Halloween drags beasts out of beauties

After Halloween, UI student James Allen noticed something that caught his attention. "I was walking in Iowa City and saw a girl dressed as a witch," he said.

"I thought it was really cool," said Gardner, who watched the scene unfold.

"I thought it was a great costume," said Caswell, who was also impressed by the display.

The girls were out in force on Halloween night, with a variety of costumes on offer.

"I love seeing people dress up," said Gardner. "It's always fun to see how creative people can be with their costumes.

"I think it's an important part of Halloween tradition," said Caswell. "It's a way to express yourself and have some fun.

"We're going to try to invest in the election," said one of the traders of the College of Business Administration and one of the founders of the IME.

"In the last two presidencies, we have seen more than 90 percent of the outcome," he said. "We're not sure that will be true this time."

"But we think it's likely," he added. "We're not sure that will be true this time."

This week's edition of Metro cannot be more timely than it is... One day before her flight is scheduled to take off, a student teacher who is about to begin her first year of teaching in an inner-city school will arrive for a meeting. She will have no idea where her new school is, and she won't know where her new students are going to come from. She will have no idea how to get there, and she won't know how to find them when she gets there. She will have no idea even how much money she has to spend on the trip, and she won't know how she's going to make it work. She will have no idea what to expect when she gets there, and she won't know what to do when she gets there. She will have no idea how to tell when she's done, and she won't know how to say goodbye. IC. school officials feel weapons aren’t a problem among kids

Michael Ficks, 15, a student at Iowa City High School, was caught carrying a concealed switchblade knife at a football game at the U of I stadium last week. The report counted 33 boys, mostly from the lower grades, but by no means exclusively, in juvenile court. The court set the age at 15, but earlier cases have also been decided.

The report on Uganda, titled "Performing Greatness," explored the role of women in war and peace, and asked whether women could make a difference in ending conflict.

The report on Lebanon, titled "Soviet-backed Forces in Lebanon," examined the role of the Soviet Union in the conflict and the impact of its military involvement.

WASHINGTON — An estimated 250,000 soldiers under 18, some as young as 5 years old, are serving in wars around the world, according to a report Thursday by Save the Children.

The report counted 33 armed conflicts, many of them in Afghanistan between 1978 and 1982, said: as a nonprofit, nonpolitical, nonsectarian organization.

Hamid Karzai's government has allowed the United Nations to conduct a survey of children in one area of Afghanistan, and another in Cambodia and another in South America, the report said.

The report, based on interviews with children, quoted one of the Quaker groups, said: as a nonprofit, nonpolitical, nonsectarian organization.

Some of the young soldiers are boys as young as 5 years old, and some are girls as young as 5 years old.

Debunking myths and releasing angst

I t is a rather frustrating time to be a conserva tive these days. Every time a Democrat wins the presidency, the economic growth that they claim will occur hasn't materialized, and every time a Republican wins the presidency, the economy does worse than the previous administration.

Myth No. 1: How do I feel about the tax cuts from the 1980s?

The 1980s showed tax cuts don't work. The economy grew at a robust rate because of the recovery of the steel sector and a tremendous increase in oil prices. The 1980s saw the largest decline in real median income in our country's history. The average American's income dropped during the 1980s. It is because we have a tax system that penalizes work and spending.

Myth No. 2: Tax cuts created the economy. We need more.

The argument goes like this: If we cut taxes, millions of people will work more and save money. The only problem is, millions of people already work those extra hours and save the money they make. The only thing tax cuts do is add to the already tremendous federal budget deficit.

Myth No. 3: Tax cuts make us feel better. The only thing tax cuts do is make us feel better. They don't make us better off. The only thing tax cuts do is shift the burden of taxes onto those who have less money, and make us feel better because we are paying less in taxes.

Myth No. 4: Tax cuts help the poor.

The only thing tax cuts do is cause the rich
people to pay less in taxes, and make the poor people feel better because they are paying less in taxes. The only thing tax cuts do is add to the already tremendous federal budget deficit.

Myth No. 5: Tax cuts create jobs.

The only thing tax cuts do is cause the rich
people to pay less in taxes, and make the poor people feel better because they are paying
less in taxes. The only thing tax cuts do is add to the already tremendous federal budget deficit.

The only thing tax cuts do is cause the rich
people to pay less in taxes, and make the poor people feel better because they are paying
less in taxes. The only thing tax cuts do is add

U.N. aid workers to evacuate Zaire

Karin Davies

GOMA, Zaire — War and famine are taking a toll on hundreds of thousands of Rwandans seeking refuge in Zaire. The government of Zaire is sending tens of thousands of troops south to Goma, a town near the border of Rwanda, to evacuate the world's largest refugee camp and pull out the estimated 700,000 Hutus who have been in Zaire for nearly five years.

The aid workers had been told earlier in the week that the operation would begin on Monday, but Friday night the operation was called off. The town was now a hotbed for refugees from Rwanda, including those who had fled from Rwanda via Uganda.

The U.N. mission to Zaire said it was coordinating with the Rwandan government to pull out the refugees from the camps.

The operation was called off at the last minute, the U.N. said.

Coach Wieczorek won't say if the operation that took place on summer vacation will take place, but the coach did say that there's "an opportunity for us to keep our goals going high." Scottie Pippen, a sixth man for the Bulls, is expected to make a strong comeback this season, according to Rodman. The Bulls are in a good position to win the championship, but they still need to work hard to keep their goals in line. The team's health is a major issue, as they have had several injuries hit. But if senior quarterback Matt Sherman and other starters get healthy, the team will be able to play at their best, according to Rodman. He also said that the team will be sending back four key linebackers to improve their defense. Despite some concerns about the team's future, Rodman remains optimistic about the upcoming season. Rodman said, "It's only victories that count in football against Alabama and Indiana, so I don't need to win all of them to have a championship season. I just need to be comfortable with the Big Ten."

Wildcats put win streak on the line

IOWA CITY—Topping Associated thrives on momentum. It's what you do in 15 seasons. It's extraordinary. They are not intimidated about returning to State Stadium, and there is no excuse. If there are leaves to rake or early Christmas shopping to be done, perhaps there will be a close game.

The ultimate goal is to stay unscathed, and hope it can play an extra game to decide the national champion.

Penn State, No. 13 North Carolina and Colorado State, and this one.

"Schnur said.

"It's great to be, great, great one. I'm not sure how to, what do you do in 15 seasons," he said.

Penn State and the Wildcats have faced each other 107 times, with Penn State winning 64 and the Wildcats 43 times.

The media doesn't think much of this game. The Associated Press poll has Wisconsin and Nebraska as overwhelming favorites. And perhaps there will be a close game.

Eagles get second shot at Cowboys

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

The Dallas Cowboys began their four-game winning streak a month ago in Philadelphia when they held back the Eagles 14-10, knocked out Bobby Parrish and went on to win the Super Bowl.

They haven't lost since and Friday they face their best game of the season last week when they beat the hometown Lions and the Dolphins—35-10.

The Eagles got their second shot at Dallas in 1983. After an NFL record 12-2 record back then and Dallas as healthy as it has been since the season opened, Do the Eagles have a chance? Yes and no.

Yes, because everybody has a right to dislike the Cowboys. They've won too much. They've lost too little. Their fans are always loud. They've been up on the television a lot more than most of the rest of the league.

No, because like last week the Eagles have more talent and the better backcourt stud to play with. Meeks, Schacht and Derrek Brown aren't to worry about at all.

They haven't lost since and they're still playing particularly well.

The Eagles get their second shot at Dallas Wednesday night at the Cotton Bowl—both teams have been without some of their best players. Without Wang Sun, Humpert...

Detroit (plus 1/2) at Green Bay (minus 1/2)

The immovable object versus the unstoppable. The Packers are the team to beat. Only one team in the league has played better.

The Green Bay defense has been among the best in the league and they've been led by the great defense led by the great defensive backfield.

Carolina (minus 1 1/2) at Arizona

There probably will be more Panthers fans in the Georgia Dome this week than there were in the Super Bowl.

PATTERNS, 17-10

Buckeye (1 1/2) at Houston (minus 1 1/2)

Kansas State (minus 1 1/2) at Nebraska (1 1/2)

No matter who the other first to play quarterback, Rick Venturi or Deion Sanders, the answer is the same. The Buckeyes will win big.

The bottom line is I haven't seen a team play better football than the Buckeyes. Period. They're the only five-0 team in the country. They're on a roll. Last week they beat Georgia, 23-19.

I, for one, don't think about it, even after last week when they beat Georgia, 23-19.

When millions of Americans and Canadians sit down in their easy chairs to watch the NBA game of the season, the newest season of the NBA's heated battle will be underway. The exciting game, to be played in the Big Ten, promises to be a backcourt of Kenny "Superstar" Johnson, Allan Houston, and little else.

Rider already expressed for Friday night's season opener with Arizona State, saying he was planning to only allow his "best" player to participate. "I'm not only allowing some others to participate, but they didn't change their status or anything," Rider said.

Patrick Ewing is still there, but he's not doing much. Allan Houston, Chris Mullin, and the rest of the"Superstars" have been clocked at only 6'11, 6'10, 6'6. Low-profile coach Joe was 1-0 in the Big Ten.

The New York Times article cites him as a former teammate of Rider's, who has had a history of off-court problems. His case was outlined in orange against a blue background.

In 1993, however, Indiana lost that game, and was arrested this summer in Salt Lake City. "He's a big man in the back seat passenger in the car," the sheriff's department said.

For the past two years, Rider has said he made a point to visit him or receive the meal from him or his assistants. "He's a little guy who wanted to be a basketball player," Rider said.

The improvements could start this weekend, allowing opponents to come back. The Hawkeyes haven't had a great amount of luck.

IOWA VOLLEYBALL
Improving record and revenge on Hawks' minds

James Kramer
The Daily Iowan
The last time the Iowa volleyball team played the Big Ten, it felt like Iowa City. This weekend, the Hawkeyes head to East Lansing, Michigan, to face the Big Ten's No. 2 team, the Michigan State Spartans. With the Big Ten regular season championship already in hand, the No. 2 Iowa men's tennis squad faces its biggest challenge of the season. Riversides to feature 6 emerging playwrights

From original arguments at the dinner table to grappling with the death of an uncle, "Riverside Shorts" will deliver an array of subjects for those suffering from a short attention span. "Riverside Shorts," six emerging playwrights and directors, will be performed Saturday night at 8 at Riverside Theatre Company, 213 N. Gilbert St.

The collection is an opportunity for young artists to have their voices heard and by audience, "Riverside Shorts" aims to present their work to a broad theatrical community.

"It's a great opportunity to get original arguments out of the theater and to open the theater scene for new artists, and audiences," playwright and director Jeanne K. Wheeler said.

Wheeler's play, "The Sound Makes Me Crazy, But I Can't Complain, Because It's Usually Sound Bisy," will be performed at the Riverside Theatre on Saturday night at 8. Tickets are $4, and will be available at the door.

"It's a great opportunity to get voices out of the theater and to open the theater scene for new artists, and audiences," Wheeler said.

While "Riverside Shorts" provides a platform for unknown theatrical artists, the exercise and economic storytelling can be interesting, Hunter said.

"The problem arises in the short attention span," Hunter said.

"In a two-minute spot," Hunter said, "it's almost like a calling card for the playwrights and directors a chance to make immediate feedback from a new audience, said Ann Wheeler, a participating playwright and UI graduate student.

"It's a great opportunity to get voices out of the theater and to open the theater scene for new artists, and audiences," Wheeler said.

The "short" is almost like a selling card for the writer or director. The audience may enjoy one or two, recognize the rest and come to the theater, Hunter said.

"It's an opportunity to be able to put up a little chance to present their work to a broad theatrical community."
