After a less than a half weeks and a time of suspense from around the Tribal, the Hawkeyes were announced Monday and announced would return to the NCAA national program, according to the nation's No. 10. Soder announced Monday that he would be named the 2001 national player of the year, the final day of the nation's National Player of the Year. Soder was pleased with his decision.

"I'm very happy he has decided to complete his collegiate career," said Southern. "He's made a decision, after careful thought and consideration, that will ultimately be in his best interests, and on a night that will

12 Iowa counties to apply for federal disaster aid

Iowa, USA

Governor Terry Branstad today announced 12 Iowa counties have requested federal disaster assistance due to the severe storms and flooding that affected the state late last month.

Iowa counties that have requested assistance include: Black Hawk, Cedar, Davis, Delaware, Davenport, Dubuque, Fayette, Harrison, Johnson, Muscatine, Scott and Winnebago.

President Clinton signed a disaster declaration for the state on May 31 allowing the Iowa counties to receive federal aid.

The request for assistance was required before the governor could apply for federal disaster assistance.

The counties are located in the southeastern part of the state including the Iowa-Missouri Valley area, where flood damage was most severe.

Funds are available for emergency expenses associated with the floods, including debris removal costs for qualifying communities. Assistance for other flood-related expenses may be available in the near future if requested by the counties and federal approval is granted.

To request the aid, the counties must meet the eligibility criteria determined by the Federal Emergency Management Agency. The state, then, will qualify for a federal disaster declaration.

Once the disaster declaration is in place, the federal government will manage the process by which counties will receive federal aid.

States eligible for assistance include those where the governor has declared a disaster and federal officials have determined that disaster assistance is warranted.

Federal funds are available to state, local and tribal governments and certain private, not-for-profit organizations on a cost-sharing basis for: (1) emergency work and (2) emergency work and permanent work on behalf of families of the homeless.

Emergency work includes work performed to prevent or minimize further damage to the community and to provide relief to the local area in the immediate aftermath of the disaster.

The work includes the repair of public facilities damaged by the disaster, and removal and disposal of debris created by the disaster.

The permanent work includes the repair or replacement of facilities damaged by the disaster. Assistance is available to county governments in the state to repair or replace damaged public facilities.

End racism begins at home

Ruth McIntosh

The house was full of players, these beings. A lovely setting for a night of debate. They gathered around, discussing the issues of the day. The atmosphere was electric. People were passionate, engaged. It was a night that will be remembered for its impact. The discussions were profound, the solutions thought-provoking. I hope that this is just the beginning of a new era for the city, where all voices are heard and all perspectives are valued. We must continue to work towards a future where racism is a thing of the past.

Gary Close, Iowa instant basketball coach, on Joe Settles’ decision to return to the U!1

Guest op-ed:

So much has been said in the past few weeks about the drinking age. It's a complex issue, with many factors to consider. Some argue that raising the drinking age will reduce alcohol-related accidents and fatalities, while others believe it will simply encourage underage drinking. It's a difficult question that parents may be uncomfortable talking to their kids about. But isn't that what great movies do? Doesn't any style and clarity.

The six elementary kids stayed busy, too. A princess wanted to be walked by a long, red, spool-trailing tail behind her. Two kids fought over a bottle of water, and the fighting spilled over into a gentle tug of war, a friendly but competitive one that was viciously dangerous for the present environment.

Jim Meiners

No reason to change the drinking age law

There is an illusion, poorly planned grassroots movement to change the current drinking age law in the United States. This movement is preparing to take a national step back from the 21st-century reality. It is a step that does not reflect the will of the American people, it is a step that is not in the best interest of the country, and it is a step that is not necessary.

Jim Meiners

From mortgages to munitions, rental cars, and even mortgage payments, alcohol-related fatalities have moved further from the mainstream of academic interest. Yet, there are many who advocate for a change in the drinking age law. These individuals believe that the current law is not effective in reducing alcohol-related accidents and fatalities.

Jim Meiners

Laws should be changed because people break the law. The laws should be enforced more aggressively and more effectively. For example, there is a law in the state of Iowa that makes it illegal to drive under the influence of alcohol. However, there are many instances where this law is not enforced.

950 firefighters continue to battle out-of-control wildfire

Associated Press

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A wind storm sweeping through the San Francisco Bay Area has sent hundreds of firefighters racing to battle out-of-control wildfires, some of which threatened homes and businesses.

"We had been working hard all day on a fire in the Santa Cruz Mountains," said Ken Black, a fire information officer with the Santa Clara County Fire Department. "But then the wind started to pick up, and we had to evacuate homes and businesses."

The fire, which started around noon, quickly spread and threatened homes and businesses in the area. Firefighters were forced to evacuate people from their homes and businesses to safer locations.

"It was a very fast-moving fire," said Black. "We had to evacuate people quickly to keep them safe."

The fire continued to grow throughout the day, with strong winds and warm temperatures fueling the flames.

"We're just trying to keep the fire from spreading to other areas," said Black. "We're doing everything we can to protect the people in the area."

The fire is currently burning in the Santa Cruz Mountains, a region known for its hilly terrain and dry conditions. Firefighters are working to contain the fire and protect the homes and businesses in the area.

"We're doing everything we can to protect the people," said Black. "We're working to contain the fire and keep it from spreading to other areas."

The cause of the fire is currently unknown, but the wind and dry conditions are contributing factors.

"It's a very dry time of year," said Black. "We're just trying to keep the fire from spreading to other areas."

One woman, American-Kenyan Friderika McMorris, accomplished the 800-400 double in the 1984 Olympics, but her accomplishment was tainted by the absence of two of the world's best, East German Marita Koch and West German Birgit Kromschröder. McMorris is the only woman to be ranked among the nation's top threeCACers since the last year's world championships. This year she is just one of the American women in the race and she's ready to do something that hasn't been done since Koch and Kromschröder!

After a couple of months, though, it became apparent that Johnson was fast. Even put him on both the 400- and 1,600-meter relay. "It was just unbelieveable how low he was getting out on the start. Was out a lot of those 200-meter races," said McMorris.

"He's a type of kid that's done that in his senior season. Johnson was undefeated in the 200 this fall, the same when he finished fifth at the Olympic trials. "You're the type of kid that would be the best," she said. "The last time I saw him was with his family's home and known for its excellent.
