Campaign funding plagues election

Karen Gullo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Political money cast a pall over the 1996 election in a manner unseen since the days of Watergate. The source of it. The size of it. The use of it.

Headlines blared about prohibited donations to the Democratic Party from foreign sources. They screamed of admissions that a company secretly and illegally reimbursed employees to make donations to Bob Dole's presidential campaign. Across the country, there was more.

But it remains to be seen whether the public will finally force its political leaders to deliver on

"It was not nearly so bold 20 years ago. It was much more quietly done."

Maurice Stans, Richard Nixon's chief fund-raiser

long-broken promises to stem the flow of six-figure donations and spiraling spending that has alarmed reform advocates for years.

If lawmakers need a sign of the public mood, they need only look at the voters in five states who last week approved initiatives to change campaign finance rules.

Almost everyone agrees the system set up in the 1970s to eliminate the corrupting influence of money — through public financing, strict donation limits and mandatory disclosure — is broken.

"I don't know Clinton Dole could get any worse," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., an advocate of campaign finance reform proposals that have stalled and withered in each of the last two sessions of Congress.

Fred Wertheimer, former leader of the citizen action group Common Cause who has lobbied for reform for years, added, "This is the year the system collapsed."

The reasons cited are many. Loopholes, changes in the law made by Congress, court rulings and crafty practices have allowed political parties and their big-money backers to raise and spend as much as they want to influence elections despite the limits envisioned by the post-Watergate reformers.

"With creativity and good old American ingenuity, two decades is more than enough time to figure out how to circumvent reforms," said Richard Ben-Veniste, a special prosecutor during the Watergate scandal.

For example, corporations are strictly banned from political giving to federal candidates. Yet, they managed to pour $223 million into the 1996 election through the so-called soft money exemption created by Congress and the Federal Election Commission.

The parties collect these donations — often $100,000 — and use

Report card on the status of women

The UI's Council on the Status of Women released its annual report card on the UI's treatment of women:

The UI received such low grades from the UI Council on the Status of Women that it couldn't get into graduate school if it tried.

Although more women are in leadership positions at the UI, the Council on the Status of Women gave lower grades than last year in women's salary equity, campus climate and female retention and recruitment.

In the second annual report card issued by the council, three out of five categories received lower grades than last year. Campus climate, salary equity and recruitment/retention were graded lower in 1995-96, compared to 1994-95, while sexual harassment and leadership gained ground. On a numeric scale, the UI received a 2.26 grade point average from the council.

Deone Pedersen, chairperson of the affirmative action subcommittee that produced the report, said despite some lower grades, the committee really ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, Md. — Fifteen additional supervisors at an Army training center have been suspended in connection with a widening investigation of rape and sexual harassment of female recruits, a spokesperson said Saturday.

The 15 are drill sergeants and instructors at the Army Ordnance Center at Aberdeen Proving Ground. None have been charged yet, although charges could be filed, post spokesperson John Yaquiant said.

Previously, four drill instructors and a captain, all married, were suspended and charged with violations ranging from rape to sending improper love letters to female trainees.

Those five men were accused of harassing at least a dozen women in their first 16 weeks of training at the center.

Investigators have said they expect to find more victims as they interview women who were trained at the post during the last two years.

The 15 whose suspensions were announced Saturday were placed on administrative duties, Yaquiant said.

Such suspensions are not unusual considering the allegations, Maj. Susan Gibson said.

The number of suspensions could increase or decrease as the investigation continues, Yaquiant said. The post has a total of 325 instructors and 37 drill sergeants.

The post, about 30 miles north of Baltimore, teaches about 11,000 trainees a year technical skills ranging from weapons repair to air conditioning maintenance and welding.

The base commander, Maj. Gen. Robert Shadley, said at a news conference Friday some of the charges

Although days of war have long passed for Vietnam War veteran Ed Undercoffer, recognition of his contributions to the U.S. military have not.

Veterans Day, a nationally recognized holiday celebrated annually on the second Monday of November, brings letters from schoolchildren and volunteers to the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Iowa City.

Undercoffer, who is recovering from neck surgery, said it is vital that Americans recognize the contributions veterans have made on Veterans Day.

Few Americans, he said, acknowledge the significance of the holiday.

"There are thousands and thousands that have gone to their death. I think they've given up a lot so they (American citizens) can be happy in this country," he said.

Life is now routine for Undercoffer, who makes crafts to pass the time. He was working on a needlepoint tapestry of a nature scene on

Now's the time to ready cars for winter weather

Tracy Potocki
The Daily Iowan

Snow flurries and falling temperatures are prompting UI students to brave the cost of necessary car repairs as they head into another bitter Iowa winter.

Mechanics at Campus Amoco Service, 102 E. Burlington St., are providing free winterizing checkups, night manager Jim Goodsell said. The checkups include examining fluid levels, battery connections, belts and hoses and tires.

"It's dangerous out there the way it is," he said. "Winter weather puts even more stress on drivers. You need your vehicle at 100 percent so you as a driver can stay in control of your vehicle."

Greg Kindl, a full-time Campus Amoco Service employee, said winter checkups are an important preparation.

"We're expecting another cold winter," Kindl said. "The sooner drivers come in, the better."

UI junior Matt Leddin said he will take his car in this year for a winter checkup. Last year, a tube broke because he didn't get it checked.

"A checkup is probably a good thing to have done," Leddin said. "A tube broke and I ended up pay-

Although UI junior Kristopher Gulbro drove off the road last year when he skidded on an ice patch and landed in a ditch, he does not plan to take his vehicle in this year for a checkup. His winter preparation consists of checking his battery and keeping his tires full of air.

"I got my jeep tuned up last year and I don't think it needs it this year," Gulbro said.

Judge throws out lawsuit against psychic network

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Billy Dee Williams is in the clear after a judge tossed out a lawsuit claiming the actor and the Psychic Readers Network, which he endorses, illegally used videotape of an earthquake-damaged apartment.

Williams

The plaintiffs, Rocco and Adina Maramonte, and their lawyers failed to show up in court Friday to explain why defendants were never served with the lawsuit.

Before throwing out the suit on Friday, Superior Court Judge Florence-Marie Cooper said the papers may have been served telepathically.

The Maramontes had claimed Psychic Readers Network did not ask permission to use videotape of their apartment for an infomercial segment, with Williams as host, about people supposedly saved by a psychic reader.

Margot Kidder finds laughter to be the best medicine

NEW YORK (AP) — Margot Kidder is back, returning to acting after her emotional breakdown last spring with a recurring role on "Boston Common."

Kidder

"I'm taking one step at a time," she said in the Nov. 16 TV Guide. In the sitcom she plays Cookie Van Doren, an eccentric drama teacher.

"It's so much fun," she said, "that in a week you get about two months' worth of good, healthy laugh medicine to store away."

Laughter — along with landing a job — are good medicine for Kidder right now, helping her recover from the breakdown she blames on years of "financial, romantic, and health mishaps."

Kidder, who played Lois Lane opposite Christopher Reeve in the "Superman" movies, calls Reeve, now paralyzed, "an inspiration."

Besides appearing on "Boston Common," Kidder is writing her memoirs, titled "Calamities."

"I'm pretty optimistic about the future," she said. "It's hard to beat that out of me."

Queen Latifah plays movie criminal with ease

NEW YORK (AP) — Making the movie "Set It Off" wasn't about a paycheck for Queen Latifah.

"I make more in a week of 'Living Single' than I did for the whole movie," said Latifah, who plays one of four beautiful bank robbers in the new film made on a relatively low budget of $10 million.

Latifah, who also stars in the TV show "Living Single," shares the spotlight with Jada Pinkett ("The Nutty Professor"), Vivica Fox ("Independence Day") and newcomer Kimberly Elise.

The action crime adventure features car chases, armed robberies and shooting, something Latifah took to easily.

"When we went to the gun range, she was ready," Fox said of her co-

Last week with David Brinkley

David Bauder
Associated Press

David Brinkley began his final appearance as host of the program that bears his name on Sunday with an apology to the president and ended it with a familiar chuckle.

In between, the television pioneer found little time for sentiment as the curtain lowered on a 53-year network news career.

The 76-year-old Brinkley's exit was overshadowed by his comments at the end of ABC's Election Night coverage last week that President Clinton was a "bore" and would subject the American public to more "goddamned nonsense" over the next four years.

With Clinton as a guest on "This Week with David Brinkley," the commentator opened with an apology.

"I'm reminded of something I wrote years ago," Brinkley said. "It may be impossible to be objective, I said, but we must always be fair. Well, after a long Election Day and seven hours on the set, what I said on the Election Night coverage was both impolite and unfair. I'm sorry. I regret it."

Clinton accepted the apology with a smile, saying he had often said things he regretted late at night when he was tired.

"I always believe you have to judge people on their whole work and if you get judged based on your whole work, you come out way ahead," the president said, in an interview taped Friday in the White House's Roosevelt Room.

Brinkley moved swiftly on to business, questioning Clinton on the president's priorities for a second term, the first lady's role and campaign finance reform. After the interview, Brinkley led the weekly discussion with Sam Donaldson, Cokie Roberts and George Will.

At the show's end, Brinkley was careful not to speak the word "retirement." He plans to contribute weekly commentaries to "This Week" and narrate some documentaries.

"I plan some changes in the next few weeks," Brinkley said. "Nothing drastic, and I will still be here every week."

The veteran television commentator ended the show by reprising one of his favorite humorous stories from last year about a Utah man divorcing his wife of three years because he found out "she" was a "he." Like the first time he read the story, Brinkley struggled unsuccessfully to keep a straight face.

Sentiment was kept off the air: Brinkley, Roberts, Donaldson and Will shared a champagne toast shortly after the program ended, said ABC News spokesperson Su-Lin Cheng. A retrospective of the program's 15 years is planned for next Sunday.

It was typical of Brinkley, whose Washington career began as a 23-year-old NBC News correspondent covering White House news conferences in President Franklin Roosevelt's office.

Brinkley paired with Chet Huntley on NBC's nightly news during the 1950s and '60s and was one of the early stars of television news. His dry wit and clipped cadence made him often imitated.

Joining ABC News in 1981 and starting "This Week," he opened a new era in Sunday morning television. Lately, though, NBC's "Meet the Press" has challenged ABC's Sunday supremacy.

Will, in an interview on an upcoming A&E Network "Biography" special on Brinkley, likened working with him to patrolling the Yankee Stadium outfield next to Joe DiMaggio.

"This is a man who defined gracefulness in broadcast journalism," Will said.

SEQUEL OF THE CENTURY

Plaintiffs' case sticks to simple facts

Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — With the gift of hindsight, plaintiff lawyers pursuing O.J. Simpson for wrongful death are dodging land mines that exploded for prosecutors in Simpson's criminal trial.

The legal battle, on behalf of the families of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, has been a pared-down, focused and often powerful campaign to portray Simpson as a killer.

Remember Brian "Kato" Kaelin, Mark Fuhrman and Rosa Lopez? Don't expect any encore appearances.

"This case is being tried from 20-20 hindsight, and it's the strongest weapon the plaintiffs have," Loyola University Law School Dean Laurie Levenson said. "They know where the defense is going so they take preemptive strikes."

There are few histrionics here, none of the previous hostility among lawyers who sometimes turned Judge Lance Ito's courtroom into a virtual bear pit of snarling egos. The race card is nowhere to be found.

Unlike the criminal trial prosecution team, which sought to explore every scintilla of evidence, the plaintiffs in the civil trial are following a philosophy of less is more.

"If anything characterizes the plaintiffs' effort, it is keeping the focus on a finite number of facts," Southwestern University Law Professor Robert Pugsley said. "They're telling the story in the simplest, clearest, most succinct fashion they can."

The presentations are purposely short, leaving little opportunity for marathon cross-examinations.

"(Police criminalist) Dennis Fung was on and off the stand in one day instead of being on the rack and screw for nine days," Pugsley said. "It's being cut down from a gargantuan monster to something a jury can deal with."

Coordinating the plaintiffs' effort is Daniel Petrocelli, whose cool-headed demeanor is the antithesis of that of his client, Fred Goldman, the most emotional man in the courtroom.

It was Goldman's only son who was murdered alongside Simpson's ex-wife. And it was Goldman's grim determination to prove Simpson committed the crimes, even after his acquittal on criminal charges, that forced the civil trial.

Brown Simpson's father, Louis Brown, executor of her estate and a plaintiff in the case, has not been in court since opening statements. But Goldman is there every day with either his wife, Patti, or daughter Kim, who arrives in a car with the personalized license plate, "MSNG RON."

Through it all, Petrocelli remains composed, hewing to his strategy of methodically pounding away at the physical evidence. Jurors have seen a knit cap and bloody gloves, enlargements of grisly crime-scene pictures and photographs of blood drops at the crime scene and Simpson's home, blood in his Bronco, bloody footprints, cuts on Simpson's fingers and blood-spotted sheets from his Chicago hotel room.

The "mountain of evidence" constructed over months by Prosecutor Marcia Clark is being reassembled in Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki's court at breakneck speed. For Petrocelli, the criminal trial was a primer in how not to present his case.

Numbers help illustrate the difference. The criminal trial lasted a year, and many of the 126 witnesses spent multiple days on the stand. The prosecution alone presented 72 witnesses in 99 days of testimony. The civil trial — estimated to wrap up early next month — has so far featured 26 witnesses through 10 days of testimony.

Volunteers gather food for needy

Will Valet
The Daily Iowan

Volunteers are collecting cans of food and boxes of dry goods for the hungry in Iowa City during the Thanksgiving and winter holidays. UI students and Iowa City residents are helping to provide Thanksgiving meals for those who are less fortunate during the Thanksgiving and holiday seasons.

Megan Holm, vice president of the UI Freshmen Council, said the council trick-or-treated for canned goods on Halloween, the proceeds of which went to the Wesley Foundation, 120 N. Dubuque St. Approximately 540 items were collected by 25 volunteers.

Holm said events such as the trick-or-treating give UI students opportunities to help others.

"There's a lot of people who want to help out, but they don't know how," she said. "The desire is there, but not the opportunity. We want to give that to them."

Carrie Miller, UI senior and president of the Order of Omega organization, said UI fraternities and sororities have moved their annual food drive from spring to this semester because of the increased need during the winter season.

"We usually do this during Greek Week in the spring, but the Crisis Donation Center needs a lot of help this time of year," Miller said.

The food drive began Oct. 21 and will continue through Monday, Nov. 18. Boxes have been placed at each UI fraternity or sorority house for non-perishable food items, paper products, diapers and financial support.

Miller said many people have donated items for the food drive.

"The (Greek) chapters have really come to the occasion and donated quite a bit," she said.

Dennis McDermott, campus minister with the Newman Catholic Student Center, 104 E. Jefferson St., said the center will hold its annual free lunch for the needy at St. Mary's Church, 220 E. Jefferson St., on Thanksgiving.

McDermott said although there is a need to give to the needy year-round, it is easier for community residents to give during the holidays.

17-year-old charged for duct taping teen-ager to tree

Mike Waller
The Daily Iowan

A young male was found duct taped to a tree in lower Hickory Hill Park Thursday morning, leading police to charge a 17-year-old male with assault causing injury.

A jogger found the juvenile unconscious and taped to the tree shortly before 8 a.m. the next morning.

The jogger notified authorities and the juvenile was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics, where he was treated for a hypothermia-related condition and injuries he sustained during the duct-taping incident.

The juvenile was clothed, but his body temperature had dropped considerably, leading to the hypothermia-type condition.

Sgt. Vicki Lalla of the Iowa City Police Department said it was her understanding that the hypothermia condition was fairly extreme, but couldn't comment further on the incident.

City High School junior Chris Lewis said he had heard about the assault, but he did not know why the juvenile was duct taped to the tree.

Police Lt. Matt Johnson said the investigation into the assault led police to file a charge against the same 17-year-old male for filing a false report concerning the placement of an explosive device on Nov. 5.

The bomb threat was made to City High School, 1900 Morning-side Drive, on Nov. 5 at 12:23 p.m. Iowa City Police Department logs indicate the 17-year-old notified City High officials the bomb would explode that afternoon.

Lewis said police evacuated City High and conducted a locker search.

The motive for the bomb threat is not yet known, and Johnson said the assault and the bomb threat were not directly related.

Pieces of Mars set to sell for millions at New York auction

Matt Crenson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even in New York, these rocks are pricey chunks of real estate. But then, what's a brownstone on Park Avenue when you can own a piece of Mars?

When three small Martian meteorites go on the auction block here Nov. 20, the man greasing the skids boasts they'll sell for $1.5 million, $2 million, maybe more.

"These will probably go down in history as the three most precious pieces of stone that were sold by man," the mysterious figure who owns them told the AP in a phone call. Neither he nor Guernsey's auction house, which is arranging the sale, will reveal his identity.

Guernsey's bills the rocks as the world's only private collection containing all three types of Martian meteorites. There are only 12 such meteorites known to exist in the world, and most pieces of them are held by museums, governments and research institutions. But private enthusiasts also have a hand in what's always been one of the most bizarre collectors' markets around.

The market for meteorites was already picking up this summer when NASA scientists announced they had found signs of life in Allan Hills 84001, a chunk of Martian rock discovered in Antarctica 12 years ago.

Since then, prices have gone sky-high. Every millionaire on Earth seems to want a little piece of the red planet, and meteorite collectors and dealers have watched with mixed glee and terror as their arcane little hobby became a serious precious commodity.

"This whole market has been in such a tizzy ... you can ask almost any price you want," said Blaine Reed, a meteorite dealer based in Durango, Colo. "It's a little scary."

Arlan Ettinger isn't frightened. The president of Guernsey's, who has sold Cuban cigars, Elvis Presley's clothing and antique carousel ponies, is pushing his wares as if they were the Hope diamond, crown jewels and Jackie Kennedy Onassis' engagement ring rolled into one.

"Anything else would pale next to it," Ettinger said.

Which is why he's decided to present the three meteorites as the sole lot in the auction.

The $20 catalog, which must be purchased to gain admission, puts the meteorites' value at $1.5 million to $2 million, which is high by anybody's standards. Reed guesses the pound of rock is worth something in the neighborhood of $680,000, and other experts said only they aren't worth anywhere near $1 million.

But that doesn't mean somebody won't pay that much — or more.

"We've seen nothing but the value of the Mars meteorites go up, all the way back to Mars," meteorite dealer Robert Haag of Tucson, Ariz., said giddily when he heard of the impending auction.

Haag doesn't think the auction is such a big deal, however, because, for one thing, the three rocks don't really represent the full range of Martian meteorites. Most geologists put the dozen known meteorites in four or five different classes, not the three delineated when such meteorites first were discovered.

Collectors can't get their hands on the additional types, though, because the U.S. and Japanese governments own all of the Martian meteorites that fall into those classes and can't legally sell them.

"Basically, all of us are shy of a full set," Reed said.

Guernsey's isn't the first house to offer meteorites to auction. That distinction belongs to Phillips, which plans to offer four more Martian specimens Dec. 14.

Technically, the three rocks being offered by Guernsey's don't constitute the only privately held collection containing the three classic Martian meteorite types, as the auction house claims, either. Reed said he has tiny grains of all three types in his own collection.

Never mind that, though. The most provocative thing about the meteorites on the block is Ettinger's claim that one of them could contain signs of life.

"The composition is almost identical, so there is every reason to believe that what might exist or what does exist in the Allan Hills meteorite is present in this specimen," he said.

Well, maybe or maybe not. The magic microbial meteorite NASA scientists touted this summer is nothing like any other meteorite ever found — literally in a class by itself. But the putative evidence of life found in that meteorite also could show up in another type of meteorite, said Gary Huss of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena. So it could be that all three of the meteorites offered for sale contain signs of life.

The largest of the three specimens on Guernsey's block, the shergottite, is grayish-green, palm-sized and covered on one side by what geologists call a fusion crust. The rough, black rind of material is produced when rock melts due to the frictional heating of the meteorite as it hurtles through the atmosphere.

The shergottite is a one-pound piece of a meteorite that fell on Zagami, Nigeria, in 1962. About 44 pounds of the Zagami meteorite are accounted for, so the specimen in question represents about 2 percent of the world's known supply.

Zairian rebels' motive uncertain

Karin Davies
Associated Press

GOMA, Zaire — The rebels who have overrun eastern Zaire characterize themselves as 1960s revolutionaries who have long struggled to overthrow President Mobutu Sese Seko, whom they blame for ruining the country.

Experts agree that's what they are, but add they wouldn't have seized 175 miles of territory and driven hundreds of thousands of Rwandan Hutus from U.N. camps without the help of professional armies — Rwanda's in particular, but also Burundi's and Uganda's.

"The Rwandans could not intervene themselves in Zaire, so they took those movements and put them on the forefront," said Colette Braeckman, a Belgian journalist and author who has written extensively on Zaire.

The conflict began last month as a local uprising and has since broadened to include a spectrum of ethnic groups and regional rebellions.

Many view it as an extension of Rwanda's and Burundi's civil wars, rooted in Hutu-Tutsi ethnic rivalry. An influx of Rwandan and Burundian Hutus into Zaire in recent years has exacerbated long-standing tensions among indigenous Zairian peoples.

The fear is that Zaire, struggling with its own ethnic divisions and a wrecked economy, might deteriorate into a bloody mess of warring provinces. The absence of Mobutu, who has been in Europe for cancer treatment since August, has only heightened fears of instability in the heart of Africa.

WHITE HOUSE

Clinton hopes to proceed Cabinet toward 'vital center'

Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton resumed contemplation of his Cabinet options Sunday as another top liberal aide appeared poised for an exit from the Clinton White House.

"The president is mulling over his options and doing some hard thinking about the makeup of the Cabinet," White House spokesperson Mary Ellen Glynn said.

In structuring his new Cabinet, the president is looking for people who can set his second administration squarely in "the vital center," a phrase coined by historian Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. in the 1940s to describe the place in a democracy between the polar ideologies of the far right and far left.

The first step to the vital center, Clinton said in an interview on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," is to draw Republicans and other conservatives into his sphere of aides and advisers.

"I would very much like to have a bipartisan Cabinet," Clinton said.

"When I was trying to put my other Cabinet together, I invited a very prominent Republican to join it, and for personal reasons he could not. I was disappointed."

The president went to the Oval Office at midday Sunday for informal discussions with chief of staff Leon Panetta and Erskine Bowles, replacing Panetta early next year. They held a similar session Saturday along with Clinton friend and adviser Vernon Jordan.

While making overtures to conservatives, the president also is shedding some aides who have kept him on track with liberal Democrats. Among them are senior adviser George Stephanopoulos, deputy chief of staff Harold Ickes and Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros, who is being prodded to go but has not publicly stated his intentions.

Ickes has decided to leave, said senior White House officials who spoke Sunday on condition of anonymity. But they said it also is possible that Ickes could remain with the administration, as replacement for departing Labor Secretary Robert Reich.

The White House doesn't worry about depleting its envoys to liberals. "No matter who leaves, there's a deep bench," an administration official said.

Clinton maintains an interest in adding retired Army Gen. Colin Powell to the Cabinet as secretary of state or defense. Powell, a moderate Republican and possible presidential hopeful in 2000, has said he would consider such an offer.

against the ill-equipped, ill-disciplined Zairian military.

The rebellion followed a campaign of harassment that began with the denial of Zairian citizenship for the Tutsis 15 years ago. Last month, they were threatened with expulsion from their homeland in South Kivu province.

The leader of the rebel movement, the Alliance of Democratic Forces of Liberation (Congo-Zaire), is Laurent Desiree Kabila, 60, a one-time Marxist who has struggled against Mobutu for half his life.

Kabila's re-emergence has evoked memories of a series of failed regional rebellions and leftist uprising in the 1960s and 1970s against the dictatorship of Mobutu, who seized power in 1965.

Some diplomats suggest Kabila is an opportunist taking advantage of the rebels' successes or is a front for Rwandan involvement, but rebel military commander Andre Ngandu Kassasse said outsiders misunderstand the rebellion.

It is a popular uprising against "the catastrophe of Mobutu's rule" that cuts across ethnic lines, Kassasse, 51, said in an interview at a commandeered house on a broad, red dirt road in Goma.

"Banyamulenge, Bahunde, Nyanga, Kasai, Nande, Bavira and the rest. We have all united to attack Mobutu's government," he said. He wore a blue beret and a scavenged Zairian army uniform, neatly tucked into buckled boots.

A strong theme of resistance to ethnic discrimination, however, runs through the alliance's doctrine, which urges Zairians "not to yield to the regime's temptation of incitation to inter-ethnic violence."

Kassasse said the rebels have no interest in seceding from Zaire or becoming part of Rwanda, and urged Zairians to fight their real enemy: the state machinery which has exploited them for decades.

"We are going to conquer all of Zaire and we shall restore democracy and justice, improve the economy and end corruption," he said.

Few believe Kassasse and his army, estimated at 3,000-7,000 men, will be able to march the more than 900 miles to the capital Kinshasa in a country that lacks a national network of roads and reliable communications.

Braeckman also doubted other opposition groups would join the rebels. "Opposition parties in Kinshasa ... say they are invaders, Rwanda's puppets. There is a lot of mistrust," she said.

Zaire claims Rwanda, Burundi and even Uganda are behind the uprising. Uganda supported Rwandan Tutsis in the early 1990s as they began a guerrilla war to oust the anti-Tutsi government then in power in Rwanda.

Recovering Yeltsin to focus on ailing nation

Barry Renfrew
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Now that surgeons have given Boris Yeltsin a new lease on life, the Russian president says he is determined to do the same for his vast, ailing nation.

After months of uncertainty and political wrangling, the government is trying to inspire confidence that a rejuvenated Yeltsin can solve Russia's problems. Even as he went in to surgery, Yeltsin stressed he still had much to do.

Whether or not Yeltsin can solve Russia's problems, his most important contribution may be just staying alive. By serving out his second four-year term until 2000, Yeltsin can give the country badly needed stability as it continues the transition from Communism.

Doctors predict Yeltsin will return to his Kremlin office in six to eight weeks and will be able to function better than he has done in recent years.

"He's got a good normal heart now, so you see he's going to be a new vigorous man."

Dr. Michael DeBakey, an American heart surgeon

"He's got a good normal heart now, so you see he's going to be a new vigorous man," American heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey said Sunday as he left Moscow after consulting on Yeltsin's surgery.

The challenges that await him are gargantuan.

Russia continues to fall apart. Democracy is taking root, but there are powerful forces on the left and the right that hanker for authoritarian rule. Economically, Russia is stalled between the old failed Soviet system and a market economy as living standards and employment plummet.

Millions of workers and pensioners go months without being paid. Government coffers are empty because of poor management and tax evasion. Industrial and agricultural production are slumping. The military and other branches of government are falling apart for lack of funds.

"When he gets out of hospital, President Yeltsin will have to stand up and take responsibility for the chaos inside the government and catastrophic state of the country's finances," The Moscow Tribune said Sunday.

An unspoken truce that prevailed while Yeltsin was ill has now collapsed. Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov said two days after Yeltsin's operation the president was "unable to govern."

But Yeltsin can fulfill one need that many Russians feel is vital at this point in the country's history: a strong, undisputed head of state who backs continued reform and rejects the authoritarian past.

Marino passes for more than 50,000 yards

MIAMI (AP) — Dan Marino didn't expect to throw for 50,000 yards and break almost every NFL passing record when he broke into the league 14 years ago.

But when he reached a dozen seasons with his health intact, the thought occurred to the NFL's all-time leading passer.

The Miami Dolphins' quarterback passed the 50,000-yard milestone Sunday in a 37-13 win over Indianapolis.

"Coming into the league in 1983, you never think that far down the line," Marino said. "I knew a couple of years ago that I could have this opportunity if I could stay healthy."

Marino passed the milestone by hitting O.J. McDuffie for a 36-yard completion with 6 minutes left in the first half of a 37-13 win against the Indianapolis Colts.

"Dan Marino amazes me every year in what he is capable of doing," Dolphins guard Keith Sims said. "Although he hasn't had the kind of talent around him that these others have, like Montana, he still produces huge numbers. Anybody who thinks he is over the hill is wrong, plain wrong."

The 35-year-old Marino, under fire from some fans this season after the Dolphins dropped to 4-5, entered the game needing 83 yards to reach the milestone in his 14th NFL season. He hit 17 of 24 passes for 204 yards and three touchdowns.

Autry leads Wildcats to blowout

Mike Triplett
The Daily Iowan

Northwestern, a team which has patented the last-minute comeback victory, needed no such dramatics Saturday in Kinnick Stadium.

All the No. 18 Wildcats needed was Darnell Autry.

The junior tailback broke loose for a career-high 240 yards and 13 touchdowns. Northwestern scored four times to lead Northwestern over No. 23 Iowa, 40-13.

In the process, the Wildcats (8-2, 6-1) took sole possession of second place in the Big Ten Conference, leaving Iowa (6-3, 4-2) in a four-way tie for third place.

"That was a magnificent performance by Northwestern," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "I thought they played as well as any team we've played against in quite a few years."

"They didn't make very many mistakes — I can't recall any right off the top of my head. And I think they capitalized on every mistake that we made, and we obviously made quite a few."

Iowa turned the ball over three times without taking one away from Northwestern. That, combined with the Hawkeyes' 10 penalties, turned an early 10-7 score into a lopsided rout.

The momentum shift began after Iowa's first turnover — a fumble with 5:34 remaining in the first half. Iowa's Ed Gibson was hit in the back by a short punt while trying to block for returner Tim Dwight. The Wildcats pounced on the ball and ran out the clock with a drive that ended in a field goal and a 13-7 halftime lead.

"It's not (Gibson's) fault," Dwight explained. "He's blocking his guy, trying to keep his guy out and I think it was kind of a bad call. He got blocked into the ball."

Nevertheless, Iowa's offense was kept off the field for the final six minutes and 48 seconds of the first half, and didn't get the ball back until five minutes into the second half.

Third loss may reduce Hawkeye bowl options

Chris Snider
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's loss to Northwestern Saturday considerably reduced the Hawkeyes' chances of reaching a New Year's Day bowl game.

A win would have put Iowa in the driver's seat for the Florida Citrus Bowl. As it stands now, Northwestern has the best chance of reaching that game.

The Wildcats have only one loss in the Big Ten Conference with one game to go, next week at home against Purdue.

The Hawkeyes (4-2) now find themselves in a three-way tie for fourth place in the Big Ten with Penn State and Michigan. Both of those schools have a better overall record than the Hawkeyes and both are ranked higher in the polls.

However, Michigan and Penn State play each other next week, and Michigan plays undefeated Ohio State to finish the season, meaning a third-place finish in the conference is not out of the question.

See BOWL CHANCES, Page 3B

Order of Big Ten Bowl Selection

- Rose Bowl - Will take the Big Ten champion or co-champion. In the event of a tie, the tie-breaker procedure is as follows: (1) head-to-head play (2) overall record (3) the team that has not gone to the Rose Bowl in the longest time.
- Florida Citrus Bowl - May select the Big Ten runner-up, co-champion or the highest ranked Big Ten team in the CNN/USAToday coaches poll.
- Outback Bowl - The Outback Bowl has the third selection and may select any Big Ten team remaining. However, it may not select a team that had two fewer wins than another team not yet selected.

- Alamo Bowl - The Alamo Bowl has the next selection. The same provisions for the Outback Bowl apply for the Alamo Bowl.
- Sun Bowl - The Sun Bowl has the fifth selection.

*Note - A conference team could be eligible for an at-large bid in the College Football Bowl Alliance if it meets the selection criteria (minimum eight Division I-A wins and a national ranking no lower than the highest ranked conference champion).

HAWKEYE HOOPS

Rucker impressive in Iowa debut

James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Guy Rucker sent a lot of fans home from Carver-Hawkeye Arena with smiles on their faces Saturday.

The 6-foot-9 redshirt freshman raised the spirits of Iowa basketball fans with his strong performance in the intrasquad Black and Gold Blowout. Rucker had 12 points to go along with six rebounds and was a force in the middle on defense, blocking several shots and altering even more.

The Gold squad defeated the Black shirts, 80-47, in front of 10,342 fans, but the real story was Rucker, who played with a splint on the little finger on his right hand. Rucker fractured the finger in practice a few weeks ago.

One of the biggest questions facing the Hawkeyes this year is whether the team can find somebody to replace Russ Millard's inside presence. Rucker supplied some answers in the Blowout.

"A lot of people expect me to come out and do what they want me to do," Rucker said. "But I'm human, just like everybody else. Things take time and I just ask them to stick with me."

In the first half, Rucker played on the Gold squad, which included most of the Hawkeye regulars. Rucker switched teams at halftime and joined the Black shirts, and it was at that time that Rucker came

Nittany Lions upset top-seeded Hawkeyes

Chuck Blount
The Daily Iowan

EVANSTON, Ill. — The Iowa field hockey team just can't figure out Penn State in the postseason.

A year ago, the Nittany Lions knocked the Hawkeyes out of the Big Ten tournament with a 4-1 victory.

Sunday's game held a remarkable resemblance. Penn State once again handed the heavily favored Hawkeyes their first conference loss of the season with a 3-1 victory in the tournament finals.

It was also Iowa's worst loss of the year, a loss that kept Iowa from making history as the only team ever to win both the regular season and tournament titles in the same season.

Tyson vs. Holyfield

11TH ROUND TKO

Holyfield shocks Tyson, critics

Ed Schuyler Jr. Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Evander Holyfield may have been the only one who wasn't shocked. Most of the screaming fans were, and Mike Tyson certainly was.

There was Iron Mike on the canvas in the sixth round. There he was being saved by the bell in the 10th.

And there he was helpless against the ropes in the 11th when referee Mitch Halpern stopped the shocking upset that made Holyfield a heavyweight champion for the third time.

Shades of Buster Douglas. Although this upset might not be considered as great as the one James "Buster" Douglas scored when he knocked out Tyson in the 10th round in Tokyo on Feb. 11, 1990, it was a dandy. And it will be talked about whenever boxing fans reminisce.

Like that fight six years ago, Tyson needed a knockout to win. He almost pulled one off against Douglas with an eighth-round knockdown, but he didn't come close against Holyfield.

"The man was out. I stopped it because he was hurt," Halpern said after Holyfield landed nine punches to the head that left Tyson helpless against the ropes. He stopped it after 37 seconds.

Only the bell saved Tyson from being knocked out in the previous round. Had it rung a second or two later, he might well have been down and out.

Evander Holyfield raises his fist after defeating Mike Tyson in their WBA Heavyweight Championship bout in Las Vegas Saturday.

Referee Mitch Halpern holds onto Mike Tyson as he stops the fight against Evander Holyfield in the eleventh round of their WBA Heavyweight Championship bout.

"I did what it took to win," Holyfield said. "Tyson fights good inside. My advantage is outside. He throws good, short punches."

The 34-year-old Holyfield, who had lost two of four fights, had guaranteed a victory. Most boxing observers and media members scoffed. In fact, many thought Holyfield shouldn't even have attempted to fight.

But the man who had retired briefly in 1994 after a diagnosed heart problem was cleared to fight by the Mayo Clinic, which examined him strenuously for the Nevada State Athletic Commission.

There was obviously nothing wrong with Holyfield's heart Saturday night; in fact, there's never been a question of heart when it comes to Holyfield's courage.

"It was about not giving up," Holyfield said of his performance, which came 5 years and 1 day after he was supposed to defend the undisputed championship against Tyson in Las Vegas. That fight didn't come off because Tyson injured ribs in training and then went to trial in Indianapolis, where he was convicted of rape charges.

"Holyfield fought a good fight," Tyson said. "I take my hat off to him. I look forward to a rematch."

PRO-EVANDER SELLOUT CROWD

Holyfield sheds Tyson of mystique

Tim Dahlberg Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Blood from a fresh cut was flowing into his left eye and a delirious crowd was chanting "Holyfield, Holyfield." Then a right and a left came crashing on Mike Tyson's head, and the heavyweight champion was down and in desperate trouble.

It was only the sixth round of a fight that would go 37 seconds into the 11th. But as Tyson struggled to get to his feet he left with him on the canvas the seeming invincibility that had made him the most feared fighter of his time.

Evander Holyfield sensed it immediately. By the next round he was talking to Tyson, pushing him into the corner and blasting away with punches to the head. The befuddled Tyson could do little but wing desperation left hooks in hopes of catching Holyfield with one big punch.

The unthinkable was happening to the ferocious fighting machine who had brutalized his four previous comeback opponents. Tyson was reduced now to fighting on instincts, against a former two-time champion and former 22-1 underdog who was now in total command.

"I don't even remember the fight from the third round on," Tyson said later, his face a mess of welts and puffy from the beating he took. "He hit me in the third or fourth round and I just got whacked out. I don't remember being knocked down."

Even before the first punch was thrown, it didn't seem like it would be Tyson's night. Accustomed to being the crowd favorite, he entered the ring clad only on black trunks and a cutout towel to a mixture of cheers and boos from a pro-Holyfield sellout crowd at the MGM Grand Garden arena.

BETTER START THAN LAST YEAR

Record-setting Bulls after history again

Mike Nadel Associated Press

CHICAGO — Coming off the best season in NBA history — a record 72 regular-season victories followed by a dominating championship run — the Chicago Bulls couldn't possibly be better.

Or could they?

"Last year, we had key guys get hurt and miss games. We expect the same this year, but maybe it won't happen," Ron Harper said. "If we can stay healthy, we might just be better.

"As long as we keep our intensity and enthusiasm, we have a chance to win every game."

Every game?

You mean 82-0?

"Why not?" Harper said. Then he laughed.

The Bulls are 6-0 after beating Boston 104-92 Saturday. That betters their team-record start of a year ago, when they won their first five games before losing. Houston also won its first six games and is the NBA's only other unbeaten team.

To a man, the Bulls say they have improved.

"We are better from a knowledge standpoint," Michael Jordan said. "Physically, OK, we have that extra year of beating on our bodies, but we only can get better because of playing together for a period of time. We have a sense of expectation from each other, and our roles are pretty much set, and that makes us a better team."

Coach Phil Jackson agreed. "We have a chance to be better," he said. "Last year at this time, Dennis Rodman was missing 12 games with an injury. Now he's here. Last year, we lost Scottie Pippen for a stretch. Maybe that doesn't happen this year. We have more depth, with everyone more confident in each other, and more shared experience."

Bill Wennington put it this way: "The only question is: 'Athletically, can we sustain the grind of a whole season and keep winning?' Do I have any doubts? No."

And Steve Kerr said, "I think back to last year, how perfect it went. It was a dream season, really. And we've picked up right where we left off."

The fast start has been somewhat surprising in that Pippen, Harper and Luc Longley were coming off surgery.

"I didn't think we would be very conscious of our record the first month or so," Pippen said. "But this team ... we can't do anything but play to win."

'Ransom' suspense thrills in 2nd half

Stacey Harrison
The Daily Iowan

The new Mel Gibson adventure "Ransom" is a tale of two movies. The first of these is a tedious, technically erred display of Hollywood hokum. The second, however, is a suspense-filled, adrenalin-pumping display of Hollywood hokum.

Director Ron Howard ("Apollo 13") is able to overcome an embarrassingly shoddy first hour — in which the boom microphone is annoyingly visible throughout — and manages to produce an effective thriller.

Ransom

Starring.....Mel Gibson
Gary Sinise
Rene Russo
Screenplay by.....Richard Price
Alexander Ingnon
Directed by.....Ron Howard ★★★★ out of ★★★★★

The plot of "Ransom" is not a million-dollar idea. Gibson ("Braveheart") plays airline mogul Tom Mullen, whose son (Brawley Nolte, "Mother Night") is kidnapped and held for a $2-million bounty. The stock FBI characters, led by Delroy Lindo ("Get Shorty"), are called in to do everything in their power to get the boy back.

The twist arrives when Mullen turns the tables on the kidnapers and converts the ransom money into a bounty on their heads. This is the pivotal moment in "Ransom," and it has to work for any of the ensuing suspense to stay afloat.

Publicity photo

Mel Gibson stars in "Ransom" as business tycoon Tom Mullen, who turns the tables on his son's kidnapers. At Coral IV Theatres.

And work it does.

While this moment is the epitome of pure Hollywood contrivance, it doesn't fail to cast the entire theater into a dead silence. Howard's direction here is particularly deft, consisting of jump cuts between Mullen and the awestruck kidnapers. The twist sets the tone for what becomes a gut-wrenching revenge drama.

Despite this wonderful scene, the real attraction "Ransom" holds is in the power of the conflict between its two adversaries, Gibson and Gary Sinise ("Forrest Gump").

In a dramatic departure, Sinise pulls off one of the best bad guys in recent memory, completely overshadowing every scene he is in. It can be a huge problem for a movie if the villain is more interesting than the hero (which is certainly true here). Still, once the action gets rolling, "Ransom" falls into no such trouble.

The film is at its best when the focus is on the action and the internal conflicts of the kidnapers, including Sinise and independent film queen Lily Taylor ("I Shot Andy Warhol"). The arguments between Gibson and his wife (Rene Russo, "Lethal Weapon 3") seem obligatory, rather than dramatic. It is the power struggle the kidnapers endure — once Gibson makes his move — that makes the film compelling.

There are a ton of flaws in "Ransom," embodied in laughable clichés and illogical developments. For instance, each time the action switches to where the boy is being held, ominous, urban "bad guy" music plays. This contrasts ridiculously with the serene classical music that is used in the home of the good guys. Also, the filmmakers were wise to dispose quickly of an absolutely unnecessary character played by Donnie Wahlberg from New Kids on the Block.

However, the biggest test for a movie like "Ransom" is whether or not the audience feels like it has been run through the ringer by the time the end credits roll. Rest assured, even the most jaded of filmgoers will suffer attacks of numbness and shortness of breath after viewing "Ransom."

Too bad the first half of the movie isn't worth a penny.

NewsBriefs

'Ransom' drops Shakespeare from box office top slot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The kidnap drama "Ransom" starring Oscar-winner Mel Gibson overwhelmed the competition at the box office, grabbing $35 million in its opening weekend.

It was the best opening for a Gibson film, averaging more than $13,000 per screen — nearly three times the average for the No. 2 film, "William Shakespeare's Romeo & Juliet," according to industry estimates Sunday.

Estimated grosses for Friday through Sunday:

1. "Ransom," $35 million.
2. "William Shakespeare's Romeo & Juliet," $8.8 million.
3. "Set It Off," $8.5 million.
4. "Sleepers," $3.7 million.
5. "High School High," $3.1 million.
6. "The First Wives Club," $2.15 million.
7. "Larger Than Life," $2.1 million.
8. "The Ghost and the Darkness," $1.66 million.
9. "Dear God," $1.46 million.
10. "The Associate," $1.4 million.

'Ship Fever' wins Andrea Barrett National Book Award for Fiction

NEW YORK (AP) — Andrea Barrett's "Ship Fever and Other Stories" a collection that blends science and history, won her the 1996 National Book Award for Fiction on Wednesday.

It was the fifth book written by Barrett, who trained as a zoologist.

"I feel enormously lucky about it. I've had quite a quiet publishing career," said Barrett, of Rochester, N.Y.

James Carroll of Boston won the non-fiction prize for his Vietnam War-era book, "An American Requiem: God, My Father, and the War That Came Between Us." Carroll, whose wife is novelist Alexandra Marshall, also writes a weekly op-ed column in The Boston Globe.

*Offer expires January 13, 1997. No payment of interest or principal will be required for 90 days. Interest accruing during this 90-day period will be added to the principal and will bear interest, which is included in the repayment schedule. For example, the month of October 1996 had an interest rate of 12.15% with an Annual Percentage Rate (APR) of 13.93%. A monthly payment of $12.86 for the term of $250 system is an estimate based on a total loan amount of $1,913.83, which includes a sample purchase price of $1,799 and a 6% loan origination fee. Interest is variable based on the Prime Rate as reported on the 5th business day of the month in The Wall Street Journal, plus a spread of 3.9%. Monthly payment and APR above assumes deferral of principal and does not include state or local sales tax. The Computer Loan has an 8-year loan term with no prepayment penalty and is subject to credit approval. Monthly payments may vary depending on actual computer system prices, total loan amount, and local sales taxes and a change in the monthly variable interest rate. ©1996 Apple Computer, Inc.
