Long lunch lines drive students away

Tracy Potocki The Daily Iowan

Long lunch lines in Burge cafeteria are forcing annoyed students to turn around and search for other food alternatives because they just won't make it to class on time.

UI sophomore Mandy Lee recently dropped lunch off of her meal plan because of the hassle the lunch lines caused.

"It costs way too much money, and since I have a 1:30 class, there's just not time," she said. Steve Bowers, assistant Food Service director, said these long that he finds himself eating less. lines are the result of everyone attempting to figure out the best time to eat and will lessen as the first weeks of classes go by.

"I try to watch what I eat to some extent," she said. "(Food Service) makes it easier because I can eat healthier with the salad bar."

UI freshman Jared Wickus said he also is eating healthy in Food Service.

"I eat salad every day, just because it's there," he said.

Africans celebrate new year

Katie Jean Anderson The Daily Iowan

Approximately every 1,460 years, an astronomical event occurs when Sirius, part of the Orion constellation, rises directly behind the sun. This event marks the beginning of the 396th African New Year, which before colonization, was traditionally celebrated Sept. 10 in some African cultures.

In honor of the day, a celebration sponsored by the African Students Association (ASA) will take place today. Naba Lamoussa, Iowa City resident and researcher of black civilization and culture, will speak about the history of the African New Year tonight at 6 at the Union.

The African calendar relies on the stars, not social or religious events like traditional calendars, Lamoussa said.

He said the celebration, based on a calendar practiced before and during the Pharonic period of Africa, relies on cosmic cycles.

In conjunction with the celebration of the African New Year, members of the ASA will be hosting some festivities. Beginning today at noon until 1:15 p.m. a celebration will occur with drumming and singing between Calvin Hall and Pappajohn Business Administration Building. In Burkina Faso, West Africa, where Lamoussa is from, people traditionally celebrate by honoring and worshiping gods; they also dance and complete initiations in secret societies, Lamoussa said.

Although not all Africans celebrate this holiday due to other religious beliefs, Lamoussa said it is still apart of African history.

"Most Africans are not aware of an alternate calendar," said Modei Akyea, manager of the Afro-American Cultural Center. "Although this concept is new to me as well as many others, it helps to explore issues in the structure of time.

Players of "Vampire" are part of the group called the Iowa City Guardians. Members create a character with specific traits and then role-play that character.

"Choosing your character is a very important part of the game," Iowa City resident Pat McCarron said. "In the process, you decide what personality traits, weaponry, strengths and weaknesses your character will have."

Group members said they plan on presenting the group to the UI to become a student organization.

"Being a student organization would be beneficial for the Iowa City Guardians, because it would give us more publicity as a group, as well as the chance to use UI buildings for the games," said Sherrine Schultz, a UI sophomore and Iowa City Guardians organizer and storyteller.

That proverbial thumb, many locals agree, is on the pulse of the fast-paced alternative culture of the 1990s. UI students said Iowa City is the best place in the state for anyone seeking freedom of thought and expression that has become this decade's trademark.

"My father commented that Iowa City has always been liberal, even when he went to school here," UI freshman Emily Rocksvold said. "The university students and the people that live here built this reputation and people come with that idea in mind.

Although not yet approved by the Food and Drug Administra-tion, doctors at the UI Hospitals and Clinics will begin testing a new drug that will hopefully smooth the way for patients receiving kidney transplants and treating other diseases, such as fast-growing cancer cells.

In the next month, rapamycin will be put to the test as a medication that will reduce the amount of transplant rejection.

Rapamycin has already been put through two other experimental phases. There have been first- and second-phase experiments done, but the third phase of the study will be conducted at "The clinical study that will take place at the UI is a phasethree study," Bertolatus said. "There have already been studies conducted on 150-200 kidney transplants using rapamycin. Now, the study will compare the combination of rapamycin and other anti-rejection medication."

Rapamycin will be taken in liquid form after kidney-transplant surgery. The length of time the patient will take the rapamycin will depend on how the the body responds to the owa City artist Eric Shaw is dead. Iowa City police officer Jeffrey Gillaspie killed him while investigating a possible burglary. These are the plain and simple facts. No commission, no investigation and no volume of public outcry will change these facts. One life has ended, another has been seriously devastated and dozens more have been affected in countless ways.

2 victims in the shooting of Eric Shaw

Since the Aug. 30 shooting, a parade of complaints has been pushed forward, accusing the Iowa City Police Department in general and Gillaspie in particular, of charges as varied as brutality, misconduct and even coldblooded murder.

For every suggestion to keep a level head, there have been a half dozen calls demanding the facts. The facts are simple and already known. A man is dead and a city employee killed him.

Rumors and wild accusations are flying fast and free in the media. How can something like this happen, people ask. What's going on with the Iowa City Police Department? Jack-booted Gestapo thugs are roaming the streets dressed as Iowa City police officers, and what are city officials going to do about it?

Iowa City City Council member Karen Kubby has a few suggestions. In an Internet posting last week to the Johnson County News Group, Kubby put forth several ideas, including a public meeting for people to air their grievances and concerns.

In her post, Kubby asked several questions that reflect public sentiment. "Are there any internal tensions within the ICPD that result in overreaction in the field?" she asked. "Are there underlying tensions in the community which we are failing to acknowledge which lead to seemingly uncalled for incidents in the field over the all the daily chores of law enforcement. Society asks police officers to do the nasty little jobs we won't or can't do ourselves. The city pays them to look for trouble the rest of us don't want to find. Police officers live with the tension of knowing the car they pull over late at night may contain a fleeing murderer. They also know they face splitsecond life and death decisions every time they enter a warehouse looking for a burglar.

Police officers live with danger every moment of every day. They, like normal human beings, are afraid. But like soldiers or Secret Service agents. police officers learn to control their fear.

None of the official findings or reports will mention Gillaspie was afraid the night he shot Shaw. We'll probably never really know what was going through Gillaspie's mind as he walked through the door of Iowa Vending. We can only assume he didn't want to kill anyone, but he didn't want to die, either.

Shaw's death should remind all of us to be thankful we are never forced to walk the path police officers follow every day, a path that can end instantly with the explosion of a blinding muzzle

In her posted message, Kubby suggested a civilian review commission to review the operations and procedures of the police department. Many in the community have echoed this idea, but unfortunately the other council members don't appear interested. As public concern over the shooting escalates, the council will come to change its

The Shaw shooting is being investigated internally, but internal investigations can sometimes undermine community confidence in the police department. A civilian review commission would help to restore confidence, but it has one major shortcoming: civilians.

It's easy for civilians to forget the dangers associated with law enforcement. An officer should be prepared to use deadly force while looking for a burglar, but the officer shouldn't resort to violence when a quiet discussion is appropriate. A civilian review commission is needed somewhere in

Had events transpired differently that night, nothing would have happened and the public would never have learned of a routine police call. Had a burglar been in the building, as Gillaspie was told, an arrest could have been made. If an armed burglar had been in the building, as Gillaspie probably expected, Iowa City could be discussing the death of a police officer and questioning why rules weren't in place to better protect his life.

Kubby suggests the creation of a sculpture park in Shaw's memory, permanently displaying his works. This is a good idea. Coralville hosts Iowa's permanent memorial to fire fighters. Perhaps the area should consider a similar memorial to police officers. After all, there were two victims on the night of Aug. 30.

Fear behind the guns

.. SAY, I HAD

OFF THE PHONE. YOU NEVER KNOW WHEN THE COPS

MIGHT SHOW

BETTER GET

To the Editor:

As an American living in the Netherlands, I am often asked to explain, if not justify, the United States' reluctance to enact strong gun-control legislation. People in the Netherlands do not understand why America chooses to maintain a policy that costs so many lives. Highly publicized accounts of tourists and exchange students who have been shot and killed while visiting the United States have done much to reinforce the widely held perception that Americans would rather shoot first, then ask questions later.

In response, I tell them private property is highly valued in the United States, and people want to be able to defend it — and themselves — if threatened. People want guns because having one makes them feel safer. I also talk about our Founding Fathers' distrust of authority and mention the right to bear arms has been part of our Constitution for 200 years. Americans want to be able to protect themselves from a government. I think I answer the question fairly.

Personally, however, I do not believe these self-defense arguments are convincing enough to justify the ready availability of guns in the United States. I favor strict gun control because I do not believe the advantages of gun ownership outweigh the risks. Furthermore, I have never seriously worried about having to defend myself against armed intruders. I admit it is possible, but unlikely. Certainly not in Iowa City, or so I thought.

I grew up in Iowa City, attended Iowa City public schools and the UI. I have known Eric Shaw most of my life, and I was shocked and deeply saddened to learn of his death at the hands of an armed intruder. Alone at night in his family's business, he was shot unexpectedly while talking on the telephone. Perhaps he should have had a gun to protect himself.

But from whom? The Iowa City Police Department, of all people?

What kind of society do we live in if police can enter a private business, shooting first and asking questions later? Isn't this the kind of situation our Founding Fathers feared? What if the roles had been reversed, and Eric had shot the police officer dead instead? Would that have qualified as justifiable homicide? Given current thinking, it

Have we really reached the point where we assume everybody is armed and dangerous? Has America become a place where everyone lives in fear of being shot, even the police? Some argue that we should all carry guns to protect ourselves. But how safe are we really, if fear blinds our reason and we instinctively pull the trigger without taking the time to think what we are doing. This is the paradox of gun violence in America. Surely the solution to the problem cannot be more guns. Goodbye Eric, sculptor, friend.

Shooting death brings thoughts on forgiveness

To the Editor:

The Shaw family is going through a very difficult time in their lives. They are searching for answers, as many of us do when tragedy strikes so close to home. Rarely does any answer seem adequate. Many of the local papers have capitalized on their grief, amplifying this family's feelings of bitterness and unforgiveness so we may all know the pain in their hearts.

Does it make their lives more pleasant to have these seeds of unforgiveness planted throughout our communi-

The Shaws need love and support, their feelings of grief are understandable, and I hope they are eventually able to forgive. Harboring hatred and bitterness weighs down a person's spirit, life loses its joy and depression sets in. When we are able to forgive those who have hurt us, we are able to accept forgiveness from others we have hurt. Until we forgive, we also bear the burden of our own mistakes and misdeeds and are unable to accept forgiveness.

We've been asked to love those who would do us wrong, to bless them and to pray for them, not holding grudges, not hating those people. Hate the tragedy, hate the pain, hate the grief and hate the loneliness, but love the person.

I know Jeff (Gillaspie). He is a friend. He is grief-stricken and guilt-ridden. He feels the blame and the hatred aimed at him. I pray that Jeff can forgive himself as the Shaws feel Eric would forgive him. I also pray that the burden is lifted from the shoulders of the Shaw family and they can find it in their hearts to forgive, not only for Jeff's sake, but for their own.

Hatred devalues the life of those who hate, and they need support so their lives can get on track and be blessings to those around them.

Where's 'Jim's Journal'?

To the Editor:

"Dilbert" rocks, right? I'd be the last to complain about bringing that strip to your Wahoo Skippy Joyful Bouncing Fun Page; corporate/office humor, like sociopolitical fun, remains ever fresh and crunchy as its subject matter continues to evolve into new realms of ridiculousness.

But you nuked Jim!

Okay, so our young Jim pivoted around a certain tongue-in-cheek existentialism that may have gone, well, under the heads of some of your readers, whose monodirectionally developed taste in humor is narrowly conditioned to respond to complexity, vague inference, clever word play . which is just fine, mind you - not original, imaginative or particularly

But you dumped "Jim's Journal" and kept "The Fairgrounds"? My God. How is the decision of which strips to hang onto from year to year made at the DI? One-potato, two-potato? Flipping a carrot? Sexual relationships with the strips' creators? It must involve veg-

Is its publication ensured by some kind of contract, or are you simply filling up the space with it because you've got nothing better going? No, wait, I've seen some of the editorial butchery that goes on at the DI in the name of minimizing "fluff" column inches. That can't be the problem.

Would you be willing to expunge "The Fairgrounds" from your Wahoo Skippy Joyful Bouncing Fun Page if you had something of greater quality with which to replace it? If so, do please let me know, and I'll tell my cat to get to work. Or could you just bring back "Jim's Journal," set "The Fairgrounds" on fire and cut it in half while it's burning and spare my cat the inconvenience of being thrust into the roughand-tumble world of America's entertainment industry after having grown so accustomed to a life of pampered David Collins iawatha, Iowa, my hometown, was excited when Wal-Mart announced its plans to open shop along Blairs Ferry Road, the main road in and out of the town. Nobody knew what they were in for. I remember stopping my bike in mid-wheelie when I saw the tractors. It was barely past dawn and their shadows looked like Tyrannosaurus Rexes. Some construction workers were reading from a clipboard and pointing at the tiny forest. My forest. Where I went to watch deer drink from the shallow creek. My friend Daryl came out of his house and walked up to where I was standing. He kicked a rock onto my driveway and said, "They're going to shoot the deer."

A few months later, my forest was a giant parking lot. If I squinted hard enough, I could make out Sam's Club, Wal-Mart and a strip mall across the concrete desert. Later, there would also be a Godfather's Pizza and an all-you-can-eat joint. The developers must have felt terribly clever when they named the shopping center "Blairs Forest." The ugly is winning out over the beautiful all over America. And it is not always in the form of forests being chopped

Prior to World War II, Americans held completely different values of esthetics and the durability of architecture. Cities used to be zoned so corner groceries were legal in residential neighborhoods. Tall buildings were allowed downtown, and people could live above businesses. Town squares were made for pedestrians, so that community could come together. Sounds a lot like Iowa City, doesn't it? We're lucky. We live in an old town. But look at the outskirts, and you will see the beginnings of urban sprawl. An article in this month's Atlantic Monthly talks about the idea of "chronological connectivity." This is what generations before us felt when they constructed their houses and downtown areas. There was a "an understanding that time is a defining dimension of existence — particularly the existence of living things, such as human beings, who miraculously pass into life and then inevitably pass out of it.'

It is as if we have grown so cynical that "the future" is no longer imaginable. We don't see it as dismal, because we don't see it at all. Everything is now. More money now. More strip malls now. And now is ugly.

Strip malls are taking over the suburbs and outskirts of Iowa City. They are unimpressive and create no sense of community. Can you imagine the Pedestrian Mall crowd hanging out in the Wal-Mart parking lot?

Also, as the Atlantic Monthly points out, they are built to last only 50 years. If Iowa City were to enforce zoning rules like those in many cities, here's what would be "illegal" Apartments above businesses - violates single-Businesses in houses.

John's Grocery — too close to residential area. Java House, Panchero's, Uncommon Grounds tables on sidewalks. College Green Park — violates minimum-space Church spires - violate maximum-height requirements.

The UI campus — violates school zoning laws.

Must be separate from downtown. The list goes on.

requirements.

If every single one of these was eliminated from Iowa City, and "proper" parking spaces were constructed, our beloved city would become Cedar Rapids. Cedar Rapids is the land where strip malls go to die. Do we want that?

Do we want no pedestrian accessibility? Do we want our city to look like the Coralville strip? If not, then we must demand that the city council not allow our historical buildings to be destroyed. We must decorate the outskirts of town as if we had to walk through them every day.

The next time you find yourself complaining about Iowa City's lack of parking, remember that getting what you want might be a nightmare. You'll wake up to find the Pedestrian Mall replaced with a strip mall, parking free of charge.

Void in classes on Islam, Mideast politics

Editor's note: Throughout this semester, The Daily Iowan will welcome guest opinions from student organizations on the UI campus. A student organization may be a large, well-known organization such as College Republicans or Associated Residence Halls - or may simply be a group of interested students concerned about a particular issue who would like to voice their concerns to DI readers.

Guest opinions from student organizations will be chosen for print by the Viewpoints Editor and the Editor in Chief and may be edited for space, style and clarity. The editors may also solicit guest opinions from student organizations to comment on recent UI, state and world events.

The wide scope of the material covered in this class left us yearning for more classes to cover the vast areas of interests that students at the UI share in discovering this rich and important tradition, along with many related topics. As students, we feel that while Christianity and Judaism are being addressed academically in a reasonable manner, Islam and the Middle East are being ignored. Instead, we are left with an academic void and not one adequate

We feel this course on Islam has enriched our experience and was a small, but important step, in filling this gap. We urge the College of Liberal Arts, School of Religion and the Center for International and Comparative Studies to acknowledge this deficiency and work to correct it by continuing to offer this course and offering more classes in the future. There is no better time to take such action, since the Middle East and the Muslim world are increasingly taking center stage in

I'm sure Saddam Hussein doesn't think it is fair. So all he has to do is duck and be less troublesome.

"I'm not talking about being fair to Saddam. I'm talking about our presidential election and how it ain't — what do you call it? — a level playing field?"

Why isn't it level?

"Because an incumbent president has too many advantages.

"Look at Bill Clinton. First, he can play at being Big Daddy and promise all sorts of programs that will solve every problem we got or will ever have. Then, after he shows us what a compassionate guy he is, he can stick out his jaw and beat up someone like Saddam Hussein and let the voters know how tough and decisive he is.

"And all Bob Dole can do is just stand there in his American Legion cap and say, yep, he's all for shooting missiles at whatever we're shooting them at. And why don't we tell him not to go on TV wearing that hat?"

Why not? He is proud of being a vet and a Legionnaire.

"I'll tell you why not. First, a candidate should never wear any kind of unusual hat. That's oldfashioned politics. Candidates who wear unusual hats always lose. Two, the hat gets the draft-dodger vote bloc mad. Let's face it - all the guys who ducked the Vietnam War are tired of hearing about Dole being a wounded vet. There's a backlash now. But you digress. What about that level playing field?

So what can someone like Dole do to counter this?

"Nothing. Unless the campaign laws are changed." In what way?

"Well, maybe we should let the other candidates have a few cruise missiles and warships to shoot them from.' Shoot them at who?

"Some bad guy. Saddam isn't the only bad guy in this world. It would be up to the other candidate to decide who he wants to shoot missiles at. Maybe he'd shoot them at that rotten guy in Nigeria, Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun's vacation pal. Or maybe at one of those dope kings in Latin America, where nice Juan Valdez used to pick up all those good coffee beans. But he'd have to be careful not to blow up Juan Valdez by mistake. That would be bad public relations.

"Or maybe he'd want to shoot at Saddam, too. That could be better than a debate. A candidates' shooting-at-Saddam contest. Wouldn't that be fair - for Dole to say: 'OK, maybe my missiles didn't get Saddam, but I blew up some of his relatives. Isn't that worth a bump in the polls?

Dole promises tax cut by April

Sandra Sobieraj Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, Ga. - Sweetening his bid for the White House, Bob Dole promised Monday to deliver his 15 percent cut in income taxes by April 15 and said he would pay for it in part by wielding the line-item veto against government spending.

Military retirees' benefits were added to the list of programs Dole would shelter from cutbacks.

Dole, campaigning through the South, also took a swipe at President Clinton's military maneuvers in Iraq, suggesting the recent missile strikes against Saddam Hussein did not advance American

"In Iraq as in Bosnia, the Clinton administration should be careful about making claims of success that events on the ground may not substantiate, and about giving assurances that it is unable or unwilling to fulfill," Dole said. "The credibility of the United States is Leaving it to others to cast doubt on Clinton's foreign policy, Dole said some people he meets "look around the world at some of the things happening, whether it's Iraq or whether it's somewhere else and we're now second guessing what we did there.

Mixing talk of tax cuts with a pledge to balance the budget, Dole pointed to the line-item veto as a useful tool for offsetting his $548 billion package of tax cuts.

Dole noted the presidential authority to veto individual items in massive spending bills takes effect in January and added, "I'll be in there in January and ... we'll use it to help us balance the bud-

Baby-boomer parents expect teens to use drugs

Lauran Neergaard

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Two-thirds of baby-boomer parents who experimented with marijuana as teenagers expect their own children will do the same, and many say parents have too little influence to stop them, according to a survey released Monday.

The findings, from the first national survey to simultaneously ask parents and teen-agers about their attitudes toward drugs, come just weeks after the government announced a doubling of teen drug

"That the baby boomers appear to be so ambivalent and so resigned to drug use by kids is very disturbing," said Joseph Califano of Columbia University's Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse, which sponsored the survey. "They should be mad as hell. • Instead, they're saying there's nothing we can do about it.

But some parents didn't think the poll painted them so badly.

"It's not so much that people are resigned. I think they're realistic," said Barbara Barrett of Rockville, Md., who has a 16-year-old daughter. "Drugs are everywhere and that's hard."

The government reported last month that drug use among 12- to 17-year-olds rose from 5.3 percent of those surveyed in 1992 to 10.9 percent last year.

The new survey questioned ence" to fight it, he said. 1,200 teens and 1,166 parents of Worse is if teens are teens, including 819 whose children also were polled.

third of parents who have friends who currently use marijuana.

Overall, 46 percent of the parents surveyed said they expect their teen to try illegal drugs.

But when researchers looked only at the parents who had experimented with marijuana, akin to a rite of passage for many babyboomers, the numbers jumped.

Some 65 percent of parents who used marijuana regularly as teens believe their own children will use drugs, as do 62 percent who experimented with marijuana in their youth. Among parents who never tried marijuana, only 29 percent believe their children will try

When asked if it is a crisis for someone under 16 to smoke marijuana, 83 percent of parents who never tried pot themselves said yes but only 58 percent of parents who smoked marijuana regularly as teens were similarly alarmed.

Forty percent of parents said they have little influence over their teen's decision to use drugs, saying peer pressure and society play greater roles.

Studies have shown public perceptions about drug use do forecast the future, said Dr. Richard Heyman, who chairs the American Academy of Pediatrics' substance abuse committee.

Federal aid arrives for Fran's victims

Dennis Patterson Associated Press

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.- Bill Hubbard looked at the 100-acre swath of flattened, soggy cornstalks, his $50,000 loss a fraction of the crop damage caused by Hurricane Fran as it cut like a scythe across North Carolina.

"This just makes you sick, said Hubbard, whose field should have yielded 10,000 bushels. "When you farm, you always fight Mother Nature, and she's got the upper hand this year."

Hurricane Bertha in July inflicted $179 million to North Carolina's crops, and state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said Hurricane Fran - which mostly flattened rather than soaked - could top that.

"What Bertha left, Fran got," said Graham, who joined U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glick-man on a fly-over of the state's damaged corn and cotton fields. "And we hope Hortense takes the long way around."

Hortense, a slow-moving tropical storm upgraded to a hurricane Monday, edged across the Atlantic toward the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

There were no immediate overall estimates of Fran's crop damage in North Carolina. The state, which is the nation's No. 1 tobacco producer, had already harvested most of its tobacco crop, but some leaves rotted in the barn when blackouts cut power to curing fans.

North Carolina's comparatively small corn crop, mostly hog feed, was ready for harvest just when Fran hit, while most of the state's $800 million cotton crop was in the middle of its growing season.

With some of their cotton knocked to the ground, growers mostly feared infestation by the

Gov. Jim Hunt asked that 18 of the 34 counties already declared disaster areas be given additional federal help. He also asked state cleanup crews to pick up the pace.

"This is the worst disaster that we've had in this century," he said. "Everybody has been hurt by it. ... This is going to require extraordinary things.

In West Virginia, hundreds remained without electricity or water, mostly in rural eastern regions along branches of the Potomac and the river itself.

Saddam closes in on rebel control

Brian Murphy Associated Press

DOKAN, Iraq — With yellow ribbons tied to their guns, a Kurdish faction backed by Saddam Hussein stormed across northeastern Iraq, turning a 10-day-old battle against Kurdish rebels into a rout Monday.

As allied Iraqi forces trailed close behind, the Kurdistan Democratic Party appeared headed for a sweeping victory in the region against the crumbling resistance of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan.

If this happens, the Iraqi president will effectively have influence over northern Iraq for the first time since the U.S.-led forces established a Kurdish "safe haven" after the 1991 Persian Gulf War

The United States, which launched missile strikes against southern Iraq last week, has made it clear it has no plans to take sides in the fighting between the Kurdish factions.

The missile strikes appeared to discourage Iraqi forces from taking a direct role in the fighting, but it has not slowed the KDP. With Iraqi help, the KDP captured Irbil, the de facto capital of the Kurdish region, on Aug. 31.

The KDP has been fighting its way eastward since and on Monday took Dokan, a strategicallylocated town about 60 miles east of Irbil. A long convoy of KDP fighters headed east toward the town with strips of yellow ribbon - the faction's color - tied to their guns.

Traveling in trucks, taxis and even old Mercedes-Benz sedans. the KDP troops encountered a few sniper ambushes, but quickly responded with heavy artillery fire into hills covered with dry golden grass.

The PUK had put up stiff resistance until Monday, but appeared unable to hold back the onslaught any longer.

The KDP is now targeting Sulaymaniyah, 35 miles to the southeast and the last major PUK stronghold in the region.

"I would still like to do more to help the Kurds. But, frankly, if you want the fighting to be ended, the leaders of the various factions are going to have to be willing to go back to to the peace table and talk it through."

President Clinton

U.N. spokesperson, as many as 10,000 civilians have fled the city since Monday morning.

"As a result of the political and military collapse of (the PUK), the fall of Sulaymaniyah, their last bastion, is near," the KDP said in a statement issued in Lon-Sulaymaniyah "is in imminent danger of collapse," the PUK conceded in its own statement from Washington.

Iraqi forces appeared to be advancing behind the front-line KDP fighters but were not playing a major role in the fighting, according to most accounts.

United Nations guards in Sulaymaniyah said it appeared most of the Patriotic Union leadership had fled, possibly across the border to Iran.

However, PUK leader Jalal Talabani remained in Sulaymaniyah. He made an urgent appeal for help, but seemed resigned to the fact the Americans would not come to his rescue. "The United States is not in a position that can obstruct a (KDP) invasion, which is a kind of support indirectly to Saddam," he told a group of journalists that included AP Television. He also predicted KDP leader Massoud Barzani would come to regret his alliance with Saddam after the fighting was finished.

"In aligning with Baghdad, the KDP has mounted a tiger which will destroy us all," the PUK statement said. "Once Saddam controls Kurdistan, he will no Both sides agreed the city was longer need his Kurdish ally and likely to fall and, according to a will consume the KDP and what remains of the Kurdish people."

In Washington, President Clinton said the situation won't be resolved until the Kurds stop fighting among themselves.
"I would still like to do more to help the Kurds," Clinton said. "But, frankly, if you want the fighting to be ended, the leaders of the various factions are going to have to be willing to go back to the peace table and talk it through."

Netanyahu stands firm on West Bank

Barry Schweid Associated Press

WASHINGTON— Tough-minded Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is telling the Clinton administration the Mideast peace process could fall apart if Israeli troops are withdrawn from the volatile West Bank town of Hebron without solid security guarantees.

Deflecting a U.S. call for a prompt redeployment, restricting the troops to guarding some 400 Jewish settlers, Netanyahu said he told Secretary of State Warren Christopher Monday that "improving the security in Hebron is not only an Israeli interest but it is a Palestinian interest." "I don't feel any pressure, and I don't think there will be any pressure," Netanyahu told Israeli reporters before a meeting with President Clinton at the White House. Israeli troops were required to pull back from Arab population centers in Hebron by last March under an agreement reached with the Palestinians.

However, former Prime Minister Shimon Peres' government did not take the step and now Netanyahu's Likud-led government is seeking further delay.

"Hebron is known for its massacres," a senior Israeli official told the AP after Netanyahu met with Christopher. "It is a situation in which the Arab population is known to be especially radical."

Christopher is asking Israel to redeploy its troops, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "Our position is that we will do it under the right circumstances. We are not acting according to the calendar."

Describing Hebron as an explosive situation, the official said a blowup in Hebron could also torpedo the entire Mideast peace

Christopher assured the prime minister, meanwhile, the United States is trying to reopen negotiations between Israel and Syria that broke down amid a series of terrorist attacks on Israel in May.

But Netanyahu said he did not know if Syria wanted to get back to the bargaining table. Netanyahu signaled a willingness to carry out accords reached Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat again said negotiations must be and seek new ones by meeting with reciprocal — the Arabs must make him last Wednesday for a talk and concessions to match Israel's. a handshake.

But in an exchange with by past Israeli governments with reporters Monday, Netanyahu

The department has hounded holed-up gunmen with dogs since 1983. The 12 search-and-rescue canines are trained to start barking if they smell trouble. That signal can confirm a suspect is still inside a house or building, but tells nothing about his or her exact hiding place.

So police — after hearing about a dog camera being tested by British military — developed a remote camera of their own, said Lt. Michael DiTrani, commander of the police technical assistance response unit.

Ace used the device a week ago as police sought a gunman inside a house. Video from the 4-year-old dog's camera showed no sign of the man in the first floor and basement, allowing police to enter without fear of ambush. They later kitchen, living room and upstairs found the gunman shot to death

"Give me the money now," the voice demanded coarsely, the gun rising to a 90 degree angle. No, make that 98 degrees; clearly the guy was nervous. The student smiled faintly. Sure, prolonging it like this was dangerous, but this time he wanted it all. The bright flash. The deafening sound. The tiny steel rocket ship skimming straight toward his heart. His jaw flinched as he watched the bad guy slowly squeeze the trigger ... BANG! The student ducked quickly to his left, the flash instantly triggering the whirring ATM retinal-scan freeze mechanism. The bullet screamed to a stop a chest hair before impact, the man who fired it frozen in place like some gigantic ice cube, a puzzled look on his face. The police would arrive any second, haul the bad guy away. The student chuckled. Turned back to retrieve his card. Damn, that's good software.

McCarney returns home as enemy

Chuck Schoffner Associated Press

Dan McCarney is getting ready for an emotional trip home. When the Iowa State football coach leads his team onto the field at No. 21 Iowa on Saturday, it'll be McCarney's first visit to his alma mater wearing the cardinal and gold of the Hawkeyes' in-state rival. McCarney grew up in Iowa City, played in the offensive line at Iowa from 1972-74 and was an assistant coach with the Hawkeyes for 13 seasons. During the final 11 years of his stay, he worked under Iowa's current coach, Hayden Fry.

"It will be a great feeling. But this game will not be about Hayden Fry and Dan McCarney or Troy Davis and Sedrick Shaw," McCarney said Monday, referring to each team's outstanding running back.

"It's about two great institutions in the same state, and I'm very proud to be a part of this rivalry. It's great to be back and a part of this thing. The people in this state take it very seriously.'

McCarney got his first taste of the rivalry from the Iowa State side last year, when Iowa won 27-10 in Ames for its 13th straight victory in the series. And he has visited Iowa previously with an opposing team, out of the press box." making trips there in 1990 and 1992 as defensive coordinator at Wisconsin.

"The first time I walked in there, it was kind of an eerie feeling standing on the other sideline," McCarney said.

It's a stadium filled with pleasant memories for McCarney, even though the Hawkeyes won only six games during his playing days. The highlights?

Probably beating UCLA my senior year when we weren't expected to beat anybody," McCarney said. "As a coach, when we beat Michigan State to go to the Rose Bowl for the first time and all of the roses came flying game of the 1974 season. The victory over Michigan State came in 1981, when the Hawkeyes made the first of their three Rose Bowl trips under Fry.

Another bowl trip is expected this year for Iowa, which is an early 17-point favorite to extend its mastery of Iowa State. The Hawkeyes opened the season with a 21-20 victory over Arizona. Iowa State lost to

Wyoming 41-38 in overtime. "Iowa is talented, they're experienced, they're tough and they're confident," McCarney said. They're coming off a great win over a real outstanding Arizona team. It's a major, major challenge for this program to

COLLEGE BASKETBALL Wildcats forced to give guard a shot

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge on Monday ruled Northwestern must give 6-foot-5 guard Nick Knapp a chance to play college basketball, even though his heart once stopped during a pick-

U.S. District Judge James Zagel said Knapp's risk of injury or death related to the cardiac arrest he suffered in Peoria two years ago wasn't great enough to warrant barring him from playing.

"I find that Knapp's ... risk of injury is not substantial, based on the testimony of four cardiologists," Zagel said.

Attorneys for Northwestern, which had declared Knapp medically ineligible, declined to comment on Zagel's ruling. Knapp's attorney, Bob Chapman, said he hoped Knapp would begin playing next month but that the school might appeal.

TORONTO - The Texas Rangers matched the biggest lead in team history, extending their edge in the AL West to eight games Monday night with a 4-3 win over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Mickey Tettleton's go-ahead double in the sixth inning sent the Rangers to their fourth straight victory. Texas, the only team in the league that has never made the playoffs, also led by eight games over Seattle on Aug. 25.

Texas overcame a 3-0 deficit against Pat Hentgen (17-9), who pitched his major league-leading 10th complete game. Hentgen struck out 10, but the Rangers still beat Toronto for the seventh straight time this season. Orioles 5, Tigers 4

BALTIMORE — Todd Zeile can't believe his luck.

Zeile marked his 31st birthday with a three-run homer as the Baltimore Orioles rallied to beat the Detroit Tigers 5-4 Monday and gain ground in both the AL East and the wild-card race.

Zeile and Pete Incaviglia joined the Orioles on Aug. 30 in a trade with the Phillies. Instead of playing out the string with Philadelphia, Zeile is playing in one pressure-packed game after another as an Oriole.

He couldn't be happier.

different it is here," he said. "It's great to come out and play every day with these fans cheering for you instead of jeering you."

The victory moved the Orioles within 21/2 games of the idle New York Yankees in the AL East, the closest they've been since June 20. Brewers 6, Red Sox 0

BOSTON — Scott Karl pitched a six-hitter for his first major league shutout and the Milwaukee Brewers hurt Boston's wild-card chances with win over the Red Sox.

Milwaukee led 2-0 against Tom Gordon (10-8) before scoring four runs in the eighth on Matt Mieske's 14th homer of the season and John Jaha's 29th, a three-run shot. The Brewers had scored just five runs in losing their previous four games.

Karl (12-7) did the rest in his second straight complete game as the Red Sox had trouble just getting the ball out of the infield. Only three of their outs went to the out-must be the greatest thing ever said about a football player," Fitzgerald said. "It was during those NFL Films, they called him Moby Dick in a goldfish bowl. And I think that is the most beautiful thing I have ever heard in my life."

Fitzgerald has three role models his father, Singletary and Butkus. And when Northwestern's media guide asked Fitzgerald who he would most like to spend a day with, living or dead, Butkus was the easy choice.

But Fitzgerald had no comment when asked if his dream would be realized by meeting Butkus at the end of this season and accepting the Butkus Award, which is handed out annually to the nation's top linebacker. Fitzgerald could care less about personal recognition. Take last season for example.

Fitzgerald became the Chuck Bednarik Defensive Player of the Year, the Bronco Nagurski Player of the Year, the Chevrolet Defensive Player of the Year, the Sports Illustrated Defensive Player of the Year, the Big Ten's Defensive Player of the Year and he was named firstteam All-American. But all he wanted to do was play in the Rose Bowl, and a tragic accident kept him from doing so.

Fitzgerald broke the tibia and fibula in his left leg against the Iowa Hawkeyes on Nov. 11. Less than two months later, the Wildcats were wrapping up the story of the decade as the perennial losers played USC in Pasadena. Fitzgerald could only watch.

"It was kind of like, 'Roll with the punches," Fitzgerald said. "The Rose Bowl is the ultimate goal of every team in the Big Ten. And not to be able to play in it was a big disappointment.

The team comes first and last for Fitzgerald, who recorded 130 tackles last season. He has just one personal goal this year - to go to the Rose Bowl and to win it.

"I've always been a team player. I wouldn't be where I'm at right now if it wasn't for the rest of my defense," Fitzgerald said. "So I don't know how I could be a 'me' or an 'I' type of guy just because me or I, Pat Fitzgerald, wouldn't be able to do what I did if it wasn't for Matt Rice, Keith O' Donnell, Casey Dailey ... I could name every defensive lineman. That's the reason why I was successful."

ment to hit more than 20 each. Jermaine Dye homered in his first atbat in the bigs. Light-hitting Kevin Elster hit 23, seven more than he'd managed in the entire 1990s.

Even Mick Billmeyer took part. Who? He's the California Angels bullpen catcher and, given a chance to play in the Hall of Fame exhibition game against Montreal, he stepped up to the plate and hit a drive over the right-field stands.

"I'm saying to the guys, 'It ain't that hard," the career minor leaguer said. Apparently, it isn't.

Of the 27 home runs hit Sunday, bringing the season total to 4,463, there were these:

-Houston pitcher Shane Reynolds' second homer of the year. A day earlier, Donovan Osborne became the first Cardinals pitcher to hit a grand slam since Bob Forsch in 1986.

—Nigel Wilson's first career hit in 26 at-bats. The No. 1 pick by the Marlins in the expansion draft, he's drifted to Cleveland.

-Todd Hundley's 40th home run, for most home runs by a catcher. Hundley also broke the Mets' mark for homers held by Darryl Straw-berry; earlier this season, Henry Rodriguez surpassed the Montreal record set by Andre Dawson.

'They can say all they want about the ball being juiced, but the two I've seen would have been out in the dead-ball era," new Mets manager Bobby Valentine said.

Hundley became the ninth player to reach the 40-homer plateau this season, setting another record. There had already been a record number of 30-homer players.

On deck, the likes of Mark McGwire (48), Albert Belle (44), Juan Gonzalez (44) and Ken Griffey Jr. (43) could top the mark of two 50-homer players in a year. Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle did it in 1961, Ralph Kiner and Johnny Mize did it in 1947 and Hank Greenberg and Jimmie Foxx set the standard in 1938.

The Baltimore Orioles, meanwhile, have hit 231 home runs and are closing in on the record of 240 by the 1961 Yankees team featuring Maris and Mantle. Leading the which tied Roy Campanella's record way for Baltimore is unlikely lead- else.

off hitter Brady Anderson, whose 44 home runs are more than double his previous career high of 21.

Rafael Palmeiro is one of six players to hit 20 homers for Baltimore this year. Murray and Todd Zeile, acquired in recent deals, also have 20 and newcomer Pete Incaviglia (19) is close. Incaviglia, by the way, hit a grand slam the day after he was traded, the first player to do that in the modern era. "Sometimes, you're not going to hit home runs and you have to create things," Palmeiro said. "But we haven't done that this year." This season's 4,459 homers came in 1,999 games. In 1987, the 4,458 homers came in 2,105 games. Back then, the Florida Marlins did not exist and neither did the Colorado Rockies. Nor did homer-friendly parks like Coors Field in Denver and Camden Yards in Baltimore.

"This place is a joke," Detroit manager Buddy Bell said after the host Orioles homered three times in the eighth inning Sunday. "Everything goes to the warning track."

There, it seems, and everywhere going to represent the emotions that go along with playing in front of 70,000 fans.

When you consider the fact that Iowa entered the game with newcomers at three offensive line positions, as well as tight end, nose tackle, linebacker and defensive end (and that's not to mention a first year defensive coordinator and linebacker coach), that first game is obviously going to be a rough one.

In recent years, those players have had a team like Central Michigan or UNI to warm up against. Arizona is a quality football team and is going to win some games this season. Iowa should not have to make excuses for a onepoint victory over the Wildcats.

Aside from picking up the first win of the season, Iowa showed some things on Saturday that should help them down the stretch this season.

First of all, Hayden Fry's squad showed that when one aspect of the team is struggling, another can pick it up. With the offense unable to muster anything against the second coming of Arizona's "Desert Swarm," the defense stepped things up and led Iowa to victory.

Iowa's defense forced five big turnovers, scoring a touchdown on one and directly leading to two

Arizona back into the game, time came for the offense to get something done and it did. In the fourth quarter, after Arizona had cut the lead to one point, the Iowa offense came up with a seven minute, 21 second drive that took the life out of Arizona and sealed a Hawkeye

Prior to that, Iowa's longest drive of the game was just over three minutes and ended in a Matt Sherman fumble.

But possibly the most important lesson to be learned from beating Arizona won't be apparent until Nov. 2, when Iowa travels to Champaign, Ill., to battle the Illini.

The Hawkeyes may have finally And when the defense allowed learned how to beat a defensive

In the past three years, Iowa has lost to Illinois by a combined score of 122-17. No matter how hot or cold the two teams are, Iowa's toughest opponent always seems to be the Illini.

Despite the fact that Illinois has been known as a defensive team, it has had little trouble scoring at will on Iowa. Fry said Arizona would be the toughest defense Iowa would have to prepare for all season.

Johnson undefeated with Jets on the way

Steven Wine Associated Press

DAVIE, Fla. - Jimmy Johnson, still unbeaten as coach of the Miami Dolphins, knows the schedule will get tougher.

Not this week, though. The Dolphins (2-0) have beaten two winless teams, New England and Arizona, by a combined 62-20. That makes Miami a big favorite Sunday against the New York Jets (0-2), who have been outscored 52-13 in their first two

"It's going to be our job this week to keep our guys focused on the Jets," Johnson said Monday. "We have so many new players that I'm sure they're going to be listening to the media and reading the papers and watching television, and all of it is going to be talking about how the Jets have played the past couple of weeks.

"Our guys don't know the tradition of the Jets and how this is their big game of the year. Traditionally the Jets have always played the Dolphins extremely hoping we look good, because 38-10 victory at Arizona — but real. Johnson will remind his players against Miami, even though the know.

Dolphins almost always had the better team.

"In this particular case, our guys shouldn't have short memories," Johnson said.

But a fast start can breed overconfidence among players and excessive expectations with fans and the media. Johnson has already been asked to compare his young Dolphins with the two championship teams he coached in Dallas.

He responded by laughing.

Miami fans, however, are already wondering if the new coach's three-year plan to reach the Super Bowl was too conservative. And Fins fever seems to be spreading - perhaps one-forth of the crowd of 55,444 attending the Cardinals game cheered for the

We had a lot of fans out there. I think it's the same way for whoever plays in Arizona," Johnson said with a smile.

'What's real is that we've got soon enough of last year's 17-16 to get a lot better to get to the loss at New York. The Jets have level where we want to be. How won six of their past 10 games long is that going to take? I don't

WILDCAT FALLOUT

Barnett takes responsibility for loss

Rick Gano

Associated Press

EVANSTON, Ill. - As Gary Barnett took his seat Monday, the "Expect Victory" slogan he brought with him to campus was prominently displayed in a picture that hung over his left shoulder.

Never did Barnett or his team expect victory more than in their 1996 season opener. And never, perhaps, have they been more disappointed, especially after coming off a Big Ten title and a trip to the Rose Bowl.

The dismay and disbelief still lingered Monday, less than 48 hours after a shocking one-point loss at Wake Forest.

The Wildcats find themselves booted out of the polls and trying to figure how they could lose to a team that looked hauntingly familiar to the one Northwestern used to be. Wake Forest won only one game last season.

"Our leadership has to take over and make a move. We're all to blame. I'm taking responsibility,

too. So are our coaches."

Gary Barnett,

Northwestern football coach on last week's loss to Wake Forest

"Our defense didn't respect Wake before the game," Barnett said

'We played totally unlike the defense that took the field a year ago. ... It's a tough lesson. Nobody is more disappointed in us than we Northwestern hopes to shake off the 28-27 loss that came when the Deacons connected on a last-second touchdown pass and go back to North Carolina's Tobacco Road this Saturday to play Duke.

"Our leadership has to take over and make a move. We're all to blame. I'm taking responsibility, too. So are our coaches," Barnett

"You can't just point to the kids and say, 'You didn't listen.' We all had a role.

"This is not new to us. We're not new to tough situations."

Last season after beating Notre Dame, Northwestern suffered one of its most agonizing defeats ever, a last-second loss at home to Miami of Ohio. The Wildcats responded and won their next nine games before losing in the Rose Bowl to Southern California.

Can they do it again?

'No doubt this one hurt more than the Miami game," linebacker Pat Fitzgerald said.

"Internally we had high expectations, and to go out and play the defense we did is really disappointing. It's a sick feeling to let down your teammates.

"One game doesn't make a season. We know that. It didn't last year and we're not going to let it this year.'

The Wildcats played without suspended defensive back Hudhaifa Ismaeli, who is expected back Saturday, and could not protect a 24-13 fourth-quarter lead.

And the Wildcats had four turnovers after committing 13 all last season.

"We've got to let this one go," said running back Darnell Autry, who gained 173 yards, his 14th straight 100-plus game. "We can't keep harping, 'Oh man, how horrible this is.' We've got to let it go."

Brooks vaulted himself into the end zone seats packed with delirious denizens decked in green and gold after TD receptions of 25 and 20 yards from Brett Favre, who overcame a rough start to throw three touchdowns.

Dorsey Levens even got into the act, doing his version of the Lambeau Leap after a 1-yard touchdown run in the second quarter.

A Lambeau Field record crowd of 60.666 watched their Packers go 2-0 for the first time since the strikeshortened 1982 season, when they won their first three. Philadelphia fell to 1-1.

Brooks had four catches for 116 yards in the first half as the Packers built an astonishing 30-7 lead at halftime against an Eagles team that thinks it can unseat Dallas as UI professor and poet Marvin Bell sits in his quiet living room, hunched over his desk. He strokes his thick, graying beard as he peers out of his bifocals and contemplates "Dead Man" poems.

"The aim of my writing is to stamp out my brain," Bell said. "When it's all stamped out, I go to bed. It's a process of going straight inside myself."

Bell and visiting professor C.D. Wright, of Brown University, will read from their recently published collections of poetry tonight at 8 at Shambaugh Auditorium.

"To be a poet is to be an experimental writer — one is trying to find words that haven't been put into words," Bell said. "Poems take on

Bell, who authored 13 volumes of small.' poetry and essays and has worked more than 30 years, will read from "The Book of the Dead Man" and the unpublished "Rador: The Book of the Dead Man, Vol. II."

'Dead Man' isn't about a dead man, but an alive man who participates fully, yet always with a vision of the long haul," Bell said.

Wright, who is teaching poetry at the workshop this semester, said although she experimented with several art forms in the past, poetry is what allows her to express herself

"Poetry chose me," she said. "It has an emancipatory function. We most free in you.

I don't understand how you can publish such an article without listing the dangers of this drug. Being a journalism minor, l know you should include both sides of the story. Being a college student, I know of the stress a student has to deal with. This drug could be appealing to those who are stressing and just looking to relax themselves. You never know how many students you have influenced with this article

Noelle Anne Niosi, '96 grad, Hofstra U., N.Y.

U. Magazine does not promote; it only reports. We stand by our story.

Mom's for U.

As a mother of three, I ordered U. Magazine last summer for my son who was starting college in the fall. On his first visit home, I was crestfallen to find he received U. Magazine on campus for free. What to do with all the U.'s that kept coming to my house? Well, I started reading them myself and became hooked! In fact, I would recommend them to all moms sending their kids off to college. It really helps to read U.'s brand of humor and to know that your kid isn't the only one going through it. Plus, it's great to know college campuses haven't changed drastically in the 20-plus years since I went to school.

The agony of Ecstacy

The story "Coffee, Tea... or Herbal Ecstacy?" [May 1996] has angered me as well as turned me off to your publication. I actually read it twice to be sure the article does in fact promote herbal drugs. This bothered me quite a bit, considering that a few months ago, my friend was killed by using herbal drugs. Obviously he believed, as the article implies, that the drugs were safe.

Wretched review

I am writing in response to the sorriest movie review that I have ever read. I did an Internet search on the movie Once Upon a Time... When We Were Colored and in your Web site review got nothing but a bunch of gossip about who was in the theater. Please do better next time. This was a great film, but no one will know if all they read is that some fool wanted a Diet Coke. In addition, the idiot who wrote that review mentioned the story was about "a slave community" in Mississippi. This individual needs a serious history lesson. This movie was set in the first half of the 20th century, and slavery ended in 1865!

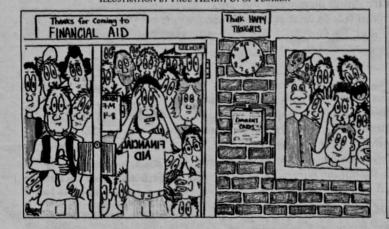

Eric B., junior, U. of Texas, Austin

Editor's Note: Hey, Eric. That wasn't a movie review you read on our Web site—it was a piece from our edgy, gossipy, behind-the-scenes entertainment coverage. You'll find the real review and others at http://www.umagazine.com/u/rocks/

Gay, bisexual or straight?

Straight: 38% Gay: 35% Bisexual: 27%

One thing we have to do is get rid of all these damn labels - "gay, 'straight," "bi," whatever. Who made up the word "gay?" Who made up the word "straight?" Me, I'm a male; I'm attracted to women. I think we should just leave it at that. Omar, senior, Grambling State U., La. . I am a gay male, and I believe that you are either gay or straight; there is no in-between. Most people who say they are bisexual say so because of who they've had sex with. I don't think you define your sexuality by who you had sex with. What's important is who you love and want to spend your life with. Brian, senior, U. of Pittsburgh. • Straight. However, I take offense to the terminology. I prefer heterosexual. I also noticed you didn't use the term lesbian, and I'm wondering why, since most lesbians distinguish themselves. Robin, gradu-ate student, U. of Oklahoma • Bisexual, and I love it because I get the best of both worlds. Sara, junior, U. of Florida. • I consider myself straight but I believe everyone is. If you choose to live differently, then you consider yourself different, but in reality, everyone is straight. Tim, senior, Eastern Michigan U. • I consider myself gay, but it's a difficult question. A lot of people have different definitions for all of these terms. Cameron, senior, U. of Nebraska, Lincoln . Straight, 'cause I love women too much to be gay, and I don't like men enough to be bisexual. Victor, junior, Rochester Institute of Technology, N.Y. • Been gay all my life, and I've done just fine. There are accepting people out there, and they really appreciate me being a part of their lives. Thanks for this poll. Larry, graduate student, U. of Oklahoma • 1 consider myself human sexual. I believe that love and sex are not related to gender. But I would not date a frat boy because I'm not into bestiality. And I wouldn't date a sorority girl because I don't do plastic. Anonymous, U. of Miami

Sick of Friends?

Yes: 35% No: 65%

Not just no - hell no! William Lord, junior, Louisiana State U. . How could I be sick of Friends? That's the best thing since sliced bread and peeled bananas. I'll never be sick of Friends, unless they make Julia Roberts a regular. James Rose, junior, U. of South Florida . Friends are the best things on earth! I love my friends, and they love me. I could never be sick of them. Why anyone would be sick of their friends is beyond me. Nichole Jefferson, sophomore, U. of California, Davis . I'm not sick of Friends. I'm just sick of their shameless self-promotion. Rachel Ehrlich, junior, U. of Pennsylvania • I'm not as sick of the show Friends as I'm sick of me and my friends being compared to the show Friends. Jacy Thompson, junior, U. of Alabama • I'm getting sick of Friends. It's becoming the Rachel and Her Friends show, and she's annoying. Daniel C. Hartman, '96 grad, Iowa State U. . I'm not sick of Friends, but I am sick of the Friends rip-offs that have been going around. Cheryl Hoahing, senior, St. John's U., Md. • Friends is a great TV show. It has beautiful people with beautiful lives and beautiful jobs, and if it ever goes off the air, I will protest. Anonymous . Whether or not a person is sick of friends depends on the friends you choose in the first place. So no, I'm not sick of my friends. Sometimes they get sick of me. What kind of question is this anyway? Calvin Lew, senior, San Diego State U.

Sweating the LDR

Aye, matey! Prepare to hoist the phone bill! Hoard the stamps! And curl up alone with a bottle of rum!

Yes, it's time to return to school and attempt yet another long distance relationship (LDR) with that special someone you left behind. Undertaking the LDR is like running the Boston Marathon, only you're refreshed with sparse intervals of sex instead of Gatorade. The only other relief is the nightly phone call. Here's a sample exchange from one of my own dignity-challenged conversations: "I miss you."/"I miss you more."/"I wish you were here."/"No, I wish you were here."/"If only I could give a hug over the phone." — and so forth.

How long can it last? No, the question is, How long can you last? You can skirt tempting situations, but sooner or later attractive sirens picks up on those "I'm taken and not interested" vibes and come rushing to take the challenge. ("Get away! Don't flirt with me! No! No! I'm not listening!")

Take it from someone who's been both a two-time LDR veteran and a two-timing LDR veteran — there's a sure-fire test to gauge your chances of staying committed to your partner: the precisely calibrated, standardized LDR exam.

Be realistic, start with a 50 percent chance and subtract or add as directed.

UH-RESTING GUEST

Northwestern U.

It was a typical morning for Northwestern freshman Erica Meltzer. She woke up to the heavenly melody of larks outside her dorm room window. She stretched and yawned, but was greeted by a not-so-typical sight — that of a large, naked, middle-aged man sleeping peacefully on her couch. The official security statement by the campus men in blue? "We don't get that many naked guys around here.'

A U. of Iowa hacker found he could successfully trespass through cyberspace - but university buildings were a different story. Freshman Joseph Hentzel hacked into thousands of e-mail accounts - including that of Iowa's president. But police, through a little cyber-scurrying of their own, were able to track Hentzel to the 2600 Club, a national hackers group. When Hentzel and other club members tried to break into a campus meeting room by crawling through an air duct, they found police investigators waiting. Hentzel was charged with a whopping 2,389 counts of electronic eavesdropping. Just goes to show you that you can surf the 'Net, but you can never escape it.

TINEWS

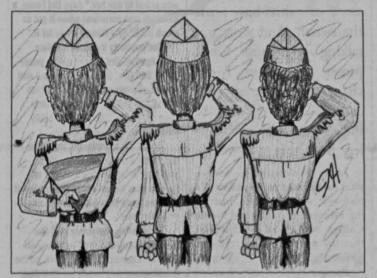

Their Lips 'Ain't Sealed

IT STUDENTS AND FACULTY DON'T LIKE THE U.S. Department of Defense (DOD) "Don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue" policy - and they won't take it anymore.

In a resolution approved by MIT faculty, a task force said that openly gay students should be allowed to serve in MIT's Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC), which includes programs at Harward U., Wellesley College and Tufts U., Mass. According to the current military rules, cadets can be kicked out of the program and can even lose their scholarships if they are openly gay.

These rules don't jell with MIT's mission to create a campus "that relies extensively on honesty and openness." That's why MIT is taking a unique approach to eliminate the common discrepancy, says Sarah Gallop, assistant for government relations at MIT.

"Other schools move away from ROTC or exempt it from nondiscrimination policies. We're embracing ROTC's presence and want the program here."
What makes MIT's program so

MIT has promised to reimburse scholarships revoked on the basis of a cadet's sexual orientation. They also hope to work with the DOD to change discriminatory laws in the military and to open the ROTC to all students.

We have not formally asked the DOD to approve the plan. We're the first to do this, so we want to make sure that we prepare our strategy for implementation," says Gallop.

Many actions need DOD approval, such as participation in summer programs on military bases, curricular changes and wearing of ROTC uniforms, but everything that's MIT-controlled will continue. For some people, that isn't enough.

There was resentment from the gay community. They complained that it was a charade - having all the accouterments of an open ROTC project that wasn't really open," says Alan Pierson, a '96 MIT grad and task force member.

The task force also met with positive responses. Papadopoulou, a '96 Tufts grad agrees with the MIT policy.

"I definitely think that openly gay people shouldn't be discriminated against, Scholarships should not be taken away, but the university refunding them is a good thing," she says.

The true test will be when and if - the school can ask the DOD what it thinks.

A Ballsy Stand

HERE'S NO NEED TO DRILL THE IMPORTANCE OF family values into Danny Wuerffel. Wuerffel, the quarterback who led the U. of Florida to a 12-1 record last fall and the son of a U.S. Air Force minister, feels so strongly about his family's values that he turned down the national Anson Mount Scholar-Athlete of the Year award in May.

Why? It was sponsored by Play-.boy magazine.

According to Playboy sports editor Gary Cole, Wuerffel — a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes is the first person to turn down the Mount award in its 10-year history. Other players have declined being named to Playboy's preseason All-American team for similar reasons.

'That's not the type of person I am or would like to portray myself as," Wuerffel said in a statement. The decision was easy, he says.

Wuerffel, a senior journalism and public relations major, was tapped for the award because of his 3.7 GPA and his outstanding performance on the gridiron. When Wuerffel declined the honor, Playboy gave it to Pat Fitzgerald, a tight end from the U. of Texas, Austin. The award included a weekend trip to Phoenix with Playboy's 26 All-American college football players.

Cole says he feels a little burned by all the media attention because Wuerffel had asked for his decision to be kept quiet. But the night before the awards weekend began, Wuerffel talked to a local reporter about declining the award.

"Had he been selected as the quarterback [for the All-American team], would he have turned it down?" Cole asks. "I don't know the answer to that, and I never will."

Hey, Ted! Say Cheese!

HEN YOU GOTTA GO, YOU GOTTA GO. Being in the right place - outside a men's room - at the right time landed four U. of Montana, Missoula, journalism students a $26,000 contract and the cover of Newsweek.

Graduate students Steve Adams and Derek Pruitt, senior Gregory Rec and junior Bruce Ely got what the whole world wanted: the first photos of alleged Unabomber Ted Kaczynski on the day of his arrest.

On afternoon of April 4, the students started down Highway 200 for the 83-mile trip from Missoula to Lincoln, Mont., after they heard the Unabomber suspect was being detained in Lincoln. En route, they spotted a white Bronco speeding away from Lincoln toward Helena with a straggly-looking man among the passengers. On a hunch, the students followed the Bronco.

As luck and perseverance would have it, their hunch was right. The four students were the only media on hand to photograph the FBI escorting Kaczynski into Helena's federal building.

Once in the building, biologically inspired instinct led them to the men's room.

"If we all had to go after our drive from Lincoln, the Unabomber did, too," Rec says. They heard voices inside the locked bathroom, waited until the agents brought Kaczynski out and nabbed the photo that graced the April 15 cover of Newsweek.

Phone calls from the national media started pouring in when news of the photos spread.

"They were just feeding on us like sharks," Rec says. To avoid competing with each other, the four friends sold their film as one package and landed a $26,000 contract with Newsweek.

So what do these big spenders plan to do with their cash?

"Pay off my student loans, Rec says.

Talk about a Kodak moment.

The Buzz

· A federal judge ruled in favor of a U. of Nebraska, Kearney, freshman who sued to live off campus. Saying dorm life offends his religious beliefs, Douglas Rader refused to comply with the university policy that all freshmen under 19 must live on campus.

• The Supreme Court upheld a ruling to bar affirmative action in admissions policies at universities. The decision only affects schools in Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana, but it sets a legal precedent for admissions policies elsewhere.

• The Supreme Court ruled against the all-male admissions policy at Virginia Military Institute. The 7-1 vote stated that the 157-year-old state institution discriminated against women and violated the guarantee of equal protection under the law. The ruling also applies to the Citadel, the only other all-male public college.

· Richie Parker has accepted a basketball scholarship from the Brooklyn campus of Long Island U. Parker, who pleaded guilty in 1994 to sexual assault, was heavily recruited by schools like Seton Hall U. and George Washington U., but the schools rescinded their offers after news of his criminal record was publicized.

LAME IT ON FEMINISM OR CRANKY COPYRIGHT laws - either way, a little lighthearted tampering with the good name of William and Mary almost caused the school to lose its shirts.

Since the late 1960s, T-shirts bearing the name "Mary and William" and the slogan "Never underestimate the power of a woman" have added a touch of satire to the 303-year-old institution, where even sidewalk bricks are considered pieces of history.

In December, the shirt was brought to the attention of the school's lawyers, who said it was copyright infringement because of the unauthorized renaming and use of the official seal.

The campus bookstore pulled the shirts from shelves for several weeks but resumed sales when the college pursued a copyright of the reversed name and slogan.

The shirts have been around for the better part of 20 years, and people always enjoyed them," says public affairs. "[The controversy] became a bigger deal than it really was. We had to protect the copy-After the new copyright was attained, the shirts resurfaced in local shops as well. "The shirts sell well enough to warrant continuing to keep them," says Sam Wallace, a local store owner who sells the shirts. Perhaps the most ardent supporters of the pro-queen camp are the students who have kept the shirt in constant demand since its creation. Mina Kerr, a '77 graduate, has had her shirt since 1973.

"It was something funny and different," Kerr says. "William and Mary isn't just old-fashioned, straight-laced stuff. It's a modern

Once in danger of going the way of the powdered wig and the three-cornered hat, the T-shirts are safe from becoming an out-of-production collector's item.

'The shirts are on the shelves," Gamage says. "We don't want to suggest that the college cannot make fun of itself in the best way."

X Marks the House

HATEVER HAPPENED TO EBONY AND IVORY? Living in perfect harmony? Not at Connecticut's Weslevan U.

Wesleyan relocated nine students last spring after dorm residents protested the placement of non-black students in a black hous-

Just hours after the students requested to live in the Malcolm X House, residents posted flyers saying their house was at risk.

Residents say the students four Asian, three Latino and two white - had little connection to the African-American studies program and picked the house in order to live in singles. Administrators say the nine spots remained unfilled at the beginning of the housing lottery, leaving them no choice but to fill the rooms with non-black students who had requested singles.

Ashraf Rushdy, professor of African-American studies and English, says residents felt the presence of non-black students would diminish the house's role as a safe haven for black students on campus.

"The Malcolm X House gives us a place where we don't think about race. We can be ourselves," says Angie Montgomery, a junior and the house residence adviser. "Our house was going to be taken away from us."

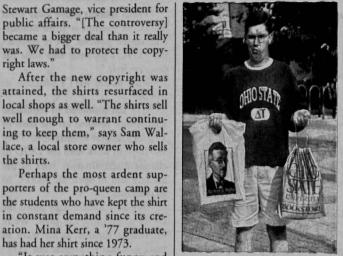

After a week of negotiations between students and Wesleyan president Douglas J. Bennet, university officials agreed to place the nine students in other dorms and assigned black students to the house. Administrators have vet to resolve whether non-black students can live in the house because they can't find the house's original charter. Current residents say they will work with the university to write a new charter this fall.

ORE THAN 300 national universities have made the switch. And we're not talking about coffee. Campuses are opting for a change from the traditional campus-run bookstore to the Barnes and Noble College Bookstore.

Many universities no longer want the financial responsibility of a bookstore, says Stan Frank, marketing manager of Barnes and Noble College Bookstores Inc. He adds that the majority of college-run bookstores don't make any money.

Barnes and Noble pays the school whether the bookstore makes money or not, so schools don't have to worry about finances. In fact, Frank says, Barnes and Noble is able to pay schools with profitable stores even more money than they make when the university is holding the reins.

"For the schools, it's a win-win situation. There are no negatives involved; only positives," Frank says. Those "positives," according to Frank, include maintaining better quality and service, keeping prices constant and increasing merchandise.

"It's easier [with a Barnes and Noble bookstore] to get what I need and get out quickly and avoid all the confusion," says Pennsylvania State U. junior Geoff Mosher.

However, some students aren't buying the hype of a commercially owned campus bookstore.

Franc Del Fosse wanted to get his girlfriend's attention when he proposed to her. He ended up getting a little more attention than he bargained for.

Del Fosse painted "Alison, will you marry me?! Franc" on the concrete "A" embedded in Arizona State U.'s Tempe Butte in the wee hours of the morning last spring. This unique way to pop the question caught the eye of his girlfriend, Alison Wright, a psychology senior at Arizona.

It also caught the eye of local police and members of the ASU Alu

"I thought everyone would see it and it would be a good way to let her know! was proud to ask her," says Del Fosse, a junior. "I was surprised when it got so much publicity. I wasn't ready for it."

The publicity included a police investigation. Del Fosse faced a possible $1,000 fine, four months in jail and two years probation. The "A," which adorns the side of a butte, has long been a target of vandals, especially those who attend rival schools.

Arlene Chin, university traditions and student programs coordinator, says the "A" is painted a couple of times a year for school functions, but it receives more than half a dozen unofficial paint jobs.

Fortunately, the police and the alumni association realized the good intentions surrounding the case, so the lovebirds weren't caged for their Aug. 23 wedding.

Buying your first computer can be as intimidating as buying your first car. You're stuck dodging sales pitches and deciphering a lot of techno-mumbojumbo, but with a little information, you can avoid the costly mistake of buying a lemon.

Any computer you buy should have at least eight megabytes of RAM (Random Access Memory) and 800 megabytes of hard drive space (internal disk drive). The amount of memory

Net Profit

ANY STUDENTS FIND THE WEB HELPful for finding term paper sources or making a homepage for their résumés. Stephen Jenkins' Web site made him a millionaire.

His site (http://www. windows95.com/) is now the biggest virtual clearinghouse in the world for shareware — software that users can download and test before purchasing.

The site started very small in 1995 when Jenkins was in his first year of the Brigham Young U. MBA program. But after he put information about how to use the Windows 95 program on his site, things began to take off.

"More people started learning about the site and visiting it. Then magazines started writing about it," he says. "That's when I started adding the shareware."

Jenkins also started getting advertisers — deep-pocketed companies like Microsoft — who added their names to his page. In addition, every three months, Jenkins put out and sold a new shareware compilation CD.

Ken Adamson, an accounting student at BYU, started working for Jenkins' Washington-based Jenesis Corporation in February. But Adamson didn't jump at the chance. In fact, he says Jenkins, his former neighbor, had actually come to him twice before about a job with the Web site, but Adamson declined both times because he didn't see much potential in the idea.

"I'm glad he came back a third time," Adamson says.

No wonder — with only a year left in his college career, he's earning a six-figure salary as the site's advertising director.

If you think that's impressive, Jenkins earned six figures a month from the site during his last few months of college. He says one major advantage of the Internet is that it has none of the geographic boundaries of conventional businesses and few of the startup costs.

"The Internet is a business playground for people who have ideas," he says. "You don't really have to be a computer expert."

But before you clock in at the school computer lab, remember that few Web sites gain enough popularity to attract repeat hits, let alone commercial advertisers. And if you do win the Web lotto, make sure you don't get caught making millions off a public college server — or you might find yourself way off line.

Home High

T AGE 5, ANN Marie Hasner of Brooklyn Park, Minn., came home from first grade with tension headaches. She was a year younger than most of her classmates and couldn't keep up with the work.

u:8001/

So Hasner's family pulled her out of school and continued her studies at home. Her headaches vanished. Her grades improved. Last spring, after 12 years of home schooling, Hasner received her high school diploma. She's since faced another hurdle: college admissions.

HUME

Hasner, who will attend Oral Roberts U., Okla., this fall, is one of many home-schooled students applying to college today. According to a U.S. Department of Education survey, about 300,000 students were home-schooled in 1990-91, compared with only 10,000 to 15,000 in the late '70s and early '80s.

"Ten years ago, there weren't as many home-schooled students," says Christy Farris of the Home School Legal Defense Association. "We're just starting to hit the time when students who started home schooling 12 years ago are now college age. That's something that's going to keep growing."

Home-schooled students face the same rigors of getting into college as traditionally educated students, but because they're taught differently, evaluating their records is difficult. Just think how does admissions compare the recommendation from a teacher/mother with one from a guidance counselor?

"There is a really strong subjective element — including written recommendations — but we do try to judge [home-schooled students] on the same criteria as any other student," says Brandon Cooke, admission counselor for the U. of Maryland, College Park.

In the 1995-96 school year, 212 of the 4,500 students at Oral Roberts were home-schooled, according to Nancy Brainard, director of the Home Education Center at Oral Roberts. "We have special scholarships and even classes that prepare [home-schooled students] for our school."

Although these programs encourage home schoolers, the future doesn't always look bright from Mom and Dad's front window. Paula, a home-schooled student from Los Angeles, graduates from high school next year but plans to return to traditional high school for a year before applying to college.

Why go back?

Paula says it's easier to deal with transcripts from regular high schools. "I say I'm in home study and no one takes my education seriously. They think I just bum around the house, watching TV."

We still want to know what home high students do about school when they're sick. Do they get homework instead of breakfast in bed?

appearing act: A group of students at the U. of Southern Maine spent five months raising $1,280 just so the fruits of their efforts would vanish into thin air.

Sounds like a dirty scheme, but it's all in the name of clean air. The students are charter members of the Acid Rain Retirement Fund (ARRF), a nonprofit corporation that buys pollution out of the sky — literally.

BIQUEBATABLE

That hard-earned $1,280 bought ARRF the right to belch 16 tons of sulfur dioxide — a byproduct of coal burning that creates acid rain — into the atmosphere. But unlike power plants that buy shares to skirt federal clean-air regulations, ARRF retires, or gives up, its right to pollute.

"Once we buy it, that's it," says ARRF president and USM senior Matthew McDonald. "No one else can have it."

The nonprofit corporation bills itself as bureaucracy-free — every cent from its recycling drives and benefit concerts pays for shares. ARRF membership is open to anyone who'll plunk down $10 for the cause, but so far most of the members are from USM's campus.

"The granola crowd is pretty prevalent here," says senior Lori Roth, an ARRF board member.

Together with environmental law societies, such as those at the U. of Michigan (which bought four shares) and Catholic U. of America in Washington, D.C. (which bought two shares), ARRF makes up a small but growing number of groups trying to bankroll better air. The ultimate goal is to drive the cost of a share so high that re-equipping plants to reduce pollution is more cost-effective than coughing up cash to buy pollution shares.

The EPA sells shares to the high-

The EPA sells shares to the highest bidders each March. This year, the 150,000 shares on the auction block cost companies some $10 million, says EPA spokesperson Dave Ryan. Approximately 950 shares (that's more than 950 tons) have been retired by various environmental groups in the United States.

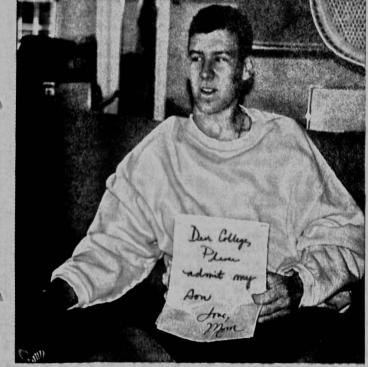

So far, corporate complaints about ARRF aren't exactly pouring in, says Linda Schoumacher, a spokesperson for Edison Electric Institute, a lobbying group for power companies.

"It's a free market. What can we do?" she asks.

Uh, cut off ARRF's electricity?

Dorm Floors Made to Order

dorm students:

Student 1: "So what's your dorm floor like?"

Student 2: "It's cool. I'm on the heavy metal, industrial engineering/goat herder, coed smoking floor."

Student 1: "Really? I didn't know they had a floor you could smoke on."

College is an experience in diversity, so many universities are trying to accommodate the wide variety of student interests by offering dorms made to order.

At the U. of California, Berkeley, housing officials are considering setting aside one floor of a residence hall for gay students — an idea that has caught on at several campuses nationwide, including U. of Maine; U. of Massachusetts; Amherst College; U. of California, Santa Cruz; Rutgers U.; and Wesleyan U.

"I think the gay floor is a step in the right direction," says Berkeley senior Lisa Jann. "Young adults coming to terms with their sexuality might find it a safe place if they have fears of homophobia on campus."

Students at Northern Illinois U. have the option of living on floors designated for certain majors, 24-hour quiet floors and substance-free floors. At the U. of California, Davis, students can choose to live in communities geared toward music and arts, the sciences or even outdoor adventure. Any one up for a little river rafting?

Of course, some schools don't like birds of a feather flocking together, which is why officials at Harvard U. are trying to end selfsegregation in campus housing.

According to Patrick Chung, assistant housing director, one row of houses at Harvard was known as "The Gold Coast" because of all the wealthy students living there.

Last year, Harvard made the room selection process random to end this type of stereotype and make the population of campus housing reflect the diversity of the whole university.

Antioch College in Ohio allows coed bedrooms within dorms — a far cry from the dorms of 25 years ago, when men and women were housed in separate buildings.

Although coed dorms don't exist at his school, senior Matt Stegen from the U. of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, likes the idea. "I would like to see a completely coed dorm. No guy floors, no girl floors. Just one floor where the sexes could intermingle."

Dave Brumfield, a senior at Illinois Wesleyan U., says he doesn't really care who he lives with or where, as long as he can do what is most important to him: smoke, drink and stay out all night.

"If I can do all that, then I could live pretty much anywhere."

From Hardback to Hollywood

OLL FLANDERS, Clueless, The Hunchback of Notre Dame and The Scarlet Letter — what do these movies have in common?

They're not movies.

Well, not originally, at least. In the past few years, moviegoers have been bombarded by classic book adaptations ranging from Little Women to the upcoming Robinson Crusoe.

Turning novels into big-screen productions is nothing new — but the number of remakes produced lately is enough to make anyone wonder if Hollywood's best and brightest have gotten lost in their local public library.

Alan Wright, a film and media

Alan Wright, a film and media studies graduate student at the U. of Florida, says the trend is just a sign of the times. "We have gone from a culture that primarily reads books to a culture that gets its entertainment through a screen," he says.

In other words, Hollywood is hitting the books because America isn't. Some people worry that America has become a nation of spectators waiting to be spoon fed information by movies and television.

"It's a dumbing down of America," says Howard Harper, professor of English at the U. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. "It's had the effect of shortening attention spans and reducing political discourse to the sound bite."

play for class.

"It was a lot shorter and easier to comprehend, but movies are always different than the book. I've learned that reading will result in a better grade in the end."

Yet some students believe movies can actually enhance the learning process.

"I think movies can be used as a good medium," says Miriam Riggs, a junior at the College of William and Mary, Va. "Knowing people our age, they'll watch the movie instead of reading the assignment, but there have always been things like that."

Others defend book-based movies as a sign that Americans still demand a plot in their movies — something that's often hard to find among the exploding buses and steamy sex scenes of non-literary releases.

Either way, Hollywood will continue to remake books — perhaps for no other reason than the industry's own lack of original ideas.

At best, they'll help expose viewers to works they might never read. At worst, they're just a more up-to-date version of Cliffs Notes.

Chrissy Tavegie, 23, a senior at Black Hills State U. in South Dakota, says her husband is her best friend, and despite trials, they can get through anything. "We just keep falling in love all over again. What is amazing is that we are going to be together for the rest of our lives."

Arizona State U. junior Rachel Ray, 21, sees marriage as a positive move that freed up time for her.

"He was right, so there was no reason to wait. We have more time because I don't have to go out of my way to see him."

And where does all that extra time go?

Married undergrads — sans the chase for companionship and mandatory hang-out time — find more time to study.

"You have no life," jokes Eric Halverson, 23, a California State U., Fresno, junior. "You don't have to worry about being social. You sacrifice the scene."

Others feel the commitment forces them to be responsible and realize their goals earlier.

"You have a support system already built in," says Kevin Elzey, 24, a Brigham Young U. senior and father-to-be. "I have a greater vision of why I am going to school. I have more desire to do well because I feel a responsibility to my wife and future children."

But life with a better half isn't always easy. Psychologist Michael J. Mayer says it's hard to adjust to someone else being the No. 1 priority, especially at a young age.

"We have seen that marriages don't always work. People are becoming more self-centered and looking out for themselves."

That means marriage isn't all bliss. Elzey doesn't have to write his name on food anymore, but he says it's tougher to find housing for couples. Only 35 percent of the 737 universities in the Association of College and University Housing Officers offer married-student housing.

And married students have their share of financial woes. "It's hard enough to find money for one person to go to school," says David Phillips, National Student Resources media director. "Most of the time, one goes while the other keeps the home fires burning."

But Elzey says marriage is worth the hardships. "We live on love, loans and macaroni and cheese."

Life, liberty and the pursuit of a good time are no longer the inalienable rights of a student. Heck, some students don't even have a choice in where they live.

The option of living off-campus has always been a liberating one ... until now. Many schools require at least one year of living on campus to "enhance your college experience" (read: get more of your money), but some schools are taking it even further.

At Ohio State U., a proposal to extend the student code of conduct to incidents off-campus is being discussed. Translation: If you do something dumb, even in the sanctity of your little off-campus abode, you'll be grounded — er, punished — by the school.

After two and a half years of closed discussions, the trustees at Hamilton College, N.Y., handed down a death sentence to the campus social scene: All students must live on campus. The result? Eight residential fraternity houses were shut down.

Mike Debraggio, a spokesperson for Hamilton, says the decision was not a direct effort to close fraternities but an attempt to re-establish the school's reputation.

"Hamilton wanted to be known first as an academic institution. We were fearful of becoming more known for our social life," Debraggio says. "The top incoming students indicated in a survey that they were more interested in schools where the focus was on academics, not the social life."

Academically minded or not, students still need social outlets, says senior Christine Gammill, president of Hamilton's InterSociety Council. In spite of promises that several new social outlets on campus would be provided to replace the fraternities, only one has surfaced: a 200-person capacity pub that closes at midnight. The pub clearly doesn't "replace" the eight closed fraternities, Gammill says.

"Eighteen- and 20-year-olds are going to drink and party. That's the way it's always been," says Gammill. The answer to the school's reputation problem, she and other students maintain, isn't to take away the few social outlets that were available.

Togal Togal

Crotchety administrators aren't the only party poopers. Students are crashing their own soirces with student-initiated regulations.

All 18 fraternities at the U. of Colorado selfimposed a ban on booze during parties last fall after an alcohol-related rape conviction and the drinking death of a freshman shook the Greek system.

Few believe the ban will be very effective or long-lasting, but it's doing exactly what the fraternities wanted: appeasing local authorities who were cracking down on petty drinking violations and easing the minds of administrators who are afraid of lawsuits.

"Alcohol is still readily available everywhere," says senior Maria Cassiani, the assistant rush chair for the Panhellenic Council. "The fraternities still have little get-togethers where drinking is abundant. They just don't have the big, blow-out parties anymore — it's more underground."

The ban hasn't solved any problems, Cassiani says. It's just created others.

"You squeeze one place and another bulges," she says. "Since the fraternities don't have alcohol, [the university is] now having problems with drinking in the dorms and drunk driving. It's nice that the fraternities are dry, but it's got a lot of scary implications."

Months after CU's ban, the U. of Iowa enacted a similar policy, and Utah State U. banned alcohol completely from fraternity and sorority houses. Schools and national fraternity chapters are taking their cue from CU's bold move and working on their own prohibition-style policies.

You make me wanna shout!

Boy: May I touch you here?

Girl: Where?

Boy: Your left breast.

Girl: Um, sure.

This isn't a game of Mother May I? gone awry, or a kinky version of Simon Says. It's a make-out session at Antioch College in Ohio. The school's sex-consent policy requires that students get verbal consent for every stage of sexual intimacy — from the first touch to the final ... well, use your imagination.

The five-year-old policy helps to prevent students from getting into awkward situations, says Karen Kovach, acting director of public relations and publications.

But do the students actually use the policy?

Junior Eric Huckaby is quick to point out that the policy was initiated and created by students. "I think a lot of people do and a lot of people don't [follow the policy]," Huckaby says. "It's used more for first encounters, when you're not sure what ground you stand on."

And when it comes to sex in the classroom, even professors are on shaky ground.

At the U. of Iowa, a disclaimer policy instituted by the school's regents forces professors to forewarn their students about unusual or unexpected materials in class — specifically sexually explicit material. Students have the option to leave a class session without penalty and complete a substitute assignment, or they can drop the course.

And you can just forget about fogging up the computer monitor with steamy uploads.

net. Most schools, like Metropolitan State College of Denver, require students to sign an "appropriate use" agreement before giving them access to an email account or Internet resources.

In June, a Metropolitan student was forced to remove pictures from his Web page because they contained graphic nudity — a man and a woman having sex.

Last spring, the U. of Oklahoma blocked more than 100 newsgroups from student access because they contained obscene material. And at Brigham Young U., 10 students were expelled for repeatedly accessing unauthorized newsgroups.

"A lot of students seek to liberate themselves with online activities," says Steve Zeller, a grad student at the U. of Iowa and a member of the Electronic Frontier Foundation — one of the 57 plaintiffs in a lawsuit against the CDA. Plaintiffs in the case argued that the act violated users' First Amendment rights.

But the limitations are getting out of control, Zeller says.

"These restrictions are a knee-jerk reaction to liability concerns, and they're overcompensating for those concerns by infringing on personal liberties."

Hey, Paul. Hey, Paula

So what happened? Who shut down the party? What happened to "the best four, five or six years of your life"? Are today's students actually buckling down for a straightforward, classroom education?

These days, it seems everything is at stake — your money, your career, your future — and making prudent, dare we say responsible, choices during college is crucial. And students know it. College just isn't the free-for-all, expand-your-mind-and-worry-about-the-future-later kind of place that it used to be. Students are on career tracks now — why dilly-dally for several years when you could be out in three and raking in the cash?

"There's a much more sober attitude on campus," says Richard Berthold, associate professor of history at the U. of New Mexico and a product of the '60s college years.

There's an awareness now that even with a college degree, you're still going to be standing in line at McDonald's for a job. It's not like the '60s and '70s, when you could skip class for a love-in and not worry about the test you're missing or the impact it may have on your hard-earned GPA.

"The '60s were fat,"
Berthold says. "Students had the luxury of indulging in protests and silly academic enterprises. You could smoke and protest away your four years of college and still find work."

But today, a .01 difference in your GPA or one extra extracurricular activity might mean the difference between Burger Time and the big time.

Paul Besing, a junior at Arizona State U., runs a freelance photography outfit with his roommate, programs several local Web sites, attends classes full-time and worked a stint at the student newspaper as a photographer — all in the name of his future.

"All the work started out as a way to support myself and start a career," he says. "Fortunately, it's gotten almost to the professional level. It panned out really well for me."

And it's not just the future that students are worried about — it's the present. With part-time jobs, student loans, internships and school work, students have places to be, things to do and debts to pay off. It's no wonder the social scene is changing.

"I partied my ass off at first, but I don't get a chance to do that anymore because I'm in school and working so much," Besing says.

Hey, teacher, leave them kids alone

And although the administrators who run colleges and universities would like to think that it's these supposedly serious, career-minded students who are the source of the funned-down campus, they have to take at least partial credit. Universities have assumed the role of the concerned parent on many campuses, so the opportunity to screw up, screw around or just plain screw isn't even an option.

"In loco parentis is dead as a legal concept, but the idea is still there," says Richard McKaig, dean of students at Indiana U. and executive director of the Center for the Study of the College Fraternity. "Universities are at least partially responsible for parenting students after they leave home."

Whatever happened to the 18-year-old adult?

"[Administrators] just sorta forget that we're adults," Hamilton's Gammill says. "If your parents are confident enough to send you away to school, the school should trust you enough to treat you like an adult."

Students want learning experiences, not curfews. "I pay them to give me the opportunity to gain an education — not baby-sit me," says Matthew Joffe, a senior at Michigan State U.

But universities aren't just looking after your best interests — they're covering their own hides. The fear of lawsuits in this liability-obsessed time has administrators running scared. From Internet access to alcohol, schools are taking extreme measures to ensure that a student is safe from any perceived evil, whether it's out of a bottle or on a monitor.

"Schools have a tightrope to walk when it comes to following the law and governing students," Berthold says.

When the going gets tough

So what's left for the spirit-swilling, dirty joketelling, good time-having, prank-pulling, sexually experimenting cyberstudent?

Despite all the rules and regulations, students still manage to have a good time. It's just a different kind of fun, says Karen Pasternack, a U. of Pennsylvania junior.

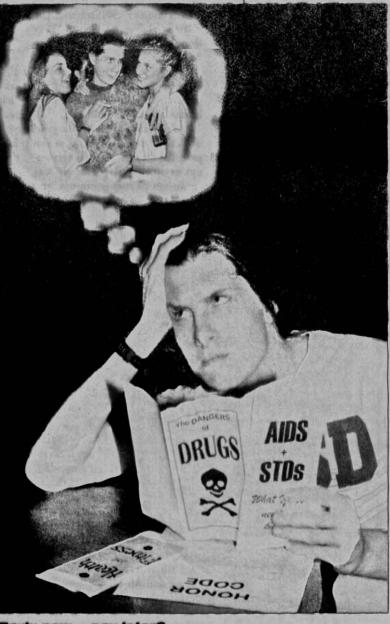

"Who says that college fun means no worries, no thinking and lots of beer guzzling?" she asks.

Michael Niehoff, a grad student at the U. of Oregon, says the changing social scene fits the student of today. "The challenges and pressures that today's college student faces may be greater than they used to be, but college is still the best lifestyle there is."

So yesterday's Brother Bluto is today's Chief Executive Officer Blutowski III Esquire in the making. What's the big deal? You can still hammer back beers, have a food fight and limbo in a suit. It's just not as easy to get the stains out.

Colleen Rush's idea of fun is singing Aretha Franklin tunes into a shampoo bottle in the shower.

before the tales of today's boyz in the hood illuminated movie screens, Hollywood released a crop of popular films featuring characters perceived by some as menaces to society. To others, however, the first positive black role models had finally arrived on the silver screen, and fightin' the man's stereotypes was doing the right thing.

The genre collectively known as blaxploitation is experiencing a comeback that rivals John Travolta, disco and other staples of the '70s.

Several events this year point to this renewed interest, including the video re-release of the 1971 classic Shaft, national film festivals and the release of the film Original Gangstas in May. And that's not all. In July, Higher Learning director John Singleton announced plans to write, direct and produce a remake of Shaft Original Gangstas reunited the most prominent actors of the original blaxploitation films. It stars Fred "B.J. Hammer" Williamson, Jim "Slaughter" Brown and Pam "Foxy Brown" Grier as former gang members who return to their crime-ridden hometown to combat the local gang-bangers. Rounding out the cast are Ron "Superfly" O'Neal and Richard "Shaft" Roundtree.

"Original Gangstas had a great impact," says Williamson, who also produced the film. "It wasn't grown-ups trying to play kids. It was grown-ups playing grown-ups, and the old-timers came out to see it."

Hollywood shuffle

"grown-ups" were kids, their films wrote a new chapter of Hollywood history and forged new ground for black actors who, despite their classical training, could only land film roles as butlers

When these

"There was very little available to black actors before the '70s," says Todd Boyd, a professor of critical studies at the U. of Southern California cinema school. When students in his African-American film class began asking to study blaxploitation films, Boyd responded with a new course devoted to blaxploitation and kung fu films of the '70s.

"Aside from a breakout like Sidney Poitier, the only consistent roles were the stereotypical roles that have existed throughout the history of Hollywood," Boyd says. "There was no sustained film movement before the '70s that could be called African American."

But that all changed when audiences of all races flocked to theaters to see flicks like Superfly T.N.T., Cleopatra Jones and Black Caesar. Black audiences especially connected with the films because, for the first time, they saw positive black images on the screen.

"For blacks, we grew up watching them, and some of us idolized the actors," says Kamal Larsuel, a senior at Seattle U. "For the first time, we had black movie heroes — black men who didn't take any crap from oppressors. I think that blacks in my generation were looking for those role models."

Not all of the films were as successful as Shaft and Superfly. Once Hollywood realized the cash cow it was sitting on, it cranked out movie after movie. As a result, the quality of the films began to suffer, and a subgenre of blaxploitation horror movies emerged, resulting in infamous, but not very good "B" movies like Blacula and Blackenstein.

Afro flashback

So why the sudden revival of interest in blaxploitation films?

"The '70s are very popular in general right now," Boyd says.
"These films in particular have experienced renewed life and interest because many rap artists of today have adopted the persona of the films and taken lyrics from them."

Even the main men of blaxploitation agree that rap music's popularity is helping the films make a comeback.

"Hip-hop contains a lot of elements from the music of the films," Williamson says. "Those films had great music. The youth of today listen to hip hop and then go see the films where the music came from."

Case in point: Public Enemy's 1994 single "Give It Up" contains lyrics lifted directly from Isaac Hayes' Oscar-winning "Theme from Shaft."

Theaters across the nation are even beginning to sing the praises of this genre by staging blaxploitation film festivals. One such theater is Film Forum in New York City, which ran a six-week festival last year.

"The response was huge, fantastic," says Bruce Goldstein, Film Forum's production director. "I think the audiences come to see these films because they are fun, funny and have action."

The naming game

The genre, however, hasn't been a total success story. The politics surrounding the genre and even the term blaxploitation have caused problems.

"[The term] serves as a useful way of identifying a certain era of film history," Boyd says. "However, the politics of the words 'black exploitation' are controversial, and the debate as to whether or not blacks were actually being exploited back then is not very progressive."

According to Boyd, the term originated from a member of the NAACP who was pursuing a career in Hollywood but met with constant rejection. He coined the term after the black action films emerged, and the media latched onto it.

"It just goes to show the power of the press," Williamson says. "The press owned the terminology. I don't understand. These films had black actors playing parts they wanted to play and audiences seeing what they wanted to see.

"I wouldn't have minded the term if they called the successful action movies Burt Reynolds was making at the time 'white exploitation' films."

After two decades, the term still causes conflict.

"We had quite a few discussions about the term," says Susan Bell, a member of the worker-owned-andoperated Red Vic Theater in San Francisco. The Red Vic has run blaxploitation festivals for two years.

"We argued whether we should advertise the festival as a 'blaxploitation festival,'" she says. "We ended up using blaxploitation for identification purposes, but I don't think it's a particularly appropriate term."

Whether or not they're politically correct or historically accurate, the term and the movies are here to stay. It just goes to show that 25 years later, private eye John Shaft is still the man. Can you dig it?

Jackson Garland, although hopelessly white, tries to be "superfly" with his flaming red afro, leopard fez and platform shoes.

T STARTED AS A NIGHT of card-playing and beer-drinking for four 20somethings from Tempe, Ariz. It wound up being the beginning of the road to musical fame for the Refreshments.

"There wasn't any one day when we said, 'Wow this is going to be our career.' We got together initially to play cards three years ago, and there just happened to be some instruments lying around. It just sort of slowly snowballed into this thing," says guitarist Brian Blush.

But it hasn't been easy for the four Arizona State U. graduates to get this far. First, they started late because their paths never crossed at the school of 45,000.

We met through the music. We wish we could say, 'Oh yeah, we met in home ec one day. We make a mean macramé," says Blush, who'll paint anything for $99.99.

The journey from the beersoaked desert town to the big time has been full of bars, hangovers, endless touring, hangovers, a bandmate change and hangovers. In fact, there were so many hangovers involved alcohol is cited by the band as an influence on their major-label debut, Fizzy, Fuzzy, Big & Buzzy.

Those songs are honest portraits of the writer and the band at the time of their conception," vocalist and rhythm guitarist Roger Clyne says. "The songs are celebra-tions of life. To say that alcohol wasn't involved would be a lie. You can hear it, you can smell it and you can taste it in the songs.'

Despite the wet times that helped the band members blossom, they've decided to cut back on their

"We were glug, glug, vroom, vroom, splash when we started this band. We got together to jam, and two cases of beer were involved. It was always a great time," Clyne says. "Then we moved from the basement to the clubs, and drinks were free. We found ourselves hung-over, unable to get out of bed or remember gigs and aching all over. We were on a path to alcoholism and self-destruction, so we eased off."

Sound of music

As part of the band's rite of passage to the industry, the Refreshments (who once considered names like Pop Enema and Motley Clue) had to decide on their sound. They settled on "Johnny Cash meets AC/DC." Others call it college-boy bar rock, sarcastic pop and the dreaded catchall: alternative.

People have said we are everything from roots rock to the saviors of f-king rock itself to the most outdated band in America," Clyne says. "We never tried to cultivate a particular image. We just simply are, and we just do."

Another influence on the sound is the geography from which they came. Tempe, also home to the Meat Puppets and Gin Blossoms, adds a southwestern flair.

There's a twang to the guitar, a dash of mariachi beats and a lot of rock and roll.

There are a lot of sounds in there - Camper Van Beethoven, Cracker, They Might Be Giants. We all grew up in different places, so we have tons of different personal influences," drummer P.H. (short for Perpetually Homeless) Naffah says.

"There is also this sort of hokeyness that comes with being from Arizona," says bassist Buddy Edwards, who likes men who aren't afraid to cry. "We were in bands that were more selfimportant before, but it's supposed to be fun. It's believable that us four guys would make this kind of music in this kind of town."

The big time

With all the changes and Mercury Records handling the business end, what else has changed? Not much, Edwards says.

"Nothing changes. We still do the same thing whether we are playing for 50 people or 800 people or 14,000 people. That happened once. We still have to play a good show. The plumber plumbs, and we play music.

"People have said

we are everything

the saviors of

f-king rock itself

to the most

outdated band in America."

- VOCALIST AND

RHYTHM GUITARIST

ROGER CLYNE

And playing music - their way - was the desired outcome.

"When we started looking at the companies, we filtered out those who wanted change immediately. There were things like, Can you write more songs with screaming?' Next. 'Would you mind dressing like Duran Duran?' Next,' Clyne says. "When we met Peter Lubin, he said, 'Do what you do, and if you fall on your face, it's your fault.'

But the increased publicity took away some of the privacy the band once enjoyed. They tour almost nonstop, see their loved ones less, and sleep is an often-denied luxury. But they try not to complain.

'You can't complain about selling 9,000 records one week in Soundscan," Edwards says. "We think about being at home a lot. But some people drill holes in sheet metal for a living."

"I can't imagine the patience or the fortitude to work a real job," Blush says. "This is a strange, weird lifestyle. It's so good."

The guys try to remain grounded in an industry filled with egoists and temptation. They have simple goals, like having a single stay at No. 14 just like Devo's "Whip It," producing a line of Hostess products and paying rent until death.

"My biggest goal is to get on The Price Is Right," Naffah says. 'We want to meet Bob Barker."

Carrie Bell enjoys Easy Cheez, Nutty Bars and Orbitz "booger juice" as refreshments.

ON'T BE FOOLED BY THE PETITE size of this soulstress. Ambersunshower packs a powerful punch when fusing jazz, hip-hop, funk, alternative and R&B.

Gem after gem of soul-soothing music fills Walter T. Smith, virtually guaranteeing ambersunshower's place on the radio and in the hearts of fans. Songs skip along at a carefree pace with addictive choruses but gather substance from forceful percussion, passionate horn solos and vocals that climb from deep octaves to an ethereal whine.

Her use of a main creative phrase as the kernel from which each track grows reveals her poetry background. It's easy to get lost in the layers of lyrics, mostly revolving around love, unfaithful men ("Voices Inside My Head"), black history, pride and emotional rebirth ("Rhythm Child").

The likes of Toni Braxton, Sade and the Artist Formerly Known As Prince need to look out before they're KO'd by the organic beats of ambersunshower.

Eddie is up to his old tricks — whiny passion and bitter disbelief squealed out in plenty of Eddie Vedderese..

Without too much departure from the band's usual grunge delights, each song conjures up a new mood. "Mankind" is a sarcastic pop song harkening back to junior high days of Top 40. "I'm Open" juxtaposes dark spoken word with spacey rhythms and simple lyrics (Deja vous brings R.E.M.'s "Belong" to mind.). The radio-accessible "Who You Are" and "Present Tense" jump out as sure single material. "Hail, Hail," "In My Tree" and "Lukin" satisfy hunger pains for heavy moshable sounds.

Too bad they're still on the soapbox because the support tour hits only podunk towns and Europe, and Rolling Stone can't even garner an interview. Pearl Jam's one of the last honest bands.

Los Straightjackets

Four burly, sweaty men in colorful masks — no, they aren't the Russian Olympic wrestlers or Mexican Power Rangers. Los Straitjackets are the hottest thing out of Nashville since Hee Haw.

Danny Amis (guitar),
Eddie Angel (guitar), Scott
Esbeck (bass) and L.J.
Lester (drums) started playing instrumental rock together two years ago and have two CDs to their name, including the latest hit Viva
Los Straitjackets. The band derives inspiration from rockabilly legend Link Ray, surf rock, movie scores and the Memphis Stax sound.

But don't let the influences fool you. Their music is pure fun.

"People can expect to have a good time," Amis says. "We aren't trying to make statements. Lack of lyrics makes us pretty socially irrelevant."

They can be heard in Harriet the Spy and Melrose Place, but sound is only part of the package. Los Straitjackets are also damn fun to watch. Just ask their concertgoers, who range from punk rockers and country fans to Quentin Tarantino.

Amis' fascination with Mexican culture led to the band's gimmick: wrestling masks. "We hesitated until the last minute to actually wear the masks, but they went over so well we've worn them ever since," Amis says.

And don't worry, they sell masks at their shows, so you kids can try this at home.

Bound to be a collector's item, Sublime offers a veritable cornucopia of musical genres — rock, punk, ska, grunge, rap and reggae.

Marked both by the Long Beach, Calif., trio's major-label debut and its untimely demise, Sublime is an incredibly tight product.

With skank-worthy beats, dingy guitars, clear enunciation of lyrics and production by Butthole Surfer Paul Leary, the CD is the band's best work to date.

Influences come from everywhere: the Beatles, Boogie Down Productions, the English Beat and the Selector. The next "Date Rape" will be this CD's "What I Got" or "The Ballad of Johnny Butt."

Before his death, lead singer Brad Nowell said, "Good music is good music, and that should be enough for anybody." Unfortunately for Sublime fans, it has to be just that.

Like the band's name implies, Northern Ireland's Chimera is a fantastically visionary whole made up of several incongruous parts. Think Cocteau Twins with dingy power guitars. Other comparisons flow freely — the Sundays, the Hummingbirds, Stone Roses. But don't be mistaken, Chimera are fresh and talented. The lush textures spiral with the soaring, dreamy vocals of Eileen Henry. Surely the country's next lucky charms.

Live from the Masque Vol. 1-3 Year One

Now that punk has broken into the mainstream, purists will be thrilled by this collection of live, loud and utterly lovable scream-along nostalgia from the Masque club on X-girl Exene Cervenkova's label. Unpolished recordings from the likes of the Germs, F-word and Black Randy & the Metro Squad are featured as well as the first public performance by X. Throw in touching liner notes by members of the disenfranchised subculture and candid photos, and you've got yourself a keeper.

The Halibuts Life On the Bottom

Surf rock usually sinks or just swims in the background, but the Halibuts lap the competition and celebrate the Southern California sound first made popular by bands like the Beach Boys and Jan and Dean. The Halibuts serve up rollicking rhythms spiced with horns, gongs and guitar solos à la Dick Dale. Something fishy makes it an easy find in stores.

Baha Men Here We Go Again Toy's Factory

Find paradise with the official "happiest band on earth." The Baha Men, who already took over charts in the Bahamas and Japan, are ready to bring Junkanoo (dance music with West African roots and lots of percussion) to the States. Like your favorite bar band, they are unobtrusive and familiar, especially on the cover of "Break My Stride."

After years of listening to Warrant, Yanni and Tiffany, assistant editors Amos, Jamis, Mel and Bell have found other great acts to break the monotony.

BY AMY HELMES

Thieves and murderers, drug fiends and mobsters, hitmen, excons, juvenile delinquents — this month's cast of criminals is a bit daunting. Why can't today's movies be more like the grandiose musicals of Rodgers and Hammerstein or Leonard Bernstein? Sure, West Side Story revolves around gang violence and murder, but at least the thugs could snap their fingers and break out in spontaneous song and dance. Bad guys today just have no sense of rhythm.

Sweet Nothing

Warner Bros.

Hugs, not drugs. That's what Oscar winner Mira Sorvino (Mighty Aphrodite) is looking for. Her junkie husband leaves his job on Wall Street for a more lucrative future dealing in shares of crack cocaine. The film is inspired by an addict's diaries found in a Bronx apartment. And where did he learn this nasty habit? From you, all right? He learned it by watching you!

The Spitfire Grill

Castle Rock Entertainment

An ex-con trades in her stripes for a spatula. The locals are suspicious of her former life in the slammer, but she uses her unbreakable spirit to transform the scornful curmudgeons into believers while working at a local greasy spoon. Sounds like another Polyannna with a sordid past, and while it did receive acclaim at last year's Sundance Film Festival, one hopes this heartwarmer won't cause heartburn. Antacid, anyone?

American Buffalo

Samuel Goldwyn

They say three is the magic number, but not in this flick. Dennis Franz (NYPD Blue) and his young sidekick are happy as clams planning the small-time robbery of a valuable coin collection. Along comes Dustin Hoffman, sticking his nose where it doesn't belong. He wants in on the heist and convinces Franz that the hapless youngster doesn't belong. Jealousy and bitterness ensue.

The Trigger Effect

Gramero

Electrical power, telephone and broadcast signals are knocked out for hundreds of miles. A family is forced to spend quality time together entertaining themselves by making hand shadows with flashlights. Well, not exactly. The suspicious power outage actually triggers a societal meltdown. Kyle MacLachlan (Showgirls) and Elisabeth Shue (Leaving Las Vegas) try to save the world while searching for some extra batteries.

Two Days in the Valley

MGM

Twelve strangers are picked to live in a house — oops. Wrong show. Anyway, 12 strangers are mysteriously connected in a topsy-turvy plot of romance, intrigue and murder in LA's San Fernando Valley (think Short Cuts). James Spader (Wolf), Eric Stoltz (Pulp Fiction) and Teri Hatcher(TV's Lois and Clark) are just a few of the dirty dozen.

Rich Man's Wife

Hollywood/Caravan Pictures

After casually telling a stranger she would like her husband dead, Halle Berry (Executive Decision) is shocked to find her estranged spouse murdered. Now she's the primary suspect. C'mon Halle, didn't Mother ever tell you to keep your psychotic death wishes to yourself?

The Crow: City of Angels

Miramax

Vincent Perez (Queen Margot) is an all new incarnation of the dark hero, back to take out evil when he's not impersonating Gene Simmons. Legendary recording artist Iggy Pop stars as one of the cold-blooded killers responsible for The Crow's brutal death.

Bliss

Triumph

Craig Sheffer (A River Runs Through It) and Sheryl Lee (Backbeat) are desperately trying to resolve conflicts in their marriage. He finds out that she's seeing an unconventional sex therapist. When he confronts the shrinky dink (er, kinky shrink), he discovers some unsuspected truths about his wife, their relationship and ultimately himself. Freud never had it so good.

Grace of My Heart

Gramer

Doo-woppin' and beboppin' her way through the music biz, a fledgling singer/songwriter of the '50s has trouble making it big (and making her hair

big - those beehives require time and effort!). Matt Dillon, Eric Stoltz and Bridget Fonda make appearances. Look out for one fab soundtrack, daddy-o.

Bulletproof

Universal

Adam Sandler (Happy Gilmore) and Damon Wayans (Major Payne) are the unlikeliest of friends—one's a drug dealer, the other an undercover cop—yet these two natural enemies are able to see the inherent value in each other. Sort of. Sandler accidentally shoots his buddy in the head, and the pair wind up fleeing from drug lords and the FBI. Not since Disney's The Fox and the Hound has a movie portrayed a theme so eloquently.

First Kid

Buena Visi

Primary Colors was the first to bring you the inside scandal on White House insiders. Now, an all-out exposé reveals where the real power and deception lie. Chelsea, we never knew! Based only marginally in fact, Sinbad (House Guest) plays a secret service agent assigned to look after the president's teenage son, played by newcomer Brock Pierce. The kid's a real rabble-rouser who makes the nightly news after mooning a public crowd. Chelsea dropping trou? Perish or cherish the thought?

Surviving Picasso

Warner Brothers

Distinguished filmmakers Merchant and Ivory have created a romantic, sweeping saga, complete with lush landscapes and rich costumes about that one-of-a-kind, wild-and-crazy ladies' man with a paint brush, Pablo Picasso. The story is told by Picasso's mistress played by Natascha McElhone. Anthony Hopkins (Nixon) plays the artist and is guaranteed an Academy Award nomination for his ability to contort his face in such a way that both eyes appear to be on one side of his face.

The Reel Deal

She's the One
Heartthrob Edward
Burns — writer, director and star of The Brothers McMullen — is back with another romantic comedy about Irish Catholic brothers in New York City.

Although you may know it better as the new Jennifer Aniston flick, She's the One centers around two brothers who are confused about the women in their lives.

"When we cast Jennifer, the hype hadn't really hit so much," Burns says. "It's not like Rachel. I think people are going to be shocked that she's this good."

Burns says the most exciting aspect of making She's the One was getting his picture on a Tom Petty cd. (Petty wrote the music for the film, marking his first film score.)

"I'm convinced I'm the luckiest kid in America," says Burns on Petty's contribution. "I got Damn the Torpedoes (a Petty album) for my birthday in the eighth grade, and it didn't come off my turntable until tenth grade."

Burns began making movies when he was a student at Hunter College in New York, and says he's a little stunned by all the recent success.

"I try not to think about it too much, and hopefully I won't fall on my face."

Screen Saver

The Truth Within

If you think you have a freaky roommate horror story, you've just been one-upped. The Truth Within is a dark drama about a psychopath in a college dorm who messes with his roommate's mind in a bizarre psychology experiment gone awry.

Twenty-four-year-old Jorge Ameer wrote, directed and produced the thriller, which will be screened at more than 150 college campuses this fall. Ameer started the screenplay while he was a student at Texas Tech U. working as — horror of horrors — a freshman dorm manager.

"I kept a journal of the weirdest things that went on there," he says. "The film came out a lot racier than I thought it would, but it will open a lot of discussions about dorm life."

Although Ameer admits to sensationalizing the film in some aspects, he says he really wanted to explore topics like date rape, drugs, the ethics of university policies and the general deception and scheming common on many campuses.

"There are a lot of twists and turns to the movie that people won't be expecting," he says. "Considering the subject and how controversial it is, I'd think many colleges would be skeptical about booking this type of film. But these are today's issues, and I think college is the place to learn about them."

And after seeing The Truth Within, you may learn that commuting isn't such a bad idea after all.

BY STEVE WILLEY

U. OF NEBRASKA, LINCOLN ILLUSTRATION BY DON HARING JR, DREXEL U.

F YOU'RE FEELING STRESSED ABOUT school, yearning for those summer days of sipping the slushy nectar out of a coconut shell by the ocean's edge, RELAX! It's perfectly normal to have anxieties about school - the return can be gut-wrenching. That's why I've devised some helpful hints that are guaranteed to slide you back into the swing of hectic schedules and all-

First, set really low goals for the new year - never aim to achieve all "A"s. Who does a 4.0 impress, anyway? Besides, the average student is more likely to give birth to a family of rac-coons. So keep it simple: Stalk the school mascot, take that management position at Burger King or quietly repeat the mantra, "I shall only urinate indoors."

night study sessions.

Second, keep up with the current fashion trends.

As you may know, nothing's worse than showing up for your first week of classes only to realize that somehow you became Super Dork: Champion of Hideous Clothes over the summer. Since most students don't subscribe to the I'm Cool, You're Not newsletter, I've taken the liberty of researching the hottest item for the coming school year.

By poring over every top American fashion magazine and taking surprise snap shots of the most smokin' babes, I discovered what "undeniably hip" means this year. My advice: Wear your underwear outside of your clothes. But remember - this is an American fad and could get you beheaded in other countries.

Finally, simply enjoy the scenery - and I don't mean sculptured shrubbery. Checking out the opposite sex cures most severe ailments, including back-toschool blues. In early versions of the Bible, Adam credited a sound mind during his days at Babylon

U. to the fact that Eve had "really lovely calves." Today is no different - especially for males who return to find women following the less-ismore trend by going completely nude (backpacks optional).

But be careful. Such scanty fashions may lead to what my parents called the "Dear Lord, Stevie! WE'VE GOT COMPANY!" syndrome. Boys, you may be stuck in that school desk forever, shifting uncomfortably and imagining Don Rickles in a negligee - or anything that will help release you from your chair without humiliation.

Having covered the essentials, let me be the first to welcome you back to yet another academic year. One more thing - remember that it's best to concentrate on the big stuff, like tying your shoes, for the first few months.

Although trendsetter Steve Willey denies it, his priest told U. Magazine that Steve's been wearing unde wear outside his clothes since grade school.
