Pell Grant proposal calls for 'B' average, no drug offenses

Mary Neubauer Associated Press

DES MOINES - Student leaders from across Iowa Tuesday criticized a state legislator's proposal to revamp the Pell Grant system, which would hinge the currently need-based grants on grades.

State Sen. Maggie Tinsman, who is running for the GOP U.S. Senate nomination, has said she wants to give full scholarships only to students at public colleges and universities who maintain a "B" average, avoid drug convictions and have high attendance rates. Pell Grants currently are based on income and pay only a fraction of actual college meeting Tuesday night, the board voted to postpone a boundary change decision which would have scattered kids who lived in Hawkeye Court Apartments to different local schools. Parents had argued the policy would needlessly separate young children from their neighbors and friends.

Board members said they would seek more information on the issue before making the decision which would help schools equalize minority enrollment to meet state guidelines - about the UI's family housing units.

"The issue is totally opened, the plan is gone," Hawkeye Court resident Jeff Houck told other residents after the meeting. "They have done exactly what we wanted; this is the debate we've wanted from the beginning."

At an April 18 work session, the board decided to split up Hawkeye Court elementary students, so that 50 percent would go to Lincoln, 300 Teeters Court, and 50 percent would remain at Weber, 3850 Rohret Road S.W. That decision would have been implemented a year later than boundary changes in other areas, so Hawkeye Court residents could prepare for the

More than 600 UI students and Iowa City residents packed into Macbride Auditorium Tuesday night to hear a 20-year-old man with full-blown AIDS talk about his struggles with life in the face of death.

Steve Sawyer Jr., a hemophiliac from Wolfeboro, N.H., had the audience laughing, crying and re-evaluating their lives as he related his experiences with the fatal disease. Sawyer said he could have been exposed to the virus more than 100 times between 1980-'83 and also contracted hepatitis C tive two-year tour supporting Cracked Rear View, they rested in Bermuda and wrote 30 songs, 14 of which made it on the new album.

Hootie's debut is still firmly ensconced in the top 20 of Billboard's album charts, and "Time" is still all over radio and MTV. With Fairweather just released, the band, which won the best new artist Grammy this year, could find itself in competition with itself. But booming singer Darius Rucker's not worried.

DENVER - Responding to a recent break in their ranks, the United Methodist bishops affirmed Tuesday the church's opposition to homosexuality and the ordination

The 67-member Council of Bishops acknowledged at a meeting of the church's General Conference that there are serious differences on the issue within the 8.5 millionmember denomination, the nation's second-largest Protestant denomi-

But in a statement adopted unanimously, the bishops said they are committed to following church law banning gay ordinations and declaring the practice of homosexuality to be incompatible with church teaching.

Also Tuesday, the bishops voted 767 to 45 to establish a Commission on Pan-Methodist Union to seek unity with the three largest black Methodist churches.

The statement on homosexuality came less than a week after 11 active and four retired bishops, declaring it was time to "break the silence," said they personally oppose church policies condemning homosexuality but would continue to obey church law.

Bishop Woodie White, council president, said the statement issued Tuesday was an attempt to WASHINGTON - Scientists fighting cancer have engineered what they call the first genetic time bomb, set to go off inside tumor cells when they blow their cover by producing telltale pro-

The approach is intended to deliver its killing force to cancer cells with pinpoint accuracy while sparing the normal healthy tissue around them.

The idea is still in the test tube and probably years away from human use. It is notable for its novelty, but whether it will eventually lead to a cancer cure, as its developers hope, remains to be

Ordinary chemotherapy uses a scatter shot approach: Toxic medicines kill not only cancer cells but plenty of innocent bystanders, too. Many scientists have been trying to identify landmarks that make tumors unique, then tailor medicines that zero in on them.

The gene bomb scans the innermost workings of the renegade cancer cells looking for proteins that Trojan horses to carry them in. But only they make.

"As with any bomb, it has an explosive part and a trigger," said Luis da Costa, a research fellow at Johns Hopkins University.

"You can put this bomb into a cell, and if it is normal, nothing happens," he said. "We engineered the trigger so it can only be pulled by a cancer protein. This will make the bomb go off and kill the cancer

Da Costa described the innovation Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Association for Cancer Research. A report is also being published next week in the Proceedings of the National Acadey of Sciences.

While researchers have talked excitedly for years about using gene therapy to cure cancer and other ills, they are confounded by get the killer genes into the cells you want to eliminate?

One strategy is to use viruses as cancer cells seem especially hard to penetrate. In the clump of tumor cells, only a few may absorb the transplanted genes. Even if these die, the others survive and spread. However, da Costa's approach may help sidestep this problem, too. The bomb may kill not only the cell it blows up, but those around it as well - in effect, shrapnel.

In da Costa's view, another beauty of the idea is its potentially wide applicability.

"A variety of different cancer proteins could be used to pull the trigger," he said. "This strategy could be used to treat a wide variety of cancers.'

It might even work for viral diseases, too, such as AIDS.

In his test tube experiments, da Costa worked on lung cancer cells that have a defective version of a It deserves investigation, but it's one serious drawback: How do you gene called p53. This gene ordinar- too early to handicap it right now."

ily suppresses cancer from growing, and it malfunctions in about half of all cancers.

In this case, the bad p53 was the trigger. The gene bomb sat quietly unless it encountered this protein. The warhead was a gene that produced a bacterial enzyme called purine nucleoside phosphorylase. This enzyme turns a harmless compound into a toxic, cell-killing chemical.

In the experiment, the gene bomb worked well. Cells with mutant p53 died at a 1,000 times higher rate than those without it. The next step in the coming months will be to test the approach on lab animals.

Will it work? "It has good potential," Dr. Roy Jensen, of Vanderbilt University, said. "The key will be the correct vector" - the missile that carries the bomb into cells - "and identifying appropriate genes to target.

Businesses such as Freshens, Subway, Third Coast, Yen Ching and True Value may be forced to relocate or go temporarily out of business in order to make room for possible renovation and expansion of the Iowa City Public Library.

Preliminary plans for the new library, which would expand the area above the building west of the library at 130 S. Dubuque St., were presented by the library board to the Iowa City City Council Monday.

space on the bottom level, which may be rented out or sold to busi-The level above the retail area

The addition would include retail would be library space, and there is the option of adding a third and fourth level if the library needs to expand further.

The plan would add about 28,000 square feet to the library at a cost of about $12,422,000. The project would be funded through a bond referendum if approved by the council. The cost will actually be more, because the total does not include the non-building costs, such as land, furniture and equipment. Non-building costs are expected to be 20-25 percent of the construction costs.

The expansion is expected to accommodate the library's population until 2010. The council will decide early August whether the plan should be put on a ballot in November, Iowa City Mayor Naomi Novick said. Business owners in the building said they were surprised by the immediacy of the possible renovation. Even if the businesses decide they will stay in the building after library construction, there will be an 18-month construction period during which the tenants will have to either close down or relocate. Eric Christner, manager of both True Value and the Pedestrian Mall said he is thinking of relocating his hardware store, but is unsure where a good downtown location would be. "A lot of (customers) are worried," he said. "If we leave downtown, there is nothing else to take our place."

The owners are now in a limbo, Christner said. "The hardest part of the deal is not knowing whether it's going to happen or not," he said. Christina Lacock, owner of Freshens Premium Yogurt and Ice Cream, said there is nothing for her to do but wait. She said if the plan passes, the library board will have possession of the business space by fall 1997 and she will have to rewrite her business plan.

"We'll see what the public wants," she said. "I don't see that there's anything I can really do."

Christner said he can see the positive side of the library plan, though he is worried about the lack of control the owners have.

"I think it definitely needs to expand," he said. "But it's a hardship on businesses in the building."

Problems of overcrowding have been evident in recent years, said Susan Craig, director of the library

In the winter, a busy time for the library, visitors sometimes can't find a place to sit in the reading areas, she said. And a phenomena dubbed "stroller gridlock" by library staff is a problem when children's programs are held.

"We have less space now than we needed in 1990," she said.

Added facilities at the library would include an additional meeting room, more space for computer stations and listening and viewing

City Council delays design ordinance

Melanie Mesaros

The Daily Iowan

Although all of the parties involved agree that good design is an important part of downtown Iowa City, they are not in agreement as to how it should be enforced and if it should be at all.

The Iowa City City Council voted 5 to 2 Tuesday to defer an ordinance requiring design plans for downtown and the near south side to be reviewed by the Design Review Committee before council approval. A deferment on the issue was chosen because of problems regarding the way the ordinance is currently drafted. Councilors Karen Kubby and Larry Baker voted against the movement to defer the ordinance. "I am going to have to vote against deferral," Kubby said. "If (the ordinance) changes that drastically I think you should go ahead from the drawing board." Martin Haynes, chairperson of he is pleased the council has not he agrees with the deferment. thrown out the ordinance all together and was surprised by the council's decision.

One of the questions involved with the ordinance is whether good design can be enforced voluntarily or must be enforced like the current ordinance proposes.

"We still have to make the distinction between a mandatory or voluntary Design Review. We can-not have a hybrid," Councilor Larry Baker said.

Councilor Dee Norton said adding some kind of incentive may be a way to encourage better design and amend the ordinance. Haynes said he doesn't think

Man accused of stabbing brother receives verdict of willful injury

Greyson Purcell The Daily Iowan

After a day of deliberations, the jury in the Keith Jackson murder trial returned a verdict of willful injury on Tuesday - not the firstdegree murder charge the prosecution was pursuing.

"This is a forceable felony, which means it has mandatory prison time," Janet Lyness, prosecuting attorney, said. "I'm pleased with that."

Keith Jackson was charged with the Nov. 4 stabbing of his brother, Raymond Jackson, outside of Keith Jackson' Iowa City home, located at 620 S. Dodge St.

Raymond Jackson was rushed to the UI Hospitals and Clinics, with one stab wound to the heart, where

The Jacksons' mother, Sallye Ancker, began crying when the verdict was returned and was unable to give a comment.

Willful injury is a Class C felony carrying a prison term of up to 10 years. According to the Iowa Code, willful injury is an "act which is not justified but is intended to cause, and does cause, serious injury." Serious injury is defined as a "disabling bodily injury creating a substantial risk of death.

Following the verdict, Jackson was taken into the custody of the Johnson County Sheriff's Depart-the jury," Lyness said.

Keith Jackson's defense relied Russell declined to comment.

he stayed until his death on Nov. 15. heavily on testimony that Raymond Jackson became violent when he drank, as he had been on Nov. 4, and that Keith Jackson stabbed him out of self-defense.

> The prosecution argued that Keith Jackson had been carrying a knife before the confrontation, which might suggest it was premeditative.

They suggested $25, which Raymond Jackson owed his brother, may have been the cause of the argument that led to the stabbing.

District Court Judge Van Zimmer said Jackson's sentence will be decided upon at a later date, but it will probably be announced on "I think it was a hard case for June 7 or June 14.

Dole campaign gains dull victory in Pennsylvania

Bob Dole won Pennsylvania's primary Tuesday but it was of little solace to a campaign trying to cure an internal Republican funk .

Dole clinched the GOP nomination by winning 25 consecutive primaries in March, leaving little drama for Pennsylvania - or the 11 presidential contests still to come..Early returns showed Dole handily beating Buchanan.

So predictable were the results that Dole didn't even stage a primary night celebration, instead thanking Pennsylvania Republicans in a statement that ignored recent turmoil in the Republican ranks over Dole's skills as a candidate and the party's strategy for dealing with aggressive Democrats.

"You showed that the Republican Party is unified ... and it is ready to take its message of positive, conservative change directly to the American people," Dole said.

But a senior Dole adviser said: "It's ugly out there."

Subway killer ordered to pay $43 million in damages

NEW YORK (AP) - A jury Tuesday ordered subway gunman Bernhard Goetz to pay $43 million to a young black man left paralyzed in the 1984 shooting.

The Bronx jury of four blacks and two Hispanics ruled that Goetz acted recklessly in shooting Darrell Cabey. It awarded the 30year-old Cabey $18 million in compensatory damages and $25 million in punitive damages.

The verdict came nine years after a criminal trial in which a mostly white jury acquitted Goetz of attempted murder and convicted him on a weapons charge. He served eight months in jail.

Goetz shot Cabey and three other black men Dec. 22, 1984, after they asked him for $5. He said they were about to rob him; they said they were panhandling.

A Ukrainian watches flames race through a field in Krasny Gorodok, a village six miles from the Chernobyl nuclear power plant. The fire ravaged five villages for hours Tuesday, sending an unknown amount of radioactive particles into the atmopshere, according to officials.

Fire near Chernobyl sparks fear

Angela Charlton Associated Press

KIEV, Ukraine - Fire raced through deserted villages around the Chernobyl nuclear plant Tuesday, sending wind-whipped radioactive particles skyward 10 years to the week after the world's worst nuclear accident.

Monitors flown in helicopters over the area of the fire recorded only a slight radiation increase, said Nikolai Komshensky, a spokesperson for Ukraine's nuclear regulatory agency.

"We see no reason to be concerned now," he said.

Plant officials said the fire posed no danger to the Chernobyl plant, still in operation a decade after a reactor exploded, killing at least 30 people outright. Another five million people were exposed to radioactive fallout, mostly in Ukraine, Belarus and Russia.

No injuries were reported in the fire, which burned several acres before being put out after about 7 1/2 hours. It was not clear how much damage was done to the villages, officially off limits since the Firefighters said the blaze was probably started by a cigarette dropped by one of the families visiting graves near the village of Toysty Lis, about six miles northwest of the plant.

Old women sobbed and tried to shield grandchildren from the smoke as flames engulfed homes they were forced to abandon to radioactive contamination from the April 26, 1986, disaster.

The fire spread quickly through five villages in the 18-mile exclusion zone around the plant, carried by strong winds blowing toward Kiev and its 2.6 million residents. It burned pines and buildings in one of the areas most heavily contaminated with radioactive cesium.

The West has long pushed for Ukraine to close Chernobyl, but the energy-starved former Soviet republic says it needs the electricity and jobs the plant provides.

Dr. Fred Mettler, a University of New Mexico professor who led a 1990 study into the health hazards of the Chernobyl disaster, said the risks from radiation were minimal.

The cesium contamination from the 1986 accident mostly is in the soil, and not likely to be carried by smoke from burning buildings, Mettler said by telephone.

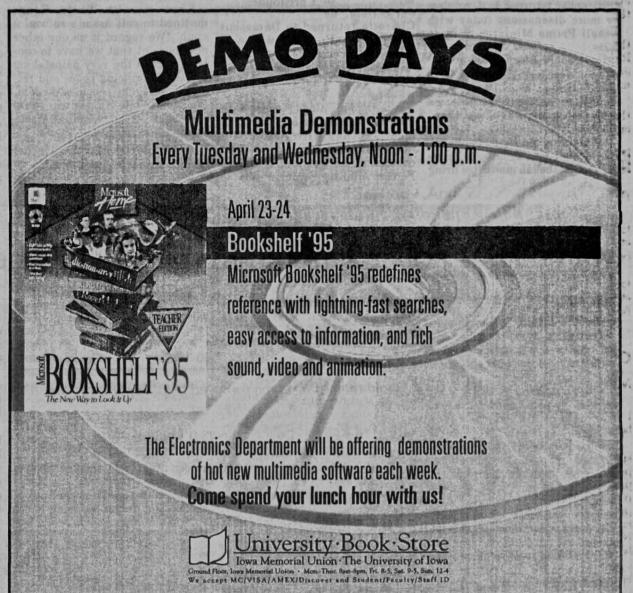

"I would be surprised if anybody would get enough of a lungful to significantly change their normal cancer risk," he said.

The environmental group Greenpeace, however, said fires can carry radioactive material to previously uncontaminated areas.

"This is clearly a danger to the health of people, and not only in Ukraine," spokesperson Antony Frogatt said in Kiev.

Peace process stalled amid fighting in Middle East

Barry Schweid Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria - Complicating peace efforts as fighting raged on, Syrian President Hafez Assad made himself "not available" Tuesday to meet with Secretary of State Warren Christopher on the latest U.S. cease-fire plan for

The U.S. shuttle diplomacy was stalled further when security concerns forced Christopher to cancel a trip to Beirut.

With the Lebanon trip off and no reason to remain in Damascus, Christopher returned to Jerusalem for more discussions today with Israeli Prime Minister Shimon

Christopher has been shuttling between Jerusalem and Damascus since Saturday, hoping to obtain a cease-fire between Israel and Hezbollah guerrillas in southern

The fighting continued unabated, with Israeli jets striking a reservoir and Hezbollah guerrillas firing rockets into northern Israel.

Both Israel and Syria are pushing for changes in the one-page .S. plan to end the fighting.

Charette returned to Damascus late Tuesday. He said France was willing to participate in an international peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon if Israel agrees to

After two meetings Monday with Peres, Christopher had hoped to meet Tuesday with Assad. But upon his return to Damascus from Jerusalem, he was told by Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa that Assad was "not available," a State Department official said.

State Department spokesperson Nicholas Burns called Assad's cancellation disappointing. He said the Syrian leader apparently did not have enough time for the lengthy meeting that Christopher preferred. Burns said Christopher would try to see Assad after today's meeting with Peres.

Assad has consistently delayed meetings with U.S. secretaries of state, but this was the first time that a scheduled session did not Even so, the White House declined to call Assad's refusal a snub. "We regard it as one other development that we have to contend with in the very painstaking process of bringing peace and reconciliation to the people of the Middle East," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said in Wash-

A U.S. official said the Syrians had encouraged Christopher to go to Lebanon

"The reason to go to Lebanon is because the object of all this diplomatic activity is Lebanon," Burns said. "If there is going to be a cease-fire, Lebanon must be part of Christopher had hoped to meet with Prime Minister Rafik Hariri, who met with Assad in Damascus on Tuesday night.

The trip to Beirut was to be made under cover of darkness. But after being advised of the risks, Christopher decided against going.

"Nothing is approved," a senior U.S. official said. "Nothing is finished until everything is finished."

The senior official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Christopher would not accept a cease-fire without a second provision designed to broaden the shattered 1993 agreement he brokered between Israel and Hezbollah. It was supposed to protect Israeli and Lebanese civilians from attack.

"We are in the middle of a stream," Peres said of the slowpaced negotiations.

Rucker twiddled a corkscrew as he spoke. He's always ready with a laugh, a contrast to the more laidback, deliberate Felber.

There is one silly part amidst the seriousness; the title track is a hilarious, two-minute rant at fairweather sports fans that comes courtesy of guitarist Mark Bryan and drummer Jim "Soni" Sonefeld.

"'If you do something for me, I'll do something for you,' I told God."

That was when things began to turn around, Sawyer said. He slowly regained his health and attended college the next year. At that time, Sawyer stereotyped Christians as hypocrites, and when he saw his roommate deal with anger by praying, he was shocked.

Later that semester, Sawyer realized he could have had someone like God — help him through the hard times.

The world is an unfair place and sometimes innocent people get hurt, Sawyer said. He said his personal relationship with Christ has helped him through his struggles and could help others with their struggles as

Animal rights

pril 21-27 is World Animals in Laboratories Liberation Week. In aboratories across the country, "hidden crimes" occur daily on hundreds of thousands of animals, yet are not considered crimes, let alone cruelty to animals. The institutionalized exploitation and abuse of animals is condoned and sanctioned by the government, ducational institutions and corporations that have vested interests in product testing, military, pharmaceutical and biomedical (animal research) industries. Our educational institutions condone these hidden crimes by teaching our children how to desensitize themselves in biology classes that promote dissection, the cutting open of once-living animals. The dissection industry kills thousands of cats, dogs, rats, mice, pigs, frogs and many other animals to sell as dissection "speci-

Many of our beloved companion animals also get caught in the cruel business of vivisection and dissection. In "Stolen for Profit: How the Medical Industry Is Funding a National Pet-Theft Conspiracy," Judith Reitman describes with graphic detail how unscrupulous Class B dealers hire "bunchers" (dog and cat thieves) to steal family pets and then sell them for huge profits at our local universities and product testing laboratories. After a public outcry from local animal advocacy groups and the public, the UI finally ended its sweetheart relationship with two unscrupulous dealers — one of whom was prosecuted in June of 1994 for more than 1,600 violations and found guilty of the Animal

"Pet-Theft" has also been documented as a source for animals that upply companies selling animals for dissection. On March 25, 1994, the World Society for the Protection of Animals (WSPA) announced it had uncovered a large-scale operation that was purchasing, killing and preparing cats for use in U.S. biology and physiology classrooms. WSPA investigators discovered the company, Preparation of Animal Material for Scholarly Study (PARMEESA), located in Sinaloa, Mexico, was paying $1 in U.S. currency for every cat brought to them, thus encouraging impoverished children to round up neighborhood cats without first checking to see if they had homes. After being caught, roughly 10 cats would be stuffed in each burlap bag and then two bags would be put into a 200-liter metal drum. The drum was filled with water and the animals, frantically scratching and screaming to get

However, whether stolen or not, no animal should be subjected to this treatment. This example clearly reveals how deceitful, greedy and unscrupulous biomedical, pharmaceutical and other industries which profit from animal exploitation are.

Cruelty to animals in and outside laboratories continues to take place under the guise of the "humane" and "it's necessary" cliche. Experimental use of animals is justified by the biomedical establishment by the deceitful myths that animals in laboratories can be treated humanely and that animal experiments are necessary to ensure human health. There is nothing "humane" about breeding, stealing, selling, transporting, caging, mutilating, burning, making sick oncehealthy animals and killing healthy dogs, cats, primates, pigs, mice, opossums, birds, sheep, frogs, goats and many more species for the sake of the bogus notion that animal experiments save human lives. Animals are living, breathing, feeling and suffering beings deserving equal consideration. Negative attitudes about animals will continue as long as the Cartesian/Draconinian theories continue to be imposed on our children and groups such as Americans for Medical Progress and the National Association for Biomedical Research continue to use "Your Baby or Your Dog" scare tactics to divert people's attention from the real issues regarding public health.

Differing perspectives on racism

Last weekend, a colleague and I sat around discussing race in America. After listening to him speak about the injurious effects of U.S. government policies on the rights of the European-American Southerners, I was admittedly confused. After all, this guy is one of the most liberal thinkers I know at the UI.

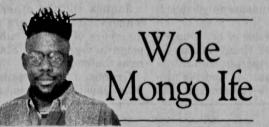

As he spoke about his Southern relatives, I first thought he was in denial about their racism. Later, I realized the two of us actually had completely different understandings of the meaning of racism. He believed it to be an outpouring of hate, a malicious act; I saw it as an ideology which dehumanizes.

Thus, to him, using certain negative terminologies to describe a person or group is racist. For me, the idea behind the usage is where the real racism lies. I realized this different definitional perspective was quite common cross-culturally, and a major source of racial problems in our society.

Racism is an insidious ideology which holds that some cultural and/or ethnic groups are not at the same level of biological evolution as are European-descendants. In following this idea, stereotypes developed about black Americans' superhuman abilities to run faster, jump higher, dance better, etc. At the base of their talents, the racist would argue, is genetic differ- culture, while a Euro-American cultural elite ence. Plainly put, blacks are another species from whites; not quite Homo sapiens, but close. Therefore, racism is an ideology, not a random act; just as culture is a lifestyle, not a complexion. The term is correct. However, the understanding of it has been changed in the last

Later that same day, CNN broadcasted an address by Winnie Mandela at American University in Washington, D.C. Mandela, the former spouse of South African President Nelson Mandela, discussed the continuing cultural oppression of African traditions in South Africa. She shocked many in the audience by acknowledging that the African-American enslavement was in fact more horrible than the South African apartheid. Because, she explained, the African-Americans were taken from their land, their ancestry and their cultural roots.

Many of the liberal European-Americans in the American University audience were clearly stunned by Mandela's statements. Undoubtedly, these highly-educated, liberal whites are confused on their definition of racism, too. However, Mandela's point makes sense in light of how Afro-American ancestry is ignored, dismissed and demonized in American popular trades and collects the artistic and musical artifacts of those same traditional African cultures we term savage.

More African-Americans are beginning to believe that no matter how sympathetic many are, pity, guilt, and paternalism are not helping the plight of minorities in the United States, especially African-Americans. In fact, it hurts — everybody. How can Americans truly understand the black experience when there is a general belief that coming to America was a step up culturally for the Africans?

Furthermore, white frustration in America about the African participation in the Transatlantic slave trade, the use of terms by blacks which would be called offensive language if spoken by a white and the definition of black culture have all raised issues that most of my European-American friends are afraid to speak about publicly. But, behind closed doors, many actually resent blacks.

Never have we, black or white Americans, learned about the cultural norms, values and traditions of the enslaved Africans brought to the United States. So how is it fair to those caring, thoughtful Americans, black and white, to expect them to have equal cultural respect when most of us have never really been exposed to more than a history of oppression of the African-Americans and lies about Africa which justify that oppression?

Happily, in the end, my colleague and I were able to agree. He said, "You know man, I have never thought of it that way before." I said, "Thanks for being open to it, man."

Drinking: What's the big deal?

I never could figure out what the big deal

It was the cool thing to do, and all the popular kids did it, but I just couldn't understand what was so great about it.

One night, I went to find out. A bunch of kids from my high school were gathered on top of a secluded hill in town to drink. I went, too. Maybe then I would fit in; or, at the very least, understand what was so cool about drinking.

It was a balmy spring night. There was a campfire burning at the site, and there, surrounded by beer cans and bottles in various states of emptiness, were my classmates. I remember many of them seemed surprised to see me, but their welcomes were enthusiastic, even if they seemed a bit amused. I felt - I don't know - younger than everybody there. More naive. More scared. More awkward and silly. I felt like a third-grader on her first day at a new school who stands with one foot pressing down on the other, hoping to hide herself and remain unnoticed.

But it wasn't school. It was a party. And I felt too awkward to stay. So I left, about 10 minutes after I had come.

Walking home that dark spring night, I berated myself. What is wrong with you? Why can't you fit in? Why aren't you like the other kids? My sense of self-worth plummeted. I did not know how to have fun the way they did. My idea of fun was to have a one-on-one intense, soul-searching talk alone, over food, with the boy upon whom I had a crush. Or the girl. champagne on New Year's Eve. But I still don't

My high school mentor and favorite teacher had once told me "Don't use high school as a barometer for the kind of person you are." I remembered that as I walked home. It didn't help then, but it does now. Sometimes.

I got home that night and went straight to the kitchen. My parents were out. I took out about four shot glasses from the cupboard and filled each of them with a different kind of alcohol: whiskey, vodka, bourbon and some Romaninan pear wine we always had in our house. OK, I said to myself. Get drunk. You have to see what the big deal is.

I had never heard of Seabreezes, or of Long Island Iced Teas. I did not know the difference between hard liquor and beer. And obviously, I did not know one should not mix different kinds

But all of this did not matter, because, after a few painfully small sips from each of the glasses, I gave up. First of all, all the stuff tasted the same. Secondly, it all tasted terrible, varying only slightly in degree of terribleness. The worst was the vodka. I still didn't get it, and I was frustrated and angry at myself.

Since then I have made other attempts to try and like drinking. I will have a sip of a friend's beer, try a glass of wine with dinner or have like the way the stuff tastes. I still think it all tastes the same, with varying degrees of terribleness. People tell me it is an acquired taste. I say, why bother, when I have so many other unacquired tastes I like to satisfy?

I have come to accept that I prefer eating to drinking. If the weekends are a time to overindulge, I'll have two desserts, but no beer. don't have a moral problem with drinking as much as I don't understand it. I am kind of impressed when I watch friends actually drink beer and not wince. I am sure they are not just pretending to like it, but still there is a part of me that thinks everybody is faking it just to impress their friends.

One time, I actually got drunk. It was after a painful breakup. A bunch of friends went dancng and one of them offered to buy me drinks. I told him to order the sweetest drink he knew of, the one in which you taste the least alcohol and can still get drunk. At age 24, I was finally ready. I don't know what he ordered, but it worked. I felt good. I felt silly. I ended up in bed with this guy. The next morning, I was left with my broken heart, the pain of which was undulled by my first hangover.

I did like the way I felt when I was drunk. I liked that goofy feeling of being high and laughing with friends. But I don't like the road I took to get to the relaxed silliness. And I don't like the way some people act when they are drunk. I think there are other ways - like dancing, singing, cooking or eating together - to get to that giddy state.

And I still feel like everyone knows something I don't about drinking; I would choose an ce cream sundae over a Tom Collins (whatever that is) any day.

Tysie McDowell is an anti-Semite, whether she admits it or not. Her piece on the tumult surrounding Marlon Brando's idiotic statement that "Hollywood is owned by Jews" contained assumptions about Jews that have led to everything from Jewish immigration quotas to Eastern European pogroms.

For instance, she says, "Jewish Americans are doing quite well. Today, Jewish Americans own big businesses and expansive industries." That statement echoes the Jewish banking conspiracy theory advanced in the hateful "Protocols of the Elder of Zion." To McDowell, let me say, some Jews own businesses. Some Jews live in poverty. Resorting to broad generalizations about a community is ironic coming from an African-American.

It's interesting McDowell simultaneously accepts Brando's contention and seems to offer an opportunity for readers to question it. On the one hand, she says, "If the statement is not true, then intelligently refute it." On the other, she says the Jewish community uses the label of anti-Semitism whenever someone "merely points out a truth about Jewish people." McDowell is essentially arguing Jews are overreacting to an ugly truth about themselves — they own Hollywood.

McDowell uses the lack of evidence offered by the media as proof that there are no facts to "refute" the contention Jews own Hollywood. The fact is that Disney, Sony Pictures, Warner Bros., Paramount and the television networks are publicly traded companies. They are "owned" by shareholders. They are owned by enormous pension funds and people like Warren Buffett. There may be many Jews in top executive positions, but they do not "own" Hollywood.

Even assuming Brando didn't literally mean "own," but instead meant control, McDowell's piece is still refutable. She tacitly supports Brando's claim that since Jews control the entertainment industry, they do not present their community stereotypically. That's simply untrue. Hollywood gave us Joel Fleishman on "Northern Exposure" and Richard Lewis' character on "Anything But Love." Didn't they represent the stereotypical whiny; ineffectual, self-centered Jewish man? How about Fran Drescher's "The Nanny"? Isn't every Jewish woman a pushy, loudmouthed, vulgar busybody? In addition, the family portrayed in the 1960s movie "Goodbye Columbus" could be the most blatant anti-Semitic depiction of Jewish Americans in film history.

McDowell is right that Jews are not as oppressed in America as African-Americans, but we still need to point out bigotry and stupidity wherever it appears, including the editorial pages of the DI.

Jim Jacobson UI graduate student To the Editor:
Tysie McDowell's April 19 column must not go unrefuted.

She actually suggests that unless the media choose to prove otherwise, the great thinker Marlon Brando must be right when he blurts out "Jews own Hollywood." TV host Larry King prodded him to be precise, but Brando was unable to concentrate, as indeed he has been sadly unable to focus in interviews for some time.

McDowell's assertions about Jewish "success" and "control" are right up there with Skinhead thinking. It would apparently be a surprise to McDowell to learn that Jews are rich and poor and in between, that they suffered for their beliefs and still do, and that there is no less variety of personalities, motives and viewpoints among them than there is among African-Americans or Caucasians.

In her ignorance of history, of Jews, of the inner workings of prejudice and of the concept of "anti-Semitism," she pits one group against another — all of whom continue to struggle for fair

McDowell tries to fend off criticism by saying that she will probably be labeled "anti-Semitic." If her column was anything more than a dumb mistake, the shoe fits.

McDowell believes that there has been no cinematic stereotyping of Jews? Oh, my.

> Marvin Bell Writers' Workshop professor

To the Editor:

Ham writing this letter in order to expose the ignorance and anti-Semitic bigotry by Tysie McDowell ("Honesty and niceness clash at times, April 19). It is shocking that McDowell consistently ignores historical truths and general facts. First, McDowell makes blatant anti-Semitic statements. For instance, "Jewish Americans have the power not only to label, but also to influence and control." I am an American Jew, and I personally know countless other American Jews, and we do not "have the power to label" or "influence or control" more than any other American.

Second, after Marlon Brando made his anti-Semitic slurs, the issue of whether "Jews own the majority of Hollywood" was "intelligently refuted" by the media. If McDowell did a bit of research — instead of making blanket statements — she would have found this out for herself. Brando himself later "broke down and wept when he met with Jewish leaders ... to apologize for [his] remarks" (CNN transcript, April 13).

Third, McDowell said Jews "have had the luxury of moving up gracefully in this capitalist system." This is not true. Jews never had anything handed to them on a silver platter. It is ironic that McDowell made this remark when, on the same day, the DI published a story about the many different obstacles Jews had to overcome in America, such as academic quotas that were set up in order to limit the number of Jews who could attend various colleges and universities.

Fourth, McDowell is upset by the fact "anti-Semitism has taken on the same power as racism and sexism." Anti-Semitism should have the same negative connotations as racism and sexism: Hate is hate.

McDowell failed to include any facts or statistical figures in order to support her opinions. Making such gross generalizations about Jews — especially without backing these statements with facts - is irresponsible and contemptible. "Discussing problems and pointing out wrongs is not harmful," as McDowell writes. Making unsubstantiated statements about racial, religious or ethnic groups, however, is more than harmful. They feed into the sort of steeped-in-hatred stereotypes McDowell herself has openly decried, leaving only an ill-researched column and blatant hypocrisy.

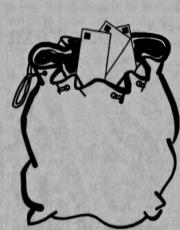

> Eric Miller Iowa City resident

To the Editor:

According to Tysie McDowell's article, "Honesty and niceness clash at times"(DI, April 19), I should be a rich, powerful Jew full of faults. How little you really know, Ms. McDowell. In her column of that day, she stated, "Jewish Americans own big businesses and expansive industries." Is that so? Rerhaps she should tell that to my parents, who are scraping to get by because of various medical expenses, and do not work at businesses they own. "Jewish Americans have the power not only to label but also to influence and control." McDowell labels herself Africana. She labels people as racists and sexists throughout the article (Hooters restaurant, Newt Gingrich), yet I am the one doing the labeling? "Neither the color of their skin not their religion has kept them down." Really? Tell that to every Jewish American who has been docked a day's pay for observing Passover or Yom Kippur. Tell that to the people in several of my classes who were penalized for missing classes on Passover. Jewish Americans ... have a hard time admitting their faults. We cannot continue to glamorize our individual past, Peritage and religion." Is being massacred in concentration camps THAT glamorous? Gee, I'm upset I missed out, but I suppose that would be one of those faults she mentioned. No, Jewish Americans are not perfect — but neither are McDowell's little attempts at being objective. Next time she attempts to be honest, I suggest she uses some journalistic skills and does the research herself. Her assumptions will prove to be extremely incorrect.

Stacey Cara Cohen

To the editor:

I was livid after reading Tysie McDowell's column on "honesty" and "niceness." Not only was it riddled with gross generalizations about the Jewish community, McDowell also had the audacity to qualify her unfactual opinions as "just telling the truth."

Further, the DI is just as reprehensiole as McDowell for the egregious anti-Semitism it published. Granted, a viewpoint is a viewpoint, but if you look at most professional columnists, you see their articles are backed by acts and statistics; when they're not, columnists generally avoid offensive topics altogether. The DI clearly ignored the fact that McDowell's column was not only unprofessional, offensive and anti-Semitic, it was also completely devoid of any statistics or facts! How could the editors at the DI have let such an inaccurate and disturbing column creep into their otherwise respectable newspaper?

As a proud Jewish-American, I was disappointed that McDowell — an African-American woman — was not sensitive to the overt prejudice that constantly suffocates minorities (Jews make up only about two percent of America's population. If that's not a true minority, I don't know what is). All kinds of "isms" continue to snake their ways into society; for McDowell to dismiss anti-Semitism as less harmful than sexism or racism is an intellectual anomaly and simply irresponsible.

Finally, and for the record, I personally have never had the "luxury" of rising to the higher ranks of "this capitalist system." I've worked, struggled — perhaps even harder because of my Judaism — than everyone else. And, by the way, I've never had so many people ask about the derivation of my "unusual" last name, followed by a "But you have a small nose" type comment — than I've experienced in lowa.

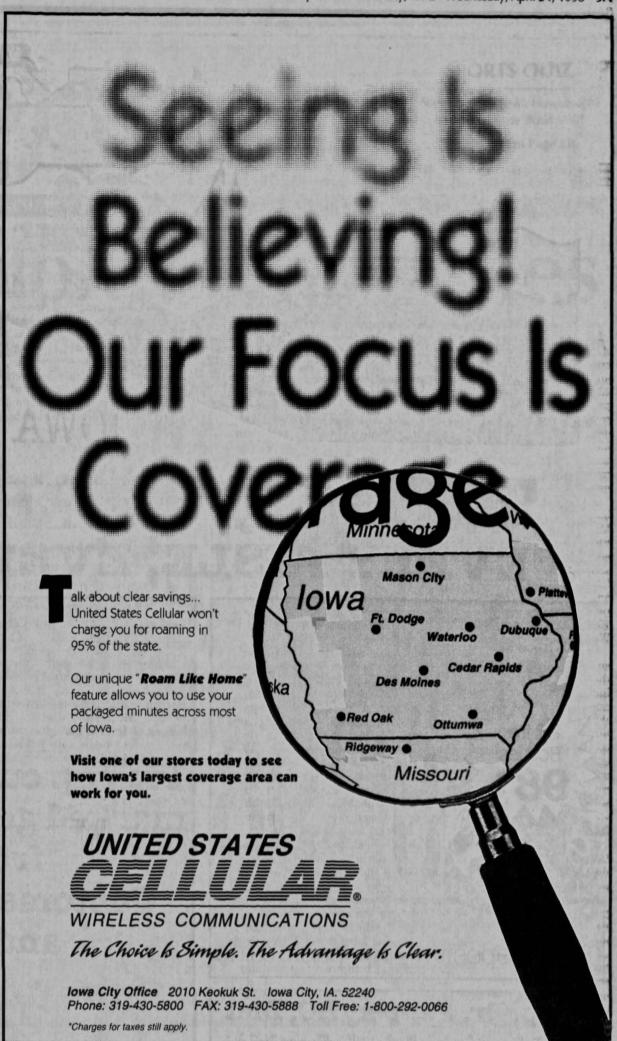

Anti-Semitism is out there, and it is unthoughtful columns like McDowell's and the blatant irresponsibility of the DI that help perpetuate what amounts to an uncalled for, irrelevant reminder of your minority status.

The announcement came two days after the Hornets finished their season short of the playoffs and with a 41-41 record - well below expectations coming off a franchise record 50-victory season.

"It was kind of an unhealthy situation for him personally and a situation where a change was in order for us," Bob Bass, Charlotte's vice president of basketball operations, said at a news conference.

Marino signs three-year deal with Dolphins

DAVIE, Fla. (AP) - Jimmy Johnson secured a quarterback Tuesday to implement his plan for winning the Super Bowl by 1998.

The name may be familiar: Dan Marino.

Johnson and the Miami Dolphins signed the most prolific passer in NFL history to a threeyear contract reportedly worth $17.73 million.

"I felt very comfortable with my performance over the last few years and felt I have a lot of good years left," Marino said at a news conference. "I'm excited about playing for coach Johnson and winning the Super Bowl."

Johnson will kick off outdoor season at Drake

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) -Michael Johnson says he's ready for the pressure.

Johnson, who forced a change in the Olympic schedule so he could try for a unique double, will make his outdoor debut when he runs the 400 meters at the Drake Relays Saturday.

With that race, Johnson starts his quest to become the first man to win both the 200 and 400 at the Olympics.

Drake will be the first of five meets for Johnson before the Olympic Trials, which begin June 14 in Atlanta. He ran only twice indoors this year and is eager to compete again, but he's not sure what to expect.

Johnson's competition at Drake will include Baylor's Marlon Ramsey and former Drake sprinter Kevin Little, both of whom ran sub-45-second 400s last week-

MONTREAL - Adam Graves scored twice in a three-goal second period as the New York Rangers evened their NHL Eastern Conference series with a 4-3 victory over the Montreal Canadiens on Tuesday night.

The best-of-7 first-round series heads back to New York tied at 2-2 for Game 5 on Friday night.

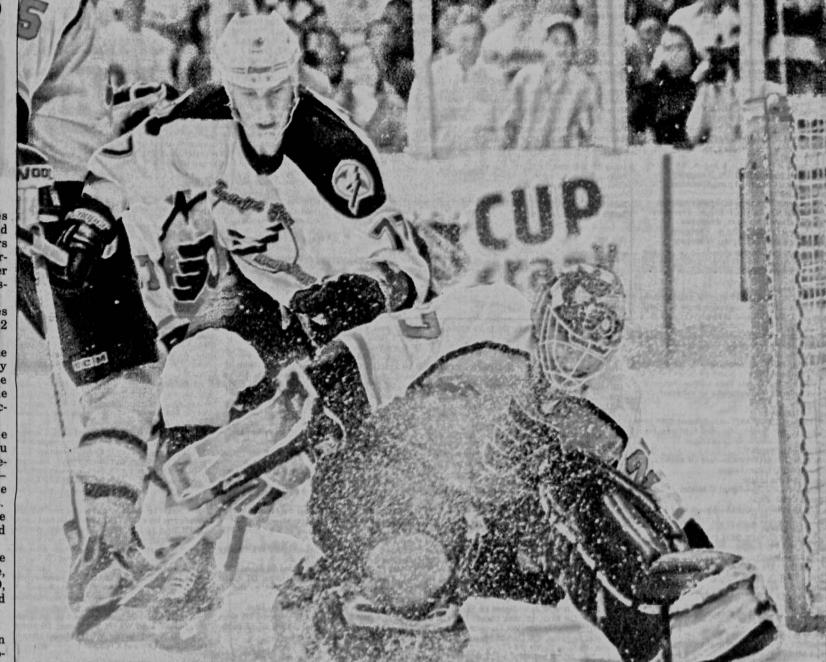

Graves, who has five goals in the series, got one on the power play and one at even strength while Shane Churla also scored as the Rangers built a 4-1 lead in the second period.

The Canadiens rallied in the third with goals from Saku Koivu and Pierre Turgeon - the Montreal captain's first of the playoffs but fell short after some tense moments around the New York net.

Mark Messier got his first of the playoffs while David Wilkie scored for Montreal in the first period.

The game was a reverse of the opening three games as, this time, Montreal outshot New York 31-19 but it was the Rangers who showed the opportunistic touch on attack.

Hootie and the what?

After selling more than 12 million copies of their debut album and winning two Grammy awards, members of the Columbia, S.C., band, Hootie & the Blowfish, have established themselves as household names.

With all the lavished attention, Hootie & the Blowfish's follow-up release, titled "Fairweather Johnson," promises to be one of the most popular and heavily scrutinized albums in quite some time.

At the midnight release, Iowa City record stores expected fan enthusiasm to generate strong sales. Almost 30 people lined up at various local retailers to become proud owners of the the highly anticipated Fairweather Johnson. Buyers were strongly influenced by the strength of the band's first

"Most albums have only a couple songs which are decent," UI sophomore Miles Labno said. "On Cracked Rear View, almost every song is great. It's going to be really hard to top, but I'm expecting this one to be just as good."

Loyal fans also sited Hootie & the Blowfish's reliance on basic, universal themes.

"They seem to be a more down-toearth band," UI sophomore Chris Couchman said. "Instead of singing about things like using drugs, they seem to talk about things that actually happen to me."

The excitement surrounding the release of the new album was heightened by a celebratory atmosphere provided by local record distributors. Pizza was served to Hootie & the Blowfish followers who made the midnight trek, and stickers and posters were handed out with the sale of each album.

Although Hootie & the Blowfish may have a traditional rock sound, fans appreciate the band's breaking of genre stereotypes.

A lot of people were shocked the lead singer was black," UI junior Latonia Haney said. "And the tape works against being classified as alternative, pop, R&B, or whatever. It is a whole mix of a lot of musical styles, and I think they take it from the soul and go with it.

Kathleen Scheiner The Daily Iowan

Joyce Carol Oates proves again with the latest addition to her oeuvre - a collection of short stories titled "Will You Always Love Me?" — that she is at the top of her craft. With her latest offering, Oates pushes at the boundaries of the short story genre, expanding the classification even more while staying true to the social documentary sensibilities that have always governed her work.

Oates ferrets out the pitfalls and dangers encountered by the privileged and lends them voice in strong, driving narratives that don't disappoint.

In a whirlwind of tight, precise prose, Oates offers up small, ripe pieces of Americana, taking the improbable and the ridiculous and flavoring the situations with passion and fury. In "The Revenge of the Foot, 1970," a woman dating a married college professor attends a party hosted by pre-med students. Part of the drunken revelry at the party includes the pre-med students playing catch with an amputated foot, which one of them smuggled out of dissection lab. The woman becomes entranced by the partygoers progress to further shenanigans, she surreptitiously slips it into her purse. Later, the foot plays part of a prank she pulls on her lover and, most especially, his neat and tidy wife.

The dilemma of a college pro-fessor comes to light in "The Handclasp," when the woman is forced into the situation of being an unwilling mentor to one of her late students. The professor is also a fiction writer and, unbeknownst to her, finds that she has unwillingly fostered the idea in her student that he, too, is a talented fiction writer.

Taking a very '90s turn, the professor is asked to evaluate for literary merit the morass of a manuscript that the student left after his death upon an operating table. It turns out smiled." that the student's parents are suing the hospital where their son died - to the tune of $30 million. His parents feel somewhat justified, seeing that their son's life was cut short before his literary career took off, depriving them of the capital that would have, in part, been theirs, too. The professor, however, gets a massive case of the "guilties" as she can find no talent whatsoever in the manu-

In this latest collection, Oates focuses almost exclusively on the affluent, elite class rather than on the working class which has characterized some of her earlier works, such as "Them," for which she won the National Book Award. However, Oates ferrets out the pitfalls and dangers encountered by the privileged and lends them voice in strong, driving narratives that don't disappoint. With "Will You Always Love Me?" What's your next move? You blow

That's what happened to the "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers" on Feb. 17. The defeated Rangers were stripped of their powers and their home base was demolished. That was it. Fade to black. No To Be Continued' at the end," said a gleeful Peter Dang, president of Saban Entertainment Group Inc. Eventually, reruns began, but for many children the future still looked mighty morphin bleak.

Not to worry. Wednesday, the first new episode of "Power Rangers ZEO" will air, after a sneak preview Saturday in which the superheroes received new powers.

Transformed are the six helmeted, high school-age Rangers in Spandex of various hues, who extolled teamwork and clean living when not busting martial arts moves on elaborately creepy, spacealien monsters.

The Red, Yellow, Blue, Green and Pink Rangers have new helmets, powers, vehicles, villains, story lines, editing, special effects, elaborately creepy monsters and martial arts moves

Major changes were inevitable, said Margaret Loesch, president of Fox Children's Network, which has ordered 50 episodes through 1997, since she and Saban executives want to use newer footage from the Rangers' parent show.

'At some point in the past couple of years, amid snickers, we've been describing Power Rangers as kind of a kids' soap opera," she said. "By that we meant a long-running franchise, where we bring in new elements, retire old elements and keep the franchise strong."

Pippen plagued by nagging injuries

Associated Press

CHICAGO - There's no longer any talk of the Chicago Bulls being Scottie Pippen's team, no more mention of Pippen giving Michael Jordan a run for league MVP honors.

These days, the man who fueled most of that talk - Jordan - speaks of Pippen's problems, and of the need for his talented running mate to "find his rhythm" if the Bulls are to win the NBA championship.

"The problem with Scottie right now," Jordan said, "is men-tal as well as physical."

Bothered by back, knee and ankle injuries, Pippen's scoring fell off 33 percent the last two months, to 14.6 points per game. In that 26-game span, he shot 40 percent from the floor and 26 percent from 3-point range, significant declines from earlier this starting to stay late, trying to get my shot to come back around. I have confidence that it will. Physically, I feel fine.'

But with the playoffs starting Friday against the Miami Heat, there is concern for the Bulls who went 72-10 during their record-breaking regular season and want nothing to jeopardize

"He's obviously not playing his best right now, but Scottie injured is still better than 90 percent of the players in the league," teammate Steve Kerr said after Tuesday's practice. "Obviously, we'd like him at full strength, but we'd take him any way we can get him."

For four months, Pippen was at full strength, and Jordan told anyone who'd listen: "It's Scottie's team. He's got to be one of the best players in the game, if not the best.

While Jordan probably was just being modest — after all, he March didn't help the All-Star was averaging about 10 points more than Pippen and was defi-"Since coming back, I haven't nitely the Bulls' go-to guy - Piphad as much practice time as I've pen was playing at an almost
