Officer's frame of mind considered in decision

Mike Waller
The Daily Iowan

No criminal charges will be filed against former Iowa City Police Officer Jeffrey Gillaspie for the Aug. 30 shooting death of Eric Shaw, Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White announced Thursday.

After more than a month of investigation and reflection, White said no criminal charges will be filed in the shooting death which White said was caused by "negligence and police misconduct."

White's decision not to file criminal charges came after he compiled a list of five possible charges and compared the facts of the case to the requirements for each individual charge. The five charges were murder, voluntary manslaughter, involuntary manslaughter, nonfelonious misconduct in office and reckless use of a firearm.

White said murder charges were not applicable because, in Iowa, the charge requires malice aforethought, which is defined as "a fixed purpose or design to do some physical harm to another which exists before the act is committed." White said Gillaspie did not maliciously intend to kill Shaw.

Voluntary manslaughter requires an irresistible passion for violence, a passion not a factor in the incident, White said.

White said involuntary manslaughter was missing the element of recklessness. Iowa law states a person is reckless or acts recklessly when he or she willfully, but not necessarily intentionally, disregards the safety of persons or property. Recklessness was also required and absent for a charge of reckless use of a fire arm.

Nonfelonious misconduct in office requires the person knowingly to fail to perform a duty.

White, together with Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation (DCI) Special Agent in Charge Rick Benson, released publicly for

Shaws in shock over decision

Mike Waller
The Daily Iowan

Jay Shaw said he was shocked at the announcement by Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White that criminal charges would not be pressed against former Iowa City Police Officer Jeffrey Gillaspie in the death of his son, Eric Shaw, on Aug. 30.

"(White's decision) was something we didn't expect," Jay Shaw said. "He's been making noises to us sounding like he was going to file charges. I was totally shocked. I thought he might go for a lesser charge, at least something."

White said he came to the decision after weighing all the evidence and compiling a list of five possible charges: murder, voluntary manslaughter, involuntary manslaughter, nonfelonious misconduct in office and reckless use of a firearm.

"The investigative report of the Division of Criminal Investigation (DCI) and a lot of the evidence that it produced and all of my analysis and research have led me to conclude that no criminal charges will be filed against Jeffrey Gillaspie," White said.

White said some members of the community would second-guess the decision, but said he believed every one of the five charges lacked at least one key element that Iowa law requires.

White said he did not judge Iowa City police policies, simply the facts of the case and Gillaspie's state of mind.

"The incident involved negligence and police malpractice, but it's not criminal," White said.

Jay Shaw disagreed and told White directly at the press conference that he was wrong.

"I feel like I'm living in some crazy world," Jay Shaw said, "some reverse universe where Eric deserved to die for leaving his door open."

He also said White was afraid to prosecute a police officer as a criminal.

"I do feel Pat White is a coward," Jay Shaw said. "I think he simply gave up. He thought prosecuting a police officer as a criminal was more than he could handle."

White said he hasn't second-guessed himself for the way he's handled this case. He said he couldn't base his decision simply on the "overwhelming desire for equity," and he feels his record as Johnson County Attorney speaks for itself.

"I think I've done my job," Jay Shaw said the only jus-

Jay Shaw said the only justice is to inflict punishment on those who committed the crime, a punishment that is glaringly absent.

UI students were shocked and upset Thursday upon learning Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White's decision to not press criminal charges against former Iowa City Police Department Officer Jeffrey Gillaspie.

"I think it's bullshit," UI sophomore Graham Nelson said. "At least they have to do something. You can't just go in and kill somebody and then say 'Oops.'"

UI senior Ian Abraham agreed. "It's crazy, that's all," he said. "He went onto private property under a faulty premise. Someone

Tunisians' excitement grows as Michael Jackson concert date nears

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Tunisians are practically moonwalking in anticipation of Michael Jackson's concert appearance.

TV and radio shows are chattering about it. Merchants are selling thousands of Jackson T-shirts and other memorabilia. Cafés and restaurants are blaring his hits. Hair stylists have even offered "Michael" coiffures.

Tunisians seem relieved the singer is going ahead with the concert after canceling one in Casablanca in neighboring Morocco.

"The Tunis concert has a special meaning to me because it's the first I'll give in Africa and in the Arab world," Jackson said.

Roth's return to Van Halen ends

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Van Halen to David Lee Roth: Thanks for reminding us why we couldn't stand each other. After the latest tiff, the brief collaboration of the band and its former lead singer is over.

Roth claimed in an open letter Wednesday the band deceived him into a temporary "reunion" and had secretly hired another lead singer.

On Thursday, the band responded with a terse statement.

"We parted company with David Lee Roth 11 years ago for many reasons. In his open letter of Oct. 2, we were reminded of some of them," wrote Eddie and Alex Van Halen and Michael Anthony.

Roth acknowledged the band had only agreed to record "a couple of songs" and told him it "isn't a sure thing." But Roth said the band unfairly trotted him out at the recent MTV Video Awards, suggesting the original band was back to stay.

The band also confirmed it has been recording with a new singer, but would not identify him. Roth replaced Sammy Hagar in June.

Trump Castle may be converted into Hard Rock casino

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Donald Trump, who loves to see his name in lights, may soon pull the plug on some of them.

The casino mogul said Thursday he was in talks aimed at converting Trump's Castle Casino Resort into a Hard Rock casino.

"If they pay enough money, I would allow them to put their name on it. They're buying into the building," he said.

Under the deal, the "Trump" name would come off, but he would still operate the casino portion of the building. Trump said he was seeking $325 million in the deal. Talks began two weeks ago.

"Always a Hawkeye"

Arnold shares life in Iowa, Hollywood

Renee Bovy
The Daily Iowan

The UI Homecoming Grand Marshall, who is known for his controversial marriage to television comedienne Roseanne, spoke at the Union Thursday night.

Former UI student Tom Arnold was the honored guest for the University Lecture Series.

Arnold spoke about the events that preceded his success. Born in Ottumwa, Iowa, he worked at the meat packing plant until his early twenties. He said his future started to change after he was arrested for streaking a nursing home and two restaurants in his hometown.

"I was handcuffed naked on Main Street and it was a cold night," said Arnold. "I remember thinking one day this will be funny, but right now it is scary and humiliating."

The arrest caused Arnold to lose his job at Hormel and left him looking for new alternatives for his future. Arnold's solution was to take pledges to walk in his underwear from Albia, Iowa, to Ottumwa. The fund raiser earned Arnold $2,500 for his UI tuition, and national attention.

Arnold got his comic start at the UI by doing Open Mike nights in the Wheel Room. In 1988 Arnold moved to Los Angeles to begin writing for the "Roseanne" show.

Arnold spoke openly about his marriage to Roseanne. He said after the divorce he had his tattoo of Roseanne's face removed from his chest through a yearlong laser treatment.

"Love is one thing, but having a tattoo of your wife's face on your chest is something that becomes difficult in future relationships," Arnold said.

Arnold said Roseanne's tattoo on her butt that said "Property of Tom Arnold" made him the fourth largest property owner in California.

He went on to say he and his ex-wife donated their Iowa farm and diner to Indian Hills Community College after they divorced.

He is currently using his success to benefit others, Arnold said, as the spokesperson for a children's center that cares for abused children, and he has established a full scholarship for Ottumwa students who excel in writing.

Arnold encouraged students at the lecture to follow their dreams despite any obstacles they must overcome and cited himself as an example of someone who never lost sight of his dreams.

Arnold also said he had to overcome his alcohol and drug addictions, so he could progress in his career and personal relationships. Arnold said he has not had a drink in seven years.

"If I have a drink now I know I will ruin everything I have," said Arnold. "I have been blessed."

He is currently married to a 23-year-old student from Michigan whom he met at the Viper Room in Los Angeles.

"My 20th high school reunion is coming up, and my wife is 23," said Arnold.

Arnold said he has had to overcome many stereotypes as his career has progressed. He said once he was labeled as a comedian, it was difficult to find serious roles.

UI alumni reunite for Homecoming

Melanie Mesaros
The Daily Iowan

UI alumnus Todd Christensen is gearing up for Homecoming weekend as he makes his trip from Denver to reunite with seven of his friends from his days at the UI.

"I had a lot of fun when I was there, and I have a lot of fun when I come back," he said.

Christensen said not too many things have changed from his days as a student in the 1980s.

"The games are a lot more restrictive, but the city hasn't really changed," he said.

However, Christensen said one tradition is missing. He remembers the days when students used to have bed races down Clinton Street before the parade on the Friday night of Homecoming week.

"They used to have beds with wheels on them," he said. "The girls were on the beds and the guys pushed them and they had races."

Christensen's nostalgia was echoed by other alumni, who are preparing for this weekend. Doug Busch also is getting ready for this year's Homecoming, when 30 members of his class plan to relive the good ol' days when they were pharmacy students at the UI.

"I think everyone is excited to be back, not to just see everyone, but to get that college feeling back," Busch said.

As an Iowa City resident, Busch said he is fortunate to be surrounded by the atmosphere of his college days.

"(My wife and I) had visitors over the years and they are all jealous about the fact that we are here all the time," he said. "I think just living in Iowa City tends to make you feel younger, with all of the college activities going on, such as Hancher and the Thieves' Market last weekend."

Diane Baker-Gruwell, director of programs and resources for the UI Alumni Association, said Homecoming is a traditional weekend for alumni to return. More than 500 people are coming back for scheduled reunions, and 250 members of the alumni band are expected to return, she said.

However, Baker-Gruwell said the Alumni Association only knows of the alumni coming back for scheduled reunions.

"No one really tracks how many alumni are coming back," she said.

Busch's class will be celebrating its 25th reunion with a group dinner, tailgaters and some Hawkeye football.

"There are 37 people scheduled to go to the tailgater, and most everyone is going to the game," Busch said. "Some people are coming from Maryland, Minnesota, Oregon, Virginia, Arizona and Colorado. There is a pretty wide range and four of us are from Iowa City."

Homecoming Fast Facts

• Eighty-seven floats will appear in the parade, 12 more than last year's record number.

• The state of Iowa will show off its float in the parade commemorating the Sesquicentennial of the state.

• Parade-goers should arrive about 20 minutes before the 6:15 p.m. starting time and are advised not to drive.

• SCOPE is sponsoring a concert featuring local bands in the Pedestrian Mall at 4 p.m. before the parade.

• KGAN TV-2 is going to be broadcasting the parade live from Clinton Street near The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton.

• Tom Arnold will present the game ball when Iowa takes on Michigan State on Oct. 5.

• The Saturday halftime show at the football game will include performances by the Hawkeye alumni band and Hawkeye marching band, as well as a special presentation of the honorary Olympians.

• UI senior Scott Bush and UI senior Robin Hawkins will also be honored at half-time as Homecoming King and Queen.

Stephan Ilten
The Daily Iowan

Those Iowans who are registered to vote and have made their choice of whom to vote for can go ahead and cast their ballots.

By 5 p.m. Thursday, 678 people had already voted in Johnson County and County Auditor Tom Slockett said there will be more in the days to come.

"In 1992, 17 percent of the total vote came in before Election Day, and in 1994, 24 percent of the vote came in early," he said.

This increase in early voting translated into an increase of overall voting, and was due in part to a new service called satellite voting, Slockett said.

"Satellite voting means that, instead of requiring people to stop in and vote here, we go and collect their votes where people are," he said. "We'll be collecting ballots at the IMU and the hospital and several other places to get more students to vote."

Satellite early voting will be available at the Union from Oct. 21-25, and on the eighth floor of the UI Hospitals and Clinics from Oct. 28 until Nov. 1, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Allison Miller, who is running voter registration drives through the UI Student Government, said the service will probably raise the number of student voters in this election.

"For a lot of students, this is the first election that they can vote in, and many are convinced that they don't have to vote or that it doesn't matter," she said. "But if they have the opportunity to vote in a comfortable environment between classes and then see all of their friends vote, they should get more aware."

It wouldn't be a first if the early vote decided the outcome of the election, said UI graduate student Jay Dee.

"In February 1993 in Fort Madison, the Democratic state legislator, Rick Larkin, got fewer votes than his opponent on Election Day, but there were so many votes cast for him before Election Day that he won," Dee said.

Larkin is still in office, said Dee, who is currently volunteering for the Democratic campaign.

Miller said most students want to vote on Election Day when they see their friends vote, but then realize they haven't registered and can't vote.

Voter registration forms can be picked up at the front desk of the Union, and those eligible for voting can also register at all banks and post offices in Johnson County, Slockett said.

"Maybe the easiest of all would be to fill out the form that is in your phone book and send that one in," he said.

Slockett said, due to early voting in 1992, Iowa's per capita turnout rose from No. 24 in the nation to No. 3.

"So, by making it more convenient for people to vote, we've increased participation," he said. "This year, every small town in the county and the rural areas have requested ballots."

Slockett also said he expected an increase in student voting this year due to satellite voting and because it is a presidential election.

"All students should register to vote," he said. "I think it's a patriotic, active way of participation, and in presidential elections, students vote better than in other elections."

Students who live or go to school in Johnson County but are registered in other cities can register here or vote absentee, he said.

"Students can choose if they want to vote here or at their parents' address," he said. "If they register here, that automatically cancels any prior arrangement."

'Racist' Burger King ads come under fire

Jennifer Cassell
The Daily Iowan

Several African-American UI students are objecting to widely aired Burger King commercials they claim have racist overtones.

Each of the four commercials in the series features a Division I college football coach discussing his winning strategies.

UI graduate student Marcus Mangum said in the commercials, football coaches John Robinson of the University of Southern California, Bobby Bowden of Florida State University and Lou Holtz of Notre Dame — all of whom are white — speak articulately and eloquently.

But Eddie Robinson of Grambling State University, who is African-American, rarely speaks, and with less intelligence than the three white coaches, Mangum said.

"Bowden appeared as calm and composed in the commercial, and John Robinson was fiery and animated," Mangum said. "But Eddie Robinson only said 'Yep.' He had no articulation."

In reaction to the commercials, Mangum said he and several other African-American students will write letters to the Burger King Corporation, as well as a "letter of disapproval" to Robinson. Mangum said he hopes this will result in a retraction of the commercials. The concerned students are members of Phi Beta Sigma, a traditionally African-American fraternity.

Phi Beta Sigma member and UI junior Dennis Thomas said he was angry the first time he saw the commercial.

"I was pretty upset because this goes back to the stereotype that blacks aren't articulate," Thomas said.

The commercials featuring the

"I was pretty upset because this goes back to the stereotype that blacks aren't articulate."

white coaches discuss issues such as preparation and confidence, Mangum said. However, the advertisement starring Robinson does not highlight any of these qualities.

"You get the sense in the commercial that Eddie Robinson doesn't inspire or motivate — with Robinson you just see a burger and fries," Mangum said.

According to Mangum, Robinson only appeared in the commercial as a token African-American.

"His appearance in the commercial has no value except to say at least we have a black person in a commercial," Mangum said.

Kim Miller, spokesperson for the Burger King Corporation, said the students' interpretation of the commercial as racist is ludicrous.

Annually, Burger King donates over $1 million in academic scholarships to African-American colleges and students, Miller said, and a racist advertisement would be against everything the corporation stands for.

"There are no racial under or overtones in the commercial," Miller said. "We wanted to recognize Robinson's record as the winningest coach, and we are honored to have him in our commercials."

The corporation that developed the creative concept of the commercial is the African-American advertising agency UniWorld.

Miller said the creative purpose behind the commercial was to show two sides to each personality.

Thomas said the fact that an African-American agency was used for this commercial is analogous to African-American directors being used in black exploitation films.

"The commercial is depicting blacks in a negative light," Thomas said. "It doesn't matter if it was a black ad agency or not. Black film directors made black exploitation films, too."

Miller said Robinson's off-the-field personality was shown more than his coaching personality in the commercial.

She said his football personality showed when he commented on "eating the competition for lunch."

"The commercial is trying to capture the personality of the coaches on and off the field," Miller said. "Off the field, Robinson is a very low-key individual, but on the field, he is a dynamic coach."

Despite what the agency's creative concept was, Mangum said this commercial still misrepresents the African-American community and gives Robinson a bad name.

"When someone black does something, (it can take) on a negative connotation expressed toward the whole community," he said. "Being a representative of a culture is a burden placed on ethnic minorities."

3 nations unite for worship

Fairouz Abu-Ghazaleh

Presbyterians from South Africa, Venezuela, Wisconsin and Iowa will come together via satellite Sunday morning in a global worship service, under the theme "Join Hands, Disciples of the Faith."

More than 2,500 worshippers from all over Iowa are expected to attend the service, which will be held at the Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Sunday from 9-11 a.m.

"We are coming together in an interactive worldwide communion to celebrate our diversity and oneness in Christ," said Rev. Jim Clark, coordinator of the service and mediator of worship committee of Eastern Iowa Presbyterian Church.

Many Presbyterian churches across the state won't be offering their regular congregational service at their site that day so their members can attend the global service in Iowa City.

In Iowa City, a brass ensemble, 300-member church choir and children's choir will accompany the service.

Janet Vandervinne, who plans on attending the global service, said she will take her grandson to the event.

"I'm looking forward to it," she said. "I think it's very rewarding to get together with a number of people from different countries."

Clark said the international service will help people understand how to make use of technology in the global village.

"If it takes a village to raise a child, we need to build a global village to raise many children," Clark said.

Quotable

"That door has been open for 12 damn years. I'm not saying it's that smart, but I've done it and I've never considered the possibility that an officer might come in and shoot."

Jay Shaw, father of Eric Shaw, on his son's shooting death by Iowa City Police Officer Jeffrey Gillaspie Too exotic for Iowa City?

I own a snake and an iguana, which many consider to be exotic pets. Like most exotic pet owners, I do my best to be a responsible caretaker of my animals. The Iowa City City Council will soon consider a law that may ban exotic pets. This law is ill-conceived for many reasons. It is based on fear and ignorance, and it will have undesirable consequences.

Two recent editorials in The Iowa City Press-Citizen (Monday, Sept. 23 and Tuesday, Oct. 1) that bordered on hysteria promoted much of the fear and ignorance behind the exotic-pet law.

The first editorial began with a blanket statement that was silly: "Exotic and wild animals do not belong in domestic situations — ever." It backed this up in the next paragraph with, "The danger to society posed by (exotic) animals ... is clear in news reports of maulings or other dangerous behaviors."

In fact, recent news reports have distorted the reality of exotic pets with dramatic stories of a few isolated incidents. This feeds fear among the public, yet this fear is not well-founded. Most exotic pets pose little danger to society. Animals such as iguanas, ferrets, geckos, parrots and many types of snakes are virtually harmless and make good pets.

Next, the editorial claimed, "keeping wild animals in a domestic situation is wrongful treatment of the animals, and it can end disastrously." This sentiment is often bandied about by the more extreme elements of the animal-rights movement. It assumes the wild is an "eco-paradise" in which animals live much better lives than they do in captivity.

Not necessarily. The wild is often a harsh and violent environment in which many animals meet an untimely end. Furthermore, animals in domestic situations have advantages animals in the wild do not. For instance, I give my pets a guaranteed food supply and periodic veterinary care. Also, my pets are much safer from predators than they would be in the wild. This is not to imply we should remove all animals from the wild. It is simply to point out it is not wrongful treatment for animals to be in a domestic situation.

In the second editorial, local animal-rights activist Grace Trifaro irresponsibly indicted many owners of exotic pets by declaring they "often unknowingly participate in animal abuse by not considering the plight of the animal before reaching the pet store or auction."

This puts people who really care for their pets on the same moral plane as those who steal animals from the wild and treat them poorly. If Trifaro and other animal-rights activists like her can succeed in doing this, then they have a potent weapon in convincing the public to ban the owning of exotic pets. Is it fair to refer to those who give these animals a home and good care as participants in "animal abuse"?

Next, the proposed law "bans any animal with the ability or tendency to kill or seriously injure a person, domestic animal or livestock."

How is "any animal" going to be defined? Certainly dogs have a tendency to injure people, probably more so than most exotic pets — heck, ask any mail carrier. Are dogs now going to be off limits in Iowa City? It would be interesting to live in a community where people could own a common grass snake, which will harm no one, but not a German shepherd.

Finally, the proposed law punishes responsible pet owners and may cost some pet-store employees their jobs. I doubt this is what the city council wants. They merely want to protect the citizens of this community, which is honorable. But isn't there an alternative to this law that won't have such undesirable consequences, yet still protects the public?

Perhaps the city could pass a law that bans some of the animals that pose an inordinate danger, like certain jungle cats. They might also stiffen the penalties for owners who are irresponsible and require pet stores to hand out pamphlets to customers that warn them of these penalties and advise them on responsible ownership. These would be reasonable responses to problems posed by all animals that are owned as pets.

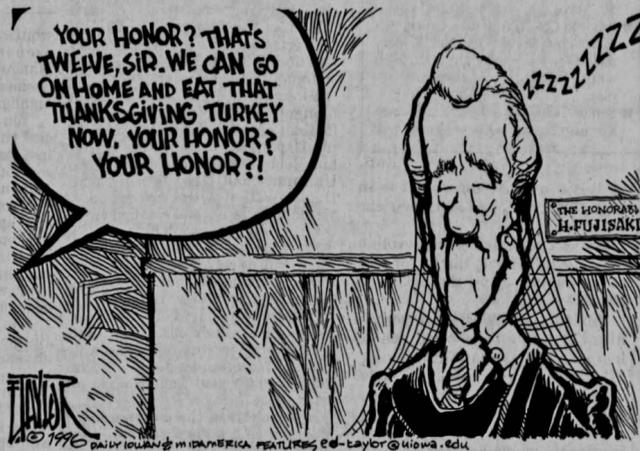

In present form, the proposed law is irrational. It is founded on the fear that is excited in many people by snakes and other exotic animals. Yet, most of these animals that are owned as pets are harmless. Banning them will do little to make this community safer.

No charges; no reconciliation

Thirty-five days ago a man talking on his own telephone was shot and killed.

Thursday, Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said the man who pulled the trigger would be free from criminal prosecution.

The man with the gun was Jeff Gillaspie, then an officer with the Iowa City Police Department.

The man without the gun, the man who had a bullet rip through his chest while using a tan wall phone in his well-lit work shop he had been paying rent on for 12 years, was local artist and business owner Eric Shaw.

The month of September was a wild, frustrating, disheartening ride for the members of the Shaw family. It was a month of waiting for answers pertaining to Eric's death. It was a month of roadblocks, red tape and exaggerated police brotherhood that frustrated the Shaws to no end.

Thursday could have been a day of spiritual reconciliation for the Shaw family, but now all Oct. 3 will mean to the Shaws is Eric's pointless death was again graced with the approach of someone who has never had their child senselessly killed.

It's obvious if Gillaspie were a private citizen (like Eric Shaw), there wouldn't have been a 30-day investigation, ICPD Chief R.J. Winkelhake wouldn't have been so hush-hush and there certainly would have been no need for a press conference.

... White and his office were wrong to not charge Gillaspie — guilt-ridden or not.

Actually, were the shooter not a police officer, this would have been classified as cold-blooded murder. But for anybody who has been following the case, it's evident Gillaspie in no way meant for any of this to happen.

White said Gillaspie was spooked before the gun's trigger was pulled. That's a huge understatement, especially since it takes 10 pounds of pressure from a single finger to fire a .40 caliber semi-automatic Beretta, the type of gun carried by Gillaspie.

White also said Gillaspie was crushed and suffered from severe mental strain. It's easy to sympathize with Gillaspie because the whole incident was an accident, but anyone who says they can understand what Gillaspie is going through is either greatly confused or a liar.

Still, White and his office were wrong to not charge Gillaspie — guilt-ridden or not.

Several tragedies have come out of the shooting; the largest being Eric Shaw's death. Eric's father, Jay, and mother, Blossom, have to wake up each morning knowing they'll have to drive to a cemetery to visit their son. That's No. 2.

Gillaspie, an honest police officer, must come to grips with the life he took, then try to rebuild his own.

And finally, Iowa City residents have to sleep at night knowing their police department is above the law it's sworn to uphold. The police have to answer to a higher power, a power apparently more lenient on the taking of a life than any system that would try a private citizen.

It's the last tragedy that exemplifies exactly why Gillaspie must stand trial. If the ICPD is authorized to carry guns, it must be ready to accept the responsibilities, should the firearm be used in an improper manner.

Private citizens cannot carry firearms without going through excruciating measures. And if a private citizen uses the firearm on anything larger than ... say ... a goose, she or he is subject to severe legal ramifications.

Accident or no accident, police officer or no police officer, remorse or no remorse, Eric Shaw died unjustly. Gillaspie should have faced criminal charges. Not only is it the proper course of action socially and morally, but it's the only way — the only way — the ICPD can regain any sense of credibility.

Tom Arnold: Celebrity, no merit

When America thinks of Iowa, three things come to mind: corn fields, floods and Tom Arnold. Wait a second ... Tom Arnold?

Out of all of the celebrities who have attended the UI — actor/comedian Gene Wilder, journalist John Cochran and basketball great B.J. Armstrong — Tom Arnold, ex-husband of actress Roseanne and film/TV star, was picked to be the grand marshal of the Homecoming parade and selected by the University Lecture Committee to speak at the UI.

But is he a good representative of the UI? Seeing as the UI has asked Iowa Olympians to be just in the parade, does it make sense to put Tom Arnold as the main celebrity in the parade?

Curt Boelman, director of the Homecoming Committee, said the reason Arnold was chosen was because the committee was looking for a way to get as many people at the pep rally after the Homecoming parade as they could. Generally, about 25,000 people show up for the parade; half that amount go to the pep rally. By getting somebody famous to be there, they could boost the pep rally attendance.

They bounced the idea off Arnold and, according to Boelman, he loved it. He is paying for most of his own expenses, and will also visit some cancer patients at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. He also plans to speak about alcoholism in the context of his own past experiences.

Although he didn't graduate from the UI, he did attend between the spring and fall semester of 1982. That doesn't make a difference to the UI, though. It fits into something called the "honored guest program."

Even with all of these good deeds Arnold plans to do while here, is he a good role model for young college students?

For most people, his reputation precedes any good things he may do.

"I think that he's kind of a putz. Being grand marshal should be based more on merit than mere celebrity," UI senior Hans Armknecht said.

Many other UI students agree. "I don't really like him. He's not a good representation for Iowa," UI sophomore Nicole Turner said. "They just picked him because he's famous."

Besides, like most celebrities, he is most likely just trying to build a better reputation in the public eye. In the end, being a celebrity shouldn't equal merit.

Bobby Fox is an editorial writer and a UI senior.

Should Jeffrey Gillaspie have been criminally charged in the shooting of Eric Shaw?

"Yes. He acted with no warning and he didn't follow correct police procedures."
Meredith Griffin
UI sophomore

"I don't think that he should (have been) charged. The man lost his job and I think that's enough. Everybody is reacting to him as if he is the symbol of all the wrong that the police do."
Regina Sinclair
Employee in the University Libraries

"Yes. Just because he has a badge doesn't mean that he can shoot anybody. It's not a license to kill. I think it would have been different if the situation was more suspicious and if Shaw had a gun."
Solomon Barber
UI graduate student

"Yes. Based on what I've heard, I think the officer acted in a criminally negligent matter."
John Soderquist
UI alumnus

"Definitely. It was an unwanted murder. He skipped too many steps trying to identify the situation and then jumped into the shooting."
Josh Furman

Welcome to the president pageant

There are two days left before the presidential debates, and our leader is said to be holed up, "somewhere in the mid-Atlantic states," according to one press report, with a binder of cram notes. Bob Dole has also been studying, but he has had more time than his busy, Mideast mediator opponent. Clinton interrupted his debate preparation schedule in an attempt to prevent the big boys from the neighborhood across the world from taking all their marbles and going home (except for PLO leader Yasser Arafat, who does not yet have a home to which he can go).

The debates are important; important enough, apparently, to cause whistle-stop-happy Clinton and double-digit-lag Dole to take a break from meeting (and getting votes from) America to prepare for meeting (and surely not getting votes from) each other.

The debates are not important because we hear a candidate's stance on particular issues. All of their opinions, as varied and changeable as they may be, depending on to whom the hopefuls may speak, can be found in any intelligent newspaper, magazine or at one of the many truck stops along the information superhighway.

The debates are important because we get to see our contestants interact, both with each other and with the 100 million or so viewers to whom they attempt to appeal. The debates are important because the candidates are not merely preaching to their respective Republican or Democratic choirs; prospective voters from all locations on the political continuum will be sizing up wannabes Dole and Clinton. This ain't no feel-good campaign speech along a predetermined tour route; this is an extremely public and non-partisan forum to which all of us have been invited to (electronically) attend. In this way, it's kind of like the Miss America pageant, except without the talent segment.

On Sunday night, some of us might ask ourselves, "Can either of these men speak to all of us, can either of them turn from a being Republican or a Democrat into someone who speaks for me at the same time he speaks for the rest of my countryfolk? Can either man lead all of us in unity?"

Others might query, "Which one of these two jokers do I have the least hard time believing? Which one has a better poker face? Which of these men seems to be reading his notes?" and "Which one of them would do better in an evening-gown competition?"

Actually, most of us, according to those nattering nabobs of bubble-bursting "the polls," already know who we are going to vote for in the presidential elections, and have known since Labor Day. Unlike the Miss America pageant, in which judges decide after the "speeches" who gets to wear the crown, presidential debates generally have a predictable outcome. Barring a major upset, whoever is ahead now (or even by the end of last summer, according to some) will probably win both the debate as well as the grand prize — the election.

But still, over one-third of the country will tune in to this visual and aural spectacle Sunday night, despite our almost certain prediction of the outcome. If we already know what will happen, why would this be?

I think it's because we are a people who like televised public events. We seem to be drawn, as a country, to bond with our brother and sister Americans over national news items such as tragic bombings, the Olympics, the O.J. Simpson trial(s) and Dick Morris' affair.

We watch also because we are a country that loves image. We like to know how a person walks, talks, stands, jogs and falls off of high platforms before we will elect a president. We like to see how they look as they engage in their point-counterpoint tango with one another. The debates are an opportunity for us, as a people, to judge our candidates' public personae to see if we think their styles suit the tenor of our nation.

Our image-loving nature, of course, is why Ronald Reagan lived in the District of Columbia for eight years. As sophisticated as we like to think we are, Teflon appeals to us on more levels than we care to admit.

We like public images. We like nationally televised events. And, of course, we like contests of every kind. Even though there is no official "winner" of presidential debates, commentators will discuss — when the contest is over — who was the victor. Clinton is the predicted champ. Even Bob Dole has said the president is "gonna clean my clock" on Sunday.

But Dole might still take heart; even if Clinton is better at verbal clock-cleaning, Bob still may have a shot at the swimsuit competition.

Guest Opinion

Fairly often, The Daily Iowan and other media institutions are forums for glamorizing smoking establishments as havens of intellectual pursuit or for excusing the tobacco industry from culpability. A negative form of tobacco advocacy has been added recently to this assault on common sense: invalidation of those who do not smoke.

For instance, the DI ran a letter to the editor at the beginning of September, titled "Light up! It's your right!" It is too bad for Iowa City, especially for the student community, that with over 1,000 doctors in this town, not one of them can take the trouble to offer systematic preventive education against this fashionable pseudointellectualizing that favors "rights" at the expense of others.

Most recently, my parents were grieving over the death of an old friend who used to love the outdoor life in Wyoming. For years, she dragged an oxygen tank around everywhere she went — and was still unable to quit.

Clearly, a response is needed to this local dribble of misinformation. I am not an expert, but I am willing to offer personal experience in lieu of a physician's input.

At age 49, I have long practiced sensible diet, exercise and avoidance of the socially sanctioned ways of inflicting self-injury, which includes smoking. I feel better than I did in my 20s. My father, a 76-year-old non-smoker, can outrun many younger men. There are no guarantees of long life, of course, but I have a much better chance than a smoker would of enjoying all of my life, even if I live beyond 80.

Most significantly, I am less likely to burden my friends and family. I have seen too much suffering among those who have a parent or a spouse who smokes or engages in other self-abuse: I cannot treat lightly the financial and emotional toll of things such as cigarette smoking. Even one cigarette a day for a month is enough to get hooked on nicotine. It is a near-certainty that there will be severe consequences for the "almost pack-a-day" self-abuser at the end of his or her life — a life that may well be much shorter than expected.

Among my relatives and acquaintances, I often hear of prolonged misery from a dying smoker's family. Most recently, my parents were grieving over the death of an old friend who used to love the outdoor life in Wyoming. For years, she dragged an oxygen tank around everywhere she went — and was still unable to quit.

This denizen of Marlboro country is not exhibited next to the apparently healthy, tanned cowboy of the advertisements.

Then there is my grandfather, who nearly died in his mid-30s of a bronchial disease caused by his heavy cigarette habit. It was hard for him to quit, although I am glad he did — it gave him a chance to get to know his grandchildren, and for us to enjoy his generous spirit and his gentle humor. But his intense, early habit of smoking caused damage to vessels in his brain, resulting in severe loss of acuity in his final years. It became a lonely slide into forgetting us, and all the good times one is expected to look back upon in fondness.

I urge the writers of articles and letters arguing smoking is good for society to contact older relatives who have smoked all of their lives. Ask whether they have any regrets, either personally or financially, and whether or not they would like to endorse your position.

The beginning of the letter "Light Up! It's your right" tries to sound reasonable, but devolves into a defensive T-shirt slogan: "... if you can't stand the smoke, get out of the room and quit your bitching." People who wish to treat tobacco as the dangerous drug it is are not villains. They are the real signs of intelligent life on the planet.

But the habit that is really killing those who posture with a "mean streets" attitude is not so much cigarettes as it is denial. Imagine a society that could choose a better quality of life: responsible use of other technologies, jobs one need not be ashamed of and families not burdened by the high cost of crisis-oriented medical care. Such a society would be unaffected by false messages, including subtle peer pressure disguised as philosophy.

Suzanne Araas Vesely is a resident of Iowa City. She recently received her Ph.D. in English from the UI, focusing on literature and science. She also has a master's in cell biology.

Sexual assault affects all of us. That's why The University of Iowa has a number of programs to help survivors of sexual assault and to reduce the risks of sexual assault

Sexual assault is an attack on the mind, body and spirit. It can wound the spirit even more profoundly than it wounds the body. Survivors of sexual assault are entitled to a respectful, supportive atmosphere where they can get the information they need, be listened to, and be treated with the sensitivity and dignity they deserve.

The University of Iowa has a number of services available to the survivors of sexual assault and to their partners, friends and family members immediately following an assault and throughout the healing process. All these services are available free of charge.

It is crucial to note that only rapists can prevent rape. However, there are a number of steps individuals and groups can take to reduce their risk of sexual assault.

For that reason, the University offers a wide variety of programs and services about sexual assault awareness and risk reduction.

Here is a listing of the services offered through the University. In addition, there are a number of community agencies that can provide services.

THE RAPE VICTIM ADVOCACY PROGRAM (RVAP)

RVAP offers services for women and men survivors of any kind of sexual abuse or assault. Information and services are also available to friends, family and partners of survivors, and anyone concerned about sexual assault.

RVAP offers these services, all free of charge:

- 24-hour Rape Crisis Line (335-6000) or 1-800-284-7821 in rural Johnson County and for people in Iowa, Cedar and Washington counties. This service provides survivors and significant others with supportive listening, advocacy and information.

- Peer Counseling Services. This allows survivors to work individually with a peer counselor. The counselors provide help by listening, helping clarify issues, identifying options and providing information on resources. Anyone who is interested in peer counseling may make an appointment by calling 335-6001. Walk-ins are also welcome at the RVAP office, 17 West Prentiss, Iowa City.

- Support Groups. Groups give survivors the opportunity to continue the healing process with other survivors. This can help break through the isolation that is common with survivors of sexual assault. These are usually 8-week programs that meet once a week. For information, call 335-6001.

- Lending library of books on sexual assault, healing and related topics. Free brochures are also available.

- Self-Defense Classes for women, using the Rape Aggression Defense system. These programs, often offered cooperatively with the UI Department of Public Safety, are nine-hour and 12-hour seminars using an internationally known system of self-defense. RVAP offers them twice a month in a variety of locations. For information, call 335-6001.

- P.O.W.E.R. (People Out Working to End Rape) is a volunteer organization of women and men who present public programs on acquaintance rape awareness, sexual assault risk reduction, dating abuse, sexual harassment, images of women in the media and more.

- Sexual Assault Awareness Week, observed each September, is a time when RVAP presents programs on basic sexual assault awareness and risk reduction in all residence halls.

- Sexual Assault Awareness Month is observed each April. Programs on a variety of topics relating to sexual abuse are presented on the UI campus and around the Iowa City/Coralville community.

- Presentations made on request. RVAP counselors are available to present programs to groups and classes that request them. Typically, those groups include residence hall floor governments, sororities and fraternities, and classes in counselor education, human sexuality, social work and education.

SAFEWALK

SAFEWALK, phone 353-2500, offers students, staff and faculty an alternative to walking home alone on campus. The service is funded by the UI Student Government (UISG) and housed in the Women's Resource and Action Center (WRAC). Two volunteers equipped with walkie-talkies provide walking escorts from 7 p.m. to midnight Sunday through Thursday. The walkie-talkies allow them to stay in contact with a third volunteer at WRAC. If volunteers cannot provide an escort, they will brainstorm to help a client think of an alternative. (This program depends on volunteers, so there may not always be someone available to assist people who want an escort.)

FREE WHISTLES

Free whistles are available at the UISG office, 48 Iowa Memorial Union; or at the WRAC office, 130 N. Madison Street.

REPORTING INCIDENTS OF SEXUAL ASSAULT

To report on-campus incidents of sexual assault or attempted assault, call UI Public Safety, 335-5022. Other police offices that can be called are Iowa City Police 356-5275; Coralville Police 354-1100; Johnson County Sheriff 356-6020.

Survivors who do not wish to speak to the police may contact RVAP, phone 335-6000.

In Johnson County, survivors of sexual assault can tell a detective or police officer about what happened to them without having to make an immediate decision about whether or not to press charges. The only time the survivor may not have a choice about charges being filed is in cases of domestic abuse or child abuse.

Anytime you talk to police or go to the hospital you may request an RVAP advocate accompany you.

If you see an unescorted person that you do not recognize in the residence halls, ask a resident assistant or another residence hall staff member to confront the stranger. If you have reason to believe that the person poses an immediate threat to hall security, phone Public Safety at 5-5022, then immediately contact the nearest residence hall staff member.

Local businesses hope to reduce costs

Stephan Ilten
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Secretary of State Paul Pate met with more than 80 Iowa City business leaders Thursday to discuss how to reduce unnecessary government regulations on businesses.

Pate, who held similar "Business Survival Summits" in more than 50 different cities all over Iowa during the past year, spoke at First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St.

Pate said the majority of U.S. workers are employed by small businesses that want to provide jobs and good wages but are struggling to obey rules that don't make sense.

"Especially in small businesses you have the owner and the employees side by side," he said. "We can only help the workers by eliminating burdensome regulations for the businesses that pay for them."

He said while the cost of government regulations may be less obvious in today's healthy economy, it will certainly show in the future.

"Many businesses may not worry about the regulatory burden as long as they're making a profit," he said. "But if we get another recession we'll remember every single regulation."

Pate said the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) should be changed from asserting mandatory rules to asking agencies to comply with regulation.

Changing or eliminating some regulations would not hurt the environment, he said.

"We're not asking to reduce any of the standards — we want clean air and clean water," he said. "It's how to implement it that we've got some latitude on, and that's what we're working on."

Pate encouraged the audience to tell legislators what regulations mean for businesses and communities.

"The federal numbers are so huge that people can't relate to them," he said. "So bring it back to you, give them your numbers. Tell them the impact a new rule has on the Johnson County area."

Most of those who attended the meeting said regulation is a problem for their business.

"There's always something new you have to pay for," said Harvey Wedde from Iowa City Insulation, 140 Stevens Drive. "We can't even justify paying our workers what they deserve because our profits keep going down."

Henry Herwig, owner of H-J Limited, said OSHA regulations are sometimes almost impossible to follow. "The regulations for home building were originally designed for commercial construction, but now apply to home building, too," he said. "With all the protection regulations, it's almost impossible to put shingles on the roof."

However, he said he saw recent efforts on the state and federal level to focus on producing a safer workplace rather than just regulating generically. "I think during the last year we've been successful to try to put more emphasis on education and prevention rather than just log out, say, $20,000 in regulations," Herwig said.

Iowa City City Counselor Dean Thornberry said he will be investigating allegations conducting a business in Iowa City costs more than in any other city of the state.

"If those allegations are accurate, we'll have to see if we can do anything to bring the costs down," he said. "I can't do anything about the price of ground, but I'm looking at the local regulations that are in excess of state and federal regulations."

Prison-expansion trial expected to begin no later than November

DES MOINES (AP)— Trial in the state's request to expand Iowa's only maximum-security prison is expected by mid-November, officials from the attorney general's office said Thursday.

Bob Brammer, a spokesperson for the attorney general's office, said lawyers representing the state and inmates at Iowa State Penitentiary discussed the case during a telephone conference call Thursday. They scheduled a formal pre-trial meeting for Oct. 11, with trial expected no later than Nov. 12.

In December, Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller went to court and asked a federal judge to lift a cap on the number of prisoners at the penitentiary and allow an abandoned cellhouse there to reopen.

Most expect second Clinton term, but few see progress

Less than half polled feel issues will be solved

Mike Mokrzycki
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Unenthusiastic voters largely expect President Clinton to win re-election next month, but few expect to see advance on major national problems over the next four years, according to a poll released Thursday.

The Pew Research Center's national survey also found just 43 percent of voters plan to watch the presidential debates this year, down from 67 percent in 1992 and 55 percent in the two previous elections.

"If an overwhelming majority say things will get better or stay the same, the people are relatively satisfied."
Jeffrey Goldfarb, sociology professor at the New York School for Social Research

Two out of three registered voters say they've already made up their minds and the debates won't matter, as do three out of four likely voters. The first nationally televised debate will be Sunday night.

While Clinton held a strong re-election lead over Republican challenger Bob Dole, his performance as president got mixed grades from 1,517 registered voters surveyed Sept. 25-29. Seven percent gave him an A, 40 percent B, 32 percent C, 20 percent D or F.

"What in effect you have is a C candidate running against a D candidate, and C beats D," said Walter Dean Burnham, a University of Texas political scientist. "Clinton is running against somebody who's got other vulnerabilities that seem to be large enough to overcome his own."

Still, Burnham was surprised Clinton's average rating in the Pew poll wasn't higher, as he has gotten some of the highest job-approval scores of his presidency in other recent polls.

The difference may be in question wording: Other polls ask simply if people approve or disapprove of Clinton's handling of his job, and 55 percent or more have approved in most recent polls. Some voters may generally approve of Clinton's job performance, yet give it only a C grade.

Overall, 51 percent of registered voters said they would support Clinton if the election were held today, 35 percent favored Dole and 7 percent backed Ross Perot — little changed from a Pew poll in early September. Among 1,138 voters deemed likely to vote next month, Clinton led 50-38-6. The margin of sampling error for both groups was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Those results are comparable to other national polls conducted around the same time.

When asked whom they expect to win, 79 percent of all voters said Clinton; only 12 percent said Dole and 1 percent said Perot.

About three in 10 registered voters said they think the country will make progress in the next four years on the budget deficit, jobs, crime and drug abuse; a similar proportion said the country will lose ground on those problems, and pluralities said things will stay about the same.

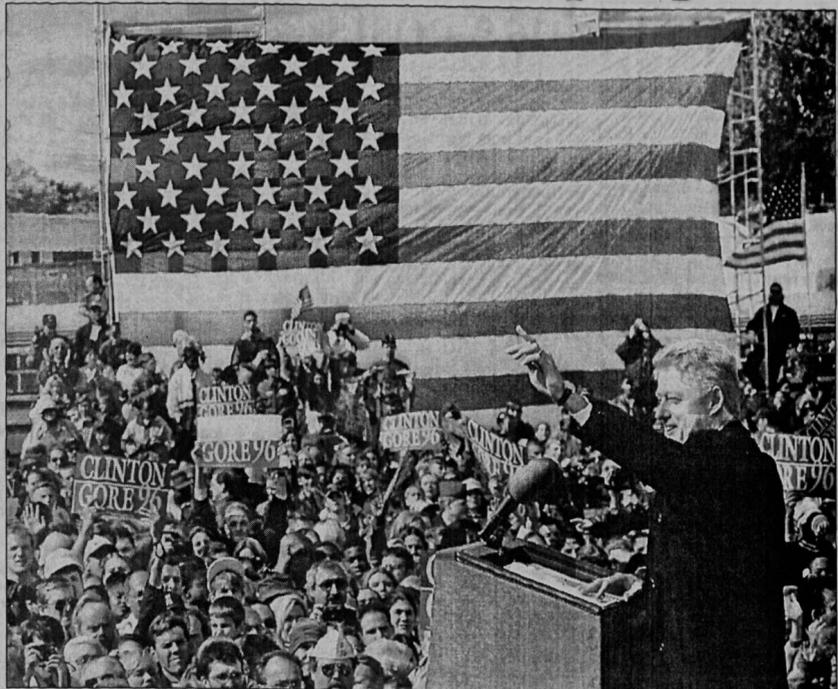

Nearly four in 10 predicted progress in the quality of public education and the way the health-care system works. No more than one in four were optimistic about high taxes, families staying together, U.S. military involvement overseas and poverty, hunger and homelessness in the United States.

Jeffrey Goldfarb, a sociology professor at the New School for Social Research, saw those results as a positive assessment of the future.

"If an overwhelming majority say things will get better or stay the same, the people are relatively satisfied," Goldfarb said. "We live in extremely complex and difficult times."

Many recent polls have found increased satisfaction with the economy, giving Clinton a re-election boost.

Pew also found voters increasingly happy with their financial situation, although more than four in 10 remain dissatisfied, and 58 percent in a random half of the poll sample said the American economy is "off track."

Perot back in court over debate exclusion

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lawyers for Ross Perot and the Natural Law Party's presidential candidate fought a last-ditch legal battle Thursday to overturn a judge's decision to bar them from the presidential debates with the two major party candidates.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals did not say when a ruling could be expected. The first debate between President Clinton and Republican Bob Dole will be Sunday.

The legal arguments covered ground that is now familiar: the Commission on Presidential Debates adopted criteria for participation that went beyond Federal Election Commission regulations; the FEC delegated its power to a private group, the CPD; and the rules keep the FEC from considering the minor parties' case until the election is over.

"If the complaint had been filed by last spring, action might have been completed before the election," FEC attorney Richard Bader told the court.

Perot had claimed he would be irreparably harmed if he is not allowed to debate Clinton and Dole.

Outside the Board Room of the Johnson County Administration Building where White made his announcement, Jay Shaw, accompanied by his wife Blossom Shaw and his brother Jim Shaw, talked to members of the community and press while White and DCI Special Agent in Charge Rick Benson were discussing details of the final DCI report.

Blossom Shaw read a prepared statement in which she talked about her son's death. She said his death shouldn't have happened and the police and Chief R.J. Winkelhake are to blame.

With her husband, Shaw expressed concern that it took Eric's death to bring community focus on police policies and it shouldn't have taken the death of their son to cause an uproar about police policies.

Jay Shaw said he hasn't considered filing a civil suit yet and that a civil suit would not grant justice.

"I look at the money as blood money," he said. "I want my son back."

murders someone and nothing happens. It's a double standard."

UI junior Susan McGee was unsure why charges were not filed.

"I don't understand what the justification could be," she said. Iowa City Mayor Naomi Novick said she believes White explored every avenue in arriving at his decision. She said not pressing charges is not an attempt to bury the issue.

"I don't believe (White) pushed anything aside," Novick said. "He analyzed everything thoroughly and carefully and reached his conclusion based on facts and the legal definitions of the potential charges."

Iowa City City Councilor Karen Kubby said the announcement will take time to register with her and others in the community.

"I don't really know how I feel. I feel kind of numb," Kubby said. "People are having a very hard time understanding that the shooting was not justified, but there are no charges being filed."

the first time relevant portions of the final DCI report.

Before laying out the synopsis of the incident, he said the DCI was called in to conduct an independent criminal investigation to bring out the facts in the case, which were then turned over to White on Sept. 19.

Many facts of the case have been previously released. The following account is taken from interviews of the officers on the scene.

Detective Troy Kelsay said in an interview with a DCI agent the morning of Aug. 31 that he began plainclothes foot patrol about 11 p.m. in the Gilbert Court, Gilbert, Benton and South Dubuque streets and the Kirkwood area.

At 11:42 p.m., Kelsay noticed an open door to the rear of Ahrens Concrete Co., 1130 S. Gilbert St., and requested uniformed backup via cellular phone. The door actually opened into a workshop owned by Shaw's father, Jay, as part of his business at Iowa Vending, 1132 S. Gilbert St., which was often used by Shaw to do artwork.

Kelsay said he noticed a light on through east windows, but couldn't see anyone inside because of material in front of them. He also said he heard no noise or conversation from the inside.

Kelsay saw a marked car driven by Officer Darren Zacharias and flagged it down and notified dispatch backup had arrived at 11:43 p.m.

Zacharias was in training under Gillaspie, who immediately took the lead as the three made their way down the alley to the open door.

Gillaspie said Kelsay told him to go through the door first because he was in uniform and wearing a bulletproof vest. Gillaspie said he then attempted to look through the window.

"There's a bunch of stuff piled in front of the window, so you can't see directly in, but there was a small space, if you're looking in, that went down at a lower left angle," Gillaspie said in an interview with DCI Agent DeRooi. "I looked in. I could see there was a light on in the place someplace. I didn't see any movement. I didn't hear anything."

At that point, Kelsay moved to the northeast corner of the building and Zacharias was somewhere behind Gillaspie. Gillaspie said he then looked inside the building through the cracked door and was unable to see any movement or hear anything.

All three officers unholstered their weapons as Gillaspie came up close to the door. Gillaspie said he still couldn't hear anything. Kelsay then nodded to Gillaspie he was ready to enter.

"As I pushed the door open, there was a figure in front of me," Gillaspie said. "It startled me. I was shocked that there was someone right behind the door. There was a flash of movement; I think we startled each other."

At that moment, Kelsay said Gillaspie took a sudden step backwards as his gun fired. The bullet, lege loans, the environment and the economy.

The College Republicans, the University Democrats and the UI Student Government have been sponsoring voter registration programs around campus. These organizations have been targeting students in the residence halls, the Greek houses and on the Pentacrest to encourage students to register and vote.

Matt Taylor, UI junior, said the increase in student involvement will have a big impact on the polls this year.

"We have a lot more involvement than we did in 1994 when only 25 percent of registered voters in the college age group turned up at the polls," said Taylor. "We've registered voters left and right and helped get absentee ballots out whenever we could this year."

Meghan Henry, the undergraduate collegiate senate executive officer for the UISG, said the organization has been focusing on voter registration rather than complex issues of the campaign.

"Students make up a huge percentage of the population in Johnson County and often have the lowest turnout," said Henry. "We are trying to tell students that their vote can really make a difference by motivating them to look at the issues themselves and make educated choices."

The UI's political organizations also plan on helping out with rallies and bringing national and local candidates to the UI campus to educate and inform students on important election issues.

UI Republicans and Democrats agree education and the economy are both very important issues in the campaign and prime concerns of many students.

Hans Gullickson, president of College Republicans, said balancing the budget and reducing the deficit will lower the interest of student loans.

Homecoming theme, "Always a Hawkeye."

"We are doing a replication of the Old Capital," she said. "This has been one of the best floats we have ever done because it relates so much to Iowa City and not just the football game or fraternities and sororities."

Homecoming Executive Director Chad Boelman said they expect a large turnout for the parade, despite the competition from an Iowa City football game Friday night.

"Generally we've had between 20,000 to 30,000 people downtown," Boelman said. "We don't know what will happen this year because the City High-West game is at the same time."

The parade will kick off with appearances from Tom Arnold and UI President Mary Sue Coleman and will be followed by the honorary guests, the 11 UI Olympians.

"This year, because of the Olympics, the Olympians are the honored guests," Boelman said. "We said 'Let's have something similar to the opening ceremonies.' They will lead and behind them will be the representatives of at least 12 different UI athletic teams."

Kubby said her office has already been flooded with visits and calls. She said during a time like this, city councilors have an important responsibility to citizens.

"It's going to take awhile for the community to accept this," Kubby said. "People are going to want to talk about this, and the city council members have to take the time to listen to them."

Iowa City City Councilor Ernie Lehman said he would not argue with White's conclusion.

"I think right now only he and (Division of Criminal Investigation) folks have the facts," he said.

Iowa City City Councilor Dee Norton said before learning of White's decision, he wasn't sure if charges would be filed and had no strong feelings whether or not they should be.

"I was not surprised they didn't press charges," he said. "The statutes are pretty complicated, and the line for whether there is or isn't a basis for pressing charges is very fine. There are a lot of subjective elements that go into it."

Norton said the accidental nature of the shooting may have kept White from filing criminal charges.

"You don't usually press charges in an accident," he said.

UI students, however, felt Gillaspie needed to be held more accountable for the shooting.

"I was pissed off (Wednesday) when I saw he resigned," said UI sophomore Kathleen Watson. "It's not going to follow him. He can say, 'I was on the force and I resigned.'"

UI junior Rob Knenlein agreed. He said Gillaspie could now walk away from what happened.

"You can't just shoot someone and the worst thing that happens is you lose your job," he said. "You resign, go get another job and do it again."

Watson said she hopes community members will raise their voices and expects to see action soon.

"I can't see people not doing something about it," she said.

Wednesday night, the Iowa City City Council discussed the formation of a Police Citizen's Review Board (PCRB), which would allow Iowa City residents to hear complaints about the ICPD. The council plans to have the specifics of the PCRB decided by December.

Although Watson thinks the PCRB is a good idea, he said he is skeptical it will make any real change.

"What are they going to do? What did they do after Rodney King?" she said. "It's us against them. It kind of makes you feel powerless."

Novick said she understands people's angry reactions, but contends White based his decision on an all-encompassing investigation and it is difficult to attack him.

"I find it hard to second-guess not having all the facts," she said. "The packet he handed out at the press conference was a quarter-inch thick and the one he used was 2 inches thick," she said. "I would say to people that they may have made the same decision in the same situation based on all the information and with his experience."

fired from approximately three feet away, struck Shaw in the chest.

"I startled him and he startled me," Gillaspie said in an interview with White. "I think I just got scared and flinched. I never made a conscious decision to pull the trigger."

Immediately, Gillaspie doubled over and began yelling as he backed away from the door. Kelsay was uncertain at that instant whether Gillaspie had fired a shot or been shot himself.

"Gillaspie indicated that he was startled and said he made no conscious decision to pull the trigger," Benson said. "Gillaspie froze and dropped his weapon immediately after he fired."

Kelsay then opened the door and ascertained Shaw had been shot. He told Zacharias to tend to Gillaspie and calm him down while he radioed for an ambulance and a supervisor. In the meantime, Kelsay began to tend to the condition of Shaw.

Only 49 seconds elapsed from the time Kelsay notified dispatch backup had arrived to the time he requested medical assistance and a supervisor.

Benson said toxicology reports indicated no alcohol or drugs were involved in the incident and an examination determined Gillaspie's gun was working within the specifications noted by the manufacturer at the time of the incident.

Gillaspie's gun required approximately 10.5 pounds of pressure to trigger the double action required for the first shot.

White said he wanted people to look at the facts as they apply directly to Iowa law when they make their judgments, not whether they feel the police policies were just.

"This decision will be debated," White said. "Police policy was not part of my decision. He was acting in a manner in which he was trained to act. The shot wasn't just, but I need to focus on his actions and his frame of mind."

Poland's 'Mozart of poetry' wins Nobel prize

Jim Heintz
Associated Press

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — While her wit, political insight and intensity of emotion inspired moviemakers in Hollywood and rock bands in her native country of Poland, Wislawa Szymborska liked to stay away from the spotlight. She couldn't escape it Thursday.

Winning this year's Nobel Prize in literature, the retiring 73-year-old poet was obliged to accept the world's attention and the prize committee's praise of her "esprit, inventiveness and empathy."

The prize citation likened her to the "Mozart of poetry," a woman who mixed elegance of language with "the fury of Beethoven" and who was not afraid to tackle serious subjects with humor.

Szymborska had gone for a walk in the southern Polish holiday resort of Zakopane just before the Swedish Academy announced the $1.12 million prize Thursday. When she came home, she found her life had changed.

"I am very happy, I am honored, but at the same time stunned and a little bit frightened with what awaits me," she told Poland's Radio Zet. "I'm afraid I will not have a quiet life for some time now, and this is what I prize the most."

She later told Polish television she was not like a movie star determined to "build a whole life" on her award.

Arguably Poland's most popular poet, Szymborska's work inspired the 1994 movie "Red" as well as providing lyrics for Polish rock stars. Critics say she is both deeply political and witty, and uses humor in delightful, unexpected ways.

The academy prized her poetry for "ironic precision," as exemplified in this excerpt from the poem "The Joy of Writing:

*The joy of writing.
Power of preserving.
The revenge of a mortal hand.*

Szymborska's later poetry is revenge of sorts against her first two books, published in 1952 and 1954, which were produced under the Communist censorship of the Stalinist era. She later disclaimed both books and became a critic of Josef Stalin, likening him to the Abominable Snowman in the 1957 poem "Calling Out to Yeti."

Szymborska "is very reserved. Some call her shy but she is a very intense person," Sture Allen, the secretary for the Swedish Academy, said while announcing the prize.

Praise quickly poured in from her native country for the first of this year's Nobel laureates.

"Again, Poland was noticed, and first of all this woman was noticed — so modest as a person and so great in spirit," former President Lech Walesa, the 1983 Nobel peace laureate, told Radio Zet.

In a burst of patriotic fever, Polish Finance Minister Grzegorz Kolodko said he will exempt Szymborska from tax on the prize money.

Szymborska "personifies the greatness of Polish poetry of the 20th century," author Andrzej Szczypiorski told the Polish news agency PAP.

"It turns out that the force of Poland and of Polish nature is in the spiritual sphere, because this great poet from Krakow becomes more important to the whole world than all these sweating guys who run around making more and more dollars," Szczypiorski said, referring to frenzied Polish businessmen.

Szymborska's influence and works have spread more widely than in the tight literary circles where many poets remain.

GOP assails planned infusion of U.S. troops for Bosnia

John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — About 7,500 U.S. troops will remain in Bosnia into March, the nation's top general told lawmakers Thursday.

The latest Pentagon plan for the withdrawal of the 15,000-member U.S. troop contingent in Bosnia will require sending in 5,000 more as a "covering force" to help the withdrawing forces.

Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairperson of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the Senate Armed Services Committee a total of 7,500 U.S. soldiers would stay in Bosnia until mid-March, a larger figure than the Pentagon provided in earlier statements.

"By 20 December we expect to be down to a force of 10,000 Americans, —7,500 covering and 2,500 withdrawing," Shalikashvili said.

Republicans on the committee complained of a "credibility gap" between the Clinton administration and Congress in light of repeated statements last year that the U.S. military mission in Bosnia would be over by Dec. 20.

"I have never seen anything like the way this administration is treating members of the Senate," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz. "The credibility gap between you and Congress is as wide as the Grand Canyon."

Defense Secretary William Perry defended the administration's handling of the Bosnia deployment, saying the mission has succeeded in stabilizing the war-torn country and injuries and casualties have been far lower than expected.

"IFOR has done the military task brilliantly," Perry said, referring to the NATO peace Implementation Force, which includes the U.S. troops.

Shalikashvili portrayed the covering force not as an extension of the troop deployment but as a routine military procedure for withdrawing troops. He said the withdrawal procedure is similar to the "enabling force" that went into Bosnia last year to pave the way for the main troop deployment.

"We used an enabling force to get us in and we will not use a covering force to get us out," Shalikashvili said.

Earlier, Republican lawmakers said the Clinton administration should have consulted them about plans to send additional troops to Bosnia.

"I've never seen anything like it before: a press report that we're going to keep 5,000 men and women overseas without any consultation with Congress," McCain said.

The covering force is needed because the troops in Bosnia at present may be too busy tearing down camps, loading up equipment and making sure no harmful wastes are left behind, Pentagon officials have said.

About 15,000 U.S. troops are currently serving in the 52,000-strong NATO-led force that has enforced the Bosnian peace agreement since last December.

Lamont named as Leyland's successor

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates didn't look beyond their own dugout to find Jim Leyland's replacement, hiring third-base coach Gene Lamont on Thursday as only their third manager in 20 years.

Lamont, the Chicago White Sox manager from 1992 until June 1995, was given a three-year contract worth about $1 million. Pirates general manager Cam Bonifay also got a two-year extension through the 2000 season.

City, West High square off for bragging rights

For the second year in a row, the game of the year in Iowa high school football will be all-Iowa City Friday night when second-ranked Iowa City City High faces off against the top-ranked Iowa City West Trojans at West. The "Battle for the Boot" is scheduled for a 7:30 p.m. kickoff.

Field Hockey players suspended

Two Iowa field hockey players have been temporarily suspended from the team for disciplinary reasons stemming from a recent incident. Details regarding the dismissal were not yet available at press time.

"All I have to say is that we have two players that have been suspended," said Iowa head coach Beth Beglin. "As for everything else, I have no comment."

Kingsbury left Iowa after his junior season in 1996 after setting records for 3-point field goals in a game, season and career.

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman throws off his feet during Iowa's loss at Tulsa. The Hawkeyes host Michigan State Saturday.

Iowa hopes to rebound from loss

Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman shrugged off the numerous hits he took in Iowa's 27-20 loss at Tulsa, Sept. 21, saying the blows were good in preparing him for the physical nature of the upcoming Big Ten Conference schedule.

That malicious, unforgiving brand of football is now upon the Hawkeyes as Iowa hosts Michigan State in its Big Ten opener Saturday at Kinnick Stadium. The game is scheduled to begin at 11:20 a.m.

"Last year we had an extremely physical game, and I can't recall a Michigan State game not being that way," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "Through the years, they've always been a knock-down and drag-out type of game."

Iowa defeated the Spartans, 21-7, in East Lansing in 1995, behind Sedrick Shaw's 250 yards rushing. Excluding that game and Michigan State's 24-10 win in 1993, every other game since 1982 has been decided by a touchdown or less.

This year's Michigan State squad is led by its defense. The Spartans shut out Eastern Michigan in a 47-0 victory last week, tallying nine QB sacks, two interceptions and a fumble recovery.

"They looked like a really outstanding football team last week," Fry said. "Anytime you goose-egg somebody in modern college football is quite an accomplishment."

Anchoring the defense is senior middle linebacker Reggie Garnett, who had started 35-of-37 career games before spraining his knee against Nebraska Oct. 7. Garnett is probable to return to the lineup Saturday against Iowa.

IOWA VOLLEYBALL

Hawkeyes host Big Ten double decker

James Kramer
Daily Iowan

What could have been a disastrous first week of Big Ten action for the Iowa volleyball team was salvaged last Friday with a victory over Michigan.

The thrilling, five-game victory over the Wolverines gave Iowa a 1-1 conference record and revived the team's confidence. This weekend, the Hawkeyes hope that confidence is still present as they host two Big Ten matches.

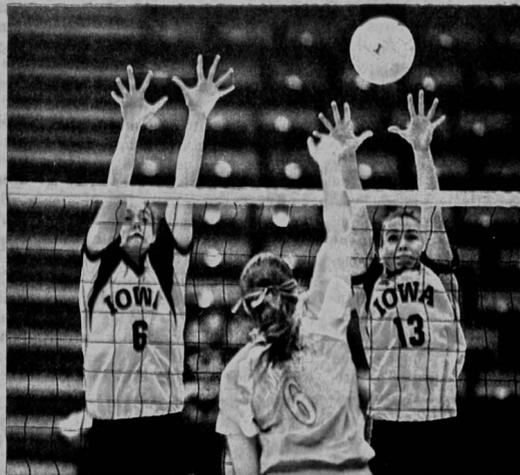

Iowa (1-1, 6-7) will start its homecoming weekend tonight when it meets Minnesota at 7 p.m. at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Iowa's toughest Big Ten challenge thus far will come on Saturday, as the Hawkeyes square off against Wisconsin. That match is also scheduled for 7 p.m. in the same location.

Minnesota (1-1, 10-5) lost to Penn State in its first conference match before coming back to sweep Ohio State in three games. The Golden Gophers' win over Ohio State, which was ranked No. 8 last week, was their first win over a nationally-ranked team this year.

It doesn't take much analysis

Pagnozzi helps Cards to big 2-0 advantage

R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — After a nine-year absence from the NL playoffs, the St. Louis Cardinals are doing everything right.

Tom Pagnozzi, who played on the 1987 World Series team, had the key hit in the Cardinals' 5-4 victory over the San Diego Padres on Thursday. His eighth-inning liner off the glove of reliever Trevor Hoffman ended up as a groundout, but it drove in the winning run as the Cardinals took a 2-0 series lead before a Busch Stadium record crowd of 56,752.

The Cardinals can eliminate the Padres in Game 3 Saturday in San Diego as Donovan Osborne (13-9) opposes Andy Ashby (9-5). But they know it won't be easy: They lost 15 straight games at San Diego's Jack Murphy Stadium before winning four of six there this season.

"I'm glad we don't have to go out there and win two," Pagnozzi said. "We haven't played well out there, plain and simple."

The Padres were in a similar situation the last time they made the Umpires insist they will strike today

Ronald Blum

NEW YORK — Baseball umpires, insisting "there's no room for compromise," said they will strike today because of Roberto Alomar's continued presence in the playoffs.

"We are walking out after the last game tonight," umpires union head Richie Phillips said Thursday by telephone from his Philadelphia office.

Lawyers for the umpires and baseball owners are to appear Friday in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia, where the American and National leagues have asked for an injunction that would prevent yet another baseball walkout.

U.S. District Judge Edmund Ludwig, who was assigned the case Tuesday, was attempting to work out a deal by telephone Thursday, Phillips said.

Other people involved in the case, speaking on the condition they not be identified, said it appeared negotiations would lead to umpires working under a court order — just as players have done for the past two seasons. Phillips has said umpires would comply with an injunction and continue to

BOXING ENTERTAINMENT

What Tyson needs is some real challengers

Were this a perfect boxing world, we could witness the great one-minute-or-less Mike Tyson fights every Friday. Unfortunately, we live in a society where Tyson fights come only four times a year.

But fear not, for tonight super middleweight Roy Jones, Jr. takes center stage. Sure, there won't be many "Pay $5 for the Jones fight and the keg" parties, but this sculpted and unbeatable champion is perhaps a more watchable fighter than Tyson. He'll at least put on a better show.

Wouldn't it be great to see Jones and Tyson get together? They are arguably the two top fighters in boxing, separated only by 50 pounds or so. Actually, a Jones-Tyson fight is not an impossible scenario.

Evander Holyfield, one of the better heavyweights in recent decades, won a gold medal and began his pro career at light heavyweight — a weight which Jones may soon rise to fight at. Of course, the 175-pound light heavyweight limit is still much lower than the 195-pound heavyweight classification.

Until Jones finds the Godfathers all-you-can-eat buffet, my Tyson-Jones hopes will have to be put on hold. And that will have to be No. 10 on my list of the Top Ten Tyson fights I'd like to see:

9.) Tyson vs. Holyfield
Fortunately for me, this duo will be hooking up in early November. Finally, Tyson will meet the other best heavyweight in the 1990s. Unfortunately, it's about five years too late. Tyson will win the fight, but at least he's fighting a real opponent.

8.) Tyson vs. Sylvester Stallone

To quote Rocky 5, Tyson will just be a paper champion until he knocks off Balboa, the greatest heavyweight of modern times.

7.) Tyson vs. Deion Sanders Really, I just want to see Deion get laid out on his ass.

6.) Tyson vs. Hulk Hogan
Again back to the Rocky movies, I simply don't understand why this wrestler vs. boxer idea didn't take off.

5.) Tyson vs. Siskel and Ebert
Gene Siskel wouldn't have a chance against Tyson on his own, but with Roger Ebert at his side, it could be a Pay-Per-View dream.

4.) Tyson and the AL umpires vs. Baltimore's Roberto Alomar and Cleveland's Albert Belle in a tag-team steel-cage match

Forget the courts and the baseball commissioners. Let's decide this the old-fashioned way.

3.) Tyson vs. the Northwest-ern football team

2.) Tyson vs. Riddick Bowe
This is the only real chance we have to see Tyson in a competitive heavyweight championship bout. Bowe would fall in five, though.

1.) Tyson vs. Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable

Iron Mike, meet the toughest man ever to walk the earth. And, by the way, you can leave your belt on the table — it'll soon be hanging from the Carver-Hawkeye Arena rafters.

"Garnett has been the backbone of their defense for years and years," Fry said. "We are going to catch these guys as close to full speed as they can present."

On the offensive side of the ball, the Spartans are inexperienced at quarterback, where Todd Schultz was the initial starter until going down with a knee injury. Gus Ornstein and Bill Burke have shared the spot since then.

IOWA VOLLEYBALL

to decide which player Minnesota relies upon most. With 312 kills and an average of 6.12 kills per game, Katrien DeDecker has been awesome for the Gophers. DeDecker's kill average leads the Big Ten by almost a full kill.

"Minnesota is going to be an interesting team to play," Iowa coach Linda Schoensted said. "If they pass well, and if Katrien gets the ball all night, they'll be tough to beat."

DeDecker, who twice this year

Burke was 8-of-22 for 166 yards and two touchdowns last week against Eastern Michigan in the starting role.

"After a shaky start, Burke threw two beautiful long touchdown passes which should give him a lot of confidence Saturday," Fry said.

Fry has learned through the Michigan State media that Schultz could possibly be back this week, but Spartan head coach Nick Saban doesn't want any talk of that sort.

"Bill Burke is our starting quarterback — period," Saban said. "This is a coaching decision based on a number of factors. You can make it a controversy if you want to, but that's going to be what's best for our team."

Whomever the Spartans start at QB, behind the passer will line up freshman tailback Sedrick Irvin, who ran for 249 yards last week, and senior Duane Goulbourne, who rushed for 213 yards against Iowa in 1994.

"The thing that is most impressive about Michigan State is their two big running backs," Fry said. "Goulbourne has ripped us throughout his career. They are both really big guys."

Iowa defensive end Bill Ennis-Inge doesn't see his task in shutting down the Michigan State offense this week an easy one.

"They've got very fast backs and they are really big up front," Ennis-Inge said. "I can't find one flaw in their game plan. We know we can get it done, but we just have to prove it."

CARDINALS

postseason. In 1984, San Diego rebounded from a 2-0 deficit to beat the Chicago Cubs and advance to the World Series.

"I'd love to see a flashback of 1984, but the Cardinals are a good club," Tony Gwynn said. "They're going to be tough."

St. Louis had blown a 4-1 lead, allowing San Diego to tie it in the eighth on Steve Finley's RBI groundout.

Brian Jordan drew a leadoff walk in the eighth off Doug Bochtler and advanced on a groundout before John Mabry, who hadn't hit the ball out of the infield in six playoff at-bats, was intentionally walked.

Bochtler's wild pitch moved the runners into scoring position, and Pagnozzi lined a 1-1 pitch just to the left of Hoffman, who got the tip of his glove on the ball but couldn't catch it. The ball caromed to second baseman Jody Reed, who threw to first as Jordan scored.

UMPIRES

work. "We're going to do what's right for our organization," said Harry Wendelstedt, who with 31 years is baseball's senior umpire. "This is incredible. We need justice served somewhere."

If the deal is completed, there would be an offseason summit meeting among representatives of owners, umpires and the players' association, the sources said, speaking on the condition they not be identified.

"We're not making any progress toward a settlement, any progress whatsoever," Phillips said. "There's no room for compromise. They could offer us everything in the world, and they've offered us a lot, and there's nothing that would change our stance."

Hoffman said everything happened too fast.

"I thought it was a screaming mimi coming back at me," Hoffman said. "It was like waking up running in a dream and you're not going anywhere."

Dennis Eckersley, who turned 42 Thursday, pitched a perfect ninth for his second save of the series and the 13th of his postseason career. Eckersley retired pinch-hitter Greg Vaughn on a grounder to third for the final out, sending a record Busch Stadium crowd of 56,752 into a frenzy.

"I'll tell you what, you don't feel 42 when the crowd is electric like that," Eckersley said. "I mean, it's humming out there. I'm just glad I have enough experience not to get too psyched."

Ron Gant had a three-run double in the fifth, giving St. Louis a 4-1 lead.

Ken Caminiti, who struck out three times in Game 1, homered — his first fair ball of the series — for San Diego.

The Cardinals loaded the bases in the fifth on one-out singles by starter Andy Benes and Ozzie Smith and a walk to McGee that chased Padres starter Scott Sanders. Gant, in the postseason each of his last five seasons, then hit a 2-2 pitch from Dario Veras over center fielder Steve Finley's head, clear the bases.

Benes, who played his first seven seasons in San Diego, took control early. He retired the first 12 batters, striking out six, before Caminiti led off the fifth with his homer.

Benes struck out nine, one short of his season high, and allowed four runs on six hits. He tired in the eighth, leaving after allowing a leadoff single to pinch-hitter Scott Livingstone and a walk to Rickey Henderson. NL batting champion Tony Gwynn, facing Rick Honeycutt, sacrificed the runners and Finley's grounder to first tied it.

Benes' bat also was important in the early going. A .151 batter in the regular season, his two-strike sacrifice bunt in the third advanced Luis Alicea to second. Willie McGee hit a one-out RBI single. Later, his base hit ignited the Cardinals' three-run fifth.

"I felt like Scott threw a pretty good slider, but I was looking for it and hit it off the end of the bat and it happened to find a hole," Benes said.

Sanders, making his first career playoff start, lasted 4 1-3 innings. He allowed four runs and three hits. He settled down some after throwing six straight balls to open the game, but two of the four batters he walked ended up scoring.

The Padres turned consecutive singles by pinch hitter Chris Gwynn, Rickey Henderson and Tony Gwynn into two runs in the sixth. Center fielder McGee threw wildly to third on Gwynn's RBI single, trying to catch Henderson at third, to allow the second run to score.

Two games are scheduled for Friday, with Baltimore playing Cleveland in the late afternoon and the New York Yankees at Texas in the evening. Replacement umpires will be on standby in case the regulars refuse to work.

Umpire Bruce Froemming, working the Braves-Dodgers game Thursday night in Los Angeles, said his four-man crew would travel to San Diego as previously planned so they could be near the ballpark if a settlement is reached.

Acting commissioner Bud Selig and American League president Gene Budig planned to join baseball's lawyers in court on Friday. Selig did not return a call for comment.

Alomar, Baltimore's All-Star second baseman, spit on umpire John Hirschbeck last week in Toronto, and Budig suspended him for five games. Under baseball precedent, the suspension will be served at the start of next season.

"They make a distinction between the two," said NL umpire Jerry Crawford, the president of the umpires' union. "A game is a game no matter when you play it."

Umpires want Alomar suspended immediately and had hoped Budig would use the player's appeal of the penalty as an opening to increase the penalty. But Alomar withdrew the appeal Wednesday night after being assured the suspension will be served next season.

Umpires originally had threatened to strike Tuesday at the start of the playoffs, but Ludwig helped forge a temporary deal in which they worked the first two games of each series pending Budig's hearing — which never occurred because the appeal was dropped.

"What has happened is an unhappy situation for all concerned," said Orioles owner Peter Angelos, a labor lawyer. "Alomar has clearly made an apology which is very sincere and very heartfelt and I feel that to continue this controversy in this fashion makes the position of all those involved more unfortunate and serves no constructive purpose."

Baseball officials contend they can't suspend Alomar for the post-season because of their agreements with the players' union.

"My contention is that's nonsense," Phillips said. "The Basic Agreement gives them the right to modify the penalty once the appeal has been dismissed, denied or withdrawn. They should have modified it."

Buffalo will rid league of undefeated teams

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

While the NFL's three other unbeaten teams lost last weekend, the Indianapolis Colts survived the easy way — they didn't play.

But their 4-0 record is in jeopardy this week when they go to Buffalo, where they've lost seven of the last eight times.

The Bills are favored by two, even though Jim Kelly's status remains in question. If he doesn't start, Todd Collins will, and Collins was the winning pitcher in the 10-7 win over Dallas before the Bills took their bye week.

The Colts are not a mirage. In fact, right now, they might be the AFC favorite and they get most of their wounded back this week, including Marshall Faulk.

But if the Bills aren't unbeatable at home, they're close to it. Moreover, the law of averages says the Colts aren't good enough to be 5-0.

BILLS, 14-10

San Diego (plus 3 1/2) at Denver

Part of the round-robin at the top of the AFC West. The Broncos in Denver are a lot like the Bills in Buffalo — they have to stink up the joint to lose.

BRONCOS, 20-16

Pittsburgh (plus 4) at Kansas City (Monday night)

This should have been the AFC championship game last season. Don't go against the Chiefs at home, particularly when their defense makes Mike Tomczak vulnerable.

CHIEFS, 24-19

Green Bay (minus 7 1/2) at Chicago

Let's see. The Bears play on grass and they play outdoors.

The Packers like that. But this is a rivalry game and they're always closer than they might be.

PACKERS, 20-16

San Francisco (minus 10 1/2) at St. Louis

This looks like the game in which Tony Banks may become a bit unraveled.

49ERS, 41-10

What might have been: a battle of unbeatens had not both these teams stumbled last week.

VIKINGS, 14-9

Jacksonville (minus 2) at New Orleans

A law of averages game. The Saints are bad, but not bad enough to be 0-6.

SAINTS, 22-10

The Ravens are 2-0 at home, but their victims are a combined 1-9.

PATRIOTS, 24-13

Volunteer defense keys Tennessee win

Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Tennessee defensive lineman Leonard Little blindsided two Ole Miss quarterbacks the same way Peyton Manning did Mississippi fans three years ago.

Little forced quarterbacks Paul Head and Stewart Patridge to fumble, leading to two Tennessee touchdowns, as the No. 9 Volunteers (3-1, 1-1 Southeastern Conference) beat Ole Miss 41-3 Thursday night.

Manning threw for 242 yards and a touchdown in his first game against Ole Miss, where his father was a standout quarterback and his mother a homecoming queen. He played just three quarters, completing 18-of-22 passes before leaving the game with his team ahead 38-3.

"I'm glad it's over, a little bit.

I'm just glad this game finally got here and I was glad to leave with a victory," said Manning, clutching a game ball he planned to give to his father, Archie.

Ole Miss (3-2, 1-2) was driving with a chance to tie late in the first half when Little crushed Head, knocking the ball loose for Nick Jester to recover. That set up Jay Graham's 1-yard TD six plays later that made it 17-3 at halftime.

Early in the second half, it was Patridge, Head's backup, who fumbled after being blindsided by Little. Bill Duff recovered in the end zone for Tennessee's second touchdown in 32 seconds.

Patridge had just replaced Head, who on the first play of the second half was flagged for intentional grounding. On the next snap, Head's pass was intercepted by Craig King at the 6.

DALLAS SAVIOR?

Irvin returns to Cowboys

Jaime Aron
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Michael Irvin returned to the Dallas Cowboys on Thursday, providing the listless Super Bowl champions with some of the spark they've been missing much of this season.

The Cowboys have struggled to go 2-3 in their star receiver's absence caused by violation of the league's drug policy. Dallas also has lacked some of the Irvin-inspired swagger that made the Cowboys loved or hated but not ignored.

"The guys were happy to see me, but I was more happy to see them," Irvin said following his first practice with the team since training camp. "When I came in, we did some laughing and joking."

Irvin has vowed to clean up his image since pleading no-contest to felony cocaine possession charges in July, ending a trial that exposed several other scandals, including a murder-for-hire plot that was funded by a Dallas policeman and targeted Irvin.

He maintained a solemn tone in an impromptu news conference Thursday. But teammates assured that, in the locker room, Irvin is still "The Playmaker."

"He's the same flamboyant, loving guy. He's not going to change that," quarterback Troy Aikman said.

The most unique insight came from often thoughtful offensive lineman Nate Newton, whose description of his greeting of Irvin seemed to summarize the twin personas he's trying to balance.

"I walked up to him, hugged him and kissed him," Newton said. "I told him how he's helped us dig this hole that we're in and now he's got to help bring us out of it."

"His answer was, 'I know I messed up by not being there for you guys. We started crying and exchanging Kleenex and everything was all right.'"

So Irvin was really humbled? "Oh, he was flashy about it," Newton said. "He used gold Kleenex."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

No. 1 Gators kick off SEC swing

Associated Press

Top-ranked Florida faces a tough Southeastern Conference swing, starting Saturday at Arkansas, and coach Steve Spurrier isn't even done fiddling with his offensive line.

Is he worried?

"I've got no fear at all," Spurrier said. "We've got six players we've got a lot of confidence in."

The problem is left tackle Mo Collins, out at least temporarily while the school investigates his eligibility. That means when quarterback Danny Wuerffel moves in under the center Saturday, he'll see a few different numbers and a few numbers in different places.

"This is about like where we are each year," Spurrier said. "We're in good shape, probably like most teams. Most teams don't have two complete units, anyway."

Collins was declared ineligible while the university investigates the $500 he took from an agent's associate after the Fiesta Bowl last Jan. 2.

In the next two weeks, Florida faces No. 14 LSU and No. 20 Auburn.

In other games involving ranked teams Saturday, it's Clemson at No. 2 Florida State, No. 4 Penn State at No. 3 Ohio State, Boise State at No. 5 Arizona State, No. 6

Michigan at No. 22 Northwestern, No. 7 Nebraska at No. 16 Kansas State, No. 12 Virginia at Georgia Tech, Kentucky at No. 13 Alabama, Vanderbilt at No. 14 LSU, No. 15 North Carolina at Wake Forest, California at No. 17 Southern California, Stanford at No. 18 Washington, Boston College at No. 19 West Virginia, South Carolina at No. 20 Auburn, Oklahoma State at No. 23 Texas, No. 24 Utah at Texas-El Paso and No. 25 Wyoming at San Jose State.

No. 21 Brigham Young is at Utah State tonight.

Clemson hasn't done too well against Florida State since the Seminoles joined the Atlantic Coast Conference, going 0-4, including 57-0 in 1993. But after a 21-10 victory over Wake Forest, Clemson is feeling a little more confident.

"They said there was no way Arizona State could beat Nebraska. Look what happened," Clemson quarterback Nealon Greene said.

Coach Tommy West sounds a warning note, however.

"If we can't do what we're supposed to do, then they'll look like the No. 2 team in the country," West said.

When Penn State (5-0) travels to Ohio State (3-0) it will mark the third straight week that Top Five teams have been matched up.

First, it was Florida State and Tennessee, then Ohio State-Notre Dame, now this.

Last Saturday, Ohio State beat the Irish 29-16, hurting Lou Holtz's team more with the blitz than probably any other single weapon.

"We didn't blitz as much as you guys think we did," Buckeyes coach John Cooper said. "We blitzed at the right time. The blitz was effective."

Ohio State has won two of the last three meetings with Penn State since the Nittany Lions joined the Big Ten. Heisman Trophy winner Eddie George scored on a 6-yard run with 1:42 left to give the Buckeyes a 28-25 victory last year at State College, Pa.

The game is a sellout and attendance might exceed the Ohio Stadium record of 95,537.

Arizona State quarterback Jake Plummer hopes his hometown of Boise, Idaho, doesn't come back to haunt him anymore than it already has. There was some concern earlier in the week that Plummer wouldn't even get to play against Boise State.

A promotional spot that he made for KTKR-AM radio in Boise three years ago called his eligibility into question, but he was exonerated by the NCAA on Tuesday because he took no fee or payment of any kind.

BRAVES TAKE 2-0 LEAD

Pair of homers key Atlanta

Ken Peters
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Fred McGriff's solo shot barely cleared the fence and Jermaine Dye's was never in doubt. And just like that, with two seventh-inning homers, the Atlanta Braves moved within one win of sweeping the Dodgers.

McGriff and Dye had two of Atlanta's three solo homers and Greg Maddux pitched seven strong innings as the Braves defeated Los Angeles 3-2 to take a two-game lead in their best-of-5 NL playoff series.

The defending World Series champions head home with a chance to close the series with a win in Game 3 on Saturday.

The Braves, who won the opener 2-1 on a 10th-inning homer by Javy Lopez, got just five hits, but three were homers. Ryan Klesko had the other off Ismael Valdes.

Maddux, Greg McMichael and Mark Wohlers combined on a three-hitter as the Braves finished off the Dodgers in just 2 hours, 8 minutes.

Maddux gave up two unearned runs and three hits, struck out seven and walked none. McMichael pitched the eighth, and Wohlers had a perfect ninth for his second save in two days.

Atlanta's Ryan Klesko hits a solo home run in the second inning against Los Angeles Thursday during the second game of the first round of the National League playoffs at Dodger Stadium in LA.

Mondesi's RBI double in the fourth.

The Braves had to overcome two costly errors that led to the Dodgers' runs. Los Angeles has lost six straight games, including its last four of the regular season.

Dye, who had 12 homers in the regular season, homered once out in the seventh for the decisive run off Valdes after McGriff led off the inning with a homer that tied it 2-2.

"He gave me a curve ball that was hanging inside," Dye said. "I tried to drive it, and it got out of the ballpark."

Klesko, whose fielding miscue cost the Braves a run earlier, homered in the second.

The Dodgers, who have scored just six runs in their last five games, took an early 2-1 lead — but with both runs unearned.

Klesko's fielding error in left led to a Los Angeles run in the first inning, and Marquis Grissom's error in center led to another run in the fourth.

Mike Piazza's routine single up the middle rolled into center, and Grissom, converging with Klesko, bent over and tried to barehand the ball. But it dribbled under his glove and past Klesko as Piazza alertly took second.

Mondesi followed with a double to deep center over Grissom, who couldn't run the ball down.

The Dodgers, who had scored just one run in their last 27 innings, got on the board quickly. Leadoff batter Todd Hollandsworth singled, and Klesko bobbled the ball as he tried to field it. Hollandsworth moved to third on Wayne Kirby's grounder and scored on Piazza's groundout.

3-13 LIFETIME AT THE BALL PARK

Denne H. Freeman

ARLINGTON, Texas — Baseball stadiums can't field or hit but there's something about The Ballpark in Arlington that has made the building a haunted house for the New York Yankees.

The Yankees lost five of six games against the Texas Rangers in the facility this year and are 3-13 since it was built in 1994.

The Yankees' Jimmy Key (12-11) goes against the Rangers' Darren Oliver (14-6) in Game 3 tonight with the best-of-5 American League divisional series tied at a game apiece.

Key was 0-2 and had an 8.71 earned-run average against the Rangers this year. Oliver was 1-0 with a 2.57 ERA and beat Key in their only head-to-head meeting.

"There must be something in the water here," Key said Thursday. "Baseball is a funny game and I'm not smart enough to figure it out. All I know is we've got to stop it."

Key added "I love hostile places. I feed off it. I like the challenge."

Key made a few soft tosses on the side Thursday but the rest of his Yankees teammates took the day off because of the late hour. Texas also canceled its scheduled workout.

Texas won the series opener in Yankee Stadium 6-2 behind the pitching of John Burkett. The Yankees rebounded Wednesday night 5-4 in 12 innings, thanks to a throwing error by third baseman Dean Palmer.

Associated Press

New York celebrates after beating Texas 5-4 Wednesday night. The series now shifts to Texas, where the Yankees lost five of six in 1996.

Yankees manager Joe Torre said the team didn't even get its luggage at Dallas-Fort Worth airport until 7 a.m.

"I decided to grab some breakfast with Don Zimmer and we ran into Juan Gonzalez in the restaurant," Torre said.

"He had already eaten," Torre joked, "so it was too late to poison him. I was hoping he would at least pick up our checks."

Indians maintain confidence

Ken Berger
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Indians were remodeled and finetuned to win the World Series this year. One more loss to the Baltimore Orioles and they're gone in the first round.

It all rests with Jack McDowell on tonight at Jacobs Field. Then, if the Indians get past that one, they have to do it twice more.

"We've got no other choice but to win," catcher Sandy Alomar said.

It's win three times with this one, or go home.

"Sure, we can win three," Jose Vizcaino said Thursday before the Indians held a brief workout at Jacobs Field. "If we won 99, we can win three," he said.

No. 2 Hawks head east

Chuck Blount
The Daily Iowan

The second-ranked Iowa field hockey team will head east for a double dose of Big Ten Conference action as Iowa (8-1, 1-0 in Big Ten) will play No. 19 Penn State today at 3 p.m. and No. 14 Ohio State, Sunday. Eight of Iowa's last 10 games have been against Top-20 NCAA teams.

Revenge will be a chief factor in the Penn State match-up. Last season the Hawkeyes swept the Lady Lions 2-0 in the regular season, but suffered a lopsided 4-1 loss to Penn State in the Big Ten Tournament. The loss marked the most lopsided defeat ever for Iowa under coach Beth Beglin in league play. It also put an end to a perfect conference season.

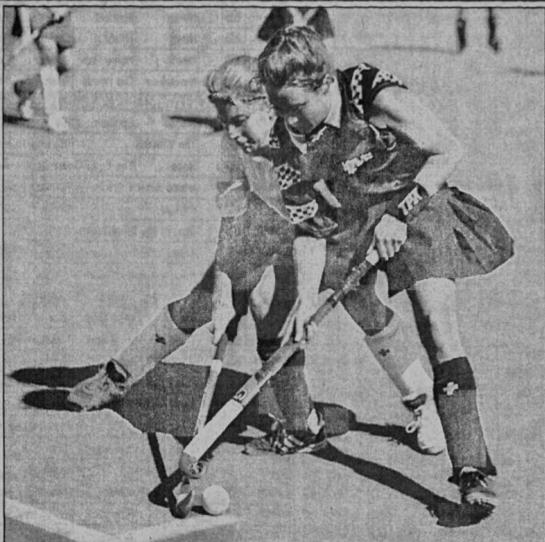

"That loss is definitely a big motivating factor coming into the game," Iowa head coach Beth Beglin said. "Iowa-Penn State is turning into a great rivalry with each team going back and forth in the win column."

Today's date was probably etched into the Hawkeye calendar following the game. Iowa is 12-7-1 all-time against the Lady Lions.

Currently, No. 19 Penn State (4-5, 1-1) has fallen under a string of tough losses, but Beglin believes that they are going to be tougher than ever. Like Iowa, Penn State has played a rigorous and demanding non-conference schedule filled with strong teams. They have played four Top-10 teams in top-ranked North Carolina, Old Dominion (No. 3), Massachusetts (No. 5) and Connecticut (No. 8).

"Giving them a No. 19 ranking makes me laugh, it's ridiculous, because they are a very very good team. It just so happens that they have played top-notch competition. They are far and away more dangerous now than they were a year ago."

It won't get any easier Sunday when Iowa faces off with the No. 14 Buckeyes (5-2, 2-0). Ohio State returns nine starters from a team that finished 10-9 a year ago.

MEN'S GOLF

Iowa looks for sweet revenge in Ann Arbor

Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's golf team enters this weekend's Wolverine Classic in Ann Arbor, Mich., looking for revenge.

Last weekend, rain forced the cancellation of the final round of the Northern Intercollegiate in Columbus, Ohio, with the Hawkeyes finishing a disappointing 11th place out of 15 teams.

The good news for coach Terry Anderson's Hawkeyes is the chance to draw even in the head-to-head race with every team that beat Iowa in Columbus.

"It's the exact competition we need," Anderson said. "Everyone that beat us last weekend will be there, so hopefully we can go up there and play well and get back to where we need to be."

After Iowa won its first two tournaments of the fall, the performance in Columbus influenced Anderson to shuffle the lineup.

Anderson held a qualifying tournament this week for the No. 4 and 5 positions this weekend with Sean Rowen, Chad McCarty and Chris Englund holding down the top three spots.

Brian Rupp, who has been in the lineup in all three tournaments, won the qualifier, and Mark Rosalyn finished second. Rosalyn will replace freshman David Hersch, who had been impressive in his first two collegiate tournaments before struggling last weekend.

The Hawkeyes, along with 17 other teams will compete in the 36-hole Wolverine Invitational, which will be held at the University of Michigan Golf Course.

TENNIS ROUNDUP

Iowa travels to Hoosier state for action

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

The Big Ten Conference season for Iowa's men's and women's tennis teams isn't until January, but at Ball State and Notre Dame this weekend, the Hawkeyes will get an early taste of things to come.

The Iowa men head for Muncie, while the Hawkeye women invade South Bend as both teams jump into action for the second time this fall. Both Hawkeye head coaches like the fact that their teams get a preview of their conference opponents but for different reasons.

"This is our last chance as a team to get to play in a big tournament like this," Iowa men's coach Steve Houghton said. "Every event after this in the fall is more individual-oriented. So I want to see how we play as a group one more time before the spring."

"I like the fact that we get to play more Big Ten teams before the real season begins," Hawkeye women's coach Jenny Mainz said. "The better we know these teams, the better off we'll be when we see them again."

Senior Kristen McCracken will lead the way for the Iowa women on Friday in singles play. The senior will be slotted in the No. 1 spot for the Hawkeyes when things get going at 9 a.m. McCracken also teams up with sophomore Erin Wolverson in the No. 1 doubles position.

Senior Robin Niemeier sees her first action of the season after skipping the Furman Classic last weekend. Niemeier will see action at No. 6 singles and No. 3 doubles.

In addition to the Hawkeyes, Purdue, Minnesota, Michigan and Ohio State will join the fray in South Bend.

Same script, different town for the men. Illinois, Michigan, Michigan State, Ohio State, Purdue and Wisconsin will join Iowa in Muncie for the Ball State Invitational.

The Hawkeyes enjoyed some success at last year's invitational. Ryan Johnstone won four matches in the Flight C singles division. Johnstone lost in the finals to Bryan Harris of Pennsylvania.

Senior Tom Derouin reached the quarterfinals of the A Flight after defeating individuals from Cincinnati and Ball State. Doug Bloom from Ohio State ended Derouin's run in the next round.

CROSS COUNTRY ROUNDUP

Wieczorek expects win

Coach Larry Wieczorek and the Iowa men's cross country squad will travel to the Loyola for the Lake Front Invitational in Chicago this weekend.

Wieczorek is expecting good things from his runners this weekend. "I fully expect our team to go in there to win the meet," Wieczorek said.

Iowa looks to be in good shape for this weekend with all its runners healthy and two good weeks of practice behind it. This is going to be a good chance for the Hawkeyes to begin to put things together in preparation for the Big Ten Conference meet next month.

In addition, Jared Pittman is coming off a great debut to his season last weekend, when he finished fourth at the Augustana Invitational with a time of 24 minutes, 39 seconds.

—Tony Wirt

Women's cross country

After a two-week layoff, the Iowa women's cross country team is healed up and ready to compete in the Loyola Lakefront Invitational on Saturday.

Coach Rachelle Roberts was glad her team had a break from the competition.

"The extra week gave us a good opportunity to rest the runners who needed rested."

"Becky Coleman and a couple of the freshmen had been struggling, so we used this week to regroup and refocus. I really think we'll be ready to go this weekend," Roberts said.

While senior captain Kiersten Pauling has recovered from a strained hamstring, freshmen Maggie Griffin is not quite 100 percent. Griffin was forced to withdraw from the Iowa Invitational but should be ready for Saturday's race.

"Maggie's leg has been bothering her this week, but the trainers have given her the okay and she should be able to compete," Roberts said.

The 5K race will take place at the Montrose Beach race course which is located on Lakeshore Drive, adjacent to Lake Michigan. Overall, 17 Division I teams will be competing.

"I think Missouri and host Loyola should be fairly tough and Eastern Kentucky always has a good program.

"I'm really not quite sure what to expect from the other teams," Roberts said.

BULLS MEDIA DAY

Rodman: Repeat then retire

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

DERFIELD, Ill. — His nose rings glinting in the camera lights, his purple hair peeking out below his cap and his German shepherd barking at his side, Dennis Rodman ripped Chicago Bulls management and said this season will be his last.

In other words, Rodman was in midseason form during the team's media day Thursday even though the defending NBA champions' training camp hadn't even started.

"I don't hate the people here, I just hate the business aspect of the game," said Rodman, who liked his own $9 million contract but was upset because he thinks coach Phil Jackson was treated unfairly. "For a guy to win four championships and then be treated like he's nobody, I'm not happy."

The always outrageous Rodman said that, with upcoming movie and television deals, "I don't need basketball any more."

"Basketball ... is dealing with day-to-day frustrations," the 35-year-old forward said. "It's pretty much over for me. I'll just move on."

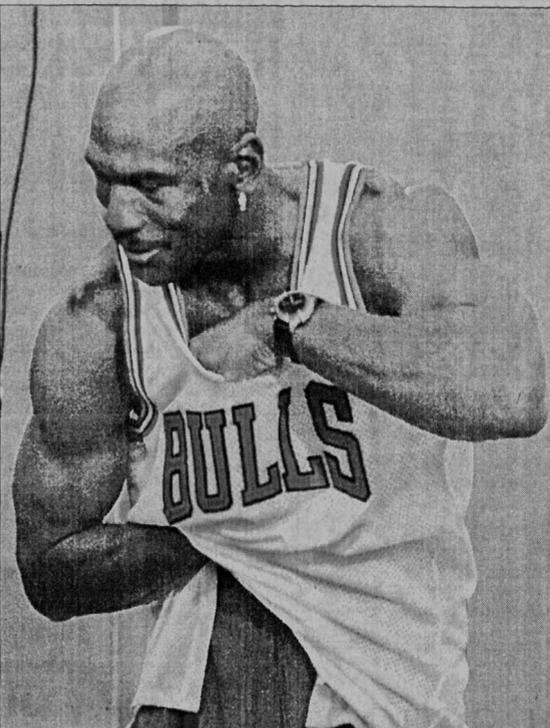

But not before the five-time NBA rebounding leader helps the Bulls get one more championship ring.

"We're going to repeat," Rodman said. "And when the season's over, I won't have to deal with it anymore."

Of course, the Bulls have caught the Worm's act before, and they have learned not to take him too seriously.

"He has a bad taste in his mouth? What, his wedding cake didn't have enough sugar in it?" asked Jackson, referring to Rodman's recent appearance in a bridal gown as a publicity stunt.

Jackson, who had to wait longer than he expected before receiving a one-year, $2.7 million contract, isn't worried about Rodman's mental state.

Associated Press

Chicago's Michael Jordan tries to retrieve a microphone that fell down his shirt during the team's media day Thursday evening.

"Even when his life has been mired in some really impossible situation, the moment he steps onto the court, he's been able to play basketball," Jackson said. "When he gets on the floor, he beats you every time."

General manager Jerry Krause was similarly unconcerned.

"Whatever," he said when told about Rodman's rantings. "That's just Dennis early in the year. As long as Dennis plays hard, I don't care what he says. The truth is that Phil's not upset about his contract and that nobody got jerked around."

Aside from Rodman's grand entrance and statements, the day before the beginning of practice was routine.

Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen talked about how the Bulls can't realistically expect to equal last season's NBA-record 72 victories. Pippen, Ron Harper and Luc Longley talked about their condition following offseason surgery. Robert Parish, the lone newcomer, talked about what he expects from his 43-year-old body in his 21st season.

And Jackson, thrilled that every important player is back, talked about how he'll let the league's oldest team "cruise a little bit" through the preseason.

"We want to practice hard and play hard during the season," the coach said. "But we've got three guys coming off surgery and other guys who might need to get started a little more slowly."

Jordan is the proud owner of a new, one-year, $30 million contract that makes him the highest-paid athlete in team-sports history. Unlike Rodman, he isn't ruling out playing beyond this season.

But he said he won't think about that until he has a ring for his thumb.

"I like to stay in the present and not journey too far into the future," Jordan said. "The expectations are going to be high this season. We certainly are not going to surprise anybody."

Hanks' 'That Thing You Do!' 'fantasy that is hard to resist'

Nathan S. Groepper
The Daily Iowan

When it comes to pulling on the emotional strings of an audience, Tom Hanks is a puppet master.

Whether it is restoring the magic of true love or making AIDS intimate, Hanks has developed charming, fantasy characters who movie fans allow themselves to believe in. In his feature-film writing and directing debut, "That Thing You Do!," Hanks again captures the inner emotions of viewers with unbridled whimsy and heartfelt compassion. While the cheerful film is far from a filmmaking masterpiece, it does present an enjoyable fantasy that is hard to resist.

Hanks made a correct (and possibly profitable) decision when choosing the familiar storyline of a small-town band's rise to national stardom. After their drummer the tempo of their opening song, and the Wonders rapidly become a band in demand.

Propelling the film's thin plot is a perky, talented cast of newcomers. Scott ("Grace Under Fire") makes an extensive attempt to imitate Hanks' wit and insight, but the shallow script reduces him to one-dimensional. Scott delivers a lovable protagonist, but the film's breakthrough performance is from Steve Zahn ("Crimson Tide"). As the band's paranoid lead guitarist, Zahn sincerely embodies the thrill of becoming famous.

Along with Liv Tyler ("Stealing Beauty") and Jonathon Schaech ("The Doom Generation"), the cast allows the film to soar as the Wonders climb the Billboard charts. One month after the competition, the Wonders are signed by a record executive (Tom Hanks) who secures a spot for them on a lengthy music tour. As the band begins to taste national success, the film attempts to tackle serious, human emotion. It fails miserably.

Although the film vaguely comments on the "nuclear family," Hanks is not concerned with introspection or social criticism. With little character development or believable feeling, "That Thing You Do!" cannot follow its joyous comedy with the necessary emotional punch.

Still, in a world of splashy images and fast-paced jokes, this matters little. "That Thing You Do!" may feature Hollywood filmmaking techniques and Academy Award-winning actor, but it is essentially an enjoyable two-hour sitcom. Shallow, yet endearing, the film is lightweight fun that may leave some viewers searching for more.

'Manny the Hippy' sentenced to 18 months

James Hannah
Associated Press

XENIA, Ohio — Fans of David Letterman won't be seeing any movie reviews from Manny the Hippy for a while.

He was sentenced Wednesday to 18 months in prison for violating probation on a marijuana-selling conviction.

Manny, whose real name is Micah Papp, returned from California two weeks ago and surrendered to Ohio officials who had sought him after spotting him on "Late Show with David Letterman."

In March, Papp pleaded guilty to selling marijuana to an undercover police officer and was ordered to serve five years probation.

Authorities said he violated the terms by moving to California without court permission.

Papp, 20, then appeared frequently on Letterman, doing movie reviews and even taking the host on a tour of San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury district, instructing him on street lingo such as "schwag" (bad), "dank" (good) and "diggity dank" (quite good).

Papp's attorney, John Rion, said Papp fled Ohio because of threatening telephone calls, and asked for leniency, saying a prison term could jeopardize the financial benefits of Papp's newfound fame.

"This young man has been visited with what some would call opportunities of a lifetime," Rion said.

Papp told Judge Thomas Rose he wants to deal with his drug problem.

But Rose told Papp his sentence was "not about a marijuana cigarette."

"This is about your willingness to comply with the court and the system," the judge said.

Papp slumped in his chair when his sentence was announced.

"He cried," Rion said. "He felt that all his high hopes would be lost."

Country Music Awards honors traditional stars

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The country music industry gave its most prestigious awards to old favorites Brooks & Dunn and George Strait Wednesday night, and made white-hot sellers LeAnn Rimes and Shania Twain cool their heels.

After dominating the vocal duo category for five years, Kix Brooks and Ronnie Dunn won that one again and added the evening's top award, entertainer of the year.

Strait ended a six-year dry spell and won the most Country Music Association Awards of any artist, getting nods for best male vocalist, single and album.

"It's been awhile since I walked up those stairs," said Strait, who has been a consistent hitmaker for 15 years, but was last recognized by the industry voters who award Country Music Awards in 1990, when he was named entertainer of the year.

Rimes and Twain, perched one-two on the country album sales charts, both came up empty. Twain has sold over 8 million of her The Women in Me CD over the past 18 months.

Both were recognized with prominent performance slots during the show broadcast live by CBS from the Grand Ole Opry House.

"Man, she's awesome," said host Vince Gill after the 14-year-old Rimes sang the evening's first number, her hit "Blue." Rimes lost out on the Horizon Award for most promising artist to Bryan White, and voters picked Strait's "Check Yes or No" instead of her Patsy Cline-influenced "Blue."

In other major awards, The Mavericks won best group for the second straight year, Patty Loveless got best female vocalist, and song of the year was Gill's "Go Rest High on That Mountain."

"It's too hard to speak about it," Gill said of the song he wrote as a

Loveless thanked her brother Roger Ramey, her former duet partner and manager.

"I've been making records for 10 years, and I've been waiting for this moment for a long time," she said.

Three greats were inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame: Buck Owens, Ray Price and the late Patsy Montana. Owens sang his classic "Act Naturally," and was inducted by singer Dwight Yoakam.

"Thanks and remember the great Don Rich, above all and everybody," Owens said. Rich, Owens' guitar player and harmony singer, died in a motorcycle crash in 1974.

Disney town celebrates past

Associated Press

CELEBRATION, Fla. — The Walt Disney Co. showed off its newest creation Wednesday: a planned community for 20,000 people that's billed as a blueprint for the future, even though it's a throwback to the past.

Celebration is a full-scale, residential and commercial town with exteriors modeled after pre-World War II-era buildings. It won't formally open until November, and construction won't be completed for years, but it already has about 300 residents.

Standing in the town square, a small plaza with benches, mature trees and a fountain, Disney Chairperson Michael Eisner said he hoped it would "serve as a road map for other developers to design and build more user-friendly cities."

Disney even built a Town Hall, but it won't exactly be the seat of representative government — all major decisions about the community will remain in Disney's hands.

When asked about criticism that new homeowners would be under "rigid" restrictions that govern repairs and prevent reselling for several years, Disney's head of development, Peter Rummell, said the new residents know exactly what they are getting into.

"There's a fundamental premise that we start with, and that is that you're not required to live here," Rummell said. "You need to buy into it and agree to it or else you can go somewhere else."

One couple who enthusiastically signed up is Gail and Nick Donofrio, retirees from Gloucester Township, N.J.

"We're right in the middle of a village atmosphere," Gail Donofrio said. "There's no maintenance, good security, good amenities. It's quiet, and we're on the lake. It's just great."

Surrounding the lakeside town are residential sections where custom-built estate homes are being built alongside more modest "village" and "cottage" houses on streets named Mulberry, Market and Greenbrier.

A K-through-12 public school, a teaching academy and medical complex are going up a stone's throw from a public 18-hole golf course, which just opened.

Former City High star excels at long range field goals

Chris Snider
THE DAILY IOWAN

Call him the Happy Gilmore of football. Just as the fictional character Happy Gilmore used his great hockey slapshot to land a spot on the professional golfers tour in the movie Happy Gilmore, Iowa senior Brion Hurley has used his abilities as a soccer player to land him a spot on the Iowa football team. Hurley's size dictated that he ball player as we've had here in a long time."

Hurley feels the fact that he isn't kicking short field goals or extra points because Zach Bromert handles those duties and the fact that he is stuck behind Nick Gallery in punting assignments will hurt his chances at the pros. But he is not ruling out the possibility.

"I know I'd like to try out and see if I can get a shot somewhere," he said. "I don't know what I would do. I'd probably concentrate on my punting. I think that's probably my best shot."

Fry, who said pro scouts have contacted him about Hurley, knows the senior can hit short field goals and extra points, but says other players deserve playing time, too.

"He can hit them for us," Fry said. "We're trying to make everybody happy, kind of like playing Tavian (Banks) and would be a better soccer player than football player at City High School in Iowa City, but he wasn't dedicated enough to the sport with the rounder ball.

"Most of the kids playing soccer were playing all year round," Hurley said. "I was still wanting to play basketball and football. I couldn't specialize like they were doing."

So Hurley made his way over to the football field, where he currently handles kickoffs, long field goals and short-yardage punting duties for the Hawkeyes.

Hurley first recognized the need for a kicker on his junior high team and jumped at the opportunity. While in seventh grade, he used to practice kicking the football before school and after soccer practice.

So far, his hard work has paid off. A senior who has already graduated with a degree in statistics, Hurley is looking at a possible pro career.

"I think he has an excellent chance at the pros because he's also an excellent punter, as well as field goals and kickoffs," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "He's probably as improved of a foot-Sedrick (Shaw) in the same backfield. That's a good problem to have."

Hurley accepts this fact.

"You always feel like you want to do more, but I don't feel like I'm any better than the people that are doing the job now," he said. "I feel like if someone goes down, I can step up and fill the job."

Hurley said he knows his chances at reaching the pros are slim, but that he would jump at any opportunity, even if it was with the Iowa Barnstormers of the Arena Football League.

"Any chance I can get, anywhere, I'll take it," he said.

A first-team all-state selection in high school, Hurley actually had no intentions to stay in Iowa City for college. But when the scholarship offers failed to come in, he walked on at Iowa.

"Coming up to my junior and senior year, I didn't really feel that was the right spot for me," Hurley said. "(Placekicker Todd) Romano had come in. I kind of wanted to move away from Iowa City and start somewhere new, but they were really the only school interested in me, so I came here."

After redshirting his first year, Hurley was given a chance to do some punting his freshman season. As a sophomore, he shared kicking duties with Romano and earned a scholarship.

Then as a junior, Hurley began having troubles hitting extra points and short field goals. Before he knew it, Zach Bromert had taken over those duties.

"It was a little frustrating," Hurley said. "Going into the season, I really felt like that was something I've been working for, trying to get that position. To have it kind of fall apart was frustrating."

This season, Hurley has his confidence back from short range, but hasn't been able to show it. He is two-for-two on field goals, hitting on a 54-yard attempt and a 45-yard attempt.

"I changed up some things. The year before, I was worrying about being able to hit from anywhere," he said.

"I was working on killing the ball so much that I lost some accuracy when I was throwing up extra points."

He has made six straight field goals dating back to last season, all of which have been over 45 yards.

"It seems like the further away we get from the goal line, the more accurate Hurley is," Fry said.

That's only fitting. After all, Happy Gilmore was best known for his long drives.

Tony Wirt
THE DAILY IOWAN

Every year, NCAA Division I-A football players get bigger, stronger, faster and quicker — and it is the job of Iowa's strength, speed and conditioning department to make sure the Hawkeyes don't fall behind the rest of the country in those areas.

Iowa's head strength and conditioning coach Paul Longo has recognized the effect these qualities have had on the game of college football and has tailored his program to address the areas of agility, flexibility, nutrition, speed development, conditioning and strength.

Although many programs see muscle mass as the only thing to shoot for, Iowa stresses injury prevention and performance enhancement as the two primary goals.

"I do not want my guys big just to be big," Longo said. "I'm really big on body fat. Speed and quickness are number one."

The workouts that each athlete uses is designed specifically for the particular needs of the individual, and his position, to maximize athletic potential.

For example, a wide receiver would have a workout more designed for speed, quickness and explosiveness over pure strength. An offensive tackle has a workout designed to add bulk to his frame while not losing any quickness.

"We always tell the recruit's mother not to buy him clothes before she sends him to school in August."

Paul Longo, Iowa strength, speed and conditioning coach

In Longo's program, players are given one-on-one attention and have their progress recorded by Longo and the strength and conditioning staff. This way, the coaches can help train the players mentally as well as physically. The coaches stress when to push beyond what athletes think they can do and when to hold back.

When an athlete first comes into the program, he is put through a battery of tests to determine and analyze his strengths and weaknesses.

Then it is determined where the player needs to be in order to play football at the Big Ten level. After seeing what the player can handle physically, such as determining how much weight his frame can handle, he is plugged into a workout designed by the coaches.

One of the main keys to Longo's program is the new, state-of-the-art weight training facilities available to the Hawkeyes. This 10,000-square-foot weight room is full of the latest equipment — from a plyometric area designed for speed and quickness to an Olympic weight training area for strength and explosiveness.

The Hammer strength equipment that the Hawkeyes use allows an athlete to train through injuries much better than free weights. Thus, an injury doesn't prevent an athlete from working out and losing the progress he has made throughout his career.

During the season, a player can be expected to spend three 45-minute sessions a week in the weight room. In the offseason, that amount of time grows to anywhere between an hour to an hour and 45 minutes — three, four, or five times a week, many times using every minute of the eight practice hours a day the NCAA allows.

Another integral part of the program is the assistant strength, speed and conditioning coach, former Hawkeye defensive lineman Parker Wildeman. After going through the system, Wildeman can offer a players perspective to the coaching staff.

"Parker is invaluable to us. To me he is the epitome of Hawkeye football. He was a self-made player," Longo said, "He's been there, he's done it, and our kids really respect and look up to him."

An athlete going through this program can expect to put on up to sixty quality pounds during a five-year stay at Iowa while decreasing his time in the 40-yard dash by two- to three-tenths of a second.

"We always tell the recruit's mother not to buy him clothes before she sends him to school in August," Longo said.

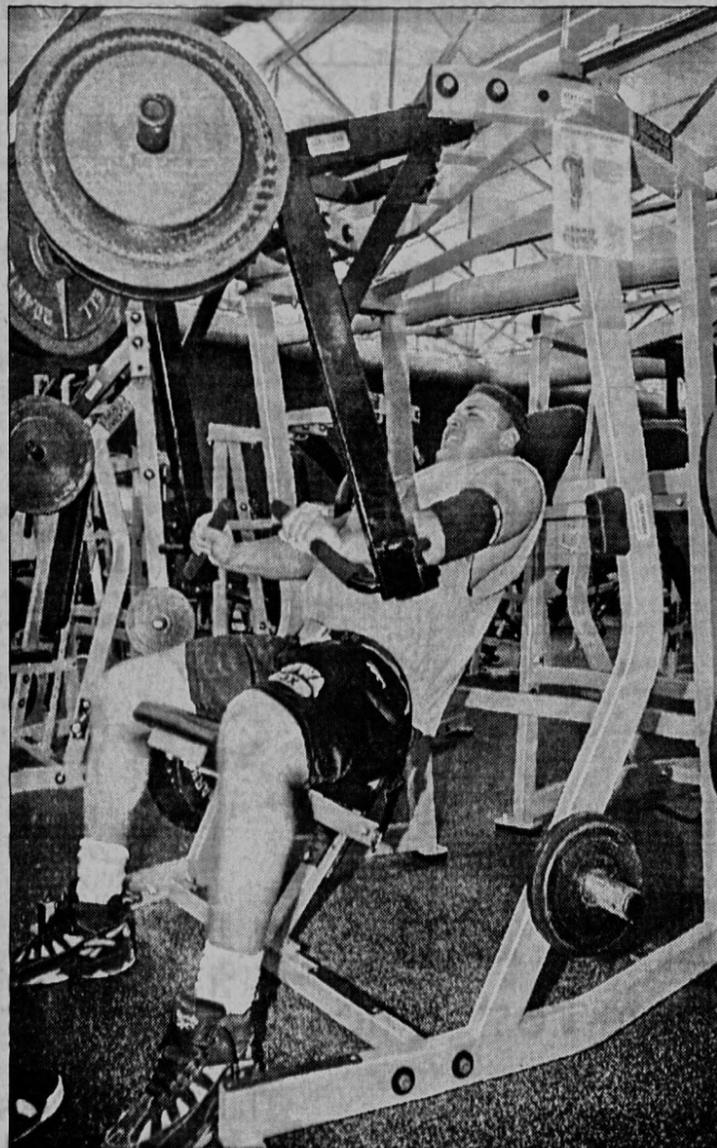

The players understand what this program is doing for the team. Hawkeye defensive end Bill Ennis-Inge came to Iowa as a freshman at 205 pounds and now tips the scales at 245.

"I can't say enough about how Coach Longo, Parker Wildeman and those guys have prepared us over the summer with our new equipment and facilities," he said. "Those guys are incredible. They will be there for you."

Hawkeye defensive lineman Jon LaFleur was also quick to praise the system.

"I've really developed myself as a player. I'm a stronger, faster, more physical and agile person just because of what we have here," he said.

Players need to be big, strong and fast to play in the Big Ten, and with this system and facilities, the Hawks definitely have the means to make their teams just that.

Hawkeyes try to bounce back after loss

Wayne Drehs
THE DAILY IOWAN

Heading in to Big Ten Conference action, the Iowa football team is looking to duplicate what one of its biggest rivals, Northwestern, did last season — rebound from a difficult loss and head to the Rose Bowl.

The Wildcats fell to lowly Miami of Ohio, 30-28, in Evanston last season before rebounding to win their last nine regular season games and earn their first trip to Pasadena since 1948.

Iowa was upset by Tulsa, 20-27, on September 21.

"People forget and they don't remember that Northwestern lost to Miami of Ohio," Iowa defensive end Bill Ennis-Inge said. "They only remember that they went to the Rose Bowl. I remind the team of that and let them know that we are going to be all right, and that the only way you can really taste success is to suffer a little failure."

Ennis-Inge refuses to throw away his hopes of a Big Ten Championship.

"You are not coached to lose and you don't play to lose," Ennis-Inge said. "We go out and work hard every day to be the Big Ten champions and earn the right to go to the Rose Bowl."

"If you don't believe you are preparing for the Rose Bowl, then you are just wasting your time."

The loss against Tulsa was due in part to numerous mental mistakes, a lack of execution and outstanding play by Tulsa. Since the loss, Iowa's confidence entering Saturday's game against Michigan State has come into question.

"We had five dropped passes, and several veteran breakdowns that we don't expect," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "But I'm not concerned about our team's confidence. We are a good team with good young men and if anything, they'll be highly motivated to bounce back."

Immediately following the loss, senior kicker Brian Hurley admits the team's confidence was not all there though.

"Our confidence was really low after the game," he said. "We had chances to win that game and we felt we let ourselves down. We just wanted to get out of there and get home."

Since Tulsa, the Hawkeyes have had two weeks to work on fundamentals, get key players healthy, and mentally prepare for the Big Ten season ahead.

"It couldn't have been a better time for the off week," quarterback Matt Sherman said. "We were a little shaken by the loss in that we didn't do as well as we could. It really makes you think how you could have helped the team more."

Sherman also believes the Tulsa loss changes the perspective on the season.

"That game really hurt our ego," the junior said. "We have a lot to prove now because we are not picked as one of the top teams anymore."

The loss has also been looked at by Fry as a motivational tool before entering the Big Ten season. The coach claims the response he has seen from the players in practice the last two weeks has been extremely positive.

"We are more intelligent in the past weeks, since we lost the game," Fry said. "It was a great learning experience about execution and other things."

As a captain of the team, Ennis-Inge says one of those other things learned is the feeling a player has after a difficult loss.

"After a game like that, you ask yourself, 'What can I do to not feel this way again,'" Ennis-Inge said. "It really puts it in your heart that yes, you can be beat, and you need to prepare more."

"So now this loss has really made us stronger and closer as a team."

The unity within the Hawkeyes since Tulsa is one factor that keeps the team's confidence up heading into the Michigan State game Saturday. Confidence that Ennis-Inge claims never was or never is in question.

"There is no confidence problem here. We cannot and will not let the loss ail us and bring our heads down. This is a really big test to see how the team responds from this adversity. We are all old and mature enough to understand what we have to do to stop this ship from sinking."

"You are not coached to lose and you don't play to lose. We go out and work hard every day to be the Big Ten champions and earn the right to go to the Rose Bowl. If you don't believe you are preparing for the Rose Bowl, then you are just wasting your time."

IOWA VS. MICHIGAN STATE

Teams have history of close games

All but two games since 1982 have been decided by a seven points or fewer

Andy Hamilton
THE DAILY IOWAN

When fans think of a great Big 10 battles, the Ohio State-Michigan series is probably the first to come to mind.

Over the course of the last dozen years, the Iowa-Michigan State game has always been a highly contested clash with a trip to Pasadena quite often at stake.

Such was the case in 1984, as Iowa entered the game leading the Big Ten with a 6-2-1 record overall and a 5-1-1 mark in conference play.

Iowa went into the contest without the services of tailback Ronnie Harmon, who suffered a broken leg the week before during a 10-10 tie against Wisconsin.

The Hawkeye offense took a while to get used to playing without Harmon and quarterback Chuck Long, who sat out the first half with a sore knee. Michigan State capitalized, taking a 14-3 halftime lead.

Long came off the bench in the second half and didn't waste any time heating up, connecting on 14 of 17 passes.

"It was a lot of fun. It felt better in the second half, but I was still limping around out there," Long said.

The final pass was a touchdown toss to Jonathan Hayes to cut the Spartan lead to 17-16 with less than a minute to play.

Another tie might have possibly cost the Hawkeyes a trip to the Rose Bowl, so coach Hayden Fry elected to attempt a two-point conversion. And on one of the most controversial calls in Hawkeye history, Long was ruled short of the goal line.

The following year was just as exciting, as Iowa entered the game ranked No. 1 in the nation.

Michigan State once again took a big lead, 24-13, at the half. Lorenzo White keyed the Michigan State attack, rushing for 226 yards, but Chuck Long got revenge for the previous season's loss.

Long caught fire in the second half, finishing the game completing 30-of-39 passes for 380 yards and four touchdowns. But the four touchdowns were only enough to cut the Spartan lead to 31-28.

With four minutes to play, Long led the Hawkeye offense on a 78-yard drive that took Iowa inside the Spartan five-yard line with 31 seconds remaining.

Then came one of the biggest plays in Hayden Fry's tenure at Iowa. Long took the snap and faked a handoff to Ronnie Harmon diving over the goal line. While most of Kinnick Stadium, including the cameras, watched Harmon's perfect fake, Long ran towards the right corner of the end zone with the go ahead touchdown, giving Iowa a 35-31 victory and sending the Hawkeyes to Pasadena.

"We were a little short the year before on what we thought was a controversial call, but the games against Michigan State are always great and this Saturday should be no different," Long said.

"It seems like we always play them on the first game of the Big 10 season, so that makes it even more important."

The Hawkeyes and Spartans locked up in another battle the following fall in East Lansing.

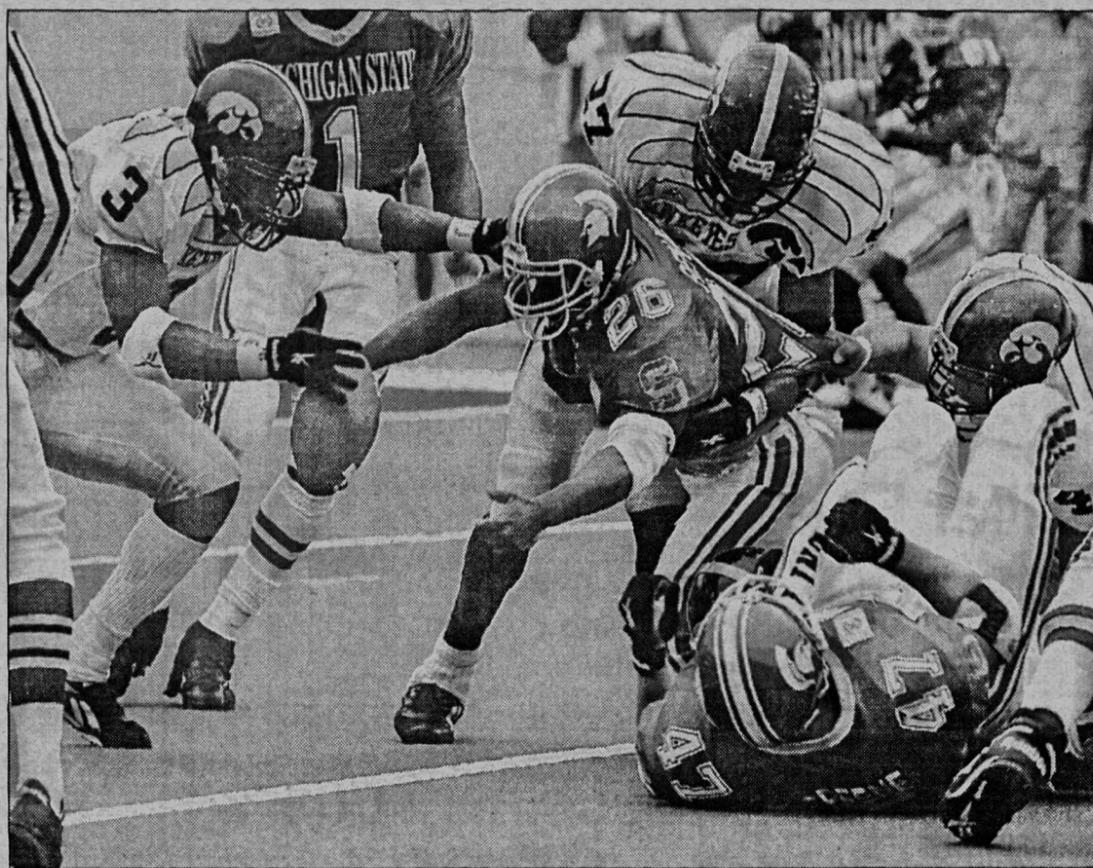

Quarterback Tom Poholsky was impressive in his first Hawkeye start, filling in for Mark Vlasic. Poholsky threw for 240 yards and two touchdowns in a game dominated by the defenses. Iowa rushed for just 80 yards on the day, but held the Michigan State to only 64 and limited Lorenzo White to 41 yards, as the Hawkeyes held on for a 24-21 road win.

Michigan State avenged the previous two losses to the Hawkeyes in 1987 on its way to the Rose Bowl, but the win in Iowa City was one of the toughest est tests for the Spartans.

This time Iowa took the first half lead, but the Spartans rallied from a 14-7 deficit. Lorenzo White once again had a big game in Kinnick Stadium, rushing for 166 yards and a touchdown, as the Hawkeyes fell for the only time at home on their way to the Holiday Bowl.

The two teams met up in East Lansing in 1988 in another defensive battle, as the game went into the fourth quarter deadlocked, 10-10.

In spite of the defenses, both offenses created plenty of excitement during the final minute.

With 22 seconds to play and the game still tied, Michigan State's John Langeloh missed a 44-yard field goal. Iowa came back on the next play with a 38-yard pass from Chuck Hartlieb to Travis Watkins, giving Jeff Skillet a chance to win it for the Hawkeyes, but his 51-yard attempt missed just wide.

The Spartans entered the 1989 game with a 1-2 record, but the losses came to No. 1 Notre Dame (21-13) and No. 2 Miami (26-20). Iowa came into the contest with a 2-1 mark, but the two wins were non-impressive victories over Tulsa and Iowa State.

This game proved that when the Hawkeyes and Spartans lock up, what you've accomplished up to that point doesn't matter.

Michigan State led, 17-7, and the Spartans were looking to add more, but Iowa came up with a big blocked field goal. Matt Rodgers responded, leading the Hawkeyes down the field before connecting with Mike Saunders on a 12-yard touchdown pass.

The Spartans lost two fumbles in the final quarter, but Iowa couldn't capitalize on the mistakes and Michigan State won for the second consecutive time in Iowa City.

The trend continued in 1990 in East Lansing, as the visiting team went into foreign territory and came away with a win.

Hayden Fry remained undefeated in Spartan Stadium with a 12-7 win. The victory got the ball rolling for the Hawkeyes, who would go all the way to the Rose Bowl.

The Hawkeyes and Spartans took a break from each other in 1991 and 1992. Even 1993 could be considered a year off under the standards of this series, as Michigan State won 24-10 in its biggest win over Iowa since 1980.

Things got back to normal in 1994 for the two schools. Iowa entered the contest suffering from five consecutive losses.

Iowa's leading passer turned out to be wide receiver Anthony Dean, who completed his only pass for 41 yards to Harold Jasper. With a strong running game provided by Sedrick Shaw and Kent Kahl, the Hawkeyes held the ball for 18 minutes during the second half with scoring drives of 87 and 80 yards.

Michigan State's offense was kept off the field and off the scoreboard in the second half and Iowa pulled out a much needed 19-14 win and the fans stormed the field at Kinnick Stadium.

Iowa won again last season, 21-7, in East Lansing behind Sedrick Shaw's 250 yard performance, but the game was much closer than indicated, as the Spartans drove inside the Iowa 10-yard line twice late in the game.

KINNICK'S ONE MAN GROUNDS CREW

Field of Dreams

A WATCHFUL EYE: Larry Putney has been taking care of the Kinnick Stadium field for the past six years.

BRIAN MOORE/THE DAILY IOWAN

Larry Putney keeps Kinnick Stadium ready for battle

Chuck Blount
THE DAILY IOWAN

Taking care of a Division I-A college football program is not easy. From dealing with players, equipment, travel plans and the media, there is a lot to take into consideration. However, one of the most obvious links to football often goes unnoticed — the field.

Whether it be from the bleachers or an airplane, a view of the Kinnick Stadium turf is a thing of beauty. With cross-cut grass greener than Crayola's best version and perfectly painted line markings and end zones, the turf is a football paradise.

It hasn't always been like this. Just eight years ago, Kinnick Stadium was conveniently covered with artificial turf. Links to injury and uncomfortable playing conditions led the athletic department to scrap the carpet and put in the "real" playing surface in 1989. The Prescription Athletic Turf (PAT) that is in current use has remained intact since then.

The man behind the Kinnick turf is field grounds head Larry Putney. Putney has taken the field under his wing for the past six years. He, along with four student workers, also takes care of the three practice fields used by the Iowa football team.

Being responsible for the turf warrants a lot of merit, it must meet all of the expectations by all of the players and coaches of both teams and the critical eyes of 70,000 fans. If there is a brown spot, uneven marking, uncut grass area or hole, it will surely get back to the man responsible.

Maintaining a football turf that is used only six times a year sounds like an easy task, but it's not.

The Kinnick turf is constantly maintained at a length of one and one-half inches. To keep this intricate measurement as accurate as possible, Putney mows every square-inch of the field daily — a process that takes up to two hours.

"Our guy is doing a super job," coach

"We prepare the field the exact same way every day of every week of the year. Besides, we would be hindering the success of our own players."

Larry Putney, Iowa football groundskeeper on whether he wets the field to slow down opposing players

Hayden Fry said. "He deals with so much that if it's got grass on it at all, I'm going to give him a pat on the back."

Not surprisingly, the job is especially hard during the season. After game day the field is immediately treated for cleat divots, holes and grass wear. It is then rolled flat with a tractor, mowed and seeded.

On the day after a game, the field is airified with another tractor. Airification consists of a type of roller that punctures the field by the inch. This allows greater moisture and promotes the health of the grass.

"Overall, I would say that approximately 35 hours a week are put just in dealing with the grass," Putney said. "I wouldn't even know where to begin if I were to count how many times I have been on this field."

In the winter, the field is blanketed with a heat-retaining cover that elevates the field temperature five degrees above the outside temperature. The cover also allows water to permeate onto the field.

An underground watering system has been placed under the field to cater to any possible drainage or watering situations. The million dollar project has made inclement weather irrelevant to field conditions. Under the sod lies a layer of sand and a tile system that prevents rain soaking the field.

The system also possesses the capabilities of watering the grass from beneath the surface — a capability that has opened the door for questioning and allegations.

Rumors a plenty exist on this topic. One of the very best ways to limit a team's effectiveness is to put them on a slippery surface.

Field conditions for the Iowa State and Arizona games this year were semi-wet even though there had been no rain prior to the contest — good strategy for a speedy defense and a Heisman Trophy candidate.

But Fry insists he would never do that to an opponent.

"We have all that elaborate equipment," he said. "I don't know if everyone has ever thrown the main switch for it to work."

Putney backs up the coaches claim.

"We prepare the field the exact same way every day of every week of the year," Putney said. "Besides, we would be hindering the success of our own players."

Normally, the Kinnick turf is watered for one hour three times a day.

Whether these rumors are true or not has yet to be determined. What has been determined is that Kinnick Stadium is the Rolls Royce of football fields. Fans believe that, and even coach Fry has expressed the sentiments.

"I think that we have the best college football field in America," he said. "I really do."

Getting the lines and end zones painted all nice and tidy is a job in itself. It is also very expensive.

The day before each home game, 50 gallons of black, yellow and white paint are used on the turf with stencils and markers.

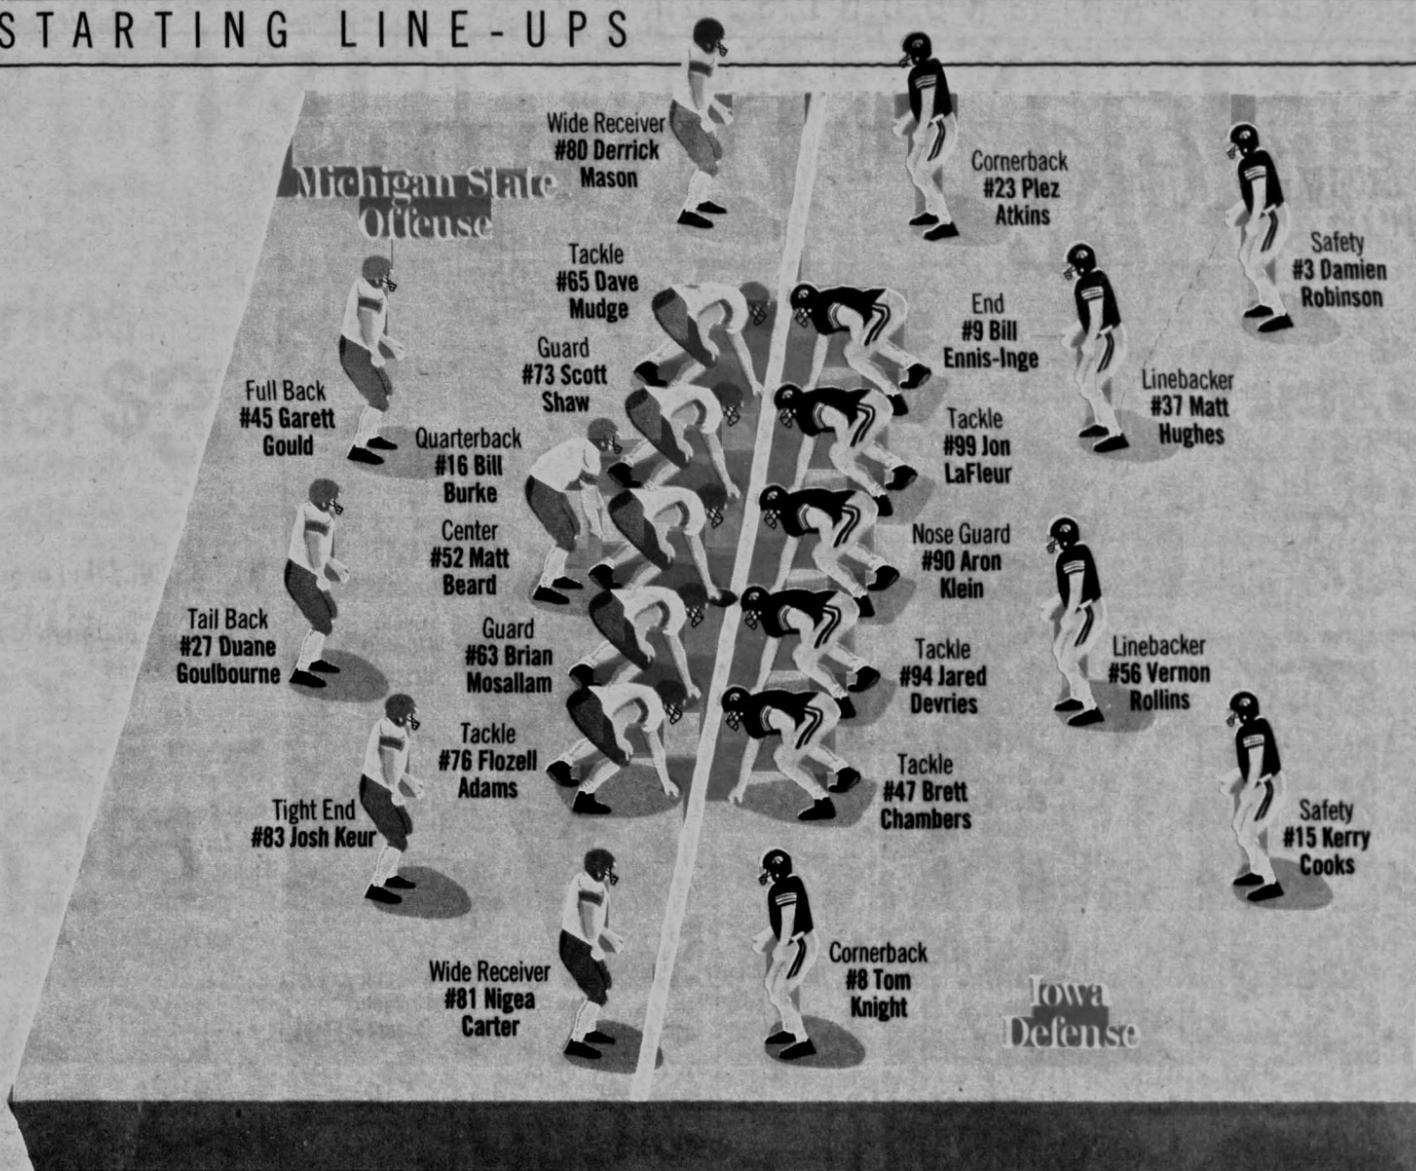

"Don't have any idea how much money the athletic department spends on paint supplies and caretaking expenses, but it is definitely up there," Putney said.

In Putney's six years' of caretaking the Kinnick turf, one could imagine some devastating games in terms of ripping up the turf. Remarkably, Putney's choice of 'Most Field Destructive' doesn't include a Big Ten game. It doesn't even deal with a game that counts.

"The 1995 spring game put the field in bad shape," he said. "The ground was still pretty frozen and hard at the time of the game, so every play the cleats dug into the turf, the grass came with it."

But at least the Hawkeyes won. Putney receives great job satisfaction with almost every Hawkeye home game. Sharing the sentiments of the capacity crowd, he loves his work the most when, "the Hawkeyes win the game."

GAME NOTES

Opponents focus on Hay

Last season, Iowa wide receiver Tim Dwight caught 46 passes for 816 yards and was one of the Hawkeyes top offensive threats. Thus far this season, the Iowa City native has just 56 yards receiving on eight catches.

But Iowa coach Hayden Fry is not worried about the performance of his star receiver, saying teams have been focusing more on shutting down Dwight.

"Tim's a football player and he sees how people are playing and he knows that there are certain teams that, because of their defensive structure, he is going to have a greater opportunity against," Fry said. "You don't play Tim Dwight like a normal player, so people do things to shut him down. If they don't, they're crazy."

One area Dwight has not been contained is the area of hitting, hitting opposing players that is.

Dwight has been known to lay out opponents on punt and kick returns, although he has two penalties for hitting a punt returner too soon this season.

Fry noticed the penalties haven't seemed to lesson fans views of Dwight.

"It'd make it a lot easier on the coaches if the fans wouldn't yell and holler when he hits someone like that," Fry said. "He enjoys that."

Fry remembers his high school playing days

Despite having an off week, Iowa football coach Hayden Fry had to miss the 50th reunion of his state champion high school football team last weekend.

Fry, an all-state quarterback, led his former team, Odessa High School, to the Texas state championship in 1946.

"A little ol' town of less than 9,000 people, we won the whole smear when there was only one classification in the whole state of Texas — beat San Antonio," Fry said. "We just really had a great ball club."

The team was honored during a game last Friday, but NCAA rules wouldn't allow Fry to attend the high school game. The rule disappointed Fry, who hadn't seen some of his old teammates in 50 years.

"They ought to make special privileges for coaches that have sons playing in high school games for them to go see their son play," Fry said.

None the less, Fry has fond memories of his Texas high school football days.

Becky Gruhn
THE DAILY IOWAN

Imagine working 40 hours a week without a paycheck. How about going to practice five days a week and spending countless other hours lifting weights or watching films without reaping the benefits of an athletic scholarship. That is the scenario faced by walk-on athletes at the University of Iowa.

UI sophomore Zach Bromert, a Hawkeye placekicker and a looked at real closely by a lot of big schools after my junior year of high school. But we didn't make the playoffs my senior year and that hurt my chances of going anywhere as far as Division I is concerned. But in a way, I'm glad things didn't work out in that respect because I ended up here and things have worked out great. I think everything happens for a reason," Bromert said.

Bromert was the only true freshman to play for Iowa in 1995. He has connected on 45-

"The scholarships we award yearly are based on how many are available due to the graduation of senior players. On average, between two and three walk-on athletes end up getting a scholarship yearly."

Gene Jones, Iowa recruiting coordinator

Kinnick Stadium favorite, took a gamble and came all the way from Pensacola, Fla., in order to walk on at Iowa.

"I sent my tape up here and the coaches said they'd like to have me walk on here," Bromert said. "I came up and visited the campus and really liked the program a lot. The coaching staff is great and I was really impressed with the whole situation so I decided to take a chance and come up.

"I had a few scholarship offers from some small schools to play soccer. For football I was being of 46 PATs in his career, including 23 straight, and has hit on 8-of-10 career field goals.

But his popularity with the crowd is something Bromert never expected.

"That was an absolute surprise to me," he said. "I just wanted to get a chance to step on the field. I guess once you step on the field, that stuff comes with it."

Gene Jones, UI recruiting coordinator and assistant wide receiver coach, said there are two types of walk-on athletes.

"We have 'recruited walk-ons' and other 'walk-ons who give us a call.' A recruited walk-on is someone we contact and feel has the potential to develop and get bigger and stronger, but unfortunately there just isn't a scholarship available for the athlete," Jones said.

According to Jones, the Hawkeyes receive 15 to 20 letters or tapes a day from athletes interested in trying out for the team, but NCAA guidelines allow teams to give out just 85 scholarships.

"The scholarships we award yearly are based on how many are available due to the graduation of senior players. This usually averages out to around 18 to 20 a year. On average, between two and three walk-on athletes end up getting a scholarship yearly," Jones said.

UI senior defensive lineman Brett Chambers and defensive lineman Jason House are two of the few football walk-ons who have earned a scholarship.

Like Bromert, both turned down scholarship opportunities from other schools in order to attend Iowa.

"I'm from Iowa City so I've always been an Iowa fan," House said. "It seemed like the best opportunity for me was here at Iowa. Most offers I turned down were from smaller schools, but there were a couple lower-level Division I schools I turned down as well. I wanted to play at this level and in the Big Ten.

HOUSE

"Iowa has had a lot of success with their walk-ons, so I thought this was the best place to do it. I felt like I could play at this level."

Although the decision to play at Iowa was a relatively easy one for both players, Chambers admits the path to attaining a scholarship wasn't easy.

"It is really tough," he said. "If you talk to any walk-on around here, they'll tell you it is a tough road. You have to have a lot of drive. There are times you feel like it's working good and then there are times you feel like there's no way it is going to work out.

"As a walk-on you're not in a position where it is assumed you can play. You have to prove that you can play. I had a lot of support from my parents, friends, and overall community support from my hometown of Treynor, Iowa. Those people, mostly my parents, were always there encouraging me to stay with it when it didn't look promising."

Chambers attributes being awarded a scholarship his junior year to a lucky break he got during his sophomore season.

"I got a break my sophomore year when John Hartlieb got hurt," he said. "I was still a walk on and they really didn't have a solid No. 2. The whole week in practice after he got hurt I really stepped up and got to start the next week."

House probably won't ever forget the moment he found out he had received a scholarship.

"After my freshman year Coach Fry called me into his office and told me that they were going to put me on scholarship. That was a very good feeling, definitely like a dream come true," he said.

But lack of a scholarship is not a concern to many UI walk-on football players. It's more about playing the sport they love.

"Even if I wouldn't have played in a game last year, I would have worked just as hard as I did," Bromert said. "That's just the kind of person I am. Walk-on or not, I'm going to put in the same amount of work."

MICHIGAN STATE PREVIEW

Chris Snider
THE DAILY IOWAN

Despite a 2-2 record, coach Nick Saban will bring a confident Michigan State football team into Iowa City this weekend, fresh off a 47-0 victory over Eastern Michigan.

"The win over Eastern was a total team win," Saban said. "Every facet of our team came together — the defense with the shutout, the special teams with the punt return for a score and the offense which gained more confidence as the game went along."

Iowa coach Hayden Fry knows his team will have to slow down the Spartans before it can beat them.

"Anytime you goose-egg someone in modern day football, that's quite an accomplishment," Fry said. "We're going to catch them probably as close to full speed as they can present."

Freshman quarterback Bill Burke, who entered the season as the Spartan's No. 3 quarterback, is listed to start against the Hawkeyes. There is an outside shot junior Todd Schultz could return for the game, but Saban insists Burke is his man.

"Bill Burke is our starting quarterback — period," Saban said. "This is a coaching decision based on a number of factors. You can make it a controversy if you want to, but that's going to be what's best for our team."

Burke was given the first start of his career last week against Eastern Michigan, completing 8-of-22 passes for 166 yards and two touchdowns in the victory.

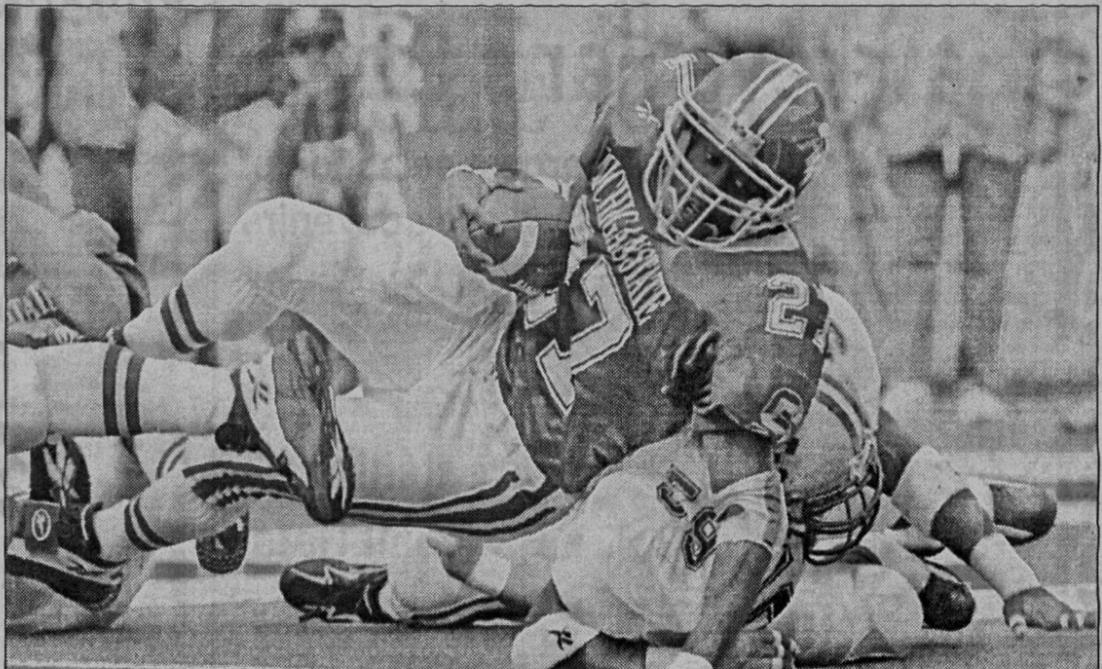

"Bill Burke, once he settled down in the game after going 0-for-7 in the beginning, showed a little poise, maybe as a guy that has some potential for the future as a quarterback," Saban said.

Schultz started the first two games of the season before being sidelined with a knee injury. Michigan State won their first game, 52-14 over Purdue, but fell, 14-55, to Nebraska the next week.

Sophomore Gus Ornstein, a transfer from Notre Dame, started the third game for the Spartans, a 20-30 loss to Louisville.

No matter who is doing the throwing, the Spartans top targets this season have been receivers Derrick Mason and Nigea Carter.

coach Hayden Fry said.

Mason, who is already the top punt returner in Big Ten history, has 15 receptions for 246 yards and is averaging 14 yards per kickoff and punt return this season. Carter has 13 catches for 180 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

With junior tailback Marc Renaud academically ineligible this season, senior Duane Goulbourne and true freshman Sedrick Irvin have taken up the slack at running back.

Goulbourne has 62 carries for 263 yards. Irvin has 60 rushes for 261 yards and six touchdowns. Irvin also has 17 receptions for 133 yards and another touchdown.

Junior offensive tackle Flozell Adams, a 6-7, 325 pounder, has led the way for Goulbourne and Irvin. Adams was honorable Michigan State linebacker Reggie Garnett has inked some pretty impressive stats in his years with the Spartans. He's also been known to put that ink onto paper when he's not on the field.

Garnett has drawn caricatures of friends, movie characters, celebrities, almost everyone who wants one done, he said. The four-year starter even drew a couple of former MSU coach George Perles before his retirement.

But some of his most famous drawing came during team meeting his freshman season.

Any time a guest speaker came to talk to the team, that person was open game for Garnett's sketch pad. And as a freshman, Garnett's drawings almost got him in trouble when humorous sketches of the coaching staff circulated during a team meeting.

"I'd draw pictures and they'd get passed around, but I never got in trouble for it," Garnett said.

nett's family. His mother, Ruby Garnett of Ruby and the Romantics, had a No. 1 song with "Our Day Will Come" in the 1960's.

"I didn't inherit any of her singing talent," Garnett said.

But he did inherit some talents from his older brother, Robert, a veteran defensive back in the NFL.

While Reggie is focusing more on this season and a possible trip to the Rose Bowl, he does hope his talents will take him to that level someday. Iowa football coach Hayden Fry would be glad to see that day come.

"He's been one of the best linebackers in the Big Ten for years — a tremendous football player," Fry said. "I really hate for him to be back this week."

Back, as in back from a knee injury that sidelines Garnett for the past two games.

Garnett injured his knee in the first half of MSU's game at Nebraska Sept. 7. The two games were only the third and fourth starts he has missed in his four years with the Spartans.

He missed one start last season and one his true freshman year. But he won't miss starting against Iowa.

"I'm ready to go," Garnett said. After going through light workouts last week, Garnett suited up for the Eastern Michigan game, but didn't play because his services weren't needed in a 47-0 victory.

Garnett said the extra week was a precautionary method to get him even more prepared for Iowa.

"I don't want to bring the rest of the players down because I'm not one hundred percent," he said.

Garnett came to Michigan State after earning Parade Magazine All-American honors at Buchtel High School in Akron, Ohio, immediately stepped into a starting role with the Spartans.

He was just 18 years old with he started his first game for Michigan State.

The 6-1, 230 pound middle linebacker earned Big Ten freshman of the year honors in 1993, and has been honorable mention all-Big Ten the past two seasons.

Garnett has been on the Butkus Award Watch List since his sophomore season and is currently 10th in Michigan State history with 287 tackles. He finished seventh in the Big Ten in tackles last season.

PREGAME'S PICK

Iowa opens Big Ten season with win

When Iowa and Michigan State meet Saturday in Kinnick Stadium, it could very well be the most important game of 1996 for the Hawkeyes.

A win would get back the confidence of the coaches, players, and fans after the upset loss at Tulsa. Most importantly, a victory against Michigan State would be a great start to the Big Ten season and give the Hawkeyes momentum to finish in the upper half of the conference.

On the other hand, a loss could be devastating. Two losses in a row wasn't supposed to be possible until the Penn State and Ohio State games.

As it is, Hawkeye fans are

Look for the Hawkeyes to come up with a Sun Bowl-type performance and the passing game to give Iowa the all-around offensive attack it will need to finish near the top of the Big Ten.

Iowa 27, Michigan State 20

starting to wonder where the powerful offense is. This is the game that offense will find itself.

Running the football hasn't been a problem for the Iowa offense, as Sedrick Shaw and Tavian Banks are sixth and eighth in the Big Ten in rushing respectively. Fullback Michael Burger has been effective when called upon, averaging 6.5 yards per carry.

The passing game is yet to show its potential. Iowa ranks dead last in passing offense in the conference and Matt Sherman hasn't been able to find big play threats Tim Dwight and Demo Odems, as the two wide receivers have combined for just a dozen catches.

While the Hawkeyes had a field day running the football last season in the 21-7 win in East Lansing, the aerial attack was also productive. Sherman's 213 yards passing, 115 of them to Dwight, were overshadowed by Shaw's 250-yard performance.

Shaw is very capable of having that type of game again this season, but it isn't likely. The Spartans rank third in the Big Ten in rushing defense after four games, including a loss to the two-time defending national champion Cornhuskers.

After four games in 1995, Michigan State allowed an average of 258 yards per game on the ground. During the same four game period this season, the defense has allowed just 97 yards per game.

Look for the Hawkeyes to come up with some big plays, as the Spartans have been susceptible to giving up long scores.

On the other side of the ball, the Hawkeye defense remains a mystery. In the season opener against Arizona, the defense came up with numerous big plays and was the key to the one-point win. The following week, the Hawkeyes shut down Troy Davis and the Iowa State offense in the first half and after two games the biggest surprise to Hayden Fry was his defense.

But one week later, Tulsa's offense had its way for the first three quarters. The Iowa defense allowed 356 yards passing to Tulsa quarterback John Fitzgerald, who entered the game completing just 26 percent of his passes.

When the Hawkeyes finally buckled down in the fourth quarter, Tulsa gained just 39 yards and one first down.

The Spartans, like the Hawkeyes, feature two very good running backs. Freshman Sedrick Irvin was one of the most highly recruited players in the state of Florida last season. That alone says enough, but Irvin has rushed for six touchdowns and senior Duane Goulbourne has also given Michigan State a powerful running attack.

The Hawkeye defense will be up to the task to stop the run and if the Spartans move the ball, it will be through the air with freshman quarterback Bill Burke throwing to speedy receivers Nigea Carter and Derriek Mason.

When Iowa and Michigan State lock up, a close game is always in order. Since 1982, only two games in the series have been decided by a touchdown or less.

Look for the Hawkeyes to come up with a Sun Bowl-type performance and the passing game to give Iowa the all-around offensive attack it will need to finish near the top of the Big Ten.

THIS WEEK IN THE BIG TEN

Rose Bowl race will clear up this weekend

The Pasadena picture will become a little less blurry after this week's action in the Big Ten conference. Wisconsin is the only team that is spared from this week's conference battles.

The big clash of the week has Penn State at Ohio State while Michigan enters the Wildcats den of defending Big Ten champions Northwestern. Only the strong will survive from here on out.

Penn State at Ohio State

Right now, this game has more national championship ramifications than conference ramifications.

Ohio State looked solid in its win at Notre Dame and Penn State played just well enough to pull off a three point win in

"If we can execute early and keep the crowd in the game, it will be very tough for Penn State."

John Cooper, Ohio State coach

Madison. Some times that's what it takes.

This game comes down to who can stop that other teams running game. Penn State grinds out 230.8 yards every contest on the ground and the Buckeyes punish opposing teams for 297 yards per game.

The quarterbacks are the X-factor.

Penn State's Wally Richardson has thrown five interceptions and only three touchdowns.

Joe Germaine and Stanley Jackson of Ohio State have defensive coordinators wetting the bed at night. Both throw for over 12 yards per completion and both have thrown for 5 touchdowns. Buckeye coach John Cooper said the horseshoe should be rocking this Saturday.

"If we can execute early and keep the crowd in the game, it will be very tough for Penn State. Playing at home is something we do very well and other teams know when they come into Columbus, its going to be a challenge," Cooper said.

Ohio State, 31-17.

Minnesota at Purdue

This could be the most intriguing game of the week.

Purdue looked impressive (words rarely seen in the same sentence) in its 42-21 shellacking of N. C. State last week. Boilermaker receiver Brian Alford is turning into one of the more dangerous receivers in the conference. Alford averages 15.5 yards per catch and has caught three scores.

The Golden Gophers have their own bronzed animal threat in Tutu Atwell. Atwell averages six catches per game at 14.72 yards per grab.

Minnesota had a huge upset of Syracuse two weeks ago but Golden Gopher coach Jim Wacker said this week's game is ten times more important.

"The Syracuse win gave us a lot of momentum but this is the game we really want to get. Road wins in the Big Ten are hard to come by so if we can pull this one out it would be huge," Wacker said.

Purdue, 30-24.

Indiana at Illinois

The Hoosiers lost last week against Northwestern, but Bill Mallory's team seems more focused and disciplined than the team that was blown out by 35 points in '95.

Indiana's Alex Smith appears to be back on track. The junior is currently second in the conference in rushing at 138 yards a pop. Indiana's Dorian Wilkerson already has 300 yards receiving, so the Illinois defense is going to have to step up .. uh .. tell you what, I should pick Illinois in this game but I'm not.

Indiana, 17-14.

Michigan at N'western

This is an ugly rivalry based on one team stealing the other team's name for their fight song. You know how ugly that gets.

The Wolverines are singing anything but 'Go You Northwestern' after last year's 19-13 loss in Ann Arbor.

The Wildcats have come back strong after the opening loss to Wake Forest and have the offensive wheels turning behind running back Darnell Autry (8 TD's, 573 yds.) and quarterback Steve Schnur (69-percent completion percentage and 8 TD's).

The Wolverines handled UCLA fairly easily last weekend, 38-9. Michigan coach Lloyd Carr said his team needs no motivational speech for the Wildcats.

"We will be ready for Northwestern. The players know what happened last year and how tough of ball game it's going to be. But if we play our game and keep the crowd out of it, we'll be successful," Carr said.

Michigan, 22-17.

Chris James is a UI senior majoring in journalism. He has correctly predicted 13-of-15 winners this season.

mention all-Big Ten last year and was named a preseason all-Big Ten selection by Bob Griese's Football Yearbook.

True freshman Mike Austin is second with 26 stops and sophomore safety Sorie Kanu has 22 tackles. Sophomore linebacker Courtney Ledyard has four sacks and six tackles-for-loss amongst his 20 stops.

After suffering a 21-7 loss to Iowa last season in East Lansing, Saban expects another tough battle this year.

"I think that it is going to be very challenging for us to go to Iowa City and this is going to be a very important game for us," he said.

Sedrick Shaw rushed for 250 yards in Iowa's victory last year.

"Obviously we're going to have to do a much better job of containing, tackling and playing on the line of scrimmage than we did last year, or we're not going to have very good results," Saban said.

The Spartans face Illinois at home next week and Minnesota on the road Oct. 19.
