UI student Mary Wilkinson struggles to pay her tuition bills by working two jobs over the summer and at the Davenport Public Library where she volunteers as a mentor in the school year. Because Wilkinson's results are financially stable to help her pay for education, she is able to take on the task single-handed.

Wilkinson, along with other UI students, will feel the burden of the proposed tuition increase for the 1998-99 school year that will be discussed Wednesday at the Iowa Board of Regents meeting. If the proposed increase is approved by the board in October, tuition rates will increase by at least $500 for UI students.

Although the increase at the UI still leaves the lowest of all Big Ten universities, and the proposed increase are the second lowest rise in tuition in 10 years, they will still affect all UI students. Graduate students face a 4.5 percent increase in tuition and fees which will raise the $2,600 cost to $2,750. Understate tuition for underrepresented students face a 5.2 percent increase in tuition and fees which will raise the $1,800 cost to $1,880.

"I will probably have to leave the UI because of the proposals," Wilkinson said. "I'm just concerned with the UI's proposed tuition increase, because students have to get together to pay for college and they can't.

Iowa runs the tightest of the presidential campaign. Although the current Iowa's First Congressional District candidate, Democrat Bob Kerlikowske, is behind by at least 12 points in the latest major polls, he has been able to change the political atmosphere by running a strong campaign which has included six charter buses into the state.

"Iowa is blessed with great temperature," said Wilkinson. "I'm just concerned with the UI's proposed tuition increase, because students have to get together to pay for college and they can't.

other Iowa State game gone over.

The Hawkeyes staggered over enough to win 17-16, but it is the kind of thing that bringsailing rights for another year. Yet

But give the Cyclones a little credit. They did not lose. The Hawkeyes did not destroy them. They simply expected the Cyclones to win, including the fact that one of the players playing for the Cyclones was Jane Austen who said: "I am sure it is I will try to find the field, and besides, no one will make sport for our neighbors and laugh at them in Ames.

In fact, the issue of sport is getting to be a more important issue to address. After talking to a number of Iowa State fans, I found that the difference was some problems with our friends from Ames. Some of Gustavus and St. Olaf players said that even though it is not an Iowa State fan, they enjoy it when the Cyclones lose.

As for me, I don't really care about the issue of sport. It is just another thing to worry about. I would rather be thinking about things that matter, like the environment or world peace.

Not all single dads are deadbeats

There is a dangerous term being thrown around these days, in the news media that all but denounces a father who is trying to do the right thing. The phrase "deadbeat dad" is defined in one article as "any man who does not provide financially for his children," and in another article as "a father who depends on the government for support." This is a dangerous term that has been thrown around for many decades and has become a headline phrase in the news media.

I am not one of those deadbeat dads. In fact, over three years ago my daughter was pulled out of school and I was only too glad to have to deal with this problem myself. As the child of a single parent, I was not able to provide for my daughter's needs during this time.

I received a grand total of zero financial aid award was being withheld. When people want to persecute fathers for this reason, they are only too glad to have the responsibility of doing so. It is a term which is such a phrase "deadbeat dads" is nothing more than a label for the parents who are doing what they can to support their children.

I had received was, "Well, I am not a good father because I am a single parent and because I am taking care of my responsibilities like a "man." I am just Daddy in a very special role, trying to do the best I can for my daughter. I am not trying to avoid my responsibilities. I am trying to do the best I can for my daughter and her new-found freedom and a career.

Coming epidemic: noninfectious disease

Laurie Neergaard
Associated Press
WASHINGTON - Heart disease, depression and car crashes will rankle sélection diseases in the United States in the 21st century, researchers reported Monday, Sept. 16. It will be the first time noninfectious diseases kill more people than heart disease and death by 2020, the World Health Organization said.

Noninfectious diseases will overtake infectious diseases to become the world's leading causes of death in the future, researchers said. Christopher Murray of Harvard University, a co-author of the report, said most of the findings by the WHO are considered "a bit rosy" in terms of public health, but the noninfectious disease is one that people are very concerned about and it's trying to develop countries.

In all, noninfectious disease will account for seven of every 10 deaths by 2020, up from fewer than half today. The study tobacco-caused disease will be the coming epidemic.

The report has good news: Life expectancy for girls born in every region of the world will rise by 2020, up eight to 10 years to age 80 in rich nations. In fact, the only group who won't benefit is young children, just teen-agers, but young adults over 45 will rise up very slowly, Murray said. The proportion of the population over 65 will rise 20 percent. Also, the number of deaths due to violence will increase as people nations spend speed development and the population within the region of young adults, the age group most often killed in the high ways, grow larger, he said.

Dole prepares anti-crime plan

Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Republicans are ready to unveil a new anti-crime proposal which includes tougher drug penalties and restrictions on gun sales. The plan, which Republican leaders have been discussing for months, is expected to be announced today.

The plan, which also includes provisions to strengthen the war on drugs, was described by a House Democrat as "a serious effort to address the issue." Republican leaders, however, have been reluctant to endorse any plan before the Senate passes its own version.

The House Democratic leadership is also expected to introduce a similar plan, but it is not clear whether the two will coincide.

Choate: Insider's inside loves the pupil

Kate Farah

DALLAS — He may be new to politics, but Pat Choate is no novice.

"I've been around," said Choate, a former television news anchor who has run for office twice before.

Choate, a Longview Washington D.C. resident who has never held public office, has taken up residence in a Dallas hotel through the Democratic National Convention this week.

He said he was drawn to the city by its "energy and vitality," and that he has also given up his comfortable position and job for a few days out of the week.

"I feel like I'm back in uniform again," Choate said in an hour and 20-minute interview with the AP. "I've been away from politics for a while, but I'm still interested in the issues that matter to me."

"I'm definitely speaking for Per- son," Choate said. "I think that's where I'm at, right now."

The former television news anchor is one of the few Democrats to have endorsed President Clinton, and he said he was not surprised by the president's decision to endorse Clinton.

"I've known President Clinton for a long time," Choate said. "I think he's a great leader, and he's done a lot for the country."

Choate, who said he was "dead serious about joining him in the White House," said he was "very excited" about the possibility of a Clinton administration.

"I've always been a Democrat," Choate said. "I'm proud to be a Democrat, and I'm proud to support President Clinton."

"I think he's the best choice for the job," Choate said. "I think he's the only person who can really get things done."

You waited in line an hour to see this movie. Incredible opening! Heart-stopping action! Unbelievable tension! This is going to be... a great... a great... oh no. Seated directly behind you. A talker. You can withstand many things. People who drive 55 in the left lane. People with 10 items in the 8-items-only checkout. But here you draw the line. Talking in movie theaters is sacrilege!

You paid seven bucks for this ticket. Seven bucks! To the voice you said, "Could you please keep it down?"

Mistake. The voice gets louder. "Let's move," you hiss to your girlfriend. "No," she says. "Come on," you implore. "No," she says. "I've had it with talkers," she says. She reaches into her bag. Drops a squat metallic object on her lap. What the...? Out of the corn of your eye, you see her squinting, slowly, surely screwing two pieces together. A... a... silencer! Geez! This is a side of her you've never seen before. You think, momentarily, that should this case go to a jury, it will be important to have movie lovers on the panel. She lifts the weapon from her lap. What's it going to be? A Colt .45? A derringer? You force yours 1f to look.

It's sleek. It's smooth. It's small. It's a... FBI? She's going to threaten the voice with a personal digital assistant? She quickly touches some keys, leans forward. "Computer," she says tersely to the little machine. Great. Now your girlfriend talks to inanimate objects. What's next? Lunch with aliens?

She whispers something else to the machine. Wonderful. She's decided to catch up on work during your date. Suddenly, miraculously, the voice behind you stops. Weird-like, in mid-sentence. You glance back. What the...? It's long. Round. Pointy. A... cone... of... silence? "FBI with a silencer," your girlfriend mutters. Damn, that's good software.

Bahrain agrees to base U.S. forces, weaponry

WASHINGTON - The F-117 stealth fighters, once the pride of the U.S. military, are in the process of leaving an Air Force base in California. The move is part of the military's efforts to reduce costs and improve the efficiency of its forces.

The F-117s, which are capable of flying at high speeds and altitudes without being detected by radar, were used in the Gulf War and other conflicts. They were designed to be invisible to enemy radar and to enable the U.S. military to conduct covert operations.

The F-117s were withdrawn from the active inventory in 2008, but they remain in service with the Air Force Reserve and the Air National Guard. The F-117s are expected to be replaced by the F-22 Raptor, a fifth-generation fighter jet that is considered to be more advanced in terms of stealth technology.

The F-117s were deployed to the Middle East during the Gulf War in 1990-1991, where they were credited with helping to neutralize Iraq's air defenses.

The F-117s were also used in the 1999 Kosovo War, where they helped to enforce a no-fly zone over Serbia and Bosnia.

The F-117s were also used in the 2003 Iraq War, where they were credited with helping to pave the way for the military's successful air campaign.

The F-117s are expected to remain in service with the Air Force Reserve and the Air National Guard until at least 2021, when the F-22s are expected to be fully operational.

Demonstrators rally for redwoods

California has changed — fierce environmentalists, including some students who were around in the '60s, are now leading a movement in the world's tallest trees.

Many of them are among those stopping at open camp sites after a night's rest, corralled in a corner on a mile-wide strip of land near the mouth of Russian Gulch, a tiny cove north of San Francisco.

Some say the protest is a waste of time, and by early evening between 100 and 150 of them had been arrested and handcuffed in a building in downtown Mendocino.

Among the arrested were three locals who said they were blocking the protestors being brought back to that site.

The protestors claimed they were blocking the last privately-owned virgin grove of the world's tallest trees.

Some are on behalf of the giant groves.

In a game that was tied at the shooout, Iowa's Tavian Banks and Iowa State's Troy Davis, it was another round, Hawkeyes 1-0. Banks ran 18 times for 192 yards, bettering his career high of 148 yards against New Mexico State. Davis ran for 177 with a 90-yard touchdown that ended the game. Banks was named MVP of the Classic.

The junior from Bettendorf, Iowa, scored three touchdowns and carried the ball 22 times for 205 yards. Banks had 1,902 rushing yards and 27 touchdowns in 11 games.

"I knew we had a key block and I just read from there," Banks said. "I thought I had a good cut back and down field and read that and decided to cut in. I just ran around two men, or 12 on the field." Banks said he may have dodged two men too soon.

"Every time I touch the ball, I/O wants to score a touchdown," Banks said. "I don't look for getting just a first down."

Banks was named MVP of the game, while Davis was named tournament MVP. Iowa State won 20-14.

"I think we're a team that can say it experienced a lot of ups and downs," said forward Steve Allee. "We're a team that can say we were through hard times and came through it."

Iowa's senior Jennifer Webb reaches out to bump the ball last weekend in the Hawkeyes' Classic. Webb earned tournament MVP honors.

"It was a privilege for getting it at Iowa," Webb said. "I love it here and I appreciate the opportunity to reach this goal." Jennifer Webb continued her stellar season with solid performance throughout the tournament. For the second straight year and fifth time in her career, Webb was named MVP of the Classic.

Iowa's junior Tavian Banks breaks the secondary of Iowa State in route to an 89-yard touchdown run. Banks finished the afternoon with 182 yards on just 18 carries in Iowa's 20-14 win.

"I went in to be the first receiver and a winner," Webb said. "I went in to be the first receiver and a winner." Returning to the starting lineup, Webb had a key block and I just read from there. As stifling as go, the 1996 edition of Iowa vs. Iowa State had played its drama. On Friday, Iowa won going away, 38-13.

Prior to kickoff, Iowa coach Hayden Fry had visited the locker room of Iowa State coach Dan McCarney, but the former Iowa

In the first 14 seconds of the third quarter, both teams fumbled twice.

Iowa State's offense fumbled at ISU's own 24-yard line.

Iowa's defense and Bill Voss in-state and Iowa State quarterback Todd Duncan pursue a fumble during the third quarter at Kinnick Stadium Saturday. Duncan lost two of those third down and turned the ball back to Iowa.

The Hawkeyes' passing attack was slowed by an ankle injury, but should be ready to play next week against Arkansas, said Arians, the fifth game in the series.

"It was a good game for Iowa State," said Pete Matthess, "but we needed to get better at some things and turn the ball over.

Dodgers rally late to defeat slumping Cardinals.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers finished 3 1/2 games behind the NL West-leading San Diego Padres with a 4-3 victory over the New York Mets. Pittsburgh's bullpen nearly blew it.

It was the Padres' sixth loss in seven games, and it ended their 10-game winning streak. The Mets' bullpen nearly blew it, too.

The Mets were leading 3-2 in the ninth inning when relief pitcher Fernando Valenzuela entered the game to face Lou Whitaker. Whitaker hit a double and advanced to third on an error by Mets catcher Gary Carter.

Valenzuela then intentionally walked the next batter, Dave Winfield, to load the bases. But he got the next batter to ground out to end the game.

The Mets had scored three runs in the sixth inning, but the Padres rallied in the ninth.

The Padres' four runs off reliever Tom Glavine were the most scored by the Mets in a game since July 24, when they scored seven runs off reliever Dave Righetti in a 10-6 loss to the Chicago White Sox.

The Padres had lost 10 of their last 14 games, and they are now three games ahead of Houston in the NL West.

The Cardinals stayed three games behind the Mets in the NL East. The Mets' winning streak ended at 11, as they had scored seven runs in their previous two games.

Moon shines over Bears

By MIKE HABIB

Associated Press

CHICAGO - Warren Moon has called the Bears his team ever since this was announced as the Miracle Minnesota Vikings in 1989. Moon's left arm is rusty as well.

"We only go as far as our left arm can carry us," said Bear linebacker Mike Singletary. "There is no limit to what Warren can do."

But the Vikings have no one else to talk to besides Moon.

Minneapolis wide receiver Cris Carter gets tackled by back Dan Hampton after catching pass from Quarterback Jeff Bono.

"We're on the same page," said Singletary. "I'm happy for Warren and the fans here."

Bears head coach Mike Ditka is impressed with Moon's arm.

"He's got a left arm that throws the ball like a right," Ditka said. "I'm happy for him."

U.S. retains Presidents Cup

Amonte goal catapults U.S. to title

JOHN G. KELIS Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — It sounds impressive: United States, world champions in tennis and hockey. Sixteen years after Mike Eruzione led a great team to the gold medal in the Winter Olympics, the U.S. won its third Presidents Cup in a row.

That's because the Presidents Cup is not the World Cup of hockey. That's because the U.S. is not the dominant hockey nation in the world. That's because the U.S. men's game is still evolving.

But it was the most important hockey victory for the United States since Eruzione and his teammates won gold on Feb. 20, 1980.

The psychological effect of the American win was huge. It showed the world that the U.S. men's game could now be a factor in the world hockey scene. And it set the stage for a potential hockey boom in the United States.

The U.S. team was led by Brad Amonte, the 24-year-old goalie who has been in the spotlight since the 1991 world championships.

Amonte's goal in the 82nd minute of the Presidents Cup final turned out to be the game-winner against Sweden, which had led 2-1 with only one minute left.

"It was the most important goal in the past 16 years," said United States coach Golden Kruger. "It was the greatest moment of my career."

The Big 12 Conference may not be as big anymore.

With four of its six Top 20 teams playing non-conference games Saturday, the Big 12 had two winners and two losers - Colorado and Iowa.

The Aggies were shocked at final gun in Stillwater Tuesday and 12-yard pass late in the first quarter and held off big-play Oklahoma State 25-13.

Alvin Duke had an 80-yard punt return and Bill Montgomery ran 61 yards on a fake punt for Vandy scores as the Alabama Crimson Tide took control of the Southeastern Conference for the first time this century.

Kansas State beat Cincinnati 17-10, and Kansas routed EU 41-0 for its fourth straight win over the Jayhawks.
