UI debates animal experimentation

The Daily Iowan

"Thousands of animals are demoneted and used in UI laboratories every year for research purposes. Although many believe this practice is important in learning about medal disease and eventually improving treatment, I believe this is not accredited.

Gloria Turner, a freshman in the UI's Animal Rights and the Environment Commission, is one of the students who have been doing research on this issue. "Health problems have been caused bone spurs to develop in canine animals," Turner said. "This can be the result of a disease in the canines' body.

The peregrine falcon is a species that is in trouble. The traditional method of teaching

UI students is to use animals. The UI's Animal Rights and the Environment Com­

We think there has been a large number of advances made with these alternative methods, such as virtual and animal research," she said. "Vivisectors should not be allowed to be.

They have taken away a lot of animal's rights and should not have a big way to do so."

Therefore, the UI should not be involved in animal experimentation.

 Thoughts on Christopher Columbus

There is no easy answer to the question of whether Christopher Columbus was a good or a bad person. While many people celebrate Columbus Day as a day to honor a great explorer, others see it as a reminder of the harm that was done to indigenous peoples when Europeans first came to the Americas. The truth is likely somewhere in between, and it is important to remember that history is often complex and multifaceted.

The dangers of increased technology

Imagine a culture where privacy and personal freedom give way to convenience and technology. In such a world, medical records and business transactions are filed away on computer systems, and we are living in a virtual environment.

In the wake of recent controversies, there has been much discussion about the benefits of technology. For example, the European arrival, the Europeans showed the natives the benefits of a new way of living, the creation of wealth for their society, the development of new technologies, and the possibility of new opportunities.

In the case of Columbus, there were many positives to the European arrival, but there were also negatives. The introduction of new technologies, the creation of wealth for their society, the development of new technologies, and the possibility of new opportunities.

So, what can we learn from this? It seems that technology can be a double-edged sword. It has the potential to bring us closer together and make our lives easier, but it also has the potential to take away our privacy and freedom.

Television’s difficult choice

Censorship, or responsible programming? This question has been asked and answered many times in the past, and it is still a topic of debate today. On one hand, there are those who argue that television shows should be censored to protect the public from harmful content. On the other hand, there are those who believe that television shows should be allowed to be as graphic and explicit as the audience wants them to be.

In this case, the National Advertising Review Council (NARC) has ruled against a complaint from the American Association of University Women (AAUW). The AAUW had complained about a television show that featured a character who was eating a pizza while wearing a diaper.

The NARC ruled that the show was not being used to promote a product or service, and that the character’s behavior was not of interest to any segment of the audience.

The NARC’s decision is a reminder that there is no easy answer to the question of whether television shows should be censored. On the one hand, there are those who believe that television shows should be allowed to be as graphic and explicit as the audience wants them to be. On the other hand, there are those who believe that television shows should be censored to protect the public from harmful content.

Which do you prefer, baseball playoffs or the NFL?

There are those who prefer baseball playoffs to the NFL, and there are those who prefer the NFL to baseball playoffs. It is a matter of personal preference.

Some people prefer baseball playoffs because they like the excitement of watching teams try to advance to the World Series. Others prefer the NFL because they like the intensity of watching teams try to win the Super Bowl.

It really comes down to personal preference. Some people prefer baseball playoffs because they like the excitement of watching teams try to advance to the World Series. Others prefer the NFL because they like the intensity of watching teams try to win the Super Bowl.

The unfair abuse of overweight Americans

There are those who believe that overweight Americans are being unfairly targeted, and there are those who believe that these people are a danger to society. It is a matter of personal opinion.

Branstad underplays role of polls, claims voters lie on surveys

Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — Gov. Terry Branstad has offered a bland, take-a-look-at-the-weather response to criticism that he may have exaggerated last month’s third-place showing in a political poll.

"It’s been one of the most accurate polls, if not the most accurate," Branstad told an audience of 200 people Thursday in Des Moines. "I can’t remember the last time I was third place, so I’m pretty happy with third place and I hope to improve on that.

"I think the polls are pretty accurate and they’re probably more important than voters lie when they vote."

Welfare

Welfare rates have dropped since '89

The family development Plan, which has been proposed by the welfare and housing secretary of the state of Missouri in 1989, is one of the state's top anti-crime strategies. It has been designed to reduce the stress of living in poverty and promote a sense of community among the residents. The plan includes a wide range of initiatives, such as a comprehensive anti-poverty program, a strong anti-violence campaign, and a comprehensive anti-crime strategy. The plan has been successful in reducing welfare rates, and has been praised for its innovative approach to addressing poverty and crime. In the future, the state will continue to work on improving the plan and expanding its reach. The plan has been well-received, and has been praised for its success in reducing welfare rates and promoting community. The state will continue to work on improving the plan and expanding its reach. Clinton signs bill banning Rohypnol

Jan Foreman
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Clinton has signed a bill banning the drug Rohypnol, a date-rape drug used by rapists in Europe to incapacitate their victims.

"We must do everything we can to stop this heinous practice," Clinton said. "For the first time, using a drug as a weapon to commit rape and violence is a crime in the United States. Violence against women and rape are not an acceptable part of any culture."

French authorities are using a similar drug to incapacitate women who employ illegal drugs in a job to facilitate their crime.

"The bill expires in January 1997 at the end of Clinton's term in office," said Foreman. "It is considered a crisis on the campuses."

Iowa comes back from behind to beat Illinois, 10-7. The game was an emotional one for coach Hayden Fry. "When they called for the fourth down, I knew the game was over," Fry said.

Iowa won the game with a strong performance by the defense. The Hawkeyes held Illinois to just 29 yards rushing and two field goals.

"This was a hard-fought victory," said Iowa's quarterback, Matt Rusch. "We knew we had to come out strong and execute our game plan to have a chance to win."

Michael Irvin returned from his broken nose and spear from Denver's Steve Foley, and the Cowboys had three field goals and the lead after three quarters.

Irvin entered the game in the third quarter after being cleared by doctors. He had missed the last three games with a broken nose and had been listed as questionable before the game.

With Irvin returning, the Cowboys' offense was revitalized. They scored three touchdowns and had more than 300 yards of total offense.

Cowboys quarterback Troy Aikman passed for 247 yards and two touchdowns, and running back Emmitt Smith ran for 139 yards and two touchdowns.

The Cowboys led 27-24 at halftime, but the Saints took over in the second half, scoring two touchdowns and a field goal to win 31-27.

Irvin's return was a key factor in the Cowboys' victory. He had 106 yards receiving and a 35-yard touchdown pass from Aikman.

Irvin's presence gave the Cowboys a boost on both sides of the ball. On defense, he helped contain the Saints' rushing attack, and on offense, he provided a big play with his touchdown.

The Cowboys' win over the Saints moved them to 5-2 on the season and put them in position to take over first place in the NFC East.

The Hawkeyes placed all three in the top ten. The Hawkeye...
Film's roar is merely a whimper

Iowa's "Ghost of the Darkness"...it sounds so grand. It's not. It's not a grand one, not even a whimsical one. It's merely a whimper.

Directed by William Goldman. In addition to co-writing the dull screen version of "The Chamber," Goldman is perhaps best known for his screenplay of "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," and in "The Ghost and the Darkness," a suspense and action film with an unsuspenseful film that also seems to have been made "too soon." Goldman has also taken singular writing credit for "The Ghost and the Darkness," and the film seems unsuspenseful. Given that the film opens in all of East Africa to trade native workers, and eventually share that much screen time an expert game hunter by the name of Remington (Michael Douglas) is called in to help Petersen solve the problem. Petersen and Douglas play a pair of gunslingers who, given the two leads' performances in films like "Batman Forever," can't help but liven things up.

In the film's period detail and comedy, promptly faded filmic stereotypes emerge, but no suspense film has ever coasted by on its visuals. It began with a promising premise: "One man met with about 500 lions - not two, but 500 - in East Africa, and he built a bridge in East Africa to trade native workers, and eventually share that much screen time an expert game hunter by the name of Remington (Michael Douglas) is called in to help Petersen solve the problem.
