Patrick Stewart warps into a Christmas Carol

The Daily Iowan - Dec 17, 2015

Patrick Stewart discovered the Charles Dickens holiday saga for the first time 25 years ago.

"I was looking for something to do at the holidays," Stewart said. "It was the first Christmas Carol I ever got into." He costarred in the 1994 adaptation of the holiday saga for American National Museum of American History on Friday. The electric guitar became more popular because it was very accessible, Stewart said.

"We had a huge success on Broadway and all around the world," Stewart said. "In 1997, my week on the island was so big that when the guitar was replaced, it was necessary to perform an additional show."

"The new siren sounded as the beat went on. The sound of the guitar was loud and impressive. It blotted out the noise of the ocean, the wind, and the voices of the audience."

Looking to Africa for new direction

It's a fact this weekend that in New York, the word "Africa" seems to be everywhere. A new book, "Africa's Choice," has been released, and a series of events and conferences are underway to address the continent's future. This has brought about a renewed interest in Africa, both within the United States and internationally.

Iowa's Iowa City, which is known for its vibrant arts scene, has also been hosting events related to Africa, including a film festival and a symposium on sustainable development. The city's close ties to Africa, as well as its focus on community engagement, have made it a hub for African culture.

Uncovering military misconduct

The military has long been a source of fascination and controversy. From the Vietnam War to the current conflicts in Afghanistan and Iraq, the military has been at the center of much debate and discussion. In recent years, there have been reports of misconduct and abuse within the military, raising questions about the institution's ability to protect its personnel.

Youthful suicide: a call to action

I'm a 17-year-old who recently attempted suicide. I want to tell you that thinking about suicide is not the same as actually attempting it. It's a feeling that can come over you without warning, but it's important to remember that it's not a permanent solution.

The goal of writing about this is to help others understand that they are not alone and that there is help available. There are resources and support systems in place to help those struggling with mental health issues. It's important to seek help and not be afraid to ask for it.

Try to come together for peace

S EATTLE - I wrapped my arms around the seven-year-old girl who had scored to victory just moments before and said, "You did it! You did it! Now you're the champion!"

I was in a rush to get out of the ring, but she was still clinging to me. "My mom said I could come here and I'll win!"

She was right, of course. My mom had been training her for months, and now she was ready. I couldn't help but feel a sense of pride and excitement as I saw her on the podium, surrounded by the applause of the crowd.

"Thank you, mom," she said, her voice quaking with emotion. "I couldn't have done this without you." And then she kissed me on the cheek.

I was suddenly struck by the beauty of the moment - a moment of triumph and joy, of love and gratitude. And I knew, without a doubt, that this was what it was all about. To come together for peace, to be part of something greater than ourselves.

Recommending restraint as a weapon against STDs

To the Editor:

The following might seem a bit strange to most people, but it is a simple way to prevent the spread of sexually transmitted diseases (STDs).

The national Institute of Child Health and Human Development conducted a study of 10,000 children aged 10 to 14 years old. The study found that a majority of the children had at least one STD.

The researchers recommended that children be taught about the importance of using condoms and other barrier methods to prevent the spread of STDs.

I urge all parents to talk to their children about the importance of using condoms and other barrier methods to prevent the spread of STDs.

Defending the BASMent

To the Editor:

I am writing in the hope to return to the article on the BASMent which appeared in the Nov. 15, 1995, issue of The Daily Iowa.

The BASMent was a white-owned and operated establishment located in Iowa City. When I worked there, I was an integral part of the BASMent and its community.

In my time at the BASMent, I was able to observe firsthand how the BASMent operated and the impact it had on the community.

The BASMent was not only a place for entertainment, but it was also a community hub where people could come together and enjoy each other's company.

I urge all readers to support the BASMent and other establishments like it, as they are crucial to the fabric of our communities.

FAMILY SURVIVES AFRICAN TURMOIL

Paul Amos

BRUSSELS - She's not just learned to walk, and her parents learned to pray for her in her baby blue, but the existing U.N. peacekeeping force in Rwanda isn't the only way they're watching over her.

The family of four-year-old Josiane Uwimana live in a one-room brick house on the edge of the Kigali slum that's become a refugee camp for about 100,000 displaced Rwandans who fled the fighting to the west.

Josiane doesn't speak, but her parents, Jeanne and Pierre, are optimistic about the progress their daughter has made. How her condition continues to improve is largely up to the U.N. peacekeeping force in Rwanda. Streets are blocked and checkpoints are common, but the couple and their four-year-old daughter Josiane, and her mother Jeanne, have faith that the situation will improve.

"I know it's going to be better," Jeanne said. "But for now, we have to wait."

The family was one of many who sought refuge in the slum after their home was burned down during the civil war in Rwanda.

Women in combat suggested as solution

Larry Margoshes

WASHINGTON - After 15 years as an Army officer, West Point's first female graduate and West Point's first female officer to command a combat unit, Lt. Col. Nancy West considers herself a woman who has made a difference for women in military service.

West, speaking with Phoenix for her new book, "Beyond the Wall," said the Army has come a long way since 1995, when she was the first woman to graduate from West Point.

"We've come a long way," West said. "But there's still more work to be done."

West said that the Army needs to do more to support women in the military and that more must be done to address gender-based violence.

"We've made progress," West said. "But we need to keep moving forward."

The Army, however, has been criticized for its handling of sexual assault cases. In 2016, the Defense Department reported that 6,790 women had been raped in the military.

"We need to do better," West said. "We need to support our women and ensure that they feel safe."

Western Illinois kept itself in the game by handing the ball to 13 points. The Hawkeyes shot 56.5 percent from downtown.

The Hawkeyes did shut down Western Illinois' biggest inside threat, 6-4 forward Steve Ford, who finished with only five points and no rebounds. Senior Anthony Jones picked up the slack, scoring 22 points and pulling down 11 rebounds.

The Hawkeyes took only eight points and nine rebounds on the inside.

The Hawkeyes' inside game struggled at times. Guard Steve Fisher shot 6-for-14 and Bryan Brown combined for only 20 points and 13 rebounds. Brown had eight points and eight boards. This was an area that Fisher said needed more work.

"We need to get stronger and work on our rebounding, and I wasn't impressed with our effort on the boards," Fisher said.

Sherman continues success against Gophers

Sherman has thrown a pass that would be considered to light and Chris Keggie in the second quarter Saturday, Sherman completed his first 11 pass attempts in the game and ended up 17-21 for 226 yards, a touchdown, and no interceptions.

"I think we're gelling together a little better," Shaw said. "You can tell in the game, we're getting more time on the field and you have to rely on other people to help you."
Hawkeyes surprise in Minnesota

The Iowa women's swimming team showed the program's life force in Sunday's victory over Minnesota in Minneapolis.

"I am very pleased with the team," Iowa coach Mary Bolich said. "Everyone swam extremely well. We had a lot of individuals who had lifetime bests. This is a very good sign for us to be swimming at this point. We’re doing everything we could be doing right now but getting better as the season progresses."

"This is a very good sign for us to be swimming this fast, at this point in the season because I think we’ll do nothing but get faster as the season progresses."

Mary Bolich, Iowa head women's swimming coach on her team's performance at the Minnesota Invitational.

Host Minnesota captured its own Invitation with 1,248 points. Maverick scored with 966, followed by the Hawkeyes with 953 points.

The 20-10-1996 poster at the University of Iowa described the meet as

"Iowa's Pizza Bowl - Buffalo Pizza, 1000 East Washington, Coralville. Call for complete information. Send order to: Iowa City, IA 52242. All orders payable in Iowa.
