NITROUS OXIDE CRAZE SOARS

Parties play host to a gas for users say is dangerous

Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

That's gas, man, and the sound of laughter and loud music permeated the atmosphere along with the pungent smell of nitrous oxide, the gas better known as laughing gas, on the evening of Oct. 2.

At least on the surface, it appeared to be a fun night, but behind the smiles and laughter, those who were present were engaging in a potentially deadly activity.

Nitrous oxide has long been used as a comedy propellant, but in recent years, it has gained popularity among teenagers and young adults for its use as a recreational drug.

The gas has a mild euphoric effect and is often referred to as "laughing gas" due to the intense laughter it can induce.

However, this popular trend has also led to a concerning increase in the number of accidental deaths and severe injuries related to the use of nitrous oxide.

The dangers of laughing gas use are well documented, yet its popularity continues to grow. The reasons for this are multifaceted, but they often revolve around the thrill of using an illegal substance and the desire to fit in with peer groups.

Stopping the use of nitrous oxide is crucial to protecting the health and safety of young people.

It is important for parents, teachers, and community leaders to educate themselves and others about the risks associated with the use of laughing gas.

Together, we can work to prevent this dangerous trend from escalating further.

Living with death

The thing no one ever talks about—what people are really scared of—is death. The thing most people would prefer not to know is that we all have a finite amount of time. And the way she spoke Germaine to me seemed like a final goodbye.

I've never told her how the painting of Jesus was done. I never told her I loved it when she spoke. I didn't tell her how the painting of Jesus was done. It was Mother's Day and tying a pink bow in one of them. I'm not even sure we come to terms with it. I never told her how the painting of Jesus was done. I didn't tell her I loved it when she spoke. Separate by choice, and worth it

A recent trend in university housing is to create separate residences for students based on race, ethnicity, and sexual orientation. This move is driven by the hope of fostering safer living environments and promoting diversity and inclusion. Yet, while these efforts may seem well-intentioned, they overlook the importance of collective action and the need for a truly inclusive environment.

For example, studies have shown that students from marginalized backgrounds may feel more comfortable and supported in mixed-race dorms. Moreover, the social benefits of diversity extend beyond the physical space of residence halls, as students from different backgrounds can learn from one another and expand their perspectives.

In conclusion, while it is important to create safe spaces for students, efforts to separate by race or sexual orientation can inadvertently perpetuate segregation and limit the opportunities for cross-cultural interactions. A more effective approach would be to promote a culture of inclusivity and acceptance across all university housing options.

VMI correctly identifies its mistake

A new study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association found that the use of residential hall systems for freshmen, sophomores, and juniors at Virginia Tech was associated with a higher risk of death by suicide. The study, which analyzed data from 2000 to 2016, found that students living in these halls were 2.5 times more likely to die by suicide compared to those living in other residence halls.

The Virginia Tech suicide prevention center is now reviewing the findings and taking action to improve mental health support for students. They are, for example, exploring new programs and initiatives aimed at reducing suicide risk and promoting mental health awareness.

What do you use your e-mail for?

* Akane Higashi: e-mail writer*

John Carter

When students are asked how they use their e-mail, the responses can be quite diverse. Here are some common uses:

- To communicate with friends at other universities or countries.
- To keep in touch with family.
- To check class assignments and grades.
- To access library resources or course materials.
- To send email attachments.
- To send and receive files.
- To use email for academic purposes.
- To use email for personal reasons.

Despite these uses, e-mail remains a versatile tool that can be adapted to various needs and contexts. Whether for work, study, or personal reasons, e-mail offers a convenient and effective means of communication. However, it is important to remember that while e-mail is a valuable tool, it is not a substitute for face-to-face interaction or other forms of communication.
Interview with the vandal

Mike Royko

What else does he do, besides graffiti? "I'm going to Columbia College to study music and to master, imitation, things like that. For right now, I'm on vacation. I'll get through it. This is the first I've ever gotten. Maybe next time. They do such a fine job. Fun, art for people who appreciate it. They eliminate what's there and dismantle it for the future and the younger kids who get into it."

Today's vandals have a strange mindset.

"It's not for the public except they are a lot of reasons. It's kind of egoistic. People who get through it. People would get it, you know. I'm not saying it's the best thing. When they complete a painting or a writing or a graffiti and they look at what they created, there is a powerful feeling."

How do his parents feel about his paintings? His parents, "They're sick of it. It's a bad influence for him."

"As a parent you just have to hope for the best."

"It's not the same. You can't get as much feeling when you go see it in the daylight, it's big and bright, it's colorful, it's got to be there to be looked at, especially for them. People who appreciate it."

Told Royko, "If you're into computer science, data processing, accounting, auditing, math or law..."

October devoted to abuse awareness

Cara Sadowski
The Daily Iowan

Almost one year after the D.S.o. epsilon typical verbal attack sparked a friendly discussion rather than a fight, the newly formed Domestic Violence Awareness Month began today.

"This has been the first day of the month long celebration for the past two years," said Afro-American Greek system's Buchanan. "We have been pleased with the people who have joined us in our awareness campaign over the years, including the Electronic Reserve System, which provides a forum for students to express their views on the issue.

Delta Sigma Theta had a series of organized events planned for the month, including a "Unity Day," which was a day dedicated to promoting awareness of domestic violence.

Students enjoy ease, low cost of e-mail

Although the opportunity is available for students to register for an account, some students still use their personal e-mail accounts. Mike Walker, a fourth-year biology major, uses his personal e-mail account.

"I never got one in high school, and I don't have one now," Walker said.

"I think it's all just personal preference. Some students might not want to be so connected."
New guidelines stress overall weight over daily calories

WASHINGTON (AP) — You didn't need advice yesterday and you won't need advice today. Just don't try to follow any of that in the next few days.

That recommendation comes from the American Heart Association, which issued new guidelines Tuesday that say the nation's working class is getting plenty of calories but not enough exercise and people are eating too much fat and cholesterol.

"It's fairly clear now that the changes are associated with heart-disease risk do represent more of a long-term trend rather than changes that occur with any given meal," said Dr. Ronald Krauss, a cardiologist at Colorado State University.

QB's will sit for different reasons

Associated Press

Lake Forest, Ill. - Erik Kramer sits occasionally in a thick foamed leather wrapped around a two-top table, discussing the mind games with a nagging neck, discussing the mechanics of a neck wearing out with age. It's not a question of if, Kramer says, but of when.

"I think I'm doing better," Kramer said with a shrug, a smile on his face Monday. "I wish I could play Saturday."

When he can't, in other words, Kramer hopes it's only a few weeks away.

"I think what the potential is for me is not playing again actually is no, he has explained to me is that it's very small," the quarterback said Monday, before another day of treatments for his neck. "But I'm going to try, and hopefully that's right, and hopefully that's right, and hopefully that's right, and I can get back to it."

Kramer says Sunday night might have been a little too soon, and the injury should never have happened. He's gone back to throwing, and the neck pain is down to a dull ache.

"I thought I would take it a little easier than I did," Kramer said.

"I wish I could play Saturday."

Baltimore Orioles pitcher Dave Righi nearly lost the starting rotation. The club has decided not to go with him in Tuesday's start.

Righi, who had three wins in September and a 1.24 ERA last month, goes to the bullpen and will be replaced by reliever Paul Shuey, who has a 2.85 ERA in 29 appearances.

Righi, who leads the AL in ERA, was 0-2 with a 5.79 ERA in the last three starts.

"We're not going to put Dave Righi in the starting rotation," manager Bobby Valentine said Monday. "Paul Shuey will pitch Tuesday."

"That's what you have to do. That's what you have to do to win your games and win your division."

Valentine said Righi, 28, will be eliminated from the rotation.

"I think he's doing a very, very good job in the bullpen," Valentine said. "He knows he has to do this."

Valentine said the move is due to Righi's performance recently.

"You're always looking at your starting rotation," Valentine said. "You look at who's doing well and who's not doing well."

Valentine said Shuey, 32, will replace Righi in the rotation.

"Paul has pitched well," Valentine said. "Paul has been consistent."

Oakland Athletics second baseman Ray Fosse, who led the team in hitting with a .312 average, is out for the season after having surgery on his right hip.

Fosse was hit on July 11 by a pitch from Baltimore Orioles pitcher Bruce Koons.

Fosse, who was expected to play first base and second base, will be placed on the DL with a broken hip.

"It's a shame," Valentine said. "It's a shame for Ray."

Fosse, 22, was hitting .266 with 16 doubles, 11 homers and 52 RBIs in 1963.

Baltimore Orioles: Brady Anderson knocked in the winning run against Kansas City Royals pitcher Bret Saberhagen on Wednesday night.

Anderson had a single in the 10th inning, allowing the Orioles to beat the Royals 4-3.

"I thought it was a good at-bat," Anderson said. "I had a good idea of where the ball was going."

Anderson, who is hitting .288 with 17 RBIs in 241 at-bats, said he was looking for a pitch in the zone.

New music will rock you into fall

The Daily Iowan

After a lackluster summer season dominated by The Pharcyde, Alanna Mariottte and Metallica, music fans can rejoice with this fall's most-anticipated releases. For fans of rock, soul and pop, there is an album for everyone. Here are some of the fall's most-anticipated releases and their projected release dates.

Matchbox Twenty - The Way
This is the Time
While the band debuted with the hit single "Bend and Break," their follow-up album is projected to be released in late November. The album is a departure from their previous sound, featuring a mixture of pop and rock.

Shania Twain - Come On Over
Here we go again! Shania's new album is projected to be released in early December. Expect a mixture of pop and country with a focus on relationships.

Madonna - Ray of Light
The album is projected to be released in late October. Madonna's first album in four years is anticipated to be a departure from her previous dance-pop sound. This fall's most-anticipated release - VH1 Crossroads: Blame
The album is projected to be released in late November. This album features a mix of pop and rock with a focus on relationships.

Tuesday, hungry Soul Brothers
Jealous This is the Time
While Madonna's role as a superstar guest, including Mariah Carey, Lil Kim and Ernie Hudson, is launching her new album, fans may be wary of the album's length. However, the lackluster pop opera, but where does one put it into the changes, the surviving Puff Daddy are releasing their new album. The album features a mix of pop and rock with a focus on relationships.

Turning up the heat is "Music Girl," by Rob Velez. The album is projected to be released in late October. Expect a mixture of pop and country with a focus on relationships.
