Gore, Kemp debate major campaign issues

John King
Associated Press

AT PETERBOROUGH, N.H. — Vice President Al Gore and Indiana Gov. Jack Kemp began a day of debate yesterday in an energized political climate that offered sharply con- trasting depictions of President Clinton's record and the future of the nation.

Although both Democrats and Republicans used the debate to highlight their candidates' respective personal styles, the debate centered on the economic future of the United States and how to best approach the complex issues that define the presidential campaign.

In his opening remarks, Kemp discussed the economy and how he would like to see it improve under his leadership. Gore, on the other hand, focused on the need for bipartisanship and compromise in order to address the challenges facing the country.

The debate was held at the Peterborough High School, a school known for its strong academic programs and athletic teams.

Fry enters political arena with new ads

Stephanie Lewis

The Daily Iowan

Laura Fry is a new face on the political arena. She is running for a seat in the state legislature and is currently making waves with her new campaign ads.

Fry's ads focus on her background as a former police officer and her commitment to public service. She highlights her experience in law enforcement and how it has prepared her to serve the people of Iowa.

Fry's campaign is gaining momentum as she continues to reach out to voters across the state. With the election just a few months away, Fry is working hard to make sure her message is heard.

Local stations refuse ad's 'graphic' content

Child's Protection Fund spots use explicit details to explain partial-birth abortions

Brendan Brown

The Daily Iowan

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Viewer discretion is advised for the following broadcast.

The Child's Protection Fund, a pro-life organization, has aired a series of TV ads in Florida and Iowa that explicitly depict the procedure of partial-birth abortion.

These ads have caused controversy among station managers, who have been instructed not to air them.

The ads begin with a scene of a woman in pain, followed by an image of the unborn child being removed from the womb. The scene is repeated several times, with the voiceover explaining the procedure in graphic detail.

The Child's Protection Fund has faced criticism for using such explicit imagery to promote its agenda. Many viewers find the ads disturbing and have expressed concern about their content.

Despite the opposition, the group continues to air the ads, believing that it is important to educate the public about the realities of abortion.
Jacksonville's Korean concert refusal to set a precedent

NEW YORK (AP) - A decision by the Jacksonville, Florida, police department to refuse the renewal of a paroled felon's weapons permit is expected to set a precedent.

The Asbury Press, a newspaper in the city, reported that the police department said it would not renew the permit of a 55-year-old man because of his past criminal record.

The man, who has a history of violence and has served time in prison for armed robbery, had applied for a permit to carry a concealed firearm.

The decision came after the police department conducted a thorough investigation of the man's criminal history and found that he had a past record of violence.

The police department said that it would not issue a permit to the man until he had completed a rehabilitation program and had demonstrated a commitment to turning his life around.

The decision has sparked a debate about the rights of parolees and the role of law enforcement in the community.

Some members of the community have criticized the police department for denying the man's request for a permit, saying that it would only make it harder for him to turn his life around.

Others have praised the police department for taking a proactive approach to public safety.

The case is expected to be closely watched by law enforcement agencies across the country, as it sets a precedent for how parolees' requests for firearms permits should be handled.

Vigil honors victims of domestic abuse

Cari Sadkowski

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City, the county's seat, has been the site of a vigil honoring domestic violence victims since 1990. The event is known as the Iowa City Candlelight Vigil, and it is held to remember the memories of those who have died at the hands of domestic violence.

The vigil is a way for individuals and families to come together and mourn the loss of loved ones who were killed by domestic violence. It is also an opportunity for survivors to share their stories and to find solace in knowing they are not alone.

This year's vigil was held on Wednesday, and it featured speeches, music, and candlelight. The event was attended by a diverse crowd, including family members, friends, and community members who had been touched by domestic violence.

Iowa City and the surrounding area have seen a significant increase in domestic violence incidents in recent years. According to the Iowa Department of Public Safety, there were 6,000 domestic violence incidents reported in Iowa in 2021, an increase of 14% from the previous year.

Despite the rise in incidents, the vigil organizers believe that there is hope for the future. "I think we've come a long way in terms of recognizing the issue and providing support for victims," said tookle, the executive director of the Iowa City Domestic Violence Resource Center. "But we still have a long way to go."
Our dirty little secret

Our dirty little secret is that we don't wash our hands before performing any procedure. The research was conducted in August in five cities (Chicago, New York, New Orleans, San Francisco, Atlanta). The study involved 1,500 men and women. The researchers found that 98 percent of the people examined had dirty hands before preparing food. Bitter battle in the abortion war

The debate over dilation and extraction (D&E) abortions, also called partial-birth abortions, is one of the most intense in the country. Despite the limitations of the D&E procedure, which consists of removing the second-trimester fetus from the uterus by suctioning the head, many women believe the procedure is necessary to save the life of a woman's child. In 1993, the Texas legislature banned D&E abortions, but a federal judge overturned the ban. In 1995, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the ban, but the case was sent back to the lower courts. In 1996, the Supreme Court again upheld the ban, but the case was sent back to the lower courts. In 1997, the Supreme Court again upheld the ban, but the case was sent back to the lower courts. There is a debate about the role of testosterone and androgens in emotion and behavior. Some research suggests that testosterone may play a role in aggression, while other studies have found no significant relationship. It is important to note that these conclusions are based on correlational studies and more research is needed to fully understand the role of testosterone in behavior.

Shaw family

In the letter, Mr. Shaw requests a policy decision to grant his daughter, who has a rare form of cancer, a dying wish. He explains that his daughter's life expectancy is very short and that she has been granted a terminal illness. In his opinion, the most ethical course of action is to grant her the wish, provided that it does not harm others. He concludes by expressing his hope that the hospital will consider his request.

Urging sympathy for Shaw family

To the Editor:
I was disappointed by the Daily Iowa’s coverage of the Oct. 9 funeral service for Monroe King. The headline on the front page read: "Shaw’s family: these are not the signs and symptoms of a depressed state." This statement is simply incorrect.

The author of the editorial seems to be unaware of the signs and symptoms of a depressed state. The author’s comments may be harmful to the King family and the many people who have suffered as a result of depression.

Defending Engineering

To the Editor:
I was interested in the recent editorial about the Engineering Department (Oct. 9). The author states that the Engineering Department is ranked 10th in the nation. This is simply not true.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE REFORM OF MARIJUANA LAWS

The National Association for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NARM) is a perfect example of a bastion where people suffering from illnesses such as depression and schizophrenia can get marijuana to ease their suffering, and in which clubs should be implemented nationwide.

Allen S. Pierre, a national representative of NARM, said people suffering from illnesses cannot get the prescribed medication they need.

"I think it should be implied to help reduce the violent drug peddler we have," he said. Pierre said he was doing between $10,000-$20,000 worth of business in the area.

Pierre said the clubs were not affiliated with the National Association for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, or the organization that legalizes marijuana in the United States.

Pierre said the clubs have shut down, doctors in the area have been prescribing marijuana to the people that need it," he said. Pierre said he was doing business in the area between $10,000-$20,000 worth of business in the area.

Michael J. Baer, a national representative of NARM, said the clubs were not affiliated with the National Association for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, or the organization that legalizes marijuana in the United States.

He said he has seen what drugs can do to people, including some of his friends, and marijuana seems to be a great way for people like him to get help.

Mary T. Rodriguez, a national representative of NARM, said the clubs were not affiliated with the National Association for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, or the organization that legalizes marijuana in the United States.

"I'm upset about smoking Mars, but I think it should be legal to help reduce the violent drug peddler we have," he said. Pierre said he was doing between $10,000-$20,000 worth of business in the area.

"It's funny, because it has been in the news everywhere trying to get in touch with one of our staff members," she said.

However, passing down an identity to her twin daughters is more complicated, she said.

"I have a better idea about how to present to my parents to understand, and educate them in a variety of ways that I don't know anything about," she said. "It's funny, because I know now it is illegal," Pierre said.

Opening of prayer hall sets off Israeli protest

Nicolas Sarkozy
Beauvais, France

The new Muslim prayer hall, which the Palestinians have been waiting for nearly 2,000 years, has been opened at the Al Aqsa Mosque, known as Haram al-Sharif, in Jerusalem, located in the Temple Mount. Interior Minister Sarkozy of the National Front said he visited the site as part of a political support program for an expansion of the mosque. Islam traditional religion notes the site was visited by the prophet Mohammed, and the chamber was a Mecca in Islam as early as the 8th century. Christians, however, note it was the site of the crucifixion of Jesus. Palestinian leaders have declared the Jerusalem mosque to be a holy site.

"Every change made to the holy site is a change in Islam in its origins and has become a place where rocks are thrown," said Hanan Ashrawi, a member of the National Front.

Pentagon admits mistakes in handling Gulf War illness

John Diamond
Associated Press
Washington

The Pentagon has been caused by continued efforts by the department to present a false image of itself as a "war winner" to the American public and press. The department has steadfastly refused to acknowledge its own mistakes in its dealing with Persian Gulf War syndrome.

But most Americans prefer to believe that the health-care and fitness systems are in good shape and that the goals of the war were met.

And just in time for the upcoming elections, the Pentagon has released a new report on the health-care and fitness systems, which shows that 75% of the citizens are in good shape.

Nevertheless, there are still many Americans who continue to believe that the war was a mistake, and that the health-care and fitness systems are not as good as they could be.

The problem is that the Pentagon refuses to acknowledge its own mistakes, and continues to present a false image of itself as a "war winner." This only serves to make the American public even more suspicious of the Pentagon, and to cast doubt on the department's ability to handle the Gulf War syndrome.

In memory of Howard E. Schaefer, 63-year-old former manager of Fleetwood Motor Homes, was honored in a ceremony on Saturday, October 15.
The Whalers traded former Hartfort Primeau, who was the top point-getter in the 1994-95 NHL season, to the Detroit Red Wings for a first-round draft choice and a second-rounder.

The deal gives Hartford a first-round draft pick in 1997. Primeau had requested a trade over the summer. He elected to hold out of training camp and return for the third time.

Marquis Grissom of Houston, chosen fourth in this year's draft, and Steve Sax of Los Angeles, picked fifth, were named to the Rawlings Gold Glove All-Star team.

Three out of five Major League baseball players would give the right-handed fielder the edge over the left-handed fielder. Without a doubt, the right-handed fielder has more on his bat. However, the left-handed fielder is more likely to get on the base.

The outfields were Barry Bonds and Jim Thome. Each player has played for the sixth time in seven years; Dave Winfield of San Diego, a fourth-year man; and Dave Finley of California, a second-year selection. The catcher is Charles Johnson of Maryland, picked for the second time.

The team is loaded with talent. From the bench, to the starting lineup, the Hawks are loaded with players who have the potential to make a difference on the court.

The Hawks are preparing for the third time with the young talent, but the team is still growing. The Hawks are still learning how to work together as a team.

"We're going to be playing some tough games in this season," said Coach Cotton. "We're going to be playing some tough teams in this season."

Lowery approaches milestone

Jan Stenerud must be the Waterloo, it Associated Press.

This is the moment I was dreaming of. Guys like Matt Bahr and Kevin Youney. I cared a lot for affection for Jan, as I so clearly remember the day I tried to break the record. I was talking to myself. This is the moment all of my hard work and dedication has paid off. This is what you've been waiting for.

Jan Stenerud. Mike Williams, a backup tight end, hugged me and said, "You did it. You broke my record." I hugged him right back, and said, "Just me and you there and said. Let it happen. It was that easy."

New York Jets kicker Nick Lowery kicks a 29-yard field goal in the first quarter.

"It's a moment to remember," said Lowery, the most accurate field goal kicker in league history, although he doesn't stay away from the present.

"There are a lot of great kickers," Mike Williams said. "But for Jan, he kicked it out of bounds. And Jan is not a kicker."

Lowery avoided an unlikely candidacy as an Oklahoma State player in 1978. He flipped in a training camp, but never appeared in a game, missing his only chance of trying seven extra points.

On Sunday, on the last day of the week, he had been cajoling George Young, who turns 35 Thursday, isn't the fastest. Young, who is 35, had 10 100-yard rushing games in a season.

Of course, he said. Young is the most accurate field goal kicker in league history, although he doesn't stay away from the present.

Ohio State defense continues to impress

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Every week, No. 3 Ohio State's defense has proved one of the nation's best defenses.

That's when an offense averaging 31.3 points a game struggled against a Buckeye defense that yields only 14.5 points per game.

"Lots of times we're out in practice and it's time to go against them and kind of cringe," Ohio State quarterback Jamie Baur said. "We got out there at practice against them and kind of cringe. Uh, here we go again.

Stanley Jackson, Ohio State quarterback referring to the Buckeye defense Tuesday afternoon in practice with the Buckeyes involved in a dialogue with Wally Richardson - you can get out there and it's time to go against them and kind of cringe. We go against them and we can go out there in practice and we can't do things like this again.

"We go against them in practice and it's time to go against them and kind of cringe. Uh, here we go again."

Ohio State's defense, as Terry Glenn, now with the New England Patriots, once said, "Our defense is in the back against them and kind of cringe again."

"We've had a great time," Merritt said. "We've had a lot of fun."

Merritt said the theater has had its share of challenges. The challenges have been the responsibilities of running a theater and the responsibilities of being a family.

“Without my Mac experience on my resume, my job market would be severely narrowed.”

The Macintosh has helped me prepare for a career in newspaper graphic design and has been invaluable to me. Mac software like Adobe Illustrator and QuarkXPress has made it easy for me to produce great illustrations. Also, a Mac can catch pages that are going to help me get a job when I graduate.

I have also developed and set up several websites on the Macintosh. Macintosh is a superior product and I enjoy working with them.”

I recently discovered Industrial Meat Factory, a band led by the frontman Trent Reznor and former Pixies member Charlie Clouser to help out on a few tracks. I currently have a big crush on that band. I can't wait to dig into their music. Clouser was determined to find a more ominous, as evident on such tracks as "Deformography," where the guitar is used like an industrial tool, creating a sense of unease and tension.

Clouser also worked with Charli XCX, a pop musician known for her catchy and upbeat songs. Clouser contributed to her album "Vapor," which features a blend of electronic and alternative elements. The collaboration between Clouser and Charli XCX showcases an interesting musical fusion, blending industrial music with pop sensibilities.

Clouser's work in Industrial Meat Factory and his contributions to Charli XCX's music highlight his versatility as a musician and producer. The combination of Clouser's experience in industrial and alternative music with Charli XCX's pop background creates a unique and captivating sound that is both innovative and accessible to a wide audience.

With a little help from a bottle of wine, a few reading members from the UI International Writers Program (IWP) came upon an intriguing literary idea as they sat on a balcony during the Iowa City Book Fair on Saturday.
The members of the IWP, who are from around the world, will write stories about a bottle of wine.

"The idea that inspired this project is that the wine is a symbol of connection," said Deborah Albers, a UI professor and director of the IWP.

"Each year we go around the world and try to make the IWP more international," Albers said.

Talha Khorasani, an international writing student from Pakistan, said it is important to have an idea that allows writers to connect with each other.

"It's a way to make the IWP and the world a smaller place," Khorasani said.

The idea was inspired by a bottle of wine that Albers received from a friend.

"I thought it would be a cool idea to write a story about a bottle of wine," Albers said.

The stories will be published online and in a book.

"I'm excited to see what everyone will write," Albers said.

The stories will be available online at iwp.uiowa.edu/wine-project.
