WASHINGTON - The Supreme Court Monday opened the way for possible reinstatement of a provision of Utah law that makes it harder to get abortions if the fetus could survive outside the womb.

The justices set aside a lower court ruling invalidating the entire law as an undue burden on women's privacy.

By a 5-4 vote, the court said the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals state law after finding most of it Even if they were valid, the unconstitutional state at least part of the invalidated state law. That could be the effect of Monday's decision, although the ruling itself is a procedural one and does not deal with the substantive issue of abortion.

The court's four dissenters said the nation's highest court should have steered clear of an issue that is purely a question of Utah law."

The dissenters wrote, "The underlying substantive issue in this case generates what Justice (Oliver Wendell) Holmes once described as a kind of hydraulic pressure that motivates ad hoc decision-making."

The law made any abortion illegal unless necessary to save a woman's life, prevent "grave damage" to a woman's health, prevent the birth of a child with "grave defects" or in cases of rape and

The law eliminated the rapeand-incest exception for pregnancies beyond their 20th week.

A "choice of method" portion of the law required any abortion performed on a fetus that might be viable, or able to live outside the womb, must be done in the way most likely to save the fetus.

Other abortion techniques were allowed only if medically necessary to save a woman's life or prevent "grave damage" to her health.

The law was quickly challenged

Monday's Supreme Court order appears to give Utah officials the option pending further court review — of enforcing the part of the law restricting abortions when the fetus could survive.

The appeals court had relied on a 1986 Supreme Court decision that struck down a similar Pennsylvania choice-of-method law. The Utah law was "significantly more burdensome" than the invalidated Pennsylvania law, the 10th Circuit court said.

In the appeal acted on Monday, Utah's Graham argued invalidating the entire state abortion law tramples on Utah's 11th Amendment immunity against being sued in federal court against its will.

The justices breathed new life into the 11th Amendment in March when limiting Congress' power to authorize federal lawsuits against the states and their officials by those who accuse them of violating some federally protected right.

That decision was hailed as a major victory for states' rights.

Monday's decision, however, did not invoke the 11th Amendment. It was more narrowly focused: whether one part of the Utah law survives a finding that another part of it is unconstitutional.

The Utah Legislature passed new abortion legislation in February, signed into law by Gov. Michael Leavitt in March. The new The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of law took effect April 29 and is less Appeals, however, ruled last restrictive than the one enacted in hot topic at the annual meeting of the National College Athletic Directors last week was loaning money to male athletes Lato dissuade them from leaving for professional teams before they graduate. Not only is professional sports tempting for these athletes, scholarship money is "not as good as it used to be," according to NCAA Executive Director Cedric Dempsey.

■ If the NCAA decides to give loans to college athletes on money they may potentially earn in the pros, they will be discriminating against other hard-working college athletes.

This new idea formed by the athletic directors has two ways of enticing male athletes to stay in college. One way is to give the money as a loan from eventual professional earnings. The other option says that money will come from a trust fund tied to their share of endorsements, sponsorship and memorabilia revenue.

Because male athletes are currently the only ones able to make millions of dollars in professional sports, there is no attention paid to female athletes or athletes not good enough to borrow from future earnings.

Female student athletes, with a greater graduation rate than their male counterparts, are left with too little athletic grant money to live on. They, like male student athletes, are unable to have a job during the school year, but aren't even considered in this upcoming legislation.

The National College Athletic Directors believe loans on future performance will slow down the growth of male student athletes turning pro, and will diminish the increased influence of agents.

But it puts pressure on these athletes to produce after their collegiate careers to make up for the money they have borrowed. And what are these athletes going to do with that extra $10,000, plus all the gifts and money they already receive from hungry agents?

If this 'preferred-customer' loan idea goes through, equal opportunity is lost in the NCAA for women, because they aren't prospective money machines. The only way women will ever be included is if, in a couple of decades, the Women's Basketball Association starts turning people's heads.

The athletic directors and the NCAA need to focus on the majority of student-athletes - those who aren't the prospective top draft picks, and those who can barely pay for rent because they aren't allowed to work.

A better solution for helping student athletes is a proposed rule that will allow them to work more days out of the year than just three months during the summer.

No matter how much money the NCAA or athletic directors can taunt these male athletes with, prospective money-making athletes will still be forever enticed into professional sports because of the prestige and the millions they can earn - not borrow. The NCAA should stay focused on helping the other student-athletes who are banking on their educations to make their careers, not the star athletes that are sure to be millionaires.

'Grounded by Congress'

■ Congress won't solve any problems by instituting a federal curfew for minors. Most juvenile crime happens after school, and violence comes from parents.

nyone under 17 years old who is found unsupervised on the street after 11 p.m. on weeknights or after midnight on weekends is in danger of being grounded by Congress. This election year, surrogate parenting is part of the $125 million incentive grants package to states that Congress is considering to contain juvenile Curfew exceptions include responding to emergencies, traveling to work or classes and engaging in approved demonstrations (it is unclear if these include protesting the curfew itself).

All other 'curfew delinquents' will qualify for handcuffs and a ride to a detention center, where parents will have to sign up for joint

According to the Justice Department, 146 of the 200 largest cities in the United States already have such a curfew. Dallas reports that after instituting a curfew in 1994, juvenile crime decreased by 30 percent. Curfew-free New York goes after truancy instead, and it also reports a 30-percent decline in juvenile crime in the last three years. At least the New York Police Department intervention is sitespecific and doesn't treat all adolescents as being either potential delinquents or as likely victims.

Non-card carrying members of the American Civil Liberties Union also feel outrage at the prospect of such an infringement on adolescents' rights. If the Chinese were up to something similar, the U.S. media would lose no time in treating itself to a McCarthyian workout and mourning the "plight" of the Chinese adolescents caused by the excesses of an incorrigible government.

Locally, the media directs our community paranoia away from home and onto the street, where it can congregate unobtrusively. Paradoxically, what is staged on the street - precisely due to its high visibility - keeps us, its authors in the larger community, invisible. The curfew is yet another Congressional dues ex machina.

Juvenile crime is not a problem; it is the best solution the delinquent has come up with to problems at home and at school. Many parents still use corporal punishment routinely and automatically. Several states still have laws that allow physical punishment. Psychiatrists Denis Madden and John Lion call it a "training for vio-

Congress' choice of curfew hours ignores the fact that most juvenile-committed violent crimes take place right after school between 3 and 6 p.m., long before the envisioned curfew kicks in. Congress is not interested in amending its fairy-tale belief that a child's well-being suffers a sudden dip at the stroke of 11. Unfortunately, Congress hasn't just gotten the time wrong, but also the venue of most of the violence. The New York Times reported that every day in the United States, nearly 8,500 children are abused or neglected and three die from abuse; an additional 15 children a day die of gun shot wounds. The most compelling reason for ensuring the curfew doesn't pass at the federal level is it will keep us in REM sleep about the real identity of the boogieman that no dusk-to-dawn curfew can get.

Small atom; big Hefty bag

he itsy-bitsy, teeny-weeny atom: It's rumored that more share a grain of sand than there are people in the world.

Atoms, like some people, don't always mix. Quarrels among humans have even coincided with atomic misbehavior - exemplified by the atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima at the end of World War II.

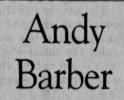

A new appreciation for atomic potential followed that bomb. Energy provided a morally superior alternative to pursuing knowledge for war's sake, and the dawn of the Atomic Age ushered in the nuclear power industry.

Nuclear advocates promised to reduce the amount of pollutants caused by burning fossil fuels for power. However, the world neglected to look behind the ears of industry optimism. Nuclear power supplies only a small percentage of the world's energy while harming global health and security long into the future.

Public confidence in nuclear power understandably wanes as the volume of nuclear waste escalates.

Recent observations indicate scientists underestimated the environmental and health hazards of radiation. Leukemia arises five years after contamination; many other forms of cancer and disease are known to follow. A visit to the Chernobyl area would reveal more immediate health effects caused by radioactive contam-

And unforeseen contamination is an industry hallmark. Twelve leaks at the Hanford, Wash., nuclear site released thousands of gallons of radioactive waste into the environment. A Michigan power company was recently forced to tainers to be left on the shores of Lake Michigan because inspectors discovered faults in the Public confidence in nuclear power understandably wanes as the volume of nuclear waste escalates. Opponents of nuclear power are angered by the irony of huge profits made from this waste. Barnwell dump site in South Carolina predicts at least $140 million in profits yearly for the next 10 years - when it will be shut down and maintained largely at public expense for about 10,000 years.

Under current legislation, the public must also foot the bill, for 83 percent of the harms caused by radioactive accidents, up to $560 million per site. Actual damage from a single major accident was predicted at $7 billion in 1957.

Monitoring toxic elements with no odor or color complicates the problem. Industry practice is to test the waters surrounding reactors. More thorough investigation of one leaky site provoked skepticism of this water-only testing regime: radioactivity of river plankton in the nearby Colombia River was 2,000 times greater than the water; radiation of ducks feeding on the plankton was 40,000 times greater. The study revealed radioactivity near the top of the food chain to be 1 million times greater than thing to shine about. the water sample.

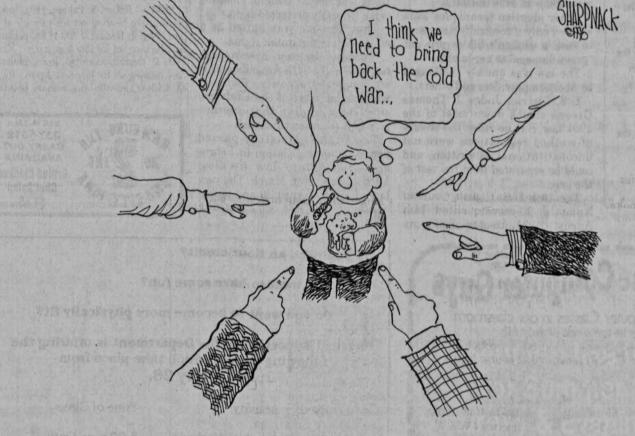

Another criticism is an acquiescent regulatohalt the filling of high-level nuclear waste con-ry regime, both domestically and abroad. The Andy Barber's column appears alternate Tuesdays National Radiation Council is often charged on the Viewpoints Page.

with depriving citizens to open and honest hearings on the issue, perhaps explaining why the Department of Energy would like to "temporarily" leave 11,000 metric tons of abandoned uranium and 100 million gallons of high-level nuclear waste at Yucca Mountain, Nev.

Under International Atomic Energy Council control, private operators of nuclear reactors and waste sites are not liable for radioactive harm resulting from war, sabotage or natural disaster. This loophole encouraged the building of 1,500 nuclear power plants and as many dump sites around the world in disregard of political, social and natural threats arising today and for thousands of years to come.

It is toxic waste's remarkable "life span" that troubles many. The hundreds of tons of plutonium we use annually have a half-life of 24,000 years. Another product of nuclear energy, iodine-129, enjoys a half-life of 17 million years. Iodines traced to nuclear reactors infect cattle thyroids throughout the West.

The future will be intimately familiar with the legacy of our Atomic Age because today's electric bill charges the next five, 50 or 500 generations. Yet, alternatives to nuclear power exist: Hydrogen fusion creates mostly thermal pollution, while a true sunshine economy based on wind and solar power - no longer eludes us. The United States by-and-large ceased funding research in these so-called green myths, so we now look to Japan, Germany and private companies in America to bring clean and safe energy closer to home. The Golden Age of energy could dawn soon - and that's some-

A postcard from Gloucester, Va.

LOUCESTER COUNTY, Va. - The county's official slogan is "the land of The life worth living," but most residents call it "the land that time forgot."

No matter how it's described, Gloucester County is a great place to come from, and to visit on vacation.

According to local legend, it was here in Gloucester that the real Princess Pocahontas asked her father, Chief Powhatan, to spare the life of Captain John Smith.

Smith, one of the first white men to see the area, said, "Heaven and earth never framed a better place for man's habitation."

More than 100 years later, Virginian Thomas Jefferson, first as a college student and later as a legislator, would ferry across the river from the colonial capitol of Williamsburg to visit Rosewell, the largest and finest house of the Colonial period. A fire consumed the interior in 1916, and today the grounds of the Rosewell ruins are little more than brick walls, chimneys and ghosts of times past. Gloucester houses the forgotten grave of Nathaniel Bacon, leader of a planter's rebellion against the royal government, the rebel-lion that proceeded the Declaration of Independence by 100 years.

The privately owned graveyard at Warner Hall is a colonial family cemetery where ancestors of George Washington, Robert E. Lee and Queen Elizabeth II are buried.

In the center of the Gloucester courthouse square stands an 1889 confederate monument honoring the 132 Gloucester men who lost their lives defending the county and the com-

Gloucester hosted both Confederate and occupying Union forces during the War Between the States, as well as British troops during the American Revolution.

Today, Gloucester is home to nearly 35,000 people and a thriving seafood industry, where generations of watermen have worked the hesapeake Bay and surrounding tidal waters for hundreds of years. The crabs, clams, oysters and fish they harvest help make Virginia the third largest seafood producing state.

Two hundred miles long, the Chesapeake Bay is the nation's largest estuary. Native Indians called it "Mother of Waters" and "Great Shellfish Bay." British colonists named it "Chesapeake" from the Indian word "Tschiswapeki."

The bay's watershed reaches as far as Cooperstown, N.Y., and Pendletown County, W.Va. More than 40 rivers - including Pennsylvania's Susquehanna River - and thousands of streams, creeks and ditches empty into the bay. Rain that falls on the 64,000 square miles between North Carolina and Vermont ends up in the bay, making it vulnerable to any pollutants in the ground water.

"Filling the nets is getting harder," wrote Williamsburg, Va., native and songwriter Bruce Hornsby. Şeafood harvests have dropped dramatically in the past 100 years.

Overharvesting, development and pollution have reduced the oyster population to only 1 percent of what it was in the late 19th century. Crab harvests are down this year and rockfish, once one of the bay's more prolific fish, nearly disappeared until a multistate ban was implemented in 1986. Today there are only limited rockfish fishing seasons.

The Chesapeake Bay is where salt water from the ocean meets and mingles with fresh river water. The brackish waters, marshes and wetlands produce a wide variety of life - more than 2,700 species of plants and animals.

Gloucester County is just one of dozens of counties and cities facing the bay. While the water is a major industry, the county still has a strong agricultural community. Gloucester is one of the world's largest suppliers of daffodil bulbs, and it serves as a quiet and slow-paced bedroom community for the area.

are the best team in NBA history should not depend on Games 4 and 5 of the NBA Finals. The Super-Sonics were all but unbeatable in Seattle this year; they lost only three times during the season. Is it really fair to expect the Bulls to win two out of three up there?

· Last year's question: Can 33year-old Michael Jordan leave the game for 18 months and come back strong for a full season?

This year's answer: Jordan started every game and, along the way, was named MVP of the regular season, the NBA Finals and the All-Star Game.

· Jordan's victory Sunday means we don't get to see one of the world's reatest athletes in action this Wednesday. But another, perhaps more athletic Michael, won on Sunday and will compete Wednesday.

Michael Johnson's 400-meter final in the Olympic trials will be televised Wednesday and it's worth watching.

Track and field is often overlooked, but peaks some interest around Olympic time. This year Johnson is trying to win gold in both the 200 and the 400 meters. That's my vote for top story to watch in the '96 Games.

 Then again, I was looking forward to seeing Dave and Dan in there in '92.

decided for months. His agent, David Falk, represents most bigname free agents on the market this summer and has said he wants to save Jordan's contract for last. Falk also said Jordan's stated demand for a two-year, $36 million contract was absurd - as in absurdly low.

He might be right. All Jordan did this season was win an unprecedented eighth scoring title, turn an MVP triple play (NBA Finals, regular season, All-Star Game), lead the Bulls to the best regular-season record ever (72-10), reaffirm his status as the best player of his era and conduct perhaps the greatest return from retirement in sports history.

He doesn't want his Chicago career to end now.

"I'm very positive. I believe we'll be back," Jordan said. "We. I did

with many other plans to be made, the Bulls must come to terms with to keep this team together if we Jackson soon or decide to go in a new direction. The Bulls have Jordan's future probably won't be offered him $1.65 million, about twice what he made this season but about half of what untested John Calipari will receive from the New Jersey Nets.

Jackson, the NBA's career winning-percentage leader, wants closer to Calipari's salary, and put more and more pressure on Reinsdorf as the season progressed.

With the sellout crowd of 24,544 still cheering wildly after the Bulls won Sunday, Jackson said over the public-address system: "If management wants me back, I'll be back."

Jordan, who has said he'd strongly consider leaving if Jackson goes, credited the coach for most of the Bulls' success. While guiding a seem simple, it couldn't possibly have been easy dealing with the egos and divergent agendas of Jordan, Rodman, Scottie Pippen, Toni say we. That includes Phil and Kukoc, Ron Harper and others

"As far as wanting to come back, With the draft approaching and who wants to go through this again?" said Jackson, who was named NBA coach of the year. "This is a little insane. The playoffs, the energy level, the duress on the personal life and the professional.

"But I've committed to some players on this team and that's why I feel confident I'll be back."

Like everyone else, Jackson was leery when the Bulls traded for Rodman back in October. Rodman was described as a ticking time bomb whose explosive nature ruined the San Antonio Spurs' playoff runs the previous two seasons.

But while Rodman displayed his short fuse on a few occasions this season, most notably when he head-butted a referee in March, he never really detonated.

In fact, he won his fifth straight league rebounding title, became a fan favorite and was called the difteam with Chicago's talent might ference in the finals by Seattle coach George Karl.

I've not been an individual besides changing my hair and all that," Rodman said. "I just like to give it back to the people. I promised the people one thing, and they got it."

Jackson hugged Rodman immediately after Sunday's game.

"He said, I want you back so bad I can taste it," Rodman said. "I said, 'You need to be back here before I do.' If I'm here, I'm here. If not, it's been great. I don't want to leave, it's up to the organization."

Later, Rodman said he so much wants to return to Chicago that he'd take less from the Bulls than from another organization. He had been asking for up to $10 million a season but probably would stay for half that. Can the Bulls keep Jordan, Jackson and Rodman? Absolutely. The salaries of Jordan and Rodman wouldn't fall under the salary cap because a team can re-sign its own players without cap limitations. A coach's salary isn't affected by the cap, either.

While Reinsdorf and his partners wouldn't stand to gain financially "I've been a team guy all year. by keeping the trio, they want to win. They also don't want to go down in history as being the group that let Michael Jordan get away.

Magic Johnson had his moments, too. There was the night midway through the season in late January when he came out of retirement, bounding up the sideline three minutes into the first quarter of a game against Golden State on the most exciting night at The Forum in years. Johnson, who announced yet another retirement after the regular season ended, had his forgettable moments as well, such as his lowered shoulder into the torso of referee Scott Foster in April, looking like a hypocrite after he had complained so vehemently about the attitudes and antics of his Generation X teammates.

One of them, Cedric Ceballos, walked away from the team in early-April and went water skiing on a bizarre and unexcused leave of Their latest inspiration was Kevin Garnett, a 19-year old from Chicago who was drafted by the Minnesota Timberwolves just weeks after his prom and showed enough talent and potential to make the jump seem easier for all the Kobe Bryants and Jermaine O'Neals who will follow his lead.

Another youngster, Joe Smith of Golden State, lived with his mother during his rookie season. And another mother, Isaiah Rider's, came out of the stands to shoo her tantrumthrowing son off the court after he was ejected in a game against Utah.

Nineteen players changed teams on the night of the trading deadline, and many multiples more prepared to test the free agent market and reap the financial rewards that will be more available than made cameos for the injury-ravaged Bullets, who nonetheless made a capable run at the playoffs led by the most improved player in the league, Gheorghe Muresan.

The New Jersey Nets learned that $30 million can't always coax a winner like Rick Pitino their way, the Milwaukee Bucks learned that a $68 million and a Dream Team spot can't make a winner or a defender out of a Big Dog.

Grant Hill showed who the next great superstar will be, Hakeem Olajuwon found out who the best players in the CBA were - they ended up being his teammates for the injurypleted defending champions.

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf sat out the national anthem, saying he was standing up for his religious beliefs, then backed down when the league held firm that his protest would cost him his job and his millions.

They were pictures and moments that defined the NBA season, one that will be remembered more than anything else for the Chicago Bulls' relentless pursuit of victories and history.

Mets recover from rally in 10th

Associated Press

PITTSBURGH - Lance Johnson homered among his three hits, stole two bases and scored the winning run in the 10th inning as the New York Mets blew a six-run lead before rallying to beat Pittsburgh 7-6 Monday.

Jeff Kent also homered as the Mets opened a 6-0 lead in the second inning before holding off a Pirates comeback, keyed by Mark Johnson's tworun pinch-hit homer and Charlie Hayes' two-run triple in a five-run seventh.

Pittsburgh's bullpen had pitched seven scoreless innings before Johnson, who went 3-for-5, singled with two outs in the 10th. Braves 9, Padres 3

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux ended a month-long winless drought with a four-hitter over eight innings.

Maddux (6-5), pitching to someone other than catcher Javy Lopez for the first time this season, had two losses and three no decisions since his last victory on May 17. He walked none and struck out eight.

The Padres have lost 13 of 15 games yet entered Monday's game tied for first place in the NL West. Dodgers-Cubs Postponed

CHICAGO - Monday night's game between the Chicago Cubs and Los Angeles Dodgers was called after 11/3 innings because of heavy rain.

The game will be made up today as part of a doubleheader, beginning at 12:35 p.m. Giants 1, Marlins 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Osvaldo Fernandez gave up two hits in 7% innings and Barry Bonds hit his 19th home run for the Giants.

Fernandez (4-6), whose spot in the rotation appeared to be in jeopardy after going 0-5 in his last eight starts, got his first win since April 21. Astros 5, Reds 4

HOUSTON — Jeff Bagwell hit a two-run double in the seventh inning to rally the Houston Astros to a 5-4 victory.

Cangelosi had walked to open the inning and moved to his double. Bagwell went to thrown out at the plate Yankees finally scored.

Scott Stahoviak doubled in the first run in the first and scored on Paul Molitor's double. Marty Cordova singled home Molitor.

Athletics 8, Tigers 4 DETROIT - Terry Steinbach's grand slam in the top of the 10th inning boosted Oakland over Detroit.

Jim Corsi (3-0) worked two scoreless innings for the win. Geronimo Berroa hit a three-run homer for Oakland, which won for only the fourth time in 11 games.

Orioles 1, Rangers 1 BALTIMORE — A little wildness and a whole lot of rain ruined Roger Pavlik's bid to earn his 10th victory of the season.

The game was called after a delay of 1 hour, 17 minutes. By that time, both dugouts were flooded. All statistics will be Minnesota jumped on rookie included in the record book. Ivan Rodriguez extended his hitting streak to 17 games.

Maybank sprints into finals

Former Iowa sprinter Anthuan Maybank's Olympic dreams came one step closer to reality Monday night, as he qualified for the finals of the 400-meter dash at the U.S. Olympic trials in Atlanta.

Despite running out of lane one, Maybank's time of 45.18 seconds was good enough for fourth place in his heat, and good enough to advance him to Wednesday's finals.

"He's close," Maybank's former coach at Iowa, Ted Wheeler, said. "He's very close. All he has to do is get in the top six."

Maybank is one of eight finalists. At least the top six will make the Olympic team.

"He's good enough to pull it off," Wheeler said.

TRACK AND FIELD

Slaney returns to Olympics

Mary Slaney is back in the Olympics. Carl Lewis may be on his way out.

Slaney, 37, gritting her teeth on the final straightaway, rallied from fifth place in the last three laps to finish second in the women's 5,000 meters Monday night and complete an improbable comeback by qualifying for her first Olympics since 1988.

Lewis could be in danger of failing to make the Olympic team after a lackluster showing in the qualifying round of the long jump at the U.S. track and field trials.

In other women's finals Monday night, Tisha Waller won the high jump, Meredith Rainey captured the 800, Cynthea Rhodes placed first in the triple jump and Nicole Carroll won the javelin.

Todd Williams won the men's 10,000 and John Godina became the first American track and field athlete to qualify for two Olympic events this summer when he placed second to Anthony Washington in the men's discus. Godina was second to Randy Barnes in the shot put Saturday.

Michael Johnson, Butch Reynolds and Quincy Watts all advanced easily to Wednesday's final of the men's 400. Alvin Harrison had the best time of 44.43 in Monday's semifinals.

New trial date set for Cowboy receiver

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys receiver Michael Irvin is scheduled to have his day in court June 25. The trial date set Monday for Irvin's drug-possession case is one day later than originally scheduled. A pretrial hearing in the case resumes Tuesday morning, a court official said.

Irvin and two topless dancers were re-indicted Friday, two days after a judge threw out their original charges because a member of the grand jury that indicted them April 1 lived outside the county.

Legal problems for the three stem from a March 4 drug bust at an Irving motel. Police said the three, along with former Irvin teammate Alfredo Roberts, were found in the motel room with drugs. Roberts was not indicted.

Irvin was charged with felony cocaine possession and misdemeanor marijuana possession. If convicted, he could face as much as 20 years in prison.

Luehrsmann, Davis shine in Prime Time

Chris James The Daily Iowan

Iowa basketball fans can catch a glimpse of the future this summer at Iowa City City High School. That's where future Hawkeyes Ryan Luehrsmann and Ricky Davis compete three days a week in the Prime Time League.

And, if Sunday's performances are any indication, the future

Davis, an all-state first teamer who still has one year left at Davenport North High School, began his third season of play in the league Sunday. The 6-foot-5 swingman led Goodfellow Printing/Imprinted Sportswear with 30

But Davis said the real lesson to be learned in this league doesn't involve scoring.

"Actually, I learned a lot about defense," Davis said. "You learn to switch and rotate a lot quicker. You have to. These guys are stronger and quicker than the guys I face during the high school Luehrsmann, who will be a freshman at Iowa in the fall, is playing in his second prime time campaign. The 6-foot guard from Cedar Rapids said people tend to play a little harder against athletes like Davis and himself.

"When they know you're a recruit getting ready to play col-lege basketball, they tend to put more effort in shutting you down. Sometimes they'll talk trash or intimidate you. But I like the competition. This is a great way to pare to play basketball in the Big Ten," Luehrsmann said.

Despite the added pressure, Luehrsmann scored 10 points and dished out 11 assists as his team, handiFLOS, picked up its first win of the season Sunday night.

Luehrsmann will be in Iowa black and gold come November, but Davis said he still wants to keep his options open, although he verbally committed to Iowa more than two years ago.

RANDOM THOUGHTS

Davis is great for PTL, not the NBA

Random thoughts from the sport ing world...

· I was interested in watching several players Sunday night at the Prime Time basketball league but the one I couldn't divert my attention from was Ricky Davis. Davis, a senior-to-be at Davenport North High school, has been a crowd favorite for a couple years thanks to his poster dunks. Davis put on a clinic with slams, swats, steals and pure athleticism Sunday. If I could just jump half that high, I wouldn't be writing about sports.

· Davis followed up his on-court performance Sunday with a comment that shows things are getting out of hand these days. Davis said he might just go straight to the NBA out of high school. No offense to Davis — he's a sensational player — but he is nowhere near NBA-caliber. When Kevin Garnett went pro, it was a big deal, a strange occurrence. Now every high school kid that's the best in his conference is considering the NBA an option. Give me a break. My 12-year-old brother Brian, who's a better basketball player now than I can ever hope to be, picked up a couple individual trophies last week at a high school basketball camp.

He announced Friday that he would return to John F. Kennedy Grade School for his seventh-grade

· The Hawkeyes will have to wait another year for Davis, but freshmen Ryan Luehrsmann and Guy Rucker will be stepping into the Iowa lineup this winter. Both looked impressive at the PTL Sunday. And supposedly recruit Jeff Walker, who will join the league in July, is the most eye-catching of all the Hawkeye freshmen. Maybe the future doesn't look so bad.

· Whether or not the Chicago Bulls

1996 NBA CHAMPIONS

Judge Everything must fall reverses into place for repeat prior jury Mike Nadel

CHICAGO - There never has been a team quite like these Chicago Bulls, and the coming months will determine if there will be another anytime soon.

Can the Bulls uphold the NBA's decade-long tradition of repeating as champions? The answer is obvious: Yes, if Michael Jordan is still scoring, if Dennis Rodman is still rebounding an if Phil Jackson is still running the show from the

They were the three main cogs as Chicago won an incredible 87 of 100 games. And only by retaining them can the Bulls hope to come close to duplicating their dream season.

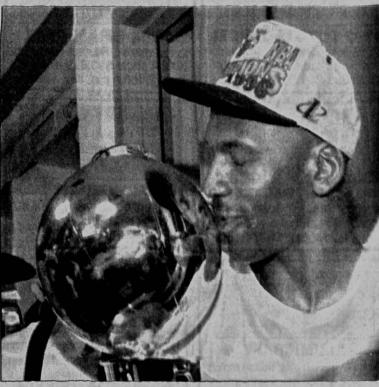

"I don't do promises of repeats," Jordan said Sunday after the Bulls wrapped up the title with an 87-75 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics. "I'd like to see us together so we can win another championship.

That would be typical NBA. The Los Angeles Lakers won in 1987 and again in '88. The Detroit Pistons won in 1989 and again in '90. The Bulls won in 1991 and again in '92 and '93. The Houston Rockets won in 1994 and again in '95. Can the Bulls make it two in a row and five in seven years? "Great players, led by the greatest player that ever played this game and the greatest coach in the league," was how Bulls owner Jerry Reinsdorf described the Bulls immediately after the game to a sellout crowd at the United

Bulls' title run tops long list of NBA moments

It was an NBA season filled with lasting visual images, the last of which spotlighted the uniqueness of the year.

The picture that will stick in the collective consciousness is Michael Jordan hunched over on the floor of the United Center, face down with a ball wrapped in his arms as the Chicago Bulls celebrated their championship Sunday night.

It was the conclusive moment in a season dominated by debate of history and everlasting greatness, a quest the Bulls made their own after they started the year 23-2 and set their sights on 70

We've been dedicated all season to go out and win every basketball game we've played," Scottie Pippen said. "Our team deserves a bow and hats off because it was a very frustrating and tough season. that led to a six-game suspension. We played with pain and injuries and it made the difference.'

The championship celebration, array of colors that Rodman dyed the Bulls' first since 1993, was just one of so many snapshots that Chicago starred in.

Many focused on Dennis Rodman, the final piece of the puzzle for the Bulls in building the most successful team in league history. Some are pictures Rodman and Chicago would rather forget, like the head butt on referee Ted Bernhardt at the Meadowlands

And who could cleanse their memory of the seemingly endless his hair? There was the rainbow look in the finals, the flame look of late in the season, the whites, reds, yellows, greens and purples of months past.

The runner-up Seattle Super-Sonics provided moments, too, from Gary Payton daring to talk trash in Jordan's face to Shawn Kemp dunking with more authority than anyone to Nate McMillan dragging his beaten body down-
