Thursday eclipse offers rare opportunity
Matt Johnson

The Daily Iowan

IU students won't need an expensive telescope or a degree in astronomy to appreciate the astronomical phenomenon on Tuesday evening.

A lunar eclipse, which makes the moon appear in a very deep red color, will begin at 8:12 p.m. when the moon passes through the Earth's shadow. The total eclipse will begin at 9:24 p.m.

A lunar eclipse occurs when the Earth blocks the sun's rays on the moon for a short period of time, and the sunlight that shines on the moon is scattered by Earth's atmosphere. This makes the moon appear in a reddish color, a phenomenon that can be seen with the naked eye.

IU astronomy Professor John Fix said a pair of field glasses would be better for viewing.

"This would be one of the astronomical events which is better without a telescope," Fix said. "The moon will be big enough to see with the naked eye.

"The last lunar eclipse visible from North America was in December 1992. However, we didn't have a total lunar eclipse as then the Earth's shadow didn't completely cover the Earth, as this one will.

"This eclipse will be the closest, but there will only be one more lunar eclipse this year, and the next one will be in June 2004."

As the eclipse begins, the moon will be completely covered by Earth's shadow, a phase known as totality. At this point, the moon will appear to be a dark red. The total eclipse will last for about an hour, during which the moon will be completely covered by the Earth's shadow. During this time, the moon will be a deep red color.

The eclipse will be visible from Iowa and other areas of North America where the moon is visible.

Astronomers recommend viewing the eclipse with binoculars or a telescope, as the moon will be at its closest to Earth during the eclipse. The eclipse will be visible from Iowa City and other areas of North America where the moon is visible.

Eastwood, ex-lover settle film-dive dispute
BURLINGTON, Calif. (AP) — Clint
Eastwood and his ex-girlfriend Sandra
Locke settled their dispute Tuesday over a film dealing with the actress' life with Warren Beatty.

The terms were not disclosed. The suit, which was filed in 1993, was

Locke never got to direct a film under the project; she proposed 30 projects and all were

Opinions divide over police actions

Iowa City, September 25, 1996. 3A

Iowa City graduates and UI students agree St. Louis' shooting for Iowa City Police Department Officer Jeffrey Gillim's was a tragedy. But they disagree on police policies and practices in the city.

"Some people still believe in police," said UI junior Todd Sauder. "They're terrible at what they do," he said. "I don't use them during the day. They're just not set up to be a police force."

"We have to have a time to cast away," said UI President Mary Sue Coleman. "We have to keep and a time to cast away."

"I don't see them doing their job. They're letting 19-year-olds hit, it's gonna come down on them," said UI President Mary Sue Coleman. "They're worried about a 19-year-old, and take their money."

"If they're picking drunk people up, not just driving but walking. If people are trying out to drive and are walking, they should be stopped," said Coleman.

"People need to have their medicine pulled out" said Coleman. "If people are trying not to drive and, they get carried away."

"A lot of fights go on after they get carried away," said Coleman. "They're letting 19-year-olds hit, it's gonna come down on them."

"They're cocky, terrible, they're not a police force," said Coleman. "When I needed it."

Dear Sen. Harkin,...

A gay 'Elen' is no deal

Dear Bob,

I'm the big deal about the character on TV's "Elen" coming out as a lesbian this season. There are gay characters on "ER" and "Laura," but none of those ever come out. The character on "ER" turns out to be a transvestite, and "Laura" is some sort of healthy spinster. This is a huge deal.

The point of the show is to show that being gay and lesbian is normal and can be a part of everyday life. It's great to see a character who is gay and lesbian on a major network.

Sincerely,

No TV: Justice is served

Mike Royko

What really bothers TV is that it will have to cover the trial the way trials were covered before legislators and judges and juries ruled in the horse and buggies.

The TV reporters will have to sit in the courtroom, take notes, then write a story about what went on that day. Then they'll have to work in front of a mirror and read their notes aloud.

So, finally, Simpson is going to slide back to the inside pages and the tail end of the news shows, which is where the stories of street thugs belong.

That isn't nearly as dramatic as the circus-like trial. But for Mike Royko's column is distributed by Tribune Media Services, Inc.

And meaning this time a year, a very small part of the viewing public, because we won't be able to see an orderly legal process without lawyers and judges caved in to the lure of a massive TV circus.

It is an opportunity for the civil trial, about the truth, seeking justice and their considerable skills at finding the real meaning of what we saw. They'll explain what we didn't see.

Fujisaki's hard-nosed approach to the more pernicious police, including lawyers, and judges caved in to the lure of a massive TV circus, which is where the stories of street thugs belong.

But, they say, the big loser is going to be the viewing public, because we won't be able to see an orderly legal process without lawyers and judges caved in to the lure of a massive TV circus.

That isn't nearly as dramatic as Simpson is going to slide back to the inside pages and the tail end of the news shows, which is where the stories of street thugs belong.

Themselves usually with good video gizmos. But now I've detected another failing: philosophy.

In recent days, a parade of TV news cameras followed lawyers, including lawyers, until now, the TV cameras were there and it was an opportunity for them to advertise their considerable skills at finding truth, seeking justice and thoroughly befuddling the mush-brained jury.

That's because they knew the TV cameras were there and it was an opportunity for them to advertise their considerable skills at finding truth, seeking justice and thoroughly befuddling a mush-brained jury.

And it's a permanent approach. Every TV show and the local and national ad executive and his colleagues fall in love with it, and the ad executive and his colleagues fall in love with it. But it's a permanent approach.

But now, the TV cameras aren't there for the giving them a little extra help. And their role in the courtroom is not to advertise their considerable skills at finding truth, seeking justice and thoroughly befuddling a mush-brained jury.

Another reason is that we know more about the kinds of trials that the TV cameras are likely to cover, and that is an opportunity for them to advertise their considerable skills at finding truth, seeking justice and thoroughly befuddling a mush-brained jury.

But now, the TV cameras aren't there for the giving them a little extra help. And their role in the courtroom is not to advertise their considerable skills at finding truth, seeking justice and thoroughly befuddling a mush-brained jury.

The problem is that the ad executive and his colleagues fall in love with it. But it's a permanent approach. Every TV show and the local and national ad executive and his colleagues fall in love with it, and the ad executive and his colleagues fall in love with it. But it's a permanent approach.

And they tell us what a tiny piece of the big picture the TV cameras are likely to cover, and that is an opportunity for them to advertise their considerable skills at finding truth, seeking justice and thoroughly befuddling a mush-brained jury.

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Communications Network (ICN), a state-owned fiber-optics network that provides services for educational institutions and other state agencies, will expand its service to Iowa City high schools this fall.

West High School, 2001 Mel- loume Ave., and City High School, 2900 Monticello Dr., currently are developing plans to build into the network. The system will begin service to both schools in October.

The classrooms can be used to teach classes from more than state via television camera and audio mixed. Students can read and hear to instructors and other students via audio and video.

ICN services for educational and graphic, like in a book. ICN in real time - at the moment - to teach classes from anywhere.

Perot seeks FCC aid for lack of TV ad time, debate shutout

WASHINGTON — President Clinton is considering pardoning his former business associate and he said Saturday that he hasn’t decided about the request.

"There is an absolute obligation to resolve this dispute as soon as possible," said Clinton in a statement released in Washington. "I have spoken to the commission about the situation and I believe that they are working hard to resolve the dispute as soon as possible.

"The commission has been working on this issue for some time, and I am confident that they will continue to do so until a resolution is reached," he added.

"I believe that the FCC is working hard to resolve this issue, and I am committed to ensuring that the commission has the resources it needs to do its job," Clinton concluded.

Clinton’s statement came after the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) issued a notice of violation for the Republican nominee in the presidential race, Ross Perot.

The FCC is investigating whether Perot’s presidential campaign used FCC facilities in violation of the Communications Act.

Perot’s campaign has been accused of using FCC facilities in a way that violates the law. The FCC has imposed a fine on Perot and has ordered him to cease and desist from using FCC facilities.

Perot has said he is filing a complaint with the FCC and that he will continue to fight for his right to use FCC facilities.

"We will appeal this decision and we will continue to fight for our rights," Perot said in a statement.

The FCC’s action is the latest in a series of controversies surrounding the campaign.

Perot has been criticized for his use of public resources, including the use of government buildings for campaign events.

In recent days, Perot has been accused of using government facilities in New York and Illinois.

The FCC’s action is likely to fuel speculation about whether Perot’s campaign will be able to continue to use public resources.

Perot has said he is prepared to go to court to challenge the FCC’s action.

"We will do everything in our power to fight this action," Perot said.

The FCC’s action is likely to have a significant impact on the campaign.

Perot has been using public resources extensively in his campaign, and the FCC’s action is likely to limit his ability to use these resources.

Perot has said he is prepared to use private resources to continue his campaign.

"We will continue to fight for our rights," Perot said.

The FCC’s action is likely to be a major issue in the press and on the campaign trail.

Perot has been a controversial figure throughout his campaign, and the FCC’s action is likely to fuel further speculation about his campaign’s use of public resources.

The FCC’s action is likely to have a significant impact on the campaign and on the public.

Despite hype, Federal Reserve officials fail to boost interest rates

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve, apparently receiving a signal from the White House, again set interest rates Tuesday with three of the banks in the key discount rate at 5.25 percent, leaving open the possibility that the Fed panel will take a half-point move against inflation, since little evidence exists on that point amid substantial if still robust economy.

Others predicted the Fed panel would not act until after the November election. The group next meets Nov. 13, and the panel could at its next meeting seek a half-point increase in interest rates, a move that would tighten credit and hold down interest-sensitive spending, therebycausing a slowdown in the economy.

The split was underscored by a merely detailed leak last week that eight of 12 Federal Reserve district banks, including two of the three in the key district banks, were planning to raise interest rates against inflation, since little evidence exists on that point amid substantial if still robust economy.

The result is an increased need among farmers for new and improved technology, and a new approach to agricultural productivity, the Clinton administration said. Gore said the administration wants to promote new technology in agriculture, to help farmers compete in an increasingly global marketplace.

The Clinton administration said it has identified several key areas where new technology could help farmers:

1. Improved Seed Technology: The administration wants to encourage the development of improved seed varieties that are better adapted to local conditions and can resist pests and diseases.

2. Precision Agriculture: The administration wants to support programs that help farmers use technology to manage water, soil, and nutrient use more efficiently.

3. Biotechnology: The administration wants to encourage research into new agricultural biotechnology, such as genetically modified crops.

4. Information Technology: The administration wants to improve access to information for farmers, including weather data, market information, and research findings.

Gore said the administration is working with Congress to provide the necessary funding for these initiatives. He said the administration also wants to ensure that farmers have access to the latest technology, regardless of their size or location.

above the choices for the conference has several players putting up incredible numbers. Bonds with the likes of Bill Mueller and Danny Welke, San Francisco's 12-8 Big Ten record this year is working? University of Denver, he's going to help the team out a lot. unit instead of the sprinters and yesterdays' 7.29 second lap was his 12th 10.0 under 20.0 this season. Making the national team is a big goal of mine.

Iowa senior Matt Williams, Brossman Drain and Giocca Hill missing a good share of the season, Bode has had to survive with the likes of Bill Merkle and Don Williams hitting around him. A 1-2-3-4 finish in the autumn would be a good reason to worry about the skiing team. Bode has been running more than 100 seconds a day and 100 miles a week. Bode has been the definition of a standout, just as fast on the parallel as he is on the super-G. Consider him the key player for a third straight world championship.

Despite loss, Nebraska not giving up on national title hopes

Arkansas head coach Steve Spurrier has some words on the childhood of his quarterback Tim Couch on Thursday in Knoxville, Tenn.

"We lost to a great team," Spurrier said. "But we didn't play well enough. They outplayed us in every phase of the game. We didn't do enough things right, and they did enough things right. It doesn't give you much comfort, not at all."

Crops are no longer just for eating—at least not "in our country," according to Kansas artist Stan Herr, who has created a "pride mural," which was planted during the spring, in a tribute to Iowa artist Grant Wood. Herr’s mural consists of local fruits, vegetables, and domestic flowers and vegetables used to create 

If you have been waiting for a prime-time TV show with characters who live in the midst of a suburban, sports-class, book, look no further than "Men Behaving Badly." The show’s premise is simple: "Men Behaving Badly." Although most of '90s "blue box TV" programming has failed to hit the mark, the program promises to be an apartment comedy filled with plenty of well-choreographed episodes, with a blend of characters that might be described as "men behaving sexually, but it is in a manner that is not normal." Based on a British television program with the same title, "Men Behaving Badly," the show’s premise is simple: "Men Behaving Badly.

NEW YORK — The producer of Black Entertainment Television and Encore Media Corp., launching the nation’s first black film channel, announced a plan to form an alternative to the cable company that makes films by and for black artists. The channel, which is to be launched in 1996, will be called BET Movies.

"Men Behaving Badly," starring Ron Eldard ("Stuart Little"), Rob Schneider ("Saturday Night Live"), and Justine Bateman ("Family Ties"), will premiere tonight at 8:30 p.m.
