NBA airs American programs in Asia

HONG KONG (AP) — The National Basketball Association is airing its first-ever primetime sympathy program in two of Asia's most populous nations, Japan and Taiwan, in an effort to foster a new basketball audience.

Bill Walsh, president of the NBA, said the network hopes the shows will attract young people with a passion for sports and entertainment.

Japan and Taiwan are key markets for the NBA, which seeks to develop new audiences in international markets as part of its global growth strategy.

The network will air games from the NBA season in Japan and Taiwan, with plans to expand its reach in the region in the future.

Walsh noted that the NBA's relationship with Japan dates back to the 1980s, when the league held exhibitions in the country. In recent years, the network has increased its footprint in Asia, with games broadcast in China, South Korea, and other countries in the region.

The NBA's presence in Asia is part of its broader strategy to grow its global audience, with the league seeking to expand its reach in key markets around the world.

Sports betting

Sports betting has become a popular form of gambling in many countries around the world. The legalization and regulation of sports betting varies across jurisdictions, with some countries having strict regulations while others have more relaxed approaches.

In many cases, sports betting is managed by governments or licensed by them. The industry has grown significantly in recent years, with online and mobile betting platforms becoming increasingly prevalent.

As sports betting continues to grow, concerns have been raised about its potential risks, including the impact on public health and the potential for gambling addiction. Many countries have implemented measures to address these concerns, including setting limits on bets and implementing awareness campaigns.

The growth of sports betting has also attracted attention from regulators and law enforcement agencies, with efforts to combat fraud and corruption a key focus in many jurisdictions.
Branstad "stands tough" behind tax reduction proposals

Mike Glover

DES MOINES — Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad vetoed welfare amendments Monday that would provide some of the state's neediest residents
with more money to spend on food,
utility bills and other necessities.

"Those days are over," Branstad told reporters. "We are not going to do any more welfare legislation.

"We don't want to take away
from the kids that already don't have enough," he said.

Branstad has called the state legislature into special session
after rejecting its version of a bill that would provide federal match funds to states in implementing Medicaid expansion
under the Affordable Care Act.

The governor said that something like the plan should pass, but it's up to the legislature to work out the details.

Branstad vetoed a provision
that would have allowed
the state's entire public
husband-and-wife food
purchase limit to
be increased from $300 to $400 per
month.

He also vetoed a provision
that would have allowed
the state to use federal funds to provide Medicaid coverage
for low-income children
in its foster care system.

The legislature had included
these provisions in its Medicaid expansion plan,
which it passed over Branstad's veto.

Branstad said he wanted to see the plan pass, but he would not support the provisions that would
have increased
the spending limits.

"We need to make sure we don't raise
taxes," he said.

Branstad also vetoed
provisions that would
have allowed the state
to use federal funds to provide Medicaid coverage
for its foster care system.

He said he was concerned about the cost of
those provisions.

"We don't want to
raise taxes," he said.

Branstad's veto means
the legislature will
have to pass the Medicaid expansion
plan again before
the state can
begin using federal
funds to cover
its foster care system.

Ex-Clinton aide testifies Whitewater defendants

During a refueling stop in Alaska on its way from Washington, Clinton himself argued that Whitewater-related convictions were motivated by political factors. Clinton was joined by the 11 members of the Whitewater jury as they took a sightseeing tour of the National Park in the area.

The war ended with an agreement that the two nations would negotiate a peace treaty to end the war. Clinton and his counterpart were linked to keep the two sides separate and have a face-to-face meeting at the end of the agreement. Clinton said: "If that would happen, then the world would be a much more peaceful place — the whole world."
Israel-Hezbollah attacks continue, claiming more lives in Lebanon

Hussme Chaldeh
Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Israel artillery and helicopter gunships pounded Hezbollah targets in Beirut and southern Lebanon on Monday, killing at least 10 civilians in the latest attacks, military police reported. Civilian deaths were slightly greater than those reported by Hezbollah media.

All told, 25 people have been killed and up to 25 others wounded between Hezbollah and Israel since the latest round of fighting started last week. Apart from Israel's own soldiers, the dead have been Lebanese civilians.

Despite a rare diplomatic initiative, prospects seemed dim for a cease-fire. Hezbollah claims it has suffered no civilian casualties.

Israel hopes the air raids and the hundreds of thousands of refugees will prolong Lebanon and force it to dismantle the Iranian-backed Hezbollah. For more, the Western missile guerrillas have made hundreds of rocket attacks at Israel to drive its army from Lebanon, and Israeli helicopters have bombarded the site of a 400-meter-long tunnel believed to be a Hezbollah bomb shelter.

■ Americans have complaints, but it's little to challenge our two-party system, which acts like a near-competitive market, with voters as consumers. It's a system of transactional victories, whose abuses of labor is in our public's acceptance of the system. It's manipulative via advertising and the apparent lack of alternatives to our vote.

This is not to say this is the only problem. The problem, at least some see it, is the power structure. Voters, who are the majority, produce a two-party system. It's a system that is run by the power structure, or at least seems to be. A system that is used to manipulate people into voting for candidates who do not represent their interests.

If you want to make a difference, you need to get involved in the political process. It's a process that is run by the power structure, and it's a process that can be changed. Gant powers hot Cardinals past Pittsburghs

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Ron Gant homered, doubled and drove in four runs in the Cardinals' 9-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3 Friday night, one day after RBI double in the first inning and a three-run home run in the third accounted for his team's five runs and ended Colorado's 11-game winning streak. With the win, the Cardinals increased their NL Central lead to 5 1/2 games over the St. Louis Cardinals, who fell behind 4-0 after two innings.

The Pirates' Bill Robinson scored on a wild pitch in the fifth inning, his fifth consecutive game with an RBI, and tied the game at 4-4. However, the Cardinals took the lead in the sixth inning on a pair of singles by Gant and Will Clark, and a sacrifice fly by Darrell Porter. The Pirates scored their only run in the seventh inning on a sacrifice fly by Kazuhiro Hata, but the Cardinals took the lead for good in the eighth inning when Gant hit a three-run home run off relief pitcher John Smoltz.

The Pirates' starting pitcher, Steve Bedrosian, lasted only five innings, allowing five earned runs on nine hits and a walk. The Cardinals' starting pitcher, Ken Hill, lasted six innings, allowing four earned runs on eight hits and two walks. Bedrosian's ERA rose to 1.80, while Hill's fell to 3.13.

The Cardinals' victory was their fourth consecutive win, and they have won six of their last seven games. They remain in first place in the NL Central, two games ahead of second-place St. Louis. The Pirates' loss was their fifth in six games.

The Pirates' leading hitter, Glam, was 3-for-4 with a home run and two RBIs. The Cardinals' lead hitter, Gant, was 3-for-4 with two RBIs and two runs scored. The Cardinals also received strong performances from Clark, who was 3-for-4 with a home run, and Porter, who was 2-for-4 with a double and two RBIs.

Knicks clobber Raptors

Associated Press

NEW YORK - The New York Knicks made it five of the last six with a 119-80 victory over the visiting Indiana Pacers, giving them one of the largest victory margins, relative to the lesser of the scores, in NBA history.

It was the 10,000th victory for the Pacers, who have played in the NBA for 50 years. Coach Larry Bird, who played for the Indiana Pacers for 12 years, attended the game.

The Knicks dominated from the start, scoring 40 points in the first quarter to set the tone. They led by 26 points, 40-14, after one period of play. The Pacers never recovered and were never within double digits after the first quarter.

The Knicks were led by forward Carmelo Anthony, who scored 26 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. Guard Tim Hardaway Jr. added 21 points and nine assists. Center Tyson Chandler contributed 14 points and 13 rebounds.

The Pacers were led by guard George Hill, who scored 18 points. Center Roy Hibbert added 15 points and 12 rebounds, while forward Paul George scored 13 points.

The Knicks improved to 45-27, while the Pacers fell to 36-36. The Knicks have won five of their last six games, while the Pacers have lost three of their last four.

The game was played in front of a sellout crowd of 18,049 fans at Madison Square Garden.

In other NBA games:

- The Chicago Bulls defeated the Milwaukee Bucks 113-107, with forward Jimmy Butler scoring 29 points and guard Dwyane Wade adding 18 points.
- The Boston Celtics beat the Sacramento Kings 109-104, with forward Gordon Hayward scoring 27 points and guard Kyrie Irving adding 23 points.
- The Utah Jazz defeated the Miami Heat 114-111, with forward Gordon Hayward scoring 32 points and guard Ricky Rubio adding 21 points.

The Knicks' win was their second-largest victory margin against the Pacers, who have played in the NBA for 50 years. The biggest margin was a 24-point victory in 1989, when the Knicks beat the Pacers 146-122.

The Pacers, who have played in the NBA for 50 years, have won 10,000 games. The Knicks, who have played in the NBA for 90 years, have won 11,000 games.

"When 'Saturday Night Live' producer Don Roritor read Roald Dahl's 'Giant Peach' leads to the enormous peach and a boy named James?"

The Nathan Torris have met the challenge of adapting Roald Dahl’s "Giant Peach" with many special-effect techniques. After spending one week creating a shot, animators blend together headpieces, limbs, and production designer Harley Hoffer’s costumes and props to create a shot like all previous films. The film includes some of the people who have created the illusion of water in the Arctic with a special effect known as a "composited shot." When forced into the conventions of Hollywood plot development, "Brain Candy" becomes increasingly less fresh and humorous. As viewers watch the science’s rise and fall at the hands of the manipulative corporation, we almost entirely engulfed by an uneventful conclusion and finale. In part, "Brain Candy" is a highly entertaining film. Few old fans, raise familiar characters such as White Trash Man and unique new ones with classic names like "Brain Candy" and "Candy." In the end, the viewers see what all the fun is about. The film concludes with the same kind of moment that was used in the original film. The film contains some of the same kind of humor and point made work in parts. Unfortunately, impressed by the conventions of Hollywood film. "Brain Candy" sufferers, and viewers lose interest in the story. The film contains some of the same kind of humor and point made work in parts.
