Homeless flock to I.C. for the summer

Matt Johnson The Daily Iowan

When Michael Fox boarded a cargo train in Des Moines with three of his friends early Monday, the only thing he knew about his journey was it would end in Iowa

Fox, 47, left nothing behind and didn't know what he would encounter, the only thing he knew was his friends would be there

"We stick together. One of us got a problem, we kind of help them out," Fox said.

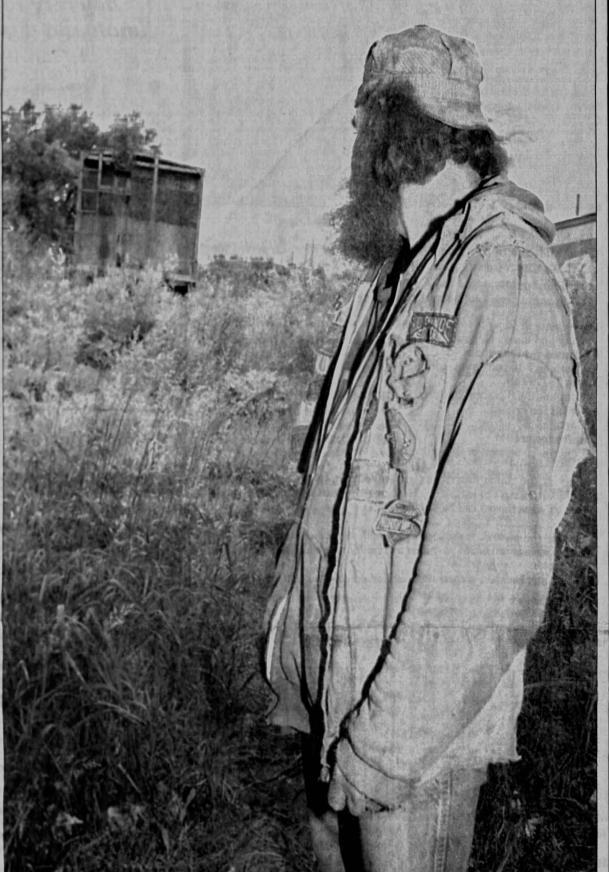

Fox has been homeless for almost three years, after he was released from Ft. Madison State Prison in September 1993. He said leading a homeless lifestyle isn't meant to be a source of pity for him or his friends.

New UI provost has arts forte

Peggy Kozal The Daily Iowan

Jon Whitmore, dean of the College of Fine Arts at the University of Texas at Austin, was appointed Wednesday by the Iowa state Board of Regents to the position of UI provost and professor with tenure in the Department of Theater Arts.

Whitmore will succeed Peter Nathan, who stepped down as provost and returned to the faculty in the Department of Psychology Jan. 1. Since then, Samuel Becker has been the acting provost.

UI President Mary Sue Coleman said Wednesday at the Iowa state Board of Regents meeting she was enthusiastic about Whitmore's arrival.

"I was really impressed with what he was able to accomplish the University of Texas." Coleman said. "He was very highly regarded on campus, and he has a lot of academic administrative experience."

Coleman listed Whitmore's achievements at the University of Texas, which included the revival of a fledgling fine arts department, an increase in the diversity of the student body and faculty and an award from a campus womens' group for his efforts toward equal hiring poli-

"He and I have good personal chemistry," she said. "I believe he and I will work very well together. We have the same academic philosophy. He's truly a star."

In anticipation of Whitmore's arrival, some are curious as to which areas will headline his agenda. Coleman said the continuation of the fiber-optic network was a high priority, as was budget planning.

As UI provost, he believes important decisions need to be made with focus on communication aspects of education.

"Issues of digital technology and the Information Age are rapidly becoming central to improving education at the university level," Whitmore said. Computers and access over the Internet are beneficial to both teachers and students in today's

As dean of the College of Fine Arts, Whitmore heads a faculty of 200 in the departments of art and art history, theater and dance and the school of music.

He said his experience in the arts and humanities will be profitable in representing a wide array of departmental areas.

The arts, by nature, are interdisciplinary in using visual communication to make advances in education based on creative discovery," Whitmore said. "This is the heart of what develops many areas such as research and the social sciences."

Whitmore earned his bachelor's and master's degrees in speech and theater from Washington State University and his Ph.D. in the dramatic arts from the University of California-Santa Barbara.

All students applying for a new ID card are asked to sign the following "Responsibility and Charge Policy." The first two paragraphs of the contract are meant only for UI staff, while the third paragraph refers to students, but in an attempt to save paper, the two were combined onto one sheet. Several students were confused by the first two paragraphs because the UI cannot deduct from student wages.

Finding your way through the frozen treat flurry omewhere between plain vanilla and the P.C. '90s, ice cream went multicultural. Eating ice cream was never supposed to be this confusing. Most of us remember when our choices were limited to chocolate or vanilla - maybe Neaopolitan - and plain or sugar cone.

That's not the case anymore, since sorbets, low-fats, nonfats, yogurts, reduced fats, premiums and super premiums crashed the frozen dairy aisle, and there's a dizzying array of ice-cream options for Iowa Citians.

Searching for a bit of summer relief does have an up side, though before you find a flavor you like, you'll have to wade your way through tons of Rainforest Crunch and double-fudge, macadamia nut, white chocolate, icegasm flavors.

Ice cream production is a very specific science, said David Bush, General Manager of A-E Farms Inc., Ice Cream and Mix Division of Anderson Erickson Dairies in Des Moines.

And while the average consumer might not worry about butterfat content, the percentage of air or how much real vanilla goes into ice cream, these critera are what separates great ice cream from merely mediocre "Air is important," he said about the amount of air whipped into ice Pockets of resistance to vanilla overkill do exist in parts of the South Light Ice cream and Southeastern United States, where butter pecan "is as good or better a seller than vanilla," Bush said.

Although ice cream's popularity has increased in past years, ice-cream sales in Iowa City are still dependant on the temperature, said John Nonfat ice cream Dane, owner of Dane's Drive-In, 1430 Willow Creek Drive. "It's quite variable according to the weather," he said.

With ice-cream weather well underway, here's a brief guide for those who are virgins to the dairy world:

To be legally sold as ice cream, a product must contain at least 10 percent butterfat, although some ice creams contain as much as 16 percent,

Ice cream runs the quality gamut, from super premium (usually containing 12-14 percent butterfat and only about 25 percent air) to economy grade, which usually is only 10 percent butterfat and 50 percent air. ly low fat.

New letter-sorting technology had a handful of local postal workers wielding signs such as "America deserves first class service," and "Don't let management destroy the world's best postal service," in front of the Iowa City Post Office Wednesday afternoon.

The "informational picket" was in conjunction with 3,000 National Association of Letter Carriers demonstrations held across the nation in protest of United States Postal Service's plans to automate more of its service, including implementing Delivery Point Sequencing (DPS) automation.

"The carrier on the same route can deal with it better, but the system doesn't know when you have to hold people's mail, or if they've moved.

feelings between Iowa City carriers and Iowa City postal administration and there will be no retribution against those who protested.

"It's human nature to be concerned about change," he said. "We feel that we have a good working relationship here."

Gregg said there would be no interruption of mail service to the Iowa City area, because all mail would have been delivered by the time the picket started.

Susan Coester, a UI law student with a post office box, said automation seems to be a bad way to save money. "I would say I agree with them," she said. "Technology can be a bad thing. We can't cut jobs from people, in the long run it'll hurt the economy.' Coester said she didn't understand how automation would be of

Closed apartment building deals with former tenants

Kate Merkel-Hess

The Daily Iowan

Although the tenants at 130 E. Jefferson St. were forced to leave their condemned apartment building June 1, issues surrounding its closing remain open.

The 27-unit building was declared dangerous by the city after a November 1995 inspection. Inspectors reported the north side of the building was buckling and was structurally unsound and could collapse at any time. The building also violated several fire safety codes, specifically fire warning and exiting systems. The structural engineer who examined the building recommended weekly monitoring to ensure its safety.

Former tenant Heather Berry, now a resident of Des Moines, has charged that the building manager, Chambers Agency, Coralville, has been uncooperative about returning her original deposit. The Chambers Agency, managing the building on behalf of absent owner M. Kabir Younoszai of Prospect, Ky., promised to return Berry's deposit by June 6, she said. After numerous phone calls over a twoweek period, she still had not received her reimbursement.

Berry's most recent phone call to Chambers Agency, made Monday, left her in tears, she said.

"I was not belligerent or demanding," Berry said. "The man at the agency started yelling at me. He said I was calling him a liar and told me to never call back. Then he hung up."

However, not all former tenants are having as many problems as Berry. UI graduate student Michael Hardy said he received his deposit on time. We just went in to Chambers Agency and picked it up," Hardy said. "We got our deposit back no

UI sophomore Aaron Bates has not received her money yet, but said she isn't worried about it. Bates said her original impression was she would receive her deposit 30 days from the day she moved out, which was May 8. After a clarification from Chambers Agency, she understood the payment would come 30 days after the closing of the building, June 1, Bates said.

This scenario is most likely closest to the truth, Chamber's Agency Attorney William Mearden said, although he is not in charge of returning the funds. This duty was left up to the Chambers Agency, Mearden said. However, owner Ted Chambers said the reason the funds weren't returned was because the agency was under advisement from its attorney. According to Chambers, the checks are in the mail.

While still working to resolve issues with former tenants, Mearden and his clients are also trying to salvage the building. Mearden has appealed the city building inspector's decision that the building is dangerous.

Byrdsong charged with fraud

Katharine Horowitz The Daily Iowan

DeWayne Byrdsong, a UI graduate and Baptist minister from Coralville who was found guilty last Friday of lying to police about vandalism to his car, was charged Tuesday with insurance fraud, a Class D felony. Byrdsong, 33, of Coralville, was arrested Tuesday with bond set at $5,000. His sentencing is set for July 18 at 2 p.m., the same day as sponsor "Big Kids Story Time Special: charge. If found guilty, Byrdsong Insurance fraud — DeWayne Byrd- The Story Time Bus Goes to the Museum could face a maximum of five years

Sgt. Terry Koehn of the Coralville Police Department said the possibility of charging Byrdsong with insurance fraud was considered because of the time Byrdsong was found guilty of providing false reports to the police. The final decision was made Tuesday.

"What it amounts to is that he falsely obtained money from his insurance company," Koehn said. "This was then officially proven in court yesterday."

On Friday, District Associate Judge Stephen Gerard II issued the guilty verdict against Byrdsong of providing false reports to the Iowa City police. Byrdsong had told officials vandals had spray painted racial slurs - including "KKK" and "Go Back to Africa" on his car last July.

Police initially investigated the case as a hate crime. They later, charged Byrdsong with providing false reports to law enforcement officials after learning he had taken the car to several area body shops before the incident to get estimates on a new paint job.

Officials also discovered Byrdsong had previously purchased spray-painting materials, later found in the dumpster behind his apartment. Laboratory tests revealed the spray paint found in the dumpster to be the same as the spray paint used to deface his car.

In March, Byrdsong was found guilty of domestic assault and was sentenced to two days in jail. He was accused of striking his wife repeatedly in the face during a fight last September.

When he wanders off the official campaign message, Dole strays not only into the thorny, but also the more mundane.

At his first "heartland" stop in Toledo, Ohio, Dole promised: "I'm going to do a lot of listening to Americans; that's what's going to happen in the real campaign." Headed back to Washington seven speeches and three days later. Dole as much as admitted the declaration had been just a speech-

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. - Bruce Lindsey, President Clinton's most trusted adviser, will be named by prosecutors as an unindicted coconspirator in the latest Whitewater trial, a defense lawyer confirmed Wednes-

"He was thoroughly investigated and not charged, with ample opportunities," the president told reporters.

The normally publicity-shy Lindsey rushed to the White House lawn to correct a televised account of the development, then told a horde of journalists he was guilty of no wrongdoing.

"I didn't offer to resign," said Lindsey, deputy White House counsel and a top aide. "I did nothing wrong. There is no reason or purpose for me to resign.

Attorney Dan Guthrie, who represents one of two Arkansas bankers on trial, said he was told by Whitewater prosecutors Lindsey would be named a co-conspirator on a charge of hiding from the IRS large cash withdrawals by Clinton's 1990 bid for Arkansas governor.

Banks are required under federal law to report all cash transactions over $10,000 to the IRS.

He noted that he listed the withdrawals on campaign finance reports 30 days after the 1990 election. "It is just ludicrous to suggest that I would conspire (to hide the withdrawals) and then turn around and publicly disclose the same information," he said.

Lindsey said he was named an unindicted co-conspirator only because prosecutors want to elicit hearsay testimony from the chief prosecuting witness about Lindsey. He does not expect to be charged, Lindsey said.

BERLIN, Md. - An early-morning fire that heavily damaged a black church on Maryland's Eastern Shore was quickly traced to an it was another of the arsons that have caused nationwide anguish.

Federal investigators hurried to St. John's United Methodist Church in a rural black community near Berlin. They planned to conduct a full arson investigation, state Fire Marshal Rocco Gabriele said, although "it's quite evident it's accidental.

Federal agencies are investigating dozens of suspicious fires that have struck black churches across the South and Southeast in the last 18 months. Investigators also are looking into a series of fires at mostly white churches.

President Clinton was to meet with Southern governors at the White House Wednesday to outline steps to fight the epidemic.

In Kossuth, Miss., about 190 miles northeast of Jackson, a liquid-filled plastic jug was found burned into the lawn of an allwhite church Tuesday, a day after two black churches nearby were gutted by suspected arsons.

Sheriff Jimmy Taylor said investigators also found evidence of an attempted break-in at the Kossuth Church of Christ, and were calling it a "failed attempt at arson."

Federal agents joined the investigation of the fires that destroyed the two black churches in Kossuth on Monday night, and community leaders pledged to rebuild them. Officials said $25,000 was raised in ast week, Rev. DeWayne Byrdsong was found guilty of providing false reports to police about vandalism, apparently bringing an end to a bizarre incident that started out as a hate crime but led to claims of racism or even a conspiracy carried out by the Coralville police. People were not only shocked, but outraged, when they first heard reports that vandals had spray painted "KKK" and "Go Back to Africa" on Byrdsong's 1983 Mercedes Benz. In the end, he was found guilty of lying to police about vandalizing his own car. Now, Byrdsong's claim as a victim of racism seems outrageous.

Why choose hate?

■ The question of whether Rev. DeWayne Byrdsong painted racial slurs on his car himself has been answered with a guilty verdict by the judge. The question that remains now is — Why did he do it?

A person can only speculate why Byrdsong would do something so foolish as vandalize his own car. The prosecution maintained Byrdsong hoped his insurance company would pay for the vandalism and now he has been charged with insurance fraud. However, it is puzzling that he claimed he was the victim of a hate crime, which obviously stirs up strong emotions in people, in order to defraud an insurance company.

By creating such a public outcry in a community that is as multicultural and relatively tolerant as the Iowa City/Coralville area, Byrdsong could only raise suspicion, which might lead authorities to discover stupid mistakes.

That is exactly what happened. FBI agents discovered he had visited numerous auto shops for estimates before the incident. Spray paint found on the car matched some found in his garage and in a paint can in a dumpster near his apartment. Why didn't he find a less conspicuous way of defrauding his insurance agency?

Of course, no one ever claimed all criminals are smart, but the fact that Byrdsong would go to such lengths to stage a hate crime suggests this case is more than a matter of money. Also, his own lawyer suggested Byrdsong had no motive because his financial situation allowed him enough money to pay for the repainting of the car.

So if Byrdsong did not do it for the money, then why did he do it? Perhaps he was so paranoid he believed society was so racist that by staging a hate crime, he would bring attention to the problem of racism. Maybe he would rationalize his breaking the law as doing society a favor. This would be symbolic of a larger and potentially dangerous tendency of seeing the world in oversimplified black-and-white terms; seeing a racist conspiracy in every legal case involving a minority defendant, seeing society as being made up of "us" and "them."

Of course, this is all speculation.

Unfortunately and pathetically, real hate crimes do occur. There are also people with racist views involved in law enforcement. Both of these problems should be taken seriously, but the acts of Byrdsong trivialize racist tragedy. Byrdsong currently faces one year in jail and/or a $1,000 fine. Considering the nature of the crime and his unwillingness to admit guilt, a stern sentence would be appropriate.

Ask the sheriffs

■ The Brady law is being challenged in appeals court by two sheriffs for being impractical and unconstitutional. Though there should be some checks on guns, the sheriffs are right.

The Supreme Court agreed Monday to hear a case on the appeals of sheriffs in Arizona and Montana who are appealing the legality of the Brady law, that requires a five-day waiting period for those attempting to purchase a handgun so local law enforcement officials can perform background checks on those who wish to purchase them.

The two sheriffs involved are appealing the law's constitutionality on the basis that it is illegal for the federal government to require local officials to enforce a federal statute.

A federal appeals court, however, ruled the law is legal and equated its burdens to "the federally imposed duties of state officers to report missing children or traffic fatalities." If the Supreme Court finds in favor of the sheriffs, the waiting-period requirement would be thrown out of the Brady law, effectively killing it's main deterrence aspect.

The question that lies here is: Does the federal government have the right to impose these duties to ensure public safety? Yes, to an extent. However, these officers do have a valid argument as to a major problem the Brady law has created.

In many areas, after the Brady law's passage, some local law enforcement agencies became swamped with requests for background checks on potential gun buyers. These agencies did not have the manpower to process these checks within the five-day period required by the Brady law and the bill did not provide funding for officers to conduct these checks.

An instant background check system is to be in place nationally by 1998. But until then, local law enforcement must perform these checks. Without the funding to hire more officers to perform the checks, officers spend more time checking records than policing.

One of the major achievements of the Republican majority in Congress was passage of the Unfunded Mandates Act, which prevents the federal government from mandating federal duties to local and state governments without appropriate funding. The Brady law violates this law and almost can be considered a violation of the 10th Amendment as well, because it requires local governments to perform a federal duty.

On the other hand, proper checks should be in place to ensure guns do not fall into the wrong hands. That is why instead of requiring local officials to do the checks, the federal government needs to set up a system like the one being tested in some Western states, where gun-store employees can call a 1-800 number to a federal office to perform an instant check within minutes.

It's this kind of check that can free our local law enforcement to patrol the streets, instead of being in an office reading a bunch of files. It's a sensible, logical way to protect the public trust and safety.

Behind all the burnings few weeks ago in his weekly radio address to the nation, President Clinton acknowledged the threat of a possible 'racist conspiracy' in the United States resulting in the fire bombings of African-American churches in the South since 1994. Other churches have burned since the address.

Aside from warning of these very forces in my columns, this whole situation has a particularly personal element for me. My mother's church fits the description of the churches fire bombed: older, established, Baptist, activist, in an area of strong white supremacist support and Southern. My mother's church is in my hometown of New Orleans. Her church is called New Zion Baptist Church.

My mother's church fits the description of the churches fire bombed: older, established, Baptist, activist, in an area of strong white supremacist support and Southern.

It is an historic church. It was in the basement of New Zion the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the church's pastor, A.L. Davis, founded the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Pastor Davis went on to become the first New Orleans city councilor of African descent (hopefully we all know what came to pass for King).

But what New Orleans represents more than anything is Dixie; the antebellum South; and, of course, New Orleans is Klan territory—remember David Duke's political campaigns? Sounds like my mother's church fits the description to me.

Meanwhile, the FBI and other federal agencies investigating the fire bombings have found clues pointing to the Ku Klux Klan and other white supremacist organizations. The FBI arrested a 13-year-old girl in North Carolina; African-Americans have called the girl a 'ploy' by white supremacists.

However, the FBI started questioning the character and finances of the crime victims, and their possible guilt in the fire bombings of their own churches. The ministers complained — publicly. The bureau backed off. Luckily the national news media decided to cover the issue.

Because during most of these two years of fire bombings, the European-American mainstream news media have, until the president's address, refused to the cover the issue. Personally, I read about the bombings in one of my Internet mailing lists several months ago. So, I am sure the corporate news media were aware of it long

Although the fire bombing happened in the South, the racist ideology is not limited to that region of the country. It is present here in Iowa City. Take, for instance, my new neighbor from Haiti. At the UI for only one year and with two majors, he has amassed the credits of a junior through constant work and sacrifice. However, on his birthday he decided to treat himself to dinner and a movie, He was mistakenly accused of trying to sneak into the wrong film and was publicly ordered out of the Campus Theaters without even the opportunity to explain.

This same guy was given a lower grade than a high-school student in his UI French class because French is the national language of Haiti, and his first language. How can a guy earn two years of college credit in two semesters at the UI in his second language (English), but cannot get a higher grade than a highschool French student in his first language (French)?

As I have contended in earlier columns, racism is an ideology, not simply a malicious act. An ideology which erroneously holds that descendants of Africa, and other ethnic and/or cultural groups, are less evolved and less human than European descendants. Clearly evident in many religious doctrines, this concepts holds that enslaved Africans in America were apelike barbarians from savage cultures who swung from trees in Africa prior to European contact/civilization through enslavement/Christianity

The problem is my ancestors were not savage, but had political, economic, social and theological institutions for thousands of years prior to European contact. In many cases, the African technology was superior to the Europeans. But the Europeans were superior militaristically.

Thus, this racist ideology, held by most of the founding fathers of America, helped demonize the so-called 'savage-rooted' ancestry of the African-American as part of the cultural reality of the American Dream and continues to this day. The only thing is, there is not enough to go around. We cannot all live that American Dream.

The whole thing reminds me of what the Rev. Dr. Joseph Lowery, the current president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was quoted as saying of America this week on CNN, "the 51st state of the United States is the State of Denial." Let's break through and leave the State of Denial together in Iowa City as an entire intellectual community.

Internet still naughty, but it's nice

When the history of this technological age is written, the Internet will be viewed in the same light as the printing press for the way it profoundly changed the act of communication. We're dealing here with something truly new. And in true human fashion, many of us are having a hard time adjusting our thinking to the new reality.

The trouble with new realities is we don't have new words and concepts to describe them — so we try to use the old ones. My first experience surfing the Net was last fall, and at the time I said "it's like walking into the coolest library in the world." For me, the closest analogy was to the printed word. Other people reacted differently. Some went through the act of turning on the computer and looking up addresses and began thinking of the Internet as a more sophisticated brand of TV. Others contemplated e-mail and saw a new kind of telephone.

Indecent and patently offensive speech are protected by the Constitution, so in that sense, the CDA was doomed from the start.

The difference —Internet as a library vs. broadcast or phone — is critical. It's at the heart of last week's ruling by a three-judge federal panel that the Communications Decency Act is unconstitutional. The CDA attempted to use the same principles currently used to regulate the content of broadcast programming and telephone calls to regulate the Internet. Courts have ruled broadcast indecency can be regulated; so can "dial-a-porn" and its ilk. Thus, it's easy to understand Congress' leap: If the Net is a new kind of TV or telephone, there's no problem stretching the law

James A. Bartlett

But federal Judge Dolores Sloviter, in her opinion of the case, criticized Congress for making the wrong leap — for seeing shades of Bell and Marconi in the Internet, instead of Gutenberg. "(Congress) did not follow the example available in the print media," she wrote, "where nonobscene but indecent and patently offensive books and magazines abound. Those responsible for minors undertake the primary obligation to prevent their exposure to such material." In other words, it is up to the listener, not the speaker, to keep a child away from material the listener deems unsuitable for that child. The CDA would have put the onus on speakers, requiring those who post material on the Net to make sure they weren't putting up offensive material and prescribing fines and jail for violators.

There would be many targets for prosecution under the CDA: me, if I put something indecent on my web page; my Internet service provider, for allowing me, even if they didn't know I was doing it; you, if you forwarded my naughtiness to somebody else; your Internet service provider; and so on.

According to Voters Telecommunications Watch, an anti-CDA group, the working assumption would have to be you dare not post anything on the Net someone somewhere could consider unfit for children. Posters who did could be prosecuted, regardless of whether a library or a big totally new angle to tally new angle to tal kid was intending to look at naughty material or he saw something by accident. It's as if the owner of a bookstore could be held liable if a child cruised the aisles looking for the racy parts of romance novels — even if the child happened to see something racy when a book fell off the shelf by accident.

CDA proponents brushed off the decision blaming liberal bias on the part of the judges (but failing to note two of the three were Bush appointees). Proponents hope to be vindicated in the Supreme Court, but that presumes the high court will use a different Constitution than the federal court did. Some proponents believe they can switch their regulatory focus to state and local laws — which shows a profound misunderstanding of what the Internet is and how it works.

The battle over the CDA is a new chapter of an old story. Since the '60s, legislators and courts have tried to define nebulous terms like "obscenity," "indecency" and "patently offensive" and have found the exercise reminiscent of nailing Jell—O to a wall. Sections of last week's court ruling turned on the various definitions of these words. Indecent and patently offensive speech are protected by the Constitution, so in that sense, the CDA was doomed from the start. Honesty compels me to report I predicted its demise in this space last spring, for that very reason.

Our society's struggle to come to terms with this profoundly new technology proves the validity of a comment made by Supreme Court. Justice Robert Jackson, who served in the '40s and early '50s. Each new form of communication, he said, is "a law unto itself." With the Internet, we're not talking about a cool new library or a big new telephone. We need a totally new angle of vision.

Altogether, the discoveries are important because they are "telling us very basic things about what HIV needs to infect cells," said Dr. James Hoxie, a researcher at the University of Pennsylvania who was not involved with the reported studies. Scientists have long known that to get inside cells, HIV attaches itself to a structure on the cell surface called CD4. But it has also been clear HIV needed another foothold as well.

Yigal Amir thrown out of court after disrespecting judge

TEL AVIV, Israel - Yitzhak Rabin's assassin was thrown out of court Wednesday for being rude to the judge Throughout the conspiracy case hearing at the Tel Aviv District Court, Yigal Amir taunted prosecutor Pnina Guy and at one point criticized Judge Amnon Strashnov, telling him: "You hear only what you want to hear.

"What gall!" snapped the judge, who ordered Amir removed from the courtroom. As Amir was leaving, he angrily advised the judge to "try to be more objective." Strashnov then threatened to charge Amir with contempt of court - a prospect unlikely to deter the former law student who is already serving a life sentence for shooting the former prime minister to death on Nov. 4. Amir, 25, is being tried again - along with his brother Hagai and friend Dror Adani - for conspiracy to murder Rabin and to attack Palestinians, and for possessing weapons illegally. If found guilty on all counts, each could receive 50 years in prison.

Hagai Amir on Wednesday denied he plotted to kill the prime minister. He told the court while he knew of his brother's desire to kill Rabin in hopes of stopping the peace process, he disagreed with such

Zhirinovsky sways voters from Communism, backs Yeltsin

3 MOSCOW - Ultranationalist Vladimir Zhiri-novsky gave an unexpected boost to Boris Yeltsin Wednesday by telling his supporters not to vote for the Communists in the second round of Russia's presidential election.

The move came a day after retired Gen. Alexander Lebed, who finished third in Sunday's first round of voting, agreed to back Yeltsin's re-election.

Yeltsin, who faces Gennady Zyuganov in a runoff likely to be held in early July, picked up Zhirinovsky's de facto support in a blow to the Communists, who were counting on his backing. Zyuganov said he still expects Zhirinovsky's sup-

Economist Grigory Yavlinsky criticized the president's reforms but told his supporters not to vote Communist, while eye surgeon Syatoslav Fyodorov, who won less than 1 percent of the vote, said Wednesday he would support Yeltsin.

The most difficult problem will be getting Netanyahu's government to deal with the Palestinians, whose plight has been at the center of Arab-Israeli hostility since 1948.

ABL gives player assignments

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) - The women's new American Basketball League assigned its premier players — including U.S. Olympic team members Rebecca Lobo and Lisa Leslie — to its eight professional teams today.

Lobo, who led Connecticut to the 1995 NCAA title, was assigned to the New England team, while Leslie, who played for Southern California, was assigned to the Richmond, Va., team.

The player assignments were made largely on the players' regional ties and popularity. Sixteen premier players, including 11 Olympic team members, were spread among eight teams in Atlanta; Columbus, Ohio; Denver; New England; Portland, Ore.; Richmond, Va.; San Jose, Calif,; and Seattle.

The ABL is scheduled to begin a 40-game season starting in mid-October. The players, who also own 10 percent of the league, will earn from $40,000 to $70,000 a year.

Former Iowa runner Anthuan Maybank left Olympic Stadium in Atlanta Wednesday night a mem-ber of the United States Olympic team. He entered his hotel room an "also ran."

Maybank was disqualified from the finals of the 400-meter dash at the U.S. Olympic Trials for stepping out of his lane as he came around the curve and approached the home stretch. The decision Iowa, Ted Wheeler. came after Maybank had already left the stadium.

"I just found out about an hour ago," Maybank said more than three hours after he crossed the finish line. "I was back at the hotel and already had showered and was getting ready to go to dinner when my coach came in and told me."

One person who was there when the disqualification was announced was Maybank's former coach at sion.

"No one knew. It was announced way after the race was over," Wheeler said. "(Maybank's) Nike coach didn't even know.

Maybank finished fifth in the actual race, which would have made him one of the six athletes selected for the Olympic team.

With his coach preoccupied at the long jump pit, Wheeler took it upon himself to appeal the decidisqualified. Maybank's time of 44.39 was three-tenths of a second faster than the sixth-place finisher, Derek Mills, and four-tenths of a second faster than Jason Rouser, who finished in seventh.

The appeal was denied.

The top four finishers automatically make the Olympic team, with three running an open 400 and all four on the relay.

The U.S. coaches traditionally take six participants, possibly more. All eight finalists will now work out with the team and keep running meets.

The Prime Time League can be educational, too.

Wednesday night's lesson: If your team's top players do not show up, you get blown out of the City High gym.

But, in the midst of three blowouts (the worst was 151-93), came a gem. Jess Settles led handiFLOS to a second-half comeback and a 100-99 victory over Lepic Kroeger Realtors/Active Endeavors.

Lepic/Active (1-1) led the entire way and went up by as many as 10 points in the second half. But Settles wouldn't let up. He put to rest the myth that players don't care about winning Prime Time games as he called for the ball time after time and hustled up and down the court.

"You don't want to lose," said Settles, who finished with 34 points and 11 rebounds. "I've been fortunate to get on a team that's got some pretty good players. Heck, I drove an hour, I thought I might as well win the sucker."

handiFLOS (2-0) didn't take its first lead until less than three minutes remained, but made the most out of the game's final minutes. It was Lepic/Active that had to try and come from behind when Settles put handiFLOS up 98-94 with 31 seconds left.

Chris Kingsbury, who led Lepic/Active with 33 points and a countless number of key baskets, nailed a short jumper in the lane with a hand in his face to cut the margin to two. But Ron Lassen made a pair of free throws on the other end to push the lead back up to four with eight seconds remaining.

Tobey Newson drained a 3pointer to close within one in the final seconds.

handiFLOS got a big boost from Brad Lohaus during its secondhalf run. Lohaus and Kingsbury were trading threes throughout the mid-half stretch.

"Kingsbury is such a streaky shooter, he'd get them up 10 points, then we'd figure out we had to guard him," Lohaus said.

Associated Press

ATLANTA - John Smoltz set a franchise record with his 14th straight victory, a two-hitter in a 5-1 victory Wednesday over the San Diego Padres that gave the Atlanta Braves a sweep of the three-game series.

He retired the first 19 Padres, losing his bid for a prefect game when Chris Gomez doubled with one out in the seventh inning.

Smoltz (14-1) lost to San Francisco in his first start of the year April 4, but not since. He is the first National Leaguer to win 14 in a row since Dwight Gooden did it in 1985 with the New York Mets.

Smoltz and Chipper Jones, who had a homer while extending his hitting streak to a career-high 11 games, had two RBIs apiece for the Braves. Cardinals 3, Phillies 2

Westerberg to lure listeners tonight

The Daily Iowan

At 37, Paul Westerberg is one alterna-rock dinosaur who doesn't need a replacement.

The Minneapolis-based Wester-berg, formerly the lead singer of the ground-breaking Replacements, will perform his newfound pop tunes tonight at the Union Bar, 121 E. College St. Guitar-pop band Ther-madore, of Los Angeles, will open the show at 7:30 p.m.

"There's a lot of people who are really excited about this concert." said Jeff Semones, promoter for the Union Bar. "There are fanatical Westerberg fans - like with The Grateful Dead. They're a smaller group, but just as fanatical." Although Westerberg may have a small fan base, devoted listeners are traveling long distances for the tonight's concert, Semones said.

*People are coming from all over "Minneapolis, both of the Dakotas, Illinois, Missouri," he said. "It's wild. I haven't seen this before."

Semones, a Replacements junkie, said he has been trying to get Westerberg to play the venue since the bar first opened in 1993.
