A frustrated Hawkeye

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Iowa head football coach Hayden Fry, is shown Sept. 7 at Kinnick Stadium at Iowa's game against Arizona. Fry was visibly upset at a press conference Tuesday while responding to criticism from media and fans. "We're doing the best we can. We guarantee that every week. Sometimes it works, sometimes it doesn't. But at least we're giving the best effort we can. So what right do you have to be critical and knock those kids? You don't. You don't. I'm telling you, you don't have that right." See story Page 1B.

Shaw death brings return of councilors

Melanie Mesaros
 The Daily Iowan

Anger and concern about the Iowa City City Council's communication with the public in the circumstances surrounding the death of Eric Shaw prompted the appearance of two former councilors to Tuesday night's general meeting.

Carol de Prose and Jim Throgmorton addressed the current council about Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White's decision not to charge former Iowa City Police Department Officer Jeffrey Gillaspie. They said the public feels disconnected to the events and the council has a responsibility to communicate information.

"With the people, with the Shaws, with the police, (the councilors) could do more instead of circling the wagons and defending themselves from criticism," de Prose said.

De Prose, who served on the council from 1973-79 with White, and Throgmorton, who served on the council from 1993-95, said Gillaspie was treated differently than an average citizen would have been.

Last Thursday, White announced no charges would be filed against Gillaspie, who resigned from the ICPD Oct. 1. Council members publicly supported White's decision and stated a need for community dialogue.

Yet, the council has not made a real effort to discuss the issue, de Prose said. She wanted the public to be more involved with the council's response to White's decision and thought there was a lack of closure in the matter.

"I don't think this is really being discussed on a community level," she said. "I want to know why this murder occurred and why we are going no where with it. I don't think we have any sense of conclusion."

De Prose said she has no solution.

Grant to combat alcohol abuse at UI

Tracy Potocki
 The Daily Iowan

Binge drinkers at the UI have caught national attention, and as a result, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation has granted $60,000 to fight alcohol abuse.

The one-year development grant calls for the hiring of a project coordinator and a UI staff evaluator working in combination with the Harvard School of Public Health in their evaluation process, and the appointment of a task force. The money will be used primarily for research of various city policies and will begin developing a platform for the planning and implementation of a $770,000 grant that will follow, UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones said.

The additional funds and staff will attempt to curb underage and binge drinking. A national survey conducted by a Harvard University professor last year reported that 60 percent of the UI campus binge drinks.

Mary Khowassah, director of Student Health Service, said she was not surprised by these statistics.

"The UI participated in the study last year and was determined, not surprising to us, to be a campus that does have a problem with binge drinking," she said.

The grant will also fund a community-based task force made up of Jones and members of the city council, the chamber of commerce, the Iowa City business community and Student Health.

Binge drinking, as defined by the study, refers to the activity of consuming five or more beers in one sitting one or more times during a two-week period for men and four or more beers during the same time period for women.

Binge drinking is prominent on the UI campus because of its long-established tradition and the Midwest location, said Pat Ketcham.

DEBATE

Gore, Kemp to focus on Clinton, Dole

John King
 Associated Press

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. — When asked about the possibility of running for president in four years, Al Gore hastens to end the line of inquiry. Jack Kemp shakes his head and wags an admonishing finger.

As they prepare for tonight's debate, the candidates for vice president are trying to keep the focus on Bill Clinton and Bob Dole. "It is not Al Gore vs. Jack Kemp," the GOP vice presidential nominee said Tuesday.

In pre-debate interviews with the AP, Gore and Kemp predicted their 90-minute, prime-time debate would closely follow the themes of Sunday's encounter between Clinton and Dole. That exchange focused on tax policy and the state of the economy; education, welfare and other social policies; and the United States' role abroad at the close of the 20th century.

Gore, for example, said he was determined to reinforce Clinton's argument the GOP ticket's $548 billion tax-cut plan would require devastating cuts in Medicare and education spending. "The numbers do not add up," Gore said.

Students feel cheated out of classes on Islam

Fairouz Abu-Ghazaleh
 The Daily Iowan

Although the UI offers many classes in a variety of different religions and languages, it falls short in offering classes on the fastest-growing religion in the world, Islam, and the sixth most widely spoken language, Arabic.

Many UI students are upset about the shortage of classes relating to the Islamic religion, the Arabic language and Mideast politics and history.

"People want to take these classes," UI junior Zebun Noormohamed said. "There is a lot of demand for them."

There are about 10,000 to 15,000 Muslims in Iowa. Muslim immigrants from Lebanon built the first mosque, The Mother Mosque, in 1933, making Iowa the first state in the union to have a Muslim place of worship, Albert Aossy, a Muslim who lives in Cedar Rapids, said.

"Muslims have been in the state of Iowa since 1890," Noormohamed said. "There is a huge community of Muslims (who practice Islam) in Iowa, yet there is a total lack of presentation of Islam at the UI."

Professor Robert Baird, director of the UI School of Religion, said the UI should offer more classes on Islam. He said the school tries to offer as many classes as often as it can, but it's impossible on a regular basis.

"The shortage of classes in Islam is not due to lack of efforts on the school's part," Baird said. "The school laments the fact that there is a shortage of classes, but we have used all the means we possibly can to offer more."

Baird said although it would love to have one, the UI School of Religion doesn't have a full-time professor teaching Islam. The school has tried for many years to

UI ignores growing trend in Arabic-language courses

Renee Bovy
 The Daily Iowan

Chinese and Arabic are the fastest-growing foreign languages on college campuses in the United States, but the UI goes against the trend by not offering any Arabic-language courses.

UI student and religion major Brian Clark said the UI's not offering Arabic language courses is a slight to that area of the world and the 1 billion people who are related to the language.

Maya Angelou autobiography caged from school's required reading list

MOULTON, Ala. (AP) — High-school students in Lawrence County can read Maya Angelou's revealing autobiography, but they won't have to.

Angelou

The county school board voted 3-2 Monday to keep "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings" on the required reading list for advanced placement classes. Students have the option of picking another book.

Superintendent Patrick Graham tried to keep the book off the list after several parents complained, contending sexually explicit material in the book made it unfit for high-school students.

The book includes a section where Angelou describes being raped as a child.

Whoopi Goldberg may play male slave in ancient Rome

NEW YORK (AP) — Whoopi Goldberg has played crooks, cops, psychics and space aliens — but can she play Pseudolus, a male slave in ancient Rome?

That's the funny thing happening in speculation about who'll succeed star Nathan Lane in Broadway's hit revival of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum."

The New York Post reported Tuesday the actress is under consideration to succeed Lane, whose contract with the show expires in February.

He plays Pseudolus, a slave who wins his freedom in a series of farcical misadventures.

The role was created on Broadway by Zero Mostel.

"We'll have a casting announcement in the next few days," Chris Boneau, the press representative for "Forum" said Monday, but declined to comment on possible replacements for Lane.

Other names floated by the Post were Eddie Murphy, Robin Williams and Jason Alexander, better known as George Costanza on NBC's "Seinfeld."

Robert De Niro strives to maintain Harlem staple

NEW YORK (AP) — Harlem's second renaissance is getting a helping hand from Hollywood.

De Niro

Robert De Niro's planned $3 million renovation of Minton's Playhouse got a $300,000 boost Monday in the form of low-interest loans from city officials.

De Niro wants to re-open the restaurant and jazz club that was once a hub of Harlem's music scene, where such greats as Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie and Thelonius Monk played in the 1930s and '40s.

Charles Gargano, Empire State Development commissioner, said the renovation of the 200-seat club would create 120 jobs and preserve an invaluable piece of Harlem history. It should open in about a year.

British, U.S. economists given Nobels

Sally Jacobsen
Associated Press

NEW YORK — An American economist with unorthodox ideas — among them that "it's insane to try to balance the budget" — shared the Nobel economics prize with a British professor Tuesday.

William Vickrey, professor emeritus at Columbia University, and James Mirrlees of Cambridge University in England were cited for explaining how governments as well as consumers use incomplete data to make decisions.

Vickrey and Mirrlees will split the $1.12 million prize for innovative studies on "asymmetric information."

The theory, used to explain human behavior, refers to the way in which everyone — from governments and giant corporations to small businesses and consumers — makes decisions based on varying kinds and amounts of data.

Traditional economic theory held all sides had the same information but different preferences, which influenced decision-making. "Asymmetric information" means one side knows something another side does not.

A person seeking medical coverage may have health problems, but the insurer won't know it. A buyer won't know as much about a used car as the seller. And government doesn't know the earnings abilities of taxpayers.

Although Vickrey and Mirrlees conducted separate studies decades apart, the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences in Stockholm, Sweden, said their work led to a better understanding of economic activity, including tax programs, auctions, insurance and credit markets. "It's very gratifying ... very warming," said Vickrey, 82, a naturalized American citizen and native of Vancouver, British Columbia.

"I was amazed," said Mirrlees, 60, a native of Scotland. He told reporters at Cambridge he was skeptical when he got the call from the academy. "I wanted to make sure I wasn't being teased," he said.

Vickrey

The annual prize is the third of the six Nobels to be awarded this year. The Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science is awarded by the Swedish Central Bank in honor of inventor Alfred Nobel.

Vickrey told reporters he intends to use the windfall to "make the most of the opportunity to keep spreading some of my heretical ideas."

He has gone against popular wisdom by advocating the government take on more, not less, debt. "The insane pursuit of the holy grail of a balanced budget in the end is going to drive the economy into a depression," he said.

A bigger national debt, he said, will help those saving for retirement.

"The great increase in longevity has produced a surge in the desire to accumulate assets for retirement," he said. "It has outpaced the ability of the private sector to produce assets, so we need a larger government debt. ... It's insane to try to balance the budget." For four decades, he has tried in vain to persuade New York transit officials to charge subway users based on the time of day and distance of their trips, to minimize congestion and set more equitable fares.

Vickrey's research on auctions, including sales of Treasury Department bonds, showed how they can be designed for economic efficiency. In the late 1940s, he drew up a model showing how income taxes could balance efficiency and equity.

A quarter of a century later, Mirrlees revived interest in the model when he studied how high to set income taxes without discouraging workers and investors or fostering tax evasion.

On Monday, the Nobel medicine prize went to Peter Doherty, an Australian working at the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., and Rolf Zinkernagel, head of the Institute of Experimental Immunology in Zurich, Switzerland.

Polish poet Wislawa Szymborska won the literature prize last Thursday.

Separate prizes for chemistry and physics will be announced today. The Nobel Peace prize-winner will be announced Friday in Oslo, Norway.

All the prizes will be awarded Dec. 10.

SEQUEL OF THE CENTURY

Potential juror dismissed after saying Nicole Brown Simpson 'deserved it'

Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — The jury candidate wasn't too impressed with Nicole Brown Simpson. But murder?

"She was a flirt. She deserved it," the man wrote on his questionnaire in the wrongful death trial against O.J. Simpson.

Pressed by an attorney Tuesday on what "it" was, the candidate gave a variety of responses, settling on the suggestion Brown Simpson deserved some sort of response from her former husband when she had sex with another man.

"If anybody comes home and sees his wife doing what she was doing, he would be angry and she would be yelled at," the juror prospect told plaintiff lawyer Daniel Petrocelli.

As for Brown Simpson's oft-broadcast 911 call for police help, the juror candidate said, "I don't think she was in great distress."

The prospect, who was dismissed by the judge, was one of the rare candidates to criticize one of the victims in the June 12, 1994, murders of Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

When such criticism does come, it is directed at Brown Simpson, with comments about her alleged wild lifestyle and propensity to push Simpson's emotional buttons. One prospect said he felt that former police detective Mark Fuhrman may even have been having an affair with Brown Simpson.

Goldman has yet to be criticized at all, although one prospect had heard that Goldman may have been the intended target.

The comments Tuesday about Brown Simpson came as jury selection crept into a fourth week, with just three more candidates getting approval by the end of the morning session and five more dismissed after questioning. The pool stood at 91; the judge is trying to get about 100 before beginning more detailed questioning of the candidates.

One person who had earlier been accepted as a potential juror — a black woman who indicated Simpson was "probably not guilty" — was dismissed Tuesday on a hardship request after saying she needed to find work.

The juror candidate who criticized Brown Simpson made reference to the episode in which Simpson, looking through his former wife's window, saw her having sex with another man on the couch.

Simpson later confronted his former wife, crashing through her back door and screaming obscenities. Much of this was recorded when Brown Simpson called police.

APPENDIX REMOVED

Doctors find no signs of tumor in pope

Frances D'Emilio
Associated Press

ROME — Surgeons who removed Pope John Paul II's troublesome appendix sidestepped questions Tuesday about hand tremors and other health problems but predicted the 76-year-old pontiff would be "sitting in an armchair tomorrow."

The doctors did say they saw no signs a benign colon tumor removed in 1992 had returned. The pope's vital signs held up well during surgery at Gemelli Polyclinic, and he came through it successfully, they said.

John Paul quickly regained consciousness after general anesthesia, greeting and thanking everyone.

"He should be sitting in an armchair tomorrow," said Dr. Corrado Manni, chief anesthesiologist for the 50-minute surgery.

"The appendix that was the cause of the pope's ills doesn't exist anymore," said Manni.

The appendectomy aimed to cure what the Vatican said were recurring bouts of inflammation and fever that caused John Paul to cancel some public engagements this year. Frequently, the pope's energy flags and he walks with difficulty.

That image of the leader of the world's 950 million Roman Catholics generated concern a bowel tumor, removed in 1992 and described as benign, had returned.

"This is the moment to demythologize these fantasies," said the chief surgeon, Dr. Francesco Crucitti. "I exclude it categorically. There is no secret."

But even as doctors called the appendectomy successful, they wouldn't discuss other aspects of the pope's health.

Journalists shouted out questions on whether a marked tremor in the pontiff's left hand is a sign of Parkinson's disease — a neurological disorder marked by tremors and a shuffling gait — and what the battery of medical tests showed.

On Tuesday, surgeons first had to remove adhesions, or scar tissue, from the previous operations before tackling the appendix.

Crucitti said the accumulated scar tissue helped keep the inflammation from spreading throughout the abdomen.

As a precaution, doctors decided to treat John Paul with antibiotics to help avoid an infection like the one that put him back in the hospital in 1981 weeks after his emergency surgery.

"After this operation he'll surely be better, but it's not like he's going to turn young again," said Colagrande.

Crucitti said the pope might be discharged "even earlier" than a week, but said there was no rush.

"Let's not forget we have a 76-year-old man here," said Crucitti. "If the pope would rest a little more it would be a good thing."

Fair links UI with technology

Matt Snyder
The Daily Iowan

New connections were formed Tuesday at this year's technology fair, as UI students, staff, faculty and technology companies networked in a high-tech environment.

Marilyn Drury, manager of the Personal Computing Support Center at Information Technology Services (ITS), said the technology fair was aimed at connecting ITS and departments at the UI.

"What we really tried to target this year was to get more departmental involvement in the fair," Drury said.

The fair showcased 48 booths, up from 40 last year.

Drury said the fair was a great opportunity for UI departments to show off their projects to others on campus. She said about half of the booths represented various campus projects, which range from the Virtual Hospital, an on-line project by the UI Hospitals and Clinics widely known as an outstanding medical resource, to the Campus Communications Unity Project, an initiative to network the UI campus with high-speed, fiber-optic cables.

ITS and UI departments at the fair were greeted by commercial giants of the computer industry. Ed Cranston, the higher education account executive for Apple Computers who heads Apple's marketing and projects at the UI, said he enjoys working with the UI because so much is going on.

"It's really exciting because at the university they use the full gamut of technologies," Cranston said. "We're not afraid of our technology. We like to show the solutions that we have. It's more than just coming in there to sell. We get involved."

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

Clancy Roberts, a quality engineer for Gateway 2000, explains the newest technology Gateway has to offer to UI sophomore Dayna Alper at the technology fair Tuesday.

Cranston said technology is creating connections among UI faculty, staff and students.

"Because there is so much technology used on campus, individuals doing projects don't feel like they are in some kind of isolation," Cranston said. "There is some kind of synergy going on."

Cranston attributes Apple's pre-dominance at the UI to the compatibility of their Macintosh platform line. The Macintosh uses a wide array of software and can even operate competitor Microsoft Windows '95 operating system with the appropriate tools.

"I think really what's happening is that so many technologies are coming together," he said. "It's a coordination of efforts. It makes for better use of technologies."

Steven Strait, media coordinator for intermedia studios in the UI School of Art and Art History, said technology has paved the way for new art forms. Strait works with computers for a variety of art projects, including a "non-linear" form of video production.

"It's a platform you could use for almost any traditional art," Strait said. "We find a tool, and if it's applicable, we use it."

Overall, Drury called the technology fair a success. She said the connection and communication among UI departments and projects will be very beneficial for the future.

"I think that will be the tone we'll be stressing in the fair next year," Drury said.

Free screening to be offered to aid in depression diagnosis

Fairouz Abu-Ghazaleh
The Daily Iowan

The UI College of Medicine, Mercy Hospital and Student Health Service will provide screening and information for National Depression Screening Day on Thursday at various locations in the Union, Mercy Hospital and Old Capitol Mall.

"Depression is a mental illness that affects a person's mood and physical functions," said Dr. Nora Froberg, chief resident in psychiatry at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

More than 17 million Americans are affected by depression each year, Froberg said, and women bigger role than the rest — genetics can play a role — and for others social issues — like the breakup of a relationship — can play the biggest factor."

Symptoms of depression include loss of interest, fatigue, feelings of worthlessness and hopelessness, inability to concentrate, noticeable change of appetite and change in sleeping patterns, such as inability to sleep, early-morning awakening or sleeping too much. Other, more serious symptoms include recurring thoughts of death or suicide.

Natvig said about 700 students went to the UI Student Health Service psychiatry clinic last year and about half were diagnosed with depression.

However, he said many students and non-students don't seek help because of the stigma attached to mental illness.

"Although more people who suffer from depression symptoms are more likely to seek help now than five years ago because of the stigma attached to mental illness, it is still a problem that keeps people who need to seek help from doing something about it," Natvig said.

Treating depression is often very effective, Froberg said.

"About 80 percent of people will improve with treatment and get back to their original condition," she said.

Froberg said there are four kinds of treatment: medication, psychotherapy, a combination of medication and psychotherapy and electro-convulsive treatment, where patients are treated with brief, electro-convulsive stimulants while under anesthesia.

"Depression can go on for years if it is not treated," Natvig said. "If a person has been through one

"If a person has been through one episode of depression, there is a 50 percent chance it will happen a second time. If a person has been through three episodes of depression, there is a 90 percent chance it will happen a fourth time."

National Depression Screening Day

Information and screening will be offered Thursday at Old Capitol Mall, Mercy Hospital and on the ground floor of the Union.

Symptoms of Depression

- Persistent sad, anxious or "empty" mood
- Feelings of hopelessness, pessimism
- Feelings of guilt, worthlessness, helplessness
- Loss of interest or pleasure in hobbies and activities you once enjoyed, including sex
- Insomnia, early-morning awakening or oversleeping
- Appetite and/or weight loss or overeating and weight gain
- Decreased energy, fatigue, being "slowed down"
- Thoughts of death or suicide, suicide attempts
- Restlessness, irritability
- Difficulty concentrating, remembering and making decisions
- Persistent physical symptoms that do not respond to treatment, such as headaches, digestive disorders and chronic pain episode of depression, there is a 50 percent chance it will happen a second time. If a person has been through three episodes of depression, there is a 90 percent chance it will happen a fourth time."

Untreated depression can lead to many dangerous outcomes, such as suicide attempts, which is the third highest factor leading to death among people age 15-24.

National Depression Screening Day is a program that offers information about depression as well as a private screening that will help people identify possible symptoms.

UI students and the public are invited to attend a screening at any of the locations. No appointments are needed.

LATINO HERITAGE MONTH

Lack of Latino administrators causes UI's sense of diversity to be questioned

Will Valet
The Daily Iowan

UI Latino students want to see their faces reflected back at them in classes and offices around campus, but the lack of Latino staff often prohibits that from happening, Maria Flores-Mills, community outreach coordinator for Opportunity at Iowa, said.

Flores-Mills said when she was a student in the UI College of Law, she and other Latino students were concerned about the low number of Latino administrators.

"It started us questioning the (UI's) commitment to diversity," she said. "If you can't see your own faces reflected back at you when you're a student in a certain department, that's a serious lack."

The lack of Latino administrators at the UI is a problem that can only be solved by active recruitment efforts, former UI assistant provost Rusty Barcelo, said. During her 27 years at the UI, much of it as an administrator, Barcelo said the UI's effort to recruit Latino administrators lacked aggression.

"I think there's the myth that there aren't Latinos in Iowa," she said. "What needs to be done to recruit Latinos is to describe the Latino population in Iowa to show that there is indeed a Latino community, especially at the UI."

According to figures from the UI's Affirmative Action Office, of the 4,001 faculty, staff and top administrative positions at the UI, only 103 — less than 3 percent — are Latino.

Esther Materon-Arum, coordinator for academic support programs at the UI's Special Support Services, said Latino administrators add much-needed diversity to the UI.

"The beauty of this country is its diversity," she said. "Iowa is unfortunate to be basically homogeneous. This university has a very white student body, and they need to be exposed to diversity."

Materon-Arum said the UI is taking steps to improve the number of Latino administrators.

"We have a very strong administration that has brought a great deal of diversity to the campus," she said. "We've provided a lot of color here at the UI."

Many Latino administrators said being Latino is an asset, not a liability. Barcelo said her ethnic viewpoint helped her job.

"I had the viewpoint of being a Latino, which allowed me more skill of relating to the problems of Latinos (at the UI)," she said. "I'd also like to think I was a good administrator when I was there, regardless of my ethnicity."

Materon-Arum said although diversity is important, job ability should ultimately be the most important issue in administrative hiring.

"There is a commitment in the (UI) to diversity, and I want to see that continue," she said, "but I also want to see good, competent folks here. I hate quotas."

Tom Arnold, the Middle East and other random thoughts

A few random thoughts, apologies and observations ...

• First a clarification. Homecoming parade grand marshal and Iowa native Tom Arnold was unjustly steamrolled by the DI earlier this week when it insinuated he was using illegal drugs. In fact, Arnold, a Peabody Award winner for his writing, has been clean for seven years, a fact he is extremely proud of. He now speaks to students in all grades about the dangers of substance abuse. The DI — and myself specifically — acted irresponsibly by fumbling the research and not double-checking facts. Our sincere apologies to Arnold, his family and the hundreds of children who have heard him speak.

• The situation in Israel is so disheartening. When the extremist group Eyal assassinated former Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, it tripped up the Middle East peace process in two ways.

The first is obvious: Eyal killed one of the two leading figures in the movement.

Second, the person who replaced Rabin, Benjamin Netanyahu, is beginning to reveal a horridly dangerous trait: Netanyahu is trying to lead Israel from a religious point of view rather than an Israeli one.

What Rabin and PLO leader Yasser Arafat accomplished shortly before Rabin's assassination is nothing short of inspiring. What Netanyahu, a person who lives in the past and refuses to lead with a global perspective, will do to Israel and the Middle East is frightening.

• How 'bout Sunday's presidential debate? I formed just one new opinion. I'm positive Bob Dole was that kid in the fourth grade who wrote down the names of students who talked when the teacher left the room.

• OK, I confess, I'm the elusive masturbator in the UI's Main Library. I just can't control myself in the archives section. It's just so ... so ... erotic. Those velvet ropes, the sense of privacy... WOW! I'd better stop before I get to periodicals.

But seriously, whoever's going around feeling happy at the library is one sick slice of pie. I think Shakespeare is pretty religious myself, but it doesn't mean I wanna get off on "King Lear." So much for that theory of meeting nice people at the library.

I suppose there's always the Laundromat, but then there are the dryers that go around and around and ... oh, God, I'm getting excited again.

• The St. Louis Cardinals begin step two of their road to the World Series tonight. There's no way the Cards can lose, especially since they're playing a scrub like Atlanta. Tonight's game, St. Louis 5, Atlanta 3.

• The vice presidential debate is also tonight. It's Al Gore vs. Jack Kemp. Thank you.

• You know, nothing says love like a rose from QuikTrip, especially after a quiet Saturday night at One Eyed Jake's and a two-pound burrito.

• I got a memo in the mail the other day from the UI. It read, "Dear Dave, there's gonna be construction on this campus for the rest of your life. We're going to make walking around as inconvenient as possible, especially during the winter months. Our next project is to dig a hole in center court at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. There's no real reason, we just thought it'd be funny."

• I hate the Macarena. Everyone I talk to hates the Macarena. MTV and ESPN hate the Macarena. SO WHY THE HELL IS EVERY BAR IN TOWN STILL PLAYING IT?!

I mean, the dance makes tying your shoes look like orthoscopic surgery. My dad did the Macarena at a wedding and still couldn't keep the beat, which is a sad reflection on him, but we can't blame the baby boomers for a lack of rhythm; they had to grow up with CCR and Jefferson Airplane.

Quotable "How many of you guys (the media) ever had a jock strap on playing Big Ten football and how many games did you win? It's kind of like the people sitting up in the stands, all the booing and so forth. How many times have they been out on the field getting knocked around?"

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry, on the harassment the Hawkeyes get from the media and the fans

Football is a 'full-time job'

Playing football at a Big Ten university isn't as easy — both academically and socially — as many people might think.

Any Hawkeye football fan can look on the front page of the sports section and see the highlights of Saturday's football game at Kinnick Stadium. However, one aspect of the game few fans see is the time and preparation that goes on during the season and in the off season.

According to UI junior Mike Burger, who plays fullback for the Hawkeyes, "Playing football is a full-time job." The NCAA allows only 20 hours of practice time a week, according to Bret Bielema, a former player and now assistant coach for the Hawkeyes. While 20 hours may not sound like a full-time job, that doesn't include all the extra time the players spend weight training and watching game films. Combined with practice, these players put in 30-35 hours a week preparing for a game.

Many people think these players get a break academically when in fact the opposite is true. The Big Ten and the UI have academic standards all athletes must meet to be eligible to practice. The UI's minimum GPA requirements and number of semester hours that must be earned each year exceed Big Ten regulations. They must meet the same academic standards the UI requires of all students. One difference is football players are required to average 28 hours each year, while a regular full-time UI student needs to take only 24 hours per year for full-time status.

Many UI students feel the pressures of juggling academics and a social life. The football players at the UI have other pressures to deal with on top of those of the average UI student. The football program itself doesn't put pressure on players; it's the outside forces that cause pressure, according to Bielema. "You are like a fish in a fish-bowl," Bielema said. "You are constantly being watched and monitored all the time." The media and the expectations people have of these players put pressure on them. Sometimes people forget they aren't professionals.

An injury also can add to players' pressure and time commitment. Injured players continue to attend practice and also spend extra time doing rehabilitation exercises.

"You want to rehabilitate yourself as fast as you can because the more time you miss, the better someone else is getting," Burger said.

Bad press and stereotypes also go along with being a UI football player, according to Burger. For example, Burger and three of his teammates went to a Muscular Dystrophy camp and took pictures with the kids and signed autographs. "It's things like that, which a lot of times get looked over, but if an athlete gets in trouble for urinating in public, it's front-page news," Burger said.

Athletes have been faced with bad press and stereotypes for years, but with new academic standards and NCAA regulations, the era of the "dumb jock" is slowly fading. While there are always exceptions to every rule, many of the football players at the UI work hard academically as well as physically.

Letters to the Editor

Support peace in the Middle East

To the Editor:

During the past week, the prospects for peace in the Middle East have been questioned, and many people have again asked the question: In the midst of all the violence, are we really on the road to peace? The media have reported this violence has been due to Israel opening an exit to the underground tunnel system that runs parallel to the remaining wall of King Solomon's Temple.

Unfortunately, these terrible events have been on the heel of the Nov. 5 elections. Republican candidate Bob Dole has been quoted repeatedly about what he thinks of the situation, and at the same time, President Clinton has hosted a two-day peace summit in Washington.

Locally, individuals are expressing their opinions based on their limited knowledge about the topic. In fact, the other evening, someone came up to me and asked what I thought of the situation and continues to express their opinions on what should be done.

I am happy to see so many people interested and concerned for this region of the world, but at the same time I caution people to take their time and educate themselves to the issues before they solve a conflict that dates back for hundreds of years. Peace is not easy to achieve, and placing blame on any one party will not solve anything.

It is important that we, as Americans, support our ally, Israel, and the peace process by offering our support, not imposing our wishes on the process. Furthermore, it is imperative that we continue to support the economy of the region. Without financial support from the United States and the world, peace cannot and will not be achieved, and everyone will lose.

The peace process is not about a tunnel, but the idea that a peaceful, secure and stable Middle East is in the world's best interest. The peace process must continue and a real lasting peace must materialize.

Welfare Reform scapegoats those who can't vote

To the Editor:

The national Welfare Reform Act, Oct. 1, "Senate begins refusal of food stamps to legal immigrants", which denies some welfare benefits to LEGAL immigrants, is grossly unfair. Legal immigrants pay taxes just like U.S. citizens and they should be entitled to everything those taxes fund. Simple.

If the government doesn't want me to benefit from the social programs I help pay for (I certainly hope this will never be necessary), it has two options: don't collect my taxes or don't grant me permanent resident status. Currently, the government welcomes me by taking my money, but will refuse to help me if I should need it.

Some may suggest that legal immigrants become citizens to be eligible for benefits. They may not know that one has to be a legal resident for five years and then often wait another eight to nine months before being granted U.S. citizenship. During this nearly six year period, taxes are paid. And this assumes, of course, that there is a desire to become a U.S. citizen and renounce your country of origin — not necessarily always true.

This so-called Welfare Reform Act is one of several developments in recent years that characterize a growing level of intolerance in the United States toward minorities and disadvantaged or under-represented groups. Proposition 187, roll backs on affirmative action and the Defense of Marriage Act are examples of others.

Denying benefits to legal immigrants is an easy way to scapegoat a group without any political repercussions, since legal residents can't vote. This is too good an opportunity for some politicians to pass up, especially in an election year.

'Liberal' is not a dirty word

Many members of the Republican Party are trying to turn the word "liberal" into a four-letter word. They would like it to become so vile it would be censored from dictionaries that are within the reach of children and not to be uttered at formal dinner parties.

The idea comes from Arthur Finkelstein, Republicans' version of Dick Morris. Among his clients, his plan is known as "Finkel-think."

In St. Louis, GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole screamed "Liberal! Liberal! Liberal!" about President Clinton. Imagine a childish Clinton responding with "Conservative! Conservative! Conservative!"

Of course Clinton is a liberal. And of course Dole is a conservative. But, Finkelstein's idea is to pretend "liberal" means extremist.

The Republican Party is the original liberal party.

They like to remind us by calling themselves "The Party of Lincoln." Liberalism always looks so good in hindsight, whereas conservatism, in hindsight, often seems pathological. Lincoln's plan to free the slaves was radical at the time. But after many years passed, most people couldn't imagine going back to the old ways.

Other past liberal policies include civil rights, women's suffrage, voting rights for women and blacks, Medicare, Social Security, the nuclear test ban and food and drug safety laws. All of these ideas were strongly resisted by conservatives, but now they are political sacred cows. No politician would dare cut or dismantle them.

Free-market philosophy is also a liberal idea, and it always has been. On the worldwide political spectrum, liberalism fits in the exact center between left and right. The United States is the only country in the world where the "left" is actually to the right of the genuine political center.

But Finkelstein and his clients want you to believe somehow liberalism is the fringe element. They want you to forget the Republican Party has liberal members of its own. Gov. Christie Whitman of New Jersey is a classic liberal. George Bush was an old-school liberal who had very few genuinely conservative ideas. Gerald Ford and even Richard Nixon in some ways were liberals.

There are three wings of the Republican Party: There is the ever-shrinking liberal wing, represented by Colin Powell and Whitman; there is the moderate or patrician conservative wing, represented by Dole and William F. Buckley; and there is the conservative or right wing, represented by Jesse Helms and Pat Buchanan.

Liberal Republicans are concerned with free markets and low taxes. The right wing is concerned with morality.

Liberal Republicans want a small, non-intrusive government. Right-wing Republicans want an intrusive government that legislates behavior according to Biblical doctrine.

Theodore Lowi, professor of political science at Cornell University, writes, "I can understand why this faction (liberal Republicans) call themselves conservative or 'economic conservative.' Such a label glosses over and minimizes the severity of the contradiction between the traditional Republican Party and its right wing. It gives the appearance of consensus."

Finkelstein and his clients are playing subtle linguistic tricks. They're trying to redefine a word so they can use it as a weapon. But it looks as if their plan may backfire. According to the latest polls, Clinton is more than 20 points ahead of Dole. People who have only a vague understanding of the word "liberal" are going to think to themselves, "If Clinton is a liberal, then I must be a liberal, too, because I like him a lot better than Dole."

Dole and his "Finkel-think" strategy will remind middle-of-the-road voters that liberalism is a good thing. And since the Republican Party is pushing liberalism away from itself, they will have a harder time winning elections.

If a liberal Republican like Whitman were to get her party's nomination for president and she ran as a self-admitted liberal, she would win by a landslide. But she will never be able to get the nomination at the national level because the right wing would burn her alive at the stake. She would make a great Republican president, but she's too liberal for her party anymore.

The Republican Party is left with only two groups of mostly overlapping supporters. They still have their base support, which consists of voters who will support them even when they are wrong. And they have support from voters who are strictly conservative. They haven't left any room for the moderates. By rejecting all ideas that are liberal, there is no more room for open-mindedness, compromise or bipartisanship.

Finkelstein's plan merely draws everyone's attention to this. If the Republicans knew what was good for them, they would stop it.

Jerks

Recently, riding a bicycle outdoors, I saw a Harley-Davidson guy's cycles, parked near me.

Naturally, being these were rebel guys who do it who do not follow the rules could tell because of the same jeans, bandannas, sunglasses, tattoos and underwear worn on a lion other lone-wolf.

And, of course, their engines start, spend the equivalent of semesters just revving their engines, so ear-bleedingly loud, hamburger was my plate and skirt into the kitchen. Harley guys spend revving their engines driving anywhere, wonder why they have wheels on their bikes.

Perhaps you've encountered an assault and perhaps you've seen a self. Why do they do this? What possible reason have for causing a fight for those around them? As it happens, and it is an excellent example of jerks.

I'm not saying — some of my friends — engage in this behavior. I'm just saying who DO engage in it. I am not afraid even if they are and potentially afraid to say: Harley Guy, you want to DO something with me calling you a jerk. You want to experiment by tapping code sentences of flat tire iron? Then — if you have the see me PERSON of employment, Pennsylvania A.D.C.? Come on right into the lobby.

Jerks Dave Barry has known

Recently, when I was having a hamburger at an outdoor restaurant, two guys started up their Harley-Davidson motorcycles, parked maybe 25 feet away from me.

Naturally, being Harley guys, these were rebels — lone wolves, guys who do it Their Way, guys who do not follow the crowd. You could tell because they were wearing the same jeans, jackets, boots, bandannas, sunglasses, belt buckles, tattoos and (presumably) underwear worn by roughly 28 million other lone-wolf Harley guys.

And, of course, once they got their engines started, they had to spend the equivalent of two college semesters just sitting there, revving their engines, which were so ear-bleedingly loud I thought my hamburger was going to leap from my plate and skitter, terrified, back into the kitchen. I believe many Harley guys spend more time revving their engines than actually driving anywhere; I sometimes wonder why they even bother to have wheels on their motorcycles.

Perhaps you, too, have experienced an assault of Harley revving; and perhaps you have asked yourself: Why do these people DO this? What possible reason could they have for causing so much discomfort to those around them?

As it happens, there IS a reason, and it is an excellent one: They're jerks.

I'm not saying ALL Harley guys — some of my friends are Harley guys — engage in this obnoxious behavior. I'm just saying the ones who DO engage in it are jerks. And I am not afraid to tell them so, even if they are large and hairy and potentially violent. I am not afraid to say: "OK, Mr. Loud Harley Guy, you got a problem with me calling you a jerk? You want to DO something about it? You want to express your disagreement by tapping out lengthy Morse code sentences on my skull with a flat tire iron? Then why don't you — if you have the guts — come and see me PERSONALLY at my place of employment, located at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C.? Come on if you dare! Ride right into the lobby!"

Dave Barry

And let me also say, while I'm at it, I'm sick of you people who park in spaces reserved for the handicapped, even though you are not, personally, handicapped. You know who you are. Many of you even have those little rearview mirror handicapped signs, which you got from a friend or relative, or which you once needed because of some temporary medical condition that has long since cleared up.

What we need in this country — and I would pay extra income tax for this — is an elite corps of Handicapped Parker On-Site Medical Examination SWAT Teams.

One of my hobbies is to watch when cars pull into handicapped parking spots and see who gets out. Very often, in my experience, these people appear to be totally unhandicapped: no wheelchair, no crutches, not even a trace of a limp. I realize some of these people have problems, such as heart conditions, that are not visible. But some of them, to judge by the sprightliness of their walks, are off to compete in the decathlon. Their only handicap is: they're jerks.

What we need in this country — and I would pay extra income tax for this — is an elite corps of Handicapped Parker On-Site Medical Examination SWAT Teams. These teams would prowl the streets, wearing rubber gloves and armed with X-ray machines, CT scanners, scalpels, drills, saws and harpoon-sized hypodermic needles.

When a team spotted a handicapped-zone parker who could not immediately prove he or she was handicapped, that person would immediately undergo a severely thorough on-the-street physical examination conducted by burly personnel who have attended medical school for a maximum of four hours including lunch ("Hey, Norm! Which ones are the kidneys again?"). These examinations would involve full frontal nudity and the removal of enough blood, organ and tissue samples to form a complete new human; also, if the SWAT team found a Harley guy revving his engine in a handicapped zone BEFORE the physical examination, it would employ the 250-foot intestinal probe nicknamed "Big Bertha." The idea would be if you weren't qualified to park in a handicapped zone BEFORE the physical examination, you definitely would be AFTER.

And let's talk about you people who always send your food back at restaurants. (I KNOW this has nothing to do with handicapped parking; i can't stop myself.) I mean, sure, if the food is truly BAD, if it has RODENTS running around on it, OK, send it back; but what about you people who ALWAYS send your food back, thereby turning EVERY SINGLE MEAL into an exercise in consumer whining? I'm sorry! You're jerks! Especially if, when the bill comes, you also ALWAYS insist — even if everybody ordered basically the same thing — on figuring the EXACT share (Well, I had the Diet Sprite, which is 10 cents less than the iced tea ...); and then you decide a 5 percent tip is adequate, thereby forcing your friends, who are embarrassed, to put in more money.

Listen carefully to what I am about to tell you. Put your ear right down to the page: YOUR FRIENDS HATE IT WHEN YOU STIFF THE WAITER. IF THE SERVICE IS OK, YOU SHOULD TIP 15 PERCENT. IF YOU DON'T WANT TO TIP, THEN DON'T EAT AT RESTAURANTS.

Also, if, when you talk to people, they keep backing away from you, it's because you're TOO CLOSE, all right? SO DON'T KEEP ADVANCING ON THEM LIKE A HUMAN GLACIER.

Thank you, and I apologize for using so many capital letters. I can be a real jerk about that.

Studies link smoking to most-common cause of blindness

Brenda Coleman
Associated Press

CHICAGO — New research gives smokers one more reason to quit: Pack-a-day-or-more puffers double their likelihood of developing the most-common cause of blindness among the elderly.

Age-related macular degeneration, a usually untreatable affliction, impairs the vision of an estimated 1.7 million Americans and causes more new cases of blindness than any other ailment among people age 65 or older, according to the government.

Smoking already is blamed for promoting cataracts, another major cause of vision loss.

Cataracts threaten the vision of far more people than macular degeneration but cause much less blindness because most cataract sufferers keep their sight with treatment.

The more people smoke and the longer they smoke, the higher their risk of developing macular degeneration, according to two new studies in today's issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

"It is another reason to either not smoke, quit smoking or reduce your amount of smoking," said Dr. Johanna Seddon of the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary and Harvard Medical School.

Years after quitting, former smokers still faced up to double the risk of getting the condition, the new research found.

"Since the risks decrease very slowly — if at all — over time, it's even perhaps of greater importance not to start in the first place," said Dr. William Christen of Harvard-affiliated Brigham and Women's Hospital.

In advanced macular degeneration, which affects one of every 14 people age 75 or older, the center of the visual field deteriorates, causing a roughly circular area of blindness that grows larger gradually.

The deterioration is caused by damage to the macula, the center of the retina, a light-sensitive membrane on the inside back of the eyeball.

The damage occurs when an insulating layer between the retina and blood vessels that nourish it breaks down, resulting in fluid leaks and scarring.

Smoking may speed the process by increasing the number of damaging chemical compounds or reducing the number of protective nutrients delivered by the bloodstream to the eye, researchers speculate.

Another theory is smoking reduces blood and oxygen.

Seddon led researchers who looked for macular degeneration among 31,843 initially healthy women during a 12-year period beginning in 1980 in the ongoing Nurses' Health Study.

In 215 cases that developed, the disease caused vision loss; almost one-third of those cases were attributable to smoking, researchers said.

Smokers of a pack of cigarettes or more a day were 2.4 times as likely to develop macular degeneration as women who had never smoked.

Risk was calculated after controlling for differences in other traits that can be important, such as age, diet and estrogen use.

Christen led a team that looked for macular degeneration among 21,157 initially healthy men during an average 12-year period beginning in 1982 in the ongoing Physicians' Health Study.

Among the men, macular degeneration developed in 268 cases causing vision loss.

Christen's team didn't calculate how many cases were attributable to smoking, but he said it would be comparable to the proportion among women.

Pack-or-more-a-day smokers were 2.5 times as likely to get the ailment as those who never smoked, researchers said.

They also controlled for differences in other traits.

Dr. Ronald Klein of the University of Wisconsin Medical School at Madison said the new studies back up previous work on much smaller groups of subjects that have suggested a link between smoking and macular degeneration.

Church burner sentenced

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A 13-year-old girl who admitted to burning down a sanctuary at a historically black church was sentenced Tuesday to a year's probation, 200 hours of community service and mental-health treatment.

"I'm sorry," the teen-ager told the Rev. Larry Hill, pastor of Matthews Murkland Presbyterian Church. Then, she and the pastor hugged.

Authorities said the June 6 blaze was not racially motivated, but was the isolated act of a troubled teen-ager.

Police said the girl appeared to be making a statement against Christianity, not blacks, when she set the fire.

Tropical Storm Josephine saturates East Coast

Bill Kaczor
Associated Press

STEINHATCHEE, Fla. — Tropical Storm Josephine never quite made it to hurricane status, but still managed to leave behind a waterlogged and windswept mess as it raced up the East Coast Tuesday.

Gale warnings were posted as far north as New England as the storm — large and fast-moving but not as powerful as some had forecast — brought heavy rain and gusty winds across a wide area.

Only one fatality was reported. A 72-year-old woman in southwest Georgia was killed Tuesday morning when her car struck a tree downed by the storm.

The storm forced postponement of Tuesday night's Yankees-Baltimore Orioles baseball playoff opener in New York. The storm center was expected to reach southeastern New England by Tuesday night.

The storm's broad center made landfall at the peak of high tide, just after midnight Monday, bringing flooding and a rash of tornadoes to Florida. Downgraded from a tropical storm as it moved over land, Josephine then crossed the northern part of the state and into Georgia. But there were no reports of injuries.

The storm never did reach hurricane strength of 74 mph as had been feared, hovering just underneath that level as it approached land. And officials looking at the damage Tuesday morning said it could have been worse.

"We look like we're pretty lucky," said Oscar Garner, emergency management director in Taylor County, where the storm came ashore. The county is in the state's sparsely populated Big Bend area, where the peninsula and the Panhandle meet roughly at right angles.

At daylight, some motels and homes in the Steinhatchee area had water in them from a storm surge 5-7 feet higher than normal, but early checks revealed no wind damage. Still, electrical service was interrupted to an estimated 400,000 people in Florida.

Taking the fallout from Josephine in stride, Dana Boyington nonchalantly waded into the Steinhatchee River on the Gulf Coast and swam out to his cabin cruiser, which dislodged from a dock torn from its pilings.

"I guess it don't have to be too bad to get bad," he said. "Things like this happen around here."

Rainfall totals of more than 9 inches were reported in some areas already soggy from rainfall from an unrelated storm over the weekend. Nine tornadoes were reported across Florida, and more than 125 mobile homes were damaged around Jacksonville.

As the storm moved onward, flooding was reported Tuesday morning on downtown streets in Wilmington, N.C., still recovering from last month's Hurricane Fran. The city got at least 4 inches of rain. A tornado in Brunswick County damaged one home and the local Veterans of Foreign Wars post.

IRA claims to be behind latest N. Ireland bombing

Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland—The Irish Republican Army (IRA) claimed responsibility Tuesday for the double car-bomb attack on the British army's headquarters in Belfast, which wounded 31 and brought Northern Ireland back to the brink of conflict.

It was the outlawed group's first bomb attack in Northern Ireland since mid-1994. In February, it broke a 17-month cease-fire with a deadly bombing in London; attacks followed elsewhere in Britain and on a British army base in Germany.

A telephone caller using a verified codeword told RTE, the Irish national broadcaster in Dublin, the IRA committed Monday's strike inside Thiepval Barracks, heart of the 18,000-strong military presence in the British-ruled province.

British Prime Minister John Major said the claim showed the IRA had not changed. "It shows they still rely on terrorist violence and are indifferent to human life," he said.

The bombings were "certainly consistent with a terrorist organization that declared an end to a cease-fire which it had proclaimed in 1994," Northern Ireland Secretary Patrick Mayhew told reporters.

Whether Northern Ireland returns to tit-for-tat bloodshed now remains to be seen.

From Major on down, politicians appealed to the province's pro-British paramilitary groups to refrain from striking back. The groups, known as "loyalists" have observed a cease-fire for two years.

"We must not let (the IRA) succeed," Major said. "I appeal to all loyalists not to fall into this trap." Loyalists killed more than 800 Catholics during a 25-year period, a campaign they say pushed the IRA to stop its own offensive in September 1994.

A month later, the loyalist Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force, both rooted in militant Protestant areas, laid down their guns. Some members now feel obligated to return to eye-for-an-eye tactics.

"There's still a chance we can step back from this, but in realistic terms, it's a slim chance," said David Ervine, who leads an Ulster Volunteer Force-linked party in peace talks.

He urged the pro-British groups not to be provoked into action by the IRA. "The loyalists must not do what their enemy wants them to do," Ervine said. "Don't do it."

The latest strike, in which two explosives-laden vehicles were driven past unwitting guards into Northern Ireland's most heavily guarded military installation, left experts assuming it had to be the IRA.

"To get into the nerve center of the British army and leave behind not one but two massive bombs and get away with it is, by any standard, a massive breach of security. No ordinary Joe could have pulled this off," said Col. Mike Dewar, a former army veteran in Northern Ireland and an anti-terrorism expert.

Of the 21 soldiers and 10 civilian employees wounded, five soldiers and three civilians remained in Belfast hospitals Tuesday.

"Our general feeling was 'Here we go again,'" said Dr. Laurence Roche, one of the tired-eyed surgeons treating victims at west Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital. "All we can do is sit back and wait for what happens next."

The remains of the army medical center in Lisburn, Northern Ireland, are shown Tuesday morning following Monday's bomb blasts that injured 31 people.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS

Forum scheduled on women's issues

Carie Sadkowski
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Women's Priorities for Action will hold a public forum tonight to draft a document on women's issues.

The forum is a response to the Sept. 28 Interagency Task Force teleconference in which President Clinton told an audience of over 450 sites nationwide the United States is taking an active role in women's-rights issues. The teleconference celebrated the one-year anniversary of the U.N. International Conference on Women in Beijing.

During an Iowa panel discussion held in conjunction with the teleconference, some local women decided there were many relevant issues — such as welfare, immigration and older women's issues — the interagency group didn't express. Tonight, members of the Iowa City community are going to draft a written statement solidifying what they believe those additional issues are.

"We have our own agenda of what we want that will go to the Iowa state Legislature," Jael Silliman, visiting professor in the Department of Women's Studies, said. "We don't feel like our concerns are being heard and we can't be taken for granted."

Dorothy Paul, executive co-director for the Iowa division of the United Nations, and Silliman expect a good response at tonight's forum.

"We want to get women in Iowa involved in these issues, and the important thing is that we follow up with our actions," Paul said.

The forum will be held in Meeting Room A of the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., from 7-8:30 p.m. The issues document will be sent to the White House, the Iowa Legislature and the Interagency Task Force.

program director and coordinator of Health Iowa.

UI sophomore Jenny Sippel said while she thinks the UI's efforts are a good idea, she feels the definition of a binge drinker is a little extreme.

"It's good to teach individuals to act responsible for their drinking and they need to realize that their behavior affects those around them," she said, "but calling someone who has four or five beers in one sitting a binge drinker is a bit excessive."

UI freshman Dave Hellstern, who said he doesn't see binge drinking as a problem, agrees.

"I know a lot of guys that can put away more than five beers without it affecting them," he said.

The UI is not trying to tell students what to do, but simply trying to encourage responsibility, Steve Parrott, associate director for University Relations, said.

"When you are going to drink, do it in moderation and have some concern for how your behavior will affect others," he said.

Khowassah and Ketchum wrote a program proposal for addressing the drinking problem at the UI to the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. Based on the strength of that proposal, the UI was one of six universities chosen by the foundation to participate in the new national program titled "A Matter of Degree: Reducing High-Risk Drinking Among College Students."

"Over the past several weeks, the UI has been working with the city and the chamber of commerce to define areas of mutual concern," Jones said. "The program is a nationwide attempt to modify standards of behavior with emphasis on community participation and policies rather than on stopping drinking."

Iowa City Mayor Naomi Novick said the binge-drinking issue is definitely a community concern.

"In a city like Iowa City where the university is a major part of our population, we are dealing with a serious problem," Novick said.

The UI Student Government will also take part in curbing binge drinking by offering free movie night and sneak previews to previously unreleased Hollywood films. UI senior and UISG Vice President Rob Wagner said the UISG supports the UI's efforts.

"This grant is a vehicle for change and awareness," he said. "It provides the opportunity for partnership between the UI community and the Iowa City community."

Khowassah said binge and underage drinking is a nationwide problem, not only on college campuses but also among high-school students.

Drinking trends have indicated the average drinking age is getting lower and lower, causing kids to enter college with preconceived notions about drinking and behavior, she said.

"Through a partnership between the UI and the surrounding community, we are hoping to alter those behaviors so that students don't leave college with the same behaviors they came with or don't develop behaviors in college that will affect them for the rest of their lives," Khowassah said.

find one, but its attempts have been unsuccessful. The school also tried to receive permission from the College of Liberal Arts, but that attempt also failed.

"On the departmental level, we recognize that there is a problem and we would like to do something about it, but we don't have the resources," Baird said. "It's not at all a lack of interest; it's a lack of money."

A group of students who took Introduction to Islam at the UI this summer sent a letter to the editor to the DI on Sept. 10 asking the UI for more classes on Islam, Arabic and Mideast politics. The class was one example of the few classes the School of Religion sponsors from time to time.

"I thought the class was wonderful. It helped me get rid of a lot of the misconceptions we had about Islam and Muslim women and men," Brian Clark, one of the students who took the class, said. "I would love to take another class on Islam, but I can't because the UI doesn't offer that."

Clark sent Judith Aikin, dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, two e-mail messages asking why the UI doesn't offer more classes on Islam. However, he said the response he got wasn't very encouraging and it seemed like the College of Liberal Arts lacked interest in that area. Aikin didn't immediately respond to requests for comment.

Stephen Arum, director of the UI Office of International Education and Services, said he is aware of the shortage of classes on Islam, Arabic and Mideast studies and the UI should offer more classes, but there are several hurdles to overcome.

"The UI has had very little in this area because we had nothing to build on," he said. "In the '40s, '50s and '60s the UI didn't appoint any faculty in this particular field, and from nothing comes nothing."

He said it would cost the UI a lot of money to put a new program in place. It would make more sense, Arum said, to spend money on growing departments that already exist and are a strength to the UI than trying to establish new ones.

"We try to build strength in a variety of different studies, but we can't cover every area," Arum said.

LANGUAGE

Clark, who studies the Islamic religion, said for him to study the religion in an effective manner, he must be able to at least read the Arabic language.

"I am going to leave the UI and go to a school that does teach the Arabic language," Clark said.

James McCue, professor in the UI School of Religion, said Arabic is a language the UI should have started offering long ago. McCue said although the area where Arabic is spoken is vital to all industrialized nations because of its oil resources, the region has long been neglected by the UI curriculum.

UI junior Zebun Noormohamed is a Muslim, but she wants to learn the Arabic language because she is fascinated by it.

"Arabic is one of the oldest languages; I don't see UI's logic for not offering it. It is a classical language," Noormohamed said.

Nationwide, the Arabic language enrollment rose 28 percent between 1990 and 1995, according to a survey by the Modern Language Association of America. At the UI, however, enrollment is impossible, and students studying Islam feel they are denied a well-rounded education.

Noormohamed said she took the course Introduction to Islam, and there were many students in her class who expressed interest in learning the Arabic language.

"If the UI offered the language, I'm positive Americans would sign up," Noormohamed said.

She said many languages are closely related to Arabic, including Swahili, which is taught at the UI.

"It's a beautiful language, very deep, very romantic; I'm amazed at its beauty," Noormohamed said.

VP DEBATE

Kemp, for his part, said Dole had scored points in casting Clinton as a liberal hiding behind conservative election-year promises. Kemp promised to follow up by taking issue with a new Clinton campaign ad in which the president says he views his job as "taking care of the American people."

As they discussed their expectations for the debate and outlined their views of the vice presidency, the former House of Representatives colleagues voiced friendship and respect for each other and predicted their encounter would be a civil affair.

"You can disagree without being disagreeable," Gore said Monday afternoon during a break in his debate preparations in Sarasota, Fla., where former New York Rep. Tom Downey was the Democratic stand-in for Kemp.

Kemp was interviewed Tuesday morning before a practice session in Bal Harbour, Fla., where New Hampshire GOP Sen. Judd Gregg played the role of Gore.

"I'm having trouble getting my answers down to 30 seconds," Kemp said. "I can go 30 seconds without using a verb."

With Clinton holding a comfortable lead heading into the final weeks of the campaign, Kemp and Gore are questioned frequently about the possibility they could be competitors for the presidency in four years.

Both dismiss such talk as a distraction they would rather not deal with.

"In 2000, Bob is going to be running for re-election and I just hope he keeps me on the ticket," Kemp said.

Gore responded by telling the story of a dog holding a bone in his mouth while staring at his reflection in a pond. "He wants that other bone that the other dog has, so he opens his mouth to get that other bone and he loses both bones," Gore said.

"I am focused on 1996."

cuts. "Who is this guy? What does he know about it?"

"What does he know about benefits? What does he know about Medicare," Dole demanded at a misty early-morning rally.

One man in the crowd shouted to Dole as he shook hands, "Please get Bozo out of the White House."

Dole called back, "Bozo's on his way out!"

Dole spokesperson Nelson Warfield sought to play down the offhand remark as a "light moment along the rope line."

But it recalled the final weeks of President Bush's 1992 losing campaign when Bush referred to Clinton and Al Gore as "two bozos" who had less foreign policy expertise than a dog.

tion for what the council should do, but said she is dissatisfied with the current reaction of the council to White's decision.

"I don't know exactly what they should do," she said. "I hear that they are doing a lot and I would like to see them move more quickly. It has been 6-8 weeks."

Councilor Karen Kubby said she was unsure of further action that could be taken by the council because White's decision is final.

"I don't know what else we can do for a sense of closure," she said. "I need some guidance from the community to see what you need for a sense of closure."

The council has since begun to establish criteria for a Police Citizen's Review Board. Although de Prose is in favor of the PCRB, she doesn't know if a similar situation can be prevented.

Throgmorton praised Kubby for her involvement and sincerity surrounding the situation.

De Prose also said she respects

Kubby and Ernie Lehman because they visited the Shaw family to express their condolences.

"I do think there is a role that can be played and that is to assume a leadership role that has been ignored by all but one of you and a lesser degree by some of you," she said. "Most of all, (the role is) to let the Shaws know that they are not alone in this. For those of you who haven't (visited the Shaws), I surely hope you go and for those of you who never go, I hope you realize your mistake."

NFL

Falcons balk on getting rid of suspended George

ATLANTA (AP) — Suspended quarterback Jeff George remained a member of the Atlanta Falcons on Tuesday as the NFL trading deadline passed without him agreeing on a new contract with Seattle.

George and his agent, Leigh Steinberg, had been talking with the Seahawks about a reported six-year, $30 million contract. If the negotiations had been successful, the Falcons were going to trade George for Rick Mirer, Seattle's former starting quarterback.

"I'm a little disappointed on how it occurred," Seattle coach Dennis Erickson said.

CYCLING

America's top cyclist stricken with cancer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Cycling star Lance Armstrong had a cancerous testicle removed last week and has begun chemotherapy to combat the disease that already has spread to his stomach and lungs.

"I'm entering this battle in the best shape of my life," he said Tuesday. "I want to stay in shape. As soon as the wounds heal, I want to be back on the bike."

Physicians have given Armstrong a 65 percent to 85 percent chance for full recovery.

BASEBALL

Seattle's Rodriguez nabs postseason honor

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Mariners shortstop Alex Rodriguez was selected player of the year by The Sporting News, receiving 260 votes, or 67 percent, in the publication's poll of major league players.

Rodriguez, 21, hit .358 and was the third-youngest player to ever win the American League batting title. He had 36 homers and 123 RBI.

Seattle exercised its option on Paul Sorrento and signed the first baseman for next season. Sorrento, 30, hit .289 with 23 homers and 93 RBI.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Cyclones' Pratt surrenders on arrest warrant

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Police say Iowa State basketball player Kenny Pratt was charged with disorderly conduct after showing an officer during a dispute at a tavern.

Pratt surrendered to police last Friday after a warrant was issued on the serious misdemeanor charge. He was released on $175 bond.

Police said Pratt, who is academically ineligible for the first semester, was involved in a dispute at a bar in the Campustown area on Sept. 28.

According to police records, officers arrived at the Dean's List tavern at about 1 a.m. on a request to help remove an uncooperative customer.

Pratt is accused of pushing officer Geoff Huff when Huff and another officer who asked Pratt to leave.

Fry: Pollsters are complete idiots

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry has seen a lot of predictions in his 45 years of coaching. He just hasn't believed very many of them.

The Hawkeye coach — who after Iowa's 37-30 victory over Michigan State said that his team was not as good as preseason publications foretold it would be — belittled those very publications at his weekly press conference on Tuesday.

"Those people are complete idiots," he said. "They prove it every year."

Fry's Hawkeyes play at Indiana this Saturday. Kickoff is scheduled for 1 p.m.

The Iowa coach said he reads the magazines only to find out about other teams, who they are returning and so forth, but would never take their predictions at face value.

"How many of you guys ever had a jock strap on, playing Big Ten football, and how many games did you win? It's kind of like the people sitting up in the stands, all the booing and so forth. How many times have they been out on the field getting knocked around? Zippo!"

Hayden Fry, Iowa football coach

"That's just the silliest thing in the world for anyone to take the gospel of some writer in New York City — New York City — or someplace else, to write that garbage and you believe it," Fry said. "They don't even know us. They've never seen us play. They just put down numbers."

Fry also took time to lash out at members of the local media, namely Cedar Rapids Gazette reporter Jim Ecker, who printed that Fry does not return phone calls to the Gazette.

"What a bunch of garbage," Fry said. "What a cheap shot in the newspaper that I won't return the calls to the Cedar Rapids Gazette."

Ecker tried to explain himself to no avail. "Sir, I've tried for seven years ..."

"Seven years what? Itch? Horse. Don't give me that junk," Fry interrupted.

Fry said the media has no right to judge whether his team has lived up to expectations or not.

"We're doing the best we can," Fry said. "We guarantee that every week. Sometimes it works. Sometimes it doesn't, but at least we're giving the best effort we can. So, what right do you (the media) have to be critical and knock those kids? You don't. I'm telling you. You don't have that right."

Braves, Cardinals relaxed before opener

Ben Walker

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Listen to Greg Maddux or Dennis Eckersley or Ozzie Smith. They talk with ease, the kind that comes only with success in October.

No jitters here. No worries about making the World Series. Just a few jokes as the NL playoffs approach.

"Maddux and I argue about who gets the most called strikes that aren't strikes," Atlanta pitcher Tom Glavine said. "But in a way, we've earned that."

So they have, as have many of these Braves and St. Louis Cardinals going into Game 1 Wednesday night. All it takes is one look at the mound, in the bullpen, in the dugout to tell that this best-of-7 series features some of the best performers in baseball's history.

There's Glavine, MVP of last year's World Series, and Maddux, the four-time Cy Young Award winner. Ozzie, of course, is a future Hall of Fame shortstop.

There's Tony La Russa, trying to become just the sixth manager to win pennants in both leagues, and Eckersley, third on the career saves list with 353 — not including three straight in the first round of the playoffs.

All together, perhaps for the last time.

"Hey, I'm 42 years old. This might be it for me," Eckersley said. "This is great for the young guys, because they haven't won before. And it's great for the old guys, because you don't know if you'll ever get back."

For the Braves, this fall represents a chance to become the first

Weather wipes out Game 1

Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It all seems so familiar for the Yankees and Orioles: sitting around in the rain waiting for the start of a big series.

But at least they won't be arguing over whether to make up the game as part of a split doubleheader.

Game 1 of the AL championship series was postponed Tuesday by Tropical Storm Josephine and rescheduled for today, the first rain-out in the AL playoffs in 25 years.

"To me it's not really a big deal," said Andy Pettitte, New York's Game 1 starter. "I'll have to do something to occupy time."

Pettitte, scheduled to pitch against Scott Erickson in the opener, spent Monday night finding things to do, taking a little shopping trip with his wife.

Tuesday night's agenda? "Same as last night," the 24-year-old said. "Maybe a movie. Something like that."

Not exactly as exciting as pitching in front of 57,000 people and a national television audience.

While some of the Yankees were at the ballpark when the game was called off at 3:30 p.m. EDT, 4½ hours before its scheduled start, Baltimore remained at its hotel in midtown Manhattan.

With the rainout, the teams will lose Thursday's travel day. That means Yankees manager Joe Torre will start Kenny Rogers against rookie Rocky Coppinger in Game 4 on Saturday instead of possibly bringing Pettitte back on three days' rest.

Orioles manager Davey Johnson intends to flip his rotation, moving David Wells up a day to Game 2 on Thursday, when he'll pitch against David Cone. Mike Mussina drops back to Game 3 on Friday and will pitch against Jimmy Key.

Q&A: Diane DeMiro

Every Wednesday a Daily Iowan reporter sits down with a sports figure for a Q&A session. This week Chuck Blount spoke with Iowa senior field hockey player Diane Demiro.

DI: Last year you had a career year after being named Big Ten Offensive Player of the Year, but the team lost early in the NCAA tournament. Did that take a lot away from your personal achievements?

DD: Yes it did. As a team our goal each and every year is to win a national championship. My freshman and sophomore year we went to the Final Four so we expected it. To have a great year come to such an abrupt end was really shocking.

DI: Do you think this year's team is a national championship caliber team?

DD: Individually we are well rounded at nearly every position and should be considered a serious contender. We came out of the gate strong, but now it is a matter of how bad we want it.

DI: Last year Iowa stormed through the Big Ten season going undefeated in the regular season, but yet it seems stacked this year. How do you feel about the 1996 conference race?

DD: As always it is a very tough and competitive conference. Being on top of the standings only means that everyone is gunning for you. Last year a lot of teams had us on our backs but we came back and were fortunate to get through the league with a perfect record. I know for a fact that Michigan State will be gunning for us.

DI: What does Diane DeMiro get most out of field hockey?

DD: I have played since my youth and it is hard to think of life without it. I believe that it helps my communication abilities. Being a team sport it has also opened up a lot in me and it makes me offer everything I have. I don't ever want to let my teammates down. The traveling aspect has also been a big bonus.

DI: You are one of the greatest offensive threats this team has. With field hockey being such a fast sport, what kinds of thoughts go through your head when a scoring opportunity opens up?

DD: I just try to remain aggressive at all times. Sometimes it gets extremely hectic inside the line...a big mess. Mainly I'll just do whatever it takes to get the ball in the net.

DI: How do you feel your season is going on an individual basis?

DD: It has been kind of frustrating. I wasn't able to train at the beginning of the year due to a torn left hamstring. That was a big obstacle, forcing me to sit out of summer conditioning. At the beginning of the season I couldn't play a full game and saw only

ROAD TO THE SERIES

Braves, Yankees muscle into '96 Fall Classic

This is the time of year true baseball fans have waited for.

October, Yankee stadium, Ripken vs. Boggs, Maddux in stellar form, Ozzie Smith for perhaps the last time, flipping across the Busch stadium dirt, Steinbrenner yelling at Reggie Jackson for getting on the team bus when Jackson was a team representative ... Uh, could have done without the last one. But these are the days when heroes or goats are made.

Four teams have survived the diamond wars and now stand ready to claim the ultimate prize. Here is a breakdown of each series and who will move on to el serie del mundo:

NLCS - St. Louis vs. Atlanta. The bottom line here is the Braves have John Smoltz, Greg Maddux, Tom Glavine, Steve Avery, Zeus, Genghis Khan and God on their pitching staff. The Braves' first three starters have combined to strike out 629 batters, or the total number of home runs given up by the Tigers. Below the belt is where the Cardinals may have to hit the Braves.

Atlanta middle relievers, namely Brad Clontz, Greg McMichael and Terrell Wade, have a combined ERA of 3.96. St. Louis will have to chase the Big Guns by the sixth or it may be over. Braves pitchers threw 14 complete games during the season, tops in the NL.

Pitching used to be a dirty word in St. Louis until key pickups Todd Stottlemyre and Andy Benes had 'em singing in St. Louis. Benes will start Game 1 and Stottlemyre will go in Game 2. The key in cutting the thick Atlanta air is to keep the ball down and away. If Cardinal pitchers throw the ball belt-high to Grissom, Jones, Klesko or McGriff ... well, those balls haven't come down yet. Eckersley saved all three games in the division series for the Redbirds, so if the Cardinals do have a lead late, it should stay safe promising source regarding this year's Hawkeye team. Fry could barely hold back his enthusiasm after Iowa's 1996 Spring Game, saying everything was "on go."

"My optimism is that we're going to get better and better because we've done a good job recruiting, we've got a good coaching staff and we know what we're doing," he said. "But it doesn't happen overnight."

limited action. Being my senior year that only added to the disappointment of the injury, but I feel like I am almost back in full.

DI: But you're leading the team in scoring?

DD: Yeah, but that lies mainly in taking advantage of opportunity.

DI: You mentioned before that you have experienced two final four trips. What kinds of things have you learned personally that could benefit in a return trip?

DD: I think the big part is mental toughness. At that level every blown out of proportion.

"Everybody wants us to throw the ball all over the field immediately," Fry said. "I've got offensive linemen that haven't blocked anybody. The hardest thing to do is teach the running game, hard nosed. So, we emphasize the running game to get it going."

And Iowa has. Two Hawkeye running backs, Sedrick Shaw and Tavian Banks are among the top 13 in the Big Ten for yards per game. Shaw is No. 7 and Banks is No. 13. Fullback Mike Burger is staying involved with field hockey?

DD: Come January I am going to try-out for the 1997 U.S. National Team. It has always been a goal of mine to try to get on the team and I think that I have a good shot at it. Other than that, I have no plans.

although, the long-haired reliever's record was 0-6.

St. Louis can give the Braves problems with its speed. Ray Lankford and Royce Clayton have stolen 68 bases between them, and Brian Jordan isn't lead-footed with 22 swipes. The Braves punished teams with their power. Atlanta nailed 489 extra-base hits to its opponents' chests. The Braves also had the second-best team batting average in the NL at .270. St. Louis may have to manufacture runs to keep pace.

The Cardinals are 4-3 in Atlanta, so home-field advantage may be out the window. Smoltz, the virtual lock for the Cy Young award, has a 6.78 ERA against the Cards. I'm a die-hard Cardinal fan and I truly hope I eat my own words, but Atlanta has too much experience and its pitching staff is one of the best this century.

ATLANTA IN 6.

ALCS - New York vs. Baltimore

The Bronx bombers are back in the championship series for the first time in 15 years and may be poised to go all the way. Baltimore was supposed to be easy prey for the Indians, but now the Camden Yard boys are chomping for their first title since '83.

21-game winner Andy Pettitte is the backbone of New York's rotation. Pettitte fired 221 innings and started 34 games for George's boys during the season. David Cone is October-flavored — and although he only pitched 72 innings in '96, the stringy righthander struck out 71. If New York is winning in the sixth inning, forget it. Middle reliever Mariano Rivera has been unhittable with a 2.09 ERA and 130 strikeouts. John Wetteland slammed the door on the American league with 43 saves.

Baltimore may not have the names, but it has the heart. David Wells was 11-14 during the year, but the burley lefthander seems to rise to the occasion like he did in Game 1 of the division series and last year for the Reds. Mike Mussina had 204 strikeouts and 19 wins. "Nuff said. Hard-throwing Scott Erickson will have to improve his 5.02 ERA, but he has shown flashes of brilliance in the past.

If these games come down to a slugfest, Baltimore definitely has the advantage. The Orioles clubbed 257 home runs to New York's 162. Yankee pitching cannot come too far inside on Brady Anderson or Rafael Palmeiro. Those two can turn on a fastball quicker than New York pitchers can say what the ...

The Yankees' Bernie Williams has tattooed left-handed pitching all season. Williams hit .376 with 16 home runs in the regular season. Cecil Fielder will DH for Joe Torre's team. New York's entire lineup can dent the opposing team's ERA. The Yankees tied with Minnesota for the second-best team batting average in the AL at .288.

The Yankees are 10-3 vs. Baltimore this season and the Orioles are fighting more than just the record. The ghosts of past New York championship teams will haunt Baltimore on the hallowed pinstripe grounds. But Baltimore won't go down easy.

NEW YORK IN 7.

NL SERIES

NL team to win consecutive World Series since the Cincinnati's Big Red Machine in 1975-76. In the postseason for the fifth straight year, Atlanta will send likely Cy Young winner — and former NL playoff MVP — John Smoltz to the mound for the opener against Andy Benes.

Maddux and Glavine will follow for the Braves, with Denny Neagle possible for Game 4. Steve Avery, another former playoff MVP, is in the bullpen because of an injury to a muscle in his side.

"The top three guys are great athletes," Braves manager Bobby Cox said after Tuesday's workout.

"These guys are special people."

So are a couple of younger Atlanta players, particularly the Joneses.

At 24, third baseman Chipper Jones already has helped carry his team to a championship. At 19, outfield phenom Andrew Jones might get a chance to display his special skills.

"Unless you play in October," La Russa said, "most sports fans don't know how good you are."

The Braves and Cardinals showed their talents in first-round playoff sweeps. Atlanta, as usual, won with pitching in knocking out Los Angeles in three games while La Russa needed to make more moves in guiding St. Louis past San Diego.

Many of the Cardinals had a tough time adjusting to his blunt talk when he took over this season, at least until they saw that his ways worked. The Cardinals went from the second-worst record in the league last year to their first post-season appearance since 1987.

"I think Tony is a very intense person," Cox said. "They respect that he's won before."

As have many of the people in this series.

Seven St. Louis players own World Series championship rings — Smith and Willie McGee won them with the Cardinals in 1982, Gary Gaetti got his in Minnesota in 1987, Eckersley, Rick Honeycutt and Mike Gallego earned theirs with La Russa in Oakland in 1989 and Todd Stottlemire got his with Toronto in 1992-93.

"The Cardinals have a lot of guys who've played the game a long time," Glavine said. "They can beat you in a number of different ways."

Most of the Braves won their rings last fall. Doing it again, as general manager John Schuerholz knows, may be more difficult.

"I think continuation is more of a challenge than getting there," he said. "There have been a number of clubs in the last 10 years built to championship status, even world championship status, but in the years thereafter, there is a diminishment in their productivity and success."

MENTAL MISTAKES HURTING GOPHERS

Wackertired of botched snaps

Ron Lesko
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The preacher's kid swore Tuesday. He threatened physical harm to a player, too.

Has the losing finally gotten to Jim Wacker? No, but another botched punt snap might drive him over the edge.

Wacker has watched a snap sail high over his punter's head in each of the last two games. Against Syracuse, it led to a safety in a game Minnesota eventually won. But at Purdue last Saturday, it set up a touchdown that contributed to the Golden Gophers' disheartening 30-27 loss.

Wacker can't even blame one player. Scott Kneen was the culprit the first time, Derek Rackley the second time. The long-snapping duties for Saturday's game at No. 15 Northwestern are, well, up in the air.

"Right now it's down to, if you throw another one over the punter's head, the other guy is the snapper," Wacker said. "It's just that simple. In practice, anytime. We're just not putting up with it."

"Plus, I'll strangle you. Don't come to our sideline. Go to the other sideline. Your life is in my hands if you come to our sideline, son."

Wacker clearly was kidding. He just can't afford any more stupid mistakes if he hopes to have a job after this season. Wacker, the son of a Lutheran minister, must win five games or resign.

By losing to the Boilermakers, the Gophers (3-1, 0-1 Big Ten) wasted an opportunity to put their coach on the threshold of his magic number. Like so many Minnesota losses during Wacker's first four seasons, it was a game strewn with errors.

Leading 16-7 early in the second quarter, the Gophers gave up a long pass for a touchdown. Then came Rackley's terrible snap over Steve Kempf's head. Kempf

"I'll strangle you. Don't come to our sideline. Your life is in my hands if you come to our sideline, son."

Jim Wacker, Minnesota football coach on what he told his long snappers will happen if they continue to struggle.

chased the ball down in the end zone and got off a 19-yard punt just as he was being hit. That led to another TD that erased Minnesota's lead, and Corey Sauter followed with a poorly thrown pass for an interception.

The result? Another Purdue score, and Minnesota trailed 27-19 at halftime.

Rackley's bad snap wasn't the deciding play, only the most memorable.

"That play alone could have started things happening bad for us, but there were other plays down the line that could have made up for it," said safety Rodney Heath, whose 72-yard punt return TD had helped the Gophers to their early lead.

Unfortunately, that has become the theme of Wacker's tenure. Minnesota can point to any number of games over the past three seasons in which it doomed itself with untimely turnovers or penalties. The Gophers frequently have been close to important wins, but they almost always find ways to lose.

Aside from the one-and-done mandate he has applied to his long snappers, Wacker has tried not to put too much emphasis on those plays. Asked if he has definitive rules for his punter in those situations, Wacker said it's best to take the safety but impossible to instruct the punter to do that every time.

"Let's tell the kid, from now on you take the safety," Wacker said by way of example. "I could just see it. We're at the 50-yard line, snap's over his head, the ball's at the 20-yard line. He picks the ball up, has plenty of time to get the punt off, and he runs out the back of the end zone and they fire my (butt)."

BIG TEN LACKS CREDIT DESERVED

Cooper claims polls have bias

Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Despite being ranked second in the country, Ohio State coach John Cooper said Tuesday he believes there is a bias by national poll voters against Big Ten teams.

"I think sometimes people don't give Big Ten football the credit that it should be getting," Cooper said at his weekly news conference Tuesday. "It seems like we automatically assume Florida, Florida State or Miami or somebody ought to be ranked No. 1, even in preseason. Or Nebraska."

Ohio State, which hosts Wisconsin Saturday, was ranked ninth in the preseason, but vaulted to third with victories at home against Rice (70-7) and Pittsburgh (72-0) and a win at then fifth-ranked Notre Dame (29-16). The Buckeyes moved past Florida State in the latest poll coming off a 38-7 beating of then fourth-ranked Penn State while the Seminoles were whipping Clemson 34-3.

But the poll jump was far more dramatic than just climbing one spot.

The week before, the Buckeyes mustered just one first-place vote from the 67 media members of The Associated Press poll. This week, Ohio State was No. 1 on 24 ballots. Florida's lead over the Buckeyes fell from 131 points to 34.

Cooper said he wasn't shocked the Buckeyes made such a run at the Gators.

"It ain't very often you go back to back and beat Notre Dame and Penn State," Cooper said. "To go into Notre Dame and win that game, you might think, 'Boy, that's a fluke.' Then to come right back the next week and beat Penn State — there's probably a lot of people around the country that figure, 'Hey, the Buckeyes are for real.'"

Cooper also credited his Penn State adversary for the climb in the polls.

"I think Joe Paterno helped us. I think his comments after the game, something like: 'You don't have to be from Florida to be ranked No. 1 in the country.' He said that, didn't he?" Cooper said. "Joe's been on the bandwagon for a couple of years and I agree with him."

After watching the Buckeyes pile up 565 yards on his defense, Paterno actually said, "I don't know what it takes to get somebody outside the state of Florida to be No. 1."

Paterno, of course, had a powerhouse team two years ago, but was unseated as No. 1 eight games into the season by Nebraska. Despite impressive wins the rest of the week, the Nittany Lions were never able to regain the top ranking.

Because the Big Ten will not be a part of the bowl alliance for another three years — pending approval of a new alliance contract — Cooper and the Buckeyes could end up fighting a similar problem.

The winner of the Big Ten must play in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1, and the Rose Bowl is not a part of the alliance bowl package.

That could be good news — if the PAC-10 Conference winner is also a ranked unbeaten such as No. 4 Arizona State. The Rose Bowl might end up being THE place to play.

But if the champion of either conference drops in the rankings, the Rose Bowl also drops in prestige and prominence — all but eliminating the possibility of producing the national champion.

That's what happened to Penn State, which met lightly regarded underdog Oregon in Pasadena. And it could happen to the Buckeyes as well — with the national champion decided on Jan. 2 in the Sugar Bowl.

However, Cooper said all such conjecture is wildly premature. He said he wouldn't campaign for his team. Yet.

"Not at this stage I won't. We've only played four games," he said. "But I think everything will work itself out. It always does."

Reminded of what happened to Penn State in 1994, he added, "Well, it usually does."

43-YEAR-OLD STILL ENTHUSIASTIC

Parish impresses Bulls thus far

Mike Nadel
Associated Press

DEERFIELD, Ill. — Asked if any young players had impressed him in training camp, Michael Jordan immediately responded by commending the man who has played more games than anyone in NBA history.

"Young? Chief is the bright side of camp right now," he said, referring to 43-year-old center Robert Parish.

"His game is steady no matter who he plays against or with," Jordan said Tuesday. "And he's the first player on the court every day. His enthusiasm is just as strong as if he were young again."

Parish, who won three championships with the Boston Celtics during the 1980s, said Chicago — the NBA's oldest team — brings out the kid in him.

"This is the most competitive, intense camp I've been in," Parish said. "No nonsense. All business. I love that. It has to do with all the champions they have here."

Parish has played in 1,568 regular-season games. He ranks 13th on the all-time list in scoring (23,173), sixth in rebounding (14,626) and fifth in blocked shots (2,342).

He is the only newcomer to a team that won 72 regular-season games last season and rolled to the title. Bulls coach Phil Jackson sees the 7-footer as an insurance policy for starting center Luc Longley and backup Bill Wennington.

"We're amazed with his ability to compete, but I hate it when a guy I played against is still playing," the 51-year-old Jackson said.

Parish planned to retire after spending the past two seasons with the Charlotte Hornets.

"But I thought this would be a great opportunity for me," he said. "The chance to win another championship — that's what drove me out of retirement."

Nat Hickey, who was born in 1902 and played one game for Providence during the 1947-48 season, is the only man in NBA history to play past his 43rd birthday. Parish will become the second when the Bulls open Nov. 1 at Boston.

There couldn't be a more appropriate place for Parish to begin his league-record 21st season. For 15 years, he was the Celtics' man in the middle. Flanked by Larry Bird and Kevin McHale, he centered perhaps the best frontcourt combination ever to play the game.

The Golden State Warriors drafted Parish in 1976 but traded him to Boston for Joe Barry Carroll in 1980. The deal, which also gave the Celtics the draft pick they used to select McHale, is considered one of the most lopsided in sports history.

"The Warriors insisted on playing him in the high post and the offense didn't work," said Derrek Dickey, who played with Parish at Golden State and now is the Bulls' radio analyst. "So after a few years, they gave up on him. Big mistake."

Jackson won't revamp his famed triple-post offense for Parish, who probably will play no more than 15 minutes most games. But, the coach said, "We've made some subtle differences to give him a little more room posting up when he's in the game."

Known for his smooth, high-arching jump shot, Parish may start some games if Longley's knee and ankle problems return.

"That's one of our thought processes," said Jackson, who prefers that Wennington come off the bench. "Both of them are older centers and Bill's got that roller end pat."

And that's OK with Wennington, who, like everyone else on the team, is amazed by the Chief.

"I know how I feel at 33," Wennington said, "and he's got 10 years on me."

ISU MEDIA DAY

Floyd addresses offseason troubles

Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — You'd think with almost everyone back from a team that won a school-record 24 games, Tim Floyd would be a little more upbeat.

Instead, the longer the Iowa State basketball coach talked at media day on Tuesday, the madder he got — not at reporters, but at his team.

Floyd was upset by the offseason transgressions of some of his players, acts that indicated to him they were coasting after a surprising season in which the Cyclones won the Big Eight Conference tournament and reached the second round of NCAA play.

"I think you sense that I'm a little disturbed about some things that have happened," Floyd said. "Yes, that's a fair assessment."

Here's why Floyd is mad: —Starting center Kelvin Cato has been suspended for three games for missing some classes and weightlifting sessions.

—Guard Dedic Willoughby and forward Shawn Bankhead, both starters, have been suspended for one game each for missing summer school classes. Willoughby led the team in scoring last season, while Bankhead was voted the top defensive player.

—Floyd ended up canceling an August exhibition trip to Europe because he felt some of the players didn't deserve to go.

—Forward Kenny Pratt, the No. 2 scorer and rebounder last season, is academically ineligible for the first semester and last week was charged with disorderly conduct for allegedly shoving a police officer at a bar.

"I do think success is hard for young people to handle and deal with, for whatever reason," Floyd said. "I think we had a little bit of a case of that in the spring."

"We do hope that we've gotten beyond that and we're ready to tackle this new season head on, understanding that we're not going to sneak up on anybody."

Cato admitted that he was sliding when Floyd came down on him. After sitting out the first six games last season, Cato averaged 9.6 points and 7.7 rebounds and blocked a school-record 71 shots.

"I think success had something to do with it," he said. "I think I felt we didn't have to work as hard, even though everybody else in the nation was working just as hard as we were. But now I understand that."

Associated Press

tain things." Cato vowed he'd never have a similar problem again.

"When a man gives you a suspension, you don't want any more," he said. "That's one step away from being put off the team and that's something a basketball player never wants."

Willoughby, who averaged 20.5

"I think success is hard for young people to handle and deal with, for whatever reason. We had a little bit of that this spring."

Tim Floyd, Iowa State basketball coach on his team's off-season problems points last season and was named the Big Eight's newcomer of the year, said he, too, understands why he was suspended. But he said the problems weren't a sign the players' egos have gotten out of hand.

"Yeah, guys were missing classes, weightlifting. That's his rules," Willoughby said. "But it's not ego stuff. I think every college student misses a class every now and then, but that's his rules and we are supposed to abide by them. We deserved those suspensions."

Floyd said he hasn't decided if the players will sit during exhibition games or only regular-season games. Pratt for sure will miss the first six games. He averaged 15.3 points and 6.5 rebounds last season and excelled in clutch situations.

His play was one reason Iowa State did so well after being picked to finish last in the Big Eight. This season, the Cyclones generally are picked for second in the Big 12 behind Kansas.

"I thought a year ago we had a chance to have the most fun as any season I've been a part of. And it worked out that way," Floyd said. "A year later, we look at it and there are expectations."

"I think it's great our program has gotten to the point that people do expect something. I hope we're up to the task."

Iowa State won last year despite shooting 43 percent from the field and outrebounding only one of 14 opponents in Big Eight games. The Cyclones survived because they played good defense, holding opponents to 42 percent shooting and 63 points a game.

Floyd said his team also played hard and played together. That has to continue if the Cyclones are to enjoy similar success this season, he said.

"I think last year's team went in very humble," Floyd said. "We understood that we weren't supposed to be very good. As a result, they were great listeners. They didn't finger point."

"Those things need to be remembered. Those things need to be pointed out. I think those things are forgotten sometimes when you have too many pats on the back, too many newspaper articles, too many feature stories. We'll be observing those types of things very closely in our preseason."

NL PLAYOFFS

Atlanta confident, but cautious

Tom Saladino
Associated Press

ATLANTA — From all indications, the Atlanta Braves should have an easy time of it in the National League championship series against the St. Louis Cardinals.

To a man, however, the Braves all agree: Don't believe it.

"It's a different game come playoff time," third baseman Chipper Jones said Monday before a workout curtailed by a steady rain.

Although both clubs are coming off three-game sweeps in the opening round of the NL playoffs — the Braves over the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Cardinals defeating the San Diego Padres — Atlanta is favored because of its 9-4 edge in the regular season.

The defending World Series champions have also been in three of the last four World Series, have won 14 of their last 17 postseason games and won seven straight at home.

In addition, the Braves have their Big Three of John Smoltz, Greg Maddux and Tom Glavine ready and well rested. That trio gave up only two earned runs in the sweep of the Dodgers, holding the Los Angeles batters to a .140 average.

Other advantages by Atlanta in the regular season: The Braves outthrew St. Louis .241 to .227, out-homered them 22-9 and outscored them 67-47. Atlanta's pitchers had a 3.10 ERA, St. Louis was at 4.50.

"It's all wiped away. It all starts over on Wednesday," said Braves manager Bobby Cox.

The best-of-7 series opens Wednesday night with the first of two games in Atlanta before moving to St. Louis for three games, beginning on Saturday. If necessary, the final two games will be played in Atlanta.

Smoltz, who scattered four hits in Atlanta's 2-1 opening game victory over Los Angeles, will start for the Braves in the opener. He was 24-8 during the regular season, 1-1 against the Cardinals. Andy Benes, who was 18-10 during the season, 1-1 against Atlanta, will start for St. Louis.

"I feel good about our chances, but again, this is a different game come playoff time," said Jones, who hit .340 with 3 homers and 9 RBIs during the regular season against St. Louis.

Others who had success against the Cardinals this year include catcher Javy Lopez, who hit .343 with 4 homers and 11 RBI; first baseman Fred McGriff, who hit .321 with 3 homers and a team-high 12 RBI, and center fielder Marquis Grissom, who hit only .232 but had 6 of his 23 home runs against St. Louis and drove in 10 runs.

"I didn't even know," said Grissom. "I don't keep up with stats. I can't tell you why I had success against any team. I can't explain it. I go out and play hard every day. Some days I'm good, and some days I'm not."

Cards enter series banged up

R. B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The St. Louis Cardinals joke that the only time Gary Gaetti doesn't limp is when manager Tony La Russa is watching.

Gaetti suffered a bruised right heel and sprained ankle stretching for first base in the eighth inning of the Cardinals' clinching victory over San Diego Padres in the first round of the playoffs Saturday night. He remains a question mark entering Wednesday night's Game 1 of the league championship series against the Atlanta Braves.

"It doesn't feel as good as I hoped it would feel," Gaetti said after taping the leg and fielding some grounders at third base. "I'm glad we're not playing today, that's for sure."

Gaetti, 38, was one of the Cardinals' top offensive players in the second half of the season. He had 23 home runs, and of his 80 RBI, 67 came after June 1.

He was 1-for-11 in the three-game sweep of the Padres, but the hit was a three-run homer in the first inning of Game 1 that gave the Cardinals a 3-1 victory. Plus he's played a solid third base.

Gaetti said he feels the injuries the most while running straight ahead.

"Running wasn't real pleasant," he said. "But I've got two days, and usually the first two days (after an injury) are the worst."

"Tony has talked to me before about not liking that hero stuff. If I can play, I'll play."

If Gaetti can't play, La Russa said he could use Danny Sheaffer or Mike Gallego at third.

"He wants in there so bad," La Russa said of Gaetti. "He's getting treatment and he's got time to get ready, so I wouldn't bet against him."

Another injured Cardinal, center fielder Ray Lankford, is a sure thing for Game 1. Eleven days after he tore the rotator cuff on his throwing shoulder, he'll be back in the starting lineup.

Lankford was injured making a diving catch in center field Sept. 27. The initial prognosis was grim and two days after the injury he couldn't lift his shoulder.

But he entered Game 3 against

San Diego as a pinch hitter and defensive replacement in the fifth inning, going 1-for-2 with a walk and run scored. Now he's back, or close enough to being back for the Cardinals, who return 37-year-old Willie McGee to the bench.

"There are certain things you can do, depending on how severe the injury," La Russa said. "It was just a matter of how quickly the pain would become tolerable."

Left fielder Ron Gant missed only three games when he tore his rotator cuff in late August, but not to his throwing shoulder. He's somewhat surprised to see Lankford, who batted .275 with 21 home runs and 86 RBI, batting in front of him again.

"I thought it was going to take longer," Gant said. "If you tear the rotator cuff completely, it's a real serious injury. Luckily, both of us came out on the good end of that."

Right fielder Brian Jordan has a healthy rotator cuff, but that's about all. He enters the second round with a sore shoulder, sore wrist, a left hand that he believes may be broken, and a stiff neck.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Welcome to the Bronx, Robbie Alomar. Here's your batting helmet. Keep it on.

Yankee Stadium, not always the warmest venue for visiting players, could get ugly when Alomar and the Baltimore Orioles play the New York Yankees in the American League championship series. Alomar got an extra day to ready himself when Tuesday night's first game was postponed because of rain.

A local radio station passed a jar among fans lined up to buy tickets at Yankee Stadium, urging them to spit in the container. The plan was to present it to Alomar.

Alomar has become a marked man after spitting in the face of umpire John Hirschbeck on the last weekend of the regular season. That action sent baseball into federal court twice during the division playoffs to keep the rest of the umpires working and touched off a fusillade of anger from fans and commentators across the country.

Alomar apologized and Hirschbeck urged that the affair be put behind them. Fans, though, don't forget, especially in New York, where visitors have been afforded rough treatment before. Authorities were bracing for Alomar's arrival in a ballpark where visiting first baseman Wally Joyner once was struck by a dinner knife as he walked toward the dugout.

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani suggested the Baltimore second baseman get the silent treatment from New York fans, an unlikely circumstance.

"Make it clear you don't acknowledge the fact that he's in the game," the mayor said. "The fans in Cleveland (during the division series) turned their backs on him. They did the appropriate thing."

And what if the fans act up? "We'll have lots of police, including plainclothesmen, on hand," Giuliani said.

"If you think of throwing anything, as far as I'm concerned you're trying to kill somebody."

The Yankees were prepared for trouble.

"Obviously, we always take into consideration special circumstances and there will be more than adequate security," team spokesman Rick Cerrone said.

Alomar's arrival was noted by radio station Z-100, which encouraged fans to spit into a flower vase-sized jar as a gift to the second baseman. Assistant producer Danielle Monaro said the collection was going slowly, with about 60 contributors so far.

"It's about up to the knuckle on your finger," she said. "We plan to have it delivered by a singing messenger."

The front page of the Post caught the attention of the Yankees' Darryl Strawberry, whose past adventures have landed him there more than once or twice.

"You kind of feel for him," Strawberry said.

"What he did was completely out of character. It was uncalled for. But it doesn't make him a bad person."

Just a marked one.

The Texas-Yankees division playoff was relatively peaceful, although some fans decided to dump junk on Rangers right fielder Juan Gonzalez, who kept hitting home runs. Baltimore right fielder Bobby Bonilla left New York last season after a stormy stay with the Mets and he could be a secondary target for the Alomar fallout. Bonilla grew up in the Bronx. He knows all about the territory.

Reaching Alomar with garbage will be a tad more difficult because he plays second base, well removed from the stands. It should be pointed out, however, that some Yankee fans come equipped with good arms.

When manager Joe Torre went out to argue a call with a home plate umpire this season, he got hit in the back of the head by a peach pit hurled from the stands. And Torre's on their side.

Olodum, a troupe of percussionists, instrumentalists, singers and dancers, will showcase its fusion of African music tonight at Hancher Auditorium at 8.

Olodum troupe brings fusion of world music to Hancher

Chris Curtis
The Daily Iowan

However you spell it — environmentalists, culturalists, humanitarians or musicians — it always comes out Olodum.

Olodum, a group of 23 multitalented percussionists, instrumentalists, singers and dancers, will showcase its fusion of Jamaican reggae, African Ijexa, samba and Brazilian forro rhythms, tonight at Hancher Auditorium at 8.

"We try to encourage our brothers to be proud of the black people," Billy Arquimino, Olodum's international relations director, said. "One thing we try to do is keep alive the culture and religion. We try to develop our own teaching which many black people had."

Olodum was formed in 1979 to recover, preserve and celebrate the black culture of Brazil. The ensemble has toured Japan, Germany, France, Spain and Italy, spreading its message.

"It is very important for (Iowa City residents) to know about how someone from another culture expresses themselves artistically," said Wally Chappell, director of Hancher Auditorium. "(Olodum) also put on one helluva show."

Olodum is best known for its work on Paul Simon's video for "Obvious Child" and Michael Jackson's "They Don't Care About Us." The group has also worked with musicians David Byrne, Herbie Hancock and Tracy Chapman.

On Tuesday evening, West Music, Coralville, sponsored a free community drum circle and percussion-making workshop, where local residents brought their own instruments to play alongside Olodum.

"We are very much committed to giving everybody the opportunity to play music and be involved in percussion," Shawn Lafrenz, a West Music employee, said. "This is an excellent opportunity to continue some of the programs we've done in the past in a similar nature."

Besides banging on drums all day, Olodum also devotes time to social programs, including workshops and projects about AIDS, sanitation, recycling, religion, African culture and racism. The troupe created its own school where underprivileged children can learn about music, dance, theater, language and history.

Tickets for the performance are available at the Hancher Box Office.

NewsBriefs

Malaysia denies Jackson concert based on cultural differences

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — For the second time, pop superstar Michael Jackson has been shut out of Malaysia.

Jackson's application for an Oct. 27 concert was shot down by municipal authorities who cited "the effect it would have on the young,"

the Star newspaper reported Tuesday. More than half of Malaysia's 19 million people are Muslims and Islam is the state religion. Jackson's onstage dances, with their hip gyrations and pelvic thrusts, could be considered immodest by local standards.

Municipal president Mohamed Aini Tahib also said artists must also conform to a dress code, which Jackson may not have been able to abide by, the Star reported.

Follow The Road To Health... Get your Flu Shot!
As the holiday season approaches, you'll want to be healthy to enjoy it. Because your health is important to us, Econofoods, in conjunction with Interim HealthCare®, is offering a way to prevent the flu. Cost is $10, Medicare recipients get vaccinations free of charge when they present their Medicare Card with valid Part B (Medical) coverage and are not enrolled in a Medicare HMO. Come by our store and get your flu vaccination administered by an Interim HealthCare® nurse. The vaccines will be available at Iowa City Econofoods on October 16, 1996 from 10 a.m. 'till 2 p.m. Vaccines will not be given to children under 18 years old.

Meat

PERFECT FRIED CHICKEN
 2 1/2-to-3-lb broiler-fryer, cut into serving pieces
 1/3 cup evaporated milk, undiluted
 3/4 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
 3/4 cup cornflake crumbs
 2 teaspoons salt
 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 Salad oil

1. Wash chicken under cold water; dry on paper towels.
2. Pour milk into large pie plate, dip chicken into milk.
3. In a clean paper bag, combine flour, cornflake crumbs, salt and pepper. Then shake chicken, a few pieces at a time, in crumb mixture in the bag, coating well.
4. Pour salad oil to depth of 1/4 inch in two (8-inch) skillets. Heat slowly. Brown chicken lightly, turning once with tongs.
5. Cover; reduce heat; cook 40 to 45 minutes, turning occasionally to insure even browning.
6. Remove covers; cook 5 minutes longer, to crisp the crust.
