College of Medicine faces critical audit Possible Medicare billing errors could cost UI substantial dollar amount

Brendan Brown The Daily Iowan

Potential errors in billing Medicare recipients could lead to a sizable payment by the UI College of Medicine to the U.S. government.

The UI announced Friday the College of Medicine will select an independent accounting firm to review its Medicare billing practices over the last six years. The examination comes after the United States Inspector General called for the review of all 125 teaching hospitals confusion for hospital schools nationwide. involved with the federal program that pays health-care costs for qualified patients.

This action is being taken after federal regulations were rewritten and implemented July 1 to clarify the guidelines for the billing hours of supervising physicians overseeing resident physicians with patients.

Vice President of University Relations Ann Rhodes said the old guidelines caused

"The rules have been very unclear and were not administered uniformly around the country," she said. "The wording has been changed to remove the ambiguity and ensure clarity in the future." Rhodes said the UI is not being singled out in the auditing process.

"This is a national initiative to ensure proper Medicare billing," she said. "In the Kansas City region we're one of the biggest first reviewed."

Twenty-five other academic medical centers are currently under review and two others have reimbursed the government for overbilling.

The University of Pennsylvania paid $30 million while Thomas Jefferson University in Pennsylvania agreed to pay $12 million.

Dennis Domsic, associate of finance and administration for the College of Medicine, said the scope of this review makes it providers, so we're going to be one of the much more significant than others have been in the past

"Previous reviews were more specific in a given area and didn't cover such a long period of time," he said.

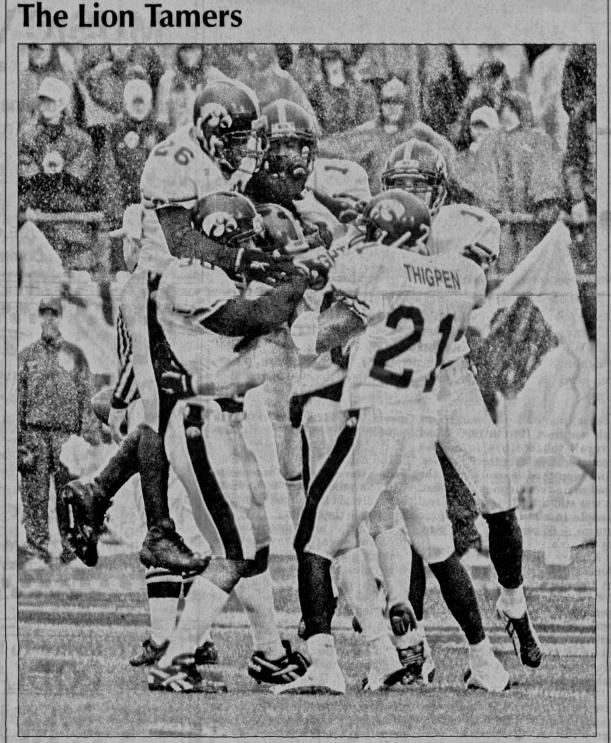

Domsic said the college has been reviewed five times over the last 10 years, resulting in a total reimbursement of $600,000. He said the college has a historically good record and it is premature to speculate how much the college might have to pay.

ADIO ADDRESS Clinton suggests new DOT drug policy

Lawrence Knutson Associated Press

WASHINGTON - In a preelection bid to polish his anti-drug credentials Saturday, President Clinton proposed using the loss of teenagers' coveted driver's licenses as a tool to curb youthful drug use and drinking. Clinton also suggested testing every teen-age applicant for a driver's license for drug use, with licenses denied to those who fail. He said he would hope "the 90 percent who are drug-free" would participate willingly in such a program to enable identification of teens who use drugs. Clinton declared a new "zero tolerance" regulation for teen drinking and said states that fail to bar young people from drinking and driving will lose a percentage of their federal highway aid. In his weekly radio address, the president said he has a double-barreled message:

FORMER BASKETBALL PLAYER Walker surrenders to ICPD over weekend

Mike Waller The Daily Iowan

Former UI basketball player Jeff Walker turned himself in to the Iowa City Police Department early Saturday morning, more than a week after he was charged with eight counts of forgery for allegedly using a stolen ATM card.

Iowa City attorney Randy Larson, whose services have been retained by Walker, said his client turn himself in to authorities at an posted a $5,000 bond and is now awaiting the Johnson County Attorney's trial information from his Springfield, Ill., home. Larson said the County Attorney's office has 45 days to file a trial information to a judge, who will then decide whether there is enough information to go to trial.

Iowa City Police Department Detective Deb Petersen said Walker confessed to the ICPD on Oct. 4 he used an acquaintance's ATM card eight times for cash withdrawals, which totaled $1,400. A statewide warrant was issued for Walker on Oct. 11, after he failed to arranged time.

• "If you're under 21 and you drink, you can't drive - period."

 "No drugs — or no driver's license.

Clinton has been hammered repeatedly by Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole for presiding over a sharp increase in drug use by young people.

Commenting for the Dole-Kemp campaign, spokesperson Christina Martin said: "It's a shame Bill Clinton has been asleep at the wheel of leadership for three years while drug use among 12- to 17year-olds skyrocketed 105 percent. Today's proposal is simply too little, too late."

In his address, Clinton said he is directing the White House drug policy chief, retired Army Gen. Barry McCaffrey, and Transporta-tion Secretary Federico Pena to develop within 90 days a plan requiring young people be tested for drugs as a condition of obtaining driver's licenses. He said that might require new legislation.

And he said he would seek the help of the vast majority of America's youth who don't use illegal drugs to help identify and change the habits of those who do.

"Let me make one thing clear," Clinton said. "Even though teen drug use is up, all the evidence is that 90 percent of our children are drug-free. They are doing the right thing. They are not experimenting." "So we're asking them, the 90 percent who are drug-free, to be responsible enough to participate in this drug-testing program to help us identify the 10 percent who are on the brink of getting in trouble and get them away from drugs before it's too late," he said.

In a memo to McCaffrey and Pena, Clinton said he believes the lure of a driver's license is so com-See DRUG POLICY, Page 8A

As the meeting was concluding, city councilors Huang Chaohsing and Lin Ti-chuan burst into the room and angrily demanded to know what Jackson's qualifications were for receiving the award.

Huang kicked over a tea table in front of Jackson, prompting the surprised pop star to ask, "Is that guy all right?" the Kaohsiungbased Commons Daily newspaper reported.

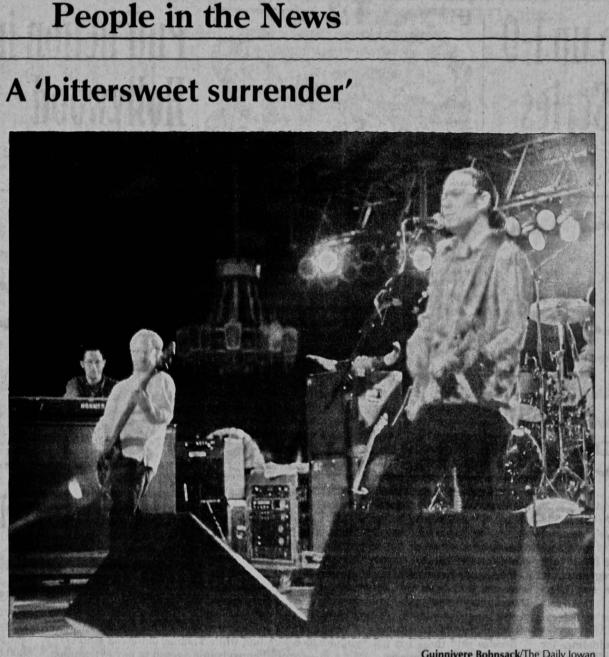

The two men tried to prevent Jackson from leaving by the front door of city hall, but were brushed aside by the singer's bodyguards.

Told the award to Jackson was in recognition of his international contributions, Lin replied: "His international contribution has been to molest little boys."

Baywatch' star shares his painful past

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Jose Solano is on top of the world as the new hunk on "Baywatch."

No long ago, however, he was mired in despair.

"I had a breakdown. The outgoing, persevering person that I am wasn't there anymore. I became very depressed," Solano told the syndicated program "American Journal" in an interview for broadcast today.

Those dark days grew out of the death of his best friend in a helicopter crash while serving in the Middle East. He was also emotionally scarred from his job as a Navy corpsman preparing bodies for shipment home during the Persian Gulf War, he said.

When he returned to Sacramento, he was hospitalized for three days with a mental breakdown.

The 25-year-old Solano told "American Journal" he wanted to talk about his past because he feared the gossip tabloids would exploit the story.

Filmmakers insist the smokes are just props, a way to define tough or rebellious characters, enhance romantic scenes or evoke earlier eras when smoking was common.

But anti-smoking advocates fume Hollywood, willfully or not, is glamorizing cigarettes. They note TV shows have largely given up tobacco and suggest more imaginative ways exist to summon nostalgia - tailfin Cadillacs and Nehi grape soda, for two examples.

Moreover, the on-screen haze is reviving concerns the tobacco industry is paying for its products to appear in movies. Such "hidden advertising" would violate the long-standing federal requirement that tobacco ads include the surgeon general's warning smoking is hazardous to health.

"At the very least, (filmmakers) are being grossly irresponsible," asserted Stanton Glantz, a University of California professor of medicine who has chronicled Hollywood's habit.

scenes from 62 top-grossing films released from 1960 to 1990, found overall tobacco use in movies remained level over three decades. And even though smoking by the lead characters dropped somewhat, it was still three times that of real people in similar demographic groups - 65 percent to 19 percent, by Glantz's reckoning in 1994.

A more recent study, by the American Lung Association, looked at 133 films released in 1994 and 1995. It found that 102 of them, 77 percent, featured characters either smoking or holding tobacco products. And compared to TV, the lung association said, feature films are five times more likely to depict tobacco use.

"If they simply showed tobacco use realistically, that would be a gigantic step forward from the current situation," Glantz said.

In a telephone interview, Paul Newman voiced concerns movie icons might unwittingly be luring people to smoke, particularly teenagers. If old people "like me smoke, it doesn't make a difference," Newman said. "If you get John Travolta smoking, that's a different point."

The worries about under-thetable advertising hark back to 1989, when the issue flared in Congress. Memos had surfaced detailing product placement deals, in which marketers paid to have brand-name products appear in films. The deals in question included $350,000 paid by Philip Morris James Bond that we did. He still to feature Lark cigarettes in "License to Kill," a James Bond movie, and $42,500 to have Lois Lane, played by Margot Kidder, smoke Marlboros in "Superman II." The negative news stories compelled the makers of "License to Kill," in production that year, to belatedly add the surgeon general's warning to the credits.

Today, film and tobacco companies vehemently deny they are making placement deals, and the film industry insists only creative considerations now guide decisions to include cigarettes. If no money is changing hands, moviemakers contend, they're not required to run the health warning.

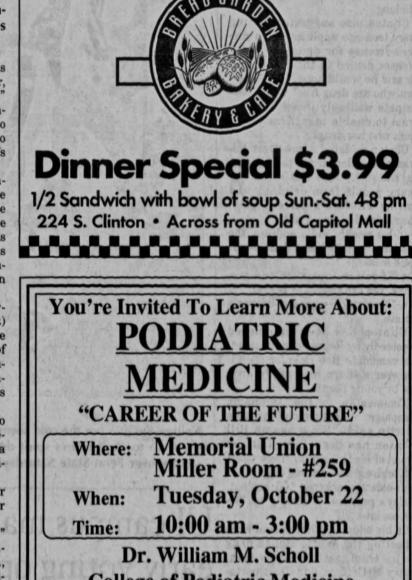

"Our position and our understanding is that (paid placement) hasn't been taking place for quite some time," Larry Deutchman of the Entertainment Industry Council said in an interview. The nonprofit group works on social issues with the entertainment industry.

"Our policy is very clear: We do not engage in paid product placement," said Walker Merryman, a spokesperson for The Tobacco Institute, a lobbying group. Others in Hollywood go further and suggest tobacco is no longer

"Smoking is rather passe now," said John Parkinson, vice president of marketing for Danjaq Inc., whose subsidiary produced "Goldeneye," the latest tale of Agent 007, last year.

"It was one of the updatings of drinks, he still womanizes, but he doesn't smoke anymore."

WASHINGTON - Bob Dole stood up for tobacco during this vear's presidential campaign. So does Charles Black, one of his senior advisers and a top lobbyist whose biggest client is Philip Morris Over at President Clinton's reelection shop, campaign manager Peter Knight is a lobbyist.

Both campaigns are heavy with inside-the-Beltway influence brokers, according to the first disclo-sure reports filed under a new lobbying law.

Their firms' clients range from gambling interests awaiting appointment of a federal commission to study their industry, to Walt Disney, which this year won administration approval for its buyout of the ABC network.

Insiders call it the natural order of things, a fact of political life that causes consternation among groups that worry about influence peddling.

"I'm sure their clients feel good that the people who represent them seem close to the powers that be. But I don't think there's anything untoward about it," said Republican National Committee Chairperson Haley Barbour.

Charles Lewis of the Center for Public Integrity, a government watchdog group, has a darker view: "These guys are potentially present at the creation of the next cycle of power in Washington.

"When it comes to clients . their insight and connections will be worth a ton. These are markers that will be cashed in later, and don't think for a moment that they are not," he added.

Running Dole's day-to-day cam-paign strategy is Paul Manafort, a longtime lobbyist who is a partner in a firm representing gambling equipment maker GTECH, Sport Services Corp. and the Embassy of Costa Rica.

Among the reasons lobbyists flock to campaigns is the opportunity to solidify their political connections and enhance the perception they are plugged in with key decision makers.

"If a client has a lot of dealings with the administration, it's only logical that they would give preference to hiring someone who had very high-level campaign credentials. It's common sense," said Wright Andrews, president of the American League of Lobbyists.

Election Day already over for some voters

Jennifer Batog Associated Press

WASHINGTON - There are still two weeks left before Election Day, but the show's over for Patricia Lee of Franklin, Tenn. She's already made up her mind and cast her vote for president.

Lee, who voted on Friday, is one of the hundreds of thousands of people expected to take advantage of laws that allow citizens in some states to go to the polls before Nov.

"I work two jobs and have a hard time fitting it in my schedule," said Lee, 34, an elementary-school cook.

Lee said she voted for President Clinton and wasn't about to change her mind and switch her vote to Republican Bob Dole, Reform Party nominee Ross Perot or one of the other third-party candidates. The last weeks of the campaign are unnecessary, she said, because the candidates "just batter against each other and don't tell us anything we don't already know."

Early voting differs from absentee voting in several ways. Instead of applying for a ballot, voters can just go to a polling place and vote. They don't need to tell officials why they are voting early, and their ballots are cast just like on Election Day, not sealed or separated from others.

A number of states, including Texas, New Mexico, Tennessee, Nevada and Arizona, have some variation of early voting.

In Clark County, Nev., which encompasses Las Vegas, early voting started on Saturday, including at Meadows Mall. Convenience was cited by several people, including she'll head to the polls on Nov. 5. those who hadn't planned to vote before Nov. 5.

"I was coming over here to eat anyway, so - since it was here - I thought I'd vote," said Ernie Campbell, a 60-year-old retiree who didn't want to identify his political affiliation or his favorite candidate. "I want to make sure I get it done. I felt like this was a good way to avoid lines."

Texan Diane Sheridan, of the National League of Women Voters, has relied on early voting in several recent elections. Sheridan, who lives outside Houston, said with her schedule she is often not sure if she'll be in town on Election Day.

"What I like about it is you don't have to remember to make an application for a ballot and don't have to go through a process. I'm an example of somebody who finds it more convenient to vote early," she said.

This year, however, she's pretty sure she'll be home in Texas so

Texas election officials said between one-fifth and one-third of total ballots have been cast early in recent elections. Texas began early voting in 1988.

Not everybody thinks committing to a candidate before the campaign is over is a good idea.

"The early voting aspect is such that people don't share the same information and can't take back, their ballot when they know more about a candidate," said Curtis Gans, director of the Washingtonbased Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

He pointed out that four days before the 1992 election, President Reagan's defense secretary, Caspar Weinberger, was indicted on charges of making false statements to Congress about the Iran-Contra affair.

He said his research has shown early voting had little or no effect on overall voter turnout.

Student apathy over tuition increase

TI students got what they deserved: another in a long series of tuition increases. The nine-member Board of Regents, which governs Iowa's three state-run schools, voted 7-2 Thursday to jack up tuition at the UI by 3.9 percent for the next academic year.

That action was not a surprise, despite modest student outcry and division among the board itself.

In the past five years, in-state undergraduate tuition at the UI has risen more that 25 percent to $1,235 from $976. Out-of-state undergraduate tuition has increased at an even faster rate to $4,534 from $3,372.

It seems to be an unflinching fact of life tuition will increase each year.

So common have the increases become that UI students accept them like sheep, with nary a peep of protest or outrage.

Out of a campus with 25,000 or so students, only 300 wrote letters protesting the latest increase.

It seems to be an unflinching fact of life tuition will increase each year.

That's embarrassing. Does it mean every other UI student approves of the higher to get their colleagues to pass lowtuition? Hardly.

It simply means most UI students are too apathetic - even when it comes to money - to speak out on important matters. That's a shame along with it increase a person's quality of life. Only a fool or a daredevil would say otherwise. We need to let go of the idea the pressure for a review of police policies in Iowa City is coming from people who hate law enforcement. It's a convenient story that allows people to duck the real issues.

Had more students protested the proposed increase - by writing letters, sending faxes, attending the Regents meeting - the outcome might have been different.

Those issues concern the specific direction officers receive for unsnapping their holsters, and drawing and raising their sidearms. Police departments vary widely in how they deal with gun use. Iowa City needs to be informed in this Minneapolis, Minn., is an example of a larger city with more extensive crime problems than ours. Police administrators confirmed for me any officer involved in an incident in which a gun has been drawn is placed on a stint of deskwork for "a couple of days" in the aftermath. It is a neutral professional protocol, implying neither punishment nor reward. Once an officer feels enough threat to pull his or her gun on zen, t munity supports them by giving them time to calm down from the tension and threat that lead to their decision. Contrast that to Iowa City and you see how something like the death of Eric Shaw occurred. It is a matter of public record Gillaspie had drawn his gun in an incident earlier that night. So this young officer - already pumped up in the extreme - is not only left on patrol, but allowed to carry all that adrenaline into an entirely new situation in a lead role. Small wonder Gillaspie was so nerved-up that the phrases "he scared me," and "I must have twitched," are his clearest recollections of pulling the trigger and taking a life. Some people say the worst thing you can do to police is micromanage. These people tend to consider policy review from citizens equivalent to interference. Let's be clear about it: Our police don't need our interference. They need our help. The shooting of Eric Shaw revealed deficient police protocols. Anybody unwilling to roll up their sleeves and help fix this situation can stop calling themselves a supporter of law enforcement right now. The attitude of "it isn't broken and we mustn't tinker with it" is simply an admission of the willingness to allow more police officers to undergo the hellish kind of night Jeffrey Gillaspie experienced when he shot and killed Eric Shaw for no reason whatsoever. That night has never ended for Gillaspie, and probably never will. We know it won't end for the family of Eric Shaw. any people insist on referring to Shaw's death as a "tragic accident." The clear implication is the incident's tragic nature should end all further discussion of the reasons for it. There is nothing more to be done about it, they say - get on with life. These people forget how often and appropriately tragedy has been the impetus for improvement in technology or procedure. Seat belts, helmets, speed limits - even the safety mechanisms on firearms - all these things have evolved, usually in the wake of tragedies resulting from their absence. Why exclude the police force from this type of benefit? Why view any attempt to offer such assistance as disempowering to our police? Yet this is the view of some Iowa Citians. The future will prove them wrong if we let it. If no changes are made to our police procedures, someone will die again in circumstances not unlike those which claimed the life of Eric Shaw. Citizens need to understand that in voicing support for police in the form of unqualified support for existing police policies, they doom officers in the future to involvement in similar incidents. Without help from the citizenry, our police force will continue to be placed in situations where tension and fear escalate as they repeatedly draw their weapons. Nobody deserves that sort of treatment. No officer of the law should have to lead a professional life thinking this is what we expect them to endure. Minneapolis and other cities have shown a better way. If we don't follow their lead now, our future holds in store more of these tragic - and conceivably avoidable - accidents.

Tom went on to inform me of other inaccuracies in my column. For instance, he has made no less than 12 feature films, and was the recipient of a Peabody writing award. He demanded to know if I was from California (I am) and went on to chastise me for my cultural smugness in regard to Iowa and Iowans.

Though I kept silent at the time, fearing at any moment he would dispatch a horde of L.A. lawyers to bankrupt me for all eternity with a libel lawsuit, I did chafe at that last bit. I respect a good many things about Iowans, particularly their commitment to public education. On the whole, they are industrious and kind to a fault. But they are as bland as oatmeal. Even my native Iowan friends lament the dreary homogeneity of their state and dream of moving on to New York or San Francisco. In fact, getting yelled at by Tom Arnold was about the most exciting thing that's ever happened to me in Iowa.

Blame it on geography, which tends to determine culture. In Migrations and Cultures, Thomas Sowell notes "in touch with more of the outside world. (coastal peoples) have usually been more knowledgeable and more technologically and socially advanced than interior peoples." The cold weather doesn't help, either. And Iowa's one natural blessing - rich topsoil - has retarded other economic development in favor of a continued dependence on corn, soybeans and livestock. Like the cattle of the Argentine pampas, which made that country temporarily rich in the early 20th century, Iowa's natural wealth has encouraged a sort of cultural complacency, similar to Hayden Fry's antiquated offense, which guarantees the football team will consistently go to a minor bowl game, good enough for most Hawkeye fans. Greed is not an Iowan characteristic, after all.

I chose to make fun of Tom Arnold because it seemed rather sad to me that one of the most notable national figures Iowa has produced in recent years is a professional comedian - whose success stems, in large part, from the manner in which he embodies negative stereotypes of Iowans. But the rest of the country seems to love him, so who am I to complain? In fact, I think I'll sell a few dozen pints of plasma, send in the dough to my good friend Haley Barbour, and convince the Republicans to run Terry Branstad for the White House in the year 2000.

Confusing Harkin and Lightfoot

om Harkin and Jim Ross

Lightfoot, candidates for the office of Iowa senator, debated Thursday night, and it is likely very few people watched them. After all, the Braves were in the seventh game of a playoff series versus the Cardinals.

For those people who were undemocratic enough to choose baseball over the American political process, the format for the debate was as follows: Local news anchors read questions written by Iowans from around the state. In the same manner as the presidential debates, questions alternated between incumbent and challenger, with each given time for rebuttal.

The first question of the evening took the candidates by surprise, when Buck Gurney of Silo City, Iowa, asked in his written query, "Mr. Lightfoot, why do you go by the name of 'Jim Ross' instead of just plain Jim?" Lightfoot, who was unprepared for this hard question, managed to say he needed to set himself apart from the other Jims of the world, for the purpose of "candidate recognition."

In his rebuttal, senator Harkin noted his first name is not particularly unusual, and admonished Lightfoot for seizing an unfair advantage in the race. Harkin declared that, until election day, he It seems the abortion issue is such that devout Republicans and Democrats can be made to say things that compromise the basic premises of their platforms.

will be known as "Tom Ross Harkin," to level the playing field. Of course, this wasn't a real exchange between the candidates. Actually, the candidates stuck to the conventional rhetoric of their respective parties.

Lightfoot, a Republican, emphasized he would use the power of his office to lower taxes, return power to the states, and reduce bureaucracy. Harkin, as a card-carrying member of the Democratic party, focused on the positive things government can do, saying he favors additional funding for medical research and child care. Lightfoot wants to eliminate the Department of Education, Harkin wants to preserve federal involvement in public education. But enough of the same old rhetoric. Let us review one of the more interesting points of the debate (this really happened): Harkin, at one point, declared he "does not trust government." This from a man who generally considers government intervention an improvement. Harkin's comment came in the context of his defense of pro-choice legislation, wherein he stated he trusts women rather than bureaucrats to make personal decisions. But doesn't many other things the government does, from welfare, to education, to health care affect personal decisions?

The question which prompted the exchange over abortion was cleverly phrased, asking Lightfoot if, since he generally favors the withdrawal of government from citizens' lives, how he can favor the intrusion of government with regard to a woman's choice? Lightfoot nimbly responded by saying he disagreed with the premise of the question, and then described a paral-birth abortion.

It seems the abortion issue is such that devout Republicans and Democrats can be made to say things that compromise the basic premises of their platforms. Enlightening conclusion: many issues are such that politicians will say many things. Duh.

Perhaps confused voters will go to the polls on November 5, and vote for Tom Ross Harkfoot.

On Wednesday, Kim Painter wrote an article decrying how the media was conservative, how Bob Dole was a liar and a crabapple meanie, and how people like George Will and Cokie Roberts now represent what benefitsucking Congresses of past years used to represent. I would like to address all these issues.

First, in 1992, 89 percent of people in the media voted for Bill Clinton. That is hardly a conservative majority. The rise of publications like The New Republic do not show media is conservative, rather that there is a backlash against the liberal media. Second, Bill Clinton has been linked to scandal after scandal. He's had Cabinet members booted for unethical behavior. Many of his cronies back in Arkansas have been indicted for Whitewater. Yet he knows nothing about it. Bob Dole may be a liar, but what the hell would that make Bill Clinton?

Third, there is a difference between a Congressman and someone like Cokie Roberts. Cokie Roberts can't influence policy like a congressman, so why shouldn't she receive money from people who believe her views are credible? To call George Will or Cokie Roberts, two people whom the mass public (as well as myself) hold in high regard, spin doctors is plain pathetic. I think Ms. Painter should look no farther than herself to find a biased spin doctor.

FDA to govern medical Internet

Lauran Neergaard Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Desperate patients who dial onto the Internet can find medical information from potentially lifesaving research in top medical journals, to a site that claims positive thinking "can change your genetic base.

Now the Food and Drug Administration is wading into the chaos, preparing to regulate promotion of drugs and medical devices in cyberspace. Critics fear such rules will block the free flow of information.

"We certainly recognize both the utility and the power of the Internet," FDA Deputy Commissioner William Schultz told 470 manufacturers, consumer advocates and Internet experts who spent two days last week debating FDA regulation.

"I don't think we need extra guidance," responded David Vance of the drug maker Glaxo Wellcome Inc.

He ventured that everyone from highly informed laymen and physicians to more gullible novices use the Internet and said: "We can't protect the idiot."

Part of the Internet's appeal is that anybody can set up a home page and start publishing - no expertise required.

But doctors say that makes it hard for patients to separate science from quackery.

The FDA lacks the authority to sort out all the conflicts. The Federal Trade Commission already is working with 39 state attorneys general to determine broader regulation of Internet fraud, said Renardo Hicks, Pennsylvania's deputy attorney general.

By federal law, the FDA does regulate how manufacturers of drugs and medical devices promote their therapies to prevent having people misled about their medical value. The FDA now is

Drug prosecution levels off under Clinton

Michael Sniffen Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Federal drug prosecutions rose sharply under Presidents Reagan and Bush, then leveled off during the Clinton administration, statistics released Saturday by a university-based research group showed.

Analyzing computerized case records kept by the Justice Department and the federal court system, the Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse, based at Syracuse University, found federal criminal drug enforcement more than doubled during President Reagan's eight years in office and continued to rise under Bush.

The number of federal drug cases rose from 8,775 in 1981 to 19,038 in 1988, according to U.S. attorneys' records detailed in the study. In 1989, Bush's first year as president, prosecutions jumped to 24,149 and reached an all-time high in the 1992 election year, 28,585

Under Clinton, federal drug prosecutions dropped for the next two years, then rose again in 1995, the last year for which statistics are available. The annual average number of cases under Bush and Clinton were similar: 25,990 under Bush, 25,672 under Clinton.

The Clinton administration did post better conviction totals than Bush, averaging 17,767 convictions per year from 1993 through 1995 compared to a Bush administration annual average of 16,714.

Statistician Susan Long, who compiled the data, noted federal court records, as opposed to those

WASHINGTON - The Environmental Protection Agency has spent more than $1 million since 1993 on training seminars at ritzy resorts or on subjects unrelated to the environment such as "defensive driving" or speed-reading courses, according to congressional investigators.

Posh inns in West Virginia, a beach-front hotel in Puerto Rico and a mountain resort in Colorado were among venues chosen for classes and conferences, Republican investigators with the House Government Reform and Oversight Committee reported.

Training sessions included:

•Four-day seminars on improving managers' productivity, held at various resorts in West Virginia and Maryland. Cost: $20,000 per semi-

•A $7,000, one-day session at a beach hotel in San Juan, Puerto Rico, to train EPA lawyers on preparing for administrative hear-

•A two-day auditors' conference at a Breckenridge, Colo., lodge costing $4,400.

The committee said it identified $1.4 million in "questionable" EPA training expenses between 1993 and 1995. The agency was among the worst offenders in the committee's investigation of inappropriate spending on federal employee training programs, said committee chair-person William Clinger, R-Pa.

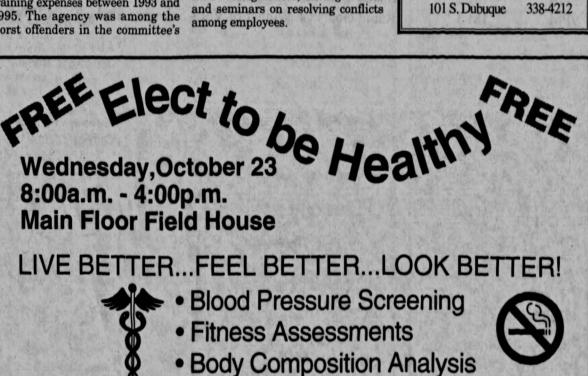

The EPA defended the seminars as training sessions necessary to boost worker performances, like those any company or agency spon-

Some classes must be held outside EPA offices to accommodate large groups, spokesperson David Cohen said, but the agency keeps costs down by choosing hotels near employees' offices and paying less than commercial firms for outside trainers.

"The EPA takes a very conservative tack when it comes to training," Cohen said. "It doesn't cost a lot to reserve a room or stay somewhere close by."

The EPA spent $10.8 million on training for its 17,200 employees, about 1 percent of its overall budget. Private companies typically spend 3 percent to 5 percent of staff costs on training.

Some seminars had nothing to do with environmental issues. The agency's office of solid waste and emergency response spent tens of thousands of dollars on Evelyn Wood speed-reading courses, business-writing classes, driving courses and seminars on resolving conflicts

Iowa's first Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) office opens in Cedar Rapids today.

The new INS office will assist lowa law enforcement officials with combating illegal immigration, which they have seen as a growing problem in Iowa recently. We try to distance ourselves from people we deem criminal. We try to purge ourselves of negatives and transfer them to the criminal. It makes people feel good," he said.

Professor Harris said the racialization of crime portrays "not only blacks as criminals, but criminals as black.

UI student Harris agreed that the war on drugs is a war on blacks. He said this is evident in harsher penalties for crack cocaine, which is more popular in urban areas, than for powder cocaine, which is more prevalent among whites.

Whether or not this is a blatant. conscious effort on the part of politicians to target black men is another question, but the effects are obvious," he said.

Professor Harris said despite the findings of the FBI's Uniform Crime Report that show 1995 had the lowest crime rate in a decade, there is increasing enthusiasm for criminals to serve "hard time."

Hawkeye center Rucker fractures finger

Iowa basketball player Guy Rucker fractured the little finger on his right hand during a team practice last week.

Rucker, a redshirt freshman from Inkster, Mich., will be reevaluated in two weeks. He will temporarily wear a splint to secure the finger.

Last year, Rucker sat out the basketball season to concentrate on academics. As a senior at John Glenn High School in Inkster, Michigan, Rucker averaged 22 points and 16 rebounds per game.

Northwestern's Autry has sprained right shoulder

EVANSTON, III. (AP) - Northwestern running back Darnell Autry has been listed as day-today with a sprained right shoulder, the school announced Sunday.

The Heisman Trophy candidate left Saturday's game against Wisconsin in the second quarter. Sunday's X-rays showed he did not break the shoulder. Autry's day-to-day classification means the junior from Tempe, Ariz., will be evaluated on a daily basis to see when he can play again.

Saturday's injury ended Autry's streak of 19 consecutive 100-yard rushing games. He rushed for 58 yards on 10 carries in the first quarter Saturday.

Iowa later tried to widen the lead, but its final drive into Penn State territory was stopped when Ryan Driscoll threw an incomplete pass on a fake-field goal attempt with 2 minutes, 15 seconds remaining.

Again, though, the defense came through. Jon LaFleur sacked Richardson for a nineyard loss on first down. It was Iowa's fifth sack of the game and third in four drives. The Lions failed to pick up a first down in their next three plays.

IOWA FIELD HOCKEY Hawkeyes pad lead in Big Ten Chuck Blount

The Daily Iowan

With weekend wins over Ohio State and Penn State, the Iowa field hockey team increased its hold over the Big Ten Conference. The Hawkeyes (14-1, 7-0) came from behind to defeat the Buckeyes, 3-2, Friday, then clobbered Penn State, 5-1 Sunday. Both games were played at Grant Field. Throughout the season, a problem area with Iowa had been its success with penalty corners. However, against Ohio State, it was Iowa's penalty corner play that

No surprises, lowa takes weekend split

Predicting which teams will win during Big Ten Conference volleyball weekends can be very difficult. But on this particular weekend, there were no major surprises for the Iowa volleyball team.

Michigan State showed on Friday why it is the top team in the Big Ten. The Spartans dominated the Hawkeyes and won, 15-5, 15-11, 15-4. Iowa rebounded on Saturday night by defeating Northwestern, 15-11, 15-13, 4-15, 15-8. The cellar-dwelling Wildcats (0-8, 9-12) remain winless in conference play. Michigan State, the seventhranked team in the nation, jumped out early against the Hawkeyes (35, 8-11) and kept pressure on them throughout the match. Val Sterk had five kills in Game 1 for MSU.

The second game offered Iowa its best chance of changing the match's momentum. The Spartans came out slow after an easy win in Game 1 and allowed their hosts to jump to an 8-3 lead. But Michigan State scored the final six points of the game to take a 2-0 lead. The defending Big Ten champions got back on track for the third game and won, 15-4.

"Michigan State gave us some opportunities that we didn't take advantage of," Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt said. "It's hard to think that you're going to beat a

Iowa has given up just three points in the fourth quarter this season. And in the Big Ten, Iowa has outscored its opponents, 55-10, in the second half.

Three minutes into the second half, Ohio State took its second lead of the game when Mieke Van-Ulden scored to put the Buckeyes up 2-1. Ohio State held onto the lead almost six minutes until Iowa's Kristin Holmes scored at the 24:35 mark off a penalty corner to even the score at 2-2.

At the 18:38 mark, Iowa senior Diane DeMiro scored the eventual game-winning goal off another penalty corner to give Iowa the 3-2 advantage.

"I was very happy with our corner play," Iowa head coach Beth Beglin said. "We threw a lot of different things at them. Our corner play is very versatile and we have many options we use with it. We still have some that we haven't used."

The Buckeyes scored the first goal of the game at the 23:17 mark, when Lynn Carahaly put the ball past Iowa goalkeeper Lisa Celluci. Iowa quickly responded eight minutes later when sophomore Kerry Lessard scored a goal off a penalty corner shot to tie the game.

With all three goals scored on corners, the Iowa offense was held in check by the Buckeye defense throughout the game. Iowa failed to score a goal in open field play for the first time all season.

For the match, Webb had a teamleading 26 kills and Jennifer Bell was second with 18. It was Iowa's percentage that helped most, as the team posted a .281 efficiency. Bell's McCleary. McCleary earned a rare .400 mark led all Hawkeyes with at least 10 attempts.

GAME NOTES Hawks Hokey Pokey in PSU locker room

Chris Snider The Daily Iowan

STATE COLLEGE, Penn. -Iowa coach Hayden Fry went to his record collection after Saturday's game and dusted off one of his old Iowa favorites - The Hokey Pokey. "It was great. I ain't hokey pokeyed like that in a long time," ee safety Damien Robinson said.

It was the first time Fry used the celebration tactic he made famous in the '80s since last year's Sun Bowl victory.

The dance is generally reserved for only major victories and Fry called this one of the biggest wins of his career.

This has to be one of the greatest, because we needed it," Fry said. "We're undefeated in Big Ten play and this ballclub needed a boost."

First quarter PENN STATE — Enis scores on 12-yard screen pass from Richardson around right end (Conway kick good). Key plays: Harris 48-yard run to the lowa 19-yard line on 3rd and 3; Enis' touchdown reception also came on 3rd and 3. Drive: 6 plays, 74 yards, 2342 (JONS 7 HAWKEYES 0. Iowa wide receiver Tim Dwight felt there may be another reason it was such a big win.

Key plays: Enis had runs of 13 and 15 yards on the first and third plays of the drive. Drive: 7 plays, 33 yards, 2:33. LIONS 10, HAWKEYES 7. "It's great because he'll probably never play Penn State again, Dwight explained. "Him and (Penn State coach) Joe (Paterno) will probably never play each other again.

"We don't play them until '99 and think Coach might retire before then. That's got to be in the back of his mind."

Fry and Paterno are the two oldest active coaches in Division I football. This was only the second time in seven tries Fry has beaten Paterno, the winningest active Division I coach.

Defense steps it up

Iowa's defense rose to the occasion against Penn State in the second half. Iowa allowed the Nittany Lions to gain just 76 yards of total offense after halftime.

could," linebacker Matt Hughes said. "We went into halftime and made a commitment to ourselves that we were going to stop whatever they had to give us, and we did."

Penn State managed just four first downs in the second half and was forced to punt the ball six times

The big defensive play came from safety Kerry Cooks. On 3rd and 9 from Penn State's own 35-yard line, Cooks blitzed, sacking quarterback Wally Richardson and forcing him to fumble.

The play set up Iowa's winning score.

Penalties hurt Hawks

After being penalized just 21 times for 160 yards in the first five ballgames of the season, Iowa was flagged nine times for 65 yards against Penn State.

The Hawkeyes were penalized five times for 45 yards in the first half alone against the Nittany Lions, who were penalized only once all game.

Defense inspires offense

The play of the Iowa defense was inspiration for the offense to score the game-winning touchdown in the fourth quarter.

"When you have a defense that goes out there, and they pretty much kicked Penn State's butt in the second half, you feel like you owe it to them," Tim Dwight said. "Your other unit is out there playing hard, shutting down the team. You've got to step up and make some plays. We made just enough plays today to win."

The first game of the World Series wasn't the only sporting event to become a victim of the severe weather pounding the East Coast. The Boston Regatta was canceled for the first time in its 32year history.

Mandi Kowal, over 800 volunteers and 4500 competitors from around the world were in Boston anticipating the 16-event regatta. Due to the size of the event, rescheduling will not be possible.

"The team is disappointed but is handling it well," Kowal said. "It would have been nice to see how we could have done."

Kowal doesn't expect the team to have any travel delays en route back to Iowa on Monday morning.

The varsity and novice crews will prepare to host the Head of the Iowa next weekend.

The Iowa women's golf team enters its final tournament of the fall with some momentum.

After a season-best second-place finish at the Wildcat Invitational on Oct. 12 and 13, the Hawkeyes are looking forward to their first trip ever to the University of Arkansas at Little Rock Invitational on Monday and Tuesday.

Leading the way for the Hawkeyes at the Wildcat Invitational were freshmen M.C. Mullen, Kelli Carney and Stacey Bergman. All three finished in the top five

Not only would a solid performance out of the upperclassmen give the Hawkeyes a high finish in this tournament, but more importantly, it would give them some momentum going into the spring season

The UALR Invitational features a dozen teams competing for 36 holes on Monday and 18 holes on Tuesday at the par-72 Maumelle Country Club.

UALR is the only team in the field that we have faced, so it should be interesting," Iowa coach Diane Thomason said.

Thomason expects the host school to be near the top by the end of the tournament.

"They definitely have the advantage of knowing the course," Thomason said.

-Andy Hamilton Men's golf

Coach Terry Anderson and the Iowa men's golf team enter their final tournaments of the year looking to get back on track.

After winning their first two tournaments of the fall, the Hawkeyes have struggled to two disappointing tournaments in a row, but a couple weeks off might be what the doctor ordered.

The Hawkeyes haven't played since the Wolverine Classic on Oct. According to Iowa Crew coach 5 and 6, where they finished 16th out of 18 teams.

Iowa enters the 18-team Persimmon Ridge Invitational in Louisville, Kentucky on Monday and Tuesday, where a tough golf course will test the Hawkeyes.

"This course forces you to have the patience to stick in there and have confidence," Anderson said. "We need to go in with a conservative game plan because this course has a lot of water and places you can get into trouble."

Senior Scott Johnson will play in his first tournament of the year, as Anderson searches for a player to fill the No. 5 position.

"He has played this course and during the last month, out of the guys who've stayed home, he's been playing the best," Anderson said. "I think he's ready to give us a good effort."

Iowa needs a strong performance during the next two days to put itself into the preseason ratings next spring, but several Big Ten teams and the Marshall Thundering Herd look to be the top competition for the Hawkeyes.

"We are capable of winning," Anderson said. "On paper we should be a top team, but we need to stick to our game plan."

TOP 25 ROUNDUP Sun Devils rebound in OT

Richard Rosenblatt Associated Press

Arizona State - now that's entertainment!

The undefeated Sun Devils (7-0) have become must-see TV on Saturdays, using edge-of-the-seat dramatics to remain in the chase for the national title.

The latest installment occurred Saturday at Tempe, Ariz., when fourth-ranked Arizona State beat Southern California 48-35 in double overtime.

"If you give us a choice - the easy way or the hard way - we seem to take the hard way," quarterback Jake Plummer said after engineering four comebacks against USC – a week after rallying the Sun Devils from a 21-point deficit to beat UCLA. "When we get behind, we really seem to respond."

Meanwhile, Notre Dame took a tumble in the AP ratings after a demoralizing 20-17 overtime loss to Air Force at South Bend. The Irish (4-2) are in danger of being shut out of the bowl picture after falling from No. 8 to No. 19 in this week's Top 25. The Irish must finish among the top 12 teams in the AP or CNN/USA Today polls to be eligible for a bowl alliance game.

"Air Force just played a great game and we played a bad game," Irish quarterback Ron Powlus said. "I don't know what to say. We're shocked. ... This season's horrible.

STILLWATER, Okla. - Almost lost in all the big-time running that went on during Oklahoma State's game with Iowa State was a solid, mistake-free performance by OSU quarterback Tone' Jones.

Jones completed 14 of 21 passes for 179 yards, gained 21 yards on six carries, scored a touchdown and directed the Cowboys to a 28-27 victory after they twice fell behind by 17.

"I thought this was his best game since I've been here," said secondyear coach Bob Simmons. "No. 1, I thought he made all the right decisions. He kept plays alive and he played an exceptional ballgame." Towa State's Troy Davis performed as expected, gaining 238 yards on 36 carries to become the Cyclones' career rushing leader. He raised his total to 3,482 yards, surpassing Dexter Green's mark of 3,437.

Davis also passed Green to become the school's leader in all-purpose yardage. "The records mean a lot, but we lost the game," Davis said. "It would have meant more if we would have won. We need to improve as a whole team.

For Oklahoma State (4-3, 1-3 Big 12), Andre Richardson ran for a careerhigh 173 yards and helped carry the Cowboys after David Thompson, who gained 158, left with a leg injury.

ANOTHER WIN FOR ROOKIE Voods outduels Stewart in final round

Doug Ferguson Associated Press

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. -Tiger Woods had yet another incredible moment in his incredible run on the PGA Tour, winning a dramatic 18-hole duel with Payne Stewart on Sunday in the Disney Classic. Woods shot a 6-under-par 66 at the Magnolia Course to finish at 21-under par. It was one stroke ahead of Stewart, whose 10-foot birdie putt for a tie at No. 18 grazed the left lip of the cup.

Taylor Smith, a 29-year-old tour rookie seeking his first tour victory, also finished at 21-under, but was disqualified for having an illegal grip on his putter.

er Bobby Cox said. "St. Louis caught us awfully hot those last three games, and the Yankees caught us hot tonight. Hopefully, we can continue it for three more games.'

Game 2 will be tonight. Greg Maddux, moved up a day because of the rain, will start for Atlanta against Jimmy Key.

On a day when the Yankees hoped to recapture some of their glory with their first Series appearance since 1981, Jones stuck it to them. By the sixth inning, with Atlanta ahead 12-1 and a light rain falling, many of the 56,365 fans had left.

"You can't say enough about the offense," Smoltz said. "It means a lot when we can go out there and jump on them early. It really helped me settle down.'

The blowout matched the biggest ever in a Series opener, equaling an 11-0 romp in 1959 by the Chicago White Sox over Los Angeles.

Jones, who began the season as a member of the Class A Durham Bulls, became the youngest player to homer in the Series. He was a year younger than Mickey Mantle, who would have turned 65 on Sunday.

Jones also was the first player to homer in his first two Series at-bats since Oakland's Gene Tenace in 1972. He was the first player to hit two homers in a game since Philadelphia's Lenny Dyktra in 1993.

In Atlanta's last game, Jones homered in the 15-0 rout of the Cardinals in Game 7 on Thursday night.

"He's about as good a prospect as you're going to see in any organization," Cox said.

Smoltz, meanwhile, was holding the Yankees hitless until Wade Boggs' RBI double with two outs in the fifth. After overcoming four walks in the first two innings, he retired nine straight batters.

Smoltz improved to 4-0 in the postseason this year and 9-1 overall in 17 career starts in the postseason. The major league leader in wins and strikeouts this year, he left after six easy innings of two-hit ball.

Fred McGriff lined a home run off the foul pole in the fifth, and Jones started a three-run sixth with an infield hit, an odd play in which his bat broke and the barrel tangled up Boggs at third base.

Later in the inning, Marquis Grissom and Mark Lemke hit RBI singles and Chipper Jones had a sacrifice fly.

Braves - they routed St. Louis 14-0 in Game 5 and won by 15 runs in Game 7 - the Yankees were not so used to such beatings.

'Sleepers' anything but a yawn

Greg Kirschling The Daily Iowan

"Sleepers" is a harrowing, occasionally affecting movie, but, after it ends, more than a few people will probably wonder why it was made. The problem isn't that the movie tells an ugly story, but that it seems to lose sight of why it's telling such an ugly story.

Based on Lorenzo Carcaterra's follows four teen-age boys growing up under the guidance of Father Bobby (Robert De Niro) in Hell's Kitchen, New York, in 1967. In the most alarming and frightening scene of the film, the boys accidentally put a man in the hospital after trying to steal a few hot dogs.

 $\star \star 1/2$ out of $\star \star \star \star$

As a result, Michael, Shakes, Tommy and John are remanded to the Wilkinson Home for Boys. This is a reform school with horrors beyond even Dickensian proportions, where several guards (led by Kevin Bacon, in a demonic performance) constantly abuse the boys sexually.

In the film's saddest and most truthful scene, the boys sit together in the school on the day before one of them is to be released.

Jason Patric and Brad Pitt star in the revenge-driven drama "Sleepers currently showing at Coral IV theatres.

the word about the sexual abuse, but the other boys try to discourage supposedly true bestseller, the film him from doing so. Trying to be tough, yet moved to silence, the boys are too ashamed to face the problem, prompting the characters and situation to uncomfortably echo today's society.

Yet, that same night, the guards come back for more, but then the film suddenly shifts to 1981, where the movie slowly begins descending into a quagmire. In the second half of the film, all four men (Jason Patric, Brad Pitt, Ron Eldard, Billy Crudup) grow apart, but they are joined together in complicated ways to enact a complicated payback.

The first act of the movie - following the boys' adventures before reform school - is vividly rendered, yet it seems to exist only as a device to show us how the kids learn all the lessons that prove to be important later in the film. Moreover, it's marred by pretentious on-screen narration by the elder Shakes (Jason Patric, "Rush"), and this chatter only serves as a way to remind the audience to pay attention to important scenes.

The sequences in the reform school are, by contrast, hideous and shocking, though thankfully non-explicit. They are painful to watch, and these grueling scenes might have been justified had the Shakes (who is loosely based on film followed up on them and fur-Carcaterra himself) vows to spread ther explored what such torture did to the boys as adults. Instead as the action shifts to 1981 writer/director Barry Levinson ("Rain Man," "Avalon") buries us in the labyrinth of standard revenge plot machinations.

In the shuffle, "Sleepers" lose the pain of its characters. This i particularly detrimental to the sub tle performance of Pitt, who adeptly brings out the numbness of the adult Mike. Pitt, who gives the best performance in a solid cast, has one brilliantly sad scene with old flame Carol (Minnie Driver, "Circle of Friends"), and the last half could use more scenes of that caliber.

Also, in "Sleepers," Levinson relies more on flashy visuals than he has in any of his previous films. With cinematographer Michael Ballhaus, the effect is often very hypnotic and arresting. Yet, at the same time, the overabundance of style highlights the lack of substance.

Ultimately, it hurts to see a promising and serious film like "Sleepers" gradually roll downhill simply because it forsakes the human element that made it promising and serious in the first place. Only in the mildly touching final scene (of this two-and-a-halfhour film) does the last half of "Sleepers" climb out of its revenge rut and remind us this is a movie about lost innocence, not retribution. But by then it's too little too late.

Arrest warrant issued for rap label founder

LOS ANGELES (AP) - An arrest warrant has been issued for Death Row Records owner Marion "Suge" Knight after he failed to show up for drug testing as part of his probation for assaulting two rappers

Superior Court Judge John Ouderkirk issued the warrant Friday after a probation officer said Knight had failed to show for testing and may have left the country without permission. The judge said the arrest warrant would be recalled if Knight appears at a Tuesday court hearing. Knight is in the United States and will appear at the hearing, said his attorney, David Kenner.

ABC News faces privacy violation

"It never occurred to me while I was seeing the (women) that they would be taping me," Ziem said. "I thought, 'This is ABC News. These aren't thugs.''

ABC News said the accusations are groundless.

"In fact, no such recordings were made or criminal laws violated," spokesperson Julie Hoover said Friday.

nationally recognized expert in the Committee for Freedom of the Press.

According to Ziem, ABC associate producer Deborah Stone and her sister-in-law Julie Stone visited Ziem's office in July, complaining of headaches, lightheadedness, unusual thirst and chest pains.

The doctor said both women seemed healthy.

Then, she said, an associate heard from a colleague at a New York City hospital Stossel had sent two phony patients to Ziem.

Ziem said she initially agreed to give Stossel an interview. But she changed her mind, believing Stos-
