Rally set for Coming Out Day

Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

Today on the Pentacrest gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgendered will come out of the closet and come together for a day of celebration and support as part of National Coming Out Day.

The rally, which will take place from 12:15-1:15 p.m., will feature UI students and administrators giving talks about their journey to self-liberty.

Carlos Serrato, assistant director for the UI Office of Campus Programs and Student Activities, said this day is important for the gay community to present themselves in a public arena.

"We're tired of being silent, and now we're refusing to be silent and be invisible," Serrato said. "It's always a new discomfort, but I do it because I've known for a while how secure I am with myself."

The event has taken place on the UI campus since 1988. The Human Rights Campaign, a prominent national gay and lesbian membership association.

POLICE MATTERS

83-year-old woman is assaulted

Mike Waller
The Daily Iowan

An 83-year-old woman was sexually assaulted early Wednesday morning in the 2000 block of H Street.

She is the fourth reported sexual-assault victim in a month.

The woman was asleep when the assailant forcibly entered her residence at approximately 3 a.m. Wednesday. He awakened her from sleep and committed the crime before stealing her purse and its contents as he fled the area.

The assailant is described as a very young-looking, thinly built white male. He is approximately 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighs around 140 pounds. He was wearing long pants, a skin-tight T-shirt and a baseball cap worn backward on his head.

Iowa City Detective Ed Schultz is investigating the crime. Anyone with information is asked to call the Iowa City Police Department at 356-5275 or 356-5280.

Fry anticipates rowdy Indiana fans

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Last season, Iowa football fans were asked to clean up their act. A couple of years ago, Wisconsin was told to do the same. Now, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry hopes the Indiana football faithful will follow suit Saturday when the Hoosiers play host to the Hawkeyes.

"It's the worst crowd we go to in the Big Ten — the hollering, the four-letter words, throwing stuff," Fry said. "A couple of my coaches got beamed upside the head the last time we were over there. It's just not a good environment."

He criticized Iowa fans for throwing objects ranging from marshmallows to raw chickens to beer cans onto the field at Kinnick Stadium last season. A stepped-up security effort and student cooperation has all but eliminated that problem this year.

Fry remembered a time when Wisconsin fans went after the cars of Hawkeye fans.

Fry

"My wife made the mistake of driving up there and they slashed the tires and tied the antenna into a knot, along with a whole lot of Iowa people," Fry said.

Wisconsin used to be the worst environment for the Hawkeyes, according to Fry. His players were routinely pelted with rotten eggs and tomatoes and even had Schnapps poured on them.

"That's cleaned up," he said. "I think we've been treated well at Wisconsin."

The same cannot be said for the Hoosiers.

"They're bad," Fry said. "When we come on and off the field over there, every four-letter word and obscenity (was shouted) to our players and our coaches; (it was) just really bad."

"We have to warn our players so they don't get into it with the fans and people."

Two years ago, Iowa Assistant Coach Gene Jones was hit on the head by an object thrown from the stands.

"I got a big kick out of it," Fry said. "He grabbed the security guy and said, 'If you don't straighten these people out throwing stuff at us, I'm going up there and kick some rump.' I thought that was pretty funny, because I would have lost a coach."

Things don't look to get any better for the Hawkeyes this season. Indiana Coach Bill Mallory decided to swap sidelines with the Hawkeyes, putting Iowa right in front of the Indiana student section.

"I want my home advantage," Mallory said. "I'm not giving them the gosh darn advantage."

The decision to switch sidelines had nothing to do with Fry's remarks, Mallory said. He wants his team on the same side as the press box so opposing teams cannot

Bob Rush promotes value of young voters

Carie Sadkowski
The Daily Iowan

Some came for pizza, some came to support the Democrats and some were just passing by.

First Congressional District candidate Bob Rush met informally with about 40 UI students Thursday afternoon over free pizza and pop at The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St. The back room of the bar was filled with Rush supporters and pizza-eaters.

Only one UI student was disappointed.

"I saw 'meet Rush' and I thought it was Rush Limbaugh," UI senior Todd Guentensberger said between bites of Airliner pizza. "I'm a conservative Republican, here for the pizza, that's why you don't see any stickers on me."

The pizza was also an incentive for UI graduate student Brian Eppley.

"I knew which 'Rush' it was, but I was still thinking free pizza," Eppley said.

Others came out to support Rush or see what he had to say.

"The more Democrats we have, the better world we will have," UI sophomore Chris Cassata said.

Rush, who gave a short speech, did not have time to eat the free food while working to drum up youthful-voter support. He told the audience it was time for change and time to have a Congress that cared about young people.

"The reason Congress doesn't care about young people is because young people have the worst voting record and the government isn't afraid of (young people) as a political force," Rush said.

He told students they were important and were the leaders of tomorrow.

"You have an enormous power. You have the power to decide who is going to be in control of this Congress," Rush said. "I'm committed

Spending limits often violated

Stephan Ilten
The Daily Iowan

The Clinton and Dole presidential campaigns have been accused of trampling spending limits by allowing their parties to pay for millions of dollars worth of television ads.

Common Cause, a nonpartisan group that lobbies for tighter restrictions on campaign spending, urged the Justice Department to establish an independent council to investigate the alleged violations.

"Common Cause believes that the violations that occurred during the 1996 presidential election are the most massive violations of the campaign finance laws since the Watergate scandal," Ann McBride, president of the nonprofit group that lobbies for campaign reform, said.

Attorney General Janet Reno said she received a letter Wednesday from Common Cause requesting the independent council. By law, Reno has up to 120 days to decide whether that step is warranted.

"We are in the process of reviewing it," Reno told reporters at her weekly news briefing. "I think we've got to review it, see exactly what the allegations are."

Keanu Reeves preps for latest role at Florida courthouse

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) - Keanu Reeves' latest excellent adventure took him to the Duval County Courthouse to watch an armed-robbery trial.

Reeves

The star of "Speed" and "Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure" wore a dark suit Wednesday as he sat in court and studied the lawyers in preparation for his upcoming role in the movie "Devil's Advocate."

"There was a noted and substantial increase in the female audience," said Circuit Judge Brad Stetson, "specifically, employees of the courthouse who don't normally grace my court with their presence."

Reeves autographed a yellow sticky note for a delighted bailiff and accepted a hug from a courthouse worker.

Most of "Devil's Advocate" is being filmed in New York, but location scouts are visiting Florida, checking out churches. A Warner Bros. spokesperson wouldn't discuss the movie's plot.

Distribution of bootleg merchandise angers Beatles

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) - Yoko Ono and the surviving Beatles say a stamp distributor shouldn't be selling Fab Four stamps issued by Third World nations.

"This is bootleg merchandise which is hiding behind the fact that small, Third World countries put a seal of approval on them," said their lawyer, Paul Licalsi.

The lawsuit in a federal lawsuit the International Collectors Society of Owings Mills, Md., violated licensing laws by selling stamps bearing Beatles likenesses from such nations as Chad, Madagascar, St. Vincent and Tanzania.

The lawsuit said the company even worked with some nations to get the stamps made, even though a minimal number were actually sold in post offices in those countries.

"I don't believe the Beatles are any kind of cultural icons in Tanzania," Licalsi said. "This is pure profit, and a ripoff of Beatles fans and a ripoff of the Beatles."

But the company just wants to let it be. "What's wrong with buying the stamps, as many people do, and redistributing them to stamp collectors at a profit?" said the company's lawyer, Donald Robinson, who added that the stamps are recognized as legitimate postage.

Shania Twain's new studio may violate local zoning restrictions

RAY BROOK, N.Y. (AP) - For country star Shania Twain, nothing could be more natural than making music in the mountains.

But officials are investigating whether wetlands were destroyed to build her studio in the Adirondack Mountains and whether it is in tune with local zoning restrictions.

Twain and her husband-producer, Robert "Mutt" Lange, claim their studio is being used for artistic activity, which would exempt it from the need for a permit.

"What do you do there? That's what we're trying to find out," said William Curran of the Adirondack Park Agency, the local zoning authority.

White's decision decried at rally

Mike Waller The Daily Iowan

More than 50 people stood in the Pedestrian Mall and chanted "Let a jury decide" during a rally on Thursday.

Three speakers addressed the crowd at the 5:15 p.m. rally, which was sponsored by the International Socialist Organization (ISO).

Speakers and outraged members of the Iowa City community questioned Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White's decision not to press criminal charges against Iowa City police officer Jeffrey Gillaspie after the Aug. 30 shooting of local artist and businessman Eric Shaw.

"If anything can be done to change Pat White's mind, it should be done," ISO member and UI associate professor Tom Lewis said. "This rally will show that Iowa Citizens are not willing to acquiesce without a cry of opposition."

Local attorney Sally Peck was the first speaker to address those who gathered around the northeast corner of the Pedestrian Mall. She protested White's decision based on the fact that he works closely with the Iowa City Police Department on a day-to-day basis.

"The Johnson County attorney's office yields to the police departments more than most county attorney offices around the state," she said. "The Shaws and the citizens of Iowa City deserve a better decision-making process than Pat White used towards Jeffrey Gillaspie."

David Cyprus/The Daily Iowan

Ralliers gather in the Pedestrian Mall Thursday afternoon to express their unrest with Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White's decision not to press charges against police officer Jeffrey Gillaspie. The rally was sponsored by the International Socialist Organization (ISO).

ISO member Pat Gallagher, the third speaker at the event, also said White has a bias toward the police and should have sent the case to a jury.

"Pat White uses foot soldiers to build cases against those who break the law every day," Gallagher said. "Those foot soldiers are the Iowa City police."

Peck also made a call for citizens to organize a "Johnson County or Iowa City Justice Association," which would allow citizens the opportunity to come together to air concerns and evaluate the criminal-justice system.

Protesters also called for the full disclosure of Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation and ICPD internal-review reports.

"Iowa City is suffering from the patronizing decision of Pat White," he said. "Let a jury decide and release all the reports."

Iowa City residents showed up to express their anger about the incident and hear what others had to say.

"Pat White chooses to prosecute those who are vulnerable," Iowa City resident Anne Silander said. "Now in this case, he declines to prosecute someone with the power of the law behind him. We'll continue to have an inequity of justice as long as this continues."

UI sophomore Valentin Potra said he hasn't made up his mind about White's decision yet, but went to the rally to hear others' opinions and learn more.

"This got the issue more pronounced and accentuated it," he said.

Iowa City resident Larry See said he doesn't like the atmosphere the police have created.

"I don't think justice has been served," See said. "I'm not after anybody's head, but I think it's like a police state; that's not what I served my country for."

CREATES WORLD'S LARGEST MEDIA COMPANY Time Warner Inc., Turner merge

Marc Rice Associated Press

NEW YORK — Shareholders of Time Warner and Turner Broadcasting System voted Thursday to approve a $7.5 billion merger that creates the world's largest media company and brings some of the hottest properties and biggest egos in the business under one roof.

Turner

Time Warner Inc. now adds such familiar names as Ted Turner, Fred Flintstone, CNN and the Atlanta Braves to holdings that include Bugs Bunny, HBO and Time magazine.

The deal was announced in September 1995, winning approval after a tough antitrust review by the Federal Trade Commission, a lawsuit from entertainment partner U.S. West Inc. and widespread doubt over Ted Turner's ability to accept a No. 2 role.

In separate meetings in New York, shareholders of the two companies voted overwhelmingly to approve the merger. Turner Broadcasting shareholders voted 99.75 percent in favor; Time Warner shareholders 98.23 percent in favor.

The deal was expected to be completed later Thursday, after the stock market closed.

"This is the company that I've always dreamed of and we are now here, complete, one team and one family," Time Warner chairperson Gerald Levin said.

Turner, who was founder and chairperson of Atlanta-based Turner Broadcasting and now becomes vice chairperson and the largest single shareholder of the merged company, said, "Considering the difficulties we had with this merger... it was quite a job to get it completed."

Later, as his long-time secretary read a final motion to adjourn Turner Broadcasting's final shareholder meeting, a tearful Turner dabbed his eyes with a handkerchief.

The imminent merger sent Time Warner stock up 50 cents a share to $41.62 1/2 in late-afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

It should take about a year to actually combine the numerous, and in some cases overlapping, divisions of the two companies. Time Warner has not said how many people will lose their jobs, but estimates have run as high as 1,200.

"One of the first things is going to be fairly significant layoffs from Turner," said Larry Gerbrandt, an analyst at Paul Kagan Associates Inc., a media research firm. He predicted a "painful transition."

Time Warner and Turner Broadcasting differ in their corporate culture and personality, a contrast reflected in the reserved but ambitious Levin and the loose-lipped, risk-loving Turner.

The company has a host of other matters to grapple with, including a restructuring of its cable partnership with U.S. West, the telephone company that tried to stop the merger.

Time Warner also plans to cut costs and debt to keep its stock price rising. Time Warner is also embroiled in a dispute over its refusal to carry Rupert Murdoch's new Fox News channel over its cable systems. Murdoch is a longtime Turner antagonist, and on Wednesday he filed a $2 billion breach-of-contract suit against Time Warner.

Ted Turner, asked about the suit Thursday, called it "that frivolous piece of junk."

As a condition for approving the merger, federal regulators required Time Warner to carry another news channel, in addition to its own CNN, on some of its cable systems. But the company opted for MSNBC instead of Fox.

Time Warner insisted its decision is legal. Complicating the fight, New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani announced the city would put Murdoch's 24-hour news channel on one of its public access cable stations. Otherwise, the Fox channel would have had only a small portion of the critical New York market.

A Time Warner spokesperson said the company would fight the city's move.

Judge denies Simpson access to documents

Michael Fleeman Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — A judge denied O.J. Simpson's request Thursday for papers linked to Faye Resnick's stay at a drug-treatment center and police documents relating to former Detective Mark Fuhrman.

Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki found

Simpson's lawyers filed their requests for the police papers after a court deadline, and the request for the Resnick documents was moot since they had been destroyed.

The rulings came on a short court day dedicated only to legal motions. Jury selection is on hold until Tuesday in the wrongful death lawsuit against Simpson over the June 1994 slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Simpson's lawyers had sought visitor logs and phone records from the Exodus Recovery Center where Brown Simpson's friend, Resnick, was staying around the time of the killings. The defense wants any record that would support Resnick's claim she called Brown Simpson from the center the night of the slayings.

Students seesaw for charity

Kelley Chorley
The Daily Iowan

Teeter-tottering through the rain, wind and cold, the Delta Tau Delta fraternity and the Delta Gamma sorority aim to raise $4,000 for the 22nd annual March of Dimes Campaign for Healthier Babies.

"The Teeter-Totter-A-Thon is very gratifying," UI junior Cathy Schrupp, a member of the Delta Gamma sorority, said. "To think that if everyone gives a little, great outcomes will happen to someone who really needs it."

The volunteers have been seesawing in front of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity, 322 N. Clinton St., 24-hours-a-day for the last five days.

By the time Sunday rolls around, the volunteers will have teeter-tottered a total of 168 hours. The sorority and fraternity participants receive pledges from neighboring companies, fellow students, alumni, Iowa City residents and their families.

"The Teeter-Totter-A-Thon is very gratifying. To think that if everyone gives a little, great outcomes will happen to someone who really needs it."

UI junior Cathy Schrupp, member of Delta Gamma

"In previous years the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity held the event in front of their house," UI junior Scott Beller, president of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity, said. "After the (Garofalo) tragedy last year, we decided to be nice guys and continue the tradition."

The campaign, which ends Sunday at noon, also features a bike ride to the Capitol in Des Moines.

United States Cellular is sponsoring the first Capitol Ride on Saturday. The ride will start in Altoona, Iowa, at 1 p.m. and end at the steps of the Capitol in Des Moines. Riders will travel approximately 23 miles.

"We wanted to do something different," Linda Gorkow, a United States Cellular representative, said. "We started the ride to help give back to the community and raise money for a non-profit organization."

They planned on including a 140 mile ride, but due to wind difficulties and rider responses, it will be postponed until the summer.

"We have had a positive response, but the timing is bad," Gorkow said. "The 23-mile race will be great, though. Many families are participating."

A T-shirt giveaway and a dinner celebration will take place when the ride is finished. Refreshment stops will be provided as well as a sack lunch for the ride. Registration will be taken up until the day of the race, and the fee is $18.

Ken Coleman offered UI professorship

Jennifer Cassell
The Daily Iowan

Rather than accepting a half-time tenured full professorship by the UI Department of Political Science, Ken Coleman, husband of UI President Mary Sue Coleman, will most likely continue his studies of Latin American politics abroad.

Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations, said because Coleman enjoys his studies in Latin American countries, she doesn't think he will accept a job at the UI.

"I'm not expecting him to join the political science department in the near future," she said.

Coleman, who is currently in Guatemala, was offered the job last fall, but he turned down the position at the time because he had a commitment at the University of New Mexico in the spring. While there, he taught and directed graduate studies in political science.

Mary Sue Coleman said although her husband was appreciative of the UI's offer, he had declined in order to pursue other career options.

This summer, Ken Coleman was approached by United States Aid for International Development to head a team evaluating democracy projects in Guatemala. He will remain in Guatemala City for the next five weeks.

Mary Sue Coleman said she and her husband are excited about this project and see it as a starting point for alternative career possibilities for him.

"This is a new career direction and one that fits very well with our move to Iowa City and both of our interests," Mary Sue Coleman said.

Rhodes said Ken Coleman's knowledge of Latin American politics is the reason he has been offered the professorship, and at the same time, it is probably the reason he has not accepted it.

"Because he is very skilled and well-informed on Latin American culture and government, he has lots of options," Rhodes said.

Ken Coleman's expertise would be beneficial to the UI political science department because despite the large number of interested students, there isn't a professor teaching Latin American politics, department Chairperson John Conybears said.

Conybears said the department hasn't opened the position to other applicants or asked the UI for funding because they are waiting for a response from Ken Coleman.

"We have put off requests for funding in the hopes that he would change his mind," he said.

Conybears said the UI has a policy of placing spouses together at the UI if possible. Yet, he said the offer made to Coleman is not simply because his wife is the UI president.

"We would be happy to have him, regardless of whether he was or was not the president's husband," Conybears said.

Rhodes said having Ken Coleman as an addition to the UI would be important not only to the political science department, but also to the UI as a whole.

"He would add a valuable kind of expertise on an increasingly important part of the world," she said. "And he and Mary Sue would make a terrific team."

PC lawsuits of the future

In the last two weeks, many pundits in the media have expressed amazement as it came to light that 6-year-old Johnathan Prevette and 7-year-old De'Andre Dearing had been severely punished by school officials for "sexual harassment." I wonder, have these people lived in a cave for the last six years or so? Have they not seen political correctness pervade the work place and university campuses? Should it come as any surprise that it is now filtering down to the grade-school level?

As the edicts of political correctness now dictate how children are going to be disciplined, be prepared to see the following headlines and stories in years to come:

1. Youngsters sued by PBS over copyright: Three fourth graders are being sued by PBS for copyright infringement of the Barney the dinosaur song. The fourth graders allegedly changed the Barney song, "I love you, you love me ...", into "I hate you, you hate me, we get along awfully." Attorney B.S. Pyle of the firm Makin, Mountain, Outuv and Molehill, which represents PBS, stated, "This is clearly a violation of copyright law. We're suing to ensure this doesn't happen again. Left unchecked, kids like this grow up to become peddlers of pirated music." No comment yet from DC Comics over the fourth graders' alleged singing of "Jingle bells, Batman smells ..."

2. Boys fined by EPA for burning ants: Two boys were caught last Friday using a magnifying glass to burn ants. Environmental Protection Agency Officer Ty Rany, who caught the boys, said, "It's important these boys receive a stiff fine for burning those ants. Otherwise these kids won't learn respect for things like endangered species and the environment. They'll grow up and want to hunt the spotted owl, or maybe they'll even want to pave Yellowstone!"

3. Three children arrested for playing cowboys and Indians: Police took three boys into custody yesterday who were allegedly playing cowboys and Indians. Police Chief Alan R. Tentive said it was necessary to arrest the boys. "Apparently they were running around with their thumbs and index fingers extended yelling 'Bang, bang! Bang, bang!' It's necessary that we interdict at a young age. Otherwise they grow up to be gun-toting thugs, or worse." When asked what he meant by "worse," Tentive replied, "Card-carrying members of the NRA."

4. Animal-rights activists picket neighborhood house: Members of a local animal-rights group have staged a protest outside the house of John and Jane Smith. Apparently the Smiths' two daughters dressed up their dog and cat in infants' clothing and forced them to attend a tea party. A spokesperson for the group said, "This is cruel and inhumane treatment of animals. In the wild, dogs and cats do not dress up and attend tea parties! We need to protest; otherwise these girls will grow up to steal animals out of the wild!"

5. Secret Service detains classmate of first son: The Secret Service detained and questioned a classmate of the president's fifth-grade son. According to I.M. Serious, a spokesperson for the president, the classmate was taunting the first son by saying, "Your daddy is a liberal! Your daddy is a liberal!" When asked why the classmate was detained, Serious said, "We mustn't let kids like that go unpunished. Otherwise they grow up to yell, 'You suck!' at the president. Or they run for president as Republicans."

All of this, I'm sure, sounds far-fetched. Yet, the political left has had considerable success in recent years in redefining typical, normal behavior as deviant.

And now — surprise, surprise — the left is taking aim at childhood behavior. On ABC news, a professor claimed sexual harassment found its roots in typical juvenile behavior, such as wedgies and bra-snapping. Patricia Ireland of the National Organization for Women backed this up with a comment, the gist of which was such boys deserved their punishment because otherwise they grow up to be sexual harassers themselves. (Really, Ireland? Get a grip!)

So don't be too surprised if some preposterous headlines appear in your morning paper soon. For what was once considered childish games and pranks is now deviant behavior that must be dealt with accordingly. Oh, brave new world!

'Greek' not synonymous with 'gang'

It seems like the only people who complain about the Greek system are the ones not in a fraternity, and therefore those who really do not know what Greek life is all about.

This was evident by the flyers that have been seen around campus likening the Greeks to gang members. This derogatory propaganda states fraternities are similar to gangs in the respect that they wear group insignia (Greek letters), are a banded group that provides brotherhood outside the home, participate in illegal activities (consumption of alcohol under the legal age and other drugs) and a host of other things.

It is easy to refute the simple-minded assault comparing Greeks to gangs. First of all, wearing Greek letters is the same as a political bumper sticker on your car or an athlete wearing their Iowa Football jacket. It shows membership in an upstanding organization.

The second similarity is true — Greek organizations are composed of a group of people bound together in brotherhood or sisterhood. College is in no way meant to be a cakewalk and the benefits of having people there for you when times get tough and parents are not there to comfort you are very important.

... wearing Greek letters is the same as a political bumper sticker on your car or an athlete wearing their Iowa Football jacket. It shows membership in an upstanding organization.

A common response to why a person is not in a fraternity or sorority is "I don't have to buy my friends." Well, joining a Greek organization is not buying your friends because none of the people in the organization receive any money. If they did, then you would be buying friends. And besides, there is no rule that these people have to like you, which is a prerequisite for friendship.

If anyone in a fraternity is caught with illegal drugs on chapter property or at any chapter event, they will most likely be kicked out of the chapter. All sorority houses ban alcohol completely and drugs would call for the person to get the boot for sure.

Joining a fraternity or sorority is a commitment to a group of people in which a person can share college experiences while expanding leadership and social horizons. In addition, they perform services which better the surrounding community coupled with a dedication to academics by maintaining standards in which the university as a whole is not obliged to adhere to.

You would be very hard-pressed to find someone in the Greek system that would turn his or her nose up at someone because they are not in a fraternity or sorority. This cannot be said of non-Greeks, who frequently snip about the Greek system. With that in mind, who are the ones with the attitudes?

The red tape of citizenship status

Sometimes, Americans can forget just how lucky they are. Freedom can take on a totally new meaning if you fall in love with a person from a different country, as over 160,000 people in the United States do each year.

But once you are married, there is nothing to becoming a citizen, right? WRONG! This is a popular myth the mainstream culture likes to submit to.

The reality is paperwork. And lots of it. There are not only tons of various forms to submit, but there are physical exams, interviews, fingerprints, photos and many, many fees. Some people who try to become a citizen cannot afford it.

There is only one thing worse than being subjected to the somewhat-insulting process of becoming a citizen, and that is being a foreign student first. Foreign students use the F-1 visa to study in the United States. Once graduated, students are allowed a year to work in their related field. But those with the F-1 visa must travel to the nearest Immigration and Naturalization Service office (INS) to get permission to work, which for Iowa, is in Omaha.

It is hard to get a job in the first place because employers do not want to hire people who are not able to stay with them. If a student wants to stay longer than a year with an employer, a new visa must be acquired, which is even more difficult to obtain than the F-1.

... once you are married, there is nothing to becoming a citizen, right? WRONG! This is a popular myth the mainstream culture likes to submit to.

While it sounds easy to just fill out these forms and turn them in, it usually takes a very long time, and the INS is very specific about what it needs and will accept. If a foreigner is married to an American, the office requires proof the couple is really married and they are really living together. That proof includes detailed knowledge of everyday life together and photos showing you are just like any other couple.

After marrying an American, the American must petition for his or her new spouse with a form that starts the process of getting a green card. A foreign person who is in the process of becoming a citizen after getting married is considered a "non-immigrant." Through the green card, the foreigner is applying for "immigrant-residence status" (or resident alien).

A green card allows a person all the rights of a citizen except political rights, such as voting or running for an office. After two years is over, a person must submit another form (along with another physical-examination record) and the conditional status is removed (if the person is lucky).

All of this is a time-consuming, tedious process. The people who work in these offices are often unkind and uncaring in the way they treat those who travel from great distances and take great care in trying to become a U.S. citizen. They should be nicer, considering this country was founded by immigrants.

There are people who try to get around the system, the immigrants the media like to show coming in on boats or climbing fences to get into the United States. This is what casts a bad light on the millions of people who are trying to do the right thing while becoming a citizen.

People who live in the United States should remember how lucky they are to have the freedom to go wherever they feel. Thousands of people who are in the process of becoming citizens haven't seen their parents or family for years and can't until they have followed through with the correct procedures the United States has set up for them.

And that can take years to get through.

A story for Coming Out Day

W had been going for walks and talking a lot, and I was enjoying the companionship. My new friend suggested we go to a dance together, and I accepted.

I was a college senior, embodying all the wisdom that stage of life suggests; I was worldly, I was smart, I was an upperclass-person, but never did I suspect, before that dance, I might be falling for this person with dark, probing eyes and mysterious, sensual energy.

Housed in a small cottage on the edge of campus, the dance space was dark and cramped; beer and non-alcoholic punch congealed in sticky puddles on the floor.

Then, she asked me to dance. Swaying to the music, we mimicked each other's movements at first in jest, but then more deliberately, more intensely. Soon, I was having feelings I had never before experienced as I gazed, dumb-founded, at this beautiful woman tracing the motions of my arms in the air with her own. Her eyes seemed to ask a question and mock me at the same time; she seemed to know, somehow, about that tight clench in my stomach, a mix of fear, disbelief and desire.

I needed to go for a walk. Alone. Outside, I took comfort from the large Pennsylvania trees that bent toward me, older and more serene than I would ever be, especially now.

"What if I am gay?" I asked the black, starless sky. This was not supposed to happen. "Can't I just be a liberal and accepting straight person?"

I went back to the dance, told beautiful Ellie goodnight and went to my boyfriend's residence-hall room, where he was studying. "How was the dance?" he asked casually, not moving his eyes from the page's words. I told him it was fine, and I wanted to be alone that night. I went back to my residence-hall room, pulled the covers over my head and thought about Ellie and the knot in my gut.

That week, memories of my life came flooding back to consciousness. There was the time when, around age 11, I sat on my mother's bed and said, "Mom, what if I am a lesbian?" Then there were those feelings I had had for girls that, had those girls been boys, would have surely been called crushes. There was Amanda. I met Amanda when we were both 3 years old. Amanda was always playing with blocks and bricks and was dressing up alternatively as Batman or George Washington. I had never seen a girl like that. She wore denim overalls, loved to get dirty and came to be, as we grew up and into high-school age, the most graceful, strong and determined athlete I had ever seen. I admired her. I doted on her. Surely a crush.

I spent the next few weeks after the dance with Ellie putting together the pieces of my life's puzzle. I read books, went to meetings and talked to Ellie about my discovery. (Of course, I did not share with her that she was the catalyst for my realizations. I think she knew.)

I came out to my parents a few months later. We were on a Philadelphia subway. There are many books and pamphlets providing pieces of advice about how to come out to one's parents, but disclosing such information while underground on moving public transportation is not one of them. Standing and gripping a hanging arm strap, I said, "Mom, dad, there is something I have to tell you. I am bisexual."

Overall, they took it very well, especially my mom, who asked me to send her a book on bisexuality so she could understand me better. A few years later, I was on the phone with her and I said I was going out on a date that night. "Well," my mom said, "I hope you have a very good time with him or her." That is a moment I will never forget.

It has been about eight years since I realized I am not straight, and the coming-out process, which alternates between being smooth and bumpy, is continual. Sometimes, it makes for awkward exchanges, as, for example, when a male lover told me he wished I were straight or when a lesbian partner told her friends I was not "really" bisexual.

But I am. And my truth is I am attracted to souls, not genders, regardless of whether this way is acceptable to any particular community with which I affiliate.

To me, coming out means more than claiming "I am bisexual." Coming out means speaking the truths about my life; it means being as honest with myself as I can.

One does not have to be gay to "come out" to oneself and others; one has only to face one's own truths, whatever those may be. Coming out as who we really are is everyone's challenge.

Why the death penalty doesn't work

Many people are on death row awaiting execution where there is either strong evidence of innocence or evidence that casts serious doubt upon their conviction. Some are there because of their race, some because of their political view and some simply because they are poor. The number of people on death row is growing at the fastest rate in decades. There are currently almost 3,000 people on death row — more than at any other time in U.S. history.

President Clinton's crime bill has added 56 more crimes that are punishable by death. Both parties have created a "get-tough" climate, which can only mean more executions. It's time to take a stand against this barbaric practice.

Group Effort

The death penalty is racist. African-Americans make up 12 percent of the U.S. population, but comprise 40 percent of the prisoners on death row. Although blacks constitute 50 percent of all murder victims, 85 percent of the victims in death-penalty cases are white. Since 1976, only four executions in this country involved a white person being punished for killing a black person.

The death penalty punishes the poor. Over 90 percent of defendants charged with capital crimes cannot afford to hire an experienced criminal defense attorney to represent them. They are forced to use inexperienced, underpaid, court-appointed attorneys. More often than not, crimes committed by the wealthy in the pursuit of wealth go unpunished.

The death penalty condemns the innocent to die. Since 1973, more than 43 people have been released from prison after being sentenced to death, despite their innocence. A recently published book, "In Spite of Innocence," notes that since 1900 there have been 416 documented cases of innocent persons who have been convicted and given a death sentence. The authors discovered that in 23 of these cases, the person was executed. How many more innocent people need to be put to death before we end this brutal practice?

The death penalty is not a deterrent to violent crime. Texas is the state with the highest murder rate and the highest execution rate. From 1982-91, the national crime rate rose 5 percent. In the same time period, the Texas crime rate rose by 24 percent and the violent crime rate in Texas rose by nearly 46 percent. An FBI study shows states that have abolished the death penalty averaged lower murder rates than states that have not.

Finally, the death penalty is cruel and unusual punishment. Eleven states electrocute death-row inmates, four states hang them and two states — Utah and Idaho — retain the firing squad. In 15 of the 29 states where a minimum age for imposing the death penalty is specified, juveniles can be executed. In Indiana, a youth as young as 10 years old can be sentenced to death. The United States shares the distinction of allowing the execution of children with Iran, Iraq and Bangladesh. The Supreme Court has even declared constitutional the execution of mentally disabled people.

We need to expose zealous pro-death penalty advocates. A lot of people really don't care that the death penalty doesn't deter crime. They don't care that it's not applied fairly. They don't care that its application is racist. These people simply want revenge. They are a symptom of the sickness that is eroding our humanity in this society.

State-sanctioned executions only increase the level of violence in our society. If we can point this out and expose the nature of these people, we can turn the tide of public sentiment against the death penalty. We need to build a new activist movement from below. That's where the Campaign to End the Death Penalty comes in. To help end the killing of innocent people, to end the racism in our judicial system and to get America out of a barbaric mindset, we need to organize.

Dole welcomes Powell to campaign

Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Bob Dole welcomed Colin Powell's "vim and vinegar" to the Republicans' lagging White House race on Thursday and kept up his tease that the popular retired general would be "one of the stars" in his administration.

In Dole's largest and most-spirited crowd in weeks, several thousand people jammed downtown Cincinnati's Fountain Square on a bright fall day to hear from the Republican presidential candidate, running mate Jack Kemp and Powell.

"My task, specifically, is to introduce you to a straightforward man who has a straightforward vision for America," Powell said in introducing Dole and saluting the self-described presidential underdog as a fellow soldier.

"He wears proudly the Purple Heart as a daily reminder to him about what fighting for this country is all about," Powell said of Dole.

When asked offstage what Powell brings to the campaign, Dole said, "He's a good friend. He's got vim and vinegar, vitality ... a little excitement, too."

Excitement was what Dole had hoped to generate with his performance against President Clinton in their first debate last week. But with post-debate polls finding Dole's double-digit deficit largely unchanged, he has just one week before the final debate to find a comeback route.

In a striking moment late Wednesday, Dole expressed frustration with his campaign and indicated changes would have to be made quickly. He plans a critical meeting with top aides on Saturday to decide where he'll target his advertising and travel in the final three and a half weeks.

"I don't pay attention once I'm on the road — I'm out of it all day long 12, 14 hours. But we're going to ... take a hard look not only at the electoral maps but everything else," Dole said in a CNN interview.

For weeks, the campaign has hinted it would try to stir enthusiasm by announcing Powell as Dole's pick for secretary of state.

On stage Thursday, with Powell standing behind him, Dole said nothing of the general's place in a future Dole administration. But he told reporters Powell was "going to be one of the stars of our administration."

The idea of announcing Cabinet picks in advance has been discussed within the Dole campaign. But Dole, according to campaign sources, has resisted on grounds it would be viewed as a gimmick born of desperation.

Undecided voter Judy Smallwood, a Cincinnati clerk, said Powell was a "drawing card" for the GOP ticket. But, she added, "that still wouldn't sway me. He's not the one running, and even secretary of state doesn't have much say-so on the stuff I care about in government."

Still, Dole has been eager to involve the former general. Powell has been described by Dole aides as somewhat reluctant to go solo in any prospective Cabinet announcement but willing to be part of a broader list.

Dole lapped up the excitement at Thursday's event, draping his arm around a guitar player with the Jerry Conrad Rhythm and Brass band and singing along to "Dole Man." In his speech, he called Clinton "the Great Exaggerator" for taking credit for a strong economy.

Clinton pushes Internet expansion

Lawrence Knutson
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Envisioning a day when computers are "as much a part of classrooms as blackboards," President Clinton moved Thursday to broaden the sweep of the Internet at 100 universities, national labs and other federal institutions.

Clinton

The president said his ultimate goal is to "revolutionize and democratize" American public education by making computers available regardless of income, ethnicity or social status.

Clinton said his administration will push for $100 million in federal financing in 1998 to begin a five-year project to expand the Internet's capabilities. Aides said the cost for the full five years would be about $500 million if approved by Congress.

"Everything ages, and the Internet is straining under its growing popularity," the president said, noting the global information network began a generation ago as a Defense Department system.

"It is now time to invest in the next generation of Internet," he said.

Clinton began his campaign day in Knoxville by extending congratulations to his running mate, Vice President Al Gore, on his Wednesday night debate with Republican Jack Kemp.

"It's nice to be in Knoxville riding on Al Gore's coattails," Clinton said. "Mr. Kemp is finding out something I learned a long time ago. It's better not to get on the other side of an argument with Al Gore. Last night it was Al Gore who sacked the quarterback."

Clinton was heading out to two other battleground states, Ohio and Kentucky, with rallies planned in Dayton and Louisville. Setting out his goal to see every American classroom linked to the Internet, Clinton said, "I want to see the day when computers are as much a part of classrooms as blackboards."

He added he wants a "service fund" financed by telephone companies so all schools and libraries can receive free access to the Internet.

Introducing Clinton at the Knoxville Civic Coliseum, Gore called the president's Internet initiative "a true milestone on this road to the future."

One of the facilities that would benefit is the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Gore's home state. To drive home the link, Clinton and Gore were backed on stage by the class of 2001 from Jefferson Middle School in Oak Ridge as well as students from Halls High School in Knox County.

The Oak Ridge lab, long a center of U.S. nuclear weapons production and energy research and the state's fourth largest employer, has been hit with post-Cold War budget and job cuts. The Republican Party platform advocates eliminating the Energy Department, which finances Oak Ridge.

Gore said he and Clinton "will not let that happen."

In Knoxville, the president was joined by computer and communications industry executives who are promoting financing of a project that eventually would connect every American school and library to the Internet.

Under Clinton's $500 million Internet expansion plan, the targeted 100 universities and other institutions — including Oak Ridge — would be able to access the Internet at speeds 100 to 1,000 times faster than is currently possible.

While leading Dole by wide margins in national polls, Clinton is not allowing himself to coast.

"This president always campaigns in a fashion that would suggest he doesn't believe the polls," said White House spokesperson Mike McCurry.

Tennessee, Ohio and Kentucky hold 40 of the 270 electoral votes the president needs to win reelection. Clinton carried all three states four years ago.

"Everything ages, and the Internet is straining under its growing popularity."

CAMPAIGNING

Home state gives Gore rave reviews

Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Like a schoolboy sporting straight A's, Vice President Al Gore basked in the reviews of his debate performance and proudly brought the president to his home state Thursday.

Gore

"It's nice to be in Knoxville, riding along Al Gore's coattails," President Clinton joked before a crowd assembled at the Knoxville Auditorium Coliseum.

Gore even looked presidential. He arrived before Clinton at the airport and discreetly climbed aboard Air Force One. This way, he and Clinton walked down the plane's steps together rather than meet on the tarmac.

In his remarks later, he made almost no mention of the vice presidential face-off but did say, "Last night Jack Kemp and I debated the future; this morning Bill Clinton and I are building the future."

Their campaign stop focused on administration proposals to further the creation of high-speed communications networks that would expand access to educational and other information.

It was Gore's 11th visit of the campaign to his home state, this time in a normally Republican area. Clinton won Tennessee in 1992, and Gore is determined to keep the state in the Democratic column.

According to polls taken immediately after the debate, sizable majorities said Gore won or did better than Republican Kemp.

A sign on the stage in Knoxville agreed: "There's no debate about it: Vice President Gore."

Putting it in football terms, as former pro football star Kemp often does, Clinton said, "Last night it was Al Gore who sacked the quarterback."

But GOP strategist John Sears, in an interview on ABC, suggested Kemp's day would come.

"I think it's entirely possible that Vice President Kemp will take on former Vice President Gore sometime in the future," Sears said.

For all the reviews, vice presidential debates generally have little effect on presidential elections.

Democratic strategist James Carville said he didn't see an "immediate bulge. ... We feel pretty good going on to San Diego," the site of next Wednesday's final presidential debate, he said.

Lumber company appeals same-sex sexual harassment case

Robin Estrin
Associated Press

BOSTON — The boys-will-be-boys theory of play may have reached its outer limit at a Massachusetts lumber yard.

There, according to a sexual-harassment case before the state's highest court, three men say two male supervisors constantly subjected them to raunchy comments and gestures. The company argues the case isn't sexual harassment because all the men involved are heterosexual.

Same-sex sexual harassment is an issue courts around the country have been forced to address, and they have reached conflicting conclusions that ultimately may have to be resolved by the U.S. Supreme Court.

This is the first time the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court has taken up the issue.

In 1989 and 1990, Leonid Melynchenko, James Quill and Stephen LaRochelle, all now in their early 30s, worked at a West Springfield branch of the national chain 84 Lumber Co. All three eventually quit.

The men they accused, Richard Raab and Eliasel Roque, were fired after the allegations were raised.

The employees sued the company, and a state judge awarded each $75,000 in 1993 on the grounds of sexual harassment.

Judge Daniel Ford ruled the men's sexual orientation was irrelevant and the real issue was the "intimidating, hostile, humiliating and sexually offensive work environment."

"When it comes to how men treat women for the most part now, people get it that men aren't supposed to be asking women for sex to keep their jobs. We think the same rules should apply when it's a man against a man."

Mary Bonauto, lawyer with Gay & Lesbian Advocates & Defenders

Among other things, the employees said Raab grabbed their genitals, fondled their buttocks, exposed himself to them and asked for sexual favors. Raab announced over the lumber yard's loudspeaker Quill had given him sexual favors, and he taunted Quill's girlfriend, according to court documents.

Two of the employees claimed to be so psychologically damaged they ended up in therapy.

The lumber company, which is based near Pittsburgh, said it doesn't condone such behavior but 84 Lumber would be liable for same-gender sexual harassment only if gay men had harassed heterosexual men, or vice-versa.

"It's locker-room conduct" and the victims have a case under workers' compensation law, but it's not sexual harassment, said Jay Presser, one of the company's lawyers.

He said sexual discrimination laws should be "aimed at enhancing the opportunities for people who have traditionally not been in the workplace."

Lawyers for the three employees said the case is clearly sexual harassment, no matter what the sexual orientation or gender of those involved.

The lumber company "would want you to believe that this is the kind of stuff guys do," said the employees' lawyer Timothy Ryan, who argued the case before the high court Wednesday.

Massachusetts law defines sexual harassment as any unwelcome sexual advances or requests for sexual favors, and makes no distinction for gender.

Federal law also makes no gender distinctions, but federal judges have arrived at differing decisions as to whether someone can be sexually harassed by a person of the same sex, said Elizabeth Bartholet, who teaches employment discrimination at Harvard Law School.

Mary Bonauto, a lawyer with Gay & Lesbian Advocates & Defenders, said she fears same-sex harassment cases will turn into witch hunts if they are permitted to hinge on the sexual preference of those involved.

"When it comes to how men treat women for the most part now, people get it that men aren't supposed to be asking women for sex to keep their jobs," said Bonauto, who filed a friend-of-the-court brief in favor of the employees. "We think the same rules should apply when it's a man against a man."

Danger of higher speed limits debated

Randolph Schmid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Since the federal government let states raise highway speed limits last winter, at least eight states that did so have seen increases in highway deaths, an AP survey found.

Yet, four other states that raised limits actually saw fatal accidents drop slightly.

The conflicting statistics have led the American Automobile Association and the government's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to caution it's too soon to draw firm conclusions. Many states, for instance, have yet to gather data since raising speed limits.

Many troopers out on the roads, however, echo Utah Highway Patrol Lt. Robert Flowers, who said he is seeing more damage from high-speed crashes.

"It opens vehicles up. Doors come off, windows come in," Flowers said.

A little more than half the states have increased limits on at least some highways since Congress ended the federal cap of 55 miles per hour — 65 mph on rural interstates.

Before the change, highway leaths had been increasing for the previous three years, highway safety groups note.

And the increases that have occurred since might be attributable to reasons besides higher speeds, including bad weather or higher rates of drunken driving.

Many officials estimate it could take up to three years to get good data. Yet in some cases, the increases are startling and are worrying state officials.

Early counts show highway deaths up in Alabama, California, Missouri, Nevada, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Texas.

Missouri highway patrol spokesperson Lt. Ron Beck said officials simply don't know if the

"I haven't seen a great change in people's driving habits. Many drove right around 70, even with 55 limit. Now that it has been raised to 65, people are still hovering right around 70."

California Highway Patrol Officer Hector Marquez

jump is because of higher speed limits, now 70 on rural freeways and 60 on city interstates.

But Oklahoma Lt. Gerald Davidson has no doubts. Since his state raised limits to 70 mph on most interstates and 65 mph in urban areas, speed has been a factor in 30 percent to 33 percent of traffic deaths, up from 20 percent before.

On the other hand, fewer people died in Florida, Massachusetts, Montana and Utah despite higher speed limits on significant numbers of roads.

Massachusetts officials attribute the drop to enforcement of seat-belt and drunken-driving laws.

Several states still are mulling whether to raise limits. Others, like Michigan, have increased the limits in just a few selected areas as a test.

While the death toll has varied, one thing seems clear: Raising the speed limit means more people can drive legally.

California Highway Patrol Officer Hector Marquez patrols a busy stretch of Interstate 5 near Sacramento.

"I haven't seen a great change in people's driving habits," he said. "Many drove right around 70, even with 55 limit. Now that it has been raised to 65, people are still hovering right around 70."

But Flowers said he sees an increase in damage since the speed limit was boosted to 75 mph on most rural freeways and 65 mph in cities.

Under the old limit of 65 mph on rural freeways, a car would roll over one or two times, he said. But now, cars roll as many as seven-eight times, he believes.

When debate over the speed limit swirled through Congress, Montana and Nevada were often singled out as places likely to see increases in speeding and deaths.

In Nevada in the first six months of this year, 167 people lost their lives in accidents, 20 more than at the end of June 1995. The speed limit was boosted to 75.

But the fact that Nevada's population is booming may account for some of that.

"With the massive growth in our state, you're going to have more accidents," said Gordon Absher, spokesperson for the Department of Motor Vehicles and Public Safety.

Montana also is a special case. When the federal limit disappeared, Montana reverted to its old law, which specifies only a "reasonable and prudent" speed during daytime. Nighttime limits are 65 on interstates, 55 on other roads.

The result?

As of Sept. 30 the state had recorded 152 deaths, down from 165 in the same period a year ago.

For 85 percent of drivers in Montana, average speeds are about 75 mph on interstates and 65 mph on two-lane highways, said traffic safety administrator Al Goke. That's only about 2 mph faster than under the old limits.

But among the other 15 percent of drivers, many are really ripping with cars topping 100 mph.

Montana authorities stress "reasonable and prudent" is not the same as no limit.

In late July, troopers ticketed 15 Mercedes-Benz test drivers for dri-for all.

It's that simple.

Lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people have had heroic roles in making this a free nation from the beginning. As teachers, statesmen, writers, parents, and soldiers, we have stood shoulder-to-shoulder with others to ensure liberty. Still, lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people are denied rights of citizenship most take for granted. Equal rights are not special rights. We honor and celebrate those who fight for justice and look forward to that day when all U.S. citizens are considered equal, a day when all our brothers and sisters will feel safe in placing their names on this page.

New study shows cholesterol plays critical early role in embryo formation

Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Cholesterol may be a heart-disease villain in adults, but researchers say the fatty substance has to be present when cells are just starting to form a new life.

A study to be published today in the journal Science shows cholesterol is an important part of the process that forms organs, tissues and body structures in an embryo, the very earliest stage of life development.

"Cholesterol has an absolutely essential role," said Dr. Philip Beachy, a researcher at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore. "It is required for normal embryo formation."

The finding doesn't mean women who are pregnant, or hope to be, should go on a high-fat diet, said

Beachy. The use of cholesterol in the formation of an embryo occurs very early, usually weeks before a woman would know she was pregnant, he said. Also, the body makes its own cholesterol and needs no dietary help for embryo formation, he said.

But the research does shed light on the workings of a protein called hedgehog, which acts as a sort of supervisor in the construction of a new body. The hedgehog group of proteins turn on genes that cause cells to specialize in the formation of arms, legs, backbone and other body structures in an embryo.

Beachy said studies in his lab using fruit flies show cholesterol helps to split hedgehog into two types of proteins and then anchors one of the hedgehog proteins to cell membranes. This action helps control the concentration of hedgehog proteins at a specific cell site, he said.

Though the experiments at Hopkins used fruit flies, the basic biological findings apply to other animals, including humans, that require hedgehog genes for embryo formation, he said.

Beachy said the finding has no direct medical application, but does offer an explanation for Smith-Lemli-Opitz syndrome, a disorder that blocks the body's ability to make cholesterol and can include serious birth defects. This syndrome affects about one in every 9,000 babies.

In adults, high concentrations of cholesterol in the blood have been linked to a type of heart disease caused by the formation of plaques that block or restrict blood flow in

Panel of experts disclaim Gulf War Syndrome

Associated Press
WASHINGTON — A prestigious panel of private medical experts said there is no evidence to link service in the Persian Gulf War with a group of ailments that have come to be known as Gulf War Syndrome.

The committee of 18 scientists, physicians and epidemiologists convened by the Institute of Medicine, an arm of the National Academy of Sciences, issued its final report Wednesday.

Its core finding — there is no firm evidence of a link between possible chemical exposure in the Persian Gulf region and resulting illness to military personnel who served there — echoes the findings of a number of other government studies.

However, the 140-page report comes at a time when increasing attention is being paid to government revelations that more troops than originally believed could have been exposed to traces of nerve gas after the destruction of Iraqi chemical weapons.

Even as it acknowledges the possibility of some exposure, however, the Pentagon is nowhere near ready to link low-level exposure to chemical weapons to a specific illness.

The Institute of Medicine said in its report Wednesday a review of various studies among clusters of veterans who reported similar symptoms of joint pain and stiffness, fatigue and mood disorders, gastrointestinal problems and sleeplessness showed they were no more prone to such ailments than other members of the military.

"Although these outbreak studies were successful in demonstrating a common pattern of perceived health problems across a range of military units deployed to the Gulf, they were not successful in demonstrating that these symptoms occurred at a higher rate ... than among veterans who did not serve in the Gulf or that these symptoms could be linked to specific medical diagnoses or exposures," it said.

However, the committee said the military needs to improve the way it keeps medical records to make researching such matters easier and it "recognizes that studies provided thus far do not comprise a comprehensive scientific investigation of the health consequences of (Gulf) service."

In a statement accompanying the report, John Bailar, chairperson of the department of health studies at the University of Chicago as well as chairperson of the advisory committee, said, "The recent confirmation that at least some American troops were exposed to chemical weapons heightens our obligation to soldiers and their families to provide investigators with an atmosphere most conducive to proper research."

The committee's report raised the ironic possibility that the relative lack of casualties and life-threatening wounds suffered during the Gulf deployment may have focused attention on symptoms that would have gone largely overlooked in other wars with more severe losses of life and limb.

"Puzzling reactions and symptoms seen during and after prior conflicts may have been incorrectly attributed to battle casualties and infectious diseases that were considered unavoidable and even relatively acceptable outcomes of war," the committee wrote. "Thus, the lower prevalence of battle injuries and infections in the Gulf theater may have unmasked psychophysiological symptoms that were present in earlier conflicts but attributed to injury and casualty."

Meanwhile, the Pentagon and Veterans Affairs Department continue to grapple with how to deal with health benefits for Gulf veterans complaining of a range of undiagnosed symptoms.

"There's the potential we would either identify some new clinical entity not yet characterized or a traditional disease that may be related to their service in the Gulf," said VA spokesperson Terry Jemison. In either case, the VA would provide free treatment and, potentially, disability payments for sufferers.

A law enacted last year enabled the VA to pay disability benefits to Gulf War veterans suffering from undiagnosed illnesses. So far, though, 26,000 Gulf War veterans receive compensation for known ailments or injuries while only about 550 are receiving payments under the new law, Jemison said. That's among a total of nearly 700,000 who served.

The Pentagon, CIA, VA and a host of outside health organizations continue to investigate various aspects of Gulf War illnesses. However, those who blame medical ailments on their Gulf service want action, not more study.

"I did my time, I served my country, yet the Veterans Administration does not recognize anything," Wallace Heath of Tampa, Fla., testified Wednesday in Tampa before a presidential advisory committee that is studying Gulf War illnesses. "We need help. We need answers."

Jeffrey Ford, an Army combat engineer from Kansas City, Mo., was with the 82nd Airborne Division unit that destroyed three large caches of Iraqi weapons suspected of containing chemicals.

Violence warnings delay opening of mosque in Israel

Dafna Linzer
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Muslim clerics delayed opening a new prayer hall in the Al Aqsa Mosque compound Thursday, sidestepping — for now — confrontation over the most sensitive spot in the Israeli-Arab conflict.

The decision may provide only a temporary reprieve.

Jewish extremists who want control of the compound, known to Jews as the Temple Mount, have asked the Supreme Court to block the opening of the mosque altogether. A Muslim religious leader said there would be "massacres" should Israel decide to interfere in plans for the prayer hall.

The site's potential for sparking violence was demonstrated last month when Israel opened a tourist tunnel there, setting off three days of rioting and Palestinian-Israeli gun battles that claimed 79 lives.

The new mosque — an underground vault known as "Solomon's Stables" — is part of the Al Aqsa compound, which is the third-holiest site of Islam and called the Noble Sanctuary in Arabic. It is built on the site of the Jewish Temple, destroyed by the Romans in A.D. 70. The last remnant of the Temple, the Western Wall, is Judaism's holiest shrine.

Hassan Tahboub, minister of religious affairs in Yasser Arafat's self-rule government, warned of new violence if Israel tried to stop the project.

"If they want to interfere in the mosque, there will be massacres. If they don't interfere, it will be quiet," Tahboub said in an interview Thursday.

Islamic authorities insist Israel has no say in running the holy site. But they said Thursday the new prayer hall, to be called the Marwani Mosque, would not open this weekend as first announced, and renovations may take more than a week longer.

Yehuda Etzion, who heads the radical Jewish group "Hai Vekayam," or "Living and Present," petitioned the Supreme Court last month seeking a halt to the construction work.

Etzion believes the site should belong just to the Jews and opposes any Muslim presence on the Mount. "The Wakf (Islamic Authority) ... has no right to be there," he said.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Hopes for peace vanish with capture of bombing suspect

Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Detectives interrogated a Belfast man Thursday in connection with the Irish Republican Army attack on the British army headquarters that returned bombing to Northern Ireland.

Police arrested the man at dawn in Poleglass, a vast Catholic neighborhood three miles north of Thiepval Barracks, the key army installation struck Monday by two car bombs. He can be held for up to a week without being charged.

Detectives released photos Wednesday of the three cars used in the attack: two Volvos, each packed with more than 600 pounds of explosives, and a Volkswagen Passat getaway car that was later torched in Poleglass.

It was the first IRA bombing in the British-ruled province since May 1994, and threatened to provoke pro-British paramilitary groups to break their own two-year truce. The IRA ended its cease-fire in February, but previously restricted bombings to England and a British base in Germany.

A cross-community group, Women Together, meanwhile, was organizing a peace rally for today outside Belfast City Hall, the spot associated with the emotional high point of the peace process — President Clinton's jubilant address last November.

Women Together coordinator Anne Carr said she hoped "the silent majority" would gather to "demand an immediate end to this nightmare."

Hawks concerned about Indiana

Wayne Drehs
 The Daily Iowan

Despite being last place in the Big Ten Conference, the Indiana Hoosiers are a team Iowa head coach Hayden Fry worries about. "On film, it is hard to figure out how they lost (to Illinois in overtime)," Fry said. "To say we are concerned about their team would be an understatement."

What concerns Iowa most is Indiana tailback Alex Smith, who leads the Big Ten in rushing with 137.6 yards per game. "Alex Smith, pound-for-pound is probably the best running back in the country," Fry said. "He's a big Tim Dwight with that extra heart-beat. He's as hard of a running back that I've seen in the Big Ten."

Stopping the run has been a problem this season for the Iowa defense. The Hawkeyes are No. 8 in the Big Ten in rushing defense, giving up an average of 145.8 yards per game.

Last week, Michigan State ran for 236 yards against the Iowa defense, minus a tailback of Smith's caliber. "We didn't do the best we could last week, but we put out a win and that's the bottom line, so I can't complain," defensive back Damien Robinson said.

As well as Indiana runs the ball, its passing game struggles. Senior Chris Dittoe is the starter, but freshman Jay Rodgers has seen time as well. The two currently rank No. 11 and No. 12 in the Big Ten for passing efficiency.

"Dittoe has some great games and some really bad games," Fry said. "Rodgers gives them another dimension of running the option. That has given us some trouble so we'll have to prepare for that this week."

The wideouts the pair of Indiana QBs will be throwing to are led by junior Dorian Wilkerson and senior Ajamu Stoner.

"Wilkerson is one of the top receivers in the Big Ten," Fry said. "And that Stoner kid has always been tremendous for them. They have opened up their offense and truly have a lot of weapons."

On the defensive side of the ball, the Hoosiers are also something of a mystery. They rank No. 2 in the Big Ten in total defense, but gave up 46 points to Illinois last week.

Iowa tight end Chris Knipper believes that game is deceiving in showing Indiana's quality. "Their defense is really impressive," Knipper said. "It is one of the Iowa's Jess Settles is surrounded by the media as he discusses his decision to return to Iowa for his senior season.

Questions surround Hawkeye hoops

What a great guy Jess Settles is. Always charismatic and amusing in front of the media, Settles can make any media day an enjoyable event. And he doesn't hold a grudge, either. He said he understands all the negative print he received suggesting he stay in school.

"I never took any of it personally," Settles said. "I respect everybody's opinion, whether they were negative or positive."

But the best thing about Settles is that he has kept hope alive for those surrounding the Iowa men's basketball team this season.

Mike Triplett

What could have been one giant question mark is now Settles, Andre Woolridge and a bunch of little question marks.

Iowa coach Tom Davis made an excellent point during his media day press conference Thursday. He pointed out that, yes, Settles and Woolridge will be further along when practice starts Tuesday than they were a year ago, riddled with injuries. However, with the youth that makes up the rest of the Hawkeyes' depth, Iowa will be behind as a whole.

NFL
Bears' Cox fined for obscene gesture, will take NFL to court

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Chicago Bears linebacker Bryan Cox said he will sue the NFL after being fined $87,500, or the equivalent of one game's pay, on Thursday for his on-field misconduct in last Sunday's game against Green Bay.

Cox was fined for verbally abusing field judge Bill Smith, making repeated obscene gestures at the official and shouting obscenities.

Tagliabue also threatened Cox with a suspension "of at least one game" for any future misconduct detrimental to the league.

Cox said he will not appeal the decision, but he plans to file a lawsuit claiming unfair treatment and "excessive fines."

"We're going straight to court," said Cox, whose eight fines in six years total $125,500. "I'm not upset, mad or bitter. I'll let the lawyers take over."

Cox claimed it was clear Tagliabue arrived at the fine amount based largely on Cox's checkered past.

Dodgers sign Russell to manage for two years

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Russell, who succeeded Tom Lasorda as the Los Angeles Dodgers manager at midseason, will hold the job for at least two more years.

Russell, who played for the Dodgers from 1970-86 and was their starting shortstop for most of that time, becomes only the third manager of the team in 43 years.

"It's a great day," a choked-up Russell said today at a packed Dodger Stadium news conference. "I feel very fortunate to follow Walter Alston, Tommy Lasorda. I just hope I can do my share, to carry on the tradition."

"We went to the postseason this year. That's not good enough. Our ultimate goal is to get to the World Series."

Terms of Russell's contract were not announced. The Los Angeles Times reported today it was worth about $700,000.

The Dodgers also announced they were retaining the entire coaching staff and adding former Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia as bench coach.

Russell, 47, served as the team's bench coach for 2½ seasons before succeeding Lasorda June 25 — a day after Lasorda was hospitalized with what turned out to be a mild heart attack.

Settles happy about returning to Hawkeyes

Mike Triplett
 The Daily Iowan

For the first time since deciding to return for his senior season at the University of Iowa, Hawkeye forward Jess Settles opened up in front of the media Thursday.

"Where have you guys been all summer?" Settles asked kidding to kick off the Iowa men's media day at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

It was actually Settles who was elusive during the summer break after backing out of the NBA Draft. But Thursday, Settles explained the reasons behind his change of heart.

"I was looking for a specific guarantee for a specific situation with a couple specific teams," Settles explained. "I had some pretty decent deals even into the second round and I almost went on a few of them. But I just didn't feel right about them. And I knew that coming back here would be better for me and this is where my heart was."

Settles didn't have a bad NBA experience, just a bad performance at the pre-draft camp in Chicago.

When he announced he would leave school early, he was under the strong impression that he would be selected within the first 25 picks of the NBA Draft. After a subpar camp performance, he knew that was no longer a likely scenario.

"Looking back, I probably shouldn't have gone to the camp," Settles said. "You play three or four years, then you go into the camp and none of that matters."

"I think it worked out for the best, though. If I hadn't gone to the camp, I don't know how it would have worked out, but I probably wouldn't be standing here today."

Settles said, in retrospect, the camp was a bad idea because he didn't have much of an opportunity to improve his stock. Instead, his camp performance dropped his stock.

"It's a situation where the top 20, 25 guys,

ATLANTA — Not so fast, Atlanta Braves.

Gary Gaetti hit a game-breaking grand slam off Greg Maddux in the seventh inning and the St. Louis Cardinals startled the Braves 8-3 Thursday night, evening the NL championship series at one win apiece.

Not only did the Cardinals become the first team to solve Atlanta's awesome pitching in the playoffs — and extend Maddux's string of spotty October starts — they also ended the Braves' eight-game home winning streak in the postseason.

"A lot of people have seen Atlanta play in the postseason. Not as many people have seen us play," Cardinals manager Tony La Russa said. "A lot of people don't know

"I know they had a winning streak going. Now, we got a mark," he said. "The series looks a lot different going to St. Louis."

The Cardinals took away the home-field edge in the best-of-7 series, which now shifts to Busch Stadium for the next three games. The Braves went 6-0 at St. Louis this season, and the Cardinals will try to reverse that trend Saturday when Donovan Osborne starts against Tom Glavine.

"It's better than 0-2," Gaetti said after the split. "We got something to prove against these guys this year. They swept us at home."

IOWA FIELD HOCKEY

No. 2 Hawks host pair of Michigan teams

Chuck Blount
 The Daily Iowan

Judging from the national rankings, the pollsters believe the No. 2 Iowa field hockey team is the best the Big Ten has to offer. If that is the case, Iowa will have the opportunity to utilize that stamp this weekend when the Hawkeyes host Michigan and Michigan State.

These games will mark the end of Iowa's first pass of conference action and should hold strong indication of the final outcome.

Current Big Ten standings have the Hawkeyes sitting in sole first place. With the league's only perfect record (3-0), Iowa has a one-game lead over Ohio State (3-1) and two-game leads over Penn State, Michigan and Michigan State.

A poor weekend could put Iowa back into the middle of the race. A good one could make them nearly untouchable.

Iowa (10-1, 3-0 Big Ten) will host Michigan (5-4, 1-2) today at 4 p.m., to kick off the weekend slate. Michigan comes to town fresh off its biggest win of the season, defeating No. 11 Michigan State, 4-3.

First-year Michigan head coach

Maricia Pankratz will have a chance to take a shot at her former team. Pankratz was an all-American at Iowa, playing from 1982-86. This past summer, she participated in the Atlanta Olympics on the field hockey U.S. National Team.

In past experiences, Iowa has proven to be an insurmountable opponent for the Wolverines. The Hawkeyes hold a remarkable 31-0 series lead. However, being a coach, Beth Beglin still maintains her guard.

"I expect we will have to play well against the Wolverines," Beglin said. "Michigan is a bit of an unknown because they have a new coaching staff. They are also riding a two-match winning streak, including that impressive win over Michigan State."

The weekend's main event will happen Sunday when Michigan State (8-2, 1-2) and Iowa tangle heads at 4 p.m. After defeating quality teams in Penn State, Ball State and Syracuse the Spartans have earned their billing.

Like their state rivals, the Spartans have been dealt a doughnut in former competition with the "Jess' position is pretty well determined and Andre's position is pretty well determined, but beyond that, everything is pretty much up in the air," Davis said.

One need look no further than an Iowa roster to come up with a bevy of questions about this year's Hawkeye squad:

Will freshmen Jeff Walker and Guy Rucker start at Iowa's two top need positions, the two-guard and center?

Will juniors Kent McCausland and Greg Helmers finally step up into impact roles and keep the freshmen out of the starting lineup?

The only constant in the Iowa lineup, outside of its seniors, is junior Ryan Bowen.

"Ryan Bowen is kind of the x-factor. He can play, literally, four different positions, he's so versatile," Davis said.

"It could be Greg Helmers. It could be someone you don't really expect. It could be Kent McCausland."

No offense to either Helmers or McCausland, both of whom have given solid performances either in Iowa games or in the summer loaded the bases with two outs on an intentional walk to Brian Jordan.

Gaetti spoiled that strategy, and the entire evening for the sellout crowd of 52,067, by lining the next pitch over the fence in left-center.

"I thought he would work his way out of it," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "That was going to be his last inning."

By the end of the game, the stadium was about half-full. Then again, it was full at the start, compared to the 3,000 empty seats for Game 1.

For Gaetti, who led Minnesota to an improbable World Series championship over St. Louis in 1987, it was his third hit of this postseason, two of them homers. The slam gave the victory to Todd Stottlemyre, who was 0-3 against Atlanta this year.

For Maddux, it marked another tough time in the fall. Despite four straight Cy Young Awards, he is just 5-4 with a 4.14 ERA in 11 career starts in the postseason.

One of those victories came in this year's opening-round sweep of Los Angeles.

Even though Maddux was charged with just three earned runs, it was surprising the Cardinals scored so many. Maddux was 6-0 with an 0.79 ERA in his last eight outings against St. Louis.

The Cardinals came out with a plan, trying to steal bases and hit to the opposite field. Yet it was the first home run of the series that broke open the game.

With the score 3-1, Mike Gallego led off the seventh with a single that nearly hit Maddux in the head, the ball deflecting off the glove of the seven-time Gold Glove winner for a single.

La Russa, criticized for not ordering a bunt in the seventh inning of a tie game Wednesday night, asked pinch-hitter Mark Sweeney to sacrifice.

Sweeney popped up his bunt, which Jones trapped with a dive. Jones threw over little second baseman Mark Lemke covering first, putting runners at second and third and setting up the big inning.

Jones left the game later with an injured foot, hurt on that key play.

tops in the Big Ten and in the nation."

The key to beating the Indiana defense is big plays. Indiana gave up runs of 23 and 50 yards, and a TD pass of 65 yards in a loss to Northwestern, and a TD run of 67 yards, along with TD passes of 26, 29 and 66 yards to the Fighting Illini.

Michigan State has taken the national scene by storm. Usually the Spartans aren't mentioned

Thus far, the Hawkeyes have had 14 plays from scrimmage that have gained at least 20 yards. Four of them have been for touchdowns.

Hawkeyes. Iowa's 31-0-1 mark has been threatened on occasion, including a tight contest a year ago.

"I don't think that anyone on the team or staff forgets that they had us down 1-0 with less than two minutes remaining in the game last year," Begin said.

Michigan State has taken the national scene by storm. Usually the Spartans aren't mentioned among the top-20 NCAA field hockey teams, but head coach Michele Madison seems to be reversing that trend.

"Michigan State has really turned things around this year, which many expected," Begin said.

"They are a dangerous team with their speed and corner batteries. We played well last weekend and we must maintain that consistency to do well."

that know it's going to happen, don't play," Settles explained. "I've always felt that I've done a lot better going up against somebody when I'm the underdog. When those guys weren't there, there weren't very many guys I could pass up."

Instead, Settles was playing against a mix of players at or below his projected level. And when they outplayed him, they moved in front of him.

Still, Settles said he didn't completely back down from his NBA dreams. He thought there may have been an ideal opportunity with a team that might draft him in the second round.

"I figured if you go out as a junior, you want to go out in the first round," Settles said. "But maybe you go in the second round to a team that's rebuilding and could really use you, or maybe go to a great city. So I didn't just give up."

"I weighed those options and I thought hard about doing it."

Eventually, Settles came to the conclusion that Iowa City was the place for him. He said the decision was very difficult, but he's happy with it.

And now he's spending his time with his fellow Hawkeyes instead of fighting for a roster spot with an NBA squad — a spot he's confident he could earn.

"Not to be cocky or anything, but I feel confident that I could help a team. It was the same coming here — I mean, nobody expected me to come in here and be an all-conference player," Settles said.

Next year, Settles will likely have the chance to prove his worth with an NBA team. And the second time around will be a lot easier now that Settles has been around the block.

Settles was rattling off salary figures and contract restrictions as if he himself was an agent Thursday. He not only knows that end of the business, but he feels familiar with the so-called "ugly side" of the NBA as well.

"I don't have any hard feelings toward it," he said. "You hear all these things about the players and the people and how it's run. I never got that impression. I liked it. And I liked the people I talked to."

Including the agents, Settles said that even the agents he was close to signing with were helpful and concerned, telling Settles it is wise for an underclassman to wait.

"They have such a bad reputation, but I didn't really see it that way," Settles said. "None of them wanted to put me in jeopardy."

Nice as they may be, the agents and the NBA will have to take a backseat for a little while. Settles is back in school.

"Nothing beats going to class," Settles said.

SERIES KNOTED AT A GAME A PIECE

Palmeiro homer leads Orioles over Yanks

Tom Withers
Associated Press

NEW YORK — There were no 12-year-olds to foul things up for the Orioles this time.

Rafael Palmeiro hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning Thursday, lifting Baltimore to a 5-3 victory over the New York Yankees to even the American League championship series at one win apiece.

Palmeiro's shot to right-center off loser Jeff Nelson snapped a 2-2 tie and gave the Orioles a reason to celebrate less than 24 hours after a possible win in Game 1 was stolen away by a 12-year-old Yankee fan.

The youngster, Jeff Maier, had leaned over the right-field wall and interfered with Orioles' outfielder Tony Tarasco in the eighth inning of Wednesday's game, turning a routine flyout into a game-tying homer by Derek Jeter. The Yankees went on to win the game 5-4 in 11 innings.

Maier brought his glove to the game again, but sat with his family behind the Yankees' dugout and could only watch Palmeiro's drive sail over the wall along with 56,432 others.

The best-of-7 series shifts to Baltimore's Camden Yards for Game 3 on Friday night. Jimmy Key will start for the Yankees against Mike Mussina.

With the score tied 2-2, Roberto Alomar doubled down the left-field line with one out in the seventh off Nelson. Palmeiro, who went 3-for-3 with a homer in Game 1, followed by hitting a 3-1 pitch over the wall in right-center.

Baltimore starter David Wells pitched out of serious trouble in the fifth and sixth innings before leaving with runners at first and second in the seventh. Wells gave up eight hits over 6 2-3 innings for the win, raising his career record at Yankee Stadium to 10-1.

Todd Zeile also homered for the Orioles, who set a major-league record with 257 homers in the regular season and have continued their long-ball barrage in the postseason. Palmeiro's shot was Baltimore's 13th in six playoff games.

The Yankees cut it to 4-3 in the seventh on Cecil Fielder's RBI single off reliever Alan Mills. But the Orioles got an important insurance run in the eighth on Alomar's sacrifice fly.

With Brady Anderson at third, Alomar lifted a ball down the right-field line. Right fielder Paul O'Neill caught it in foul territory but couldn't make a play on Anderson.

The Yankees, who had rallied to win their previous four postseason games, threatened to come back again in the ninth. Jeter singled off Randy Myers and with one out Bernie Williams walked. Armando Benitez came on and got Fielder to pop up for the second out and got Tino Martinez on a routine fly ball to right for the save and end the 4-hour, 13-minute game.

Wells was originally slated to start Game 3, but was moved up because of Tuesday's rainout. The left-hander entered the game 13-5 in career starts against New York.

After giving up two runs in the first inning, Wells settled down and limited the Yankees to one hit over the next three innings before Joe Girardi tripled to open the fifth.

Girardi sliced a ball into the gap in right-center and hustled into third with a head-first slide just ahead of second baseman Alomar's relay from short right field.

Wells, though, left Girardi stranded by striking out Jeter and Williams, and getting Fielder on a routine grounder.

Wells teased the Yankees again in the sixth, allowing Mariano Duncan's one-out double before striking out O'Neill and Charlie Hayes.

The Orioles had loaded the bases in the first and sixth off New York starter David Cone, but couldn't push a run across. Cone had thrown 107 pitches entering the sixth inning before Cal Ripken and B.J. Surhoff singled and No. 9 hitter Chris Hoiles walked with two outs.

12-YEAR-OLD YANKEE HERO

Maier the toast of New York City

Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — He turned down Geraldo, said hi to "Hard Copy," and zipped from The Plaza hotel to "Good Morning America."

Everybody wants a piece of Jeff Maier, the 12-year-old Yankee fan whose quick glove boosted his beloved Bronx Bombers to a playoff victory.

His eighth-inning lean-and-grab of a Derek Jeter homer that seemed a certain out made Thursday's front pages of the Daily

"I'm not as famous as the Yankees. The players go out there every day. The Yankees deserve the credit."

Jeff Maier, on how people have treated him since his catch of Derek Jeter's homerun in Wednesday's game.

News, the New York Post and the New York Times. A deli in his hometown, Old Tappan, N.J., was running a Jeff Maier lunch special. The pint-sized star received an ovation inside The All-Star Cafe.

Oh, and people in Baltimore were threatening to strangle him.

Heavy stuff for the Little League center fielder, who was playing hooky from school when he met the press Thursday afternoon.

The unassuming kid, lurching at a reserved table in The All-Star Cafe, was quick to play down his nationally televised (and endlessly replayed) grab of a fly ball that had seemed destined to die in the glove of Baltimore Oriole Tony Tarasco.

"I'm not as famous as the Yankees," Maier, wearing his favorite team's hat and shirt, told a horde of reporters. "The players go out there every day. The Yankees deserve the credit."

Jeff also had an answer for the critics — mostly Orioles fans, including Baltimore Mayor Kurt Schmoke — who accused him of changing the outcome of the first game of the American League Championship Series. The Yankees, buoyed by the gift homer, won 5-4 in 11 innings.

"They don't understand," he said patiently. "If they were me, a 12-year-old kid at a New York Yankees playoff game, they would try and catch the ball, too."

The kid answered everything until abruptly ending his news conference: "I'm not answering any more questions, so you might as well leave."

As Jeff ate lunch with his mom, dad and the friends who brought him to Wednesday night's game, eight giant screens flashed the Daily News' front page headline: "KID GLOVE!" ESPN replayed the moment that made Jeff famous on several other televisions.

After lunch — paid for by the Daily News, which also served up a town car and eight Game 2 tickets — the 12-year-old turned down $1,000 for an afternoon appearance on "Geraldo."

He had previous plans: Game 2 at 3 p.m. "Go catch another one today!" shouted a cafe patron, unaware that Jeff's seat was safely in foul territory, in the first row behind the Yankees' dugout.

The Maier crew arrived about 90 minutes before game time, and Jeff posed for pictures with other fans — and signed some autographs.

Lest there be a repeat of Wednesday, at least a half dozen security guards in blue were posted in the right field seats where the boy caught the ball.

On Wednesday night, Jeff's front-row seat in right field came courtesy of a family friend, Bob Altman, who also brought his sons Brian and Matthew to Wednesday's game. Brian, 13, of Harrington Park, N.J., was sitting beside Jeff at the moment of truth.

"I didn't have my glove," Brian recalled. "And I was sort of petrified."

While New Yorkers were ready to add a plaque of young Jeff to Yankee Stadium's Monument Park, talk radio stations in Baltimore were flooded with callers blasting the kid and right field umpire Rich Garcia, who could have called Jeter out.

Orioles manager Davey Johnson, who was thrown out of the game for arguing the call, shared their pain.

"After I was ejected, I saw they were interviewing the kid as a hero," Johnson said. "That didn't feel too good, either."

COLLEGE ROUNDUP

Once again, state of Florida at center of college football universe

Associated Press

Geographically, Florida is in the southeast corner of the United States. On Saturday, it's the center of the college football universe.

First, No. 12 LSU and No. 1 Florida kick off at Gainesville at noon EDT, followed at 3:30 by No. 3 Florida State at No. 6 Miami. Florida is 5-0, and the other three teams are 4-0.

The LSU-Florida game is a classic contrast in styles, while Miami and Florida State have two of the best defenses in the nation after years of dominating behind fast-striking offenses.

LSU is eighth nationally in rushing yards per game, while the top-ranked Gators are eighth in passing yards. Florida is second nationally in scoring with 51.8

points per game and LSU is 12th with 38 per game.

Florida's Danny Wuerffel is second in passing efficiency, while the Tigers have two speedy tailbacks in Kevin Faulk, averaging 6.7 yards per carry and Rondell Mealey, 8.4 yards per carry.

"In a game like this, where you think you match up better, you'd better perform better," LSU coach Gerry DiNardo said, referring to his strong running game. "And where you don't match up very well, you can't let it hurt you. That's not easy against Florida."

DiNardo praised Florida coach Steve Spurrier for having a simple offense that appears complicated.

"I don't know if people understand that he isn't very complicated on offense," DiNardo said of Spurrier. "He runs a lot of the same routes over and over from different formations. How many things you do is not a mark of intelligence, it's how you do it when you do it.

"The genius in offensive play calling is not necessarily having 40 plays," DiNardo said. "It's calling the one play of the six that you have on the hit chart at the right time. And that's what he does. He knows when to call a play."

"When we get in a tight situation, he'll say, 'We've got to take this ball down and score.' But it's not any yelling or screaming," offensive lineman Donnie Young said. "You get Danny in the huddle and you think you're on vacation or something."

Wuerffel holds the SEC record with 89 touchdown passes. He is 26-4-1 as a starter and could become the first quarterback to play a major role in four straight SEC titles.

"Danny is always pretty cool, and it rubs off on the rest of the guys in the huddle," tailback Terry Jackson said. "He just says, 'Guys, we're going to be all right.' And everybody is real confident."

Elsewhere in the Top 25 on Saturday, it's Wisconsin at No. 2 Ohio State, No. 4 Arizona State at UCLA, Baylor at No. 5 Nebraska, No. 7 Tennessee at Georgia, No. 8 Alabama at North Carolina State, Oklahoma State at No. 9 Colorado, Purdue at No. 10 Penn State, No. 16 Washington at No. 11 Notre Dame, Maryland at No. 13 North Carolina, Minnesota at No. 15 Northwestern, No. 18 Auburn at Mississippi State, UNLV at No. 19 Brigham Young, No. 22 Kansas State at Missouri, Western Michigan at No. 24 Wyoming and No. 25 Texas vs. Oklahoma at Dallas.

49ers look for revenge on Pack

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

It was a game that remains imprinted on the consciousness of the San Francisco 49ers — Green Bay 27, San Francisco 17 last Jan. 6 in what was supposed to be the last step toward yet another San Francisco-Dallas NFC title game.

The result: The Packers entered the season as a bona fide championship contender. They might be THE contender as they prepare to play host to the 49ers on Monday night.

"We've been thinking about this game all season," says Jerry Rice, who had eight catches for 117 yards against the Packers last year, but was unable to make the big play that could get the Niners back in the game.

San Francisco is likely to be without Steve Young, who seems resigned to resting his injured groin rather than reinjuring it. That means Elvis Grbac, who's becoming Young's equal.

Green Bay is the better team right now and it's at home, where the only thing going against it is the possibility that one of its key players might get hurt jumping into the stands after scoring.

But don't discount the 49ers — they want the win badly and they have a habit of coming up big in big road games, as they did in Dallas last season.

But Mike Holmgren is the Packers' coach, not Barry Switzer.

Crew aims to continue its '96 success in Rockford

Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's Crew will load up the boats and hit the road Sunday when it travels to Rockford, Ill., for the Head of the Rock regatta.

Coach Mandi Kowal will send two varsity boats of eight, three varsity boats of four, and three novice boats of eight to the team's second regatta of the fall season.

Kowal hopes to equal, if not top, the team's performance from the '95 event.

"The team has set a goal to have both varsity boats in the top five," Kowal said.

"Overall, I'd like to improve upon our placings from last year."

"Our varsity four won last year so I'd like to see them win again."

"Also we were second to Wisconsin in the varsity eight by 21 seconds. I'd like to see us pull closer or, better yet, place ahead of Wisconsin."

Although Iowa has already competed in one regatta this fall, Kowal feels the team will be more focused and better prepared for Sunday's race.

"We got a lot of the cobwebs out in the first regatta," Kowal said.

"We've set a lot of small goals since that first race and have really done a nice job of reaching those goals in practice."

"The people who will be racing in the boats of four are all the same ones who will be racing in the eights, so they will race twice."

"We've been practicing boats of four every race since our first regatta."

The Head of the Rock will mark the first competition of the season for the novice crew

MEN'S TENNIS

Two Hawks head for Texas

Chris James
The Daily Iowan

Tom Derouin and Damir Seferovic will head to the Lone Star state for the Iowa men's tennis team this weekend to participate in the ITA All-American Championships in Austin, Texas.

The University of Texas is hosting the four-day event. The tournament format consists of prequalifying, qualifying and main draw rounds. Three hundred players are expected to battle in a winner-take-all format. The Championships are part of the Collegiate Grand Slam Series tournament. There is no flight competition. Every player is in the same draw.

Seferovic, who played in last year's tournament, said it's a real honor to be participating in such a large event.

"It's one of the biggest tournaments of the year," Seferovic said. "All the best players in the nation are here. My goal is to just play well and get some good experience out of it."

Derouin is coming off a solid weekend at Ball State last weekend. The senior from Moline, Ill., reached the semifinals of flight A singles competition.

Iowa coach Steve Houghton said he hopes his players give a solid effort in Texas.

"We had a good performance at the Ball State tournament, with a strong showing particularly from our doubles teams. The All-American Championships will be a good opportunity to see how well we fare against the best players in the country," Houghton said.

WOMEN'S GOLF

Iowa looks to capitalize on rest

Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team is hoping a couple weeks off and a lineup change will turn things around this weekend at the Wildcat Invitational in Evanston, Ill.

Iowa hasn't played in a tournament since the Lady Badger Invitational two weeks ago, where the Hawkeyes finished eighth.

The time off gave coach Diane Thomason time to hold a qualifying tournament for the No. 3-through-6 positions this weekend, with freshmen M.C. Mullen and Stacey Bergman holding down the top two spots.

Seniors Karen Schroeder and Lynne Carothers finished first and third respectively in the qualifying tournament to retain their positions, but the Iowa lineup will have some new faces on Saturday.

For the first time, Thomason will have all three of her highly touted freshmen in the lineup when Kelli Carney makes her collegiate debut after finishing second in the qualifier.

Senior Candy Schneekloth will make her first appearance of the season after finishing fourth.

What the field at the Wildcat Invitational lacks in number of teams, it makes up for in quality, as Minnesota, Wisconsin and Northwestern headline the six-team field.

"I'm really excited," Thomason said. "I think the time off has been good for us and I think we've improved."

VOLLEYBALL

Hawkeyes tired of five-set losses

James Kramer
Daily Iowan

Close has not been close enough in the Iowa volleyball team's Big Ten matches.

The Hawkeyes currently are 1-3 in the Big Ten, but their last two conference matches have been five-set losses. Iowa (6-9 overall) will try to turn things around tonight as it travels to Indiana to play the Hoosiers. Saturday, the Hawkeyes will move on to play Purdue in West Lafayette, Ind.

Coach Linda Schoensted and her team know they should have won their last two matches. But they have shown that they can compete with the conference's elite, and therefore remain positive.

"We need to start now," Schoensted said.

"We've got a great opportunity over the coming weekends and that's what we need to work for."

The Hoosiers (1-3, 7-9) dropped two matches last week, to Ohio State and Penn State. Both matches were three-game sweeps. Iowa will have to be prepared for a strong service game as Indiana averages over two aces per game. Jen Magelssen is the conference leader with .86 aces per game.

Purdue (1-3, 8-8) also dropped two matches last week. Like the Hoosiers, both losses were in three games to Penn State and Ohio State. Lauri Grimes and Brooke White are tied for ninth in the Big Ten with 4.50 kills per game. Both players also rank among the Big Ten's best in service aces. Grimes is third with .057 per game and White averages .43 per game.

In a season of inconsistency for Iowa, Jennifer Webb has been a steady force. The senior from Highland, California, ranks fourth in the Big Ten with 6.06 kills per game. Last week against Wisconsin, Webb had a career-high 35 kills, the highest total of any Big Ten player this year.

"We played with the No. 9 team in the nation (Wisconsin) and almost beat them," said Webb, who also ranks among the Big Ten leaders in aces (4th) and digs (7th).

"We're just like a step away," she added. "We're peering over the fence."

Book attacks corporate America

Michael Totten
The Daily Iowan

Politicians, lobbyists and corporate CEOs beware: Michael Moore's first book, "Downsize This! Random Threats From an Unarmed American," is out, and it's guaranteed to make you scramble for cover.

Moore will read at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., Saturday at 8 p.m.

Moore's assault on corporate America started with the film "Roger and Me," a documentary that, well, documents the destruction General Motors inflicted on Flint, Mich., when it fired thousands of employees and packed its bags for sunny Mexico, where labor is cheap and workers exploitable.

Now, with his book, "Downsize This! Random Threats From an Unarmed American," Moore takes on the entire world — from Clinton and Dole to CEOs and lobbyists, from the American militia movement to fascists in Germany — none of the bad guys are spared.

Like the fool in the classic story, Moore has the insight and the courage to cry "The emperor has no clothes!" He distributes "Corporate Crook Trading Cards," complete with mug shots and biographies of the nastiest, most morally bankrupt "welfare mothers" of them all.

He presents Washington, D.C., with all the information and legal advice it needs to pick up and move to Tijuana, Mexico.

He begs Nelson Mandela to save African-Americans from the apartheid policies of the United States, and begs well-to-do nations around the globe to send foreign aid to help America's poor.

Every sleazeball politician and white-collar criminal is on Moore's radar screen. Despite the book's title, Moore is armed to the teeth.

The pen, they say, is mightier than the sword. And Moore's pen is mighty indeed. From his documented encounter with Newt Gingrich, it's easy to believe the government fears him more than they do the militia movement.

"Downsize This!" read like a cross between Ralph Nader and satirist Jonathan Swift. Moore demands a fair universe, but doesn't let his principles get in the way of high entertainment.

Whether you're liberal or conservative, working class or middle class, Moore will leave you bug-eyed with rage and cramped in the side from giggling.

Ballet Hispánico unveils culture through dance

Katharine Horowitz and Alan Murdock
The Daily Iowan

Powerful, fluid dancers combining the traditions of ballet, modern and Spanish dance will fill the stage at Hancher Auditorium Saturday night at 8, giving audiences the opportunity to discover the diversity of Hispanic dance.

Ballet Hispánico, the foremost dance interpreter of Hispanic culture in the United States, will perform a variety of dance styles representing the lives and culture of Hispanic people throughout the world. Internationally known for its high-paced and energetic dance style, Ballet Hispánico covers a wide range of ballet and ethnic dance based on the styles of Spain and Latin America, as well as the United States.

Ramirez stressed the multicultural aspect of her company and said the works being presented Saturday — Spanish, Afro-Caribbean and Cuban — also demonstrate this.

"In our dance there is a difference based on where you come from," she said. "What unifies us is what unifies us all over the world — ballet. We are 21 nations that speak Spanish, and each one of us has our own special distinction in dancing such as in Argentina, the tango or in Cuba, the bolero."

The blending of traditional and contemporary dance is an important part to the style of Ballet Hispánico. Contrary to many other Hispanic-based dance companies, much of Ballet Hispánico is comprised strictly of new works, Ramirez said.

"All of our work is viewed through contemporary eyes," Ramirez said. "We have very few dances in our repertoire that pre-date the company. We interpret through contemporary eyes." The Saturday performance will culminate a three-day UI residence during which the company will present a master class and workshops for five schools in Muscatine, Iowa City and Coralville. The group will also perform a special matinee for area school groups.

"It is incredibly important that we educate young people about different cultures," Ramirez said. "We need to open their eyes to a whole wide world and their part in it. We try to educate through dance, not through preaching."

"The beauty of Ballet Hispánico is what it's projecting," said Alicia Brown, assistant professor in the UI Department of Dance. "There is passion and fire so beautifully stated in their music and dance."

Ramirez said she hoped to communicate the importance of the Hispanic heritage through Ballet Hispánico's performance and message.

"I hope that people realize that they need us as part of the Hispanic background and as a society, and not just as low-paying jobs," she said. "We have a culture and a history through our dance."
