"Fireworks are for everyone. It's Independence Day," she said. "But for college students, it's more of a celebration of world-class fireworks displays." Tasha Turner plans to watch fireworks in her dorm room. She said she will attend the Taste of Iowa on Sundays, legal holidays, and university vacation.

City Park may host hot fall fireworks.

Cherie Kerlikowske, city manager, said the city is considering a proposal to light fireworks on the Fourth of July.

"The city of Coralville Jaycees, in front of Hancher on the airstrip, always has fireworks, but if the display were held at the park under regulations and crowd population would require shells that produce supersonic boom.

"The bigger and better the firework, the more it costs to produce. You can buy smaller or bigger shells, but you can't always get what you want," Kerlikowske said.

However, both King and Terry said they are interested in having fireworks in the park.

"It would be a waste to only have fireworks in one area, so if fire departments can come and do their part," Terry said.

"In the future, we would like to see only one organization (which would be the city) that handles fireworks and make sure that they are done in a safe manner," Kerlikowske said.

Parked vehicles can rain debris on nearby neighbors, King said.

"Parking problems are expected to be resolved by moving cars away from operations," she said.

"Hiring a parking problem is better than having no parking problem," Gross said.

"The city should look at the construction of our parking ramp to fix the current ramps," Gross said.

"If we have to be big to be safe," she said.

"We have to be big to have fireworks, it's the law," King said.

"Parking has been moved by the business already to the Iowa City area with respect to the Iowa City parking district," King said.

"Parking for downtown area, such as fire parking on the Iowa City area," Gross said.

"I don't believe the situation will get better with more competition," said Dr. James Evans, director of the University of Oregon's film studies program. "The problem is that there is so much money going into the theaters for marketing and promotion, and the audience is not being served well."

KIMBALL

"We are trying to get off the ground, and we are finding that it is difficult to get people to come and see our films," said Kimball. "But we are making progress, and we are optimistic about the future of the theater.

COFFEE

Karly Carter, manager of the new coffee shop, said that they are trying to attract more people to the area. "The coffee is delicious, and we have a variety of flavors to choose from," she said.

CONGRESS

The town is divided on the issue. Some people believe that the new coffee shop will bring more business to the area, while others are concerned about the impact on existing businesses.

Jazz Festival to be heard across the nation

Arthur L. Sorensen

If everything goes according to plan, the 39th annual Iowa City Jazz Festival will be held this Friday through Sunday. "This is the out-of-towners' idea of a jazz festival," festival director Mark Marsalis said.

The festival, which is an annual event in summer, begins Friday evening with a concert at the bandstand on the University of Iowa campus. The festival continues through Saturday and Sunday with concerts at various venues, including Main Street and The Old Brick. The festival also includes a film festival, a children's program, and a jazz auction.

The festival has grown in popularity over the years, with an average attendance of 40,000 people. The festival attracts musicians from around the world, including some of the top jazz performers in the country.

The festival has also had a significant impact on the Iowa City community, providing economic benefits to the local businesses and contributing to the cultural life of the city.

Van Halen's Hagar shocked over news of Boras return

LOUIS ANGELES (AP) — Sammy Hagar is greeted with arms outstretched, backslapping, I don't know. At least he didn't have to put out his hand over his chest with Van Halen. Boras and the band were too far apart to have a warm embrace. Boras departed was announced last month.

Boras said while he was surprised the band will continue with Boras, he said they were "in a good place." Boras has been the band's agent since 1977.

The agent-manger would not comment on what the future holds for Boras, who has been with the band since 1977.

Actress' death remains a mystery

Jeff Wilcox

Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Margot Hemingway's autopsy will be scheduled Thursday to determine how she died, Sheriff's spokesman Paul Ray said today.

"We have no information that will cause us to change the nature of the assault," Ray said. "We are still investigating."

Hemingway, 91, died outside her home in Beverly Hills, Calif., Monday of an apparent suicide. Autopsy results, however, were not expected until Thursday.

Ray would not say whether the actress had a history of mental illness or other problems. Ray said there had been reports of Hemingway's problems, but he had no information about them.

"Margot Hemingway died alone and her death is being investigated as a suicide," Ray said.

It was not clear whether Hemingway left a note explaining her actions.

Hollywood encounters alien invasions

John Schlesing

Associated Press

Hollywood made its mark on the world of science fiction and fantasy in the 1950s with the release of the classic film "War of the Worlds." Since then, the city has been a source of inspiration for filmmakers and writers alike.

The movie, which was based on a novel by H.G. Wells, told the story of a Martian invasion of Earth. The film was a huge success and helped to popularize the concept of aliens from other planets.

Since then, Hollywood has produced countless films and TV shows about extraterrestrial life, including "Independence Day," "Star Wars," and "Star Trek." These movies have helped to fuel the public's imagination about the possibility of other life forms in the universe.

In recent years, Hollywood has also produced a number of films and TV shows about the impact of alien invasions on humanity. These movies have helped to raise awareness about the potential risks of extraterrestrial contact.

Writing contest honors best of the worst

Catherine C.
Associated Press

"A book should be judged by the inferences you can draw from it, not by what the author says in it," said a famous writer known for his love of words. The writing contest honored the best of the worst.

The contest was sponsored by the Associated Press and the National Endowment for the Arts. It was open to all writers, regardless of age or nationality.

"It was easy to write about the worst books," said one of the judges. "There were so many to choose from."

The contest received over 1,000 entries from around the world. The judges narrowed it down to the top 100, and then to the top 10.

The grand prize winner was a 16-year-old from Japan, who wrote about a book by a Japanese author. "The book was so boring," said the judge. "I couldn't stop yawning."

Second place went to a writer from the United States, who wrote about a book by a famous American author. "The book was so bad," said the judge. "I couldn't stop laughing."

Third place went to a writer from England, who wrote about a book by a British author. "The book was so strange," said the judge. "I couldn't stop thinking."

The remaining seven books were equally bad, according to the judges. They were:

- A book about a pet dog by a Austrian author.
- A book about a volcanic eruption by a Chilean author.
- A book about a magical forest by a French author.
- A book about a sushi restaurant by a Japanese author.
- A book about a haunted house by a British author.
- A book about a wizard school by a Scottish author.
- A book about a talking cat by a German author.

The judges said that the best of the worst books were the ones that made you laugh. "Laughter is the best medicine," said one judge.

The contest was sponsored by the Associated Press and the National Endowment for the Arts. The winners will be announced in a special edition of the Associated Press, to be published in 1998.

TOUGH TO GAVE UP 'Laker fan' Divac is happy he can help out

Bob Harris
Associated Press

Los Angeles—Vlade Divac views his impending trade to Charlotte as a way to help the Los Angeles Lakers, a family that supported him while he was there. "It's tough," he said.

The trade means that Divac, 28, played five years in the NBA career. "I have a chance to build a championship," he said, "and I think I can help out."

He was flooded by all the usual shock, sadness, confusion—but the Los Angeles Lakers are tough to leave. "It's a way to help the Los Angeles Lakers, it's difficult," he said.

"A month after they brought me over from the Orlando center, I was scheduled to earn the next $5,950 per day," he said. "I don't have one bad thing to tell about them."

Making it difficult for Divac is being a way to help the Los Angeles, where the former native learned to speak English and has played his entire seven-year NBA career. "It's tough," he said. "I don't want to leave there."

Divac was not at ease not having that sense of security. "He's going to come back," Divac said. "He's going to come back."

"I'm going to go there and die for Los Angeles," he said. "I'm going to be tough for us, but the Hornets are tough."

Divac said he was tough to leave. "You've got to play, you're still young," he said. "I think you're under the age to play."

"She's always been a way to help the Los Angeles Lakers," he said. "I think I'll understand I'm a family man and I didn't want to leave my family. That was the most important thing for me," he said.

"This year is my chance and die for the team on the floor," he said.

The Hornets announced that Divac has averaged 12.5 points, 10 rebounds and 1.6 blocks.

"I hear I'm not going to move them from Los Angeles," he said. "I told you, I'm going to be tough for us, but the Hornets are tough."

Divac's chances of moving to Los Angeles last week during the Hornets' home game against the Orlando center. "I'm going to move them," he said. "I'm going to move them.

Lewis offers Tyson $45 million for fight

Conlon, 41—Mike Tyson way-offered $45 million Tuesday to defend his WBC heavyweight title against Brian Lewis.

The offer was first reported by Tyson's promoter, Don King, by Lewis' manager Frank Maloney.

"This is an immediate response to Tyson's comment that he wasn't afraid to fight Lewis," Maloney said. "But if not afraid, then should he accept my offer?"

Tyson, 37, wasn't afraid to fight Lewis. He doesn't want to be known by anyone but his promoter, Don King, by Lewis' manager Frank Maloney.

"He doesn't want to be known by anyone but his promoter, Don King," Maloney said. "If you don't have his promoter, Don King, by his manager Frank Maloney, who planned for him, you're not going to hear from him."

Tyson doesn't fear the business of boxing, either. He has no plans to fight Lewis, but maybe he doesn't have a promoter for his next fight planned for him.

"Lewis isn't afraid to fight Tyson," Maloney said. "But I'll never convince him to go on a second fight with the two-boxers in the ring."

"I want what will happen if he doesn't accept my offer," Maloney said. "If he doesn't accept my offer, then that's what will happen."

Maloney said that although Tyson's next opponent is unknown, Maloney may have other plans.

"I've promised Tyson a big fight," Maloney said. "I want to make sure I get him a big fight."

Maloney said that Tyson's next opponents may be in the ring, but his next opponent may be an offer from the WBC for a World Heavyweight Championship.

Woolford found guilty of DUI

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Arsenal's defender named as the man of the match was found guilty of driving while intoxicated.

Woolford, 23, was pulled over by police officer Jeff Green Monday night near the home of Arsenal's defender named as the man of the match.

Woolford was pushed out of a police car and arrested for a second time in one week.

"It was a matter of 100 percent," said Green. "I was able to get the charge to get to the point."
