Dole bids affectionate farewell to Senate days

Caroline Monocrop
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An emotional Bob Dole said farewell Tuesday to Capitol Hill, where he went on to shape the White House and the United States Senate. The Senate has been his home for most of his life. But a new job is about to start.

The 74-year-old Republican said he would return to his home in Overland Park, Kan., after a 15-month stay on Capitol Hill. He is preparing to work on his memoirs.

"I've been on Capitol Hill for 30 years. Now I'm going to be on Capitol Hill for the rest of my life," Dole said. "I've been serving the country for more than 50 years. Now I'm going to be serving the country for the rest of my life."

Dole accepted the honor with a characteristic quip, saying there would be no political advertising on it.

"I've used it so much that the balcony should be a sign on the balcony. "How I wish for money that I wish was available for the senator from Kansas."

Dole said he would have to be advised about the funds available, but he was sure the center at the airport would be a success.

"If we've all learned in this chamber no decision is easy, much more so in the Senate," Dole said. "If we've all agreed there is no place Dole escaped to for a moment and wish him well."

John Crowley, a concerned resident of Chicago's southside, has sent this letter to Mayor Jane Byrne: "Dear Mayor: I am writing to you in my capacity as a concerned citizen." He writes: "You may wonder why I am writing to you, but I am not sure what on earth they call you. I wish to keep a watchful eye on your every move, for you are clearly a threat to the stability of our society." He further states: "If you continue to behave in this manner, I will take legal action against you." The letter ends with: "Sincerely yours, a concerned citizen."

Crops are no longer needed for just feeding. The city is not just a place for cows, but a haven for artists. The Iowa City Sesquicentennial is a celebration of the city's past and present, bringing together people from all walks of life. The city is known for its rolling countryside, vast fields, and the diverse population. The Iowa Women's Basketball Team is a proud sponsor of this event.

The story of the city's growth and transformation is well documented in a mural that has been created for the event. The mural, "Iowa's Story," is located at the corner of Market and Linn streets and is open to the public.

In 1981, the city of Iowa City celebrated its Sesquicentennial, a time when the city was re-invented from a rural farming community to a modern, bustling metropolis. The city's new downtown was emerging, and the arts were flourishing. The mural "Iowa's Story" captures the essence of this transformation, highlighting the key moments in the city's history.

The mural is a collaborative effort, with artists from across the country contributing their talents. The mural is a testament to the city's resilience and ability to adapt to change.

The mural includes a variety of images, from the city's early days to its modern incarnation. It features scenes of the city's early settlers, the growth of the city's industries, and the development of its cultural institutions. The mural also highlights the city's natural beauty, with images of the Iowa River and the city's parks.

The mural is a fitting tribute to the city's past and future, and a reminder of the importance of preserving the city's rich history. The mural is a must-see for anyone visiting Iowa City and a symbol of the city's ongoing commitment to its past and future.
