Shaws, city reach settlement

Council to hold work session Saturday to review the official ICPD policies

By Charlotte Eby
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa City and the parents of Eric Shaw reached a $1.5 million agreement Thursday in the settlement of a wrongful-death claim the Shaws filed against the city.

Jay and Blossom Shaw had originally asked for $3.6 million.

John McLario, attorney for the Shaws, said he was pleased with the settlement and the process of negotiations with the city.

"There was an effort on the part of all parties to reach a fair and equitable settlement that was within the law," McLario said. The negotiation for a settlement began Jan. 17.

Eric Shaw was shot by then-Iowa City police officer Jeffrey Gillaspie Aug. 30 in his father's business while talking on the phone with a friend. Gillaspie and officers Troy Kelsay and Darren Zacharias were responding to a tip of a possible burglary in the building.

City Councilor Karen Kubby

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White announced Oct. 3 he would not press criminal charges against Gillaspie, but federal charges still could be filed by the U.S. attorney, Don Nickerson. Gillaspie resigned from the force on Oct. 1 after an internal investigation determined Gillaspie had used improper and unjustified force in the shooting.

The Shaws asked originally for $1 million for the loss of their son, $600,000 for Eric's future earnings, $500,000 for Eric Shaw's pain and suffering and $500,000 for their own pain and suffering.

The Shaws wanted also $1 million in punitive damages, or payment for wrongdoing or negligence on the part of the city, but the settlement reached does not include an award of punitive damages to the Shaws.

The officers involved in the case and Iowa City Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake were freed from any future claims. So were Iowa City Mayor Naomi Novick, the City Council and City Manager Steve Atkins.

Novick said she was satisfied with the settlement.

"I don't feel unhappy about it. I think we're all really relieved," Novick said.

City Councilor Karen Kubby, who has been critical of the handling of the case, said the council is by no means finished considering the

"I know some people may think this is an ending point. I think the settlement is one of the many pieces of things we need to do to find justice."

New mall may feature The Gap

By Renee Bovy
 The Daily Iowan

If preliminary plans between Coral Ridge Mall and The Gap and Eddie Bauer go through, UI students won't have to drive for miles and miles to shop 'til they drop at two of their favorite stores.

Debbie Gardner, corporate communications specialist for The Gap, confirmed the store will be part of the new mall but said no specific plans have yet been made for the new store.

Karen Peck, corporate spokesperson for the Eddie Bauer chain said the store has had contact with the Coral Ridge Mall, but their plans currently are in the preliminary stages and no commitments with the mall have yet been made.

Eddie Bauer opens between 75 to 100 stores each year. After the company has finished planning the 1997 stores, they will concentrate on stores for 1998, Peck said.

'Star Wars' ignites memories

By Kevin Doyle
 The Daily Iowan

Today's opening of "Star Wars: Special Edition" has reminded UI students of the days when light saber fights and Princess Leia's tacky hair buns were the most complicated part of their lives.

Most of the UI undergraduate population was in elementary school during the height of "Star Wars" popularity and the adventures of Luke, Leia and Darth are deeply connected to the student imagination.

UI sophomore Tucker Remley said the movie hype has reminded him of the time he and his friends wanted to make their Millennium Falcon fly. They put Luke Skywalker, Han Solo and Chewbacca inside the craft and threw it off a balcony to see what would happen.

"It broke," Remley said. "And we couldn't fix it."

UI freshman Nate Birnbaum said the anticipation of the movie has made him think back to when he was younger.

"Me and my friends would always try to outdo each other by buying as many figurines as we could," Birnbaum said. "I'm excited about going to see the movie with my friends."

Iowa City resident Paul Scholten, whose favorite character is Boba Fett "because he looks cool," said "Star Wars" was the center of his childhood fantasy life.

"When I was younger I use to play 'Star Wars' with four of my friends," Scholten said. "One of the three was a girl who didn't want to play the role of Princess Leia because she was bigger than I was. She wanted to be Luke Skywalker. When 'Return of the Jedi' came out,

UI senior Adam Mix, an employee of Daydreams, puts the finish touches on a window display Thursday night. "A lot of people are really excited," Mix said. "By the time 'Return of the Jedi' comes out, our 'Star Wars' sales will increase quite a bit."

"When I was younger I use to play 'Star Wars' with four of my friends. One of the three was a girl who didn't want to play the role of Princess Leia because she was bigger than I was. She wanted to be Luke Skywalker. When 'Return of the Jedi' came out, I was bigger than her, so playing Luke wasn't a problem anymore."

I was bigger than her, so playing Luke wasn't a problem anymore."

But for some, getting older has not meant packing away their X-wing fighters.

UI sophomore Sarah Anderson, who loved to play with her very own Ewok village as she wore her Princess Leia wig, said her friend still hasn't let go of the past.

"A friend of mine is in love with Luke Skywalker," Anderson said. "She's planning on getting Iowa license plates that spell L-U-K-E."

UI freshman Thomas Chiesa said the new release will provide today's youth with the same big-screen excitement he experienced.

"I was a fanatic about 'Star Wars' when I was younger, but now I just watch it for fun," Chiesa said. "It's great for kids who were not around when the movie first came out to get an up-close view of a great flick."

Even though there's a lot of hoopla going on about the new release of "Star Wars," UI freshman Liz Langley didn't even know the movie was coming out.

"I never liked 'Stars Wars,'" she said. "Some of my friends dressed up as Princess Leia for Halloween, my dad owns the 'Stars Wars' trilogy and my sister had the 'Star Wars' shampoo bottles, but I just never got into it."

Paul Tobin, manager of Daydreams, 114 E. College St., said business has been slowly building in the last week due to the release of "Star Wars" returning to the big screen.

"Star Wars: Special Edition" opens today at the Campus Theatre in Old Capitol Mall.

Former employee sues UI over firing

By Charlotte Eby
 The Daily Iowan

A former UI employee is suing the UI for what she sees as an unfair termination because of a disability.

Iowa City resident Margaret White's lawsuit claims she was wrongfully terminated in December 1995 when she worked as a food-service coordinator for the Iowa Memorial Union Food Service and Catering Department.

White is claiming she was fired solely because of a disability she had at the time of her termination. White had been working at the Union since July 1995.

UI general counsel Mark Schantz said he had not yet reviewed the claim but the employee was not fired.

"This was an employee who was on probationary status and simply not renewed," Schantz said.

Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes also declined comment on the case, because the UI has not yet been told what the allegations are. Rhodes said the UI rarely is sued.

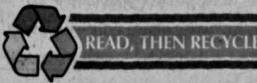

White, who is asking for lost wages, damages and for attorney fees from the UI, declined to comment on the lawsuit.

Hunt for apartments makes students frantic

As fluorescent flyers urging tenants to sign on or ship out appear on apartment doors, UI students are stressing about finding the perfect place to live.

By Lydia Livvendahl
 The Daily Iowan

When UI junior Jody Dexter visited a local rental agency to sign a lease last February, she was nearly trampled by the herd of students vying for a place in the complex world of Iowa City apartments.

"It was horrible," Dexter said. "People were stressed out because they all wanted to sign for apartments at the same time."

Many apartment rental agencies will sign tenants for next fall in the coming weeks, leaving many UI students strapped for time in their search for the perfect place to live.

UI alumnus Josh Miller said he remembers his first experience looking for apartments as a real learning experience.

"I thought that I was so prepared, I knew where I wanted to go, the budget that I had and who my roommates were," he said.

In spite of this preparation, his first signing with AUR's Pentacrest

Pianist Van Cliburn will mark raceway's grand opening

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It's going to be quite a mix: classic pianist Van Cliburn performing the national anthem for 200,000 auto racing fans at the new Texas Motor Speedway.

City Councilor Jim Lane, chairperson of the Fort Worth Sports Authority, which owns the speedway, said Wednesday that Cliburn will be there for the $110 million track's April 6 grand opening.

"I think it would be a great compliment to Fort Worth and the speedway," Mayor Kenneth Barr said. "He is certainly one of our most distinguished citizens, and we're glad he makes Fort Worth his home."

It wouldn't be Cliburn's first venture into the world of sports.

In 1994, he and the Fort Worth Symphony performed the national anthem at the opening of The Ballpark in Arlington.

Ray Bradbury feels Internet can't replace books

CUPERTINO, Calif. (AP) — Ray Bradbury has a few words of advice about the Internet: "Stay away from it."

The increasingly popular global computer network is great for some practical things, such as finding information, he said. But it can't offer the intimate and esthetic experience of books.

"You've got to be able to take a book to bed with you," he told a Silicon Valley audience Wednesday. "You can't get that on the Internet. You can't hold the Internet."

Bradbury

The science-fiction writer, best known for his novel "The Martian Chronicles," spoke to about 1,200 people in an appearance to benefit the Tech Museum of Innovation in San Jose. The audience applauded Bradbury's remarks about the Internet, including his barb about the Internet's ability to let people in different parts of the world communicate.

AIDS researcher finds prominence after being named Man of the Year

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — David Ho, the pioneering AIDS researcher Time magazine named 1996 Man of the Year, is finding out what a big-time cover story can do for the reception you get from your native land.

When Ho last visited Taiwan, just before the Time announcement on Dec. 21, a lecture he gave drew few attendees and no media coverage. This time, dozens of reporters and camera crews covered his arrival and the government's Overseas Chinese Affairs Commission awarded Ho a medal of achievement.

Fashion designer sues alleged stalker

PARIS (AP) — Fashion designer Paco Rabanne has taken a woman to court for allegedly stalking and insulting him for nearly four years.

Josiane Pasquier, described in French news media as a bourgeois 50-year-old divorcee who lives outside Paris, went on trial this week for "acts of violence and premeditation."

Rabanne — the 62-year-old Spanish Basque-born couturier known for his designs of everything from chain-metal and shiny futuristic clothes to easy knit tunics — dismisses her as a disturbed person.

Verdict still out in Simpson lawsuit

By Linda Deutsch Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Seemingly intent on doing their own scientific sleuthing, the jurors deliberating in the O.J. Simpson case Thursday asked to see DNA test strips, photos and videotapes focusing on whether blood could have been planted or contaminated.

The jury, which quit for the night after its third day of deliberations, appeared relaxed and cheerful when they came into court to watch video of police activity around the crime scene.

Two of the videotapes showed criminalist Dennis Fung and his assistant Andrea Mazzola handling critical pieces of evidence — Simpson's blood sample and a bag containing a bloody glove found behind Simpson's estate.

One video was notable for its absence of evidence — a scene shot in Simpson's bedroom. Police said they found bloody socks at the foot of the bed, but the tape showed no sign of such socks. Defense lawyers say that is proof the socks were planted.

Another shot showed Detective Philip Vannatter striding into Simpson's front door with an envelope in one hand and a duffel bag in the other. Vannatter has said the envelope contained Simpson's blood sample. His admission that he carried the blood vial around in an unsealed envelope is cited by the defense as proof the blood could have been used for planting.

The jury's appearance in the courtroom drew an instant audience of media and spectators who had been waiting nearby for any word that a verdict might be near.

Attorneys also rushed to the courtroom, but the jury requests appeared to leave them puzzled. They left court shrugging and declined to interpret the developments.

Earlier, the jurors asked for photo boards illustrating several key pieces of evidence, including the rear gate and walkway at Nicole Brown Simpson's condominium, the grounds at Simpson's estate where a bloody glove was found and the interior of Simpson's Bronco.

Simpson

They asked also to see DNA test strips used by the state crime lab to analyze specific blood drops, among them a single drop lifted from the back gate of Brown Simpson's condo. The drop contained Simpson's DNA type.

Using specific exhibit numbers, the jury wanted to know "development times" on some of the DNA tests.

The only piece of testimony jurors asked to hear again was from state crime lab biochemist Gary Sims on the subject of cross-hybridization of DNA samples during testing.

The jurors' note asking for Sims' testimony specified they were interested in "contamination."

Before the open court session, jurors had asked for video and audio tape players in the jury room so they could do their own reruns. But the judge refused. They were told only certain segments of tape were in evidence and they would have to request a formal rerun in court.

During the videotape showing of Simpson's bedroom — which jurors watched twice in slow motion — three jurors took active notes and seemed to be looking at each other as if confirming something.

At one point, the judge stopped the video show and summoned lawyers to his bench for a brief conference. While they had their backs turned, a number of the jurors began whispering to each other as if discussing what they had just seen.

A court bailiff quickly told them to stop talking and save their remarks for the deliberation room.

The slew of requests began shortly after the AP confirmed the jurors had chosen as their foreman the most meticulous note taker among them, a policeman's son who said during jury selection he admired Simpson but believed he was probably guilty at his murder trial.

The man, in his late 50s or early 60s with a white handlebar mustache and beard, has a background working with technical information and is believed to have retired from a corporate job to do consulting.

The foreman paid close attention when evidence was passed around for inspection during the trial and was the only juror who tried on both of the alleged murder gloves when they were handed to him for inspection.

The seven-woman, five-man panel consists of nine whites, one black, one Hispanic and one person of black and Asian ancestry.

On Wednesday, the panel asked for a special magnifying glass often used to examine photographs. They asked also to see a picture of a purple-topped test tube like the one used to store Simpson's blood sample.

Ever since Simpson was arrested on charges of murdering Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman, controversy has swirled around the Los Angeles Police Department's handling of evidence. Simpson's acquittal 16 months ago came after a high-powered defense team, including DNA experts, argued he was the victim of police corruption, contamination and conspiracy.

Relatives of Brown Simpson and Goldman are now suing Simpson for wrongful death, claiming the football great should be held responsible for the June 12, 1994, killings.

Child poets grace Capitol subway

By Carl Hartman Associated Press

WASHINGTON — At age 6, Malik Waleed is a published poet, not in those little magazines nobody buys, but where his work can be seen by some of the most influential people in this city — on the walls of the subway station near the Capitol.

He is one of 15 children in city public schools whose work is being displayed in 10 subway stations as a way to promote reading.

Curly headed under his baseball cap, wearing a nubby sweater, jeans and new black boots, Malik took part in his first-ever poetry reading this week at the Library of Congress — after a little difficulty finding him something to stand on to bring him up to the microphone's level.

"Fear is like underpants that are too tight," he read.

"You can't get in them. Green underpants outside you don't like to wear ... Make fear go away. Loosen up."

Afterward, Malik — reticent like other poets who want their work to speak for itself — wouldn't say what he was afraid of when he wrote the poem.

There was a hint, though, in the title of another poem he had written: "Falling Out of a Tree."

No, he hadn't ever fallen out of a tree, never even climbed one and wasn't sure he wanted to. He said he does like to play games, though — baseball, basketball and tennis. He's pretty good, too, volunteered his proud father.

Malik writes his poems on a computer keyboard, said Doris Noble, who teaches computers from kindergarten to fifth grade at Bancroft Elementary School, where he's in first grade.

"We do a lot of word processing," she explained. And Malik has also a computer at home.

There were somewhat older poets at the reading, too, like 13-year-old

Brian Diggs/Associated Press

Malik Waleed poses next to one of his poems posted at the Woodley Park Metro station in Washington, D.C., Wednesday. Waleed, 6, is one of 15 "poster poets" from various Washington public schools whose work can be seen and may be read by some of the most influential people in the Capitol, on the walls of subway stations.

Natasha Simmons, now at Lincoln Middle School. She celebrated the season with:

"I am running into a new year I let the old years twirl back Like a whirlpool."

And Chela Robinson, a sixth-grader at Oyster Elementary School, who has some of the worries of her elders:

"I am a heart that is broken but glued together by my heart-breakers I am a snake crawling and searching through my soul."

The poetry program began in 1994 as a way to encourage literacy and promote reading. Poems previously have appeared on ad panels on Washington buses, but this is the first time they have been displayed in the Metro.

The project is sponsored by the Library of Congress' Center for the Book, the Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, the D.C. Commission on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Five 11-year-olds at Garrison Elementary School — four with Hispanic backgrounds and a fifth with ancestry from the Indian subcontinent — joined in a team project. They wrote the same poem — "At Night" — in both English and Spanish:

"Outside at night Big trees standing still With red, orange and yellow leaves ...

Different colored leaves, Different colored people."

All the poetry had one youthful, up-to-date feature: None of the poets made a try at old-fashioned rhyming.

Movie filmed in Iowa previews Saturday

By Will Valet
The Daily Iowan

Several UI students and staff will see the fruits of their summer-long labor when the Iowa-filmed thriller "Mommy II: Mommy's Day" makes its UI premiere this Saturday.

"Mommy II" was filmed last summer, primarily in Muscatine, but also on the UI campus. The film was written and directed by Muscatine native Max Allan Collins.

UI junior Todd Shoemaker worked as a production assistant on the film and had a walk-on bit part as — what else — a production assistant.

"I'll be interested to see if I got left on the cutting-room floor," he said. "At least with every scene, I'll be able to remember where I was and what I contributed to it. I'll be able to say, 'Yeah, I hung those lights over the ice rink.'"

UI junior Sara Ricketts worked on the film as a production assistant for three weeks. She said she also will be watching for signs of her work.

"I can't wait to see it," she said. "I got a lot of knowledge (on the shoot) of what the film industry is like."

"Mommy II" is a campy suspense picture starring Patty McCormack, of "Bad Seed" fame, as a mommy gone wrong. The premiere is being sponsored by the Friends of UI Libraries, and some proceeds will go toward collections and services for the libraries. Prices for the premiere will be $5 for UI students, who must bring a current student ID, and $25 for other audience members.

The screening will start at 7:30 p.m. at Shambaugh Auditorium, and a Q&A session with Collins and actors McCormack, Rachel Lemieux, Mickey Spillane, Gary Sandy and UI graduate Arlen Dean Snyder will follow. Non-student audience members will join a reception after the screening.

Collins said students who are interested in seeing local talent at work should attend the screening.

"I think there's the belief among film students that you have to leave to find talented people to work with," he said. "But I stayed around here and did OK. There's the thought that local people can only work on academic productions. I think it's good to see something that people you know worked on that's a big, mainstream picture."

Steve Henke, post-production coordinator for the UI Video Center, worked as first assistant director on "Mommy II." He said the atmosphere of this film is much calmer than other productions on which he has worked.

"Most feature pictures have a hierarchical structure," he said. "We dispense with all that B.S. It's a real family atmosphere. We all feel we're there to contribute."

Henke said the process of development of Collins' low-budget films are reversed from the normal process of Hollywood features.

"Before (Collins) approaches a screenplay, he finds locations and then writes around them," he said.

"We had several sets located in one building. Being able to keep that kind of proximity is a really helpful thing for filmmakers."

A student-only preview originally was planned for 4 p.m. Saturday but has been canceled. Tickets for the 7:00 p.m. screening will be available at the door. Seats can be reserved by calling the UI library administration office at 335-5867.

Government leaders waver over tax cuts

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Republican legislative leaders opened private bargaining Thursday about how much they will cut taxes.

They were not expecting quick agreement. "Our comfort level is not there yet," Senate Majority Leader Stewart Iversen, R-Dows, said. "We have not looked at economic impacts."

"We have not looked at a lot of things. We have to spend some time doing that, and it's going to take some time."

At a news conference, GOP legislative leaders said they would meet privately Thursday in what is certain to be the first of several closed-door meetings to come up with an income tax cut package they want to have as the centerpiece of this year's session.

The talks are complex, with hundreds of millions of dollars at stake.

Gov. Terry Branstad has proposed a 10-percent across-the-board cut in income taxes, a reduction that would cost the state about $200 million.

Just this week, supply-side conservatives who dominate in the House upped that ante, saying they will push a cut of at least 15 percent and hadn't ruled out a 20-percent cut.

A 15-percent income tax cut would cost the state about $310 million.

While Republicans also control the Senate, leaders in that chamber have moved much more cautiously on income tax cuts.

Iversen said much more study is needed before Senate Republicans will be ready to approve a tax cut.

"Our comfort level is not there," Iversen said. "We're still some time away from that."

The one thing that seems certain is Republicans will push for an across-the-board income tax cut. Democrats said they favor income tax reductions as well but want to target the middle class.

In the House, Republicans rejected that as "class warfare" and said they will push for across-the-board cuts.

Though Senate Republicans have declined to take a position on the size of the income tax cut, there have been few suggestions of a targeted cut.

Iversen said there had been few discussions among Senate Republicans about the issue, and he declined to give his personal view.

"I am very much a numbers person," Iversen said. "I want to look at the numbers."

The two sides have agreed on at least one important assumption when calculating how much a tax cut will cost.

House Speaker Ron Corbett, R-Cedar Rapids, said Republicans should use a "dynamic model" when calculating the cost. In essence, that means lawmakers would consider how much a big tax cut would stimulate the economy in deciding how much it would cost. Iversen agreed with that.

"We will come to a resolution," Iversen said. "We will eventually get this worked out, but it won't be tomorrow."

"We will have a broad general agreement before we move it," House Majority Leader Brent Siegrist, R-Council Bluffs, said.

Whiting testifies she hit foster child to stop crying

By Charlotte Eby
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City woman on trial for killing her 6-month-old foster child testified Thursday that she dealt the blows that killed the baby after she couldn't stop the baby from crying.

Jury members listened as Velma Whiting, 42, accounted for the numerous injuries found on the child, Shauna Patrick, by the state medical examiner. These injuries included bruises on her head, a fractured leg and the abdominal injuries that killed her.

Whiting said a lamp fell on the baby when she tried to move the table the lamp was sitting on.

The defendant also testified that marks found on the child were from where she had "nibbled" Shauna while trying to comfort her.

But Whiting admitted the fatal abdominal injuries were from striking the child.

"I hit her twice and I was just so sorry I did," Whiting said as she sobbed.

Whiting said she was frustrated with the child's constant crying when she hit her.

"I just did it before I even knew it," Whiting said.

But under cross-examination, Whiting said she could not explain fractures in the baby's leg and had not taken Shauna to the doctor when the baby's leg was swollen.

On May 29, 1996, Whiting called police when the child experienced difficulty breathing. She called 911 later that evening and Shauna was taken to Mercy Hospital, 500 E. Market St., where she was pronounced dead.

The defense rested its case after Whiting's testimony. Whiting was the only witness called by the defense.

Attorneys wrapped up closing arguments Thursday.

Legislators hope to avoid controversy over Iowa's ERA

By Mary Neubaur
Associated Press

DES MOINES — This time around, Equal Rights Amendment supporters hope there won't be much controversy.

The proposal for an amendment to the Iowa Constitution has been shortened to just two words — "and women." Supporters say that change should eliminate the concerns activists had in 1992.

"It's not the words 'and women' that have been the problem. It's the rest of the language that was put in," Senate Majority Leader Stewart Iversen said Thursday. "I think there were many groups that actively worked against the ERA in the past simply because it was expanded way beyond what it is today."

"This is the simplest solution and the simplest answer to that problem. And I think it stands a much, much better chance of passing."

Iversen, R-Dows, and other senators voted unanimously Thursday for the ERA proposal. The House had voted unanimously for it Tuesday. The Legislature already had approved the proposal in 1995, so Thursday's vote sends the ERA to the general election ballot next year.

Iowa voters have twice rejected ERA proposals, in 1980 and 1992. Those amendments were more complicated than this year's proposal and got bogged down in disputes over abortion and gay rights.

Beth Wessel-Kroeschell, who runs an in-home desktop publishing business in Ames, organized the Story County ERA effort in 1992. She said she doesn't think this year's proposal will cause the controversy of past years, so there doesn't need to be a high-stakes campaign for it.

However, Wessel-Kroeschell said she hopes someone organizes an informational campaign to allay fears that may have been stirred up by past arguments.

"Just because it passed so overwhelmingly in the House and Senate, there are groups in Iowa that will never see that," she said. "They could have the same assumptions as last time."

Wessel-Kroeschell said she'll be an ERA advocate again this time, stressing that the proposal has no hidden agenda.

She said she wants women in Iowa to have constitutional rights, not "legislative rights" that could be changed by the Legislature at any time.

"I think the most important thing to me is that I'm not included in the constitution and neither is my daughter," she said.

In 1992, Gov. Terry Branstad didn't take a position on the ERA. He says he'll support it this time.

Nearly every newspaper in the state endorsed the ERA five years ago, along with labor, business and church groups and three cities — Coralville, Iowa City and Cedar Falls.

Coming to terms with sexual assault

The sensation of waking up from a drunken stupor with my shorts around my ankles and a man pinning me to the bed is not an experience I would ever like to relive. Fortunately I was not raped, as my friend walked in the room at that moment, but I have carried that night around with me for more than a year and a half now.

It took me a full week after that night to find all the pieces of the puzzle, and I'm still trying to put them all in place. Essentially, I went to a party at a friend's apartment and got extremely drunk. Before I passed out, I was flirting with a man at the party. Shortly thereafter, I passed out and my friend, looking out for me, put me in his bedroom. The next thing I remember, I woke up and the man I was flirting with was trying to have sex with me.

I am lucky; so many others have been raped when there was no friend who walked in to check on them.

When I heard about the recent police report of an alleged drugging and rape, all the feelings and emotions I've kept inside for so long finally found a voice. The sexual assaults reported last semester that were viewed by the community as clear crimes were frightening, but they didn't represent my situation. I was drunk and taken advantage of in my incoherent state, but not attacked. In the minds of too many, that is my problem, not a crime. Anger, hate, confusion and fear were all emotions I have worked through since that July evening in 1995. But the one emotion that prevented me from pressing charges, or even admitting to myself what occurred, was shame.

Shame and embarrassment are powerful emotions that can make a person feel guilty for the choice someone else makes. Our society has rules — any girl who gets drunk, and then ends up getting fucked, had it coming to her, anyway. At one point in my life, because of the guilt I was feeling, I would have agreed with that. But it's NOT true. No one deserves to be raped or assaulted simply because they had too much to drink.

I never pressed charges against him, although I could have. Or, better said, I should have. By letting him get away with assaulting me, I basically told myself I was not worth the effort. That, in some bizarre way, I really did deserve to be sexually assaulted, and should have been raped. For a long time, that's how I felt and what I thought. But then I asked myself, is anyone so worthless they deserve to be raped? No.

I understand why many sexual assaults go unreported. The shame placed upon women or men who get taken advantage of in a drug- or alcohol-induced state is hard to deal with, so many choose to just stay silent. I have kept quiet for a year and a half; it's time to do something about it.

I feel so much anger toward myself now. I carried these emotions like baggage that weighed down my personal, social and emotional life. I needed to come to terms with the idea that it was NOT MY FAULT. Even though I was flirting with him, my getting drunk was not an invitation for sex. I am angry that I have let this incident rule my life, that I did not do something to help myself, that I did not confront my feelings before now.

The sad thing is these incidents will continue to go on until enough people take charge of their lives and stand up against the stigmas. There is no reason anyone should feel guilty or ashamed for reporting an assault against their own body, including myself. Just because I was so drunk that I couldn't make the decision to have sex for myself does not mean anyone should make that decision for me.

Even though it has taken a while for me to come to terms with the assault, I finally have. I have found my emotional release through sharing my story and working through my feelings with others. A year and a half after the assault, I'm still fitting the pieces of my life together. But I like the image I see.

UI board plans needs reform

Many student diners are frustrated with the lack of day-to-day flexibility offered in current residence-hall meal plans. Students may choose between full board, lunch and dinner or breakfast and dinner seven days a week. Contracts available Monday through Friday include full board, lunch and dinner, breakfast and dinner, breakfast and lunch or dinner, lunch and breakfast.

Problems arise when students try to plan around their varying daily schedules. For example, a typical student might have conflicts with breakfast on Mondays and then with lunch on Tuesdays. That student would have to choose full board, paying for meals they can never eat or a plan that doesn't include any breakfasts or lunches at all.

UI Food Service has tried to work around these obstacles with longer serving hours and sack lunches. But breakfast at 6:45 a.m. is just not realistic for most students, and a person can only consume so many turkey sandwiches and warm orange drink.

The best, most effective solution is to create new board plans.

Responding to students, the University of Northern Iowa established a better system, which increases flexibility without drastically increasing prices, said Mona Milius, associate director of residence at UNI.

UNI now offers board plans allowing students to choose 20, 14, 10, seven or five meals per week. UNI also offers lunch or breakfast options for Monday through Friday or Monday through Sunday.

UNI now offers board plans allowing students to choose 20, 14, 10, seven or five meals per week. UNI also offers lunch or breakfast options for Monday through Friday or Monday through Sunday. Under these plans, students are able to choose meals throughout the week that fit into their changing schedules. They eat the meals they pay for at their convenience.

Milius said they anticipated higher food prices because students could eat more of their allotted meals, but UNI rates remain surprisingly similar to those here at the UI. For example, UNI's full board (20 meals per week) plan is $885.50 per semester. The same meals at UI cost $870.50 per semester. Similarly, at UNI a breakfast or lunch option for five days a week is $310 per semester. We are offered five days of lunch for $383.50 or five days of breakfast for $226 per semester. Clearly, a price increase should not be a major concern.

When asked about the possibility of changing to model UNI's system, Steve Bowers, Food Service director for UI Residence Services, said he was open to the suggestion, but he is "not convinced it is a benefit."

Clearly, increased flexibility would benefit all students. In order to convince Bowers and others of the importance of these changes in board plans, students must speak up. Answer dining-room surveys carefully. (Bowers insists they are used.) Call a Food Service office. Write a letter.

If you make your voice heard, you may never again have to drink warm orange concentrate on Tuesdays or pay for the breakfasts you can never make it to on Mondays.

Danger lurks at local bars

Recently, the Iowa City City Council has raised concerns about the safety of One Eyed Jake's, a local club, citing there were not enough emergency exits.

While that is an extremely valid point, there are other, more widespread problems people should be concerned about when it comes to going out to nightclubs that the City Council can't control.

For instance, when people go to the bar portion of a club and buy a bottle of beer or alcohol, they take them out to the dance floor and dance with them in their hands. This wouldn't be so bad, but after they are done with them, a lot of the time the bottles get left out in the middle of the dance floor for people to trip over. This is especially hazardous when the bottles break — someone could step on the broken shards of glass. This is a lawsuit waiting to happen.

For drinkers in Iowa City, it is simply a matter of knowing the scene and sticking to the better nightclubs, or the clubs they deem the safest and most law-abiding.

Another major problem is underage drinking. If you look at the DI's police reports on a daily basis, you will see just how many charges of possession of alcohol under the legal age at an establishment there are every day. For every person who is caught, there are countless others who weren't.

Not all drinking establishments are like that, though. Many places have strict rules they stand by. Others do not. For drinkers in Iowa City, it is simply a matter of knowing the scene and sticking to the better nightclubs, or the clubs they deem the safest and most law-abiding.

So, even with the understandable concerns the Iowa City City Council has with safety exits, there are still many other things that have to be corrected from within the nightclubs around Iowa City. It is a tough thing to do. For the dance-floor drinking, making a rule to not let people with bottles into that area of the club would be a starting point. For the underage drinking, having an honest bouncer and/or manager who has experience with detecting fake IDs could make all the difference.

Gingrich's ethics charges: Is the pot calling the kettle black?

In the last two weeks, Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, has received an enormous amount of liberal accolades, some on this very page, for his vote against Newt Gingrich for House speaker. While I admire Leach a great deal, I think he made the wrong decision in this instance. There are good reasons why the right decision was to vote for Gingrich.

First, for Gingrich to abdicate the speakership would be a case of the punishment not fitting the crime. His ethics violations were minor, and it's not entirely clear that he intended to do anything wrong.

Second, the assault on the speaker does not seem entirely honest, it being undertaken primarily by people who supported Bill Clinton last November. Clinton is being sued for sexual harassment, and may be indicted by special prosecutor Kenneth Starr for perjury in connection with the Whitewater affair. In addition, his administration has had many ethical problems with Indogate, Travelgate, Filegate — one doesn't see this many gates around a stable. This surely does not absolve Gingrich, but why should Gingrich step down at the behest of those who circled the wagons around Clinton last November? Republicans are being judged by one standard while Democrats are being judged by a far looser one.

The dishonesty in the assault is perhaps best evident in the action by the ranking Democrat on the House Ethics Committee, Jim McDermott. When it became clear that Gingrich was likely to remain speaker, McDermott released an illegally taped conversation of Gingrich and other Republican leaders to The New York Times in a last-ditch attempt to depose Gingrich. The tape purportedly showed Gingrich violating his agreement he made with the Ethics Committee to not discuss how to discredit the ethics investigation. However, it backfired on McDermott, as it became obvious that he was involved in a felony.

Why would someone engage in a felony to get someone else on minor ethics charges? It seems McDermott, Minority Whip David Bonior and others are obsessed with deposing Gingrich. The reasons for their obsession also are reasons why House Republicans made the right decision to support Gingrich as speaker. Gingrich is an effective political strategist. Thanks in part to his strategy in 1994, the Contract With America, the Republicans became the majority party in the House for the first time in 40 years. Under his leadership in 1996 they retained the House for the first time in more than 60 years. If Republicans are to make gains in the House in 1998, then they will do well to keep Gingrich as speaker.

Gingrich is also one of the few politicians in Washington who has a well-articulated vision of where he wants to take the country, as is evident in the legislative agenda he led through the House and in his book, "To Renew America." It is a crucial time to have a conservative visionary as speaker. Liberalism currently seems to be in retreat and conservatism continues to gain ground. Yet, it is unclear what the next few years of the Clinton administration will bring. If the first two years of the Clinton presidency are any indication, then years five and six will see another liberal legislative assault. Gingrich has shown he is a leader who can effectively stave it off. To abandon him could be disastrous.

I honestly wish Leach had supported Gingrich. Leach may receive accolades from the liberals in his district, but so what? They probably voted for Bob Rush last time and will probably vote for Leach's opponent next time. Indeed, they are less concerned with Gingrich's ethics as they are concerned Gingrich represents what they so fear and loathe: an effective conservative leader.

Economic impact

A world population of 5.5 billion is projected to reach 9 billion by the year 2050. The world's most developed nations have the highest per capita income, but the lowest birth rates. Developing nations have the lowest per capita income, but the highest birth rates.

Despite the immense resources of Africa, the continent is still one of the poorest in the world. The list of nations in Africa is long, and the resources are being depleted. The nations in Africa are struggling to develop their economies and improve the lives of their people.

Can Africa be a model for the rest of the world? The answer lies in the integration of Africa. It is not enough to have a few wealthy nations in Africa. The entire continent must be developed and integrated into the world economy.

The integration of Africa is a complex task. It requires the cooperation of all nations in Africa. The nations in Africa must work together to improve their economies and to provide for the needs of their people.

The integration of Africa is a long-term goal. It will take many years to achieve. However, it is a goal that is worth pursuing. The nations in Africa have the potential to become a major force in the world economy.

The integration of Africa is a challenge, but it is a challenge that is worth facing. The nations in Africa have the resources and the potential to succeed. It is up to them to make the most of their opportunities.

The integration of Africa is a process that is ongoing. It is a process that will continue for many years to come. The nations in Africa must remain committed to their goal of integration and to the improvement of their economies and the lives of their people.

The integration of Africa is a vision that is worth striving for. It is a vision of a world where all nations are equal and where all people have the opportunity to live a better life. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this vision a reality.

The integration of Africa is a dream that is worth pursuing. It is a dream that will inspire the nations in Africa to work together and to overcome their challenges. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this dream a reality.

The integration of Africa is a goal that is worth striving for. It is a goal that will bring peace and prosperity to the entire continent. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this goal a reality.

The integration of Africa is a mission that is worth pursuing. It is a mission that will change the world. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this mission a reality.

The integration of Africa is a journey that is worth embarking on. It is a journey that will lead to a better future for all. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this journey a reality.

The integration of Africa is a path that is worth following. It is a path that will lead to a brighter future. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this path a reality.

The integration of Africa is a quest that is worth pursuing. It is a quest that will lead to a new world. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this quest a reality.

The integration of Africa is a search that is worth pursuing. It is a search that will lead to a better world. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this search a reality.

The integration of Africa is a journey that is worth pursuing. It is a journey that will lead to a new era. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this journey a reality.

The integration of Africa is a quest that is worth pursuing. It is a quest that will lead to a new dawn. The nations in Africa have the potential to make this quest a reality.

Viewpoints

Economic unity in Africa would mean improvement in all of its countries

Africa is by far very rich in terms of natural resources. Africa is capable of feeding itself and a large portion of the world population if all its potentials are exploited. Its mineral reserves are inexhaustible, some of which have not even been tapped.

Despite these generous and immense resources, the people of Africa are by and large some of the world's most poor. Headlines both in the print and electronic media are full of stories about famine in Somalia, Ethiopia, Rwanda and Zaire. The list is long. All present indicators show there is not a single nation in Africa that is economically secure and able to develop its own resources individually to achieve an all-around sustainable economic development. This is evident by the over-reliance on foreign investments and aid in all African nations. In a way, this has also influenced the political and social structures of the entire African continent.

Can Africa get itself out of this situation? The answer is yes, it can. The answer lies in unity and economic integration of the different regions of Africa. It is only in this unity that the scanty capital resources in these nations can be aggregated to form a continental fund that could be used to finance viable investments. It also will allow these countries to take advantage of economies of scale and facilitate a more efficient division of labor.

An integrated continental market would attract foreign investors on a plain field rather than the current situation, characterized by manipulation and arm twisting. This economic unity also would enhance the bargaining power of the producers in Africa, especially those involved in the agricultural sectors.

The integration of the African economies also would facilitate rational development of a continental transport and communication systems specifically tailored to serve intra-African trade while not ignoring the rest of the world, since Africa cannot live in isolation. In the past, all African trade has been directed toward the developed nations, with minimal regard for the local interchange. This has led to a situation where Africa has become the leading producer of coffee, cocoa and tea, of which it consumes negligible amount, with the bulk being exported to be processed in the major capitals of the world. These, in turn, find their way back to Africa as imports and are sold at very high consumer prices.

Africa, on the other hand, imports food from other parts of the world to feed her population, which is constantly under the threat of famine. Currently, a number of nations in Africa have sent out signals about the looming famine. If nothing is done and done in a hurry, a wide-scale "Ethiopia" will strike Africa again. Africa should not wait for international media like CNN to cover the situation in order to make any meaningful changes to avert this major disaster in the making.

Africa, with the exception of South Africa, must be ready to join the rest of the world in the frontiers of research, science and technology. It must not be left out as the rest of the world moves fast into the era of technology. The nations of the African continent should undertake meaningful research in all aspects of human life, such as the search for a cure for AIDS. As it is, scientists in Africa still wait for their brothers in the West to show them the way. There is a greater need for a joint continental research and development fund to facilitate it. No individual nation can undertake such major projects in isolation.

On the creation of a common market, this would ensure greater diversity, capacity building and utilization. The African manufacturers also, for the first time, will be in a position to compete with their counterparts in the rest of the world on an equal basis. It is no secret that the initial success of major manufacturing concerns in America and even Japan was primarily due to the existence of a large domestic market. Africa already has this, only it has not been exploited fully.

The establishment of the common market also would necessitate many structural changes in the participating nations. Already the efforts being made by Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania in reviving the East African community are bearing some fruits. A number of nations in the Great Lakes region in East Africa have expressed their desire to join in the community.

Trade barriers, represented by tariffs and custom duties on foreign goods imposed at the various national boundaries, must be dismantled. This would allow the free mobility of the labor, capital, goods and services among the various nations. Uganda's success with this is a clear example that it can improve these economies.

The economic rationale for such a move is firmly grounded on the principle that international trade among countries with different resource endowments is mutually beneficial to all of them. Also, specialization based on a comparative advantage leads to greater efficiency in resource allocation and hence raises the overall level of societal well-being. A large market also will provide firms with the advantages of economies of scale in production, marketing, research and development.

Certain key levels of cooperation must be formulated particularly in strategic areas such as planning of overall and sectional growth, especially for large-scale industries, power and multipurpose river-basin development.

The development of a continental market and the unification of extra-continental fiscal, monetary and investment policies leading to the formation of a continental monetary fund similar to the International Monetary Fund are major necessary steps toward this goal.

In this era of interdependence, no one economic block will be able to do without the other. In the words of former U.N. Secretary General Dr. Kurt Waldheim, while commenting on a call for a new international economic order, "the dependence of the developing world upon the developed nations is changing." Indeed, in certain cases it has been reversed. Many developed nations also are finding themselves in serious economic difficulties.

Duck's Breath review was one-sided

To the Editor:

Mike Weiler's mean-spirited review of the new Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre CD (DI, Jan. 30, "Duck's Breath's comedy lacks humor") makes me nostalgic for the '70s, when undergraduates had a more sophisticated sense of humor. The subtlety and humor of the pieces on Duck's Breath's new CD may have been lost on Mike, but I find them hilarious, and a lot of other people must, too, including the folks at NPR, where these pieces were aired over the years.

Ebonics is a method of unofficial segregation

To the Editor:

The issue of Ebonics is just another distraction in a long, continuous stream of distractions put out by a thoroughly tamed media. It is a sleight of hand meant to prevent us from paying attention to the real problem.

The issue is not whether these kids say "ain't" or "yo"; the issue is that our schools remain almost completely segregated and grossly unequal. Children in the ghetto go to school in buildings without roofs or heat and with intermittent electricity. They use outdated textbooks and have no functioning bathrooms. The schools are staffed by underpaid, discouraged and bitter teachers and attended by impoverished, angry and disempowered youth.

But the media would rather serve up a plate of sensationalist drivel that will get people thinking and talking about something more comfortable. One of the cornerstones of racism in this country is our schools. We treat our black youth shamefully when they are young, and then point a racist and angry finger when they grow up to be criminals, homeless or simply poor.

Budget amendment

...to introduce a letter signed by 1,060 economists, including 11 Nobel laureates in economics, warning that a balanced-budget amendment was "unsound and unnecessary."

The economists said a balanced-budget requirement could aggravate recessions and restrict federal borrowing for infrastructure and environmental protection.

Social Security is also an issue in the House, where three Republicans on Thursday introduced a bill ensuring surpluses from the trust fund are not used to pay for other government programs or mask the true size of the federal deficit.

Rep. David McIntosh, R-Ind., said the trio wanted either a vote on their bill or changes in the GOP-crafted balanced-budget amendment to protect Social Security.

"We want to see one of those things done," he said. "Beyond that, we're remaining flexible."

Two-thirds majorities in both chambers are needed to pass a constitutional amendment, and Senate Democrats said the bill could get 70 or 80 votes, well above the 67 required, with Social Security protections.

Chechnya plans post-election talks

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — Chechnya's new president is prepared to meet Russian leaders within weeks to discuss the status of the Muslim republic, but his spokesperson predicted Thursday the two sides would remain deadlocked.

Aslan Maskhadov, who won a landslide victory in Monday's election, says he already considers the southern territory to be an independent state, albeit unrecognized by Russia and the rest of the tion." "Since 1991, we have maintained that we are independent, so we won't need much time to prepare for these talks," he said.

In Moscow, President Boris Yeltsin's spokesperson, Sergei Yastrzhembsky, said the Kremlin is prepared for a dialogue with Chechnya, but only to discuss its status within Russia.

Moscow is not considering "any other outcome regarding this question," he said, according to the ITAR-Tass news agency.

Despite the likelihood of a standoff over Chechnya's political status, a top Russian official expressed optimism in an interview published Thursday that the two sides can work out their differences.

Ivan Rybkin, secretary of the Russian Security Council, said Maskhadov "stands out due to his level-headedness and pragmatic approach ... and a wish to reach a compromise."

Mutual readiness for talks "allows us to hope that we'll manage to create relations with the republic," he told the government's Rossiiskaya Gazeta newspaper.

"We are not talking about throwing someone out, but about giving them a real possibility of making independent decisions."

"The Chechen crisis was not only an ordeal but a warning to us all that one must not resort to force and weapons to solve problems on the threshold of the 21st century," Rybkin said.

Rybkin, who is Yeltsin's envoy to Chechnya, is likely to lead any Russian delegation in talks.

Vachagayev said Maskhadov would be ready to meet with Moscow following his inauguration, scheduled for Feb. 10.

Maskhadov spent Thursday at his home just outside Grozny and did not plan any public appearances. He will spend the coming days meeting with other Chechen leaders, including his campaign rivals, to set up his administration, his spokesperson said.

The chairperson of a European security group that monitored the Chechen election said Thursday the vote was a testimony to Chechens' determination to have democracy.

"It's astonishing that out of death and destruction comes an election which can be termed free and can be termed fair," said Niels Helveg Petersen, the Danish foreign minister who holds the rotating chairmanship of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe.

The outgoing Chechen leader, Zelimkhan Yandarbiyev, said Thursday he plans to return to his literary work. Maskhadov's main rival, guerrilla commander Shamil Basayev, says he does not plan to work in the new government.

Putting a government in place poses a host of other problems in Chechnya, where the capital Grozny largely has been reduced to rubble.

The old presidential office building was destroyed in the early days of the war with Russia, so Maskhadov probably will have to work out of an office abandoned by foreign firms, Vachagayev said.

Most of his administration will be crammed into the Agriculture Ministry building, one of the few government offices that wasn't flattened.

Many government workers haven't been paid for a year or more and while Vachagayev said the government would try to start paying salaries in March, even that was uncertain.

Web site helps reunite missing boy with mother

By Randolph Schmid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Five days before Christmas 1995, Becky Comeaux suddenly found herself buying gifts for a son she hadn't seen in 12 years.

Just 15 months old when he was taken, Beau Arceneaux had become a computer-savvy teen-ager who, with the help of people using an Internet chat room, found his way home.

Mother and son were on hand Thursday to help inaugurate a World Wide Web site run by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

The goal: more cases like theirs solved, but solved faster.

New technology donated by Computer Associates of Islandia, N.Y., will allow the center to keep photos of its 12 most recent missing children cases current on a Web page, with links to other pages and access to the center's entire database of missing youngsters. The Web page it had been using since 1995 sometimes took 24-48 hours to update.

"Beginning today, technology is changing the way the world searches for missing children," Charles Wang of Computer Associates said.

"We've come a long way from milk cartons," agreed Ernie Allen, president of the center.

Beau was 15 months old when his father kidnapped him in 1983, said Comeaux, of New Iberia, La.

"I never gave up hope I would find him one day," she said, though it was a shock when the call finally came from the FBI in December 1995.

When the FBI brought her photos, she didn't believe the tall youth was Beau. Her memory of him was always as a baby, and she remembered that when last she saw him she had carried him on her hip.

"The Chechen crisis was not only an ordeal but a warning to us all that one must not resort to force and weapons to solve problems on the threshold of the 21st century."

Ivan Rybkin, secretary of the Russian Security Council, on what the Chechen crisis taught Russian leaders

Russia says it will not allow Chechnya to secede, although it has withdrawn all its troops and has virtually no control over the republic's internal affairs.

"We will be ready to meet with Russia very soon," Maskhadov's spokesperson Mayerbek Vachagayev said in an interview with the AP.

"But we don't think Russia will propose anything new, and we won't have any change in our posi-

New diabetes drug could bring end to insulin shots

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration approved a drug Thursday that offers a million diabetics the hope of reducing — and for some even stopping — their insulin shots.

Expected to hit pharmacy shelves by the end of March, Parke Davis' troglitazone is the first drug to attack the underlying trigger of Type II diabetes, the disease's most common form.

It somehow resensitizes the body to insulin, a hormone that converts blood sugar into energy.

Some patients — about 15 percent of those who tested the drug — no longer needed insulin shots because the amount their bodies manufactured became sufficient again. Most patients still needed insulin, but required fewer injections each day.

"It's an exciting new drug," said Dr. Philip Cryer, president of the American Diabetes Association. He issued a caution: "Nobody ought to abruptly stop their insulin. They have to work with the doctor to see if troglitazone has an effect and then reduce insulin gradually."

Troglitazone will be sold under the brand name Rezulin, but Parke Davis said a price has not been set.

About 16 million Americans have diabetes. Type I diabetes typically strikes children who cannot produce insulin and need daily shots of the hormone to survive. Rezulin should never be used by them.

Type II diabetes, also known as the non-insulin-dependent type, usually hits in adulthood. The body's natural insulin gradually loses its ability to work, letting blood sugar, or glucose, rise. Unchecked, that can cause kidney damage, blindness, heart disease and other complications.

About 90 percent of American diabetics have this type. Diet, exercise and pills to boost insulin production and decrease glucose production can help. But as they age, most of these diabetics will need insulin shots — and a million of them still cannot adequately control the disease.

These are the patients Rezulin is expected to help.

Researchers believe the drug stimulates a gene to produce more insulin-controlled proteins that in turn remove glucose from the bloodstream — essentially giving insulin more opportunity to work. As a bonus, it decreases the body's glucose production.

In clinical trials of Rezulin, some patients "did show a very considerable and significant effect," said FDA's Dr. Solomon Sobel, who said the drug is the first in a unique class of medicines.

In a study of 222 patients, those taking 400 milligrams of Rezulin a day for six months slashed their daily insulin dose by 58 percent. Fifteen percent stopped taking insulin.

Parke Davis expects Thursday's FDA approval to be just the first use of Rezulin. The National Institutes of Health is studying whether people at high risk of developing Type II diabetes could actually avoid contracting the disease by taking the drug.

The drug's side effects are rare and mild, the FDA said: some infections, pain and headache. It also can cause an increase in cholesterol levels, but the FDA said the rise is not alarming.

Sobel warned that the drug should be prescribed with caution in patients with advanced heart or liver disease, because animal studies found signals the drug might hurt those organs. It caused fluid retention that increased heart size in rodents, but the FDA said those effects have not been observed in people who have tried the drug.

We explore a mathematical question with something of a philosophical flavor. For convenience we study functions on the unit interval. If f is one of these, only finitely many values of f have ever been computed in human history. In the world of human experience f is therefore a step function. Assuming that human activity continues forever, we ask, what functions are uniform limits of step functions? We give an intrinsic description of these.

AOL keeps busy with refunds Gandhi's ashes put into river

By David Kalish
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A day after America Online announced refunds for customers who can't get through, people trying to put in their requests Thursday encountered more busy signals — and a suggestion they put it in writing.

"I got put on hold for over an hour and a half," said Jack Simpson, an AOL customer in Florida. "It seemed like every 30 seconds they said, 'We're sorry, the lines will be busy.'"

"I got put on hold for over an hour and a half. It seemed like every 30 seconds they said, 'We're sorry, the lines will be busy.'"

Jack Simpson, an AOL customer in Florida

A customer service representative answering AOL's phone line during the afternoon said it would take at least 30 minutes before someone could handle a refund request because of a flood of calls from customers. Instead, he urged the request be put in writing.

However, company spokesperson Tricia Primrose insisted the only way to get refunds was to call.

Meanwhile, AOL was pleading for understanding, noting the settlement had been negotiated in less than a week.

"Everything happened really quickly. We did our best to get it in on time," said spokesperson Wendy Goldberg in Dulles, Va.

The trouble that prompted the refund agreement began in December, when AOL began offering customers a flat price of $19.95 a month for unlimited on-line time. The price plan created overwhelming on-line demand that clogged AOL's lines. Customers trying to log on frequently got busy signals.

The agreement allows those of AOL's 8 million customers with trouble logging on in December and January to request a refund of up to about $40, or about two months' on-line fees.

America Online would not estimate how many customers are expected to qualify. But several industry analysts said the total cost to AOL shouldn't be more than $20 million.

Jack Norris, chief of special prosecutions for the Florida attorney general, said AOL's delay in accommodating refund requests was understandable.

AOL was under pressure to sign the refund deal quickly because New York's attorney general had threatened to sue within days.

Under the deal, the company can't advertise its service in February.

In the meantime, AOL is spending $350 million to upgrade its network to handle more users.

Some consumer-protection officials, though, privately expressed skepticism about AOL's ability to fix the bottlenecks anytime soon.

ALLAHABAD, India — Chanting Hindu prayers, Mohandas Gandhi's great-grandson tipped a copper urn filled with the last remains of India's independence leader into the Ganges River on Thursday, 49 years after his murder.

Tushar Gandhi, sitting cross-legged with his wife and two children, ferried the urn on a barge decorated with flowers and draped with India's national colors. Priests and senior Indian politicians stood behind him, their hands folded in deference.

In a 20-minute ritual, Tushar Gandhi put holy water, milk, sweets, fruits and flowers into the urn before tipping the gray ashes into the Ganges.

Devout Hindus believe immersing the ashes into a sacred river ensures eternal peace for the soul. The confluence of the Ganges and the Yamuna at this central Indian town is considered one of the holiest sites in Hinduism.

Gandhi, known as the Mahatma, or great soul, was assassinated Jan. 30, 1948, by a Hindu fanatic who opposed his acquiescence to India's partition and the creation of Pakistan.

Although stores like The Gap and Eddie Bauer have shown interest in Coral Ridge Mall, John Bergstrom, vice president of General Growth Properties Inc., said all stores still are in basic negotiations. Bergstrom declined to confirm the addition of any store in the mall.

Coral Ridge Mall, which is scheduled to open in March of 1998, will feature a 600-seat food court with two sit-down restaurants and a children's museum. The mall will be one of the largest malls in Iowa, with a total of 913,913 square feet.

The possible opening of The Gap and an Eddie Bauer store at the Mall has UI students who ordinarily have traveled outside of Iowa City to shop at these stores excited to have them closer to home.

"I think it's great," UI junior Amy

Ottling said. "If there had to be one store in Iowa City every student would want, it'd be The Gap. It would give this area an alternative to going to Cedar Rapids and the Quad Cities to get to these stores."

Many UI students said also the opening of the Coral Ridge Mall with the inclusion of popular stores like The Gap will diversify the current clothing stores available in the Iowa City area.

UI sophomore Robin Dickson said the Iowa City area lacks stores with much diversity and the new stores will improve options for students looking to stock their closets with more contemporary clothes.

"Youkners and places like that are either too young or too old," Dickson said. "The Gap and Eddie Bauer carry more sweaters and casual stuff you can wear."

However, many students said the possible arrival of large chains such as the Gap and Eddie Bauer will damage the hold downtown Iowa City stores have on UI students.

"It will probably hurt stores downtown like Ragstock," UI junior Ben Johnson said. "I think Eddie Bauer and The Gap are a little more broad-based in terms of customers."

Although some students are taking a sympathetic approach toward the downtown clothing stores, others are hoping the threat of the new stores will encourage downtown stores to make some improvements.

"It's kind of sad that downtown will lose business," Ottling said. "But maybe it will get them to make improvements and repairs in the Ped Mall."

Reporter Brendan Brown contributed to this story.

problems within the Iowa City Police Department.

"I know some people may think this is an ending point," Kubby said. "I think the settlement is one of the many pieces of things we need to do to find justice."

Iowa City residents will have a chance to witness city administrators hash out the ICPD's guidelines and policies Saturday, but residents won't be able to pose their own questions to the police chief and city manager.

The City Council will hold a work session at 2 p.m. Saturday to review the official policies of the ICPD, including those relating to the Shaw case.

City Attorney Linda Woito said putting the settlement behind them will allow City Council members to focus on issues of police policy that need to be considered.

"I think the discussion will be much more open," Woito said.

Atkins said the Council and city administrators will compare the ICPD's policies and training procedures to those in other cities.

The work session will be open to the public, but audience members will not be allowed to speak.

Jeffrey Martin, an Iowa City resident and member of Citizens for Justice and Accountability in the Death of Eric Shaw, said he is encouraging people in the community to attend the meeting. Martin said he hopes in the future, the public will be able to participate.

"At some point, people will have to speak and ask questions," Martin said.

APARTMENTS

lucky," he said. "We signed for the last available apartment."

Most rental agencies first give their current tenants a chance and then afterward they have public signings for all available units.

"We give our current tenants until February 10 to sign, and then we call those on our waiting lists to tell them what we have available for signing on February 24," said Nannette Scott, an employee at Lincoln Real Estate.

After all those who are on the waiting list are given a chance, rental agencies open signings for the public. However, sometimes the public might not have the chance to rent the apartments they want because the old tenants and waiting lists fill the buildings.

UI sophomore Sally Adams, who lives above World Marketplace, 245 S. Gilbert St., is one tenant who has no intention of moving from her apartment.

"I love my place," Adams said. "I live downtown in a newer apartment, and would never bother looking for another place."

While Adams is happy with her current address, there are many who are ready to take the chance and make a move. For these people, it is time to begin the search for where they want to go.

Most agencies have current listings of what buildings they own and the upcoming prices that they charge. When looking to sign a lease, the prospective tenant should go early to look at the layout of the apartment and then try to actually view it. Also, one must understand the price of the security deposit and whether the agency requires the first month's rent.

Then, in order to rent an apartment, it is important to know if there is a waiting list for the apart-

"I haven't even started looking yet. I guess I'm not too worried. I know I'll find somewhere to live," he said.

However, Blank said he understood his procrastination would leave him with less of a chance for a nicer or newer apartment.

"I guess I might not live in the best of places, but I don't think I could afford it anyway," he said.

Finally, when one has decided to rent an apartment, it is important to read fully the terms of the lease before signing. These terms explain the tenants' duties outside the rent price, for example whether the tenants or the agency pays for utilities.

For Miller, his first experience taught him he had to be prepared and understand everything about how the particular agencies worked before the next time he rented an apartment.

"I made sure I was clear on how everything worked," Miller said. "As a result, I've stayed in the same apartment for the past three years."

ment and when the lease signing day is. Some agencies are beginning their signings next week. For instance, AUR is signing leases on February 5, while other agencies don't hold specific signing dates.

Michelle Reinier, manager of apartment rental from Mod Pod Realty, 301 S. Dubuque St., said her agency normally finds that people come in off the streets to fill the remaining vacancies. In the end, if one postpones their apartment search for later, there are always apartments available.

For UI sophomore Dustin Blank, the idea of searching for a new apartment now is not something he looks forward to.

LaCrosse at the Mark

Fans of former Iowa men's basketball players Russ Millard and Chris Kingsbury can see the two in action this weekend.

Both players are currently playing for LaCrosse of the CBA and will be playing the Quad-City Thunder this Saturday at the Mark of the Quad Cities.

Millard, who has averaged 7.6 points per game this season, should be in the starting line-up for the game. He has been backing up Reggie Slater, who was called up by the Toronto Raptors and Jack Haley, who left the team.

Millard has played in 30 games this year, two of which he started.

Kingsbury has been averaging 5.1 points per game off the bench this season, the lowest total of any player on the current roster. He has also started this season. Tip-off is scheduled for 8:05 p.m. Saturday.

Do or die weekend

Women's basketball team to face Big Ten's best

By Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's basketball team will face perhaps its toughest back-to-back games of the season this weekend as its "must-win" situation continues.

To make matters worse, they will be without one starter and possibly another when they travel to second-place Illinois tonight and host Big Ten leader Michigan State on Sunday.

Forward Shannon Perry will not play at Illinois due to the death of her grandmother and it is uncertain if Perry will be back in the line-up on Sunday. Leading scorer Angela Hamblin is doubtful after missing the last two games with a sore right hamstring.

"I think Angie's still out and now

"They're on a roll and they've got more and more people jumping on the bandwagon and all that's done is given them more and more confidence."

Coach Angie Lee on Illinois' success this season with Shannon gone, we're just going to have to go out there and play hard and try to make up for the other players not being there," Iowa forward Tiffany Gooden said.

The preseason Big Ten favorite Hawkeyes are 4-4 in conference play and tied with Penn State for fifth place.

"We need to find the fire within ourselves," Gooden said "We need to realize the situation we're in and realize the potential we have and go beyond potential and make it reality."

The problems for the Hawkeyes have not happened away from home. Iowa has won five of its last six games on the road, but has dropped three in a row in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"This is really significant for us,"

Gooden said. "We've played well on the road and we haven't played well at home, but I think this weekend is really key."

Illinois' success has caught the attention of its fans. Two years ago, the Illini averaged just over 600 fans per home contest. This season the Illini are averaging over 2,500 at home, where they are 6-0. For the Illini to remain unbeaten at home, they will have to beat Iowa for the first time since the 1985-86 season.

"Illinois hasn't done anything like this since 1986," Lee said. "They're on a roll and they've got more and more people jumping on the bandwagon and all that's done is given them more and more confidence."

Freshman Heavyweight Wes Hand controls Minnesota's Shelton Benjamin during a Jan. 25 duel. Hand cracked the Amateur Wrestling News national rankings last week at No. 10.

Heavyweight sees his obscurity as a blessing

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Wes Hand is looking to make a name for himself, and cause some major upsets, in one of the nation's strongest weight-classes.

As a redshirt freshman, Iowa wrestler Wes Hand doesn't mind his relative anonymity.

In fact, he's planning on using it to his advantage over the next two months.

Hand, a heavyweight, cracked the Amateur Wrestling News national rankings for the first time last week. Currently, he's 13-5 and ranked No. 10 in a weight class that features a handful of outstanding upperclassmen:

• Penn State's Kerry McCoy, the 1994 NCAA champion.

• Nebraska's Tolly Thompson, the 1995 NCAA champion.

• North Carolina's Justin Harty and CS-Bakersfield's Stephen Neal, who placed second and fourth last year, respectively.

Add Syracuse wrestler and U.S. Olympic team member Jason Gleason to that mix, and it's easy to see what Hand will be up against in March. But the talent of the heavyweight class is something Hand thinks can work to his benefit.

"I don't think too many people respect me right now, and that's probably kind of good," he said. "I have to do what I can to get there."

Hand will look to get his 14th win Saturday when No. 2 Iowa hosts Northwestern (4-6) at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The match is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

It may not be unreasonable to believe Hand can challenge the credentialed veterans. At the Midlands Tournament in December, Hand defeated Gleason and lost a close match to Neal, 4-2.

Because of those efforts, Hand feels he stacks up well with most heavyweights. The biggest factor he draws from is the parody within the class.

"They are all about the same, nobody really stands out a whole lot," Hand said. "If you beat one of them, you know you can beat them all."

Hand's season had a rather ominous beginning, when he lost to a Division II opponent from South Dakota State. The following week, Hand was held out of his match against McCoy when the Hawkeyes visited Penn State.

Assistant coach Jim Zalesky said the move was made for the sake of — not in spite of — Hand.

"He understood why we did it," Zalesky said. "He hadn't really proven himself in practice that week. He was mad about it, but that's what we wanted."

Any problems Hand experienced before Midlands seemed to disappear afterwards. The Tama, Iowa, native posted a fourth-place finish at Midlands, while his team picked up the team title.

Since that tournament, Hand has

Page planning for big leagues

By Chuck Blount
The Daily Iowan

With only five meets left in the indoor track and field regular season, George Page doesn't have much time left to put the exclamation point on an already impressive collegiate track résumé.

That résumé includes two Big Ten outdoor 100-meter championships and a title in the same event at last season's Drake Relays.

Page, in his third-year at Iowa after transferring from Glendale Junior College in Arizona, exhausted his outdoor eligibility last season, meaning his final year will end after the indoor season.

An outdoor specialist, Page missed out on much of the 1996 indoor season due to leg problems. Although Page admits he is not quite as dangerous indoors, he said he hopes this year's efforts will catapult him into the international scene.

"I've never really been an indoor runner," Page said. "I've been thinking pretty much that my college career has been over (since his final outdoor performance). What I'm doing now is putting myself in position to be picked up by agents and get on some club teams."

"I would like to also put myself into the position that when I do graduate, I can show the clubs that I can run indoor or outdoor. Hopefully, I can go out and run against some of the big men and show that I can beat them."

Assistant coach Pat McGhee, who is in charge of Iowa's sprinters, sees a bright future for George Page — a future that can only be grasped by a handful of athletes.

"He's quick, he's got a lot of natural speed and most of all he's hungry to win," McGhee said. "There is not a whole lot of athletes out there that can compete internationally, but I think

Gymnasts to compete in rare home meets

Women hope to continue winning streak at super meet

By Chuck Blount
The Daily Iowan

Still riding the momentum of last week's win over Illinois-Chicago, the Iowa women's gymnastics team will host a four-team super meet this weekend.

Iowa, along with Southeast Missouri State, Winona State and University of Wisconsin-Lacrosse make up the field, which will take place Sunday at 1 p.m. at the UI Fieldhouse.

"I have yet to see Winona State or UW-LaCrosse," coach Diane DeMarco said. "But, I do know that us and Southeast Missouri State have been putting up comparable team scores."

It's going to come down to whoever makes the least errors.

This is the first of two head-to-head meetings scheduled between Iowa and Southeast Missouri State. Last year,

Men match up against Gophers in one of two home duels

By Chris James
The Daily Iowan

With only two of its nine meets this season scheduled to take place in Iowa City, the Iowa men's gymnastics team plans to take advantage of being at home this weekend.

The Hawkeyes will take on the Minnesota tonight at 7 p.m. at the UI Fieldhouse, seeking to pick up a win in their first dual meet of the season. Iowa placed first and third, respectively, in the West Point Open and the Windy City Invitational earlier in the year.

This is the second time the Hawkeyes will face Minnesota. The Golden Gophers participated in the Windy City and finished seventh. Iowa coach Tom Dunn expects a much tougher Golden Gopher team the second time around.

Spring season takes bloom

The Iowa women's tennis team hosts DePaul Saturday

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

After almost a three month absence from competition, the Iowa women's tennis team will return to the courts and begin the spring season on Saturday morning.

Players and fans will not have to worry about the frigid conditions at the Klotz Tennis Center as the Hawkeyes will host DePaul inside the UI Recreational Building. Doubles action begins at 9 a.m.

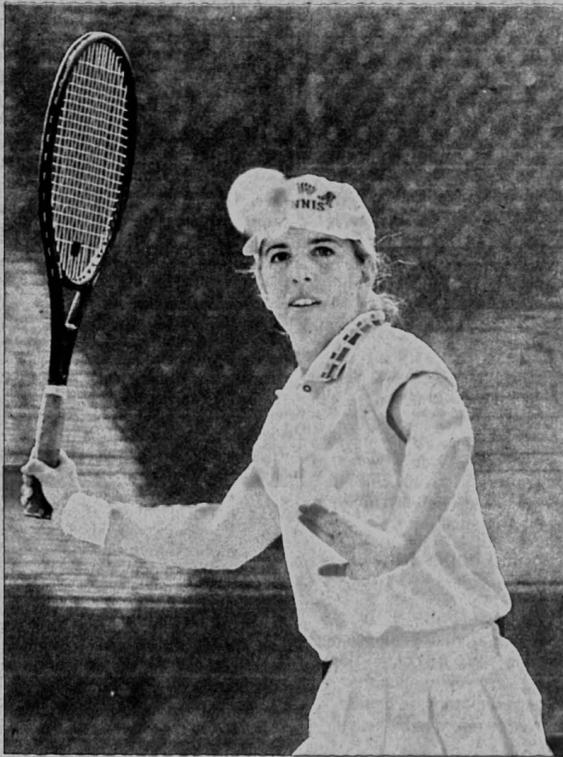

Second year coach Jenny Mainz said the long break from competition has left the team more than ready to play.

"I have confidence that we are prepared for DePaul," Mainz said. "The players are anxious to play. Since it is the first match, I'm sure there are going to be some nerves and butterflies and maybe a little bit of apprehension. But overall I think we are well-prepared."

Although Mainz is concerned about season-opening nerves, she's more worried about the team self-imposing unnecessary pressure.

"The biggest thing I've talked to the team about is playing within ourselves and not trying to force things," Mainz said. "We don't want to put pressure on ourselves but rather just play percentage tennis."

"We want to use that return serve and go right down the middle to get the points started so we don't have to go for the big shot too soon. If we do those types of things well, we'll be in good shape."

According to Mainz, even though Iowa defeated DePaul a year ago, 6-1, she is expecting a tougher team in '97.

"DePaul is a good team," she said. "They are scrappy and when they come to play us they come with the mentality that they have nothing to lose. They are very strong at the top; they have a number one and two player from Croatia that are strong, talented players with experience. DePaul is a sleeper type of team, they could really give us a battle."

"I think this match up will give us a good measuring stick of where we need to go and what we need to work on this spring."

Hawkeye sports roundup

Men's tennis sees first spring dual action

This week: Iowa travels to neutral Moline, Ill. to take on Northern Illinois Sunday at 11:30 at the South Park Tennis Club in what will be the first dual match of the spring season for both teams.

Game Notes: Last year, the Huskies lost to Iowa 5-2 in Iowa City, but bring a vastly improved lineup to Moline for this weekend's match ... Iowa is looking to rebound from last weekend's Big Ten Singles tournament, where only senior Tom Derouin won a set ... Moline is the hometown for both Derouin and fellow senior Damir Seferovic ... Husky coach Mickey Maule's brother manages the club where the competition will be held.

Coach's Comment: "We've had a really good week of practice and I think the team is a little disappointed about last week's finish at the Big Ten Singles," Houghton said. "So the team is real excited to get into dual-match action, which many consider the best part of college tennis."

day's session begins at noon. While both teams will bring tough teams to the competition, Ohio State is traditionally a national power and is currently ranked in the top 25 nationally.

Meet notes: While Ohio State owns a 6-2 dual meet record over Iowa, the Hawkeyes have won the past two ... senior diver Tete Gil broke Iowa's pool record for six dives on the one-meter board last week with a score of 351.68 ... the last time Iowa faced Ohio State was a 77-36 Hawkeye victory.

Coaches comment: "Hopefully we'll be a little more prepared than we were against Minnesota last week," assistant coach John Davey said. "Northwestern and Ohio State are very comparable to our team, right in the middle of the conference. It's going to be a real close meet between all three of the teams."

—Tony Wirt

Men's track team travels to Cedar Falls

This Week: Iowa travels to Cedar Falls to compete in the Big Four Invitational Saturday at 4 p.m.

Game Notes: The meet will be a battle for state bragging rights as Iowa, Iowa State, Drake and Northern Iowa will slug it out in a scoring meet ... Minnesota and Kansas will also participate in the meet ... This will be the first scored meet of the season for the Hawkeyes ... In the previous two meets, Iowa has claimed eight event championships.

Coaches Comment: "This week will reveal the type of team we'll have at the Big Ten meet," coach Larry Wiecek said. "The field is outstanding, and should push all of our athletes. After Saturday night, we will know just what we are made of."

—Chuck Blount

Women's track team faces intrastate rivals

This week: The Hawkeyes will travel to Cedar Falls Friday to compete in the Northern Iowa Invitational in the UNI Dome. Competition will be provided by Kansas, along with in-state rivals Iowa State, Drake, and UNI.

Meet notes: Last week, Iowa took fourth out of nine teams at the Minnesota Invitational ... Iowa took both relay titles in Minnesota, winning the 4x400-meter relay and the distance medley relay ... the meet on Friday is the mythical state championship.

Coaches comment: "I thought the meet last weekend went well," coach Jim Grant said. "The team accomplished what it was trying to do, namely getting ready for the upcoming meets, like this weekend. The UNI Invitational is important because it's the big four championship. It's for bragging rights and we would like to come out on top. We do not want to finish second or third this weekend."

Men swimmers will play two

This Week: The Hawkeyes will travel to Evanston, Ill., to face Northwestern and Ohio State in a double-dual meet. The action starts at 7 p.m. on Friday, while Satur-

Hawkeyes to honor six seniors

Iowa hosts Illinois State Saturday

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

For six senior athletes, Saturdays swim meet between Iowa and Illinois State will mark the last time they compete at home for the University of Iowa.

Kristen Belleson, Niamh Campbell, Lynn Dustin, Sonja Statham, and divers Kelly McCready and Jessica Riccobono will all be honored, along with their parents, during the meet which will take place at the UI Fieldhouse pool beginning at noon.

Iowa will be looking to close out its home schedule with continued improvement after falling to two tough Big Ten teams a week ago.

According to coach Mary Bolich, both teams will bring a similar composition to the pool.

"The team and coaching staff are very much looking forward to the Illinois State meet this weekend. Competitively we match up with Illinois State very well which should prove to be a very exciting meet," Bolich said.

"Also it is the meet where we honor and recognize our senior swimmers and divers for their contributions and efforts over the last four years."

Even though it will be Belleson's final outing in front of a home crowd, she isn't trying to prepare any differently for the meet against Illinois State.

"Obviously, this is our last home meet and it's important to us," Belleson said. "But we are just looking to swim well and improve our times. It will be nice that most of our (seniors) parents will be there, but overall we just want to improve as much as we can since we only have two meets left."

Belleson, a former high school all-American, is encouraged by the chemistry of the team heading into the final tier of the season.

"I think our team has really come together and bonded," Belleson said. "I think we realize there is a lot of talent and potential on this team and hopefully we can really bring it out these next two weeks."

Lieberman-Cline, Woodard join WNBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Hall of Famer Nancy Lieberman-Cline and Olympic gold medalist Lynette Woodard have signed to play in the WNBA's first season, which starts in June.

Lieberman-Cline, 38, and Woodard, 37, have yet to be assigned teams in the eight-team league.

WNBA president Val Ackerman today called the two "among the most accomplished women ever to play the game of basketball, and their combined experience, leadership and skill will be a great asset to the league."

Lieberman-Cline, a 5-foot-10 guard, was a member of the 1976 U.S. Olympic team that won a silver medal.

Woodard, a 6-0 guard, graduated in 1981 from Kansas, where she set the women's college scoring record of 3,649 points.

Bowe joins Marine Reserves

NEW YORK (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Riddick Bowe, who knows about training camps, is headed for the toughest one of his life — the U.S. Marine Corps boot camp at Parris Island, S.C.

The 29-year-old Bowe, saying he will fight again, announced at a news conference Thursday that he joined the Marine Corps Reserve on Monday in Washington and will soon begin 12-week recruit training.

Bowe

"It's something I always wanted to do before I got too old," said Bowe, adding that he would have joined the Marines in 1986 if his wife Judy had not become pregnant with the first of their five children.

"I had to make a decision to get a job or go into the Marines," said Bowe, who got a job — fighting professionally.

Manager Rock Newman said Bowe's purses, endorsements and investment income have grossed just over $100 million.

Bowe is the fourth former heavyweight champion to have joined the Marines. The others, who served on active duty, were Gene Tunney, Leon Spinks and Ken Norton.

Jordan expects to remain in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan says he expects to be back in a Bulls uniform next year, which is as close as he's come to stating his intentions.

"At the moment, I look forward to playing next year," he said after Tuesday night's victory in Vancouver. "I don't see anything that says I won't or that I will change my mind."

Jordan has a one-year contract that pays him $30 million this year.

It's unclear if he expects a raise. It's also uncertain whether owner Jerry Reinsdorf will pay another $30 million or more for another season from his marquee player.

Jordan says he believes he is playing at the top of his game and that he has been energized by support from fans, who earlier this week voted in record numbers to make him an NBA All-Star for the 11th time.

"The appreciation and respect the fans have paid me, especially this year, is very gratifying," he told the Chicago Tribune after Tuesday night's victory over Vancouver. "That only fuels the energy I have when I go out there on the basketball court."

Rodman hopes to return Feb. 10

CHICAGO (AP) — Dennis Rodman's agent hopes a planned meeting with NBA commissioner David Stern will result in the Chicago Bulls forward being allowed to return to basketball Feb. 10.

"We're going to have a meeting (Friday) with the commissioner and the league and hopefully come away with everything resolved so that we can return Feb. 10," Dwight Manley said Thursday.

Rodman was suspended 11 games — the equivalent of more than $1.1 million in pay — for kicking court-side cameraman Eugene Amos in Minneapolis on Jan. 15. Thursday night's game with the Sacramento Kings marked the seventh game Rodman has sat out.

The players union has said the punishment was too severe, and said something should be done to limit court-side cameras and photographers at games.

Manley has said Rodman has never been given his day in court to explain to the NBA his side of the kicking incident. The agent also has said Rodman was willing to do everything he can to return to action, including agreeing to donate his salary to charity and the Bulls.

Rodman was fined $25,000 by the league, and agreed to pay a $200,000 out-of-court settlement to Amos.

Improvement lands Bettis in Pro Bowl

By Ken Peters
Associated Press

HONOLULU — After a miserable 1995 season, Jerome Bettis went from St. Louis to Pittsburgh in a move that finally landed him back in Hawaii.

Bettis, voted into the Pro Bowl his first two seasons in the league, struggled with the Rams during his third year, gaining just 637 yards.

Not only was he passed over in the Pro Bowl balloting, his career seemed in jeopardy.

Although he had won the NFL rushing title with 1,429 yards as a rookie in 1993, then gained 1,025 yards the following year, the Rams gave up on him after his down season, trading him to the Steelers on draft day for a pair of picks.

Bettis ran for 1,421 yards for Pittsburgh this season, second in the AFC behind only Denver's Terrell Davis, who had 1,538.

That, predictably, earned Bettis another trip to the Pro Bowl.

"It shows you're back in high esteem with your peers," Bettis said, referring to the players' vote for the all-star squads. "It's great to be back."

"I've been here twice on the AFC. It's a new experience to be here with the AFC. I'm looking forward to hopefully showing my stuff in the game Sunday."

He believes another all-star appearance might not have been possible were he not traded.

"They're a team I feel I complement," he said.

His last year in St. Louis turned rather ugly. Although he was slowed by injuries and was trying to run behind a patchwork line, his attitude was questioned.

"I felt like I was banging my head against a wall, figuratively and literally," he said. "I was going through some rough times. I knew there were going to be problems."

"But I knew I was a better player than that, knew I could still play. Fortunately, I was traded."

San Francisco Giants' Deion Sanders warms up during batting practice before the game with the Chicago Cubs Sept. 8, 1995.

'Primetime' will do double time

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — A year after he became a two-way starter with the Dallas Cowboys, Deion Sanders is going back to being a two-sport player.

Sanders agreed Thursday to an unusual one-year contract with Cincinnati that binds him to the Reds until they are eliminated from the pennant race. The agreement means Sanders will miss the Cowboys' training camp and might be unavailable for some of their early games.

There's also an informal agreement at work. General manager Jim Bowden said the club would give Sanders the option of leaving to play for the Cowboys if the Reds are out of contention in September.

"I'm going to be there for the Dallas Cowboys in every way," Sanders said. "It's up to my discretion, and I'm going to weigh both sides heavily and make the best decision, even if I have to put a poll in the newspapers."

"If we're in a pennant race, Deion is not going to leave the Reds," Bowden said. "He's going to do the right thing for the Dallas Cowboys and the Cincinnati Reds. If we get to September and we're 16 games out, Deion is going to play football."

If the Reds are still within striking distance, it could get interesting. The Cowboys expect him back and appear to have a slightly different understanding of the baseball arrangement.

"We are supportive of Deion and his decision, and we are planning to have him be with us for all 16 games next year," Cowboys owner Jerry Jones said. "This is something that we have discussed with Deion, his agent and the Reds organization."

A source, speaking on condition he not be identified, said Sanders' football contract cleared the way for him to return to baseball by guaranteeing him full pay from the Cowboys if he plays in eight regular-season games.

The deal is more interesting for what it means to the Cowboys than what it does for the Reds. Cincinnati is getting a leadoff hitter who still has blurry vision, hasn't played baseball in more than a year and had a poor on-base percentage when healthy.

Sanders suggested he might take off weekends late in baseball season to play for the Cowboys, then return to the Reds. He had the same sort of arrangement with the Atlanta Braves and Falcons in the early 1990s, but went to football exclusively last year.

Bruins out-shoot Panthers but lose

MIAMI (AP) — Ray Sheppard set up the first two Florida goals and the Panthers went on to a 3-1 victory Thursday over Boston on a night that defenseman Ray Bourque tied the Bruins' all-time scoring record.

Bourque's shorthanded goal in the second period tied forward John Bucyk's 30-year-old career record of 1,339 points. Bourque has 352 goals and 987 assists in 18 seasons.

The Panthers won despite being outshot 38-16, their fewest attempts of the season. Florida goaltender John Vanbiesbrouck stopped 37 shots for his fourth consecutive victory. Vanbiesbrouck (18-10-7) has stopped 119 of 124 shots in his last four games.

Canadiens 4, Lightning 1

TAMPA, Fla. — Martin Rucinsky scored twice as the Montreal Canadiens snapped a four-game losing streak with a 4-1 victory over the Tampa Bay Lightning.

The triumph was Montreal's first-ever at Tampa Bay after six losses and two ties. The Canadiens also moved into the eighth and final playoff spot in the Eastern Conference, one point ahead of Washington.

The Lightning, who have lost three straight, had their six-game home undefeated streak end. The Lightning were 3-0-3 in that span.

Blues 5, Senators 2

KANATA, Ontario — Brett Hull extended his consecutive point streak to 11 games with a goal and two assists and Pierre Turgeon had a goal and three assists as the St. Louis Blues defeated the Ottawa Senators 5-2.

Hull maintained his streak by assisting on Igor Kravchuk's fourth goal, 10:23 into the first period, Geoff Courtnall's 13th with six minutes left in the game and by scoring 8:35 into the third.

In 32 games under former Blues coach and general manager Mike Keenan, Hull had only 12 goals. In 19 games under new coach Joel Quenneville, Hull has 16.

Smith's 41 points not enough against Jazz

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Karl Malone scored 12 of his 32 points in the fourth quarter Thursday night to lead the Utah Jazz to their fifth straight win, 102-96 over the Atlanta Hawks.

Steve Smith, who scored a career-high 41 points, brought the Hawks back from a 14-point deficit in the fourth quarter before Atlanta lost for just the second time in 15 games.

Smith scored 13 of his 14 fourth-quarter points in an 18-9 run that gave the Hawks their only lead of the second half, 91-90 with 6:38 to play.

Nuggets 113, Rockets 109

HOUSTON — Ricky Pierce scored 25 points and spoiled Hakeem Olajuwon's second straight 40-plus point game Thursday night as the Denver Nuggets held off the Houston Rockets.

Olajuwon, who had 41 points Saturday against the Utah Jazz, got 48 points and 10 rebounds against the Nuggets, but it wasn't enough to overcome the sharp-shooting Nuggets, who hit 51.7 per cent from the field.

Pierce led the way with 11-of-18 shooting, but it was LaPhonso Ellis and Dale Ellis who kept the Rockets from coming back in the fourth quarter.

Timberwolves 92, Mavericks 82
DALLAS — Reserve Sam Mitchell scored 21 points and Terry Porter had five points during a decisive run to open the fourth quarter as the Minnesota Timberwolves extended their winning streak against Dallas to six games with a victory over the Mavericks Thursday night.

The Timberwolves took a 10-point lead into the fourth quarter, then Porter started a 10-2 run with a 3-pointer.

Nets 113, Suns 101

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Kendall Gill scored 32 points and the New Jersey Nets rebounded from their worst offensive performance in the NBA with a victory over the Phoenix Suns on Thursday night.

Khalid Reeves hit a team record-breaking six 3-pointers in adding a season-high 25 points as the Nets placed all five starters in double figures just two nights after being limited to 62 points by Cleveland.

Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher and Harrison Ford star in "Star Wars: Special Edition," opening today at Campus Theatres, Old Capitol Mall. The new edition features digitally enhanced special effects and four and a half minutes of never-before-seen footage.

'Star Wars: Special Edition': Even better on the big screen

By Greg Kirschling
The Daily Iowan

The jump to light speed finally looks like a jump to light speed. That small moon finally looks like a space station this time.

God bless the big screen. And amazingly, few moments in "Star Wars: Special Edition" are more effective than just the opening bars of the John Williams' music over the expository crawl — finally we don't have to wait until it's halfway up the screen before we can read it. Those who find "Star Wars" a religious experience will approach nirvana before the action even starts.

FILM REVIEW

"Star Wars: Special Edition"

Starring Mark Hamill
Carrie Fisher
Harrison Ford
Written and Directed by George Lucas

★★★★ out of ★★★★★

The wide screen lends a scope to "Star Wars" that we've been missing on TV. Even in the most inferior of theaters, small details that were present in the original are suddenly noticeable. Close-ups and old shots that might have been missed are suddenly highlighted by the big screen, which (with a great film) has a hypnotic power that TV can't touch.

This is an invaluable experience for someone who likes the movie, let alone anyone whose life has evolved around "Star Wars." In fact, the biggest fault with the hype is too much energy has been expended telling us about the four and a half minutes of new digital effects, but not enough convincing the average Joe he has been watching the movie with its sides lopped off on TV.

As for those new effects, they're fun for curiosity value, but "Star Wars" was probably better off without them. The best of the new effects are still just dressing — flashy and cool while they last, but they don't enhance the movie at all. (They'll add to the box office, though.) There's a great new digital joke with Han Solo and a band of Storm Troopers, but as you scramble to see all the stuff in the new scenes, it often feels like Lucas' computer tinkers have revived "Where's Waldo?," not a favorite movie.

The new Jabba sequence is a bust. He looks smaller and slighter than he did in "Jedi" — a digital gob of green goo. It was a great chance for dramatic foreshadowing, but the scene feels botched. (Lucas missed another chance; Chewie still doesn't get a medal.)

Plus, there's a downright stupid addition to the scene in which Greedo the bounty hunter holds Han Solo at gunpoint. The digital tweekers have made Greedo shoot first this time, softening Han's rogue character.

Except for most of the new digital effects, watching "Star Wars" on its original home carries us back to a time before the blockbuster genre became too computerized. The original "Star Wars" has a wholesomeness that its digitally superior inferiors don't have, and that's the version that needs to be preserved.

One more great thing about Star Wars back in the theaters: Lucas can save the world's children. They need to be freed from "Star Wars"-derived garbage like the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers and taken back to the movie that initially came before their time.

Critics harp on "Star Wars" too much, pointing out how silly it sometimes is. True, watching it on the big screen today does suddenly call attention to some of the more absurd dialogue, and people who have seen the film countless times may only start to notice the unconvincing "aw, shucks" quality to Mark Hamill's performance now in the theater.

But going so far as to blame it for the downfall of movies, as some have done, is crazy. Instead, "Star Wars" will probably inspire more people to both go to and go into movies than any other, and all but the cynical will know why once they've seen it on the big screen, especially from a kids' eye view.

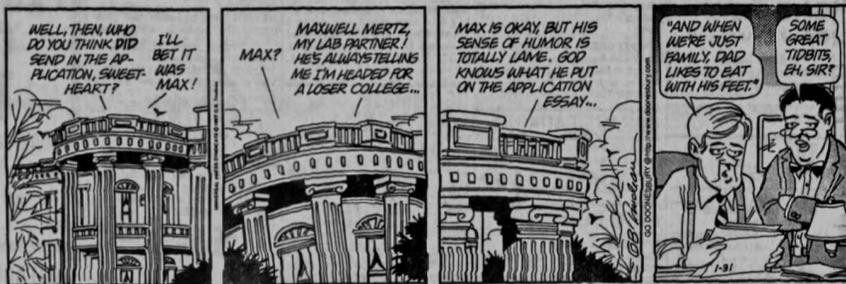

So full marks to this version, which, despite some of the dubious achievements of digital effects, ultimately shows why cinema belongs in the cinemas. The Special Edition may be the only movie that is best viewed in a movie theater packed to the rafters, because obviously everyone is there because they love it. Be sure to cheer.
