Culture abounds in Iowa City, and so do cool hairstyles. And if you're looking for some ideas for that next hair appointment, look no further than the Pedestrian Mall.
You'll find every kind of person and personal hairstyle in the Pedestrian Mall, with hairstyles ranging from shaved heads to keep cool for the summer to dreadlocks that just look cool.
"Having these dreadlocks is kind of like having a dead cat stapled to your head," said Iowa City resident Kareem Bunton, who is in the process of trying to decide whether to grow out his dreads or shave them all off. "I want to shave it off, but it took so long to grow and I like the way it looks. Maybe I'll (shave it). It depends on how hot it is."
However, Iowa City resident Nathan Derrick wants to grow his dreads down to his waist.
After that, he said he will shave them off.
"I think I'll save it," he said. "It took a long time to grow out, and I'm not just gonna let it go."
Derrick and Bunton said it took about five years to get their hair to the length and look it is now.
Both of them styled their hair themselves.
"I got tired of having to comb and style it," Bunton said. "So one day, I just stopped combing."
On the opposite spectrum of hairstyles, Iowa City residents Nikk Kame and Creston Lea took the plunge and shaved their heads.

Iowa City resident Kareem Bunton, on why he has dreadlocks

Well, almost.
"There's not much to my hair," said Lea. "I'm going bald. I didn't have much of a choice."
None the less, Lea still likes the look.
Kame, however, was a little more innovative. He shaved his head, but left a bright blue tuft of hair.
"I just wanted a new look," he said. "It keeps me cool and I like it."
Kame said he had a friend do the 'do and is planning to grow his hair out and then dye it black.
Employees at the Iowa Hair Cutting Co., 210 S. Clinton St., said the Caesar cut, which is a closely cropped haircut that resembles the style sported by the emperor of Rome, is popular with males.
However, the shag cut, inspired by the popular sitcom "Friends," is hot for females.
But while there are lots of males willing to quit washing or just shave it all off, the females opt for a more stylish, yet still creative look.
UI junior Christine Ingaldson had her mom chop her hair over the Fourth of July weekend and dye it black.
"It used to be layered and was a little more red," Ingaldson said. "But I wanted to keep cool this summer, and I wanted something different. So I just went for it."
However, Ingaldson is wondering if she actually wants long hair instead of her chopped crop, but said her problem is easily solved.
"I bought a wig just in case," she said. "So I'll just grow it out in the winter and see how it looks then."

Senate set to vote on minimum-wage bill

Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate is poised to vote at last on a minimum-wage increase, but there's no guarantee that will end partisan gridlock over the election-year issue.

Before lawmakers left town for their Fourth of July recess, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott and Minority Leader Tom Daschle broke a long stalemate by agreeing to start debate today and vote Tuesday.

But an amendment crafted by conservative Republicans could leave the Senate still hung up in the partisan hammerlock that held it before Lott, R-Miss., and Daschle, D-S.D., cut their deal.

Meanwhile, the House is planning to take up two spending bills — one financing Congress itself and a second covering the departments of Labor and Health and Human Services. It already has passed seven of the 13 spending bills for fiscal 1997. If time permits, the House also will turn to legislation aimed at discouraging same-sex marriages.

And both chambers will convene in a joint meeting Wednesday to hear an address from newly elected Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

President Clinton has threatened to veto the minimum-wage legislation if the chairperson of the Senate Small Business Committee, Christopher Bond, R-Mo., succeeds in attaching an amendment exempting employees of companies with less than $500,000 in gross receipts.

In a letter to congressional leaders, Clinton said the provision would exempt two-thirds of American businesses and branded it a "poison pill."

"Don't be fooled. It's a cruel shell game," Labor Secretary Robert Reich told the National Press Club. "This is their response to the invisible workers of America: Here's 90 cents — unless you're among the excluded millions."

Republican conservatives dismissed Clinton's threat and said Bond's amendment was needed to shield small businesses from the job-killing effects of what amounts to a 20 percent increase in their labor costs.

"He can call it a poison pill. He can call it anything he wants. My guess is he will sign it if it gets to his desk," said Senate Majority Whip Don Nickles, R-Okla.

The minimum-wage bill, cleared 281-144 by the House on May 23, provides a two-step increase — from $4.25 to $4.75 immediately and then, on July 1, 1997, to $5.15. It's paired with a package of tax breaks, mostly for business.

Bond's amendment also would delay the effective date of the increases by six months — to Jan. 1, 1997 and Jan. 1, 1998. He would double the period during which businesses could pay a training wage to 180 days from 90 days in the House version. And he would permit the training wage, which would be less than the minimum wage, for workers of all ages, not just for workers younger than 20.

Meanwhile, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., plans to offer an amendment that would shorten the training wage period to 30 days and strike a provision in the House

Minimum Wage

Debate for an increase in the minimum wage begins in the Senate today and will be voted on Tuesday.

If passed:
• an increase from $4.25 to $4.75 will be implemented immediately.
• minimum wage will then be raised to $5.15 on July 1, 1997.

The bill cleared the House 281-144 on May 23.

outside the home. The current limit for such couples is $2,250.

After the Senate disposes of the tax-cut and minimum-wage bill, it will turn to separate GOP legislation known as the TEAM Act. It relaxes the rules governing the creation of worker-management groups outside of collective bargaining. Democrats are counting on Clinton to veto it.

Any Senate minimum-wage bill would have to be reconciled with the House version. If the final bill arrives on Clinton's desk in acceptable form, then Democrats would allow the Senate to consider House-passed legislation reducing the gasoline tax by 4.3 cents per gallon through December. GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole proposed the temporary rollback before leaving the Senate to campaign full time.

However, Nickles is threatening to block House and Senate negotiators from meeting on the minimum wage unless a separate standoff is resolved over legislation guaranteeing workers who leave their jobs continued access to health insurance, even if they have health problems.

"Personally, I can't see us going to conference on minimum wage unless we have a conference on the health bill. It's a question of priorities," Nickles said.

Shuttle wraps up longest mission

Marcia Dunn

Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Columbia and its crew glided through an overcast sky Sunday to conclude a 7-million-mile, 17-day journey for medical science, the longest flight for any space shuttle.

Within an hour of touchdown, the four astronauts who had endured medical poking and prodding in orbit were in a clinic undergoing painful muscle biopsies and other follow-up tests.

NASA doctors wanted to examine the men before their bodies readapted to gravity, in hopes of benefiting future space travelers.

"This payload crew that's given so much during the flight is ready to go to work here," commander Terence "Tom" Henricks announced upon landing.

"I'm sure they're just waiting eagerly to go," Mission Control replied.

There was no response. Henricks and his co-pilot had an easier post-landing task: taking part in a ceremony to salute runners carrying the Olympic torch through Kennedy Space Center.

The seven U.S., French and Canadian crew members had carried an Olympic torch in orbit — minus the flame, of course — as well as an Olympic banner. The torch was presented to Olympic organizers after the flight.

Columbia almost didn't land on time.

Less than two hours before touchdown, a critical cooling line jammed, but the astronauts quickly managed to flush ice from the system.

The cooling problem was minor

Associated Press

The Space Shuttle Columbia kicks up smoke after touching down on Kennedy Space Center's Runway 33 Sunday morning, ending the longest mission to date at 17 days.

compared to leaks in Columbia's rocket boosters — "No. 1 on our agenda," said Ronald Dittmore, a shuttle manager.

Hot gas seeped into joints of both solid-fuel rocket boosters during liftoff on June 20, possibly because of a new adhesive.

"We didn't feel threatened. But again, until we understand it, the program doesn't plan on flying again."

Terence Henricks,
Columbia commander

Shuttle managers hope to decide this week whether to replace the boosters on Atlantis and delay its July 31 launch to the Russian space station Mir until mid or late August.

American astronaut Shannon Lucid could remain on Mir an extra month if booster repairs are ordered. She's been living on the station since March.

Henricks said Columbia's crew was notified about the leak as soon as it was discovered last week.

"We didn't feel threatened," he said. "But again, until we understand it, the program doesn't plan on flying again."

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials have not yet discussed the problem with their Russian counterparts, Dittmore said. One option would be to bring Lucid back in a Russian Soyuz spacecraft.

During the shuttle's long descent toward Cape Canaveral, the astronauts broadcast the first live views of what a shuttle landing looks like from the cockpit.

The camera — smaller than a TV remote control — bounced around because of the bumpy ride, pointing at clouds out the window and then swinging to show Henricks and co-pilot Kevin Kregel at the controls.

Thick clouds filled the camera view until Columbia was near the space center. Then the runway popped into sight and Henricks lined up the shuttle with the center line and smoothly brought the craft down at 8:37 a.m.

“ He can call it a poison pill. He can call it anything he wants. My guess is he will sign it if it gets to his desk. ”

Senate Majority Whip Don Nickels, on Clinton signing the minimum-wage bill

Bikers, walkers, and automobiles

■ The variety of modes of traffic and the animosity it sparks between the people reflects a need for bike lanes in Iowa City.

It's amazing anyone in Iowa City is alive at the end of the day. If it isn't Budweiser-filled testosterone junkies in the Pedestrian Mall at 1:30 a.m. or Pentacrest preachers condemning college students to hell, it's the bicyclist-pedestrian-automobile war giving people grief.

"Pedestrian" is placed symbolically in the middle. These are the common enemies of bicyclists and automobile drivers. (The list is also in pecking order: Cars hate pedestrians; pedestrians hate bicyclists. Of course, cars hate bicyclists, too.)

It is partly the pedestrian's fault for running into busy intersections as if the UI Hospitals and Clinics has discovered the cure for mortality. It is partly impatience, as well. No driver likes to wait for someone to cross the street, especially someone going four miles per hour. Impatience gets out of control when drivers ignore the fact that pedestrians have the right of way when the walk signal is lit. Bicyclists are ignorant of the rules they must follow.

Yes, bicyclists need to stop at stop signs and red lights. No, they cannot turn left on red. It is illegal to ride on sidewalks and rude to zip by an unwarned pedestrian at 20 miles per hour.

Bicyclists aren't the ultimate evil, though; they are victims, as well. Automobile drivers cringe when they see bicyclists riding on the side of city streets. Bicyclists cringe when the street is so busy they are forced to ride on sidewalks with slovenly pedestrians.

This city needs bicycle lanes, especially in the downtown and campus area. First of all, the lanes would increase awareness of traffic rules for bicyclists. Given their own lanes, bicyclists would be forced to consider themselves part of traffic. Stop signs and signals could be placed near the lanes for bicycles. Ames, where Iowa State University is located, has lanes like this now and they work well with the campus environment.

Secondly, the bike lanes would decrease the chances of bicyclists being hit by automobiles. It is dangerous for riders when streets are busy and almost impossible to maneuver safely around another bike. Also, bicyclists would no longer need to ride on sidewalks, giving the "pedestrian lane" back to its rightful owners. Having bike lanes may encourage current nonriders to take up riding.

It would also be useful to require bicyclists to learn the traffic rules to which they must adhere. It is not fair to expect compliance when the rules may never have been taught in the first place. Pedestrians could also be taught when they have the right of way and when they do not. These rules could be taught either through the public schools or when bikes are registered. Pamphlets could be handed out when IDs and driver's licenses are renewed.

Iowa City is not New York or Chicago, and it shouldn't have to feel like it is. The streets can be made safer with bike lanes and education. Unless accidental deaths are appealing, why not?

Young Dole supporters

To the Editor:
I am writing this letter in response to your article titled "Poll: Clinton popular among young voters" (DI, July 2). As vice chairperson of the College Republicans on campus, I can safely say that your generalizations made about the club and their stances were not accurate.

No. 1, MANY young people support Bob Dole and DO get enthusiastic about his race for the presidency. June 27-30, over 300 college-aged Republicans from all over the nation met in Washington, D.C., to rally their support for Bob Dole. Your article published more of the inaccurate stereotypes found in most liberal media.

I support Bob Dole because he is a man of character. I believe in less federal control and returning power to the states. I believe in welfare reform. I believe that the government has taken enough of our money, and that taxes should be lowered. Bob Dole stands right along with these sentiments, and that is why I am supporting him. Contrary to the DI's story, Bob Dole is thinking about me and the future of my country.

Since Bill Clinton has been president, I have heard nothing but lies. Bill Clinton said he was for welfare reform, but vetoed the bill coming out of congress. Bill Clinton said he was for cutting taxes, but then votes for a HUGE tax increase to the middle class. Every time I turn on the TV, I hear how successful the Brady law has been under Clinton's presidency, "Over 86,000 people have been registered." But why hasn't Clinton told us that out of 86,000 people, only FOUR have been charged and convicted?

I can assure that the UI College Republicans support Bob Dole, and we will be watching and reading to ensure that no more fallacies are printed about the club and conservatives in general.

Lightfoot's recipe is thin and watery

To the Editor:
Last week, Todd Versteeg endorsed Jim Ross Lightfoot for the U.S. Senate and claimed Lightfoot would bring "common sense" and "a proven record" to that institution (DI, June 27, "Bon voyage, Harkin?"). An inspection of his record in the House of Representatives, however, leads one to the opposite conclusion.

Lightfoot, while taking large amounts of money from the tobacco lobby, has stated that cigarettes are as safe as chicken soup. Rather than keeping our streets a little safer, he has voted against banning assault weapons. At a time when Americans are trying to balance the nation's budget, he has supported giving the Pentagon billions of dollars more than it even had requested from Congress. Do Lightfoot's positions really make sense? Clearly not.

Lightfoot has not written any major, ground-breaking legislation during his tenure in the House. In fact, all he's known for is bouncing checks at the House bank. Sen. Tom Harkin, on the other hand, has written and sponsored widely acclaimed and important pieces of legislation, such as the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Fair Pay Act. Lightfoot's "proven record" leaves much to be desired.

Do Iowans want someone who votes with Newt Gingrich 93 percent of the time (as Lightfoot has done) to represent us in the Senate? If we want a senator with real common sense and a true proven record of fairness and compassion, we should send Tom Harkin back to the Senate this November.

Sign right here, Councilor Kubby

Have you ever been to a Iowa City City Council meeting? If not, you are in the majority of Iowa City residents, which until recently included me. I have to admit I didn't know the first thing about city government. I was pretty sure we had one, but I hadn't the faintest clue who was on it, what they did or even where they did it. Many people will call me an apathetic, uninformed garden slug, but hey, it's not my fault that MTV doesn't cover the meetings.

Still, in theory I have always been a fan of government. There is something noble about the concept of men and women acting together to govern themselves in a civilized, democratic manner. There is no higher privilege than the right of every person to participate in this decision-making process. It's just when you factor in the human equation that things get a little silly.

It had been awhile since I'd had a good laugh, so last week I finally attended a city council meeting. I showed up for the Tuesday meeting at exactly 7 p.m. so I wouldn't miss a single word of our council in action. Five hours later, I emerged from the meeting with a new understanding of city government: It's wordy. However there were a few mildly entertaining moments, and I did manage to get Councilor Karen Kubby's autograph.

The first thing I learned at the meeting is the city is going to raise parking rates on all of the downtown meters. This rate increase will take effect before the masses return to campus in the fall. The councilors reasoned that delaying the increase until after the students returned would cause bad feelings. Nice thought, but the bad feelings are directed more at the fact that there hasn't been an open parking space on campus since Iowa's last Rose Bowl appearance.

The most interesting point of business had to do with the Iowa City Historic Preservation Commission's nomination of 37 local properties as historic landmarks. If the council votes to accept these nominations, the buildings would be protected from destruction or inappropriate alteration by the property owners.

Commission Chairperson Douglas Russell told me all of the buildings are historically significant, and deserve to be here 100 years from now for future residents to enjoy, which made sense to me. Apparently there is only one owner of the 37 who objects to his building being designated as a landmark, local developer Bruce Glasgow.

When I called Glasgow to get his side of the story, he told me this: "This is just a little bit more bureaucracy by the city, and I'm against it. Who cares what I do to my own building?"

Hmm ... it looks like I've managed to stumble onto a real debate at the city council meeting. The rights of property owners vs. the authority of the city. This is interesting stuff.

Bruce Glasgow has a point. He bought the building and now owns it; it is his property. Property owners have generally had the right to do what they wished with their buildings. This is a cornerstone of our economic system, and without it, well, we wouldn't have much of an economic system. But this might be a special case.

Kubby pointed out at the meeting that even though these buildings are privately owned, they have public effects. She is right. Iowa City is old and historic, and there is great public interest in preserving its heritage. Glasgow knew this when he bought the building. He also knows the city council does have the power, with a majority vote, to protect his building over his objection. He knows it, but he doesn't seem to like it.

What we need is a way to balance the interests of everyone. The public should have the right to view 200-year-old landmarks without neon signs on them, and the owners should be able to change a light bulb in their own building without a committee vote. A warning label on potential landmarks might work, something like: BUYER BEWARE - THIS BUILDING IS SUBJECT TO SPONTANEOUS LEAKS, CREAKS AND REZONING BY THE CITY COUNCIL.

The city council has quite a decision to make, and it's hard to predict how they will vote. If you're at all interested in the outcome, you should attend the next city council meeting. Admission is cheap, and if you arrive early you can get a seat right in front of Karen Kubby. Just make sure to bring plenty of change for the parking meters.

Smooth talkers: America's most popular political party

There is nothing quite like an election year in America.

Incumbent President Bill Clinton is not enjoying the best of times. He has prosecutors on his tail over Whitewater, a sexual harassment lawsuit waiting in the Supreme Court's wings and a wife who can't stop making all the wrong kinds of news.

Democrats have a hard time knowing how to respond. They are beginning to detect an unsavory aroma in the vicinity of their president, but are so thrilled to have taken the Oval Office back that nose plugs may be an attractive coping mechanism to get them through to Election Day.

Republicans, meanwhile, are doing their best to rally around Bob Dole. It would help if Dole could absorb even a bit of the energy of those rallying around him, but he seems to have a nonstick surface in this regard. Dole is also gathering troubles of his own. In the past week, he has undergone a barrage of flak over comments he made in an interview with Katie Couric. He came out of the encounter with no control over the spin and now stands accused of calling C. Everett Koop a flake and being mean to Couric. Koop may be medicine's Captain Kangaroo, but he's also widely admired. And to pick on Katie Couric is to commit public relations suicide. She's the Doris Day of the news media, and a man of Dole's age should have thoroughly grasped the implications of that.

What astounds me, an unabashed liberal, is that I now regard Dole with more sympathy than Clinton.

These are the two princes between whom America must choose.

Kim Painter

It is tempting for Democrats to try to embrace Clinton as a moderate-to-conservative man of his times; tempting for them to stand tall, face the facts and acknowledge the world has grown more conservative. But they are pressed harder against the wall with each damning article and accusation. It is becoming clear that Clinton is in fact what Republicans call him: a man without a moral center. Democrats — trying to decide if this is as bad as being a Tootsie Pop without the chewy chocolate center — seem to be having trouble.

What astounds me, an unabashed liberal, is that I now regard Dole with more sympathy than Clinton. Dole is feckless — an ineffective, bumbling sort of fellow trying to Cleopatra his way to the White House. He is clearly a decent man. There is no Dole bimbo factor. There are no theories afoot that Dole ran drugs out of small airports in Kansas. As far as we know, Dole's wife has never engaged Eleanor Roosevelt in conversation, headed the tinkering of a political associate's belongings in the wake of his suicide or played the cattle futures like a craps table in Las Vegas. Even skeptics are beginning to wonder if Dole might not be a moral miracle man, with close to 40 years in the Senate and no indictment in the offing.

Clinton is sleazy beyond a doubt. It has been said here before, but the worst thing that can be said about the Clintons is they would have been perfectly at home in the moral universe of the Reagan and Bush administrations. In fact, Clinton is probably going to be remembered as the liberal Ronald Reagan. He looks good and speaks beautifully, but somehow can't bring himself to do the right thing or surround himself with decent people.

Clinton and Reagan each have ample presidential demeanor. They make audiences feel better. They look like permanence, legacy, history in the making. The fact is, if Clinton had been president during the years Abraham Lincoln was in office, there'd have been a compromise clause written into the Emancipation Proclamation (sort of a don't ask, don't tell thing).

The smooth-talking charmer type of president may be a reflection of government America deserves. It is certainly the government we consistently vote into office. Especially at the presidential level, we care more about the surface of the politician than we do about his substance. In our rush toward reassurance and presidential demeanor, we deny the reality of questionable moral standards in our political choices.

America's ability to overlook the truth about Reagan is now merely fascinating history. Overlooking the truth about Clinton is a problem today. How we respond to the candidates in this election will dictate what the coming years' history will be. If you're liberal, this means you'll probably vote for Clinton. If you're conservative, it means you'll probably vote for Dole. In both cases, it means you won't be paying very much attention to the truth, and that's a long-term political ailment only American citizens can cure.

Meanwhile, back on the Green Mile...

The latest installment of Stephen King's "The Green Mile" deepens the mystery of the residents of Cold Mountain Penitentiary.

Part four, "The Bad Death of Eduard Delacroix," attempts to weave the characters' lives tighter together and connect the past to the present. King draws subtle (and effective) parallels between Cold Mountain and Georgia Pines, the nursing home where narrator Paul Edgecombe now resides. The comparisons are eerie and sad, as both places offer a last stop before death.

Cruelty is the major theme of this installment. King gives us his version of "Dead Man Walking" with his own particular brand of ghoulishness. However, the main crux of this piece is King's exploration of the nature of cruelty and compassion. It raises the question: Who is the worse criminal, the man behind bars or the man who sends him to the end with grim rapture? It is a fascinating theme King explores well, if a bit clumsily.

BOOK REVIEW

Delacroix" doesn't advance the plot a whole lot, but it makes up for that with fine character study. King is always good at developing his characters and making them real (if at times a bit over the top). His settings, though, are another story.

The night Delacroix meets his judgment is a dark, stormy one, right out of B movies and dime novels. This seems oddly apropos, because that is the feel King is looking for with his serial novel. In that case, all the details of the storm and the prison are effective. Yet, taken as a whole (if found in a regular novel), the reader might broach a snicker. And that is the exact opposite of the emotion King is trying to create.

What helps the whole scene gel are the characters. Readers who have kept up with the story have watched them evolve and have gotten to know new facets of their personalities or seen previous assumptions born out. If the reader didn't, in fact, sympathize with Delacroix or Edgecombe, the theatrics would be lost on the scene. And King reinforces the reader's sympathies by focusing on an incident where a guard shows cruelty to Delacroix.

Here, King's trademark use of rich detail helps. The fine points draw a complete profile of Delacroix so the reader feels for the him.

Yet the detail can also be a hindrance. The whole novel is told from the point of view of prison guard Edgecombe from his home at Georgia Pines. The time there is the present, where Edgecombe is an old man, recounting events from 1932.

News brief

'Independence Day' breaks 5-day film record

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Independence Day" grossed $83.5 million over the July Fourth holiday weekend for the best five-day opening in film history, industry sources estimated Sunday.

Buoyed by heavy media coverage and strong word of mouth, the film out-muscled Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Eraser" and other summer blockbusters and appeared to be on track to reach the $100 million mark with record speed.

The weekend's other debut was "Phenomenon," starring John Travolta as a man who suddenly gains superintelligence and psychic power. It opened in third place with a five-day gross of $25 million. Eddie Murphy's "The Nutty Professor" was second with $26.5 million over five days.

"Independence Day" was expected to gross $49 million from Friday through Sunday and $83.5 million for the period from its Wednesday debut.

The previous five-day mark was set by 1991's "Terminator 2: Judgment Day," which sold $52.3 million worth of tickets. The three-day record is held by last year's "Batman Forever," which grossed $52.8 million.

Fox planned its marketing campaign with all the shrewdness of an invasion. Last Christmas, long before the movie's final cut was ready, trailers showed spaceships casting eclipse-like shadows over Washington and blowing up the White House.

A $1 million Super Bowl commercial warned: "Enjoy the Super Bowl ... It may be your last."

The studio also courted the press — an increasingly vital form of free publicity — with early peeks at some scenes and tongue-in-cheek gifts such as a dart board with the Earth in the bull's eye.

The movie appeared on the covers of Time and Newsweek last week.

Here are the preliminary figures of the top 10 movies, based on industry estimates of ticket sales for Wednesday through Sunday:

1. "Independence Day," 20th Century Fox, $83.5 million.
2. "The Nutty Professor," Universal, $26.5 million.
3. "Phenomenon," Disney, $25 million.
4. "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," Disney, $14 million.
5. "Eraser," Warner Bros., $13.4 million.
6. "The Rock," Disney, $8.6 million.
7. "Striptease," Columbia, $7.5 million.
8. "Twister," Warner Bros., $4.4 million.
9. "Mission: Impossible," Paramount, $3.6 million.
10. "The Cable Guy," Columbia, $2.7 million.

"People feel the need to see 'Independence Day' right away, which I don't understand, because it's not like a concert where there is only one performance, but multiple shows."

Sherak said "ID4" is a crowd pleaser because it is so entertaining.

"They come and stand in line because you've touched a nerve," he said. "Something happens to all of us ... who get involved in the carnival atmosphere of what popcorn movies are. This is a movie that P.T. Barnum would have approved of."

Englert employee Leah Young said for every showing of "ID4," the theater refunds five to 10 tickets because of the expected long wait and undesirable seats.

K.M. Hubbard, an Iowa City resident who saw the film twice, said "ID4" was worth the long wait — both times.

"I've seen all the blockbusters so far this summer," Hubbard said. "I've been anticipating this movie. I liked this more than 'Twister' and 'Mission: Impossible.'"

Clinton offers more testimony

Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton sat before video cameras again Sunday for another Whitewater trial, this time testifying in the case of two Arkansas bankers accused of making political contributions with bank funds.

After attending morning church services with daughter Chelsea, the president returned to the White House for two hours and 20 minutes of closed-door questioning by attorneys for Herb Branscum Jr. and Robert Hill and cross-examination by prosecutors.

Afterward, the White House issued a statement reiterating that Clinton is not the first president to testify in a criminal trial and citing U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright's order that officials not discuss Clinton's deposition until after it is shown in court.

"The president has consistently stated that he will provide the court with whatever information he can offer, and today's deposition fulfills that promise," the statement said.

Branscum and Hill are accused of reimbursing themselves for contributions to political candidates — including Clinton in 1990 when he ran for governor and in 1991 when he considered seeking the presidency — with funds from their Perryville, Ark., bank.

While Clinton is not charged with wrongdoing, the White House hoped Sunday to minimize political damage from his second testimony before a federal judge in 10 weeks.

In April, the president testified for just over four hours in the Whitewater trial of Gov. Jim Guy Tucker and James and Susan McDougal, all of whom were convicted.

The president's critics said

Sunday the sight of Clinton testifying again over Whitewater sends a message to the nation that he isn't being honest about his involvement.

"When's Bill Clinton going to stand up before the American people and tell them the truth?" Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, chairperson of the House Republican Conference, said on CNN's "Late Edition." "The public needs to be able to trust the president."

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., member of the Senate Judiciary Committee and member of the now-defunct Senate Whitewater Committee, defended Clinton, telling CNN the president did not abuse his power of office — unlike the "direct presidential involvement in the abuse of power" of the Watergate scandal during the Nixon administration.

"There is nothing to suggest that either Bill Clinton or Hillary Clinton has done anything wrong," Simon said.

MOTHER, SON KILLED

Investigators seek clues in fatal Delta crash

Bill Kaczor
Associated Press

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Shattered pieces of jet engine were gathered off an airport runway Sunday, remnants of shrapnel that shredded part of an airliner's fuselage and devastated a vacationing family.

Investigators had yet to determine why the left engine on a Delta Air Lines jet blew apart during takeoff, whether there was some internal problem or whether it sucked in a foreign object such as a bird, said George Black, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board.

Metal pieces flying from the engine, mounted on the side of the fuselage near the tail, ripped a gash about a foot wide and more than 4 feet long across the side of the plane, killing Anita Saxton, 39, and her son Nolan, 12, and injuring two of her other children.

Saxton, of Scottville, Mich., had been vacationing with three of her five children in the Pensacola area.

The two injured children were discharged from Sacred Heart Hospital on Sunday and joined by their father, Randy Saxton, who flew to Pensacola late Saturday.

Although dazed and burned, 15-year-old Derrick Saxton carried his sister, 9-year-old Spencer, from the plane after the pilot made an emergency stop on the runway, said their grandfather, William Saxton. Spencer had leg and facial injuries.

"Then he wanted to go back inside to get his mother and brother," said William Saxton, who said he spoke with Derrick by telephone soon after the accident from his home at Pentwater, Mich. "He seems all right now, as much as he can be after this."

Five of the other 142 passengers aboard the jetliner also were injured, but only one remained hospitalized Sunday, listed in critical condition after surgery for a broken leg. None of the five crew members were hurt.

Delta officials said Sunday there was no connection between the accident and deep cost-cutting that has pruned about 12,000 jobs from the Atlanta-based carrier since 1994.

Delta has had four engine-disabling incidents since April, according to NTSB records, The Tampa Tribune reported Sunday. No one was hurt in any of those cases. Two of them involved MD-88 airliners, the same model involved in Saturday's accident.

Department, Iowa City Fire Department and the state fire marshal's office will determine a cause within the next two weeks, Stimmel said.

Neighbors said the resident of the trailer has three children who were not in the trailer at the time of the fire. They said the children were with a woman who was at the trailer early Saturday morning when a call to police was made in response to a domestic dispute.

Teresa LaTulippe said a police officer who arrived early on the scene moved all of the residents out of their homes and to the end of the street, away from the trailer. However, Linn said there was no formal evacuation of the neighboring trailers.

"If an evacuation was made, it was done voluntarily on the part of the occupants," Linn said.

Stimmel said no other occupants of the trailer were involved in the fire.

LaTulippe said her children's trampoline and bicycles were destroyed in the fire. She also said her windows, her storage barn and much of her personal property contained in the trailer suffered smoke and fire damage.

She also said her children did not escape the fire unscathed. "They haven't been able to keep food down," LaTulippe said. "And forget sleeping. I'm sorry it happened, but I've got so much to deal with now."

The fire department reports the trailer involved in the fire is a total loss and estimates damages at between $25,000 and $30,000.

The Iowa City Fire Department said the official release of the victim's name will be made by Wednesday. There were no injuries to any other Hilltop residents.

CUTS

tals have identified which workers will lose their jobs. In Des Moines, the 25 layoffs would include six nurses, six nursing assistants and 13 others, spokesperson Dick Hodges said. Thirty-five other positions that are now vacant also will be eliminated, he said.

The exact wording and the possible consequences of the plan are unclear to most hospital officials and employees.

"Right now, you can hear any rumor you want at the hospital," VA administrative officer Brandon

Ray said. "Some people say the cuts are not going to happen; others think we will be shut down entirely."

"You never know if they're going to approve the plan, but even if they approve it, you don't know if everything in it will happen that way," he said.

Which people are targeted for layoff has not been announced yet, but the hospital has set up various services for people who think they may be facing a job loss, Ray said.

"The hospital has counseling places that people can go to," he said. "There have been phone numbers passed out for employees to call if they need help finding a new job and there are special workshops held that explain how the hospital calculates who gets laid off.

"There are many factors to who gets laid off," Ray said. "People try to figure out which function they think they can do without and then things such as seniority may come in."

Regardless of what the cuts may look like, Ray said he hopes the quality of care at the VA hospital will not suffer.

"We will just have to do our best to help one another out so that the layoffs don't show," he said. "Also, I would think that we will be operating like other hospitals have for the past 10-15 years by not admitting as many people as inpatients as we have, and converting more to outpatient care."

More than 2,700 people work at Iowa's three veterans hospitals, with about 1,200 people employed at Iowa City's federally owned and operated Veterans Affairs Medical Center.

— The Associated Press contributed to this story.

learning that we provide." Coleman also faced some opposition concerning the UIHC restructuring project, which has eliminated almost 250 jobs.

"Dealing with hospital issues has been a real challenge," Coleman said. "Changes are being made, and oftentimes change is a tough thing to accept, but I have confidence in our health-care plans."

Coleman said her next big plan will involve renovations in the health sciences.

"We need better teaching and research facilities," she said. "Over the next five years, we will work on a phased project that will involve the demolition of the Steindler Building and the addition of a new center for teaching and research."

A plan to renovate the Engineering Building is also in the works.

"We want to try to make the whole building student-centered," she said. "We plan to add a new wing and renovate within the existing structure to add more labs by faculty offices and classrooms."

Fred Mims, UI associate men's athletic director, said Coleman has also been very supportive of the athletic department.

"Her tenure began in Texas with the Sun Bowl," Mims said. "She got a great look right away at the kind of athletic program we have and the kind of support we get throughout the state. She has been very clear and firm with her expectations and her value of athletics, and we're hopeful she will continue to be as receptive in the future."

City leaders have been equally impressed with the Coleman's ability to communicate and relate not only to the UI, but to the Iowa City community as a whole.

"Since she took office it has been a lot better," Iowa City Councilor Dean Thornberry said. "There has been a lot of open communication, and she has worked with the council very well."

Coleman is planning to improve student facilities across campus, with renovations already under way on Schaeffer Hall. She also plans to renovate and expand the Engineering Building, the Art Building and the surrounding art campus, as well as Seashore Hall.

Despite the challenges she has faced since she took over as UI president, Coleman is happy with the university and its people.

"I'm very comfortable here, and I'm very happy with my decision to come to the UI; it feels very much like home."

AIDS

fake "AIDS profiteer" money into the air.

According to U.N. figures, 21 million people are living with HIV, 90 percent of them in developing countries. Every day, 8,500 more people — including 1,000 children — become infected.

"What keeps me awake at night," said Piot, "is the growing AIDS care gap — especially between the developed and developing world."

India alone now has 3 million people infected with HIV, more than any other country in the world, he noted.

Unlike in the United States and other industrialized nations, where AIDS spreads mostly through homosexual sex and dirty needles, AIDS in poorer countries is largely a heterosexual disease.

Piot, however, said the first hints have appeared showing poorer countries can stem the spread of the disease through diligent condom education campaigns. He noted the number of new HIV infections has fallen in both Uganda and Thailand, which have serious HIV epidemics.

Despite what he called "solid grounds for hope," Piot said the AIDS "epidemic remains huge, unstable and mostly invisible."

U.S. STUDENTS

burg Address. The poll raised many questions about the quality of students' education today and the way they are taught.

However Jeffrey Cox, UI history professor and head of the history department, believes the poll is old news compared to the history of students' education.

"Students know now as much as they did 100 years ago," Cox said. "I can't tell whether or not their history knowledge has actually decreased significantly, but I do know those complaints are ancient."

Twenty questions were posed to graduating seniors selected at random from randomly chosen colleges and universities. The poll also found:

• 84 percent did not know Harry Truman was president when the Korean War began.

• Fewer than 25 percent could cite Italy and Japan as Germany's two principal allies in World War II.

• 71 percent could not name Martin Luther as the founder of Protestantism.

Steven Yussen, dean of the UI College of Education, said parts of the poll don't pose valid questions.

"It's irritating to see surveys like this presented without any kind of valid context that basically have the intent to disparage what kids know," Yussen said.

"The survey is sensationalizing something that hasn't been digested yet," he said. "It's an unreflective, noncritical look at data that is now getting tossed out to the public, and it does a lot of damage to public support and confidence in education."

UI history Professor Shelton Stromquist said he was skeptical of such surveys because the content being discussed is so broad. He said the way students interpret information should be more focused on what facts they know.

"It's probably the case that many students aren't aware of fundamental facts that this survey seems to be based on," Stromquist said. "But I don't think students know any less than they did fourteen years ago when I started teaching."

Cox said the amount of teaching and teaching strategies used in history classrooms have significantly changed over the years.

"History is being taught less and less," Cox said. "It's being merged with social studies now, or offered as an optional class, and as a result students simply aren't being taught."

Cox and Yussen agreed it's important that both the professor and the student must be knowledgeable as well as enthused about what they're teaching or learning and realize the importance of history.

"You have to convey that what you are studying is important," Cox said. "But the difficulty is to convey the personal reality of such abstract concepts like slavery or nationalism. You have to realize the importance of these subjects and not just make them a blur."

Cox also said teachers' expectations of their students may be unreasonable when compared to students' variety of knowledge in other areas. However, the little students do know about their history may hurt them in the future.

"They'll be less able to participate in public or political debate," Cox said. "And they won't notice the literary illusion to reading, which inevitably leads back to public discussion."

"If you don't understand where you come from and what the events are that have led up to your modern life, you'll have a hard time understanding where you're going," Yussen said.

son said. "Then I got flustered and, boom, three sets later I was gone. Maybe if she had run back, I would have had a little better luck."

The match, between two players who had lost in the opening round the past two years, didn't equal that first flourish of excitement.

Though Krajicek played well and Washington tried hard, there were too many starts and stops for either of them to get into the flow and produce the kind of majestic tennis that occasionally has been seen in men's finals.

The match lasted 1 hour, 33 minutes of playing time, but took 4 hours to complete because of all the rain.

Krajicek, at 6-foot-5 the tallest Wimbledon champion in 50 years, took advantage of his imposing height and recently beefed-up body to dominate Washington from the net and the baseline. Krajicek didn't reach the level he showed in beating three-time defending champion Pete Sampras in the quarterfinals and 1991 champion Michael Stich in the fourth round.

On this day, it wasn't necessary.

It was the first Wimbledon final between two unseeded players, and Krajicek, 24, became the only unseeded champion beside Boris Becker in 1985. The business of being unseeded, though, deserves an asterisk. Krajicek came into the tournament ranked No. 13, and got pushed out of the seedings because of his past failures here.

"I think next year I might get a

Stockton hangs on to win U.S. Senior Open

BEACHWOOD, Ohio (AP) — Hale Irwin collected birdies while Dave Stockton piled up pars, and in the end Irwin blinked.

Stockton pieced together 17 straight pars while Irwin was scratching out seven birdies, but an eight-shot headstart was too much to overcome as Stockton won the U.S. Senior Open Sunday by two strokes.

Stockton, a winner of two PGA Championships, began the day with a seven-stroke lead over Bob Charles and was ahead of four other players, including Irwin, by eight shots.

Marlins fire Lachemann, replace him with Rojas

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rene Lachemann, the only manager the expansion Florida Marlins have ever had, was fired Sunday.

Lachemann, 51, became the first major league manager to be fired this season. Third-base coach Cookie Rojas, manager of the California Angels in 1988, was chosen by general manager Dave Dombrowski as the interim skipper.

Entering Sunday's game against the Philadelphia Phillies, the Marlins had lost seven in a row and their last nine on the road.

Man accuses Barkley of hitting him at Cleveland bar

CLEVELAND (AP) — Charles Barkley has been accused of punching a man in the nose during a late-night bar brawl. Job Tyler, 23, of Spencerport, N.Y., filed a complaint early Sunday accusing Barkley of assault. Barkley, the Phoenix Suns star who was in town for the Dream Team's exhibition game against Brazil, in turn filed a report accusing Tyler of using "bodily force" against him.

Police reports obtained by WEWS-TV in Cleveland indicated that the fight took place at 1:30 a.m.

No criminal charges were filed. Tyler was scheduled to give a statement to Cleveland police on Monday.

Asked about the incident after the Dream Team's 109-68 victory over Brazil on Sunday, Barkley said, "It's none of your ... business. No disrespect, but it's my life, isn't it?"

Tyler said he and a friend introduced themselves to Barkley, fellow Dream Teamer Reggie Miller and a woman who was with the players at The Basement, a dance club in a part of town known as "The Flats." Tyler said his friend began talking with the woman.

Tyler said Barkley asked what they were talking about and then told Tyler and his friend they had to leave.

"He said it like three times, 'You got to leave,'" Tyler said. "I said, 'No, I'm not leaving the bar.' Then I said, 'How about you leave the bar?' As soon as I said that, he punched me in the nose."

Tyler said he and Barkley both landed a few punches.

"When the fight was getting broken up, he was still jumping over the bouncer and still throwing punches," Tyler said. "He was going nuts. He was just crazy."

Wimbledon full of surprises

Unseeded Krajicek captures first major

Steve Wilstein
Associated Press
WIMBLEDON, England — Known until now only infamously at Wimbledon for a chauvinistic wisecrack, Richard Krajicek achieved a more lasting and significant fame Sunday on Centre Court when he seized his first Grand Slam title.

The first Dutch player to capture a major championship, and the second unseeded player ever to win Wimbledon, Krajicek dealt out 14 aces, punishing overheads and sizzling passing shots to beat American MaliVai Washington 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

A bizarre Wimbledon of unthinkable upsets, freak injuries and countless rain delays could hardly have let the final Sunday pass without more wackiness — starting with the first streaker on Centre Court and continuing with showers that halted play three times.

No sooner had the players picked up their rackets to pose for photographers at the net than a topless 23-year-old blond woman leaped from the stands, raced down the side of the court and, in front of the Royal Box, flipped up her only garment, a tiny white apron.

"The Duke of Kent was laughing like mad," said Peter Goord, a Centre Court spectator. "She then ran into the policeman's arms. There was no way she was trying to get away."

Both players broke into laughter, as did most of the 14,000 fans, at the stunt by the woman who had been working at Wimbledon with the catering service.

"I was a little bit tight, and then she comes out," Krajicek said. "At least for me, it put a smile on my face. In a way, it was good. It broke the tension a little bit."

Walking back to the baseline, Washington lifted his tennis shirt to bare his own chest and received an ovation.

"She lifted (her apron) up and she was smiling at me," Washington said.

Graf overcame obstacles to win 100th career title

Joseph White

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Steffi Graf amazes even herself.

Winning a seventh Wimbledon title with a suspect knee, a bad cold, little practice and her father languishing in jail was something she never expected.

"It's just incredible to me how the last few years have been going on, and how I've always been able to rise to the occasion," Graf said after her 6-3, 7-5 victory Saturday over Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

"Knowing the situation I was in two weeks ago physically, it just seems amazing to me to really come through like that. I don't know how I do it. I just keep on doing it."

Graf wasn't anywhere close to her best this Wimbledon. There were times she couldn't get her serve in, when her forehand became erratic. She appeared to get a break when darkness halted her semifinal match against Kimiko Date after the momentum had shifted.

The problems continued in the final. Sanchez Vicario staged a valiant rally from 0-4 down to tie the second set at 5-5 in the final.

Each time, however, Graf knew what she needed to do to win, and stepped up her game enough to do so. When Sanchez Vicario made her comeback, everyone else began contemplating a repeat of last year's three-set classic. Not Graf.

Graf spent the entire fortnight repeating that records meant nothing to her, but the numerical magnitude of this title was too great for it not to sink in. Twenty Grand Slams. One hundred career titles.

"It didn't catch me until I went to the locker room, about the 100th title," Graf said. "Winning seven Wimbledon, it is something I've never imagined I would be able to do, and be capable of doing. You can't really put it into words."

Hawkeye tight end faces three charges

Associated Press

SIOUX CITY, Iowa — Iowa football player Zeron Flemister, expected to be a top contender for the starting tight end spot this fall, was charged with drunk driving, eluding police and reckless driving, police said Friday.

According to Sioux City police: Flemister, 19, was at a party Thursday night at a trailer park. After an argument, he got into a car and drove away. Police saw him driving recklessly in the trailer park. He got out of the car, ran to a nearby truck stop, where police found him under a semitrailer.

Flemister, a 1995 graduate of Sioux City West, redshirted his freshman year at Iowa.

Chris Knipper came out of the spring as a top tight end, but Iowa head coach Hayden Fry said he would get "tremendous competition" from Flemister.

Flemister had been released from police custody by Friday.

Dream Team III bounced back and crushed Brazil, 109-68, Sunday afternoon in Cleveland.

handiFLOS pulls out late victory

Mike Triplett

The Daily Iowan

Southern Illinois' Monte Jenkins won't be around for the Prime Time League playoffs, but handiFLOS is getting some use out of him for the time being.

Jenkins scored 12 of his game-high 39 points during an 18-8 run that brought handiFLOS from behind for a 110-104 victory over UI Community Credit Union Sunday.

Former Hawkeye Brad Lohaus scored the other six points during the run that covered the last four and a half minutes of the game.

Credit Union, which was guided by Gerry Wright's 36, led by seven at the break, but didn't shoot as well in a second half that was marred by technical fouls.

"Both teams were getting pretty lippy," Lohaus said. "It was a tense game."

Wright scored Credit Union's last eight points, but his vocabulary led to a technical which sent Jenkins to the line to put handiFLOS up by five with under three minutes to go.

Jenkins broke a 96-96 tie on the previous drive with a 3-pointer from a good three feet behind the arc.

Lohaus, who scored 24, and Jenkins were a combined 13-of-28 from three-point range.

"We played about even in the first half, they just shot a better percentage," Lohaus said. "In the second half, we shot better and we played smarter."

Wright said his team just stopped doing the things in the second half that put it ahead earlier.

"Maybe I'm exaggerating, but it seemed that for about a 10-to-12 minute stretch in the second half, James (Winters) and I only got to take about three shots," Wright said. "In the first half we were taking it to them."

"From that point on we had to play catch-up and we just ran out of gas in the end."

Winters scored 26 for Credit Union. handiFLOS' Jermaine Will-form added 24.

The other 8 p.m. game was a startling contrast. Iowa's Ryan Bowen made 18-of-26 shots for 39 points as his Powers/Nike squad defeated Hills Bank, 114-76.

Four other players scored in double figures for Powers/Nike, which holds the league's best record with only one loss. Acie Earl led the team with 20 rebounds.

In earlier action, Goodfellow Printing/Imprinted Sportswear avenged its season-opening loss to First National Bank, 111-102. GP/IS, arguably the most talented team in the league, showed that it is coming together as the playoffs approach.
