A victory for 'deception'

California's elimination of affirmative action causes stir

Brendan Brown
The Daily Iowan

California voters thrust the Golden State into the national spotlight when they voted against affirmative action and for medical marijuana in Tuesday's election.

Proposition 209, the California civil-rights initiative, was designed to prohibit race- and gender-based preferences in state education, hiring and contracting practices. The measure was strongly supported by the Republican Party on both state and national levels.

Susan Mask, assistant to the UI president and director of the UI Office of Affirmative Action, said the adoption of the initiative is a blow to achieving equality in America.

"I think it's a terrible outcome," she said. "More than a sign that affirmative action lost, it's a sign that deception won."

Mask said the proposition's name was misleading and cited a 1995 Gallup poll showing popular support of affirmative action programs across the country. She said California's latest attempt to use legislation to fix a complex problem is reactionary and unlikely to work.

"It's not going to end racism, it's not going to end social problems and it's not going to present us with a colorblind society without the preferences that are already built in," she said. "If you cut people off and don't provide a path to opportunity, people find other paths. But they don't feel the same stake in America that they should."

On Election Night, opponents of the measure promised to fight the legitimacy of the proposition in court. UI law Professor William Buss said there are potential avenues to mount for legal challenges.

"Most obviously, federal law requires taking into account the factors prohibited by the initiative, creating a direct conflict between state and federal law," he said. "Federal law will also permit and provide for special considerations which would pre-empt state law."

Mask said the state as a whole ultimately will suffer from the initiative's passage.

"California has made a big mistake that will have a profound impact on opportunities for education and employment for minorities," she said.

"California is cheating itself out of learning from its diversity."

"The worst damage will be done in the area of higher education. That's where you learn diversity and about the interchange of perspectives. If you don't provide the mechanisms for education, society

Rwandan war funded by outside sources

Charles Hanley

CENTRAL AFRICA — In midnight flights or in open, legal deals, the hardware of war has been flowing into central Africa's bloodied heartland in the two and a half years since the Rwanda genocide, U.N. and independent investigators report.

One source has been South Africa — both its government arms industry and, investigators say, private brokers in a lucrative black market.

The assault rifles and ammunition, mortars and land mines that reach Rwanda, Burundi and eastern Zaire, slipping through a patchwork of embargoes, are fueling an ethnic conflagration that threatens to explode into a war among nations.

"This has hit a whole new ballgame now that it's in Zaire," said a British arms dealer active in the legitimate Africa trade.

The worry is the spreading violence will engulf Zaire, as it did in the 1960s after the former Belgian Congo gained independence. Bigger than Alaska and Texas combined, with 200 ethnic groups and bordering on nine other nations, its collapse could plunge all of central Africa into crisis.

Zaire has been a hub for transporting war material since the 1980s, when the CIA funneled arms through its back country to the UNITA rebel force in neighboring Angola. The networks of landing strips and middlemen survive, the trader said.

In one covert enterprise, reported by the Johannesburg newspaper Sunday Independent, UNITA members joined ex-agents of South Africa's old apartheid government to ship South African-made weapons, via Angola, to Hutu combatants in eastern Zaire.

The arms procurers rarely need to go far afield.

"Masses of stuff have accumulated in Zaire and Angola," said the Briton, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Thousands of raucous fans will gather in Iowa City Saturday to watch the Hawkeyes try to take another step toward a major bowl game.

Currently sitting with one loss in Big Ten play, the Hawkeyes can control their own bowl destiny by winning the rest of their games to earn a bid to the Citrus Bowl.

The Hawkeyes face the Northwestern Wildcats Saturday at Kinnick Stadium in a 2:35 p.m. game that will be televised nationally by ABC.

UI junior Chad Ronnebaum said he is looking forward to the game because of the atmosphere that will surround the game, due to the potential bowl-game implications.

"I'll be tailgating," he said. "I'm excited about the Hawks this year. They're better than they have been and are in a good position to go to a better bowl game than they have in a while. I think their chances against Northwestern are pretty good."

The Hawkeyes need help to gain a Rose Bowl berth, but are still in contention for second place and the Citrus Bowl. The third- through fifth-place teams also earn bowl bids — the Outback Bowl, Alamogordo Bowl and Sun Bowl, respectively.

Football is not the only attraction for sports fans this weekend. The UI men's basketball team kicks off its season Saturday at 11:35 a.m. at Carver-Hawkeye Arena with the annual Black and Gold Blowout, and Mike Tyson will fight Evander Holyfield in a heavy-

WASHINGTON — Preparing for a second term, President Clinton's administration is rapidly changing, beginning with the departure of two of its pillars: Secretary of State Warren Christopher and Defense Secretary William Perry.

One senior administration official said Christopher was expected to go to the White House Thursday to announce he will leave the nation's top diplomatic post by Jan. 20, Inauguration Day.

Clinton's object is to pump new vigor into his administration as it begins a second and final four years.

As the breadth of the possible changes became clear Wednesday,

'Rebecca' created for CD-ROM film studies

Will Valet
The Daily Iowan

In an effort to put the UI on the map in the field of film studies, two UI employees spent four years creating a pioneering CD-ROM project.

Lauren Rabinovitz, a UI American studies associate professor, and her husband, Greg Easley of the UI Telemedicine Resource Center, co-authored "The Rebecca Project," a multimedia study of the 1940 Alfred Hitchcock film "Rebecca." The CD-ROM, which cost around $3,500 to produce, consists of critics' opinions of the film, film clips, production history and a discussion of film genres.

"A lot of people have described it as an encyclopedia of a single film," Rabinovitz said. "We didn't think of it as mass-market material, but as material for classes in film or women's studies. We're really thrilled at the idea that a project with this small a budget could compete with the big commercial companies."

The CD-ROM was the bronze winner in the "higher education" category of the 1995 New Media Magazine Invision Awards. It was also voted one of the top 50 CD-ROMs of 1996 by Mac User magazine. The UI financed about $2,500 of the project.

Building a Better Résumé

Some tips on how to make your résumé stand out:

BEFORE

If more than one career option is being considered, create multiple résumés.

OBJECTIVE
I want an internship in writing or biology.

Proofread your résumé. Also, give a copy to a friend to look at.

Be consistent. Make sure you follow the same style throughout. For example, "Education" should be in uppercase, because the other headings are.

AFTER

Computer-generate the résumé, and use a laser printer. Résumés should be printed on light-colored, quality résumé paper.

Remember to include apartment numbers and area codes.

Use action verbs, placed at the beginning of each sentence or phrase, when describing past work experience. Don't use "I" in job descriptions.

Generally, list your GPA if it's a B average or better. Also note any academic honors.

Don't list names of references on the résumé. Employers will ask for references.

The ins and outs of résumé writing

Charlotte Eby
The Daily Iowan

As UI seniors prepare for graduation, many are still looking for the elusive, perfect résumé that will snag them an interview.

Bill Holtz, director of human resources at First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St., said applicants often overlook the printed quality of their résumé and send him blurred copies that are difficult to read. Holtz said this often reflects poorly on the applicant.

"It says they didn't take the time," Holtz said. Dufoe said students should print their résumé with a laser printer on light-colored paper, usually white or cream-colored, with matching envelopes if possible. Employers often duplicate résumés, she said, and dark or speckled paper makes copies difficult to read.

Laurie Dufoe, a placement specialist with the UI Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office, said she recommends résumés be brief and limited to one page.

"The purpose of the résumé is to get an interview. You want to save something for the interview," Dufoe said. Margaret Patterson of Procter & Gamble, 2200 Lower Muscatine Road, said she dislikes reading résumés that are too lengthy, and also prefers that they are only one page. Patterson said she is also turned off by résumés that are too detailed and contain unnecessary information, such as hobbies.

"She said she looks closely at extracurricular involvement on a résumé, because it can be an indicator of leadership and a willingness to work with others. "I think it puts you at an advantage over someone in their senior year who is just beginning to put a résumé together," he said.

Masucci said he found the sampling of résumés on file at the Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office helpful in constructing his own résumé. He said creating the proper résumé format was the most difficult.

Dufoe said a résumé should highlight transferable skills from previous jobs. She said researching the field and reading want ads and notices for job openings can help students target the skills employers are looking for, and use it to focus their résumés.

She said applicants can relate experience from past jobs to show leadership and communication skills, even if they have never held the type of job they are applying for. Dufoe said even a summer job as a lifeguard can be relevant for a management position if an applicant's job description emphasizes the skills the two positions have in common.

"Tailor it to your field, because that one piece of paper is representing you," Dufoe said.

Applicants should begin job descriptions with action verbs, rather than nouns, to grab attention, Dufoe said. Dufoe said résumé writers should refrain from using "I" in their job descriptions. Dufoe said cover letters are a critical part of the application, as well as the résumé, and shouldn't be neglected. Job seekers can further tailor their applications with cover letters, as well as use them to explain parts of their résumé in more detail.

"The cover letter exemplifies your written communication skills. No matter what position (you are applying for), they need someone who can write effectively," Dufoe said.

Dufoe said she recommends students have someone else proofread the résumé for spelling and grammatical errors before it is sent to a potential employer. Students commonly misspell the titles of computer programs they have experience in, such as WordPerfect, she said, and sometimes employers weed these applicants out.

Dufoe said one of the most common mistakes she sees are students who don't maintain a consistent format throughout the résumé.

She said it is not necessary to list references on the résumé, because employers assume the applicant will furnish a list of references if the employer asks for them.

Robert Conrad and Phil Hartman. Schwarzenegger said in Thursday's editions of the Saint Paul Pioneer Press he is looking forward to returning to the Twin Cities, where he spent part of the spring filming the comedy.

The premiere is a week from Saturday at the Mall of America. The movie opens on Nov. 22.

Katharine Hepburn retires to Connecticut

OLD SAYBROOK, Conn. (AP) — Katharine Hepburn has said bye-bye to New York City — she's found her golden pond in Connecticut.

"She'll never go back to New York. She has a good setup at her family home here," her brother-in-law, Ellsworth Grant, said Wednesday.

The 89-year-old actress, the winner of four Academy Awards during a 60-year career, recently put her Manhattan brownstone up for rent, and she said she has been enjoying looking out at the water at her coastal Connecticut retreat.

She has no life-threatening diseases but "has the disease of old age," Grant said.

"She walks a little, talks a little. Her memory is pretty much gone," he said. "She could live like she is for five years or more or she could die tomorrow."

Hepburn, who starred in "The African Queen," "On Golden Pond" and numerous other films, has had various health problems in the past decade, including hip replacement surgery, arthritis and an incurable eye infection.

David Lee Roth sues 3 insurance companies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Lee Roth still has a shot at punishing the insurance companies he claims failed to fully reimburse him for damage to his Pasadena home from the 1994 earthquake.

The former lead singer of Van Halen filed a $5 million lawsuit claiming three companies only paid $350,000 for a damaged walkway. He's seeking damages for harm to his career as a singer and songwriter, saying he's been forced to live out of boxes and has no heat.

One of the three insurance companies being sued by Roth wanted a judge to rule the singer could not be awarded punitive damages. On Thursday, Superior Court Judge Ronald Cappai refused the request.

Holistic health

Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

After working in a hospital for more than 17 years, Terri Schaeffer sought a different approach to traditional medical care when she saw the same patients repeatedly returning to the hospital for recurring illnesses.

"I got tired of seeing the same patients come into the hospital over and over again with the same problems and not getting well," Schaeffer, a registered nurse, said. "And I knew there was a better way."

That's when Schaeffer turned to holistic health care, an alternative approach to traditional medical practices that does not use drugs or surgery, and centers on treating the cause of illness, not just the signs and symptoms.

Types of holistic health care include acupuncture, massage therapy, nutritional therapy and yoga. Schaeffer is president of the Holistic Resource Network of Eastern Iowa, an organization founded in Iowa City three years ago that provides education and resources for complementary health care.

Schaeffer said one of the differences between traditional medicine and holistic health care is the notion of healing vs. curing. A person can be cured, i.e. the elimination of signs and symptoms, but may not be healed until treatment is facilitated for the cause.

She said holistic health care includes, but is not limited to, alternative and complementary medicine. "Holistic health care is an approach to healing by treating the cause, not just the symptom," Schaeffer said. "It encompasses the caring for and the

Holistic health care heals naturally

Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

After working in a hospital for more than 17 years, Terri Schaeffer sought a different approach to traditional medical care when she saw the same patients repeatedly returning to the hospital for recurring illnesses.

"I got tired of seeing the same patients come into the hospital over and over again with the same problems and not getting well," Schaeffer, a registered nurse, said. "And I knew there was a better way."

That's when Schaeffer turned to holistic health care, an alternative approach to traditional medical practices that does not use drugs or surgery, and centers on treating the cause of illness, not just the signs and symptoms.

Types of holistic health care include acupuncture, massage therapy, nutritional therapy and yoga.

Schaeffer is president of the Holistic Resource Network of Eastern Iowa, an organization founded in Iowa City three years ago that provides education and resources for complementary health care.

Schaeffer said one of the differences between traditional medicine and holistic health care is the notion of healing vs. curing. A person can be cured, i.e. the elimination of signs and symptoms, but may not be healed until treatment is facilitated for the cause.

She said holistic health care includes, but is not limited to, alternative and complementary medicine.

"Holistic health care is an approach to healing by treating the cause, not just the symptom," Schaeffer said. "It encompasses the caring for and the treatment of the whole person."

Most of Schaeffer's experience has come through the Holistic Nurses Association, an organization specializing in information about holistic care. For 11 years, all her continuing nursing education has been in holistic health. She also said holistic care, in most cases, is a complementary resource to traditional medicine.

Schaeffer opened a private practice as a holistic nurse practitioner in 1990, specializing in holistic health care.

"People who practice holistic health care don't use drugs or surgery," she said. "They are licensed, trained or certified in specific modalities to assist the individual to heal."

Schaeffer specializes in assisting individuals to heal themselves by using a combination of healing touch, nutrition programs and administering vitamin and mineral supplements that can't be bought over the counter.

"When treating the whole person we consider treatment for the body, mind and spirit of that individual," Schaeffer said. "That is to say, treatment of the physical body, mental attitudes and stress."

More than 100 years ago, F.M. Alexander, a man from Australia, developed an educative process that dealt with the organization and quality of movement called the Alexander Technique, also part of holistic health.

His process receives widespread use today by therapists across the country.

Iowa City resident Styuvie Eagle has been in private practice since 1985, and is the only certified teacher of the Alexander Technique in Iowa. To become certified, an individual must complete an extensive, three-year, 1,600-hour teacher-training course in the technique, Eagle said.

The technique teaches individuals to identify harmful habits of posture and movement and how to prevent misuse in daily life.

Eagle said she does a lot of work for the UI faculty on students in the dance, art and theater departments.

"Nobody chooses to misuse themselves, or their body," Eagle said. "I'm teaching you how you have been misusing your body, and how to change."

Eagle said although it seems like a lot of time and money, the benefits of the Alexander Technique will be lifelong. Eagle's approach consists of 30-40 lessons, costing $30 per session.

"You have become far more aware of what consists of good use," she said. "It becomes part of how you live your life, and it's an investment for the rest of your life."

Eagle said holistic health is more preventive maintenance of the body and learning to take self-responsibility for proper care of the body.

"It gives you a multifaceted avenue of approach to your health in daily life, as opposed to a crisis," she said.

A series of lectures, demonstrations and presentations by holistic practitioners is scheduled for this Saturday in the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"The purpose of the fair is to provide the general public with information about holistic health care and how they can stay well and be well," she said.

Lifting a book sends shooting pains up UI graduate student Catherine Mortson's arm. She is unable to grasp a doorknob and has difficulty holding a pen.

Carpal tunnel syndrome has limited the actions Mortson said she had always taken for granted.

"I was in so much pain I stopped sleeping," Mortson said. "I don't escape (carpal tunnel) in any part of my life. Sometimes I can't even floss my teeth."

Mortson discovered her repetitive motion injury on Dec. 1, 1992. She was working as a copy editor for the Austin American-Statesman, and the long hours of typing started to take their toll.

"In our day and age we can sit and type for hours," Mortson, who now wears light-brown colored wrist braces, said. "We have computers that we don't have to get up and change typing rolls or refill paper like they did in the past. They didn't have these problems because they got up to move, which gave them little breaks."

Employees at manufacturing plants that suffer from carpal tunnel sometimes are given special training to help them find relief. Fred Shimon, health and safety coordinator at United Technologies Automotive (UTA) in Iowa City, said the corporation has brought in specially trained therapists to help plant workers recuperate.

"Fifty percent of our workman's compensation cases are from repetitive stress injuries, so we decided to look into it," Shimon said. "This shows our employees that we are taking a proactive approach rather than a reactive approach to dealing with this problem."

The two main causes of carpal tunnel syndrome are the actual repetition of the work and sitting idle for long periods of time.

Mortson said 90 percent of the people in the newsroom worked in these conditions.

Mortson said she was shocked when she discovered the source of her muscle tension. She said she was unaware of how to alleviate her wrist pain.

"I refused to be on medication," Mortson said. "I don't find them to be effective. They upset my stomach. I try to handle (the pain) through exercise and acupuncture."

One method that has proven effective for employees of UTA is an ongoing program that is available to anyone in the plant.

When UTA began the program, they picked 12 victims of repetitive motion injuries and placed them in the program. They then interviewed them a week later to gather their comments.

Mortson said ongoing treatment in the workplace, such as stretching, rotating the shoulders and taking breaks, helps the constant muscle tension.

"Human bodies are not designed to do the same thing over and over again," Mortson said. "You have to take breaks and move a little."

"Holistic health care is an approach to healing by treating the cause, not just the symptom. It encompasses the caring for and the treatment of the whole person."

Letters to the Editor

Higgins ignores value of entertainment

To the Editor:
When I read Carrie Higgins' column Nov. 5, "Goodbye thought and intelligence. Hello 'Friends,'" it made me think. Yes, although students here apparently do not usually do so, it is possible. I am not ashamed to say on weekends I enjoy getting "trashed" with my friends. In fact, I am one of those individuals that has smashed glasses and broken bottles.
I enjoy a good sitcom now and then, and can be overheard discussing the exploits of Cosmo Kramer before class on Friday. And, for as long as I can remember, I have been a huge fan of college football, especially the Hawkeyes, whom I have followed all over the country and never miss a game. I suppose that makes me a victim of the anti-intellectual cult of "alcohol, television and sports fever." Those are priorities in my life, and I am not ashamed to admit it.

But I am also not ashamed to admit that I was raised watching The Discovery Channel and reading "real literature" my entire life. My bookshelves are filled with Stephen King, Anne Rice, and "Star Wars" novels, but alongside those are equally innumerable poetry anthologies and books on philosophy, theology, literature from around the world and, surprise, surprise, even Darwin's "Origin of the Species."

My grandfather taught me that learning is a lifelong process, and it is the one gift I prize more than any other. Just because I happen to enjoy "anti-intellectual" pastimes, in no way means I am a blathering idiot in which society should fear to entrust its future. I am an English and Spanish major with a minor in Latin American studies. I am also a writer with a collection of poems I am working on having published. I consider myself well-read, and always up for stimulating conversation. Just because I watch some television for pure entertainment value does not make me a member of "the zombie society."
Civilization needs the written word without it, I would have been lost years ago, but it also needs entertainment led by a society with diverse values and needs. Hawkeye football and a good amount of drinks are priorities in my life. It is so Thoreau, Darwin, a thought-provoking book on magical realism and collected poems of T.S. Eliot. I have been offended by columns denying the rights of homosexuals and sexuals, or those condemning feminists, and have spoken out against the bigotry of those petty, close-minded people, but I never imagined that my intelligence would be insulted because I don't share some of the same entertainment values as my fellow writers.

I admire Higgins' belief in learning, feel the same way, but perhaps she would open her eyes and not be so quick to condemn the actions of those whose priorities, she believes, are not going to mean (anything).
My advice? Open your eyes, Higgins, maybe you'll find that this city isn't as ugly and dull as you think it is.

Haravon, DI's 'only sensible voice'

To the Editor:
I want to thank Lea Haravon for being what seems to be the only sensible voice at the DI concerning the issue of rape. In her column "Fear: Men in the women's locker room" (Oct. 18), she intelligently describes just how ridiculous, irrational and widespread victim-blaming can be.
How sad and infuriating it was to read an article just five days later that endorsed such ridiculous, irrational thinking, disguised under the title: "Women: Protect, educate yourselves" (Oct. 23). Michelle Lemrise writes of her shock and disapproval for any woman "walking the streets alone at 1 a.m." and further insists that "... any semi-intelligent woman would link to protect herself from becoming another victim or statistic."

Lemrise: The truth of the matter is, unfortunately, NOTHING a woman does or does not do will be able to guarantee her 100 percent safety from rape. This is because NO person has control over whether or not they are raped. Furthermore, when anyone is faced with a situation in which they have no control, prevention is impossible. The control and therefore the blame, lies solely with the rapist, who chooses to commit this crime.

I find it interesting that no one ever questions the absurdity of this type of thinking when it is applied to other crimes. When a convenience store is robbed at 1 a.m., one would never hear a person say, "But what were you doing being OPEN at that time? And with the lights on?! Weren't you just inviting a thief to come in?" Similarly, the circumstances surrounding a rape are absolutely irrelevant and it is never the victim/survivor's fault. A woman walking alone at night or doing anything anywhere is NEVER an invitation to be raped. It is incredibly scary to realize a woman cannot entirely protect herself from such a violation. That is why it is so important to make clear that if we want to stop rape, we must focus on the rapists.

Rape is a crime someone chooses to commit and as in any other crime, it is the offender that needs to be held responsible for his actions.

Responsibility lies with the rapist

To the Editor:
I am writing in response to the Viewpoints article featured on Oct. 23 titled "Women: Protect, educate yourselves." I was really disappointed and angered by the victim-blaming and non-supportive statements that the article made. According to its author, Michelle Lemrise, "any semi-intelligent woman would think to protect herself from becoming another victim and statistic." This statement takes the focus and responsibility for sexual assault away from the offenders — the ONLY ones responsible for stopping violence — and places it on the victim.

Women (and men) have the right to choose whether or not they feel comfortable protecting themselves from sexual assault. While there are a number of risk-reduction strategies someone can use to reduce their risk, there is NO GUARANTEE. Furthermore, women have the right to walk outside at ANY time of night or day and know they have the right to be respected and feel safe.

Moreover, while there are things I can do to make myself feel safer walking home, such as carrying pepper spray, having a friend to walk with, etc., it is important to remember that these are choices. I have the right to choose to walk alone at any time of day or night; this does not mean that I am unintelligent, as this article is implying. Maybe I like walking alone. Maybe I couldn't find a friend to walk with me. Besides, why should I restrict my activities because of the crimes of others?
It is true — we all need to raise our level of awareness about the issues that surround sexual violence in our communities. We can do this by attending programs, rallies and lectures on sexual assault awareness and campus and community safety. We can volunteer at crisis centers and show our support for victims' rights. No one deserves to be the victim of abuse. Most importantly, let us not forget that the ONLY people responsible for stopping sexual violence are the offenders.

Kudos to Drehs for sticking up for Hawks

To the Editor:
I am writing in response to an article written by Wayne Drehs titled "Hawkeye boobies need to get with it" (Oct. 31). Let me start by saying THANK YOU! I was very impressed by your article and agree with everything you said. It's about time someone sticks up for Hayden Fry, Matt Sherman and all the other hard working Hawkeye football players and gives them the credit they deserve.

I have been equally disgusted by the number of fair-weather fans sitting in Kinnick Stadium at every home football game this year. I wish the fans would learn to be supportive even when things aren't going our way. Perhaps we should focus on raising the spirits of the team during tough times instead of bringing them down with negative comments and booing. Hayden Fry, the coaching staff and the players deserve our support ALL the time! Keep up the good work and good things will happen. You guys deserve it! GO HAWKS!

The blood of the Hawkeyes shed for you

To the Editor:
The Daily Iowan sank to a new low when you printed that blasphemous letter regarding our lord and god, Coach Hayden Fry. What do you do for kicks, sing the "Iowa fight song" backward and listen to rival fans mocking our team?

As Hawk-eyedolators, we invite others to share our faith. Come, let us enjoy the season together. Take your seat on the high-rise pews at Saint Kinnick's. Here, have a couple of bumper stickers: "HONK IF YOU LOVE HAYDEN" and "IN CASE OF RAPTURE, THE GAME'S ON ANYWAY." And, hey, how about that cheerleader choir? One of us wants to join, and the other just wants to watch.

Feel a need for some sort of Eucharist? Well, here, have a chip and a little sip from our wine bota. We also offer tailgate fellowship meals.

And for you former Christians who were fond of images, we offer many substitutes, not the least of which is that large silver statue of Herky the Hawk — a mere stager or so away from Kinnick Temple.

Our enemies say we're intolerant. Iowa football forbid! But we believe that when the coach speaks at a news conference (ex conferencia) he is infallible. (You sports writers who blaspheme are in danger of being forever cut off from the Kingdom of Hayden.)

Finally, we share a positive eschatology: Ultimately, the enemy (all opposing teams and those who don't love our team with all their strength, heart and wallets) will be crushed under Herky's claws. And the Hawks shall reign forever.

Totten errs on science

To the Editor:
Michael Totten's Oct. 30 column ("Creationism has evolved into a science") makes many good points about creationism vs. evolution. However, in presenting his argument, he makes many errors about the nature of science.

First, evolution is NOT widely recognized as the BEST scientific theory available to explain the evidence we have collected. A theory is not a fact. A scientific theory tries to explain facts using nonobservational entities.

Second, he quotes an expert (Dr. Kier) saying that one-hundred million facts prove evolution beyond a doubt. Nothing in science is ever proven beyond a doubt. This isn't possible. That we have over one-hundred million facts that support evolution does not prove evolution beyond a doubt — we would need an infinite number of observations to do so. However, the scientific community feels there is sufficient evidence to support this theory. Until significant contradictory evidence is found AND an alternative theory that explains the observations is proposed, evolution will still be the scientifically accepted theory. For example, looked at Newton's laws of motion. There are more observations supporting this theory than evolution, yet it was overturned by relativity.

Third, evolution is not reality. There are many cases in the history of science (again, look at Newton's laws of motion) in which scientists thought they knew how reality worked, but later found out their understanding was incorrect. A theory is a human creation to try to explain experience.

Finally, Totten left out the most important justification against teaching creationism in the classroom. He stated that creationism is religion and evolution is science. This is true, but people should be aware of the distinction between religion and science. Creationism is based on the belief that a supernatural being (something that is not bound by the laws of science as we understand them) created the world. Supernatural by definition is outside of the realm of the natural world. Science can only deal with the natural world. To ask scientific ideas to be based on the existence of a supernatural being defeats the purpose of science. If we use the divine intervention idea, ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN ON A DAILY BASIS and science would be unable to predict the events it can predict.

Pope reviews theory of evolution

Kelley Chorley
The Daily Iowan

Four years ago, the pope apologized for Galileo's persecution. Two weeks ago, he recognized evolution as a theory.

On Oct. 24, Pope John Paul II said humans may not have been an immediate creation of God, but rather, had evolved over time.

As a geologist and a retired priest at the Newman Catholic Student Center, 104 E. Jefferson St., Rev. Robert Brownfield said evolution is not fact, but is recognized as well-founded research.

"The pope pronounced that the Catholic church accepts evolution not as a fact but as a theory well-supported by research in a variety of scientific fields," Brownfield said.

The theory of evolution doesn't dismiss the belief in God as the creator, but does give Catholics the chance to keep in touch with current Catholic thought, Brownfield said.

"This theory doesn't change our belief in God," Brownfield said. "Our soul can't be part of evolution; that is created by God. Creation for me is ongoing, progressive and extended into time and space. Evolution is the attempt to account for this progression."

Because Catholics are not fundamentalists, they have the

"This theory doesn't change our belief in God. Our soul can't be part of evolution; that is created by God. Creation for me is ongoing, progressive and extended into time and space. Evolution is the attempt to account for this progression."

Rev. Robert Brownfield

option of reading the Bible in literal or non-literal terms, said Rev. Ken Kuntz of St. Mary's Catholic Church, 302 E. Jefferson St.

"The writing style in the Bible is not factual, but poetic," Kuntz said. "Catholics ask two questions when they are reading the Bible: what is the point the author is getting at and what style is the author using?"

Since the pope's announcement, the Catholic church has not forced the idea of evolution on its members.

"The pope is not saying that his announcement has to be accepted," Brownfield said. "Catholics are free to accept or reject evolution. Although, it is the best explanation for what is seen in the rocks."

For religions other than Catholic, the pope's admittance doesn't change their beliefs that creation, not evolution, is the beginning of man.

"There is no question; God created man," said Pastor Marvin Feigenspan of Living Word Christian Fellowship, 318 E. Bloomington St. "We are too awesome to come out of mud."

Feigenspan feels humans are too complex to be evolved from some other form of species.

"We are not an animal, and that's obvious in our ability to relate," Feigenspan said. "God gave us the ability to communicate so we could talk with him. If evolution happened, it stayed within that specific species. For example, a three-toed sloth stayed within a three-toed sloth. It was not transformed into a human."

There is no question about the theory of evolution, according to Rev. Gary Miller of the Grace Fellowship, 3980 Poweshiek St.

"We believe in the creationist point of view. God's word is God's word," he said. "Creation is the infallible word of God."

QUAD CITIES

Planned Parenthood site chosen in Bettendorf

Associated Press

DAVENPORT — Two years after announcing plans for a Quad Cities clinic that would provide abortions, Planned Parenthood officials say they've chosen a Bettendorf site for the facility and hope to open it next year.

"We looked at a variety of sites throughout the Quad Cities, and this site seemed particularly ideal," Jill June, president of Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa, said Wednesday.

Planned Parenthood recently opened an education and resource center in Bettendorf, and the clinic site is about a mile from there.

It would be the organization's 17th clinic in Iowa.

Planned Parenthood has a purchase option for the property, but the clinic must clear several hurdles before it can be built. The city planning and zoning commission and the city council must approve the project's site plan application, which was submitted Tuesday.

June said if there are no approval delays, construction could begin in the spring, and the clinic could open in late summer or early fall 1997.

Planned Parenthood won a court battle to open the clinic. The state had argued the organization needed approval before it could open the facility.

But in a decision last month, a federal judge said the state hadn't shown it had "a substantial interest" in requiring Planned Parenthood to get a certificate of need.

Iowa requires new or expanding medical services obtain the certificate. The five-member Health Facilities Board, appointed by the governor, makes the decision on need. The process is used to determine whether a medical clinic will compete with existing services.

No physicians, clinics or hospitals now perform abortions in the Quad Cities.

tion he not be named. "And it is hard to get stuff to eastern Zaire. Occasionally something happens that sheds light on the clandestine trade.

Last January and again in June, Russian cargo planes crashed on take-off in Kinshasa, Zaire's capital. Port officials later disclosed that the planes carried unspecified cargo for UNITA; the other had just delivered military equipment from Moscow.

Russia, left with huge weapon stocks after the Cold War, has become a prime wholesaler for arms brokers. Prices are as low as $150 for an AK-47, the reliable assault rifle seen everywhere in the turmoil in eastern Zaire.

Zairian Tutsi rebels there, supported by Rwanda's government, have been fighting Zairian government forces and Rwandan Hutu militias.

Zaire accuses the Tutsi-led governments in Rwanda and Burundi of arming the insurgents. Suspicion falls on Uganda, too, since it armed the Tutsi guerrillas who took power in Rwanda in 1994 after Hutu extremists slaughtered some half-million Tutsis and other Rwandans and fled to Zaire.

The crisscrossing arms trails also snake back into Rwanda and Burundi, where Hutu guerrillas remain active.

Rwanda's alleged role in the Zaire fighting has turned international attention to its supplier South Africa.

CD-ROM

Rabinovitz said the couple's main motivation for producing the CD-ROM was to make a name for the UI in the film-studies world.

The UI is an important center for film studies, but we don't have extensive archival facilities," she said. "George Lucas and Steven Spielberg are always throwing money at schools like USC, and we're never going to see anything like that. We wanted to put the UI on par with other film-studies universities by producing a high-profile project."

The CD-ROM is a compact disc filled with digital information that a computer translates into text, graphics, sound and live-motion video. A viewer can read critiques of "Rebecca" on the screen while watching side-by-side clips of the movie.

UI senior Kallie Blit, who is studying Hitchcock and "Rebecca" in the UI Film Authors class, said using a CD-ROM to study film is superior to reading books on the subject.

Having a film clip there on the screen as you read an argument about a film is so much more effective.

Last January and again in June, Russian cargo planes crashed on take-off in Kinshasa, Zaire's capital. Port officials later disclosed the first plane carried unspecified cargo for UNITA; the other had just delivered military equipment from Moscow.

Russia, left with huge weapons stocks after the Cold War, has become a prime wholesaler for arms brokers. Prices are as low as $150 for an AK-47, the reliable assault rifle seen everywhere in the turmoil in eastern Zaire.

Zairian Tutsi rebels there, supported by Rwanda's government, have been fighting Zairian government forces and Rwandan Hutu exiles.

Zaire accuses the Tutsi-led governments in Rwanda and Burundi of arming the insurgents. Suspicion falls on Uganda, too, since it armed the Tutsi guerrillas who took power in Rwanda in 1994, after Hutu extremists slaughtered some half-million Tutsis and other Rwandans and fled to Zaire.

The crisscrossing arms trails also snake back into Rwanda and Burundi, where Hutu guerrillas remain active.

Rwanda's alleged role in the Zaire fighting has turned international attention to its supplier, South Africa.

The Pretoria government disclosed in September it was selling $18 million worth of arms to Rwanda — reportedly including R-4s, South African assault rifles designed for bush fighting. It was the first transaction reported since a U.N. arms embargo on Rwanda was lifted last year.

Other restraints remain but are proving porous: Some arms-exporting nations refuse to ship to unstable Zaire; eastern Zaire is still under formal U.N. embargo, to keep arms out of Hutu refugees' hands; and Burundi's neighbors have punished it with broad trade sanctions because of a military coup there.

On Wednesday the South African government, under growing international pressure, said it would temporarily halt deliveries on the Rwanda deal. But the South African connection has unofficial links, too.

A South African government commission is investigating reports that South African brokers helped run arms to Rwandan Hutu exiles in eastern Zaire.

"Some of these allegations have been verified, some not yet," said Peter Batchelor, a University of Cape Town researcher close to the investigation. "It seems we are becoming the major supplier of arms to the region, which is causing concern in the continent."

The U.S. advocacy group Human Rights Watch, which has tracked arms flows in the region since 1994, said air crews and airport workers reported several plane-loads of arms were flown directly from South Africa to eastern Zaire in February and March 1995.

Earlier, soon after the embargo was imposed in May 1994 and as the Hutus retreated westward out of Rwanda, the French government delivered artillery, machine guns and other weapons to Hutu leaders via a Zairian airport, Human Rights Watch said. France has denied this.

A U.N. commission investigating embargo violations has received little cooperation from Zairian authorities. But it labels "highly probable" one reported 1994 episode: the transfer to Zaire, for distribution to Hutu exiles, of 80 tons of rifles, mortar shells and ammunition from the island nation of Seychelles, where they were said to have been intercepted en route to Somalia. A South African middleman was reported involved.

American and U.N. envoys have sought Zaire's cooperation in shutting down the weapons flow, without success. Zaire has rebuffed a proposal to assign U.N. cargo monitors to Zairian airports.

Those trying to stem the flow of arms into the region recognize the free-wheeling global market is beyond tight control.

"We won't be able to stop it, but we can curb it," said Joost Hiltermann, head of Human Rights Watch's Arms Project. "We've got to keep pushing and pushing."

CLINTON

Attorney General Janet Reno to step aside, regarding her as not enough of a team player.

But, at a weekly meeting with reporters Thursday, she appeared upbeat and confident about her future in the administration.

"Nobody has been critical to my face or critical as a source that I can trace," she said. "I've been supportive in trying to do what I think an attorney general should do, which is call the issues based on the evidence and the law and give the best legal advice that she or he can."

She also said she is physically active and her doctors have said she is in good health despite suffering from a mild form of Parkinson's disease.

"Last week, I was out at Habitat for Humanity sanding a ceiling for six hours and painting. I haven't noticed anything except my left hand shakes," she said.

Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary, out of favor at the White House, also was said to be leaving.

Transportation Secretary Federico Pena, criticized for mishandling the ValuJet airliner crash, and Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros, the focus of investigation involving payments he made to a former mistress, also were likely to go, administration officials said.

Chicago Mayor Richard Daley's brother, Bill, is a possible successor to Pena.

Clinton returned in triumph from the campaign trail Wednesday afternoon, telling his assembled Cabinet, agency heads and hundreds of other political appointees that their efforts had made the difference between victory and defeat.

"You have accomplished a phenomenal amount in the last four years," Clinton told his loyalists, spreading out by the hundreds on the South Lawn.

Chief of Staff Leon Panetta told the president the crowd contained not only those who had made victory possible but "the designers, the engineers who will build your bridge to the future."

But even Panetta is expected to leave soon, perhaps to run for governor of California, his native state.

The remodeling job had many reasons.

Some staff members, like presidential senior adviser George Stephanopoulos, make no secret of the fact that they are simply worn out.

Christopher, 71, and Perry, 69, both highly regarded, have said much the same thing.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich, a Rhodes scholar with Clinton at Oxford University, is welcome to stay but appears inclined to leave, officials said.

WEEKEND

weight boxing match on Pay-Per-View Saturday night.

Traditionally, the intrasquad scrimmage follows a home football game, but the delayed kickoff time forced the UI to schedule the basketball game for 11:30 a.m. Ticket windows will open at 8:30 a.m., and doors to Carver-Hawkeye Arena will open at 10 a.m. Saturday.

UI senior Bryan Mulder said he's looking forward to a high dosage of sports this weekend.

"I'm not going to the (football) game, but I'll be watching it on television," he said. "We're getting the Tyson-Holyfield fight through Pay-Per-View."

Tom Pape, manager of the Sports Column, 10 S. Dubuque St., said the football crowds and the high price of the fight led to their decision not to show the fight.

"I think with the home football game and such, people will be content with that as their entertainment for the night," he said. "To pick up the fight, we have to pay a rate according to our capacity, which usually runs around $4,500. To break even, we have to charge $22.50 a head."

Pape said he can't compete with private parties that purchase the fight from TCI of Eastern Iowa and gather friends to bring the price per person down.

Bill Blough, general manager at TCI, said his agency has sold the fight to about 50 people so far, but said he expects sales to pick up today and Saturday.

"Typically, we do sell about 150

(Pay-Per-View sales)," he said. "Take that number times 20 to figure out the actual viewing audience."

Blough said it will cost $49.95 to purchase the fight today or Saturday.

Pape said the growth of the Pay-Per-View industry has made it very difficult for bars to carry the fights.

"(Boxing promoter) Don King has done this Pay-Per-View thing with such exclusiveness that it's gotten too expensive," he said.

Mulder said he was getting the fight because Holyfield provides a much better draw for Tyson.

"We got the last fight and were a little disappointed," he said. "I don't expect Holyfield to take a dive."

CD-ROM

Rabinovitz said the couple's main motivation for producing the CD-ROM was to make a name for the UI in the film-studies world.

"The UI is an important center for film studies, but we don't have extensive archival facilities," she said. "George Lucas and Steven Spielberg are always throwing money at schools like USC, and we're never going to see anything like that. We wanted to put the UI on par with other film-studies universities by producing a high-profile project."

The CD-ROM is a compact disc filled with digital information that a computer translates into text, graphics, sound and live-motion video. A viewer can read critiques of "Rebecca" on the screen while watching side-by-side clips of the movie.

UI senior Kallie Blit, who is studying Hitchcock and "Rebecca" in the UI Film Authors class, said using a CD-ROM to study film is superior to reading books on the subject.

Having a film clip there on the screen as you read an argument about a film is so much more effective than viewing them both separately," Blit said. "You can draw your own conclusions on critics' viewpoints, and it's easier to deal with than flipping through 300 pages to find a particular topic."

Rabinovitz and Easley said the project went through several revisions during its creation. Easley, who focused on producing the technology while Rabinovitz researched its content, said the long time span came from working on the CD-ROM only during their spare time.

"Usually in producing a CD-ROM you have a full-time team of about 12 people who get it done in six months," he said. "We had two people, plus some volunteers, working on a part-time basis, so it took much longer."

Rabinovitz said she conceived of the idea after teaching feminist criticisms of "Rebecca" in the Gender and Film and Topics in U.S. Sound Film courses at the UI. She said she found the CD-ROM format well-suited to studying film.

"There were a lot of materials I'd used in teaching the film in the classroom, but they were so unwieldy," Rabinovitz said. "It's difficult for people to see connections between the movie and the text. Multimedia was the ideal medium to gather ideas and interpret them yourself."

Nicole Chardiet, a UI senior who studied "Rebecca" in Rabinovitz's Topics in U.S. Sound Film course last year, used an earlier version of "The Rebecca Project" in the class and found it effective.

"It pointed out things that were too intensive for (Rabinovitz) to explain in class," Chardiet said. "It contained a lot more information than a book could ever have."

UI film studies Professor Rick Altman said he is "delighted" the UI is the first educational institution to merge film studies and CD-ROM technology.

"It's about time that the most technologically-dependent field in liberal arts finally caught on to the potential for (using) new technologies to appreciate older ones," he said.

Rabinovitz and Easley said they are currently working on another CD-ROM for the UI on silent cinema.

"The Rebecca Project" is available for viewing in the Main Library's Information Arcade.

as a whole."

California voters also approved Proposition 215, sanctioning the use of marijuana in treating patients for a variety of medical conditions. A similar measure was rejected by voters in Arizona.

UI sophomore Emily Shack, spokesperson for the UI chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Law (NORML), said the success of the initiative was a victory for patients afflicted with AIDS, cancer, glaucoma and other diseases.

"It's a tremendous accomplishment toward the use of medical marijuana," she said. "It's great that people are accepting marijuana as a legitimate medical treatment that can't be substituted by synthetic drugs."

Shack said the future of the medicinal marijuana movement will be tied to the success of programs in the two states.

"If these states can show that this is a beneficial treatment, lawmakers and doctors across the country will become more aware of their ability to end suffering," Shack said.

Army officers charged with harassment

Sonja Barisic
Associated Press

HAMPTON, Va. — In what could prove to be the Army's Tailhook, a captain and two drill sergeants were charged Thursday with raping or sexually harassing more than a dozen women recruits.

The alleged incidents took place at the Army Ordnance Center at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. As many as 1,000 women who trained at the center are being interviewed by the Army to determine if there are any additional victims.

"We will continue to run down every lead at Aberdeen," Gen. William Hartzog said at a news conference at the Fort Monroe, Va., headquarters of the Training and Doctrine Command. "America deserves better than this. Our soldiers deserve better than this and our Army is better than this."

The Army said Capt. Derrick Robertson was charged with rape, conduct unbecoming an officer, obstruction of justice, adultery and having an improper relationship with a recruit.

Staff Sgt. Delmar Simpson was charged with rape, forcible sodomy, adultery and obstruction of justice.

Staff Sgt. Nathanael Beach was charged with obstruction of justice, disobeying an officer and having an improper relationship with a female trainee.

All three face court-martial. The rape charges are punishable by life in prison. All three men were married. The victims were 21 on average, and all were recruits in their second eight weeks of military training.

Two other instructors were charged with a lesser offense of inappropriate conduct. One is accused of writing a love letter to a trainee and faces a $500 fine, and the other was involved in a similar violation of Army codes of conduct.

The Pentagon would not release any other details of the allegations.

Recruits at the Ordnance Center receive instruction in bombs and shells and learn how to repair military machinery. Aberdeen Proving Ground, 30 miles north of Baltimore, is where the Army tests and evaluates weapons.

The investigation began in September when a recruit alleged sexual harassment. The Army has interviewed about 550 women.

Maj. Gen. Robert Shadley, commander of the Ordnance Center, said every woman who has been through training at the school during the past two years will be interviewed. Women who were reported AWOL will be asked if they left the base because of a sexual assault by an instructor, Shadley said.

As of September, the Aberdeen base had a population 14,000 people, including civilians. The ordnance school had an enrollment of about 3,500.

In 1991, more than 80 women were groped or otherwise sexually assaulted by drunken Navy and Marine aviators at a Tailhook Association convention in Las Vegas.

The scandal brought the resignation of Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III and put on hold some 10,000 Navy and Marine promotions. The Navy and Marine Corps pursued 140 harassment cases, but none led to a court-martial.

"America deserves better than this. Our soldiers deserve better than this and our Army is better than this."

Gen. William Hartzog, at a news conference at Fort Monroe, Va.

Kevorkian faces 3 charges for assisted suicide

B.J. Reyes
Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Dr. Jack Kevorkian was arrested Thursday outside of a pawn shop on charges stemming from the August death of a multiple sclerosis patient.

The assisted-suicide advocate faced an arraignment Thursday afternoon in Ionia County in western Michigan.

Kevorkian was arrested at about 10:30 a.m. outside a pawn shop where he had been shopping, National Pawn Brokers Outlet in Waterford Township northwest of Detroit.

Kevorkian was being held at the county jail, facing charges of assisting a suicide, conspiracy to assist in a suicide and practicing medicine without authorization, Sheriff Terry Jungel said.

Kevorkian attorney Geoffrey Fieger confirmed earlier this week that Kevorkian had been present when Loretta Peabody died in Ionia on Aug. 30. She was 54 and had multiple sclerosis. It was the 45th death he has acknowledged attending since 1990, and Fieger has said there were others, "more than one, less than 100."

Ionia County Prosecutor Raymond Voet empaneled a grand jury to look into Peabody's death.

Oates, Torre share AL manager award

NEW YORK (AP) — John Oates and Joe Torre were voted co-winners of the AL Manager of the Year on Thursday, the first in the 14 years of the award.

Oates and Torre each received 89 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"The only guy happier than I am is Joe Torre, and that's because he won the World Series," Oates said. "He's the only one in the major leagues who can say he did it. He should be recognized by the writers and honored and I'm very proud of it."

Torre, who guided the Yankees to their first World Series title since 1918, received 10 firsts, 12 seconds and three thirds. Winning the Series made the award special.

"It's really magical. It's unbelievable," Torre said. "It's probably the happiest time of my life. There's a bizarre plan out there somewhere and I'm glad to be a part of it."

Oates, who led the Texas Rangers to their first postseason appearance, got 12 firsts, eight seconds and five thirds.

Wildcats storm into Kinnick

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Defensive end Bill Ennis-Inge (9) and the rest of the Hawkeye defense are preparing to face the Big Ten's top offensive trio Saturday.

Northwestern aims to bounce back

Wayne Drehs
 The Daily Iowan

Northwestern coach Gary Barnett said at the beginning of this year his team had some "unfinished business" to do after losing to Southern California, 41-32, in last year's Rose Bowl.

But after Penn State snapped the Wildcats' 13-game conference win streak last weekend, No. 18 Northwestern (7-2, 5-1) was forced to adjust its goals.

Northwestern will look to get back to its winning ways at No. 23 Iowa (6-2, 4-1) Saturday. Kickoff is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. at Kinnick Stadium.

"We can't worry about Iowa and all the challenges they present us yet," Northwestern all-American linebacker Pat Fitzgerald said Tuesday. "We just need to worry about ourselves and getting mentally back on track."

The Wildcats haven't looked impressive in many of their victories this season. They struggled against conference doormats Minnesota and Illinois, winning by only two against the Golden Gophers and three against the Illini.

"Even though we are still gunning for people this year, they are coming after us that much harder," Fitzgerald said. "It seems that every team we have played has had their best game against us. That's tough."

Despite these poor showings, the Wildcats statistically rank as one of the most explosive offenses in the Big Ten. They have the conference's No. 1-ranked rusher, Darnell Autry, No. 1-ranked receiver, D'Wayne Bates and No. 1-ranked quarterback, Steve Schnur.

"I can't remember in recent years a team has the leading passer, rusher and receiver in the Big Ten," Fitzgerald said. "It seems that every team we have played has had their best game against us. That's tough."

See WILDCATS, Page 2B

No rivalry, but still a huge game

Let's get this straight right now. If Saturday's matchup between the Hawkeyes and the Wildcats is supposed to be a rivalry, then it is the weakest excuse for a rivalry I've ever seen.

Tennessee versus Alabama, Florida versus Florida State, even Iowa versus Illinois. Those are rivalries.

Northwestern is just a real, real big game.

I'd go so far as to say it's the biggest of the season. Let's just make sure we all realize why.

First of all, Iowa was supposed to lose to Ohio State. The No. 2 Buckeyes should march into Pasadena and the Rose Bowl — they've earned it. But second best is still better than the Hawkeyes have seen in half a decade. And a win over Northwestern would all but cinch it.

Secondly, Iowa owes the Wildcats some payback. Sure, Northwestern was due last year after 21 straight losses to the Hawkeyes, but such a big deal was made of the game that the Hawkeyes had to swallow some pride when they fell in the final minutes.

Said Iowa coach Hayden Fry before the game: "After 21 straight, they still need to prove they can whip us."

That's exactly what the Wildcats did. Maybe it's a good thing Iowa's not talking this year's game up.

The third reason Iowa needs to beat Northwestern and finish ahead of the Wildcats in the conference standings this year is so the Hawkeyes can feel better about themselves. I don't mean to pass judgment on the Iowa football team, but it seems to me the reason Iowa wasn't as fired up about the Wildcats' miracle season was

Hawks favored in Big Ten tourney

Chuck Blount
 The Daily Iowan

After completing the Big Ten Conference regular season a perfect 10-0, the No. 2 Iowa field hockey team will have to prove its conference grit once again at the Big Ten Tournament this weekend in Evanston, Ill.

An automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament is on the line at the tourney. Although Iowa virtually has a bid already locked up, the rest of the field doesn't.

As the No. 1 seed, the Hawkeyes will receive a first-round bye. At 2:30 p.m., Saturday, Iowa will play the winner of a first-round match between fourth-seeded Michigan State and fifth-seeded Northwestern. The championship match is scheduled for 1 p.m. Sunday.

An early matchup with either No. 20 Northwestern or No. 13 Michigan State could pose some problems for the Hawkeyes. In both meetings with the Wildcats, Iowa was given all it could handle in two tough one-goal wins (3-2, 1-0).

"It is a concern of ours (that we may face Northwestern early)," Iowa head coach Beth Beglin said. "We haven't played well against them this year and they will also be playing on their home field."

Michigan State is heading into the tourney fresh off a big 4-1 win over Northwestern. Iowa, which beat Michigan State 4-0 last weekend, has had better luck against the Spartans, though.

"We are going to be well prepared," Beglin said.

Struggling Hawkeyes host Purdue, Indiana

James Kramer
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa volleyball coach Linda Schoensted can't quite put a finger on her team's recent struggles.

Perhaps it's the quality of the teams Iowa has played during its current four-match losing streak. The combined conference record of the Hawkeyes' last four opponents is 37-11.

If upper-echelon competition is the culprit for Iowa's problems, things should get better this weekend. The Hawkeyes will host sixth-place Purdue tonight and 10th-place Indiana Saturday. Those teams have a combined 6-18 record in the Big Ten. Both matches are scheduled for 7 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Basketball Blowout hits Carver

James Kramer
 The Daily Iowan

A lot of things have happened to the Iowa men's basketball team since it lost to Arizona in the second round of last season's NCAA Tournament.

Russ Millard, Kenyon Murray and Mon'ter Glasper used up their eligibility. Chris Kingsbury decided to leave college early to pursue a professional career. Jess Settles nearly did the same thing.

Now that the dust has settled, the Hawkeyes have an opportunity to show what they can do and, in the process, shake off a little rust. That opportunity will take place Saturday when Iowa plays in the intrasquad Black and Gold Blowout.

the glory and acclaim that Northwestern received a year ago — not even when Iowa reached the Rose Bowl.

Every year it was Michigan this, Ohio State that, Penn State this, Ohio State that. It seemed no other Big Ten teams could gain any respect.

So it was almost unfair for the nation to embrace Northwestern, a program that snuck into the open arms of Americans everywhere, leaving the Hawkeyes where they've been for a long time — in the middle of the Big Ten pack.

So this year, Iowa needs to erase the bitterness it tasted in Evanston a year ago. The Hawkeyes can use those same Wildcats as a stepping stone to the most exciting season climax they've been a part of this decade.

If Iowa wins the next three games, it will finish 9-2, play on New Year's Day and perhaps have the opportunity to knock off Tennessee or Florida State and finish in the Top 10. Then, the Hawkeyes will earn the national respect that has passed them by for so long.

No, beating Northwestern will not feel the same as knocking off a bitter rival like Iowa State or Illinois. It will mean so much more.

Fitzgerald. He leads the team in total tackles with 93, and is the emotional leader on the field as well.

The most intriguing part of the game could be the fourth quarter, where Northwestern's comeback offense will run into an Iowa defense that has only given up 10 points all season in the last period of play.

"I would like to think it would be close enough late in the game for our defense to have a bearing," Fry said. "When really good teams play each other, you usually don't see a lot of scoring. So it usually comes down to defense and turnovers."

Team chemistry has continued to be a problem for Iowa. Freshman Julie Williams, who has improved steadily throughout the Big Ten season, agreed that this weekend is the Hawkeyes' best chance in recent weeks of improving that area.

"These are two matches we can win, and should win," Williams said. "Hopefully we can put them away and play together."

From what I've seen, he's got superstar potential," Settles said. "That doesn't mean it's going to happen, but we're excited to have him. You just don't get that size and raw talent (often)."

Other players who will look to make a statement in the Blowout include inside players Greg Helmers and Alvin Robinson, junior college transfer Vernon Simmons, and freshmen Ryan Luehrmann and Marcelo Gomes.

Settles and Woolridge were the third- and fifth-leading scorers in the Big Ten last year, respectively. Both were first-team all-conference selections.

who fractured the little finger on his right hand a couple weeks ago, is being looked upon as a player who could replace Millard's inside presence. The Blowout will be the first chance for him to showcase his skills in front of Hawkeye faithful.

"If we could find somebody to get us 10 rebounds a game, that would really give us a boost," Davis said. "That's why we're looking at (Rucker) hard, but you can't force it."

Settles, who decided to return to college after discussing his situation with pro scouts, has been impressed with Rucker's potential and size (6-foot-9, 235).

points and made six 3-pointers in an exhibition game against the Republic of Georgia.

"It started last year when Kingsbury didn't come back," McCausland said of his emergence. "It got my juices flowing and I starting talking more seriously with the coaches about more playing time.

"I'm pumped as heck to be in the top five. It's kind of a culmination of all the work I've put in."

The player Hawkeye fans might be most interested in seeing won't be starting for the Gold squad, but is expected to play despite an injury.

TYSON VS. HOLYFIELD Heavyweight never-quit

Ed Schuyler Jr. Associated Press LAS VEGAS — When Roberto Duran walked away from Sugar Ray Leonard in the "No Mas" fight in 1980, a 14-year-old would-be fighter in upstate New York was crushed. "When he did that, I was overwhelmed," said Mike Tyson, who was a big fan of the fighter called "Hands of Stone," an icon to the machismo crowd. "He did a number on me. I was just a kid. I didn't know what to do." Tyson believes Duran quit not because of physical fear, but out of the fear of being humiliated by Leonard. "But you quit like a man," the WBA heavyweight champion said. "I could have quit against Douglas, but I didn't quit. It's just the way I was brought up. If you're a champion you don't quit, except on your face." Tyson was knocked out in the 10th round by James "Buster" Douglas in 1990. Fighting to the end also is the philosophy of Evander Holyfield.

TYSON VS. HOLYFIELD

Heavyweights share never-quit mentality

Ed Schuyler Jr. Associated Press
LAS VEGAS — When Roberto Duran walked away from Sugar Ray Leonard in the "No Mas" fight in 1980, a 14-year-old would-be fighter in upstate New York was crushed. "When he did that, I was overwhelmed," said Mike Tyson, who was a big fan of the fighter called "Hands of Stone," an icon to the machismo crowd. "He did a number on me. I was just a kid. Tyson was knocked out in the 10th round by James "Buster" Douglas in 1990.
 Fighting to the end also is the philosophy of Evander Holyfield, Tyson's challenger Saturday night, who's called the Real Deal, because that's what people get when he fights. "So, while the fight could be short, it shouldn't be dull. "It's going to be an explosive fight," said the 34-year-old Holyfield, who retired in 1992 because of a heart problem, but who has been medically cleared to fight. Tyson and Holyfield appeared together Thursday for the final news conference for the triple heavyweight championship card at the MGM Grand Garden. "Some boxing people think Holyfield's best chance is to stay out of trouble early and take Tyson into the late rounds, where he has not been since before he went to prison in 1992. "I'm expecting anything," said Tyson, an 11-1 favorite. "I'm just staying cautious and I'll be prepared for anything." "When push comes to shove, Evander's instinct will be to stand and fight," Riddick Bowe, who won two of three fights with Holyfield, said.

Associated Press

WBC heavyweight champion Mike Tyson talks with reporters after a workout session, Aug. 15, at the Golden Gloves Gym in Las Vegas. "He may be right, but if I do it, you better believe I'm going to win," Holyfield said. He also has said in what seems to be a declaration of his fighting creed: "The only person who hit me that I couldn't hit back was my momma." The three heavyweight bouts plus a six-round women's fight will be seen on pay-per-view beginning at 8 p.m. CST. The Tyson-Holyfield fight can start as early as 10 p.m. or as late as 11 p.m.

BIG TEN WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Steve Herman Associated Press
INDIANAPOLIS — Nell Fortner had no qualms about taking the women's basketball coaching job at Purdue, even under the circumstances of her predecessor's departure. Lin Dunn led the Boilermakers to the NCAA tournament Final Four in 1994 and to three Big Ten titles but was fired last spring. After that, a number of players transferred to other schools. "It's kind of exciting in a way, because the possibilities are endless," Fortner said Thursday. "There's no expectations on this team, so everything we get we earn, and it's exciting." "You hate to see that happen to a fellow coach, that they lose their job, but someone had to take the job. It was a good job, and I took it," Fortner said at a meeting of the Big Ten women's coaches.

Purdue was 20-11 last season. Only three letter-winners are back — Stephanie White, Jannon Roland and Ukari Figgs. Five of the newcomers are freshmen, along with senior Corissa Yasen, the NCAA heptathlon champion who hasn't played basketball since high school. Iowa, which returns four starters, is the heavy favorite to repeat as Big Ten champion this season. The Hawkeyes were 27-4 last season, and their only loss in 16 Big Ten games was to Purdue. "Absolutely. I would think hands down," Fortner said of Iowa's status as the favorite. "Their talent is unbelievable."

Iowa coach Angie Lee, a former Iowa team captain and assistant coach for six years before taking over the top spot last season, doesn't disagree. "As far as defense of the championship, I don't think there's any question that we're where we want to be," she said. "In regards to defending the title, there are some things we've got to do. No. 1, we have to stay injury-free; No. 2, this team has got to play like the veterans they are. We no longer have the mask of being the 'Fabulous Freshmen,' or whatever we were. We are now veterans and we have to play like veterans." "Lastly, this team has to focus and practice from day to day, and not look ahead. If you get it done in practice, the rest of it is going to take care of itself," Lee said. Penn State was runner-up to Iowa in the Big Ten and won the conference tournament last year, but the Lady Lions lost three starters. The two returning starters are seniors Angie Potthoff, the leading scorer at 18.5 points a game, and Tiffany Longworth. "After Iowa, I think it's wide open," Indiana coach Jim Izard said. Lee said Iowa's biggest challenge could come from Wisconsin, which was 21-8 and third in the conference at 12-4. "They have a very veteran squad themselves and one of the best point guards in the country in Keisha Anderson, so I look for them to be very strong," Lee said. "I don't think you can ever count out Penn State. Michigan State has what it takes ... I look at Illinois, I think they're ready to make a crack at the top spot. "I don't count out a lot of other people — Northwestern, Indiana, Ohio State. Those people are there and you have to go into their places and win there if you're going to come away with the title."

THIRTY-SIXTH TIME WITH AT LEAST 50 POINTS

Jordan reaffirms his greatness with fifty against Heat

Steven Wine
Associated Press

MIAMI — Michael Jordan sank another shot that he launched near the Miami Heat bench, then ran back upcourt with a smile of satisfaction. Helpless witness Pat Riley also grinned.

"I've seen that so long," the Miami Heat coach said. "I think he does it for my benefit now."

Jordan reaffirmed his greatness in a new season Wednesday night, scoring 50 points to help the unbeaten Chicago Bulls beat the Heat 106-100.

Jordan reached the 50-point mark for the 36th time. He did it only once last season, scoring an NBA season-high 53 points against Detroit on March 7.

The 33-year-old Jordan, seeking his ninth scoring title, hiked his average to a league-best 32.3 points through four games. Despite a new $30 million one-year contract, he shows no signs of complacency.

Against the Heat, his incentive may have been a Miami newspaper story Wednesday under the headline, "Hardaway wants to guard Jordan." In the story, Heat guard Tim Hardaway said he relished the opportunity. Jordan's reaction? He told teammates he expected to have a big night.

"He saw what was written in the paper," Bulls forward Scottie Pippen said. "He came out as a personal challenge to Hardaway, whether he admits it or not."

Jordan acknowledged special

motivation, though he didn't specifically mention Hardaway.

"This is a perfect game for a competitor like me — on the road against a team that is undefeated, a team we've done well against, a team that is lying there waiting for you," he said. "I like playing a team like this. They get us ready for the playoffs."

Miami (2-1) was swept by the Bulls in the first round of last season's playoffs.

Chicago (4-0) can match the fastest start in franchise history by winning Friday at Detroit. The Bulls started 5-0 last season enroute to a league record 72 victories and the NBA championship.

Jordan's latest scoring binge included turnarounds, fadeaways and a 3-point buzzer-beater to end the first half. He also made an under-the-basket, back-to-the-backboard, over-the-shoulder shot that most players miss in their dreams.

Even Jordan's teammates laughed at that one, and they've seen it all before.

Heat fans have seen it all before, too. Jordan improved to 28-2 against Miami.

"I shot the ball well," he said. "I got out of the blocks quick."

Jordan scored the Bulls' first 11 points, and 15 of their 19 in the first quarter.

"You never know what he's going to do," Riley said. "A lot of nights he comes out and doesn't do anything but get his teammates involved. Maybe he gets nine or 12 at the half, then he takes care of it in the second half."

"This time he was committed to start quick. He was very offensive-minded. Even when we double-teamed him, he scored. He's simply the finest and the greatest."

NHL ROUNDUP

Ottawa gets first win over Toronto

Associated Press

KANATA, Ontario — Steve Duchesne and Daniel Alfredsson each had a goal and two assists as the Ottawa Senators got their first win ever over the Toronto Maple Leafs, 6-2 Thursday night.

Alexei Yashin scored his 10th goal of the season for the Senators, who are unbeaten in six home games this season (3-0-3).

Alexandre Daigle, Denny Lambert and Lance Pitlick also scored for Ottawa, which is now 1-6-1 against Toronto since entering the NHL in 1992.

Former Toronto goaltender Damian Rhodes was brilliant for Ottawa, stopping 31 shots against his old team.

Devils 4, Blackhawks 2

CHICAGO — Mike Dunham made 35 saves in his first NHL start, helping the New Jersey Devils beat the Chicago Blackhawks 4-2 Thursday night for their first three-game winning streak this season.

Brian Rolston, Jason Smith, Valeri Zelepukin and Dave Andreychuk scored for the Devils, who hadn't won three straight since early last March.

Tony Amonte and Murray Craven had goals for the Blackhawks, who lost for just the third time in their last 11 games.

Panthers 4, Capitals 2

MIAMI — Scott Mellanby, Ray Sheppard, Ed Jovanovski and Tom Fitzgerald led another balanced attack for Florida.

The Panthers, who had their 12-game unbeaten streak ended Saturday by Philadelphia, also got two assists apiece from Robert Svehla and Johan Garpenlov.

Florida blitzed the Capitals in the first period, outshooting Washington 20-10 to take a 2-1 lead. It would have been worse if not for goaltender Olaf Kolzig, who made several spectacular saves to keep Washington in it.

Flyers 5, Sabres 2

BUFFALO, N.Y. — John LeClair had two goals and an assist in the third period as the Philadelphia Flyers overcame a two-goal deficit to beat the Buffalo Sabres.

LeClair tied the game with 13:18 remaining, set up Mikael Renberg's go-ahead goal with 9:33 left, and scored the clincher with 4:01 remaining when he stuffed the puck through Dominik Hasek's legs.

Derek Plante scored twice for the Sabres, who had a 2-1 lead after the first 20 minutes despite being outshot 18-4. Anatoli Semenov and Michal Grosseck each had two assists for Buffalo.

Oilers 6, Bruins 0

BOSTON — Mariusz Czerkawski got his first NHL hat trick and Curtis Joseph recorded his second shutout of the season as the Edmonton Oilers beat the Boston Bruins.

Joseph stopped 25 shots as the Oilers snapped a three-game losing streak.

Boston is winless in its last six games, and its 1-5-3 home record is second-worst in the league.

The 24-year-old Dunham made an immediate impact, stopping the first 21 shots he faced to match Ed Belfour in a scoreless duel well into the second period.

Magic handle Nets in Tokyo

Associated Press

TOKYO — "No Shaq, No Problem," said the sign waved by one Japanese fan.

At least as long as the opponent is hitting only 37 percent of its shots, and turning the ball over.

Despite their cold shooting, the New Jersey Nets stayed even with the Shaq-less Orlando Magic until early in the third quarter.

Then an 11-0 run featuring turnovers, fast breaks and six points by David Vaughn put the Magic ahead to stay. They went on to win 108-95, evening their record at 1-1.

New Jersey is 0-2 and will meet the Magic again Saturday in the conclusion of a two-game series in the Tokyo Dome, usually a baseball stadium. Nearly 40,000 spectators watched Thursday night's game.

Anfernee Hardaway, who led the Magic with 23 points, wasn't buying the no problem theory.

"We didn't play a good game," he said. "It wasn't the way we wanted to get it, but we still got it."

Rony Seikaly, the center obtained from the Golden State Warriors to try and help fill the hole left by Shaquille O'Neal's free-agent departure to the Los Angeles Lakers, scored 10 of his 13 points in the fourth quarter.

But he hasn't advanced yet to the starting lineup, coach Brian Hill said.

On the subject of compensating for O'Neal's absence, he said, "I think we're going to be a better defensive team and a better rebounding team. But ... we certainly weren't in the first half."

SuperSonics 103, Suns 98

PHOENIX — Hersey Hawkins scored 24 points and made two critical free throws with 9.9 seconds left Thursday night, lifting Seattle to a 103-98 win over Phoenix, the SuperSonics' fifth straight victory over the Suns.

Gary Payton, who added 25 points and seven assists, sliced through the Phoenix defense for an important layup with 1:27 to play, helping the Sonics hang on.

Hawkins added 12 rebounds, and Detlef Schrempf had 17 points and 13 rebounds for the Sonics. Shawn Kemp scored 16 for Seattle, but fouled out with 1:43 to play.

Danny Manning had 23 points and 11 rebounds for the winless

Orlando forward Anfernee Hardaway takes a shot past New Jersey center Shawn Bradley during the first half of their NBA game in Tokyo Thursday night.

Suns, who are off to an 0-4 start for the first time in 11 years. Wesley Person had 17 points and Rex Chapman scored 10 of his 12 points in the fourth quarter.

Chapman cut the Seattle lead to 101-96 with a 3-pointer with 26 seconds to go, and Schrempf, who was fouled on the in-bounds pass, missed both free throws. But Hawkins was solid when he got his turn seconds later.

Seattle started the third quarter with a 52-37 lead, and the Suns never got closer than 15 points throughout the period.

LSU, Bar

Mary Foster

BATON ROUGE, La. — The time there will be no complicated alignments, no high-flying passing game, no fast-strike quarterback and receivers. LSU and Alabama know exactly what to expect Saturday: a constant pounding.

It's been 27 years since LSU beat Alabama in Tiger Stadium. The future of the streak rides on the productivity of each team's running game.

"Your defensive play starts with stopping the run when you play Alabama," LSU coach Gerry DiNardo said. "That's true every week but especially against Alabama. I think the matchup that will somewhat dictate the results of the game is how well both teams rush the football."

LSU's only loss was to Florida with Danny Wuerffel and blowout offense. Alabama lost to Tennessee where Peyton Manning throws the football. Neither LSU Herb Tyler nor Alabama's Freddie Kitchens offers that kind of threat.

No. 10 Alabama (7-1, 4-1 South-eastern Conference) averages 35 yards per game, 167 of them rushing yards. They have run 38 times in their first eight games, passed it 199 times.

"We know they're going to come at us hard," said LSU defensive tackle Anthony McFarland. "They pound away at you and then pound away some more. It's easy to see what they do. It's hard to stop it."

No. 11 LSU (6-1, 4-1) has averaged almost 237 yards a game rushing, 189 yards passing and ranks first in the conference in rushing yards a game.

Holtz bets effort from

Associated Press

With 13 players suspended for gambling, Boston College might not give 17th-ranked Notre Dame much of a game Saturday. Irish coach Lou Holtz is warning his players, however: Don't count on it.

"I just know that people rally together. That's what scares me to death," Holtz said. "I've been in that situation. Players rally together, they come together."

On Wednesday, Boston College suspended 13 players for gambling on either football or baseball, two of them for betting against the own team in an Oct. 26 loss to Syracuse.

The suspensions included two starters, linebacker Jermain Monk and tight end Scott Dragos.

The Irish are 5-2 going into Boston, and, frankly, defensive coordinator Bob Davie said they are more concerned about being 6-0 than they are about Boston College's problems.

"We're in tunnel vision right now," Davie said. "I'm not concerned about their personnel as much as their schemes."

BOSTON — Suspected gambling players this week for gambling scandal, cornerback Kiern Speight said he will skip Saturday's game against Notre Dame because "my heart isn't in it."

Speight, who turns 19 on Sunday, said he will return with his family to Washington, D.C., to rejoin the team for the season's last two games.

Boston College suspended players this week for gambling including two who bet against their own team. Although he was one of five players accused by teammates of gambling, Speight was not suspended, and his attorney said he has been exonerated by Middlesex County District Attorney Thomas Reilly.

"I've done everything BC has asked me to do. When the situation took place, I felt like there was one on my side," Speight said Thursday in the office of lawyer John McBride. "Somebody should tell me how my name was put on it. Somebody should apologize."

Speight was identified in newspapers after reporters watched through a windowed door as coach Dan Henning and the team's captain confronted him and the teammates.

The other three players were among the 13 suspended Wednesday. Speight suspected he was included in the group because he was close friends with the other three.

LSU running back Kevin Faulk tries to shake loose from a Mississippi State defender Oct. 26. LSU hosts Alabama Saturday and both teams know exactly what to expect: a constant pounding.

2 in the SEC in rushing with an average of 121 yards a game, and Rondell Mealey, No. 2 in the conference in scoring, to provide most of their rushing attack.

"They're a very good football team, those running backs make a big difference," Alabama coach Gene Stallings said. "They're two exciting running backs, and that team has been moving the ball and scoring points."

SAN DIEGO — Billy Blanton's 11-yard quarterback draw with 38 seconds left gave San Diego State a wild 28-24 win over No. 16 Wyoming, ending the nation's longest winning streak at 12 games.

Blanton moved the Aztecs 72 yards in seven plays and 61 seconds and got the last 34 yards himself. He ran for 23 yards on third-and-5 from the Wyoming 35, with the bulk of the run coming thanks to a big block by receiver Leandrew Childs.

Blanton's TD run was the seventh lead change overall and the third in the final 10:42 in the game featuring two of the nation's top offenses.

Boston College's head football coach, Dan Henning, stands to speak at a news conference held at the BC campus in Newton, Mass., Wednesday.

"We were recruited together, came here together in a summer program. If I want to get a pizza, they'll spot me a little money. Next time, I might spot them," he said. "That hasn't changed."

Freddy Jones returns to I.C.

Sara Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City and Chicago will come together for more than just football this weekend when The Freddy Jones Band, a five-man ensemble out of the Windy City, plays at The Union Bar tonight.

"Being the Northwestern-Iowa (football) weekend, and with it being such a big game, I thought it would be a great idea to get a really good band in town," said Joe Muran, who handles promotions for The Union. "They're really well-known in Chicago and a lot of students here are from Chicago, so they have a strong fan base."

"The last two times they have played here they have been excellent. They were excellent to work with, excellent performers and the turnout has been excellent."

UI sophomore Jackson Brandenburg, who will see the band for the first time tonight, said the group's sound is similar to The Dave Matthews Band.

"People who like bands like that will like The Freddy Jones Band. It's feel-good, fun music," he said. "I've listened to them for a while, and I'm excited that a good band is coming to Iowa City."

Julie Bill/The Daily Iowan

The Freddy Jones Band, seen here performing last April in the Union Main Lounge, returns to Iowa City tonight.

The group, which makes frequent Iowa City stops, is made up of Singer/Guitarist Wayne Healy, Marty Lloyd on vocals and acoustic guitar, Jim Bonaccorsi on bass, Rob Bonaccorsi on guitar and vocals and Simon Horrocks on drums.

The band's endless touring, which has included the H.O.R.D.E. Fest twice and opening appearances for The Dave Matthews Band and Hootie & the Blowfish, has won them a loyal following in college towns across the country. It has also given The Freddy Jones Band plenty of opportunities to meld as a group that in the past has made for lively and varied improvisations on their Caribbean, bluesy and folk rock.

In an April interview with the DI, Healy said the UI campus is one of the band's favorite stops, and the crowds are always rocking.

"The last few times we've been there, it's been out of control," he said. "And since I'm the master of ceremonies, it'll be my job to make it out of control. I'm sure there'll be security problems, crowd-surfing and general chaos - and if not, I'm going to whip it into that."

Doors will open at 6 p.m., with opening act and fellow Chicago group The Drovers scheduled to play at 7 p.m. The Freddy Jones Band is expected to go on shortly after 8 p.m. Tickets are still available at The Union Bar, 121 E. College St.; Almost Blue Music, 112 E. College St.; and B.J. Compact Discs, 6 1/2 S. Dubuque St., for $14.

Theaters feature work of German puppeteer

Tricia Musel
The Daily Iowan

A Bohemian fairy tale that provided the basis for the story of King Lear will come to life under the guidance of German puppeteer Olaf Bernstengel tonight at Riverside Theatre Company.

Bernstengel, a member of the Germany-based puppet company Fundus: A Museum on Wheels, makes the difficult task of puppeteering look easy, said Monica Leo, managing director and puppeteer at Eulenspiegel Puppet Theatre in Iowa City.

"Olaf Bernstengel has so much knowledge of the art of puppeteering that his shows are deeply textured," Leo said. "He creates layers of meaning that are beautifully manipulated." In the first half of "Salt is More Precious Than Gold," the king is getting ready to turn over his throne and must choose which one of his three sons will succeed him as ruler. While the story features a fairy-tale setting, the performance also sends a message to modern-day people, Bernstengel said.

"In our (American and European) consumer society, it is important to show something as minimal as salt is important," Bernstengel said. "Not all the gadgets of modern life are more important than the small things." The second portion of the performance, "Variety of Strings," is a complex marionette show, where each puppet is moved by 15-20 strings. The program involves a trapeze artist, clown, juggler, monkey and a break-away skeleton.

"Fundus will be using a type of puppet that we in the United States don't get to see very often," Leo said. "These puppets are historically accurate multistringed marionettes, hand-carved by a retired German puppeteer who worked with marionettes himself."

"Salt is More Precious Than Gold" will be performed tonight at 7 and Saturday at 2 p.m. at Riverside Theatre Company, 213 N. Gilbert St. Admission is $5. There will be additional performances Sunday at 2 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. at Owl Glass Puppetry Center, 319 Calhoun St., West Liberty.

HAWKEYE PROFILE

HAWKEYE PROFILE

Shaw runs through Iowa record books

Chris Snider
THE DAILY IOWAN

In 1992, a highly touted, yet highly outspoken tailback from Austin, Texas, packed up his talent for the game of football and came to the University of Iowa.

Four years later, a lot has changed for Sedrick Shaw. The senior tailback has rushed his way into the Iowa record books as the most prolific runner in school history. You name the category — he owns the record.

He has had to adjust from an inner city lifestyle to living in laid-back Iowa City. And he's had to deal with the media attention that comes along with his stardom.

But, through it all, one thing has stayed the same — Shaw remains humble. Ask him about his fame and he'll give you the same response he would have given you four years ago.

"What fame?" Shaw said heading into the ninth game of his senior season. "I just look at

"It's possible that I may have a chance to play in the NFL. If so, you're still playing football, which is a team sport. However they judge you is however they judge you. I can't concern myself with that."

Sedrick Shaw, Iowa running back on being judged by NFL scouts myself as another person around Iowa City that goes to school here. I just happen to play football."

He also happens to be pretty good at it. What Shaw won't tell you is that he is the all-time leading rusher in Iowa history with 3,699 yards. He has more rushing attempts (749) than any Hawkeye and more rushing touchdowns (27). Last season, he set single season records in all three categories.

This year, Shaw has run for 659 yards in seven games. His numbers are down from last year, but only because he has been hampered by a number of injuries all season long.

"I don't really complain about it," Shaw said of his injuries, which have ranged from bruised ribs to a sprained ankle to a broken thumb. "It's just one of those things that happens. You play a contact sport, it's bound to happen. I've been fortunate enough up to this point to avoid them."

Iowa coach Hayden Fry, who said Shaw is one of the best running backs he has had in 45 years of coaching, noted that Shaw has done well not to dwell on his misfortune this season.

"He's such a mature young man. He's been injured, but he knows that happens in a contact sport," Fry said. "It's been difficult for him to handle because he's never been injured before. He loves playing football and he hates missing it."

But the injuries appear to be in the past. After not playing at all three weeks ago, Shaw played last weeks game without his thumb in a cast and without his ribs wrapped.

With 341 yards in his next three games, Shaw would become only the eighth player in Big Ten history to rush for over 1,000 yards in three separate seasons. But Shaw has still kept his goals simple.

"Just to finish the season healthy," he said. "That's it."

Most players in his situation would be looking at a possible career in the NFL and concentrating on what they need to do to reach that level. Not Shaw.

"I'm not looking that forward down the road," he said. "I'm looking at Northwestern. Everything else is down the road."

Shaw may refuse to look down the road, but his teammates don't.

Shaw's teammate and friend Damien Robinson, who is looking forward to a pro career of his own, is confident Shaw will make it to the NFL.

"I know Sed can make it," Robinson said. "He's a great player. How many backs can do the things Sed

PETE THOMPSON/THE DAILY IOWAN

HUMBLE HALFBACK: Iowa senior Sedrick Shaw has avoided the hype of being a top college athlete.

we're just winning game."

The Hawkeyes are on pace to win more games this season than in any other season Shaw has been here. Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman knows Shaw has been a key factor in that.

"He's a gutsy guy," Sherman said. "He gives 100 percent each play. Sedrick's one of a kind."

One of a kind as a running back and one of a kind as a person.

Shaw was highly recruited out of LBJ High School in Austin. He describes himself as having "all the mentality and mind frame of a person from the city," yet he left the big city behind to come to Iowa City.

"I wanted to be somewhere a lot smaller so I could focus in on school," he said. "I really didn't want to be in the city."

Shaw said he's seen it all living in Austin — gang violence, prostitution, violence — but he was always able to separate himself from those things.

"I didn't pay attention. You respect people. They respect you," he said.

Things weren't always that easy for some of Shaw's friends, who were not able to avoid some of the distractions. Yet, Shaw never lost respect for those friends.

"I can't pass judgment on another man or woman for decisions they made in their life because I'm not standing in their shoes," Shaw said.

Shaw doesn't judge people, and he doesn't look to be judged. Since he first stepped foot on this campus, he has never tried to prove himself to other people. He has only tried to prove his ability to himself, which he now feels he has done.

"I think I've proven more than enough to myself," he said.

While he doesn't try to prove himself to others, he does feel the need to entertain people every time he sets foot on the field.

"That's all it is, a show," he said of the game of football. "On the football field, you go out there and perform."

"First and foremost, when you go out there, you want to win. That's the first objective of the game. Second of all, you want to perform. You want to give people something to talk about."

Of course there is one personal award Shaw is looking forward to getting, a degree.

He will graduate with a bachelor's degree in sociology next May.

can do?

He contributes every week."

As far as impressing pro scouts, Shaw could care less about personal glory. He is first and foremost a team player.

"It's possible that I may have a chance to play in the NFL," he said; taking a rare moment to reflect on a possible pro career. "If so, you're still playing football, which is a team sport. However they judge you is however they judge you. I can't concern myself with that."

He also refused to concern himself with Heisman talk at the beginning of the season. His 1,477 yards as a junior brought with it the label "Heisman hopeful" this season. The cover of the Iowa media day program labeled Shaw a Heisman candidate and the media was quick to pick up on that.

But not Shaw.

"I didn't pay attention to it," Shaw said. "That's other people. That's not me. I wasn't concerned about it."

"I think the media pays attention to those things that I don't pay attention to. I'm happy when

HAWKEYE PROFILE

Sack master

Jared DeVries has become a master at terrorizing opposing quarterbacks.

Tony Wirt
THE DAILY IOWAN

For Iowa defensive tackle Jared DeVries, there was never much doubt as to where he wanted to play college football.

Despite being recruited by several schools — including Wisconsin, Nebraska, and Northern Iowa — the only official campus visit he took while in high school was to the University of Iowa.

"I always wanted to be a Hawkeye. I grew up in Iowa," DeVries said, "When I took my visit here, all the players were really friendly to me. I like the family atmosphere here."

While he knew exactly where he wanted to go, what position he would play when he arrived in Iowa City was still up for debate. During his prep career at Aplington-Parkersburg High School, DeVries started at nose guard, playing some defensive tackle as a freshman. During his junior year, he became a full-time fullback and defensive end.

And no colleges that were in contact with DeVries ever mentioned playing positions other than defensive end.

"When we recruit anyone, we give them their choice when they first come in," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "He may have thought that he wanted to be a running back or a linebacker or a defensive end or something of that nature, but he kept growing and eating, and growing and eating. It didn't take much talk to get him to play defense."

After arriving on campus, DeVries elected to take a redshirt year to adjust to college life, both on and off the field.

JULIE BILL/THE DAILY IOWAN

HOT PURSUIT: Jared DeVries closes in on Ohio State quarterback Stanley Jackson.

"It's hard to come in as a true freshman, it's such a great leap.

I learned the system my redshirt year. I got stronger and all that stuff that goes along with playing college football. I learned a lot of things when I came to Iowa that I wasn't exposed to in Aplington," DeVries said.

"It shows I lived a sheltered life back home, but I wouldn't trade it for anything in the world. I like the small town atmosphere and relate that to the team. It's a family type atmosphere."

In his first collegiate game, DeVries gave Hawkeye fans a glimpse of what was to come, recording three sacks and six tackles against in-state rival Northern Iowa. He never slowed down after that, ending the year tied for third in the Big Ten with 12 sacks and sixth in tackles for loss with 19 for 104 yards.

DeVries put a big exclamation point on his freshman year in El Paso, Texas, by being voted Most Valuable Lineman in Iowa's 38-18 domination of Washington in the Sun Bowl.

DeVries likes to downplay his role in the Sun Bowl victory, saying that he only had one good quarter.

However, he sees the victory over the Pac-10 co-champions as giving the team motivation. DeVries uses that game for motivation this year and tries to play every quarter this year the same way he played in the Sun Bowl.

"I just like to make the big play to get our defense fired up," DeVries said.

DeVries hasn't missed a beat this year, anchoring the defensive line and earning even more respect from his teammates and coaches by making big plays when they need to be made.

"Jared is a superior player and I think he's one of the guys that makes it easier for me in the backfield," Hawkeye free safety Damien Robinson said. "We compliment each other well. If we're back there covering, Jared is going to make the sack, and when he's putting pressure on the quarterback, we're going to get there to make plays and make hits. Without Jared, it'd be very tough for us."

"Jared's got that extra heartbeat. He loves challenges," Coach Fry said. "He loves someone telling him that he can't do something. He wants to prove you wrong. That's just his makeup."

Both DeVries and his coaches see his main asset as his speed. Although gaining a lot of weight since high school, he has not lost any of the speed that made him a great running back.

Although only in his sophomore season, many people, including Coach Hayden Fry, are expecting Jared to continue his career after college.

When asked if he thinks DeVries will be playing on Sundays, Coach Hayden Fry responded, "Definitely. Big Time. He'll not only play, but he'll make a name for himself."

"Everybody's dream is to play in the NFL," DeVries said, "If I'm fortunate enough and good enough to get that opportunity, I'll more than welcome that chance."

Hawkeyes get a new look for 1996

PETE THOMPSON/THE DAILY IOWAN

NEW STYLE: Iowa wide receiver Ricchard Carter shows off Iowa's new uniforms earlier this season. The new uniforms were designed by Reebok.

Andy Hamilton
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa football program has always been one to follow the attitude of: If it works for someone else, let's try it. When the nation's top teams were switching from size to speed, the Hawkeyes changed their recruiting emphasis to get faster players.

Last year, just about every other big-time program was getting hooked up exclusively with one company for all of its equipment needs (excluding pads and helmets).

The Hawkeyes were quick to follow suit, signing a deal with Reebok prior to the start of this season.

"We have outstanding shoes and our other gear is good. We haven't had any problems," quarterback Matt Sherman said. "I think we're very lucky to have a good sponsor like Reebok that came in and said, 'Hey, we want to supply some stuff for you.' We've been very fortunate, so hopefully we can keep that going for the upcoming years."

For Reebok, Iowa offers marketing possibilities that other programs don't.

"In the state of Iowa, we feel Iowa is the only game in town," Reebok representative Mike Merkel said. "From a visibility standpoint, a fan base, the size of the stadium, they just have a tremendous following."

Playing in the Big Ten is one of the main factors that led to Reebok's interest in the Hawkeyes.

"The Big Ten has tremendous exposure. It's just a great conference with Michigan, Ohio State and Penn State and that just gives us more visibility around the country on national TV," Merkel said.

That exposure and following has directed Reebok to select Iowa as one of just nine programs in the country that it supplies all "soft goods" for, such as shoes, uniforms, practice gear, sideline apparel and gloves.

"They take care of us," freshman Ryan Loftin said. "They supply us with all kinds of equipment."

good year, so, hey, I'll take them."

The new look is something Reebok is using to sell not only to the Hawkeyes, but their fans as well.

"Iowa is one of the top 20 schools in the nation, as far as sales," Merkel said. "We work with retailers because the ultimate goal is to not only create an association and partnership with the university and Reebok, but as well to sell products to all of the Hawkeye fans."

Reebok has focused on the Big Ten as it's main target for sponsorship. Along with Iowa, Northwestern and Michigan State are sponsored by Reebok and Wisconsin will jump on board next year.

Currently, Wisconsin is wearing Reebok shoes, but not the game uniforms. That is the situation Iowa was in last season.

The Hawkeyes wore uniforms made by Apex during 1995. When Apex went out of business, Iowa was in need of a uniform manufacturer until Reebok filled that void.

"I think they're an improvement," Loftin said.

The toned-down look this season, compared to the flashy Apex uniforms, is one most of the players like.

"It's a good look. They're not too flashy, but they're not too dull," Sherman said. "I think we look good and we're having a

The success Reebok has had sponsoring college programs, it has started to sponsor some NFL teams including the 49ers, Lions, Giants and Panthers, which wear all Reebok gear. The Seahawks and Saints are currently wearing the Reebok sideline apparel only.

With all of the positives that come out of these contracts, many of the negatives go unheard.

The players aren't given a choice of what shoes they feel most comfortable in, or give them the best ankle support, or even the best look.

Whichever company is sponsoring their program is the logo they have to have on the shoes they wear.

According to Athletic Director Bob Bowsby, a deal with Nike was never on the table for the Iowa football program, despite the relationship the Iowa basketball program has with Nike.

MERTON HANKS

Former Hawk makes it to the 'Big Dance'

Andy Hamilton
THE DAILY IOWAN

When the words "success, flamboyance and former-Hawkeye" come in the same question, there can only be one answer — Merton Hanks.

Hanks is one of a handful of former-Iowa stars to win a Super Bowl ring and play in a Pro-Bowl, but no one else is known for celebrating on the field like the 49er all-pro safety.

"That's always been my style of play, to show my emotions and have fun," Hanks said. "That's the way I played at Iowa and it's just carried on into the pros. I think it's important that you enjoy what you do and it helps me play more efficiently."

And no other free safety in the NFL is as effective as the man some of his teammates call "Murky" because of his coverage.

"When you go into his area, it's murky back there, like swamp water, and it's dangerous," offensive lineman Steve Wallace once told Sports Illustrated.

While Hanks isn't afraid to say he is the best free safety in the NFL, he isn't the only one making such claim.

"There are good safeties, guys who are functional," former-NFL quarterback and ESPN football analyst Joe Theismann said during Sunday night's game at New Orleans. "This guy is just flat great. He has absolutely fantastic athletic ability."

Hanks has utilized his talents to the tune of being a six-time selection as NFC Defensive Player of the Week dating back to the 1993 season. Since then, he has intercepted 15 passes and helped lead the 49ers to the playoffs each year.

Hanks and winning seem to be synonymous, no matter where he plays. Some of that has to do with luck, but a lot of it has to do with his ability and the opportunity to play on some great teams.

"I've always been around great talent and am used to winning," Hanks said. "In fact, the kicker on my high school team (Baltimore's Matt Stover) also has a Super Bowl ring."

For Hanks, it may have been blind luck, having to wait until the fifth round of the 1991 NFL draft, but not for the San Francisco 49ers.

With the 123rd pick overall, the 49ers selected him, thanks in part to a pre-draft trade of picks with Green Bay.

Although Hanks always believed he would be as successful as he is today, he has been a surprise to others.

"I knew he was going to be good, but I never dreamed he'd be All-Pro, whatever he's been four or five times, and making all that money," Hanks' former coach at Iowa, Hayden Fry said.

Despite not being picked until the fifth round, Hanks had the confidence of a top selection and hasn't been one to shy away from showing his emotions.

me being knowledgeable about our scheme of defense, because the free safety makes the majority of defensive calls, I made the move and performed well."

When Hall finally got healthy, Hanks moved back to cornerback, but the signing of Sanders at the beginning of the 1994 forced the 49ers to shuffle their secondary. Hanks wound up moving back to free safety and Hall was benched. Since, Hanks has been the leader of the San Francisco secondary.

Despite his stardom, he hasn't turned his back on his alma mater.

"I definitely keep up on Iowa," Hanks said. "We STILL STRUTIN': ... and perfected it with the 49ers.

With the departure of Deion Sanders after the 1995 Super Bowl, Hanks has taken over as not only the leader of the San Francisco secondary, but unquestionably, the most flamboyant member.

"That's Merton," Fry said. "He does that goose step or whatever they call it, the duck walk. He's a fun guy. He's not trying to showboat."

Hanks didn't just step into the NFL and become a star instantly. It took a couple of years and a position change before making a trip to the Pro-Bowl.

Coming out of Iowa, where he started every game except one in his college career, he was a cornerback. That's where he played the first two and a half years with San Francisco until the need arose at the free safety position due to a series of injuries suffered by starter Dana Hall in 1993.

"At the time, there was a need due to injuries," Hanks said. "We were playing in Pittsburgh and have a strong following here on the staff with (former Iowa running backs coach) Carl Jackson and there's a lot of former Big Ten players and trainers here. We definitely keep our eye on them.

"The Iowa football staff and media relations keeps us aware of what's going on with Hayden Fry and Sedrick Shaw and Tim Dwight and how they're performing."

It is that loyalty to a winning program that brought Hanks to Iowa from Lake Highlands High School in Dallas.

"I had the opportunity to go just about anywhere I wanted," Hanks said. "I chose Iowa, not necessarily to become a professional athlete, but to get a degree and a quality education. The opportunity came forward, and six years later, here I am."

And it's that success that has been one of many highlights in Fry's coaching career.

"Merton is one of the greatest kids to come down the road," Fry said. "For him to play professional ball and be as tough as he is, that's one of my real joys in life, to watch Merton be so successful."

GAME NOTES

Iowa looks for another solid second half

This week's game between Iowa and Northwestern may be a tale of two halves. In fact, the first half may be little more than a formality.

Last week at Illinois, Iowa's Hayden Fry saved a number of things for the second half to keep the Illini honest. The Hawkeyes may use a similar approach this week against Northwestern.

The Wildcats are known for their quarter comebacks this season, while the Hawkeyes are known for shutting teams down in the fourth quarter.

"We're going to have to do a lot of things this week against Northwestern," Fry said. "They've got a leading passer (Steve Schnur), a leading rusher (Darnell Autry). They've got the leading receiver (D'Wayne Bates). We've got an incredible number of really big-time stats."

Last week, Fry went mostly for his bread and butter, tailback Sedrick Shaw, in the first half to get opening things up after the game.

"We had a few wrinkles for the second half to do a few things in the ball game because they do a great job at halftime.

"The year before they did that to us, so we gave them back some of their medicine. We did a few things offensively different the second half than we did the first half, anticipating them to adjust. And it worked."

November Hawks

Fry hopes his team's recent success in the month of November carries over to this year.

"We've done pretty well in November through the years," Fry said.

Iowa is 14-3 in the month of November over the last six seasons.

Knight Impresses

According to Fry, Hawkeye cornerback Tom Knight is one of the premiere cover-men in the nation this season.

Knight, who missed parts of the 1994 and 1995 seasons with injuries, is the Hawkeye career leader with 234 interception return yards.

"Tom Knight has got to be one of the top defensive cornerbacks in the nation," Fry said. "That's verified each week when the pro scouts come through. They think he and Shawn Springs of Ohio State are the two best defensive corners in the country."

JULIE BILL/THE DAILY IOWAN

HARD-NOSED FOOTBALL: Iowa sophomore fullback Mike Burger rushes the ball against Ohio State two weeks ago in Iowa City. Burger has carried the ball 41 times for 190 yards this season and has started all eight games for the Hawkeyes.

GAME NOTES

Iowa looks for another solid second half

This week's game between Iowa and Northwestern may be a tale of two halves. In fact, the first half may be little more than a formality.

Last week at Illinois, Iowa coach Hayden Fry saved a number of things for the second half to keep the Illini honest. The Hawkeyes may use a similar approach this week against Northwestern.

The Wildcats are known for fourth quarter comebacks this season, while the Hawkeyes are known for shutting teams down in the fourth quarter.

"We're going to have to do a lot of things this week against Northwestern," Fry said. "They've got the leading passer (Steve Schnur), the leading rusher (Darnell Autry). They've got the leading pass receiver (D'Wayne Bates). They've got an incredible number of really big-time stats."

Last week, Fry went mostly with his bread and butter, tailback Sedrick Shaw, in the first half before opening things up after halftime.

"We had a few wrinkles for (Illinois)," Fry said. "I waited until the second half to do a few things in the ball game because they do such a great job at halftime."

"The year before they did that to us, so we gave them back some of their medicine. We did a few things offensively different the second half than we did the first half, anticipating them to adjust. And it worked."

November Hawks

Fry hopes his team's recent success in the month of November carries over to this year.

"We've done pretty well in November through the years," Fry said.

Iowa is 14-3 in the month of November over the last six seasons.

Knight Impresses

According to Fry, Hawkeye cornerback Tom Knight is one of the premiere cover-men in the nation this season.

Knight, who missed parts of the 1994 and 1995 seasons with injuries, is the Hawkeye career leader with 234 interception return yards.

"Tom Knight has got to be one of the top defensive cornerbacks in the nation," Fry said. "That's verified each week when the pro scouts come through. They think he and Shawn Springs of Ohio State are the two best defensive corners in the country."

NORTHWESTERN PREVIEW

'Cats want to get back on track

Northwestern comes to Iowa City after first Big Ten loss in two seasons

Chuck Blount
THE DAILY IOWAN

For the first time in 13 Big Ten conference games, the No. 18 Northwestern Wildcats will enter Saturday's contest with Iowa on the heels of a loss.

Dodging several bullets in recent games (four straight come-from-behind wins), the road came to an end for the 'Cats last week at Penn State. Marred by numerous early mistakes and five turnovers, the Nittany Lions capitalized on every opportunity to dispose of Northwestern, 34-9.

"Being down by so much so early, we had to throw the ball 50 times to try to catch up and we can't do that and expect to be successful," Northwestern coach Gary Barnett said. "We're not a WAC team. Without the running game we couldn't do much."

It was an uncharacteristic game for Northwestern (7-2 overall, 5-1 in the Big Ten). With only nine points scored, it was the lowest point output by the team since a 1994 contest with Illinois.

According to Iowa coach Hayden Fry, a loss to Penn State in Happy Valley isn't something to hang your head upon and it doesn't make them any lesser of an opponent.

"You can just ask (Penn State) Coach (Joe) Paterno how hard it is to win up there," Fry said. "Everybody knows you just don't win many games up there, I don't care who you are. We played our hearts out for our one-point win. Northwestern losing up there doesn't mean anything."

Offensively, Northwestern is stacked at the skill positions. Quarterback Steve Schnur leads the Big Ten in yards (2036), completions (170), touchdowns (13) and total offense (237.78 ypg).

"Steve Schnur has had a much better command of the offense this season," Barnett said. "We felt that at the beginning of the season, that our receivers needed time to develop and with Steve's skills that happened quicker than we thought."

At running back, Darnell Autry is tops in the league with 1034 yards. Autry, who scampered for 1785 yards and 17 touchdowns last season, is considered by many to be a strong Heisman Trophy candidate. In conference action, Autry's top game was a 185 yard output against Minnesota.

"Autry, to me, at this point is the best running back we have seen on film," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "We have seen some good ones, but on film, this kid is the best. He deserves to be the leading rusher in the Big Ten. He has earned it."

Offensive tackle Brian Kardos, 6-5, 298 pounds, anchors the Wildcat line. Kardos, a second-team all-conference performer is considered the driving force behind the success of the running game.

Wide receiver D'Wayne Bates, a semi-finalist for the Biletnikoff Award, has more catches (55), yards (974) and touchdowns (10) than any other receiver in the conference.

"I can't remember in recent year's a team has the leading passer, rusher and receiver in the league," Fry said. "They have got an incredible number of big-time stats. They really have some outstanding players."

Returning All-American Pat Fitzgerald leads a talented Northwestern defense. Ranked fourth in Big Ten in total defense, the 'Cats run a multiple 4-3 with Fitzgerald wedged in at middle linebacker.

The Wildcats know that they will have to be at their best to contain the Iowa offense.

"There is no question that they can do it all on offense," Fitzgerald said. "With the running-back situation, Sedrick and Tavian are outstanding backs. Tim Dwight is a great player and Ross Verba is solid and tough."

Another large element that Barnett sees as a possible roadblock is the reception his team will receive at Kinnick Stadium.

"(After playing at Penn State) we find ourselves going on a similar road trip to what I expect to be a hostile crowd environment. Iowa is known for having a large crowd with every home game and they don't like to make it easy on the visiting team," Barnett said.

Hawks and Wildcats dispel rivalry talk

Wayne Drehs
THE DAILY IOWAN

Last year in early-November, the Northwestern Wildcats made it very clear they didn't care for the Iowa Hawkeyes and head coach Hayden Fry. This year, however, neither team will mouth a negative word regarding Saturday's game.

"I think what was said last year was taken out of context," Northwestern all-American linebacker Pat Fitzgerald said. "I have the utmost respect for Iowa and I was disappointed with what was said between the teams."

"I think that some people put their foot in their mouths and now regret what they said at the time."

Fitzgerald is referring to Northwestern center Rob Johnson's comment about Iowa's domination of the Wildcats prior to last season's 31-20 Wildcat win. Johnson's statement was what keyed the hostility between the two rivals.

"They flat out embarrassed us," Johnson said in the November 6, 1995, Chicago Tribune. "We were embarrassed, whether intentionally or unintentionally, by Hayden Fry. I don't want to just beat that team, I want to hurt Iowa."

Fry didn't take too kindly to Johnson's comments and responded at his weekly press conference the following day with some heated words of his own.

"When you read the papers, it sounds like a real grudge game against us," Fry said. "Whatever is in their craw is in their craw, and so be it. After 21 straight, they still have to show me they can whip us."

One year later, Fry would rather not see the newspaper clippings from last year's verbal war.

"I think it would be real nice paper to use to start your fires with in the winter," Fry said. "Or if you are fortunate enough to have a two-holer or maybe even a one-holer."

The departure of Johnson to graduation, and the changing of the two teams has dimmed the rivalry in both Wildcat coach Gary Barnett's and Fitzgerald's eyes.

"These are two completely different teams and last year does not carry over," Barnett said. "Johnson knew he shouldn't have said that and I reprimanded him for it. Hopefully, that is all behind us with these two different teams."

When asked at his Tuesday press conference if any bad blood still remains between the two teams, Fry answered with an emphatic, "No."

Iowa quarterback Matt Sherman, on the other hand, admits there is still some tension between the Wildcats and Hawkeyes.

"There may be some bad blood there," Sherman said. "But I think you get that with almost any team you play in the Big Ten. Things happen through the years. The bad blood won't effect the outcome, though."

Since the initial comments were exchanged, Barnett released his book, "High Hopes: Taking the Purple to Pasadena" this summer, accusing Fry of ridiculing his team following their 49-13 loss in Iowa City in 1994.

Following the game, when the two coaches met at midfield, Fry said to Barnett, "I hope we didn't hurt any of your boys to bad."

Fry said to the media that he sincerely meant what he said, and wasn't trying to ridicule Barnett or his team.

"I made my statement, he made his statement, and the only difference is that he is selling a lot more books than me and I haven't written one," Fry said.

Following Fry's apology, Barnett understood Fry's intentions when making the comments.

"I think my first year here I took the comment as condescending, but I now know that Fry doesn't mean it that way now," Barnett said.

One factor that has always fueled the friction between these two teams is recruiting. The high academic standards that both schools holds for their athletes often causes Northwestern and Iowa to meet on the doorsteps of prospective recruits.

"We've always run into Northwestern," Fry said. "They've always tried to recruit Iowa, and of course they recruit extremely hard in Illinois."

"We probably run into them more than some of the teams in the Big Ten because they have similar academic standards for getting into school as we do at Iowa. We go head to head with them on some of the athletes who are better academic students."

Prior to the Barnett era, the Wildcats lost one recruit to the Hawkeyes that turned out to be instrumental in bringing the Iowa football program national respect, Chuck Long.

"Northwestern had just named Dennis Green the head coach and I thought that he would start to turn that program around in Evanston," Long said. "But I had a feeling that things were going to be changing faster in Iowa City."

Long was part of that change, and he ended up finishing second in the Heisman trophy balloting his senior year behind Bo Jackson. He also led Iowa to five bowl games, including two Rose Bowls, while the Wildcats continued to struggle.

Iowa sophomore tackle Matt Reischl is a player both schools have fought over in recent years. The losing history of Northwestern, however, wasn't a factor that weighed into Reischl's decision between the two schools.

"It's not like I blew them off and said, 'they're never going to turn it around,' because I knew their coaching staff and I figured they were going to get things turned around," Reischl said. "I felt they were on the way up."

Despite the realization that the Wildcats were going to turn their program around, the Greendale, Wis., native didn't think it would happen so fast and to such a great extent.

"I wasn't prepared for them to explode like they did last year," Reischl said. "I wasn't prepared for them to beat us, but they are a great program with great players and great coaches, so they are going to go places."

Last season, the Wildcats finished 10-1, not only earning a trip to Pasadena, but reaching their first bowl game in 47 years. Part of the credit for the Northwestern turn around falls upon Iowa and Fry.

"Watching Northwestern turn things around is like looking in a mirror at what we did back in the days when Coach Fry turned Iowa around," Long said. "The first bowl that both programs jumped to was the Rose Bowl. From nothing to the Rose Bowl."

Those similarities are no accident. Barnett followed Iowa's blueprints after watching Fry turn things around so quickly.

"What he did was truly incredible," Barnett said. "He went from rags to riches the right way, truly first class."

The importance of a cohesive coaching staff and solid recruiting were two ideas Barnett took from the Iowa program. He learned of the Hawkeyes' success in these two areas by recruiting against Iowa when he was an assistant with the Buffaloes.

"What makes the difference is continuity and recruiting," Barnett said. "I remember a four-to-five year span at Iowa when they didn't lose a coach. And I used to hate recruiting against Iowa."

PREGAME'S PICK

Hawkeye defense too much for Wildcats

Iowa 27, Northwestern 17

This weekend, the immovable object meets the unstoppable force, sort of.

When the Iowa Hawkeyes meet the Northwestern Wildcats on Saturday, all eyes will be on big-play makers like Darnell Autry, Sedrick Shaw, D'Wayne Bates and Tim Dwight. But the odds are, this game will come down to whether or not Iowa's great second half defense can stop Northwestern's miracle second half offense.

Iowa's defense has made a name for itself by holding teams to an average of just over one point in the fourth quarter this season. Northwestern, which has made a habit of pulling games off in the fourth quarter this and last season, has scored 61 fourth quarter points on the year.

The winner of this game could be who gives in during the final quarter.

Expect Northwestern to respond well after a drubbing at the hands of Penn State last week. This is a team that lost to Miami of Ohio last year and then went on to the Rose Bowl. The Wildcats don't dwell on losses.

Look for Iowa's defense to be challenged all game against the Wildcats. Steve Schnur and D'Wayne Bates may be the best quarterback-receiver combination Iowa has faced all season.

Schnur and the Wildcats rank tops in the Big Ten in passing with an average of 238 yards per contest and Schnur leads the league in total offense. Iowa ranks second in the league in pass efficiency defense.

Bates far and away leads the league with 108 receiving yards per game and 6.1 catches per game. Bates averages 23 more yards per game than any other receiver in the league.

But an even bigger battle may be between the two teams top running backs — Shaw and Autry.

Shaw was regarded by many as the best running back in the league coming into the season, but injuries have limited him to only 659 yards through eight games.

With Shaw suffering, Autry has prospered, taking over the Big Ten lead in rushing. The junior has run for 1034 yards this season, averaging 5.1 yards every time he takes a handoff.

An impressive game by Shaw head-to-head against Autry this week may be exactly what he needs to boost his draft-day status.

Added incentive for Shaw may be that Northwestern rained on his parade last year. Shaw became the all-time leading rusher in Iowa history with a 135-yard performance against the Wildcats, but Northwestern won the game.

Once again, Tim Dwight will be a big factor for the Hawkeyes. Dwight has come up huge in the biggest games for Iowa this season, returning a punt for a touchdown against Penn State and Ohio State.

And this game is more important than both of those games because of when it comes and what is riding on it. The winner puts itself in position to go to the Citrus Bowl and the loser could find itself dropping all the way to the Sun Bowl.

Both teams still have great opportunities to end this season as top-ten teams in the nation, but a loss here puts the dampers on this goal.

While both of these teams are downplaying the rivalry aspect of this game, beating Northwestern is very important for this Iowa team.

After all, a majority of these players were on the Iowa team last year that lost to Northwestern for the first time in 21 years. There is a sense of embarrassment in that fact.

If Iowa doesn't want revenge, then there is something wrong with them.

Don't expect Iowa to be able to have its way with Northwestern. The Wildcats are a very talented team and will be able to make this the most exciting game Iowa has played in all year.

But in the end, Iowa's defense will be far too much for Northwestern.

Iowa 27, Northwestern 17.

18 - PREVIEW - The Daily Iowan - Friday, November 8, 1996

THIS WEEK IN THE BIG TEN

The race is on for second place in the Big Ten

It's the second week of November and the race for first place is over. With Ohio State in the driver seat for the Big Ten title, the scramble for holiday accommodations is on.

The Northwestern Wildcats will leave Iowa City with their tails between their legs and Michigan still has to play the Buckeyes. This leaves Iowa with the best chance of being second best if everything goes according to plan.

Indiana at Michigan St.

The Hoosiers may be having a tough year, but Bill Mallory didn't deserve to be fired just because injuries have riddled his team for the last few seasons. I'm not the Indiana athletic director, but I wish I was.

The Hoosiers will have to get off to a fast start in order to have a chance in this game. Indiana has outscored its opponents 55-24 in the first period. In four of five Big Ten games, Indiana was leading at the break.

Michigan State will have to recover after being waxed by intrastate rival Michigan last week. Derrick Mason has had four straight games of 100-plus receiving yards. Sedrick Irvin has seen the end zone more than the inside of a classroom. The freshman tailback has hit pay-dirt 14 times this season.

Mallory's boys will play hard, but ....
Michigan State, 28-17.

Minnesota at Wisconsin

This game has a guy named Wacker and a axe trophy involved. Coincidence? Who cares, it will be the Golden Gophers who will feel chopped up after facing a team that rushes for 206 yards per game.

Minnesota is dead last in the conference against the run. Wisconsin's Ron Dayne will feel like he's running through a daisy meadow. Field of flowers, Minnesota's D, field of ... hmmm ... tough call.

Wisconsin quarterback Mike Samuel isn't too shabby either. Samuel, just a sophomore, has thrown for 1326 yards and completed 55.94 percent of his passes. Guess where the Golden Gopher defense ranks against the pass?

Chris James

The one bright spot for the team from the state with 10,000 lakes is freshman running back Thomas Hamner. Hamner has rushed for 710 yards and averages 4.6 yards per carry.

This is the last home game for Wisconsin seniors. Ouch Minnesota. Well, look at it this way Golden Gopher fans, at least Voshon Lenard had a good game for the Heat.

Wisconsin, 24-7.

Ohio State at Illinois

The much coveted Illibuck trophy is up for grabs in this game. Sounds like something that should be stuffed and mounted, just like what's going to happen to the Illini in this game.

These two teams meet for the 83rd consecutive time on Saturday. Illinois will feel like that is just about long enough after facing the best offense and defense in the conference.

The Buckeyes give up a total of 250 yards per game while rolling up 470. Illinois just rolls up, although Illinois is second in the Big Ten in kickoff returns, averaging 23.5 yards per return. That might be close enough to try an 86 yard field goal.

Ohio State defensive end Mike Vrabel broke the Buckeye school record for tackles for losses last week. Vrabel has 58 for his career.

Receiver Jason Dulick might be the Illini's only shot. Dulick is second on the career receiving list with 161 catches, 1,901 yards and 15 touchdowns.

Illinois cannot fumble, throw an interception, give up a big play, breathe or look at the Buckeyes wrong if they want a shot at losing by less than 30.

Ohio State, 45-10.

Michigan at Purdue

This is the most interesting game of the week. The last time these two teams met, Tim Biakabutuka hit a three run homer to lead Michigan to a 5-0 win in Ann Arbor. Well, this year the Wolverines don't have their clean up hitter and I smell an upset.

Purdue played hard in its loss to Wisconsin last week while Michigan had a big win over Michigan State. Purdue will have emotion on its side with the resignation of head coach Jim Colletto earlier this week.

The Boilermakers will have to improve their run defense, which gives up 180.3 yards per game. Purdue doesn't hurt themselves, only fumbling four times so far, tied with Wisconsin for the best in the conference.

Michigan sophomore Charles Woodson, the "two-way" threat, could be the x-factor in this game. Woodson caught his first career TD pass against Michigan State and is also glue on wide receivers in the defensive backfield.

Michigan is the best in the Big Ten at shutting down opposing running backs. The Wolverines only surrender 97.3 yards on the ground. This is going out on a limb, but ...

Purdue, 16-14.
