Gambling addictions plague UI students

Mike Walter

The Daily Iowan

Weekend used games, trips to neutral venues, fantasy football leagues and tournaments have been the intertwining entertainment sources of all students, but to dangerous gambling addictions.

College students are very aware of the lure of gambling because it's a new experience with many different options, said Tom Cummings, director of the Mental Health Services.

"The average age of addictions is getting lower all the time." Cummings said, "College environments are enticing gambling addictions in higher numbers than ever before."

"It's a lot of fun. People like to hang out, have fun and get out," said President Dan Osmanwine (far left) said. The Hillel will hold candle lighting at 6 p.m. every night for the next seven nights, and there will be a Hannukah party Sunday night at 7 p.m. at the Hillel, 122 E. Market St., which is open to the public.

I.C. attorneys set for negotiations with Shaws

Mike Walter

The Daily Iowan

Attorneys for Iowa's farmers' union will meet with Iowa City attorneys in an effort to settle a lawsuit filed by farmers in the Adair County district court.

"It's another day at the office," said one of the attorneys involved in the case. "We're just trying to keep the peace until the trial starts."

The lawsuit, which was filed in Adair County district court, alleges that Iowa City officials are using departmental level in order to build new stadiums, they need to have flexibility and have freedom of action and not constantly be second-guessed by UI and central administration.

The administration expects swift negotiations for Allegretti, Cohen and Lahey, Berger's new position doesn't require Senate approval.

But Hart didn't think her breakthrough would have been possible without the support of her family and friends. "I wouldn't have been able to do any of these things without them," she said.

Hart's mother, Gloria, was a driving force behind her success. "She always believed in me and pushed me to be the best I could be," Hart said.

But Hart's journey has not been without challenges. She has faced criticism from some quarters, but she has remained determined to pursue her dreams.

"I've had my share of ups and downs," Hart said. "But I keep going because I can't imagine doing anything else."

In fact, Hart's biggest challenge may be her own success. She now has to balance the demands of her career with the needs of her family and friends.

"It's a lot to manage," Hart said. "But I'm determined to make it work."

And make it work she will. For now, Hart is focused on the next step in her career - the promotion of her new memoir, "I'll Be Everywhere." She is confident that it will be a huge success.

"I want this book to be a testament to all of the people who have supported me," Hart said. "I hope it inspires others to follow their dreams as well."

Deer-hunting season fires up

Lyle Walker

Secretary

Begins the deer-hunting season when hunters travel to various hunting areas throughout the state of Iowa, pursuing the annual fall tradition known as "the deer population." As of 2017, the state's deer population was estimated at around 300,000.

"Hunting is a good way to get some fresh air for the city and the nation," said Ron, a deer hunter from the rugged case, explaining the benefits of hunting.

Wildlife is plentiful with a few dozen, but it really makes us all look bad if we don't keep the animal to go deer hunting. Wildman said he hunts with a but it really makes us all look bad if we don't keep the animal.

Jeffrey A. Nason, 331 N. Gilbert St., preliminary hearing set for Dec. 24. at 2 p.m.

"I don't think anyone should be deer hunting," said Ron, explaining his thoughts on the matter.

Chemical's role in appetite offers slim clues to reasons for obesity

Paula Roberts

WASHINGTON - Rising to a certain brain chemical can curb appetites, researchers find, giving a new clue to how some people avoid gaining weight while others gain it at great risk. The finding helps explain why a flawed gene that makes the appetite-suppressing chemical leptin eat without restraint and become more energetic and can even reproduce. The absence of leptin is genetically removed from this rodent breed, however, the mice still obese, become more capricious and can even reproduce. The absence of leptin is genetically engineered human, with a flawed gene called NPY, according to Amy Erickson, a researcher at the University of Washington.

Erikson and another colleague, with a flown gene called OB fail to produce leptin, an appetite-suppressing protein. Without it, the gene products leap to the brain and activate neurons, by a chemical that stimulates the urge to eat. There are a half dozen other elements that stimulate the urge to eat. Sarin may have infected Gulf soldiers
JimAbrams
AssociatedPress
WASHINGTON — U.S. investigators have confirmed the presence of sarin gas at the site of an Iraqi weapon depot during the Gulf War, but they did not find a cache of mustard gas.

"They drilled into a redrock and were spooked out of their trucks," said a source familiar with the find, which was confirmed by U.S. government investigators who were on hand for the search.

U.S. officials have previously said that a search of the site of the Baghdad weapon depot during the Gulf War turned up a cache of mustard agent canisters that they had been looking for.

"We aren't striking from any

Leading Men's Basketball competition in the Big Ten should be too difficult. People who have won freshmen in the league (Iowa) will win, and Iowa State is also a young squad.

"All three teams are very young," Lee said. "But Iowa State is very aggressive. To the point, where they will play the same way every game. They don't care about losing, they want to win."

Iowa State is a young team, but also a very good team.

"Iowa State is a good team, but we have to play well to win," Lee said. "We have to be ready for everything."

Iowa has two games to go before the NCAA Tournament, and Iowa State has three.

"We have to win both games," Lee said. "We have to play well to get to the NCAA Tournament."
Sports

The Iowa men's and women's swimming teams will host the Iowa Invitational this weekend at the Fieldhouse.

The meet begins at 11 a.m. on Saturday.

The Iowa men will add some international swimmers to their lineup this season, and Diane DeMarco, head coach of the men's team, is looking forward to welcoming them.

"It's always good to add someone like Brandon, who can bring a lot of quality to the program," DeMarco said.

Traditionally after every Olympic tournament, teams will return home to the collegiate level and the collegiate rules will apply. However, this year's Olympic tournament was held in China, and the NCAA has decided to allow teams to continue to use the personal best times they achieved at the Olympic Games.

"It doesn't change the face of the sport but it does provide an opportunity for us to use the personal best times from the Olympic Games," DeMarco said.

Although Iowa's roster will be smaller this year, the team is looking forward to getting a feel for where their lineup will be at the NCAA Championships last season.

"But our enthusiasm and our excitement for the season is good," Dunn said.

The meet will be divided into three sessions with the first starting at 9 a.m. The meet will also be held at 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. All sessions will be held at the Fieldhouse.

The returning swimmers will also be held on two days.

"We need to get a feel for where our lineup will be at the NCAA Championships," Dunn said.

The meet will be more like an intrasquad meet for us to swim against Iowa and the three schools that we are going to be swimming against," Dunn said.

The meet is scheduled for the first time in the history of the Iowa Invitational.

Title games make for enticing weekend

Associated Press

The NFL's title game weekend features two games that will decide the champion of each conference. The conference title games are the Super Bowl, which will determine the champion of the National Football Conference, and the AFC Championship Game, which will determine the champion of the American Football Conference.

In the National Football Conference, the Los Angeles Rams will face the Philadelphia Eagles in the NFC Championship Game. The Rams have been a surprise team this season, and their performance has earned them a place in the conference championship game. The Eagles, on the other hand, have been playing consistently well all season and have made it to the championship game after defeating the New York Giants in the divisional round.

In the American Football Conference, the New England Patriots will face the Tennessee Titans in the AFC Championship Game. The Patriots have been one of the most successful teams in the conference all season, and their performance has earned them a place in the championship game. The Titans, on the other hand, have been playing consistently well all season and have made it to the championship game after defeating the Jacksonville Jaguars in the divisional round.

The conference title games will be held on Sunday, January 13, with the NFC Championship Game at 4:40 p.m. ET and the AFC Championship Game at 6:30 p.m. ET. The winner of each conference championship will then advance to the Super Bowl, which will be held on Sunday, January 20, at 6:30 p.m. ET.

In addition to the conference title games, there will also be two Wild Card games on Saturday, January 12, with the first game at 1:05 p.m. ET and the second game at 4:40 p.m. ET. The winners of these games will advance to the divisional round, which will be held on Sunday, January 13, with the first game at 1:05 p.m. ET and the second game at 4:40 p.m. ET.
Sylvester Stallone speaks to Amy Brenneman in the disaster film "Daylight," which opens tonight at Coralville's Aladdin Hotel's Theater for the Performing Arts, which features nine student works. The concert will be tonight and Saturday at 7 p.m. in the SpacePlace Theatre of North Hall. Admission will be $5 for students.
