

For the first time in three years, baseball is expecting a full season, the reason for the early start. What baseball isn't sure about is fan reaction - attendance was down 20 percent in last year's strike-skewed season.

The Braves, despite last year's success, were not assured a sellout for their game against San Francisco. The fans in attendance at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium will see the World Series banner raised and rings passed out.

"After that, it's a whole new season," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "What we did last year won't mean a thing.'

Philadelphia, which was not anticipating more than 40,000 for its game against Colorado, postponed its opener until Tuesday because of a forecast for wet weather. Florida may not get near that number for its game with Pittsburgh. In other NL openers, it will be St. Louis at New York, Montreal at Cincinnati, San Diego at Chicago, and Los Angeles at Houston. Tennessee guard Michelle Marciniak was named the outstanding player in the Final Four after getting 10 points, five assists and two steals. She scored 21 in a semifinal victory over Connecticut on Friday night.

That victory and then the title eased a big hurt with Marciniak, Tennessee's loss to Connecticut in last year's championship game.

year's loss to Connecticut," said Marciniak, who wore one of the nets around her neck and along with Summitt took a call from President Clinton. "I think this one will definitely erase it from my memory."

The victory, Tennessee's 15th straight, avenged a 77-71 loss at Georgia back in January. The Lady Vols outrebounded Georgia 63-30 in that game and had another big edge on the boards Sunday night, this time 54-39.

'They got us on the boards again," Georgia coach Andy Landers lamented. "One of the reasons they got us was because they got us on the drive. It took our post (players) to get to the drive and then a shot goes up and there she stands by herself putting the ball back into the basket.'

Tennessee won its previous national titles in 1987, 1989 and 1991 and now has twice as many championships as any other school in 15 years of NCAA play.

But Summitt, wearing a burnt who had been heartbroken after orange pantsuit, let her players savor the moment. While they donned the traditional champi-"It's not probably until today onship caps and pranced around that I can forget the hurt of last the court in celebration, Summit watched calmly from the sidelines and chatted with a television

"I told the players in the locker room, we're getting ready to take our last exam of the year. Do you feel prepared?" Summitt said. "They said yes, so I said, there's no way you can fail this course. You can ace this exam and that's what they did."

La'Keshia Frett led Georgia (28-5) with 25 points but had only seven in the second half. Tracy Henderson scored 16 for the Lady Bulldogs, who shot 27 percent in the second half and 38 percent for the Ahead 42-37 at halftime despite shooting only 43 percent, Tennessee opened the second half with a 15-5 run to increase its lead to 57-41. Conklin hit two 3-pointers during that stretch and four other Tennessee players scored as the Lady Vols took control.

They also were doing it on the defensive end. Roundtree got nothing against Davis and Frett, who missed only two shots in the first half, didn't get a second-half basket until scoring on a putback with just 1:59 remaining. By then, it was over.

"I felt like the first three minutes the second half would be key," Summitt said. "I kept challenging them because I knew Georgia would make a run."

As it turned out, Georgia didn't make much of one.

A 7-0 run that included a 3pointer by Kedra Holland drew Georgia to 57-48, and the Lady Bulldogs trailed 61-52 after Henderson's basket with 11:52 to play.

But that's as close as they would get. Tennessee scored the next seven points for a 68-52 lead, and as the Lady Vols kept pounding away inside, the lead kept growing. An 11-2 run made it 81-60 and Georgia was finished, relegated to its second loss in as many appearances in the title game. The Lady Bulldogs lost to Old Dominion in the 1985

Roundtree had promised Landers she'd lead the Bulldogs to a championship when she signed two years ago out of junior college. It didn't happen, but she said it wasn't because she was trying too

"I don't think that had anything to do with it," she said. "I just didn't play well."

NEW YORK - Rick Pitino likes to preach to his Kentucky basketball team about living in the "precious present." No looking ahead or back. Just worry about today.

Well, almost no looking back When Kentucky faces Syracuse in the NCAA championship game tonight as a 14-point favorite, its toughest job will be solving the Orangemen's 2-3 zone. The zone has been a much-discussed topic among the Wildcats ever since it was used by North Carolina to beat them in last year's Southeast Regional final.

"The North Carolina loss is the only thing we look back on from the past," Kentucky point guard Anthony Epps said Sunday. "We go against that zone every day in practice."

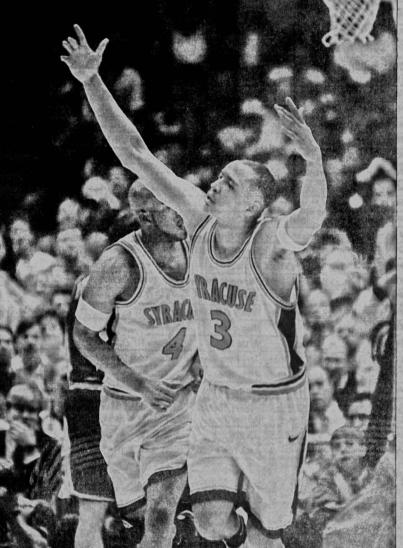

After a season in which it didn't really seem to matter what defense was used against them, the Wildcats (33-2) will finally get to go against the zone in a game. They won by an average of 23 points this season, and Saturday night's 81-74 semifinal victory over top-ranked Massachusetts was their first NCAA tournament win by fewer than 20 points.

Still, last season's 74-61 loss to North Carolina, one step from the Final Four, has been a tough one to forget. The Wildcats shot just 28 percent and were seven-for-36 from 3-point range.

"After last year when we played North Carolina, we have played against a 2-3 zone for anywhere from 15 to 30 minutes every day," Pitino said.

"We've been good at attacking it and we have to be, because Syracuse plays the best 2-3 zone in the

Rebuilt lineup goes a long way

Hal Bock

Associated Press

NEW YORK - When coach Jim Boeheim assembled his Syracuse team this season, there were some significant gaps in the lineup.

Gone was the school's career leading scorer, Lawrence Moten. Gone was Lucious Jackson, an important up-front player. Gone was point guard Michael Lloyd.

It looked like a rebuilding year, especially with no heavyweight recruits coming into the program.

It turned, instead, into a remarkable season that winds up tonight in the NCAA championship game against Kentucky. Boeheim seems bemused by the whole thing.

First he rebuilt his backcourt. plugging in three-year reserve Lazarus Sims at the point and junior college transfer Jason Cipolla alongside him. Sophomore Todd Burgan inherited Jackson's job alongside NBA-bound John Wallace. Otis Hill and J.B. Reafsnyder shared the center job.

The team finished the season at 24-8, and Boeheim was feeling pretty good when Syracuse was assigned a No. 4 seed in the west region of the NCAA tournament.

"I felt going into the tournament we were playing good enough to win a couple of games if things went right," he said.

Things went very right. First, Syracuse beat Montana State by 33 in the NCAA opener and then knocked off Drexel to make it to the second weekend of the tournament. "When you're good enough to get to the 16, and I always thought we were, then anything can happen in college basketball," Boeheim said.

Kentucky must keep up intensity tonight

Mike Embry Associated Press

NEW YORK - Rick Pitino compared the Kentucky-Massachusetts semifinal game in the NCAA tournament to an Ali-Frazier heavyweight title bout. The important thing is regarding the championship game against Syracuse the same way.

"It was two teams coming at each other with everything they had, physically and mentally, the Kentucky coach said Sunday.

There was a huge buildup for Saturday night's game between No. 1 Massachusetts and No. 2 Kentucky. The Wildcats prevailed 81-74 at the Meadowlands in New Jersey.

Now that it's over, will the victor have anything left for the unsung challenger, Syracuse, in the title game tonight?

'We're not out of gas," Kentucky forward Derek Anderson said. "We had a lot of emotion drained, then we got it back afterward. You realize it's not over. You go back out there. We don't have that ring. Once we realize we have it, that's when all the celebrating will begin."

Kentucky believes its ability to focus on each opponent has been a big reason for its success.

'We've done a tremendous job this season of staying focused and not letting that affect our team in any way," senior forward Walter McCarty said.

relationship got started shortly after Pitino and his wife, Joanne, checked in at the old Americana Hotel, eight blocks away.

"I had literally carried my bride across the threshold," Pitino remembered, "and the phone rang. I heard this whining voice at the other end, didn't recognize it. And he said, 'This is Jim Boeheim.'

"I'd like to talk to you," Boeheim said that day.

"Jim, I just entered the room," Pitino protested. "Could we get together tomorrow morning?"

"No, I have to go to Chicago tomorrow," Boeheim countered.

Wolverines get best of Hawks

One of the University of Iowa softball team's goals for the 1996 season is to dethrone Michigan, the defending Big Ten Champion.

After dropping two-of-three to the Wolverines over the weekend, Iowa will have to rely on some help from the rest of the Big Ten Conference to reach that goal.

The two teams split a doubleheader in Ann Arbor Saturday and Michigan came from behind to defeat the Hawkeyes, 3-1, Sun-

"It's disappointing coming out of Michigan 1-2," Iowa head coach Gayle Blevins said. "I thought we could go 2-1."

BOOKS OUT MONTHLY

6-part series released by horror King

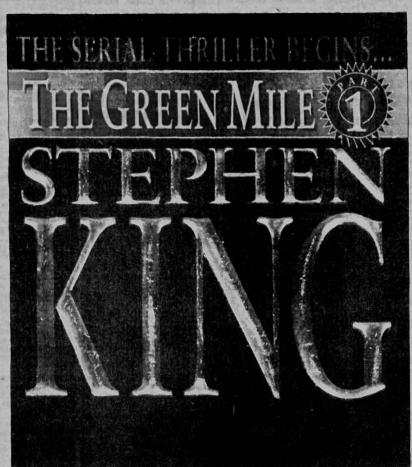

Nathan S. Groepper The Daily Iowan

When the elements of a book include characters shrouded in mystery, death lurking around each corner and a touch of the paranormal, there can only be one explanation: America's favorite author is at it again, but this time there is a twist.

Stephen King's latest creation, "The Green Mile," closely follows in the tradition of his realitybased thrillers, including "Firestarter" and "The Shining." In "The Green Mile," however, readers cannot be assured the ending will conclude in the supernatural world because King has chosen to break the novel into six installments. Stemming from his affection for the serialized novels of Charles Dickens, King will release a segment of the novel on the last Monday of each month, concluding on August 26.

While this concept may seem to have good intentions, it is more a lesson in marketing. With a television commercial, an official web sight on the Internet and a mailin contest. "The Green Mile" is starting to look more like a publicity stunt. The $2.99 cover price may seem a bargain at first, but ing down your hard-earned cash.

What it really comes down to, though, is a well-written, interesting story which "The Green Mile"

DEBUT OF ANTHOLOGY TO BE READ

Reading to feature UI's poetry best

Daily Iowan Maybe you've heard: It's National Poetry Month. I don't know exactly what that means, or who sponsors it. Are we supposed to write flowery paeans to love and loss? Or maybe we're just supposed to realize poetry is cool. Poetry is cool. It's the coolest stuff in the world. It combines music and math and makes your brain go in directions it doesn't normally go. It makes you lose your breath sometimes when you realize someone, somewhere, has put into words the way you feel but thought you could never say. If you're one of the very wise people who already knew all that, skip to the end of this article.

The rest of you, listen up: A great opportunity is before you, in Shambaugh Auditorium at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday. In commemoration of National Poetry Month, several of our best writers are reading from "Earth Took of Earth," an anthology of poetry recently published by Ecco and edited by Jorie Prairie Lights," on WSUI which Graham of the UI Writers' Work-

Graham and others will read selections from the anthology, which covers literary ground from old songs, composed by anonymous folks back when poems were sung, to the beginning part of the 20th century. "Earth Took of Earth" comprises 100 compelling works, some of which might be familiar to you, like Wordsworth's "Boy of Winander," a section of "The Prelude" and some of which may be more obscure, like a Native American song for the harvest.

Joining Graham will be poets Marvin Bell, Jim Galvin, Donald Justice, Bob Perelman and fiction writer Marilynne Robinson. Such a gathering of artists is a rare thing in town, and Shambaugh should be full, so get there early to get a
