Academy Award-winner Guggenheim to lecture tonight at UI

Alison Herman

The Daily Iowan

It was on a CT student that filmmaker Charles Guggenheim first became interested in film. "I had attended film school, and..." something was missing." Most of Guggenheim's films have become classics, which is unusual for documentary films. He has made films about ordinary citizens, for whom he says, "there is no greater story than their life stories." Guggenheim's work is not only entertaining, but it is instructive as well. His films are a reminder that there is great value in every human life.

Guggenheim's films are widely regarded as some of the best in the genre of documentary filmmaking. His work has been lauded for its ability to capture the essence of ordinary people in extraordinary situations. These films have been shown in high-school and college settings around the country, as they serve as valuable tools for students around the world. Guggenheim has been awarded many prizes for his work, including an Oscar for his 1986 film "The Nine From Little Rock," dealing with the integration of the Arkansas school system.

Guggenheim is back in Iowa to present the Alumni Lecture in Union College. He is expected to present a lecture on "The Importance of Documentary Filmmaking," which will focus on how documentary films can provide a platform for the voices of ordinary people. He will also discuss the challenges of making documentary films and how they can be used to bring attention to important social issues.

Among Guggenheim's Academy Award winners are the 1966 film "The Nine From Little Rock," the 1963 production "RFK Remembered," "The Johnson-Food" in 1969 and most recently, in 1995, "Time for Justice." WASHINGTON — Even as evi­

The $4,200 test is the latest effort to identify the rapid decimation of the screening­casting gene, even though patients are struggling with the implications of learning how they have such genes when there's little that can be done.

Tehran, Iran — Barbie is gether figure in a revealing manner.

The doll, which resembles American Barbie, was introduced at Tehran's national court. She is Iran's first attempt to make what authorities consider cultural corruptions from the West.

And in contrast to films that got the country's long­standing concern for the "Barbie Doll" trend out of the way, the new national doll's man­ically has a brother. He wears the same clothes but is cut out of a blue cloth.

"Barbie is an American woman who never wants to get pregnant and never looks at the contraceptive nor looks at the way the man behaves," said Rouhollah Shadab, who owns the doll factory.

"Barbie is like a Trojan Horse," Shadab said. "She goes to Western cultural influences, such as beauty and elegant clothes. Once she enters our society, she destroys those influences on our children."

Big Ten unbeatens clash at Kinnick

Waver Deys
The Daily Iowan

When No. 3 Ohio State travels into Kinnick Stadium Saturday to take on No. 3 Iowa, Hawkeyes fans will be praying for any bit of weather that can slow down the Buckeyes. Head coach Hayden Fry said in an interview earlier in the week that "a rainy day might reduce their margin of victory." Fry said "Maybe they'll be well on their way by the third quarter and rains come..."

The Buckeyes have done just about everything except lose lately, and against quality opponents such as Notre Dame and Penn State, the Buckeyes are ranked No. 1 in the Big Ten in five defensive categories.

In the center of the soaring 40,000-seat stadium in Iowa City, the Hawkeye Stadium, the Iowa Harrier Track and Field team is still collecting gold medals. The team's consistent excellence has earned them a national title and a return to the national championships. The team's consistent excellence has earned them a national title and a return to the national championships.

Iowa State has been a little more successful, running just a 1-7-2 win against Wisconsin at home, and falling behind 7-6 to Purdue on Saturday. The Hawkeyes have been very consistent, and they're putting eight people on defense and throwing the football so I'm not worried about that.

But don't give up hope. There are still a lot of games left in this year's schedule. The Buckeyes have a tough game against the Hawkeyes, and it will be important to keep the pressure on them.

Jerry, Jimmy finally square off

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Friday at 10pm

Jerry Rice and Jimmy Johnson have the best quarterbacks in the NFL, but only one of them will be on the field when they meet again on Saturday, this time at open practice for the Florida State and Georgia Tech football teams. The game will be held on the campus of the University of Florida.

Rice, who heads the offense for the Jacksonville Jaguars, will go against Johnson, who leads the defense for the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets.

The two quarterbacks have been involved in a back-and-forth battle since they were in high school, and their rivalry has only intensified as they have moved up the ranks in the NFL. Johnson, who led the Miami Dolphins to a Super Bowl victory in 1995, views Rice as a threat to his team's success.

Rice, on the other hand, respects Johnson's ability as a defensive coordinator but doesn't believe he can hold back the Jaguars' offense.

The game on Saturday will be a preview of the upcoming season, with both teams looking to establish a strong foundation for their campaigns.

IOWA VS. OHIO STATE

In Iowa City today, the Hawkeyes face the Ohio State Buckeyes in a crucial game for both teams. The Hawkeyes are currently at 5-1 in the Big Ten Conference, while Ohio State is at 4-2. The winner of this game will have a significant impact on the conference standings.

The game is expected to be a high-scoring contest, with both teams having strong offenses. The Buckeyes are led by quarterback Urban Meyer, who has been one of the best in the conference this year. The Hawkeyes have a powerful running attack led by tailback Anthony Johnson.

The defense will be crucial in this game, with both teams having strong units. The Hawkeyes will rely on their talented secondary, while Ohio State will need to shut down the Hawkeyes' running game.

Stay tuned for updates and highlights from this highly anticipated game.
Sports

Hawkeye volleyball ends with tough tests

Iowa volleyball coach Linda Schraudolph has been elated by her team's 7-2 start, the first half of the Big Ten season, but the Hawkeyes enter this weekend at the University of Cincinnati (1-2) and at Michigan (4-2) with losses to Ohio State and Northwestern. Schraudolph said her team had to win at least one of these games to stay in the top four in the Big Ten, a challenge she believes her Hawkeyes can meet.

Leonard sets comeback date

Ray Leonard, the former Olympic gold medalist and three-time world champion, has announced he will return to the ring on June 13, 1989 in Las Vegas. The bout will be promoted by Don King and is expected to be a highly anticipated event in the boxing world.

TULSA, Okla. — To hear Tom Lehman tell it, his 66 in the first round of the Northern Telecom Classic was not bad enough to make him break par in the first round. But it left him lower than fifth in his last five rounds. Lehman said. Several of the big names in the field, including Tiger Woods, finished the round with an even-par 70. Lehman said.

"You tend to get more about playing good," Lehman said. "But nobody wants to be yesterday's news."

The 39-year-old Woods is famously close to making everybody's money. He has won twice in seven tournaments since the end of the season, and he's fifth on the money list. Lehman said.

"I think it was a good day," Lehman said. "I can feel good about it."

Woods said that after a three-fer and three-fer round: "Around here, that's pretty good. I felt comfortable all day in which I added several shots with some putts and a couple of shots with the woods. Woods had 70 here. The first round had 75."

"I felt like I played well," Lehman said. "I think I played well."

The round had a good beginning to the day unfolded with an awkward day, Woods said. "I couldn't get on the greens and I couldn't get off the greens. It was a good day."

Freshman Rob Thein waits for his moment in the Hawkeye backfield

Running back threw 25-yard pass that led to Iowa win last week

Mike Triplett
THE DAILY Iowan

Whether it be coach Hayden Fry or receiver Tim Dwight, whenever someone is asked about freshman tailback Rob Thein, their answer is always the same.

Thein has one carry and one pass on the season, but the fact he was thrown into such a critical situation is a certain indication of the confidence the team has in him.

However, the 230-pounder probably won't be spending a lot of time throwing the ball.

Make no mistake, Thein gets the job done by putting his head down and plowing over a defender. It was his running style that helped him break the single-season rushing record of high school teammate and Iowa City legend Tim Dwight at Iowa City High School.

"He can run people over. I think we need to get him in there and get some hard yardage out of him," Dwight said. "I'll tell you what, a couple times when people run up and think they can knock him out, then he knocks them out instead, they're gonna think twice about doing it again."

"I always make fun of him about the record, but he always reminds me I had a lot more carries and he was always getting pulled at halftime. He doesn't think of it as a legitimate record."

Of course, Dwight's flattery ends when he and Thein discuss the rushing record — Thein rushed for 2,244 yards and 31 touchdowns on 264 carries as a senior. Dwight had 2,113 yards, 43 touchdowns and 196 carries a year earlier.

"I always make fun of him about the record," Thein said. "but he always reminds me I had a lot more carries and he was always getting pulled at halftime."

"I think our friendship helps me a lot," Thein said. "Sometimes it was real difficult, being a freshman and not playing a lot. It was tough."

"He doesn't think of it as a legitimate record."

"He's in the high point of his career. His pass play against the No. 10 team in the country made some noise and he's ready to go."

"It's just a matter of time, kind of like that halfback pass, he just needed an opportunity."

"I always make fun of him about the record, but he always reminds me I had a lot more carries and he was always getting pulled at halftime. He doesn't think of it as a legitimate record."

Rob Thein, Iowa running back who broke Hawkeye Tim Dwight's all-time rushing record at Iowa City High School

GAME THEIN: Rob Thein makes a special teams tackle earlier this season. Thein has been getting reps at Iowa's No. 1 tailback position in practice this week due to injuries to Sedrick Shaw and Tavian Banks.

Now, however, Thein admits he's in the high point of his career. His pass play against the No. 10 team in the country made some noise and this week he's a critical part of a Hawkeye offense preparing to play No. 2 Ohio State in his hometown.

Thein has been getting almost all of the reps in practice with Sedrick Shaw and Tavian Banks nursing injuries. Both are expected to play in the game, though.

"Right now, he's No. 1 while we're resting Sedrick and Tavian," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "He's getting a lot of reps and he's ready to go."

"It's just a matter of time, kind of like that halfback pass, he just needed an opportunity."

Fry also mentioned Thein's previous shining moment — 141 yards and three touchdowns in the 1996 Spring Game.

Again, thanks to injuries, Thein was moved over from backup fullback to backup tailback a couple weeks prior to the game.

"I wasn't expecting to get that many carries in the Spring Game," Thein recalled. "I hadn't been playing much at tailback at that time. I think that performance really helped me a lot. It helped my confidence."

Thein probably won't get the opportunity to put together either a 100-yard or a three-touchdown performance this year. Maybe not in '97 either. But Thein's still only a freshman and Shaw and Banks won't be around forever.

So, is Thein waiting in the wings to be the next featured tailback in the Hawkeye offense?

"It's hard to say. All these guys with the same goal are gonna come in the next few years and play hard and step it up," Thein said. "But I'll keep stepping it up, too. And I'll keep working hard."

Thein's future appears to be tailback, but he sent his redshirt season as a fullback. He added 30 pounds to his 198-pound high-school frame and later regained a good portion of his speed.

"It really doesn't matter that much to me where I play," Thein said. "I like tailback, that's where I played in high school. But the main priority for me is just getting in the game a whole lot.

Thein said he doesn't want to add more weight unless he's asked to move to fullback. He could drop a little if he stays at tailback, but he said his speed is pretty good right now. He doesn't use speed to get the job done, though.

"I'm not ever going to be as fast as Sedrick or Tavian," Thein said. "That's just not ever going to be my style, to try and outrun people."

Thein compared his style to Hawkeye fullback Kent Kahl.

"He ran with a lot of power, but still moved around people," Thein said.

"Tailback, fullback, quarterback? Who knows where Tim will make his biggest impact in a Hawkeye uniform. But you can bet on two things: he will make an impact and he won't be breaking any of Dwight's records at Iowa.

"No, he's not," Dwight agreed. "I couldn't see him running a route at 230 pounds."
HAWKEYE PROFILE

The last line of defense

Chris Snider

A
lot of factors weighed into Iowa free safety Damien Robinson's decision to attend the University of Iowa. Iowa City's environment, the Hawkeye coaching staff and Iowa's academic tradition, to name a few. But one more thing intrigued the Blue Chip All-American from Hillcrest High School in Dallas, Texas: "A lot of snow," Robinson said. Four Iowa winters later, the 6-2, 205-pound senior has changed his mind. "Being from Texas, we never did get much snow," he explained. "Now that I've gotten adjusted to it, I'm ready to go back to the heat, back in the south." Whether Robinson will get his wish of moving back south remains to be seen. If Iowa coach Hayden Fry's predictions are correct, Robinson may end up somewhere like Green Bay or Buffalo. It all depends on which league selects him in the 1997 NFL draft. Fry has already compared Robinson favorably to former Hawkeye and current San Francisco free safety Merton Hanks. "This guy is becoming like a linebacker out of the secondary," Fry said. "He is so far ahead at this point of say, Merton Hanks, who recently signed for about seven million with the 49ers. Robinson is really showing all-Big Ten credentials." Naturally, Robinson's eyes light up when the subject of the NFL draft comes up. He said it has been a dream of his since he first started playing football at the age of five. For the most part, though, he keeps things in perspective. "If my opportunity comes and presents itself, that's later, but right now, I'm all about playing for the Hawks," Robinson said. "This is my last go-around. I don't have any more, so I've just got to give it my all these last couple games." As far as the comparisons to Hanks, Robinson said he isn't there yet. "I'll take it if (Fry) gives it to me, but I think Merton is better right now because he's making the most money," Robinson said. "He's got a lot of riches right now." And if those riches come Robinson's way in the future? "I won't complain about it at all," he said.

Robinson excels as Iowa free safety

Fry isn't the only one Robinson is impressing. Iowa sophomore defensive lineman Jared DeVries, an NFL prospect in his own right, marveled at the play of Robinson in the last week's Hawkeye victory over Penn State. Robinson finished the game with 14 tackles, including a number of blistering hits. "You don't find many safeties coming out of the secondary and just laying the wood on people," DeVries said. "That's just amazing. He is laying the wood on people — every play. That's the great part of our defense. Our secondary can hit." Robinson, who was not known as a physical player last year, decided he needed to work on his hitting over the summer. So far, it has paid off. Last week, he met Penn State fullback Aaron Harris head to head, and put Harris out of the game. "I'm trying to be more physical because that's the only way you can compete in the Big Ten," Robinson said. "I felt that kept me from making some plays last year." The days of Robinson not making plays are apparently over. "I have never in all of my coaching, had a free safety hit with the authority that Damien Robinson has in the last three or four ball games," Fry said. "He has really come on as a football player." Fry hopes that rubs off on some of his other defenders. "I think that's going to motivate even some of our other guys to hit with a little bit more ferocity because it's a lot of fun," he said. "He's found out it's a lot of fun to hit like that, and I think it's rubbing off." The person most responsible for getting Robinson to the next level, aside from himself, is Iowa secondary coach Chuck Long, a nine-year veteran of the NFL. "He always tells us a lot about how they practice in the NFL, things like that," Robinson said. "Coach Long pretty much puts it all out there straight as it's going to be." Long also puts Robinson's prospects as an NFL player right out there straight as it's going to be. "He has that talent to play on Sunday," Long said. "It's up to him to work toward playing on Sunday. He's come leaps and bounds from last year, but he still has a lot to prove this year to get to that next level." "My job is to keep him improving and see how far he can take his ability." Robinson started 10 games at free safety after making the switch from cornerback last year, picking off five passes and finishing fifth on the team with 77 tackles. But there was still something missing, something Robinson found prior to the start of this season. "I think the main thing I've done is rededicated my life to Christ," Robinson said. "I let Christ shine through me and I give it my all out there on the football field." Robinson feels his new-found success this season has been a direct result of his new-found faith. "I found myself in situations where sometimes you find yourself as a player, playing mediocre," Robinson explains. "A lot of people expect so much from you and you're trying to give it your all, but somehow you just keep coming up short. "I was failing short in other phases of my life, so I just felt I had to rededicate my life to Christ because I wasn't doing something right." This year, it seems Robinson can't do wrong. Seemingly every time an opposing offensive player goes down, Robinson is there. He is third on the Hawkeyes with 61 tackles in five games. In Big Ten games, he is second with 37. He also leads the team and is second in the league with four interceptions. That gives him 12 interceptions for his career, tying him for third on Iowa's all-time list. Nile Kinnick and Devon Mitchell share the Iowa record with 18 picks.

THE DAILY Iowan

On a team filled with stars like Sedrick Shaw, Tavian Banks and Tim Dwight, it's easy for a second-string fullback to get lost in the shuffle — even when that player is averaging over ten yards every time he rushes the ball.

But Aaron Granquist, a 6-4, 230-pound senior from Osage, Iowa, is used to being lost in the shuffle. It happened to him coming out of high school, again when he left junior college and it's happened to him a couple of times since joining the Iowa football team as a walk-on in 1994.

Despite some impressive numbers at Osage High School, Granquist received offers from mainly Division III colleges when he graduated in 1992. Because those schools couldn't offer him a scholarship, he decided to attend Waldorf Junior College in Forest City, Iowa, just 45 minutes from his hometown.

"I think I was a little undersized for a fullback," Granquist said about himself coming out of high school. "I only weighed 205." At Waldorf, Granquist didn't play like someone who was undersized. In his first season, he rushed for 819 yards and his sophomore season he exploded for 1,647 yards, earning second team junior college all-American honors.

Now it was just a question of which Division I school he would take his talents to. Granquist made three official visits — to Syracuse, Colorado State and BYU — but none of the schools offered him a scholarship, a scenario that he found somewhat surprising.

"After being an all-American, I had high expectations and got let down a bit," Granquist said.

Down, but not out. A longtime Hawkeye fan, Granquist turned his back on those other schools and walked on at Iowa, where he could better afford the in-state tuition.

"As far as getting a scholarship, the coaches said if I projected to be in the two-deep, a scholarship would come my way," Granquist said.

He joined the Hawkeyes in 1994, sitting out the first season as a redshirt. He entered last season, his junior year, as Iowa's No. 2 fullback, behind Rodney Filer.

Yet, he still wasn't given a scholarship. Instead, another player was thrust into his position — freshman Michael Burger, who moved from tight end to fullback.

"All of a sudden, I was getting less plays in scrimmages," Granquist recalled. "I didn't feel I was being given a fair shot to move up or keep the No. 2 spot. They wanted Burger at No. 2."

Granquist said there is no animosity towards Burger, who took over the No. 1 fullback position when Rodney Filer got injured last year and has held it ever since, or the coaching staff.

"Looking back, I see the coaches knew Burger would be great," Granquist said. "He's a great fullback. There's no hate towards the coaches as far as that goes."

With Burger and Filer both on scholarship, Granquist was once again lost in the shuffle — despite the fact he is listed along with Filer as the No. 2 fullback and has played more than Filer this season.

Granquist has played more than any non-scholarship Hawkeye player this season.

"Sometimes, I feel bitter, but not really," Granquist said. "I'm playing football on national television. How can I complain if I'm doing the hokey pokey after we play Penn State?"

Granquist is listed as Iowa's No. 2 fullback.

FOLLOW ME: Aaron Granquist leads the charge for Iowa running back Sedrick Shaw at Kinnick Stadium earlier this season.

"I think maybe the reason I did that was the fact that my first carry was against New Mexico State and I fumbled," Granquist said. "But I still wonder what would have happened if he would have walked on at Iowa right out of high school instead of going to junior college."

"It's hard to say," he said. "I don't regret going there because of the success I had and the friends I made, although if I would have walked on at Iowa and been in the weight program, I would have improved."

"Sometimes, I wonder what would have happened if I came to Iowa out of high school."

Granquist said his goal is to be invited to an NFL tryout camp and catch on as a special teams player. He also said he wouldn't turn his back on the Canadian Football League or the World League.

"I'd like to play a year or two, just to say I did it," he said. But even if that never happens, he'll have fond memories of his days with the Hawkeyes, including doing the hokey pokey in Happy Valley.

"The win last week would be the best so far," he said.

THE BEST DEALS ARE AT NISSAN OF IOWA CITY
718 HIGHWAY 6 EAST, IOWA CITY, IA 319-337-5000

During high school, Joe Gibson had a choice of where to play football: hometown University of Miami — a school that has produced future NFL stars — and Iowa State.

Certainly, Joe Gibson — a 6-foot-3, 300-pound offensive tackle — could have spent the rest of his life in Iowa City.

"When I first got to high school, Gibson redshirted his first year, and he wasn’t the best football player on the team," said Iowa State coach Joe Tiller. "But that year, I was really impressed with his work ethic and the way he played. He really wanted to be the best he could be."

Now, as a senior at Iowa State, Gibson is one of the top offensive linemen in the Big 12, and he is a consensus All-Big 12 selection.

"I think he’s the best player in the league," Tiller said. "He’s a great football player, and he’s a great person."
HAWKEYE PROFILE

Gibson takes off for Hawks

Mike Triplitt
THE DAILY IOWAN

During his senior year of high school, Iowa receiver Damon Gibson had high hopes. The plan was to play for the University of Miami—a breeding ground for future NFL receivers.

Certainly he didn’t expect to spend the next three years of his life in Iowa City, never catching more than five passes in a season.

“When I was coming out of high school, I had big dreams,” Gibson recalled. “I think any freshman expects to play right away, and I did. I was watching ‘Rocket’ Ismail and Desmond Howard, and I thought I could step right in and do just what they did.

“But that hasn’t happened. Now I see myself as a couple years behind. And that’s OK; I just have to work that much harder.”

After redshirting his first year, the 5-foot-9, 180-pounder from Houston, didn’t catch a pass during his freshman season. Last year, he caught five balls for a total of 59 yards.

But this year, he’s coming into his own. He nearly doubled his career yardage in one play—a 45-yard diving catch at Tulsa. He more-than-doubled his 95 catch total in one game, pulling down six passes for 91 yards at Indiana.

For the season, he has 12 receptions for 217 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

“During those first couple years, I was seeing how hard other guys worked in the off-season,” Gibson said. “I wanted to do the same; I didn’t want to be left behind.

“I worked even harder last summer. I knew sooner or later it would pay off.”

His efforts have been noticed. Iowa coach Hayden Fry said Gibson has made drastic improvement since last season.

“He and Rich Willock have probably made as much improvement at receiver as anybody we have,” Fry said.

Gibson is flattered by such comments, but said the rewards from his hard work lie in knowing what he could do and regaining some of that old confidence.

“Even if Coach hadn’t said that, I could feel myself improving,” Gibson said. “I kind of lacked a little confidence after my freshman year. You start doubting yourself. I had lost some confidence in my ability.”

Gibson’s strength lies in his speed. Until teammate Tim Dwight pulled down a 65-yard pass last week at Penn State, Gibson had consistently been the Hawkeyes’ deep threat this season.

He showed off his speed early, breaking loose for an 18-yard touchdown on a short screen pass in the season opener against Arizona. A week later, he was on the receiving end of a 42-yard touchdown bomb against Iowa State.

“He has outstanding ability; he’s learned how to catch the ball and man, he can fly,” Fry said.

Gibson talked about using his speed to his advantage.

“Whatever defensive back I go against, I feel like I have an advantage over them,” Gibson said. “I don’t like to say how fast I am or sound like bragging, but I feel whenever the ball goes up in the air, I’ve got the edge.

“The guy covering you has to react from your movement to the ball, so if you have that break of speed, it’s a tremendous advantage.”

Gibson, with his 4.4-speed, was featured at running back while playing for Forest Brook High School, though he said he always felt like a receiver just playing running back. And though he rushed for 1,650 yards and 25 touchdowns as a senior, he was recruited at the wide receiver position.

Gibson attracted a lot of attention out of high school. He orally committed to both Pittsburgh and Miami before again changing his mind and coming to Iowa State.

As it turned out, the Pittsburgh football program is now in shambles and the Hawkeyes, as of this week, are actually ranked ahead of once-powerful Miami.

“Who knows? I guess it was meant to be,” Gibson said. “And had I went to Pittsburgh, I probably would have been regretting it right now.”

One thing Gibson has never regretted is switching back to receiver. He knows the running backs get their hands on the ball more often, but he doesn’t like to think of it that way.

“Playing receiver, you don’t get the ball as much. But that just motivates me to try and do something special every time I get the ball because I only get so many chances and I want to make the most of them,” Gibson explained.

Those chances have been fairly limited at Iowa, which doesn’t exactly have an all-out air attack. But with an outstanding rushing duo of Sedrick Shaw and Tavian Banks in the lineup, Gibson said he doesn’t blame the coaches.

In high school, Gibson didn’t drop a pass, but he said the team didn’t throw the ball often. He remembers pressuring the coach to air it out more. Now, though, he said his attitude is different. What’s best for the team is what’s best for him.

Still, opportunities do exist. Against the Hoosiers, quarterback and former scout team partner Matt Sherman called his number time and time again.

“I know he has a lot of talent, we just had to figure out how to get him in game situations,” Sherman said. “He’s worked hard and put in the time. For us, he hasn’t been a surprise.”
"Anybody can use a Mac — all it takes is the click of the mouse."

"I thought it was going to take forever to learn the ropes of the computer. Surprisingly, I was proven wrong. Macs are simple and accessible. Macs are the easiest computers to learn, and they make college life much more livable.

I've used Macs forever — at home, for school, work and on the job! I've used Macs for papers, graphics, and newspaper layouts. Macs help you organize your work, and they are time efficient."

The Pancake Man

Orlando Pace doesn’t block defenders, he flattens them

Chris Snider
THE DAILY IOWAN

Ohio State coach John Cooper dubbed him “Big Dog.” Iowa coach Hayden Fry thinks of him more as a gorilla. But both coaches agree on at least one thing — Orlando Pace is the best offensive lineman in college football.

“He’s the best college offensive lineman I’ve ever seen,” Fry said heading into this week’s game with the Buckeyes.

Pace, a 6-6, 350-pound offensive lineman, won the Lombardi Award as the nation’s top lineman last season and is a serious candidate for the Heisman Trophy this season. And he’s only a junior.

“One thing I’d like to see, I’d like to see somebody tell me what is the Heisman trophy winner. What do you have to do to win the Heisman trophy? If that goes to the best football player, I don’t know how you can not consider the ‘Big Dog,’ as we call him, Orlando Pace.”

John Cooper, Ohio State coach

“Of course the Heisman matters,” he said. “I have a legitimate chance and we’ll have to wait and see.”

It’s hard for Pace to put up statistics that compare to running backs and quarterbacks, but he has found one statistic nobody can ignore — pancakes.

Pace has 41 pancakes (when a defender is put on his back) through six games this year, including ten last week against Purdue.

“Once you pancake a guy and look into their eyes, the next couple plays they really don’t come that hard,” Pace said. “That’s when you know you really can dominate somebody.”

Dominating defenders is what Pace has done since he first set foot on the Ohio State campus. He has been the Buckeyes’ regular left tackle since the first day of fall camp his freshman year.

As a marquee player on a team that lost a fair amount of talent from a year ago (Bob Hoying, Eddie George, Terry Glenn and Rickey Dudley all departed to the NFL), one would expect Pace to pick up his leadership role this season.

“I’m the type of leader that would lead by example,” Pace said. “I’m not a real vocal type player. I just go out there and do what it takes to win. If the younger guys see me do that, then they’ll try to do the same.”

He does speak out when needed, however, like when his team was down 14-0 to Purdue last week.

“I don’t say much, but when I speak, they listen,” Pace said. “I get the guys motivated when needed.”

Pace had an opportunity to turn pro after last season, but chose to stay put in Columbus.

“I think it was a decision that I made,” Pace said. “I wanted to stay another year. There are things that I still wanted to do in college.”

Things like win a Big Ten championship. A loss to Michigan in the last game of last season prevented the Buckeyes from doing that a year ago.

“I have a lot of goals,” Pace said. “I want to go to the Rose Bowl and possibly win the national championship.”

So Pace turned down almost guaranteed millions of dollars in the NFL draft and returned for at least one more year of college football.

“You always think what could have been,” Pace said about turning pro, “but I’ll have my chance, hopefully, sometime in the future.”

Maybe at the end of this year.

“That’s something that I’ll probably think about at the end of the season if everything goes well,” he said. “Then I’ll sit down and think about that.”

Fry won’t be sad to see him go. Simply watching Pace on tape is enough to give Fry, or any other coach, nightmares.

“Most big guys will not cut block. They’ll just run into you and try to knock you down,” Fry said. “That big rascal will be running full speed and right down at the ankles and flip a guy.”

Fry said Iowa’s strategy is to just let Pace do what he wants this weekend, just like you would a gorilla.

“I think by far the most intelligent thing to do is to ignore him,” Fry said. “He’s like that big gorilla with a guy walking down the street.

“A guy says, ‘Is that your gorilla?’ ‘Yes sir.’ ‘Where do you keep him?’ ‘He stays at the house.’ ‘He stays inside the house?’ ‘Yes.’ ‘Where does he go the bathroom?’ ‘Anywhere he wants to.’

And Pace knows it.

“Basically, I think my biggest challenge is just Orlando Pace challenging Orlando Pace, being tough against myself,” he said.

Don’t be surprised if he’s pretty tough against the Iowa defense this weekend as well.

Tulsa loss may have been

Just over a month ago, after losing a shocker at Tulsa, the Iowa football team appeared to have hit rock bottom. A team that came into the season with Rose Bowl hopes was suddenly left wondering if it could even finish in the top half of the Big Ten.

But after winning at Penn State last week, the Hawkeyes are suddenly back in the Big Ten title hunt. And Iowa coach Hayden Fry thinks the loss may have a lot to do with that fact.

Instead of hanging his head after the defeat, Fry remembered some advice he was given by former Southern Methodist coach from 1935-1941.

They lost right off the bat to Missouri," Fry recalled, and he said, "Coach, I know you think I'm crazy, but that's the biggest thing that's happened to us. It made us get our heads screwed on straight. It brought us closer as a team and I could pop the whip in practice, work them harder and everything. And they went on and won the rest of their ballgames. I've always remembered that in my coaching.

You don't want to lose. You're embarrassed, you're hurt, but a lot of times you'll accomplish more than if you don't."
HOT HAWKEYE: Iowa junior Tim Dwight returns a punt against Penn State last Saturday in State College. Dwight earned the AT&T Long Distance Award for his 63-yard punt return against the Nittany Lions, the longest punt in the nation last week.

Buckeyes still eyeing national title

Ohio State impresses Iowa's Fry

Wayne Drehs
THE DAILY IOWAN

The No. 2 Ohio State Buckeyes didn't play one of their better games of the season last week at Purdue, but still won 42-14. That says something about their football team.

Some people didn't expect much from Ohio State this season, following last year's national title chase that ended with the graduation of tailback Eddie George, wide receiver Terry Glenn, quarterback Bobby Hoying, and tight end Rickey Dudley.

But the Buckeyes have filled the holes on offense perfectly, and again find themselves in the hunt for the national championship.

"You think there is going to be a drop-off, but they've obviously done the best job in America of recruiting," Iowa head coach Hayden Fry said. "We knew the replacements for the graduates have come from both within the Ohio State system and without. At tailback, junior Pepe Pearson has waited behind George for his turn to shine, and now is No. 2 in the Big Ten in rushing with 124 yards per game. He also leads the conference in scoring, averaging 12 points scored per game.

At wide receiver, senior Dimitrious Stanley is the leader on the team in receptions with 4.2 per game.

The quarterback situation is a more complicated one, with junior Joe Germaine and senior Archie Griffin splitting the duties. Combined, the two give Ohio State the No. 1 rated passing offense in the Big Ten.

Both their running and passing game is just excellent," Iowa linebacker Matt Hughes said. "The running is solid with Pepe Pearson and they also have excellent passing. Stanley is a great passer with great receivers to throw to."

The defense was supposed to lead Ohio State this year, anchored by senior defensive ends Mike Vrabel and Matt Steinbauer.

"You think there is going to be a drop-off, but they've obviously done the best job in America of recruiting," Hayden Fry, Iowa coach on Ohio State

Finkes, noseguard Luke Fickell, and cornerback Shawn Springs. All four Buckeyes were listed as preseason all-American candidates, and the defense hasn't disappointed, leading the Big Ten in both total and scoring defense.

"They've changed up their defense, with a lot more blitzing, stunning and man-to-man coverage," Fry said. "We knew their defense was going to be good coming in to this year, and it is."

Springs is the last player to return an interception for a touchdown against Iowa. He did so last season in the Buckeyes 56-35 win over the Hawkeyes. Back for his senior season, the third year starter is nominated for the Thorpe award in 1996, as the nation's top defensive back.

"I would imagine, Springs could probably start for any NFL team right now in the secondary," Fry said. "He is just a super, super cornerback."

One of the biggest additions to the Buckeye defense has been true freshman linebacker Andy Katzenmoyer. Heraled as one of the best athletes coming out of high school this spring, the Ohio native wears Buckeye great Archie Griffin's No. 45. He is third on the team in tackles and leads Ohio State in sacks with six for thirty eight yards lost.

"At 6-4, 236 pounds, their freshman linebacker just runs like a deer," Fry said. "He is truly incredible."

The most intriguing player on the Buckeye team though has to be offensive lineman Orland Pace. At 6-6, 364 pounds, the junior tackle is known for putting opponents on their back, a term that's become known as the 'pancake."

Ohio State head coach John Cooper considers Pace a leading candidate for the Heisman trophy this year, an honor Pace would welcome with open arms.

"Of course the Heisman matters to me," Pace said. "I believe I have a legitimate chance to win it. It will just be hard because running backs and quarterbacks and running backs have statistics to be judged upon and I don't."

Video crew stays ahead of the game

Chuck Blount
THE DAILY IOWAN

Few people know more about Hawkeye football than Matt Engelbert. Engelbert has access to film of every play the Hawkeyes have ever run in a game. He also tapes all of the Iowa practices.

Engelbert is not a spy; he is coordinator of the video department for Iowa football.

There are two different sides to the department: video production and video scouting. Mike Mortaritis heads the visual department, while Engelbert takes on the scouting side of things.

Students Jeff Buhr, Brian Condon, Julie Dotson, Rich Lanson and Heather Van Peursen also add to the video staff.

The Iowa video department is in charge of supplementing coaches with information at all aspects of the game. From taping practices to breaking down games to analyzing tapes of prospective recruits, the department is actively involved in all aspects of the game.

Utilizing the state-of-the-art Avid video system, the department can break down a practice and have a copy sitting in the coaches' box by the time the players have showered.

Avid units are currently in use on the sets of television shows such as Lois & Clark, Silk Stockings and the movie "Space Cowboys." Video department records all games and practices.

"A lot of times proud mothers will send in their tapes of their kids, hoping to get them in the door. Then we look at the tape and find out that he should be playing somewhere like Coe."

Matt Engelbert, Iowa video coordinator

State of the art system gives Hawkeyes an edge in breaking down game film

Video department records all games and practices

a mouse instead of the rewinding and forwarding of a video tape.

Possibly the most important of the video department's duties include the preparation of scout tapes. Tapes of future opposition are obtained via team-to-team tape exchange. In Big Ten games, tapes of the most recent game are made available. In all cases, the tapes are then dissected in all facets of the game.

"We break down the games by situations," Engelbert said.

"For example, we could have a tape showing all the plays a team ran on first-down from the twenty yard-line, third and long, etc. If something was in a game and a coach wants it on tape, we can get it."

With the latest technology, manipulation of exchange tapes is a reality in college football. However, Engelbert insists the University of Iowa does not take advantage of that.

"There are some teams out there that do that (capitalize on tapes)," Engelbert said. "The Big Ten has specific standard rules regarding tapes. Since Coach Fry is on the Board of Ethics we make sure we go by the rules."

When dealing with recruits, Iowa video makes copies of submitted tapes and holds them on file for future reference. Once copied, all the tapes are sent back to the respected player or coach who sent them. Many times, tapes are sent without Iowa having previous knowledge of the player.

"A lot of times proud mothers will send in their tapes of their kids, hoping to get them in the door. Then we look at the tape and find out that he should be playing somewhere like Coe," Engelbert said.

The video department has its own library in which it stores all of Iowa's past games. No game tape is ever erased or recycled. At times, Engelbert likes to take advantage of the library to "relive" past contests.

"I still like to dig back and watch our 1990 game at Illinois," Engelbert said. "They were ranked highly and we went down there and whipped them good (54-28)."

Engelbert admits his is somewhat of a dream job.

"I was listening to a radio station out of Chicago the other day and someone made the statement, 'Wouldn't it be perfect if one could get paid solely to watch college football?' I thought about that for a minute and said to myself 'Hey, that's what I do,'" Engelbert said.

College GameDay comes to Iowa City

Chris Snider
THE DAILY IOWAN

Not only can Hawkeye fans show their loyalty on ABC this weekend, they can do it for a nation of ESPN viewers.

ESPN's College GameDay will be on the University of Iowa campus each week. Everyone is welcome to attend the taping of the day-long television show.

Chris Fowler, Lee Corso and Kirk Herbstreit host the show, which will first go on the air at 10:30 a.m. with the last broadcast from Iowa City around 10:30 p.m. The show will broadcast from the Iowa practice field, located between Kinnick Stadium and Iowa's indoor practice facility (the bubble).

Corso, who picked Iowa to upset Penn State last week, said he is excited about coming to Iowa.

"Iowa's fans are terrific," Corso said. "I always thought Iowa and Nebraska would be the two greatest places to coach. I loved the attitude of the fans when I came in here with Indiana."

Corso coached the Hoosiers from 1973 to 1985. He said he enjoys traveling to a different college campus each week.

"I think it's a lot of fun," he said. "It gives us a chance for us to talk first-hand with the fans and see how fired up they are before the game. It's great to talk to the fans."

"They come out and see us and hear our picks. They yell and boo and go crazy," Iowa sports information director Phil Haddy said. "It's a lot of fun, and it's very exciting about the fans when we're going to put on our best dancing shoes."" ESPN GameDay

The TV show will be behind Kinnick Stadium on the Iowa practice field.

Small-town athletes key Iowa success

Becky Gruhn
THE DAILY IOWAN

Eastland, Texas, population 3,000, is not known as a hotbed for football prospects. That didn't prevent Iowa football coaches from discovering linebacker Matt Hughes.

While a majority of star college players come from big cities, the Iowa football team has had success recruiting players from smaller rural towns.

According to Gene Jones, UI recruiting coordinator, recruiting athletes from small towns isn't as challenging as it once used to be.

"In earlier years recruiting athletes from smaller towns was more challenging. But now we have all kinds of recruiting outlet services, and also the use of video tapes has really helped us to locate athletes from small towns who don't get much media coverage about them," Jones said.

"When we get a tape, we know that the competition is probably what exists between the two small schools. But that is when a coach has to make a judgment to overlook the weak competition and identify the young man's talent. I think our coaches do a very good job of this."

Other times, it just takes old-fashioned word of mouth for the UI football staff to become aware of an exceptional talent.

"A lot of times we hear about an athlete from a small town from an alumnus who writes us a letter or gives us a call," Jones said. "I get something almost everyday from an alumn. Other times the high school's head coach will let us know himself that he has an athlete who he feels is capable of playing at the Division I level."

Jones said this doesn't pose a problem on offense or defense from week to week.

"In high school I played running back and was the starting free safety on defense. I also punted, kicked off, and did kick returns, so I was pretty much on the field all the time," Hughes said.

This scenario may leave many recruiters wondering what the athlete's best position would be at the collegiate level. But Jones says this doesn't pose a problem for the UI staff.

"When someone sends me a tape and, for example, plays both defensive back and running back, I'll let both the defensive back and running back coaches take a look at the tape," Jones said. "It may turn out that the DB coach likes him better at that position."

"We basically let every positional coach take a look at the tapes we get where an athlete plays multiple positions. We just have to identify what we think are the young man's strengths."

In Hughes case, the Iowa coaches saw the potential to develop him into a Big Ten linebacker.

"Most schools were recruiting me as a tight end," Hughes said. "Iowa was the only school that offered me a scholarship as a linebacker. This is the position I wanted to play in college because I felt with the build of my body I could play linebacker."

"The things that coach likes about him is that sometimes athletes from small schools may take a little longer to develop initially at the Division I level than the big, explosive jump in talent."

"Instead of being the lone star on the field all of a sudden they have to share a field with a group of all-staters or all-city athletes," he said.

Hughes agreed it was a bit overbearing coming from Eastland to the Hawkeyes.

"It was pretty overwhelming at first when I came here because everyone seemed bigger and faster than me," he said. "I didn't feel a step behind, I felt a few steps behind. But I used this as motivation to push myself to get better."

That type of motivation has catapulted Hughes from a small town hero to a defensive force in the Big Ten.

"I always like to tell people that we've caught some of our biggest fish from the smallest ponds, rather than the big lakes," Jones said.

Buckeyes just too much for Hawkeyes
Ohio State 35, Iowa 23

Rumors that there will be a design-your-own-trick-play-and-watch-the-Hawkeyes-use-it competition at halftime are true. Iowa coach Hayden Fry will have no reservations about trying every trick play that has ever been put on paper against the Buckeyes this Saturday and a few that have only been proven in theory.

Wacker, Minnesota just can't buy a victory

Chris James

While the biggest game in the Big Ten so far is being played in Iowa City, the rest of the conference is starting to jockey for the right to spend ten fun-filled days in either Florida or Texas late in December.

Get out the suntan oil.

Michigan at Minnesota

This is the most interesting game of the week. Wacker, Wacker. I just like typing that word.

Anyway, Minnesota seems to be returning to its midseason form, losing the first three games of the Big Ten season. Michigan can’t decide if it wants to be a Big Ten contender or pretender.

The one thing the Golden Gophers can do well is air it out. Minnesota has the receiver with the coolest name in the Big Ten — junior Tutu Atwell is second in the conference in receptions and yards.

Atwell also has three touchdowns and 497 yards receiving.

Junior QB Cory Sauter isn’t too shabby either. Sauter has thrown for 1403 yards and eight touchdowns.

Righettini will rely on its running game.

The Nittany Lions have to regroup after that devastating loss to Iowa last week.

Going into Bloomington will be no easy task. The Hoosiers played well in their loss to Michigan last week and will look to Penn State’s last visit to Bloomington for inspiration.

In ’94, the Nittany Lions beat Indiana 35-29, but lost ground in the polls. That game may have cost Penn State the national title. Junior tailback Alex Smith is back in the form that saw him run for 1475 yards for the Hoosiers in ’94. He already has 868 this season, good enough for second in league.

Penn State will have to run the ball effectively due to the fact starting QB Wally Richardson seems to have forgotten that he can’t throw to wide open grass.

Sophomore RB Curtis Enis can handle the chore for the Nittany Lions. Enis has scored ten touchdowns and runs for 106 yards per game.

Penn State 26-21

Illinois at Northwestern

As if Illinois needed something else to ruin their weekend.

Not only do the Fighting Illini have to play the game of their lives on Saturday to have a chance, they have to face the luckiest team in the Big Ten.

Northwestern fans, there aren’t enough words to describe how cheesy your win in Madison was last week. Better savor this victory because after that your Rose Bowl hopes will go up in smoke.
