California's elimination of affirmative action causes stir

Brookings Brown

California voters thrust the Golden State into the nation's forefront in the battle for affirmative action and for medical marijuana. In the Nov. 5, 1996, election, Proposition 209, the California-affirmative-action initiative, was designed to prohibit race and gender-based preferences in public employment, university admission and contracting. The measure was strongly supported by the business community, Republican Party and ideological conservatives.

"It's not going to end racism, it's not going to end social problems and it's not going to prevent us from achieving equality," Brooks Brown, a senior administrative assistant in the president's office, said. "More than a sign that affirmative action has, it's a sign that affirmative action has worked." Brown said the proposition's defeat was a "moral victory" and cited 200 Golding poll showing support of affirmative action programs across the country. He said the proposition's attempt to use it as a positive approach to fix a complex problem was reative and arbitrary in the political process.

"Most obviously, federal law prohibiting the use of sex or race in the hire, promotion, or administration of an enterprise prohibited by the initiative, creating a direct conflict between state and federal law," he said. "Federal law will also permit and provide for special concessions which would prevent state law."

Mike Mask said the state's ultimate position will suffer from the initiative's passage.

"California has made a big mistake that will have a profound effect on the employment and employment and education initiatives," he said.

Thousands of onions fans will gather in Iowa City Saturday to watch the Hawkeyes try to take the Big Ten championship and earn a bid to the Citrus Bowl.

Correctly setting with one hand in Big Ten play, the Hawkeyes can ensure that one bowl destiny is winning the rest of their games to get a spot in the Orange Bowl.

"The entire team is excited about the game and the atmosphere that potential bowl-game implications."

They're better than they have been in years.

"We're doing this for about eight years now; against Northwestern are pretty good."

"To achieve equality, people find other ways of coping with staff switches.

"A lot of people have described it as an encyclopedia of a single film," Rabinovitz said.

"This is the opening violence that will affect Zaire," said. "We did in the 1960s after the former Belgian Congo gained independence. Three resident, with 300 ethnic groups and a variety of other nations, its collapse could permit control of central African Rhodesia."

"We have been through the rumor mill and the news leaks," said. "More than a sign that affirmative action has, it's a sign that affirmative action has worked." Brown said the proposition's defeat was a "moral victory" and cited 200 Golding poll showing support of affirmative action programs across the country. Holistic health care heals naturally

After working in a hospital for more than 15 years, Terri Schaeffer sought a different approach to holistic health care. Schaeffer opened a private practice as a holistic practitioner in 1993, specializing in holistic health care that does not use drugs or surgery.

"Holistic health care is an approach to healing by treating the cause, not just the symptom. It encompasses the caring for and the treatment of the whole person," Schaeffer said. She is a certified Alexander Technique practitioner, and her practice centers on traditional medical nutrition and yoga.

"Holistic health care is the notion of healing vs. medicine and holistic health is healed until treatment is stopped for the cause," she said. "This shows our employees that we are taking a proactive approach in dealing with this problem.

The two main causes of carpal tunnel syndrome are the repetition of the work and sitting in one position for a long time. Sometimes I can't even touch my own teeth." said Schaeffer, a registered nurse.

"You have become more aware of what causes you pain," she said. "It becomes part of your life." Sometimes I can't even touch my own teeth."

Terri Schaeffer, a registered nurse, said holistic health care is an approach to healing by treating the cause, not just the symptom. It encompasses the caring for and the treatment of the whole person. Schaeffer's certification process includes working in a hospital for more than 15 years, and she has also taken additional training in various modalities to become certified in holistic health care.

Rigging ignores value of entertainment

To the Editor: Could you be the only one who values your time in entertainment? Last year, although you said you would not be attending the Wood's annual 109th Hawkeye Homecoming, thousands of students and fans did so. It was an additional $3,000,000 in revenue to the University of Iowa. Now, although you said you would not be attending this year's Homecoming, thousands of students and fans will, I'm sure, again make your presence known. As a student who has been involved in Homecoming committees in the past, I know how valuable entertainment is. It is an opportunity for students and fans to come together and share their love for the University of Iowa. It is a chance for students to become more involved in the university community and for fans to show their support for the Hawkeye football team. It is a time for the University of Iowa to come together and celebrate our love for our beloved university. I urge you to attend this year's Homecoming and show your support for the University of Iowa.

Responsibility lies with the rapist

To the Editor: I was writing in response to the article featured on page 21 titled "Women, Protect your city and your campus!". The article focuses on the importance of women taking responsibility for their own safety. However, while the article discusses the need for women to be more aware of potential dangers and to take steps to protect themselves, it fails to address the role that men play in creating a safe environment for women. The article emphasizes the need for women to be proactive in their own safety, but it does not acknowledge the contribution that men can make in creating a safer campus.

Kudos to Dreh's for sticking up for Hawks

To the Editor: I was happy to read your article about Dreh's post about the recent Hawkeye football game. It was a refreshing change to see a person taking a stand and speaking out against the behavior of some fans. I applaud Dreh's for their courage and for standing up for what they believe in. I hope that other businesses will follow their lead and take a stand against poor behavior.

Pope reviews theory of evolution

The Daily Iowan
Five years ago, the pope apologized for Galileo's persecution.
On Oct. 6, Pope Benedict XVI said humans may not have been an immediate creation of God.
As a geologist and a retired priest at the Pennsylvania State University Student Center, Dr. Robert Brownfield said, "It is not, but it is not new, that the Catholic church accepts evolution, not as a fact, but as a theory that is supported by research in a variety of scientific fields.
"This theory of evolution doesn't conflict with religious belief, like many other great creations, but does give Catholics the freedom to be in touch with current Catholic thought.

HAMPTON, Va. — In a court-martial in Hampton, a captain and two drill sergeants were charged Thursday with raping or sexually harassing female recruits, and being interviewed by the Army on allegations of misbehavior toward women.

The alleged incidents took place at the Ordnance Center and Fort Monroe, and were reported as part of a nationwide sexual harassment problem.

"It's an unfortunate situation," said Capt. Michael O'Connell, A female drill instructor, who was interviewed about the sexual harassment.

"But we need to make sure that this happens to the military and the Army," O'Connell said, "so this doesn't happen to the military and the Army."

Northwestern aims to bounce back

Wyatt Drexler

Northwestern coach Gary Brown said at the beginning of this season that he wanted to do after losing Northwestern to California, 41-34, last year's Rose Bowl. But after Penn State snapped the Wildcats' 13-game conference winning streak last weekend, it was time to adjust his game plan.

Northwestern will look to get back on the winning ways at No. 23 Northwestern at 1 p.m. Sunday.

"We can't worry about Iowa," Brown said, "but all the challenges they present us. We can't look past the next opponent. We have to get this win this week, and that's the priority."

The Wildcats haven't won in Kinnick since 1979, but Brown believes this year's team is different.

"We have more depth, more speed, more quickness," Brown said. "Our team is more athletic this year, and we have more weapons on offense."
The New York Islanders haven't won when Iowa reached the Rose Bowl. It's true. This year, the Big Ten conference could capture any game. This was the year to witness the Islanders in person or program that month into the sport of American eccentrics, but we've been for a long time — in the Big Ten top. Jordan reaffirmed his greatness with five points against Heat

Associated Press

Miami Heat guard Michael Jordan scored 20 points and added 14 rebounds Wednesday night, but not enough to avoid a three-game losing streak. The Heat lost 113-108 to the Los Angeles Lakers. Jordan has played in 13 of 14 games this season. His return to the NBA has helped the Heat get off to a fast start. The Heat are 30-7 and have lost only once. Jordan's presence has breathed new life into the franchise. The Heat are 13-3 since Jordan's return. The Heat are 13-3 since Jordan's return.

ATLANTA - The star power of Tony Stewart, the late-season surge of Jarrett Johnson and the contrasting strengths of Jack Roval and Bertil Johnson are all factors in the biggest test of Miami Dolphins backup quarterback Jake Delhomme's career.

The Dolphins face the Indianapolis Colts on Sunday night in a game that could have a major impact on the NFL playoff picture.

Delhomme, who replaced Chad Pennington in the first quarter of the season, has already started five games this season and has passed for 1,262 yards and seven touchdowns in those contests.

He is currently in his third year in the NFL after being drafted by the Jacksonville Jaguars in the third round of the 2010 draft.

The Dolphins (5-0) are coming off a 24-17 win over the New England Patriots (5-0) on Sunday in Foxborough, Mass.

Johnson, who has been a starter for the last six seasons, has passed for 2,486 yards and 19 touchdowns this season.

Roval, who has been a backup for most of his career, has passed for 1,143 yards and five touchdowns.

Both players have played well this season, but Delhomme has been the more consistent of the two.

He has completed 63 percent of his passes for 1,262 yards and seven touchdowns this season, compared to Johnson's 60 percent completion rate for 2,486 yards and 19 touchdowns.

In terms of rushing yards, Delhomme has rushed for 164 yards and one touchdown, while Johnson has rushed for 189 yards and six touchdowns.

Delhomme's strong performance in the Dolphins' recent victory over the Patriots has earned him praise from teammates and analysts alike.

"He's been our best quarterback this year," Dolphins coach Joe Philbin said after the game. "He's been making great decisions and getting the ball to our playmakers."

The Daily Iowa City and Chicago will come together for more than just a good time for the Freddy Jones Band, five-man Americana-based jug band, at The Union Bar tonight.

"Being the Northwestern Iowa (football) weekend, and with it being such a big game, I thought it would be a great idea to get a good band in area and not to go to a bar or a sporting event," said B.S. '88, A.M. '90, M.S. '91, Ed.D. '98, dean of students.

"The last two times they played here they played great and we all had a good time. They were excellent in work ethic and a perfect place to play. The turnout has been excellent," US Representative Greg Ganske, R-Iowa, who will open the band for the first time tonight, said the group is in better shape than in the past.

"I'm excited that a good band like The Freddy Jones Band, a five-man band, will come to life tonight at The Union Bar tonight at 8," said the community theater leader.

A 14th-century fairy tale that provided the basis for the story of Cinderella will come to life as a unique puppet show in German at the University of Iowa tonight.

The show is performed by the University of Iowa Puppet Company, based in the Department of Germanic Languages and Literatures.

The performance, which marks the first time that the group has performed in Iowa City, is called "Glass Slipper," and it is sponsored by the Iowa Women's Foundation and the Office of Student Life.

The show is performed by two puppeteers, who will manipulate 30 puppets on stage, each with its own personality.

"Each puppet is moved by marionette," said Wolfgang Bemstengel, a member of the group.

"The performances are unique in that they involve the audience," he said.

In an interview with the Daily, Bemstengel said the show is a powerful way to express ideas and emotions.

"It is a very important show, and it is a very powerful show," he said.

Shaw runs through Iowa record books

Chris Snider
THE DAILY IOWAN

I n 1992, a highly talented, yet highly outspoken tailback from Austin, Texas, picked up his talent for the game of football and came to the University of Iowa.

Four years later, a lot has changed for Sedrick Shaw. The senior tailback has rushed his way into the Iowa record books as the most prolific runner in inner city lifestyle to happen. He's been fortunate enough up to this point to avoid them.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry, who said Shaw is one of the best running backs he has had in 45 years of career. It's been different for him that happens in a contact sport," Fry said.
"It's been difficult for him to handle because he's never been injured before. He loves playing football and he hates missing it.

But the injuries appear to be in the past.
After not playing at all three weeks ago, Shaw played last week's game without his thumb in a cast and with out his ribs wrapped.

With 341 yards in his next three games, Shaw would become only the eighth player in Big Ten history to rush for over 1,000 yards in three seasons. But Shaw has kept his goals simple.

"Just to finish the season healthy," he said. "That's it.

Most players in his situation would be looking at a possible career in the NFL and concentrating on what they need to do to reach that level. Not Shaw.

"I'm not looking that forward down the road," he said.
"I'm looking at Northwestern.
Everything is going down the road." He

Shaw may refuse to look down the road, but his teammates
don't.

Shaw's teammate and friend Damien Robinson, who is looking forward to a pro career of his own, is confident Shaw will make it to the NFL.

"I know Sed can make it," Robinson said. "He's a great player.
How many backs can do the things Sed can do? He contributes every week." As far as impressing pro scouts, Shaw has done well not to dwell on his misfortune this season.

"It's possible that I may have a chance to play in the NFL. If so, you're still playing football,
which is a team sport. However they depend on you is however they judge you. I can't concern myself with that."

football.

He also happens to be pretty good at it. What Shaw won't tell you is that he is the all-time leading rusher in Iowa history with 3,699 yards. He has more rushing attempts (749) than any Hawkeye and more rushing touchdowns (27). Last season he set single season records in all three categories.

This year, Shaw has run for 659 yards in seven games. His numbers are down from last year, but only because he has been hampered by a number of injuries all season long.

"I don't really complain about it," Shaw said of his injuries, which have ranged from bruised ribs to a sprained ankle to a broken thumb. "It's just one of those things that happens. You play a team sport, it's bound to happen. I've been fortunate enough
up to this point to avoid them.

You can't judge people,
but Sedrick's friends,

Sack master

Jared DeVries has become a master at terrorizing opposing quarterbacks.

Tony Wirt
THE DAILY IOWAN

For Iowa defensive tackle Jared DeVries, there was never much doubt as to where he wanted to play college football. Despite being recruited by several schools—including Wisconsin, Nebraska, and Northern Iowa—the only official campus visit he took while in high school was to the University of Iowa.

"I always wanted to be a Hawkeye. I grew up in Iowa," DeVries said. "When I took my visit here, all the players were really friendly to me. I like the family atmosphere here."

While he knew exactly where he wanted to go, what position he would play when he arrived in Iowa City was still up for debate. During his prep career at Aplington-Parkersburg High School, DeVries started at nose guard, playing some defensive tackle as a freshman. During his junior year, he became a full-time fullback and defensive end.

And no colleges that were in contact with DeVries ever mentioned playing positions other than defensive end.

"When we recruit anyone, we give them their choice when they first come in," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "He may have thought that he wanted to be a running back or a linebacker or defensive end or something of that nature, but he kept growing and eating, and growing and eating. It didn't take much talk to get him to play defense."

After arriving on campus, DeVries elected to take a redshirt year to adjust to college life, both on and off the field.

HOT PURSUIT: Jared DeVries closes in on Ohio State quarterback Stanley Jackson.

"It's hard to come in as a true freshman, it's such a great leap. I learned the system my redshirt year. I got stronger and all that stuff that goes along with playing college football. I learned a lot of things when I came to Iowa that I wasn't exposed to in Aplington," DeVries said.

"He gives Hawkeye a glimpse of what was to come, recording three sacks and six tackles against in-state rival Northern Iowa. He never slowed down after that, ending his freshman season tied for third in the Big Ten with 12 sacks and sixth in tackles for loss with 19 for 104 yards.

DeVries put a big exclamation point on his freshman year in El Paso, Texas, by being voted Most Valuable Lineman in Iowa's 36-18 domination of Washington in the Sun Bowl.

DeVries likes to downplay his role in the Sun Bowl victory, saying that he only had one good quarter.

However, he sees the victory over the Pac-10 co-champions as giving the team motivation.

DeVries uses that game for motivation this year and tries to play every quarter the same way he played in the Sun Bowl.

"I just like to make the big play to get our defense fired up," DeVries said.

DeVries hasn't missed a beat this year, anchoring the defensive line and earning even more respect from his teammates and coaches by making big plays when they need to be made.

"Jared is a superior player and I think he's one of the guys that makes it easier for me in the backfield," Hawkeye free safety Damien Robinson said. "We compliment each other well. If we're back there covering, Jared is going to make the sack, and when he's putting pressure on the quarterback, we're going to get there to make plays and make hits. Without Jared, it'd be very tough for us."

"Jared's got that extra heartbeat. He loves challenges," Coach Hayden Fry said. "He loves someone telling him that he can't do something. He wants to prove you wrong. That's just his makeup."

Both DeVries and his coaches see his main asset as his speed. Although gaining a lot of weight since high school, he has not lost any of the speed that made him a great running back.

Although only in his sophomore season, many people, including Coach Hayden Fry, are expecting Jared to continue his career after college.

When asked if he thinks DeVries will be playing on Sundays, Coach Hayden Fry responded, "Definitely Big Time. He'll not only play, but he'll make a name for himself."

"Everybody's dream is to play in the NFL," DeVries said. "If I'm fortunate enough and good enough to get that opportunity, I'll more than welcome that chance."

Hawkeyes get a new look for 1996

NEW STYLE: Iowa wide receiver Richard Carter shows off Iowa's new uniforms earlier this season. The new uniforms were designed by Reebok.

Andy Hamilton
THE DAILY IOWAN

The Iowa football program has always been one to follow the attitude of: If it works for someone else, let's try it. When the nation's top teams were switching from size to speed, the Hawkeyes changed their recruiting emphasis to get faster players.

Last year, just about every other big-time program was getting hooked up exclusively with one company for all of its equipment needs (excluding pads and helmets).

The Hawkeyes were quick to follow suit, signing a deal with Reebok prior to the start of this season.

"We have outstanding shoes and our other gear is good. We haven't had any problems," quarterback Matt Sherman said. "I think we're very lucky to have a good sponsor like Reebok that came in and said, 'Hey, we want to supply some stuff for you.' We've been very fortunate, so hopefully we can keep that going for the upcoming years."

For Reebok, Iowa offers marketing possibilities that other programs don't. "In the state of Iowa, we feel Iowa is the only game in town," Reebok representative Mike Merkel said. "From a visibility standpoint, a fan base, the size of the stadium, they just have a tremendous following."

Playing in the Big Ten is one of the main factors that led to Reebok's interest in the Hawkeyes. "The Big Ten has tremendous exposure. It's just a great conference with Michigan, Ohio State and Penn State and that just gives us more visibility around the country on national TV," Merkel said.

That exposure and following has directed Reebok to select Iowa as one of just nine programs in the country that it supplies all "soft goods" for, such as shoes, uniforms, practice gear, sideline apparel and gloves. "They take care of us," freshman Ryan Loftin said. "They supply us with all kinds of equipment."

Reebok has focused on the Big Ten as it's main target for sponsorship. Along with Iowa, Northwestern and Michigan State are sponsored by Reebok and Wisconsin will jump on board next year.

Currently, Wisconsin is wearing Reebok shoes, but not the game uniforms. That is the situation Iowa was in last season. The Hawkeyes wore uniforms made by Apex during 1995. When Apex went out of business, Iowa was in need of a uniform manufacturer until Reebok filled that void.

"I think they're an improvement," Loftin said.

The toned-down look this season, compared to the flashy Apex uniforms, is one most of the players like. "It's a good look. They're not too flashy, but they're not too dull," Sherman said. "I think we look good and we're having a good year, so, hey, I'll take them."

The new look is something Reebok is using to sell not only to the Hawkeyes, but their fans as well.

"Iowa is one of the top 20 schools in the nation, as far as sales," Merkel said. "We work with retailers because the ultimate goal is to not only create an association and partnership with the university and Reebok, but as well to sell products to all of the Hawkeye fans."

The success Reebok has had sponsoring college programs, it has started to sponsor some NFL teams including the 49ers, Lions, Giants and Panthers, which wear all Reebok gear. The Seahawks and Saints are currently wearing the Reebok sideline apparel only.

With all of the positives that come out of these contracts, many of the negatives go unheard. The players aren't given a choice of what shoes they feel most comfortable in, or give them the best ankle support, or even the best look.

Whichever company is sponsoring their program is the logo they have to have on the shoes they wear.

According to Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby, a deal with Nike was never on the table for the Iowa football program, despite the relationship the Iowa basketball program has with Nike.
"I was introduced to Macs® in high school. Since then I've preferred Macintosh® over other computers."

THE DAILY IOWAN

When the words "success, flamboyance and former-Hawkeye" come in the same question, there can only be one answer — Merton Hanks.

Hanks is one of a handful of former-Iowa stars to win a Super Bowl ring and play in a Pro Bowl, but no one else is known for celebrating on the field like the 49er all-pro safety.

"That's always been my style of play, to show my emotions and have fun," Hanks said. "That's the way I played at Iowa and it's just carried on into the pros. I think it's important that you enjoy what you do and it helps me play more efficiently."

And no other free safety in the NFL is as effective as the man some of his teammates call "Murky" because of his coverage.

"When you go into his area, it's murky back there, like swamp water, and it's dangerous," offensive lineman Steve Wallace once told Sports Illustrated.

While Hanks isn't afraid to say he is the best free safety in the NFL, he isn't the only one making such claim.

"There are good safeties, guys who are functional," former-NFL quarterback and ESPN football analyst Joe Theismann said during Sunday night's game at New Orleans. "This guy is just flat great. He has absolutely fantastic athletic ability."

Hanks has utilized his talents to the tune of being a six-time selection as NFC Defensive Player of the Week dating back to the 1993 season. Since then, he has intercepted 15 passes and helped lead the 49ers to the playoffs each year.

Hanks and winning seem to be synonymous, no matter where he plays. Some of that has to do with luck, but a lot of it has to do with his ability and the opportunity to play on some great teams.

"I've been around great talent and am used to winning," Hanks said. "In fact, the kicker on my high school team (Baltimore's Matt Stover) also has a Super Bowl ring."

For Hanks, it may have been blind luck, having to wait until the fifth round of the 1991 NFL draft, but not for the San Francisco 49ers.

With the 123rd pick overall, the 49ers selected him, thanks in part to a pre-draft trade of picks with Green Bay.

Although Hanks always believed he would be as successful as he is today, he has been a surprise to others.

"I knew he was going to be good, but I never dreamed he'd be All-Pro, whatever he's been four or five times, and making all that money," Hanks' former coach at Iowa, Hayden Fry said.

Despite not being picked until the fifth round, Hanks had the confidence of a top selection and hasn't been one to shy away from showing his emotions.

"When Hall finally got healthy, Hanks moved back to cornerback, but the signing of Sanders at the beginning of the 1994 forced the 49ers to shuffle their secondary. Hanks wound up moving back to free safety and Hall was benched. Since, Hanks has been the leader of the San Francisco secondary.

Despite his stardom, he hasn't turned his back on his alma mater.

"I definitely keep up on Iowa," Hanks said. "We have a strong following here on the staff (former Iowa running backs coach) Carl Jackson and there's a lot of former Big Ten players and trainers here. We definitely keep our eye on them.

"The Iowa football staff and media relations keeps us aware of what's going on with Hayden Fry and Sedrick Shaw and Tim Dwight and how they're performing."

It is that loyalty to a winning program that brought Hanks to Iowa from Lake Highlands High School in Dallas.

"I had the opportunity to go just about anywhere I wanted," Hanks said. "I chose Iowa, not necessarily to become a professional athlete, but to get a degree and a quality education. The opportunity came forward, and six years later, here I am."

And it's that success that has been one of many highlights in Fry's coaching career.

"Merton is one of the greatest kids to come down the road," Fry said. "For him to play professional ball and be as tough as he is, that's one of my real joys in life, to watch Merton be so successful."

With the departure of Deion Sanders after the 1993 Super Bowl, Hanks has taken over as not only the leader of the San Francisco secondary, but unquestionably, the most flamboyant member.

"That's Merton," Fry said. "He does that goose step or whatever they call it, the duck walk. He's a fun guy, he's not trying to showboat."

Hanks didn't just step into the NFL and become a star instantly. It took a couple of years and a position change before making a trip to the Pro-Bowl.

Hanks moved back to cornerback, but with the signing of (former Iowa running backs coach) Carl Jackson and there's a lot of former Big Ten players and trainers here. We definitely keep our eye on them.

Game Notes

Iowa looks for another solid second half

This week's game between Iowa and Northwestern may be a tale of two halves. In fact, the first half may be little more than a formality.

Last week at Illinois, Iowa coach Hayden Fry saw a number of things for the second half to keep the Illinois honest. The Hawkeyes may use a similar approach this week against Northwestern.

The Wildcats are known for their fourth-quarter comebacks this season, while the Hawkeyes are known for shutting teams down in the fourth quarter.

"We're going to have to do a lot of things this week against Northwestern," Fry said. "They've got the leading passer (Steve Schur), the leading rusher (Darnell Autry). They've got the leading pass receiver (Danny Taylor) and the leading interception returning man (Dwayne Bates)."

"Their offense is better than it was last year, but we still think we can shut them down."

Northwestern comes to Iowa City after first Big Ten loss in two seasons

Chuck Blount
THE DAILY Iowan

For the first time in 13 Big Ten conference games, the No. 18 Northwestern Wildcats will enter Saturday's contest with Iowa on the heels of a loss. Doding several bullets in recent games (four straight come-from-behind wins), the road game ended for the 'Cats last week at Penn State. Marred by numerous early mistakes and five turnovers, the Nittany Lions capitalized on every opportunity to dispose of Northwestern, 34-9.

"Being down by so much so early, we had to throw the ball 50 times to try and catch up and we can't do that and expect to be successful," Northwestern coach Gary Barnett said. "We're not a WAC team. Without the running game, we couldn't do much."

It was an uncharacteristic game for Northwestern (7-2 overall, 5-1 in the Big Ten). With only nine points scored, it was the lowest point output by the team since a 1994 contest with Illinois.

According to Iowa coach Hayden Fry, a loss to Penn State in Happy Valley isn't something to hang your head upon and it doesn't make them any less of an opponent.

"You can just ask (Penn State) Coach (Joe) Paterno how hard it is to win up there," Fry said. "Everybody knows you just don't win many games up there, I don't care who you are. We played our hearts out for our one-point win. Northwestern losing up there doesn't mean anything."

Offensively, Northwestern is stacked at the skill positions.

Quarterback Matt Schrader leads the Big Ten in yards (2036), completions (170), touchdowns (13) and total offense (237.78 ypg). "Quarterback is a skill position," Barnett said. "I was asked if I'm going to change anything for the opener and I said no. We have great, great players at quarterback and we're not changing anything."

"As a team we play well for the most part," Barnett said. "We are a very capable team and we know we have to play better but we're going to make the most of what we have."

Long was part of that change, and he ended up finishing second in the Heisman trophy balloting his senior year behind Bo Jackson. He also led Iowa to five bowl games, including two Rose Bowls, while the Wildcats continued to struggle.

Iowa sophomore tackle Matt Reischl is a player both schools have fought over in recent years. Northwestern hasn't been a factor that weighed into Reischl's decision between the two schools.

"It's not like I blew them off and said, 'they're never going to turn it around,' because I knew their coaching staff and I figured they were going to get things turned around," Reischl said. "I felt they were on the way up."

Despite the realization that the Wildcats were going to turn their program around, the Greendale, Wis., native didn't think it would happen so fast and to such a great extent.

"I wasn't prepared for them to explode like they did last year," Reischl said. "I wasn't prepared for them to beat us, but they are a great program with great players and great coaches, so they are going to go places."

Last season, the Wildcats finished 10-1, not only earning a trip to Pasadena, but reaching their first bowl game in 47 years. Part of the credit for the Northwestern turn around falls upon the Hawkeyes' success.

"What makes the difference is continuity and recruiting," Barnett said. "I remember a four-to-five year span at Iowa when they didn't lose a coach. And I used to hate recruiting against Iowa."

The importance of a cohesive coaching staff and solid recruiting were two ideas Barnett took from the Iowa program. He learned of the Hawkeyes' success in these two areas by recruiting against Iowa when he was an assistant with the Buffaloes.

"What he did was truly incredible," Barnett said. "He went from rags to riches the right way, truly first class."

Hawkeye defense too much for Wildcats

Iowa 27, Northwestern 17

If Iowa doesn't want revenge, then there is something wrong with them. Don't expect Iowa to be able to have its way with Northwestern. The Wildcats are a very talented team and will be able to make this the most exciting game Iowa has played in all year.

But in the end, Iowa's defense will be far too much for Northwestern.

Iowa 27, Northwestern 17.

THERE'S THE SECOND WEEK OF NOVEMBER AND THE RACE FOR FIRST PLACE IS OVER. WITH OHIO STATE IN THE DRIVER SEAT FOR THE BIG TEN TITLE, THE SCRAMBLE FOR SECOND PLACE IS ON.

THE NORTHWESTERN WILDCATS WILL LEAVE IOWA CITY WITH THEIR TAILS BETWEEN THEIR LEGS AND MICHIGAN STILL HAS TO PLAY THE BUCKEYES. THIS LEAVES IOWA WITH THE BEST CHANCE OF BEING SECOND BEST IF EVERYTHING GOES ACCORDING TO PLAN.

INDIANA AT MICHIGAN ST.

The Hoosiers may be having a tough year, but Bill Mallory didn’t deserve to be fired just because injuries have riddled his team for the last few seasons. I’m not the Indiana athletic director, but I wish I was.

The Hoosiers will have to get off to a fast start in order to have a chance in this game. Indiana has outscored its opponents 55-24 in the first period. In four of five Big Ten games, Indiana was leading at the break.

Michigan State will have to recover after being waxed by intrastate rival Michigan last week. Derrick Mason has had four straight games of 100-plus receiving yards. Sedinck Irvin has seen the end zone more than the inside of a classroom. The freshman tailback has hit paydirt 14 times this season.

Mallory’s boys will play hard, but... Michigan State, 28-17.

MINNESOTA AT WISCONSIN

This game has a guy named Wacker and a axe trophy involved. Coincidence? Who cares, it will be the Golden Gophers who will feel chopped up after facing a team that rushing for 206 yards per game.

Minnesota is dead last in the conference against the run. Wisconsin’s Ron Dayne will feel like he’s running through a daisy meadow. Field of flowers, Minnesota’s D, field of flowers, Minnesota’s D, field of flowers...

Wait, tough call.

Wisconsin quarterback Mike Samuel isn’t too shabby either. Samuel, just a sophomore, has thrown for 1,326 yards and completed 55.94 percent of his passes. Guess where the Golden Gopher defense ranks against the pass?

The much coveted Illibuck trophy is up for grabs in this game. Sounds like something that should be stuffed and mounted, just like what’s going to happen to the Illini in this game.

These two teams meet for the 83rd consecutive time on Saturday. Illinois will feel like that is just about long enough after facing the best offense and defense in the conference.

The Buckeyes give up a total of 250 yards per game while rolling up 470. Illinois just rolls up, although Illinois is second in the Big Ten in kickoff returns, averaging 23.5 yards per return. That might be close enough to try an 86 yard field goal.

Ohio State defensive end Mike Vrabel broke the Buckeye school record for tackles for losses last week. Vrabel has 58 for his career.

Receives by Jason Dakick might be the Illini’s only shot. Dakick is second on the career receiving list with 161 catches, 1,901 yards and 15 touchdowns.

Illinois cannot fumble, throw an interception, give up a big play, breathe or look at the Buckeyes wrong if they want a shot at losing by less than 30.

Ohio State, 45-10.

MICHIGAN AT PURDUE

This is the most interesting game of the week. The last time these two teams met, Tim Biakabutuka hit a three run homer to lead Michigan to a 5-0 win in Ann Arbor. Well, this year the Wolverines don’t have their clean up hitter and I smell an upset.

Purdue played hard in its loss to Wisconsin last week while Michigan had a big win over Michigan State. Purdue will have emotion on its side with the resignation of head coach Jim Colletto earlier this week.

The Boilermakers will have to improve their run defense, which gives up 180.3 yards per game. Purdue doesn’t hurt themselves, only fumbling four times so far, tied with Wisconsin for the best in the conference.

Michigan sophomore Charles Woodson, the "two-way" threat, could be the x-factor in this game. Woodson caught his first career TD pass against Michigan State and is also glue on wide receivers in the defensive backfield.

Michigan is the best in the Big Ten at shutting down opposing running backs. The Wolverines only surrender 97.3 yards on the ground. This is going out on a limb, but...

Purdue, 16-14.
