WASHINGTON — Calling Bob Dole a loser, Jack Kemp explained Wednesday that the discrepancy between the two Republicans is so great that there is no way that Dole can win. Kemp announced he is backing Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson, who is expected to announce his decision Thursday afternoon.

Dole, who has been leading in the polls, is currently campaigning in California, where he is trying to build a lead over Robertson. Kemp said that Robertson is the only candidate who has a chance of winning the presidency.

"I think it's very important to the country that we have a strong, viable, conservative agenda," Kemp said. "And Pat Robertson is the only candidate who has shown the resolve to carry that agenda forward."}

Kemp also criticized Dole's record on cutting taxes, saying that Dole has not been able to deliver what he promised.

"I think it's very important to the country that we have a strong, viable, conservative agenda," Kemp said. "And Pat Robertson is the only candidate who has shown the resolve to carry that agenda forward."

D’Amato, Swiss officials squash over WWII bank accounts

Clare Nalle, Associate Press

GENEVA – The war of words between Switzerland and the United States over a long-promised Swiss report has ended with an abrupt announcement by U.S. Senator Alfonse D’Amato that his government is accepting the report's conclusions without reservation.

D’Amato, a New York Republican, had issued a stern statement in July threatening legal action if Switzerland did not produce a report detailing who controlled the millions of dollars invested in Nazi-era Swiss accounts. A Swiss bank official reported the Sen- ator sharpened his criticism.

But in a statement delivered by telephone to Switzerland’s Foreign Minister Pierre Cur- tizi late Wednesday night, D’Amato said Switzerland’s proposals were “fully satisfactory.”

In an address to the Senate, D’Amato said that they are doing in adding to this crisis a new, potentially dangerous dimension, that if the report was delayed the delay was not of the kind that was being suggested. Switzerland has agreed to distribute the report to all countries affected by Nazi rule, and to make it available to the press.

But D’Amato said that the report was not needed. “This is not the time to add another layer of bureaucracy to an ever-growing mountain of red tape,” he said.

The statement was met with a mixed reaction from other members of Congress. “I think we should proceed with caution,” said Representative James Oberstar, a Minnesota Democrat who has been leading efforts to pass a bill to grant legal aid to Holocaust survivors. “We need to make sure that the report is not used as a pretext for other actions.”

D’Amato’s decision could come as a surprise to some, given his earlier threats. In a March 1996 letter to the Swiss foreign minister, D’Amato had written that the report was “essential” to the United States’ interests.

The U.S. ambassador to Switzerland, John B. Negroponte, has been pushing for the report for months, saying it would help clarify the role of Swiss banks in prosecuting Nazi war criminals.

But D’Amato’s announcement was met with a mixed reaction. Some praised his decision, while others criticized it as a move to avoid accountability.

“This is a smart move,” said Representative James Sensenbrenner, a Wisconsin Republican. “It will allow us to move forward on the issue of Nazi-era bank accounts without having to address the thorny question of how much money was actually deposited in those accounts.”

But D’Amato’s decision was not without its critics. “I think it’s a mistake,” said Representative John Conyers, a Michigan Democrat. “This is a issue that needs to be resolved, and we should not be afraid to do so.”

The report, which was first requested by the U.S. government in 1990, details the ownership of Nazi-era accounts and their subsequent movement to Swiss banks.

The U.S. has been pressing Switzerland to release the report for years, citing it as evidence that Swiss banks have a history of aiding Nazi war criminals.

The report was delayed in 1995 after allegations surfaced that Swiss banks had helped Nazi war criminals evade justice. The Swiss government said it would not release the report until all legal claims had been settled.

But D’Amato’s decision means that the report will now be released, and Switzerland will begin the process of distributing it to affected countries.

D’Amato said in his statement that he had agreed to the report's release “because it is in the best interest of the United States and the Swiss people.”

He added that he had “no intention of challenging the report in any way.”

The release of the report is expected to be a significant development in the ongoing dispute between the United States and Switzerland.

D’Amato’s announcement comes as the two countries are preparing to sign a new treaty that would govern the relationship between the two nations.

The new treaty is expected to include provisions for the sharing of tax information between the United States and Switzerland.

The United States has long been pushing for such a treaty, saying it would help prevent tax evasion.

But Switzerland has been reluctant to sign such a treaty, saying it would undermine its neutrality.

The new treaty is expected to be signed later this year.

Hawkeyes finish season with six medals

Cheryl Davenport

The Daily Iowan

The University of Iowa Hawkeyes finished the season with six medals after a solid performance at the 1996 NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Although the Hawkeyes did not win any events, they placed well in several events, including the men's 800-meter run, the women's 4x400-meter relay, and the women's long jump.

The Hawkeyes were unable to win any events, but they finished in the top 3 in several events, which was a step in the right direction for the team.

Bad luck stops Iowa

Andy Hamilton

The Daily Iowan

Iowa faced a moment of adversity on Saturday in the final game of the season.

The Hawkeyes hung tough in the first half, but ultimately fell to Ohio State, 20-15.

The team was met with a double dose of bad luck as they fought through the game.

The Hawkeyes had a number of key players injured, including quarterback Andy Hamilton, who left the game early with an apparent injury.

The team had to adapt and overcome these obstacles, but unfortunately, they were unable to overcome the challenges.

The Hawkeyes continue to look to the future and hope for better luck next season.

MERRYFIELD — In the movies, Bruce Willis and Jack Lemmon personify a familiar role, playing an aging group of top-drawer Minnesotans. On Monday night, Warner Senez and John Elway personify the same role, except the only thing aging about the Denver quarterbacks is their hair and their salaries.

No. 6 Tennessee rallied from a 13-point deficit in the final quarter to defeat Northwestern, 26-20, in the度过 famous New Orleans Gator Bowl. The Gamecocks, with a 30-yard field goal by Felix Crum, beat Georgia 24-20, in the fourth quarter.

The win was Tennessee's first victory in the Bowl Alliance since 1999, and it enabled the Volunteers to earn a berth in the SEC championship game.

Tennessee (10-3) outscored Northwestern (9-4) in the first half, 10-7, but the Wildcats were able to take the lead in the third quarter, 17-10.

Tennessee quarterback Peyton Manning threw three touchdowns in the final 15 minutes, including a 53-yarder to wide receiver MarQueis

Grant with 1:53 left. The Volunteers also benefitted from a Northwestern fumble in the final minute.

Manning completed 31 of 44 passes for 402 yards and led his team to a 17-7 lead in the third quarter. He also threw for a school-record 53 yard touchdown to Grant.

In the fourth quarter, Tennessee took over on its own 27-yard line and Manning threw a 25-yard pass to wide receiver Ike Plummer for a first down. Then, after a false start penalty, he connected with Grant for a 25-yard touchdown pass.

Manning said he had been "very satisfied" with his team's performance.

"I think we're doing a good job of executing and playing well together,

"I'm very happy with the way we're playing," he said.

Tennessee will play Florida State in the SEC championship game, which will determine the conference champion and the team that plays in the Bowl Championship Series.

New York Yankee third baseman Wade Boggs rides a police horse around the field after the Yankees defeated the Atlanta Braves in Game 6 to win the World Series of Baseball. In New York City, it was the first World Series victory in 20 years.

FAMILIAR SCENARIO

Paul Newberry
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It’s a scene that’s become all too familiar for the Atlanta Braves.

Once again, they were sitting in a Rockies clubhouse after losing the final game of the season. Once again, they were trying to figure out why they fell just a short shot of a World Series championship. Once again, they had a young team that wasn’t quite ready just yet. It’s one of the team’s bus bands history.

For the 1940s and 1950s, however, there’s only one true measure of a team’s progress. For all their victories during the 1990s, the Braves have managed to win just one World Series.

“I still think this is a good ballclub,” Fredi Gonzalez said, trying to please with Atlanta’s performance in the regular season, “but we are missing that one little extra factor in here. We just came up a little short in the end.”

“And...” he added quietly, “all the other things are there.”

The Braves have captured the past three straight division titles. The 1974 series win and 1995 National League pennant. The 1981 World Series championship, however, was the first time the team has made it past the NL Championship Series.

“People get used to having a period,” said Greg Maddux, who took the loss Saturday night. “Some of us refused to wrap up the series with a 3-2 victory in Game 6. What has been, five of the last seven? That’s an unacceptable amount. We just got outplayed. We played with our deep bench and outstanding relief, exposed those same two players against the Rockies.

During the regular season, it’s easy to get by with a great starting rotation and an offense that can roll on a few innings. In the playoffs, though, the entire 25-man roster must contribute.

Bill Geist hosts an interview with Steve Madden on The Victory Trot Podcast. The show features interviews with former MLB players and current stars, discussing their careers and lives outside of baseball.
