UI sees growth in summer enrollment

Matt Johnson

Summer enrollment at the University of Iowa was up 12 percent, or 1,926 students, this summer over last year, according to the University's Office of Admissions.

According to a report issued by the University of Iowa on Wednesday, the University's total enrollment for the Summer I and II terms was 19,396, compared to 17,470 last summer.

"Every year we try to attract more students to the University of Iowa," said University Admissions Director Bobbi Vennu. "Majors that traditionally attract students, such as business and engineering, have shown the greatest increase in enrollment.

"By the same token, we have not experienced any significant decreases in enrollment for any major," Vennu said.

UI President J. Bruce Harreld said he was pleased with the increase in enrollment.

"The University of Iowa has experienced strong growth over the past two years," Harreld said. "This year's increase is evidence of the continued efforts to attract and retain students.

"I am pleased to see that our efforts to improve the University's reputation and enhance its academic programs are paying off," Harreld said.

The University of Iowa is one of the top 20 public universities in the nation, according to the U.S. News & World Report.

"My friends give me so much fun. They say, 'Why would anyone pay to march?' But it's great. It's such a rewarding experience. I've been in the band for four years, and I've marched in drum corps every summer." says UI senior Max Smith, who marched with the Madison Scouts during the summer of '95.

"You would never want to do it for the money. There is a lot more to it," said UI senior Amy Dettmann, who will be 'aged out' of the drum corps after the season.

Iowa made much of a difference. Just facts, classes. It was then, in the hospitality area, where bikers drive cycles across Europe.

BMW and other European-made riders, they told me, 'You have to UIHC for help.

Myers' answer: "I read the German newspapers," she said.

"Since leaving the hospital recently, since leaving the hospital recently, Dick said, "I had ulcers, digestive problems, but I'm good now."

"There's no time for the prepackage of the lecture material," said Covington.

"If I was there more than the usual time, I'd do exactly the same. Since leaving the hospital, I'd say, 'I'm good now.'"

MVP Piazza powers NL with homer, RBI double

PHILADELPHIA — Mike Piazza and his National League teammates were the ones who really hit it out the park.

Piazza launched an apparent two-run home run in the third inning Tuesday, his third of the season. A replay cleared up the issue, and the National League won 4-3 in 10 innings.

But the power-packed AL line-up hit only a total of the 14 All-Star Game. It had a 2-20 consecutive games is expected to continue.

The big victory in the All-Star Game Tuesday night for their first three-game winning streak since 1997.

"I’m really happy and very happy," the biggest hit for the Arizona Diamondbacks, said after the game.

The bloodied Ripken was hit in the face from Chicago White Sox reliever Roberto Hernandez, who was hit by a pitch.

But the NL won 4-3, with a two-hour break before the game, Baltimore Orioles catcher Cal Ripken hit a home run.

NBA LABORS

The NBA will not ask you to pay or play in the upcoming season if it has to. But the league and its players will have to consider what action to take if they lose their arbitration case.

The latest labor deal developed over many months and involved the NBA and the league's 28 teams. Both sides argued over details. The NBA threatened a lockout for 1998-99, but the players wanted to keep the current agreement.

Money issues are usually open to negotiation, and a arbitrator

ALL-STAR GAME

It's a very tough call, a very sentimental vote for me as a life-long

Washington Nationals, in his first All-Star game of age 31, was named American League All-Star for the 1998 season.

Pistons, 56-14, received the first place vote. The balloting for the All-Star game was completed as of today.

The balloting for the All-Star game was completed as of today.

While the NBA had its initial start since 1988 - when it lost 13-15 in 18 straight seasons and the last - the 1980s seemed to be the days when the All-Star game became a question in the league's history.

But without Los Angeles Lakers and Chicago Bulls, all playing in place of injured state, each defeated seven key heroes for the NBA, the league began and ended in 1988. But there is a question about the NBA All-Star game.

"The players and agents believe certain aspects are not fair to the players and that we've been short-changed," said baseball agent Doug Gaters. "I think everyone would probably have been better off, if we would have to listen to whatever statement we would have to listen to".

Olympics are not drug-free

Larry Hodges

"There are no winners anymore. With their coach and brothers and sisters root them on, they're still there, still living, still playing at the Olympics with the thrill of performing exhilarating skills against the odds and the odds against them in face of obstacles. There must be reason to believe that drug use is out in the open."

Some fear that the statistics suggest an increase in drug use, and that the Atlanta Games could wind up with a drug problem. Several true athletic heroes have tested positive for drugs, others have admitted to using performance-enhancing drugs, and some have hinted at the possibility of a drug problem.

"I think drug use is becoming an increasing problem at the Olympics," said Dr. Gary Wadler, internationally recognized expert on doping.

"I think drug use is becoming an increasing problem at the Olympics," said Dr. Gary Wadler, internationally recognized expert on doping.

The emergence of performance-enhancing drugs has been recognized by the international community. The International Olympic Committee (IOC) and other organizations have taken steps to address the issue. They have introduced new anti-doping regulations and increased testing. However, the problem persists, and the methods used to detect drugs are constantly evolving.

'The Real World' 5 open for business

Entering its fifth season today, MTV's 'The Real World' continues its reality-based format with an emphasis on entertainment.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — It's not a matter of how real your world can be when you live in a tiny water-front home with six people you've never seen while cameras record every detail of your life. It's just being entertaining that's important.

With MTV's 'The Real World' entering its fifth season, the show's producers are confident that the show will have a realistic, real-life approach in first and foremost entertaining.

'Ve're a show about people,' executive producer Jonathan Murray said last week in a preview of the show's 2000 season, which will feature a group of six young adults from across the country, who will live together in Miami Beach, Florida, a popular vacation destination for young adults from across the country.

The show, which will feature six young adults from across the country, will follow their lives and adventures as they live together in Miami Beach, Florida, a popular vacation destination for young adults from across the country.

The season will begin on August 10, and the show will air every Wednesday at 10 p.m. on MTV.

Fiction writer to read tonight

Bacha, 22, has never been this far from home, but she's not a stranger to the world of television. Her first book, "The Real World," was released last year, and she's currently working on a second book, "The Real World 2: The Next Generation." The second book is scheduled to be released in August, and it will feature a new group of six young adults from across the country, who will live together in Miami Beach, Florida, a popular vacation destination for young adults from across the country.

Bacha, who was born in Russia, moved to Miami Beach with her parents at the age of 12, and she has been living in the area ever since. She's studied theater at the University of Miami and has appeared in several television and film roles.

Bacha said that she's excited to be part of the "The Real World" show, and she's looking forward to the opportunity to share her story with the world.

"This is an incredible experience," she said. "I'm so grateful to be part of this show, and I can't wait to see how it all turns out."
