Fall from bridge injures student

By Jennifer Cassell
The Daily Iowan

A UI freshman is suffering from a fractured skull after falling from the Burlington Street bridge early Saturday morning. He was reported to be in serious condition at the UI Hospitals and Clinics Sunday afternoon.

Michael Waytenick, an 18-year-old from Waterloo, was rescued from a sheet of ice beneath the bridge and transported to the UI Emergency Treatment Center a little after 1:30 a.m.

Council debates ICPD policies

Saturday's meeting sought to clarify the policies of the ICPD in the wake of the Eric Shaw shooting

By Renee Bovy and Charlotte Eby
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents packed City Council chambers Saturday afternoon to hear members of the Iowa City City Council discuss ICPD police policy and procedures with city officials in a three-hour question and answer session.

Councilors' questions were directed to Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake, City Manager Steve Atkins and City Attorney Linda Woito to clarify police procedures surrounding the Aug. 30 shooting death of Eric Shaw.

Iowa City Officer Jeffrey Gillaspie and two other officers were investigating an open door at Iowa Vending, 1132 S. Gilbert St. Gillaspie entered and shot Shaw, who was talking on the phone.

At the time of Shaw's death, Iowa City police followed procedures that were not written policy, including how an officer should proceed upon discovering an open door. Since Shaw's death an open-door policy has been created. It requires police officers who discover an open door to contact the owner of the building before entering.

However, Winkelhake said the open-door policy poses problems if the business owner cannot be contacted and there are people inside in need of help.

Currently, it is at the officer's discretion whether to announce the presence of police before entering a building or residence, Woito said. This policy and others that will need further discussion may set a precedent for other Iowa police departments, she said.

"The experience Iowa City went through recently is an experience many cities in Iowa will be revisiting. We're breaking new ground on this, unfortunately," Woito said.

The lack of clarity in several police policies prompted Iowa City residents to wonder if details surrounding the Shaw shooting would have been different had these policies been intact before the shooting.

Iowa City resident Helen Schroeder said the changes in police policy are evidence the ICPD was not doing its job before the shooting. Schroeder and members of Citizens for Justice and Accountability in the Death of Eric Shaw (CJADES) wore stickers with ques-

Councilor Dee Norton

Pizza Hut, 127 Iowa Ave., will be closing its doors for good on Feb. 19 after 11 years of business in the downtown area.

Downtown Pizza Hut to soon serve last slice

By Kelley Chorley
The Daily Iowan

The downtown Pizza Hut will serve its last slice later this month and shut its doors due to loss of profit.

The restaurant, located at 127 Iowa Ave., will close on Feb. 19 after 11 years of business.

"It surprises me that the place is closing. It is located in a prime area," UI junior Steve Zandpour said. "I hope something interesting and different moves into the old space. There seems to be enough pizza places around here."

The restaurant's closing means the 22 employees will have to find a new place of employment in the next three weeks.

"I transferred to this Pizza Hut and have been working here since the beginning of last semester," UI sophomore and Pizza Hut employee Jon Lourens said. "I will probably just transfer to another location, but still I'll be out of a job."

Employees, like Lourens, who are currently working at the downtown restaurant have been offered the option of relocating to the other Pizza Hut restaurants in the Iowa City area. They have the option of moving to 1921 Keokuk St. or moving to the site in Coralville.

Employees aren't the only ones disappointed with the closing. Customers also were shocked to hear about the pizza place going out of business.

"I remember Pizza Hut was the first place I ate when I came here as a freshman," UI junior Shannan Sacks said. "You would think it would do better business because it is more of a restaurant setting than a fast-food setting."

Whatever the setting, Pizza Hut still had to compete with the other pizza places like Gumby's, 702 S. Gilbert St., and Home Team Pizza, 922 Maiden Lane.

"I don't think Pizza Hut stayed open late enough to cater to the late-night student munchies," general manager at Gumby's Pizza, Karen Merna said. "Besides, their prices were a little bit too high. They have to think about the college students who don't have the money to spend on pizza."

Students line up for new 'Star Wars'

By Emily Shack
The Daily Iowan

Like Imperial Storm Troopers, "Star Wars" fans waited Friday night in lines that wrapped around Old Capitol Mall and stretched onto Clinton Street.

Devotees played cards and chess as they waited to see "Star Wars: Special Edition," 20 years after its first showing. All three Friday shows were sold out, with an estimated 200 tickets sold in 15 minutes.

"I waited since 1:30 for the 4:10 show," UI freshman Scott McVicker said. "It came out the year I was born, so it was great to finally see it on the big screen."

UI freshmen Scott Oltrogge and Andrew Danreiter both gave the movie a thumbs up. Both own a copy of the original and after watching it for years on 19-inch TVs, they said seeing it on big screen was amazing.

Oltrogge, a film studies major, credits the movie as one of the inspirations for his film career.

Rob Mellett/The Daily Iowan

UI students Chad Eichorn, Aaron Raffcorn and Patty Past play cards to pass the time waiting for tickets for the "Star Wars" premiere Friday night. Some of the fans had been waiting in line as early as 1 p.m. for the 7 p.m. showing.

"I had goose bumps through the whole movie," said Oltrogge. "Star Wars' made me want to make movies when I was growing up."

Many fans attribute the passion to relive the "Star Wars" experience on the indelible mark the movie left on them during their childhood.

"This is the definitive movie of my childhood," said Danreiter. "There are few things that rival the 'Star Wars' experience. I felt like I was 6 years old again."

UI alumnus Andrew Ostlund said seeing 'Star Wars' again brought him back to his childhood.

"I was so excited, I felt like I was 3 years old," Ostlund said. "Some of the dialogue and effects seemed a little cheesy now, but it doesn't matter because the movie still has the same magic."

"Star Wars" zealot Thomas Rudbeck said he had never seen the film in the theater and described it as a "religious experience."

"The droids' (C-3PO and R2-D2) personalities show up much better on the big screen," he said. "It was amazing, but the original is still great."

However, Rudbeck said some of the sound effects were a bit overdone.

"The lizards that the Storm Troopers ride on made the stupidest noises," he said. "It was a little laughable."

Not all moviegoers had the same experience. UI sophomore Jaime Hearst loved the film, but described the atmosphere as "straight testosterone."

"Everyone was yelling and clapping during the movie," Hearst said. "I've never seen such excitement in a theater before — it was a bunch of grown men being little boys again."

Dion Harting, assistant manager of Campus Theatres, could not understand the frenzy surrounding the special edition, which contains scenes that were cut from the original.

"This is great for the theater, but all this chaos and insanity for four and a half additional minutes?" Harting said. "We've all seen it before; I think this is pretty ridiculous."

Oltrogge said he wasn't satisfied by just one big-screen experience and is anticipating the release of the rest of the trilogy.

"I'm going to Cedar Rapids to see it in a better theater this weekend," Oltrogge said.

UI sophomore D.J. Lynch drove to his hometown of Schaumburg,

Student Health addresses complaints

By Chris Gardner
The Daily Iowan

Students may travel to Student Health Service looking for a prescription cure-all for their seasonal colds, but common sense remedies like chicken soup, rest and aspirin are usually the advice they receive.

UI sophomore Tessa Altman has been to Student Health once and she only plans on going back if "push comes to shove."

Altman visited the facility, seeking treatment for a sinus infection, and said she was upset that she wasn't offered the care she thought she needed to get well. She wanted a prescription antibiotic for her infection but said she was told she had a cold and was advised to rest and take plenty of fluids.

"That's the only time I've been there, and I don't plan on going back, because they (health officials) don't meet your needs," Altman said.

Complaints similar to Altman's seem to be a common view of some

UI students, but Student Health officials say their goal is to provide the best possible care for students and not prescribe antibiotics unless necessary for the illness.

Dole encourages wife to make presidential bid

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Dole still thinks about living in the White House. Now, though, he'll be glad to do it as first husband.

Dole says in the latest issue of TV Guide that he's encouraging his wife Elizabeth to ponder a presidential bid in 2000.

"She did such a good job at the convention. A good campaign- ing job. She has lots of friends out there. It's the new millennium. Got a woman secretary of state. It's only one more step now. It's going to happen," Dole says.

But he wants her to wait awhile before making any decisions. "When the 1998 election comes, then take a look," Dole counsels. "Put it in the back of your head."

And what would the role of the former Republican presidential candidate and longtime Kansas senator be in the White House?

"I'd have a car and a driver and nothing to do. What a life."

Boy George sings the blues after alleged assault

LONDON (AP) — They really wanted to hurt me, Boy George says.

The pop singer said he was beaten up by bouncers as he and a friend tried to enter the Ministry of Sound, the London nightclub where he works as a disc jockey.

"They grabbed me by the throat and dragged me out into the street," he told Press Association on Sunday. "They kicked me and punched me and broke my fingernails. They actually beat me up under the poster advertising an album I have done for them."

A Scotland Yard spokesperson said police were investigating the incident.

Mark Rodol, the club's managing director, said Boy George was apparently in a party that refused to go through the normal entry procedure.

Scorsese admits to craving for TV cooking shows

NEW YORK (AP) — It's not the news or old movies that draw Martin Scorsese to the television — it's the cooking shows, which remind him of mom.

"I loved to watch my mother cook," he told Details magazine in its February issue. "Ever since I was a boy, I've loved to watch cooking shows. I liked the way things were made. It's like little paintings in a way."

"These shows are soothing, like music. It's fantastic. Now I watch the Television Food Network."

Scorsese's mother, Catherine, died Jan. 6 at age 84. She appeared in some of her son's films, published a cookbook and even cooked on the set of "GoodFellas."

Scorsese admits he never picked up his mother's talent.

"I have someone who cooks for me," he said. "I can kind of make water boil. The hardest thing with cooking would be to time when everything should be ready. I tried to cook about 15 years ago and it was a mess."

Simpson jury trouble nothing new

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — When O.J. Simpson's jury removed a juror in the middle of deliberations and ordered talks to start anew, the crisis was reminiscent of three recent high-profile trials, one of them racially sensitive.

A black juror was ousted in the midst of talks during the trial of two men charged with the riot beating of trucker Reginald Denny and two jurors were bumped while discussing the second murder trial of Erik and Lyle Menendez.

In the most bizarre case, a juror was murdered during deliberations in the serial murder case of Night Stalker Richard Ramirez. In all three trials, lawyers moved for mistrial, their motions were denied, jurors were replaced and talks started again. All of the reconstituted juries were able to reach verdicts.

Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki was not the first jurist to worry aloud in such a case that things seemed about to "unravel." But like those who encountered the problem before, Fujisaki decided to move on and hope for the best.

In his criminal trial, the faces on the jury changed drastically during the trial as six jurors were dismissed for such infractions as failing to disclose their own history of domestic abuse and negotiating book deals while the trial was still under way.

But no one left during the deliberations. They didn't have time. The jury returned its verdict in little more than three hours.

Now the jury in Simpson's civil trial, which had spent three days talking, has had to go back to square one because of a juror's undisclosed connection with the office that prosecuted Simpson in the first trial.

Rosemary Caraway, 62, who sat through all four months of the wrongful death case, was plucked from the jury room after the district attorney's office notified Fujisaki that Caraway was the mother of an employee in that office.

Caraway had not told the judge about the connection during jury selection.

The incident followed a report that two jurors from the criminal trial sent letters to the civil trial jurors suggesting how they could make money from personal appearances after the trial. The two former jurors were placed under investigation, while the current jurors were quizzed about contacts but were allowed to continue on the trial.

Caraway's dismissal was further notable for the fact that she was the only black member of the civil panel. Simpson's criminal jury was predominantly black, and race played a role in that case.

In the Denny trial, where two black men were accused of attempting to murder a white truck driver, Superior Court Judge John Ouderirk removed a black woman juror after other members of the panel complained she lacked "common sense" and couldn't grasp the issues.

Talks in that case had to restart twice. The judge removed also a white male juror who asked to be dismissed for personal reasons.

In the Menendez brothers' second trial, two jurors were removed for health reasons. One, the jury foreperson, suffered a heart attack. Weeks later, when the jury reached guilty verdicts without her she returned to participate in a jury press conference and said she concurred with her peers.

In 1989, Superior Court Judge Michael Tynan was faced with an unprecedented crisis in the case of Ramirez, the drifter charged with 13 serial murders and 30 related felonies.

The jury, which had heard a year's worth of testimony, spent 13 days deliberating before one juror had to be dismissed for sleeping during their talks. As they prepared to start over, a juror was found slain at her home after a domestic dispute.

Her live-in lover admitted the killing in a note written just before he committed suicide.

"Please understand that none of this had anything to do with whether Mr. Ramirez is guilty or innocent of these charges," Tynan told the jurors.

"We must get on with the task that life has given us," he declared and refused to declare a mistrial.

The jurors ultimately convicted Ramirez and recommended the death sentence.

Fujisaki has not told the remaining jurors why Caraway was removed and he has ordered them not to speculate about it. A new juror, an Asian-American man, was chosen by lottery from the remaining alternates.

Fujisaki ordered deliberations to start again, and he pleaded with jurors to make sure nothing else goes awry.

"I'm asking you to ensure that things do not unravel," he said.

Legal observers said it will be a difficult task to start over. But Loyola Law School Dean Laurie Levenson, for one, believes the jurors will be conscientious.

"The judge has appealed to their integrity," she said.

"I think these jurors will do their best to make sure the trial does not unravel."

Cosby returns to comedy stage

By Will Lester
Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Bill Cosby pulled on a "Hello Friend" sweatshirt and returned to the stage for the first time since his son was slain, reminding anxious fans that the purpose of comedy is relief.

Then, he made them laugh. When he first walked onto the stage Saturday night at the Raymond F. Kravis Center for the Performing Arts, he cut off a raucous standing ovation with the stern admonition: "Please be seated."

Then he talked for several minutes about the tragedy on everyone's mind.

Cosby quietly recalled the assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr. and President Kennedy, saying he felt the same numbing emotion when he heard his only son, Ennis, had been killed.

The 59-year-old comedian recalled how the nation came to a halt in Nov. 1963, how television was blanketed with coverage of the president's funeral.

"I tried to find some cartoons," he told the hushed audience, a well-dressed crowd mostly from his own generation. "The theaters were closed."

Even normally garrulous winos were glum, he recalled, until a few started to loosen up and boast to anybody who would listen: "I was a good friend of President Kennedy."

The crowd laughed nervously. So Cosby encouraged them to relax with an old friend.

"This is not difficult for me because a part of my lifetime has been you all," he said.

Cosby, whose sweatshirt was emblazoned with the warm greeting used by 27-year-old Ennis, said he'd grown to realize that the Jan. 16 slaying was a terrific strain not only on his family but on fans.

"I don't mean to sound arrogant, but somebody had to give them a release," he said. "I have to give them a release because that's what

Bill Cosby gets a standing ovation from the studio audience before taping an episode of his show "Cosby" on Friday in New York.

I do for a living. I don't sing."

After a pause, he said, "I do sell pudding." He talked proudly of Ennis, a doctoral student and teacher of special-needs students in New York City who was killed as he finished changing a tire on a Los Angeles freeway access road.

Cosby spoke quietly, some sentences trailing off uncompleted as he searched for the right words. He asked for understanding from "those of you who will be fortunate enough to be blessed with a child who, when you say something, that child believes you and trusts you and knows that you're right in your teaching."

He referred also to his wife, Camille, and the births of their five children: "No man alive can match deliverance. I'm not going to talk about superiority because women win every time, because women are smarter."

The audience laughed, a clear release of emotion. And moments later, the old Cosby was back — raspy-voiced, elastic-faced and rolling on the floor. He recalled the hilarious trials of growing up poor in Philadelphia, trying to conform in the Navy and surviving 33 years of marriage.

Fans, many admitting they were nervous about how he would handle the show, were relieved and delighted by his performance.

"I was kind of worried for him at first," said Craig Koff of Boca Raton, who brought his two young sons. "He got me kind of emotional with his lead-in. But he did great. He was hysterical after that."

Cosby did not mention the $24 million extortion attempt by a 22-year-old woman claiming to be his illegitimate daughter, a scandal that surfaced almost immediately after Ennis was killed. Cosby has said he had a rendezvous with the woman's mother, but denies being the father.

He thanked the audience at the end of two sold-out shows.

"I want to thank all of you for your spirit, your trust and your kindness," he said. "Let us hope and pray that we never have to meet again under circumstances like this."

Poll says Iowans want death penalty

DES MOINES (AP) — A new poll shows continued strong support for a return of the death penalty in Iowa.

The copyright poll by the Des Moines Register shows also that Iowans don't understand that current law provides life in prison with virtually no chance of parole for the worst criminals.

When given that idea as an option, support for the death penalty drops sharply.

Iowa has not had the death penalty since 1965, two years following the last execution. Despite overwhelming support, numerous attempts to restore the death penalty have failed.

Another effort is being launched this year, with backers heartened by the fact that Republicans have majority membership in both chambers of the Legislature for the first time in 14 years.

When asked, "Should the death penalty be restored for certain crimes," 74 percent of Iowans say yes, while 22 percent are opposed and 4 percent don't know. That's a small drop of support over the years. In January 1993, support was 81 percent, and in January 1995, 78 percent said yes.

But support drops sharply when respondents are asked to choose between the death penalty and a "true life sentence." Only 50 percent then chose the death penalty, while 41 percent chose life in prison and 9 percent were unsure.

Iowa's current law provides a life sentence without parole for the worst criminals, such as those convicted of first-degree murder. But most Iowans don't realize that, according to the poll.

The poll asked this question: "From your understanding of the way things work in Iowa, do you think most people convicted of first-degree murder eventually gain freedom, or do you think most serve the rest of their lives in prison?" Sixty percent of Iowans said most of the lifers go free, while 26 percent said most spend their lives in prison and 14 percent were not sure.

But in fact, the only way a lifer can be set free is if a governor commutes the sentence to a term of years, and then only if the parole board grants parole. In the 14 years he has been governor, Terry Branstad has commuted the terms of only two lifers. In the 14 years before that, former Governor Robert Ray commuted the terms of 21 life sentences.

There currently are 470 people serving life terms in Iowa.

"If people think these inmates are getting out, it's merely a perception," said James McKinney of the Iowa Department of Corrections.

The poll was conducted from Jan. 23-26 with 815 Iowans aged 18 or older. Results have a margin of error of plus or minus 3.4 percentage points.

Kind of small for a UFO, isn't it?

Many UI students took advantage of the unseasonably warm temperatures Sunday afternoon. Freshman Doug Olson chases down a wayward frisbee thrown by a friend between the Burge and Daum residence halls. "It's so warm, I can't believe it's this nice in February," said freshman Dan Wehnen, not pictured.

Public utilities become cable suppliers

CEDAR FALLS (AP) — Two Iowa cities are using their public-owned utility system to offer cable television and several others are considering the same move.

Private cable companies say the competition is unfair and raises issues of government censorship.

The largest municipal cable system is in Cedar Falls, where the Cedar Falls Utilities has recruited 4,675 of the city's 10,000 households to sign up. Harlan Municipal Utilities has installed cable in 350 of the 2,300 houses in town.

"The major motivating factor was that the supplier was providing a poor-quality product and lower-quality service than what the people expected," said Gerald Quick, general manager of Harlan Municipal Utilities.

Cedar Falls promotes its fiber-optic network as an economic-development tool and as a major improvement to quality of life.

Giving residents access to fiber-optics and a high-speed cable modem decreases the time it takes to download information from the Internet, said Dan Mills, manager of communications for Cedar Falls Utilities. The cable modem is 50 times faster than a conventional computer modem, he said.

"It's the difference between a drinking straw and a railway tunnel," he said.

The cable service competes against Tele-Communications Inc., the nation's largest cable company. Executives say the competition is unfair because they face different regulations.

"All we're asking for is fairness," said Tom Graves, executive vice president of the Iowa Cable and Telecommunications Association.

Private cable companies have to pay pole rates, franchise fees and property taxes, but municipal systems do not.

News Briefs

Woman convicted of killing baby she planned to adopt

IOWA CITY (AP) — A woman accused of killing a baby she was trying to adopt was convicted of second-degree murder.

Velma Whiting, 42, of Iowa City had been charged with first-degree murder. A Johnson County jury found her guilty of the lesser charge on Friday.

Whiting faces up to 50 years in prison when sentenced on March 14.

The jury apparently compromised between the prosecution's contention that Whiting was guilty of first-degree murder, while the defense argued she was guilty of involuntary manslaughter.

Whiting was charged in the May 30, 1996, death of Shauna Patrick, 6 months. The baby died after being severely hit.

State medical examiner Thomas Bennett had testified that Shauna died of internal bleeding caused by a severe blow to the abdomen.

College of Nursing welcomes new dean

On Friday night, the UI welcomed the new dean for the College of Nursing, Dr. Melanie Dreher. She was appointed to the position last summer, and started to work with the faculty on Jan. 15, 1997.

"In this day of age with evolving health care, change is a way of life," said Mary Stewart Dedmon, assistant professor for the College of Nursing. "We see great opportunities and are looking forward to the future."

Dreher is a former dean of the School of Nursing at the University of Massachusetts, and adjunct professor of anthropology. Dreher holds a bachelor's degree in nursing, a masters in philosophy and a doctorate in anthropology.

Along with her duties as dean, Dreher holds the position of associate director of UI Hospitals and Clinics. She also is president of the Sigma Theta Tau International Nursing Honor Society and a member of the Council on Nursing and Anthropology.

"The College of Nursing is very well respected, and we plan to continue that tradition with Dreher," UI President Mary Sue Coleman said.

Faculty members said they are excited about the future.

"We are looking forward to working with her, we see great things ahead," Dedmon said.

Dreher plans to work with the faculty in reshaping the curriculum, strengthening managed health care and building a strong foundation of research.

Dreher said this is a pivotal time in managed care. This is a place where nursing is really happening, and an era when it is happening.

"I made the right decision; this is a great place to be," Dreher said.

Quotable "This is great for the theater, but all this chaos and insanity for four and a half additional minutes?"
 Assistant Manager of Campus Theatres Dion Harting, on the opening of the "Star Wars: The Special Edition" last Friday

NCAA athletes already work for a living

Until recently, the NCAA prohibited college athletes on full scholarship from holding part-time jobs during the academic school year. Athletes with partial scholarships could work, but they were prohibited from making more than the financial need for attending college.

Beginning in August, all athletes will be able to work as often as they want (as long as it doesn't conflict with the season), without any monetary restrictions.

They cannot be hired because of their athletic ability or celebrity alone; they must be paid the comparable local wage, and they may only be paid for work they have done. Employers and students will be required to sign "affidavits of compliance."

Even with these so-called guidelines in place, it is easy to imagine how the new regulations might be abused. Boosters would be able to create do-nothing jobs and pay the athletes large amounts of money. Or worse, employers could exploit the athletes to make money for themselves — having them sign autographs, or advertising them as a reason to buy their product or service — "Once master of the art of the pass, now he is master of the art of the steak."

Eat here tonight and have your meal specially prepared by Iowa's Matt Sherman!

The language of the guidelines renders the rules highly elastic. The words "comparable local wage" are logical when the job is McDonald's; they are meaningless when the job is a specially created

If nothing else, the new environment markedly will increase the opportunity for impropriety. Big-time athletes are like magnets. They attract money. Allowing them to hold a job during the school year only moves them closer to those who want to give it to them.

Furthermore, what serious student-athlete has time to play and practice his or her sport, attend classes, study and work? The fact is, they don't. If athletes actually were to put in time working, it would take away from some other area of their lives, even during the off season. If you were a full-scholarship Division I player, what would you put first: academics, or your possible ticket to the big money?

It has been pointed out by many that Division I athletes in such sports as football and basketball already have full-time jobs which generate millions of dollars; they just don't get to keep any of it. By acknowledging this, it becomes reasonable that scholarships be expanded to include expenses that currently are not being met.

For example, the expense of transportation between home and school, laundry and other small incidental costs are not covered. Well, why not cover them? It wouldn't be hard to calculate the average cost of doing laundry, nor would it be difficult to purchase players' plane or bus tickets to travel home for breaks. Full-scholarship players who bring in millions in revenue deserve as much.

But what about athletes who bring in very little revenue? What about sports like rowing or gymnastics? What about athletes who are on half-scholarships at Division II schools? These players aren't subject to the same pressures and temptations as are the big-time Division I athletes. That is to say, they are not money magnets. For these athletes, who have less on the line, working, particularly in the off-season, may be a viable possibility.

How might a university distinguish between which players should be prevented from working and which players should not? A simple formula might be adopted: If the collective home ticket sales revenue for a season is greater than 10 times the collective scholarship cost of the team, then the players for that sport should be given a more inclusive version of their scholarship, but be prevented from working.

Permitting big-time athletes to work will warp the system by making "part-time job offers" part of the recruitment process. Let us not forget athletes have access to loans in addition to their scholarships. For the big-time athletes that really need money, universities would do better to compensate them outright, rather than turning them loose on the street to deal with the hustlers, gamblers and alumni.

City Council needs to restore faith

All the money in Iowa City's coffers and all sorts of changes in police-department procedures will not restore Eric Shaw's life.

The Iowa City community still is coming to grips with the Aug. 30 shooting of Shaw by an Iowa City police officer.

On Saturday, the same community took a step in the healing process and in the effort to prevent a future tragedy. But more needs to be done.

At a special work session, the Iowa City Council discussed possible changes to police practices to make the community safer and the department more accountable.

The recommended changes include using a canine patrol unit to assist with building searches, revamping the police's policies for the use of force and modifying the procedures the department follows after an officer fires his gun.

There is little doubt that many of the 21 proposed changes are needed to make Iowa City safer, but there is much in the hearts and minds of residents that also needs to be addressed.

In order for much of the city to resolve Eric Shaw's death and to restore confidence in the tarnished

Much of the public still feels in the dark. There is the lingering perception among some people that the truth is being obscured by local and state officials.

ICPD, there needs to be a full and complete disclosure of the incidents surrounding the shooting.

Rumors and innuendo are rampant in the city, and for them to be put to rest the residents must be apprised of the facts. Some council members acknowledged they were in the dark about the incident immediately after the shooting.

Much of the public still feels in the dark. There is the lingering perception among some people that the truth is being obscured by local and state officials.

This gossip and speculation have the potential to cripple the effectiveness and ruin the reputation of city officials and departments, and the only way to stop their further spread is with the truth.

The truth will be revealed only by opening records about the shooting, holding public hearings on police procedures and inviting comment from the community.

The City Council needs to pressure the state to force the Department of Criminal Investigation to release its report on Eric Shaw's killing. For each day the state keeps the report confidential, speculation mounts that some sort of cover up is afoot.

The City Council needs to establish the much talked-about public review board for the police department. The public should have greater opportunity to influence city and police procedures.

The City Council needs to talk with community members and business people about what they want in the police procedures and safety considerations. Having the meeting Saturday was a good start, but the public should be allowed to speak at future meetings, to give input on how and when police officers use force and search suspected crime scenes.

The city deserves nothing short of a full and honest disclosure of the facts surrounding Eric Shaw's tragic death.

Byron R. Brown is an editorial writer and a first year law student.

A good change in gun policy

It was hard for council members not to speak about Eric Shaw, Aug. 30 or Jeffrey Gillaspie at the Iowa City City Council meeting Saturday.

The meeting was a work session, a question/answer session for council members to ask Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake, City Manager Steve Atkins and City Attorney Linda Wojto questions about police policy. As Mayor Naomi Novick pointed out in a pre-meeting rules speech, there was to be no public forum and no questions about specific police employees. The council members were only to discuss policy.

But Atkins started the meeting with a very accurate premonition. "You will name names," he said, "You will ask 'what if?'"

And the council members did. They asked about policy, certainly, but in strange contexts — often questions were worded "before Aug. 30" and "after Aug. 30." Eric Shaw and Jeffrey Gillaspie were on council members' minds, and the public's collective mind as well, as the stickers on many community members' chests attested to.

There were no words on those little white rectangles, only a small, but important symbolic character — a question mark.

But even though the public was not allowed to speak at this meeting, and even though information surrounding the death of Eric Shaw still is missing pieces, there were things that shone through the heavy cloud that hung over the meeting. The Iowa City Police Department has taken some important steps in changing its policies. These are steps that will make our community safer, and make the police department's relationship with the community more sound.

Though there were several policies that were discussed, one key change, made last October, stands out. It is a change that may or may not have made a difference in the Eric Shaw shooting, but will make a difference in how police approach potentially dangerous situations in the future.

At the meeting, Chief Winkelhake said in the past eight years police guns have only been fired four times by ICPD officers. In two of those incidents, the shots fired were due to accidental discharges, and one shot was a warning shot (which is illegal according to police policy). The other instance, of course, was the shooting of Eric Shaw.

This seemingly stellar record pleased council member Ernie Lehman, who said in a community of 60,000 people that performance was pretty good, and showed the ICPD was doing an excellent job.

But the information missing here is the number of times guns were drawn. There are no accurate reports on how many times a gun has been drawn by an Iowa City police officer, because until recently, a drawn gun did not mean a gun was used, and therefore not considered "deadly force." If there is no deadly force, there is no special report documenting a drawn gun.

Winkelhake said it would take weeks to find out how many times guns were drawn by officers, because there are no special reports — the information is buried in routine police reports.

Prior to October, police policy stated that any time a gun was "used" it was considered deadly force and, in accordance with police policy and federal law, a special report was made. Firing a gun was the only definition that could be construed as "use of a gun" and hence deadly force.

(Deadly force is the fifth and highest level of force under the ICPD, should happen only if the officer perceives a threat of serious bodily harm to himself/herself or others, and results always in a special report and investigation.)

So, under the old policy, Winkelhake said, there was a difference between "pulling the weapon" and "using the weapon."

Then Winkelhake brought up some very metaphysical questions. If an officer pulls his weapon and no one is there to see it, as in a premises search where no one is found, and the officer does not endanger anyone's life, does this need to be construed as "deadly force?" If an officer pulls a gun and uses it in a situation where others are present, if he or she uses the gun as an intimidation, as a preliminary step in a necessary situation where shots may or may not be fired, is this deadly force?

Isn't there always the threat or possibility of injury or death every time a gun is drawn? Isn't this always deadly force?

It comes down to the age-old Zen question: If a tree falls in the woods with no one around to hear it, does it make a sound?

Old police policy would have had officers answering no to this question — a drawn gun does not necessarily mean deadly force. But under current policy, a drawn gun is a falling tree that makes noise even if no shot is fired or no one sees it. It says "I am a gun and I can hurt or kill you." A gun always says this, whether a shot is fired or not. A loaded gun always is deadly force.

What does this change in policy mean for the Iowa City community? It means, for starters, that officers, having to succumb to an investigation every time they draw their gun, will be particularly careful in displaying their firearms.

It means the ICPD will be able to provide citizens with more accurate information on how many times guns are displayed, and in what types of situations. And it means there is a more clear understanding between citizens and police officers about the role firearms play in the protection of this community's members. Citizens now know that when guns are drawn, the officer(s) involved value this action the way citizens value this action — as something that happens only in extremely dangerous circumstances.

It means steps are being taken to insure that another innocent citizen will not be killed by a police officer sworn to protect him.

And these are important steps to a secure community. And a respected police force.

Sex and the single moviegoer

Actually, it comes down to a question of etiquette: how one properly handles an uncomfortable social situation.

The situation was this: Cari Hicks, 14, and two teen-age friends had gone to see a movie at a Sony Theater in Streamwood, Ill.

"We ended up seeing Beavis and Butt-Head because we went to see something else and couldn't get in."

"The theater was really crowded. We were sitting in the middle, and there was this couple sitting in front of us."

"At first, we didn't notice what they were doing. It started gradually and it looked like they were just making out, and we didn't care because we were all in high school."

"We didn't like the movie and we were all talking, so we weren't paying much attention to them."

"Then my friend realized that making out wasn't all they were doing. They had their coats over them so you couldn't completely tell, but they were pretty much naked."

"And they were having sex, right there in the middle of the movie theater."

"They were in their 30s, and they didn't seem embarrassed. We were all disgusted. We said: 'Eeeuuow.'"

Because they were talking, a man behind them leaned forward and suggested they shut up.

Then he, too, noticed the thrashing movements of the couple and said: "What are they doing?"

And she, too, said something like: "Eeeuuow."

The question is, what do you do in a situation like that? You can't exactly lean forward and tap one of them on the shoulder. You could, but in the darkness, you couldn't be sure where you were tapping.

And even after you tapped them somewhere, what do you say? Possibly: "Excuse us, but your behavior is a distraction, and we don't approve of it on general moral ground."

Unfortunately, people who get almost naked and have sex in the middle of a crowded theater are probably indifferent to public opinion.

Besides, they might say: "Well, you have been jabbering throughout the movie, and that disturbs us, so why don't you clam up?"

And they would have a point.

I would like to think this is another example of the decline and fall of civilized behavior in our society.

But in truth, this isn't an entirely new problem for movie theaters and audiences.

As a lad, I worked as an usher at the Marshall Square Theater in Chicago and later downtown at the Chicago Theater.

At both places, occasionally we had to deal with people who were overcome with uncontrollable love or lust, although it usually was limited to vigorous groping or pawing and seldom a full display of unclad whatchamacallit.

The solution was simple enough. If we spotted it ourselves or a patron called it to our attention, we would simply aim a beam from our industrial-sized flashlights at them, blink it a few times and their ardor would cool.

Or there was the more stern approach taken by Stockyards

Mike Royko

If a patrolling usher spotted a coat spread on the floor of one of the boxes and a couple engaged in what was then called the dirty deed, he would rush to a house phone and alert the rest of the ushers, who would scramble to the top of the balcony to take in the impromptu show.

Lenny, one of the more militant of ushers.

He would snarl: "OK, you lousy perverts, knock it off or we call the cops."

At the Chicago Theater, that was not a hollow threat since the theater hired full-time off-duty cops to work security in uniform.

And he would come to the scene, accompanied by several ushers who would bathe the targets in flashlight beams and we'd escort the humiliated offenders from the auditorium, through the crowded lobby and out on the street.

I don't doubt that if this were done today, the theater and the cop would be sued for public embarassment, loss of consortium, long-term impotency, frigidity, sterility, as well as insensitivity.

The Chicago Theater was a popular place for afternoon trysts because it has boxes along the sides of the balcony, which provided some privacy. Especially during the day, when the balcony hardly was in use.

However, the couples who used the boxes weren't as private as they thought. The ushers frequently would go to the top of the theater and look down to check for wrongdoers. If a patrolling usher spotted a coat spread on the floor of one of the boxes and a couple engaged in what was then called the dirty deed, he would rush to a house phone and alert the rest of the ushers, who would scramble to the top of the balcony to take in the impromptu show.

Legend has it that one usher's young life was shattered when he peered down and saw the young lady who was his betrothed.

So what did Cari and her friends do at the Sony Theater in Streamwood?

Nothing. They didn't even try to find an usher or a manager, although in most theaters today, the only visible employees are those who sell tickets or munchies.

Cari's mother, Dori, said: "When she told me about it, I told her: 'Why didn't one of you say: 'Holster it and take it outside.'"

"She said: 'Mom, we can't do that.'"

"I guess there is this attitude in society that as long as I'm not hurting, I can do what I want wherever I want. People think it's offensive to tell someone their behavior is offensive. Many of us have gotten accustomed to the belief that rights are guaranteed for those who choose to be obnoxious."

"It is a sad commentary on how wanton we have become."

In some circles, yes. At a theater in Streamwood showing Beavis and Butt-Head, yes.

But I doubt very much if that couple would have gone undetected and unrestrained at the Lyric Opera.

Clinton's budget to hit Congress this week

By Calvin Woodward
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's budget will land on desks this week with a commanding thud, two days after he speaks to the nation. A mad rustling of pages will ensue. Start to finish, it will be his week.

But what all that sound and flurry signifies will be for Congress to decide. And Congress has some ideas of its own.

Clinton's budget ultimately is a list, although a powerful one made morso by the debut of the line-item veto. Its prospects depend on whether those wishes are in negotiating range of Republican goals.

So far both sides have struck a conciliatory tone that contrasts with the fur-fly-ing that shut down the government two budgets ago and carried into the election.

Clinton

Prudence has overtaken passion, and step by step is seen now as the way to go, whether on Clinton's efforts to improve access to health care or the flagging GOP push to close whole government departments.

"I want to keep our powder dry and want them to keep their powder dry," Clinton said in the lead-up to his State of the Union speech

Tuesday and the release of his budget on Thursday.

Some Republican budget chiefs foresee "potholes ... not big bombs," in the way of Clinton's spending plans, as New Mexico Sen. Pete Domenici, one of those leaders, has put it.

But few doubt congressional powers will reassert themselves, that partisan tensions now in check could come quickly crashing forward, and that the two parties hold on to fundamentally competing visions of government.

Chechnya rebuilding after war with Russia

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

GROZNY, Russia — A heap of shattered concrete is what remains of the presidential palace, the scene of intense fighting between the Russians and separatist rebels.

In every direction of the Chechen republic's capital, half-crumbled buildings resemble ancient ruins.

Chechens chafed against Moscow's rule time and again for more than a century. Now, they are running their own affairs and express few regrets about the heavy cost of the 20-month war.

But they live with the fallout every day, and it will take years, perhaps even a generation, to fully reconstruct the tiny Muslim republic — regardless of whether it ever formally breaks away from Russia.

"It will take us at least five years to rebuild Grozny," businessperson

Said Tasuyev predicted. And, he added, "I still don't know where we'll get the money."

While Chechens are uncompromising in their quest for independence, President-elect Aslan Maskhadov and most other Chechens are realistic enough to understand the need for strong economic links to Russia. Moscow says Chechnya must remain part of Russia, but neither side seems to want to push the issue for the moment.

Maskhadov has said he is willing to continue negotiations with Russia after his inauguration later this month. But even so, it appears the two sides are headed for a prolonged standoff, with Chechnya operating as an autonomous region but unlikely to win recognition as a sovereign state from either Russia or the rest of the world.

Meanwhile, the Chechens are rebuilding one small step at a time.

ABA pushes for moratorium for capital punishment laws

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The American Bar Association never has taken a position on the death penalty but may be on the brink of seeking an end to executions "unless and until greater fairness and due process prevail."

A report prepared by two groups within the 370,000-lawyer organization recommended a moratorium because "efforts to forge a fair capital punishment jurisprudence have failed."

"Efforts to forge a fair capital punishment jurisprudence have failed," the report says. "Today, administration of the death penalty ... is ... a haphazard maze of unfair practices with no internal consistency."

The ABA's policy-making House of Delegates, meeting at the association's national convention, will be asked today to adopt the moratorium recommendation in response to recent federal and state actions. If accepted, it would become the focus of ABA lobbying efforts in Congress and state legislatures.

More than 3,000 men and women are on death rows across the nation. Most states and the federal government have death-sentence laws. "As lawyers, we think the system ought to be changed, done right and done fairly," said Duke University law Professor James Coleman, one of the measure's backers. "Hopefully, this will get lawyers off the sidelines."

The measure does not state a position on capital punishment. Instead, it invokes previously adopted ABA policies that "minimize the risk that innocent persons may be executed."

The policies have called for:

- Competent counsel for all capital defendants.
- Availability of federal court review of state prosecutions.
- Efforts to eliminate racial discrimination in capital sentencing.
- No executions of mentally retarded defendants or those under 18 when they committed their crimes.

The Supreme Court previously has allowed the death penalty for murderers who committed crimes at age 16 or 17. It has upheld death-penalty regimens despite evidence that black defendants and killers of white victims are more likely to be sentenced to die.

The Clinton administration has voiced opposition. Justice Department officials told the ABA the recommendation is unwarranted.

tion marks to show the City Council that there still were many unanswered issues surrounding Shaw's death.

Schroeder said she wants to see Officer Troy Kelsay fired. Kelsay was present the night of the shooting.

"It really bothers me he's still on the force," Schroeder said.

However, there are documents that have not yet been released about the case. Woito said the city has released all the information it has about the incident. The Iowa Division of Criminal Investigations report on the shooting, which will be authorized by Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller, has not been released.

City administrators have recommended 22 changes in police policy and procedures following the Shaw

Shooting. Council members made no decisions on the recommendations Saturday, but did say there will be further discussion of the issue this month. Dates for the additional discussions will be announced at tonight's City Council meeting.

The council said also they hope to have a meeting where members of the community can voice their police policy and procedure concerns.

Councilor Karen Kubby said she would like to see council members reach out to Iowa City residents to see how they want to be policed.

CJADES member Jeffrey Martin said if no other opportunities are available to let the community speak about what they think the ICPD's policies should be, his group might sponsor a forum. No formal plans have yet been made.

"I was very pleased with how this went; a lot of questions that needed to be asked were asked."

Councilor Ernie Lehman

"It should be clear that the Iowa City Police Department operates in guidelines and policies that are consistent with the rest of Iowa."

STUDENT HEALTH

Dr. Mary Khowassah, director of Student Health Services, said antibiotics don't help people suffering from cold or flu symptoms and that's why over-the-counter medicines are advised.

"Sometimes people have certain illnesses that prescription drugs can't cure, and some people don't know that," Brem said.

Dr. Mary Khowassah, director of Student Health Services, said antibiotics don't help people suffering from cold or flu symptoms and that's why over-the-counter medicines are advised.

"It certainly can be that when you feel sick you want something to make you feel better, but sometimes the best treatment is no treatment," Khowassah said. "This is one very common misunderstanding, and that's why we spend time educating students on why we don't prescribe antibiotics."

Also, when being treated for illness, physicians at Student Health commonly ask patients about social habits, including smoking and alcohol consumption. The questions sometimes seem invasive and unnecessary to some students, but officials say they can provide information to help patients on the road to recovery.

The questions may seem personal to some students but Nurse Manager Larry Affi said the responses are completely confidential.

"What we are really trying to do is focus on prevention and students need to know that the responses are confidential," Affi said. "If we don't ask it in the right way it could be taken as being obtrusive."

Students are asked about alcohol consumption if they are being treated for acute stomach problems, various injuries, rape cases or taking antibiotics. Questions about tobacco usage are asked when being treated for cough, lung problems, when using birth control pills, colds and upper respiratory infections.

UI sophomore Shelane Siebert said she has been asked if she smokes cigarettes while seeing a physician for certain illnesses, but said the questions don't bother her because they could be interpreted in several different ways.

"In a way it may seem like it's none of their business, but in another way drinking or smoking may be the cause of what's wrong with me," Siebert said.

Siebert said she knows her friends have told doctors they don't smoke when they actually do, but she said also it can be hard to admit those behaviors to a health official.

"Some people may be ashamed of it, especially because it's a doctor," Siebert said. "It may be intimidating because it is bad for you and you don't want to look like a jerk telling the doctor that you smoke."

Khowassah said the questions asked are not used to form judgments on students, they are just asked to provide proper care to patients and hopefully influence students to lead healthy lifestyles.

"We don't judge anyone — that's not our role," Khowassah said. "Our role is to provide the best medical care possible, but we certainly won't look down on anyone because they have smoked some cigarettes."

Khowassah said when students do have complaints or concerns they should feel welcome to bring those to the attention of Student Health officials.

"We give our students many opportunities to provide input to our care, including Student Health Advisory Committee, patient satisfaction surveys twice a year and a suggestion box on both floors," she said.

World leaders introduce plans to aid poor entrepreneurs

By Harry Dunphy
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — World leaders opened a microcredit summit Sunday by promoting a large goal: providing loans to 100 million poor people to start businesses in the United States and abroad by 2005.

The estimated cost of $21.6 billion would pay for programs that typically offer an average of $100 to borrowers to help them open stores, raise poultry and start vegetable gardens for profit.

Hillary Rodham Clinton, who traveled to Bangladesh last year to meet poverty-stricken entrepreneurs, said such loans are a "very big idea because they directly affect people's lives and create a new environment for private economic activity that can have very long term consequences."

Rodham Clinton was among those addressing the three-day meeting along with three presidents, two prime ministers, the queens of Spain and Belgium and heads of major international financial institutions such as the World Bank.

The conference is expected to attract more than 2,000 people from 100 countries. It was organized by non-government organizations and is sponsored by private companies, including big U.S. banks and foundations.

So far, eight million people have used microcredit in places ranging from Kenya and Peru to inner-city Chicago and Washington D.C. Two-thirds of those who have benefited from such loans are women, unable to obtain credit from commercial banks. Many of the lending organizations claim repayment rates of more than 90 percent so the programs often fund themselves.

The World Bank plans to spend $200 billion in expected donor pledges on microcredit. Other organizations hoped to announce their contributions at the summit or pledge to do so by February 1998.

World Bank President James Wolfensohn said he is "personally, absolutely and totally committed to this activity."

"If we can get credit to 100 million families with six to a family, that's half the world's population living on under a dollar a day," he said.

Organizers of the summit said microcredit is just one part of a broad range of strategies to help an estimated 2.5 billion people living in abject poverty. Other elements are health and education improvement.

Critics say the summit's targets are too ambitious and raise unrealistic expectations. They say politicians support microcredit, because it offers the possibility of reducing poverty without spending heavily on foreign aid. They also are concerned microcredit is moving too fast.

"Rapid expansion brings opportunities and dangers," said Susan Holcombe of Oxfam America, a development agency. "Expansion promises increased assets and control and power of poor people. But it also increases the possibility that the benefits of microcredit will be hijacked by the not-so-poor and that poor people will again lose control to technicians and professionals."

In the United States, as the new welfare reform law forces millions of poor people off public assistance rolls, there's growing enthusiasm for helping the destitute finance, launch and run their own small businesses.

"A year or two from now, it's going to be a major component of welfare policy," predicted John Hatch, president of the nonprofit Foundation for International Community Assistance.

His group operates programs from Peru to Kyrgyzstan in central Asia but lately its emphasis has been helping poor people in rural Minnesota and Washington, D.C. open businesses.

The movement started 20 years ago in Bangladesh. Muhammad Yunus, one of the summit organizers who left his teaching job at a university to focus on microcredit, lent $27 from his own pocket to a woman who made bamboo furniture. Since then, Yunus' Grameen Bank has loaned $1.5 billion to 2.1 million borrowers in 36,000 villages.

Matt McDevitt, UI freshman and a friend of Waytenick, along with another friend and a passerby, attempted to help Waytenick by going down to the sheet of ice where he landed.

McDevitt said he, Waytenick and friends were intoxicated after coming from the bars downtown when they stopped on the Burlington Street bridge and had a snowball fight. He said Waytenick was on one side of the bridge, running and getting ready to throw a snowball when he disappeared from McDevitt's sight.

"I was looking at him and then all of a sudden I couldn't see him anymore," he said.

McDevitt said he then stopped a cab from Yellow Cab of Iowa City, 404 E. College St., to call a dispatcher to report the accident, and then ran down to where Waytenick laid on the ice.

"I was sitting there holding him and he was just saying my last name over and over again," he said. "I was talking to him trying to keep him conscious. Blood was everywhere."

Iowa City Police and Fire Departments, Johnson County Sheriff's Office and Ambulance Service and the UI Department of Public Safety arrived on the scene shortly after the ICPD received the call from the cab reporting the accident.

McDevitt said he wasn't happy with the treatment he and his friend received from the ICPD and Public Safety. Although he recognized that they were reckless from drinking, McDevitt said the ICPD and Public Safety should have been more sensitive and not as accusatory about the incident.

"Being drunk made us more susceptible to an accident," he said. "But they didn't treat us like our friend had just fallen off a bridge."

Since 1990, seven people have died in dam or bridge-related accidents. Two of the people died from bridge-jumping and five have died in boating accidents.

Iowa City Mayor Naomi Novick said the city hasn't made any plans to prevent bridge-related accidents since the last discussion which took place in October 1994.

Recommendations for railings, chains and buoys around the bridge were made at that meeting between city representatives, ICPD and Iowa Department of Transportation. However, since the informal committee met in 1994, no actions have been taken.

Iowa City City Manager Steve Atkins said this incident might spark discussion of protective measures against bridge-related accidents, but is unsure of a solution.

Ireland observes anniversary of 'Bloody Sunday'

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — Twenty-five years after British troops gunned down 13 Roman Catholic demonstrators, more than 20,000 marchers and political leaders called for justice Sunday in a display of anger and grief.

The Jan. 30, 1972, killings at the end of a civil rights march here came to be known as "Bloody Sunday" and galvanized Catholic support for the Irish Republican Army like no other event in the Northern Ireland conflict.

As police in armored Land-Rovers observed and videotaped from a discreet distance, the crowd marched in bright sunshine through the Catholic Bogside district to the spot of the massacre.

O'Meara edges out Woods for Pebble Beach title

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Mark O'Meara matched every Tiger Woods' birdie down the stretch Sunday and won the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am for the fifth time since 1985, this one by a single stroke over his fishing buddy from Florida.

Playing in the next group, O'Meara watched as Woods knocked iron shots to four feet on Nos. 16 and 17 for birdies but responded with birdies of his own on those holes to carry a two-stroke lead to the final hole.

Woods had one more dramatic surprise for O'Meara, however, carrying his 3-wood second shot 267 yards to the green for an eagle try. But his 40-foot eagle try missed and he finished with his third consecutive birdie for an 8-under-par 64 and a 72-hole score of 19-under-par 269.

"I knew I needed to make eagle and there was only one way to do it," Woods said about his gamble to go for the green guarded by the Pacific Ocean on the left side.

It was an incredible finish by Woods who was 10 strokes behind after 36 holes but played the last 36 holes in only 127 shots, shooting a 63 on Saturday.

Hawks blast Wildcats

"We pulled a couple matches out on riding time, and we don't want that. We still haven't come out and dominated from top to bottom."

Iowa wrestler Mark Ironside

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Too experienced. Too strong. Too talented. Too dominant.

The Iowa wrestling team was simply too much for Northwestern Saturday night.

The host Hawkeyes won nine of 10 matches against the Wildcats and rolled to a 40-4 victory in front of 4,823 fans at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Iowa, the nation's second-ranked team, picked up its 12th dual win of the season. The Hawkeyes' only loss this season was to Oklahoma State. The win sets up the Hawkeyes for a busy day of wrestling next Saturday when they meet Illinois and Arizona State, both at home.

Assistant coach Jim Zalesky, who has coached the Hawkeyes in Dan Gable's absence, was pleased with how his wrestlers showed durability against Northwestern.

"The guys that won really came out at the end of matches," Zalesky said. "We've been talking about wrestling the whole seven minutes. That's what we're looking for."

It would have been difficult for Jessie Whitmer (118), Mike Mena (126) and Mark Ironside (134) to dominate their matches any more than they did.

Whitmer (14-4) and Ironside (18-0) both won by match terminations, and Mena (17-2) had a major decision over Micah Hey. Iowa's three lightest weights outscored their opponents by a cumulative score of 63-19.

"We dominated the first three weight classes," Ironside said. "But (later) we pulled a couple matches out on riding time, and we don't want that."

"We still haven't come out and dominated from top to bottom."

142-pounder Kasey Gilliss and Tony Erslund at 177 were the Iowa wrestlers who won by accumulating a minute's worth of riding time. Gilliss defeated Will Reisman, 5-4, and Erslund squeaked out a 4-3 win over Joel Goeden.

Iowa bounces back from Friday loss, defeats Big Ten leading Spartans

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Angie Lee gave her team a simple reminder heading into Sunday's contest with conference leader Michigan State: You are still the defending Big Ten champions.

And after a convincing 82-62 win over the Spartans at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, the rest of the league has been reminded of that fact as well.

Backed by a season-high 9,133 fans, Iowa set the tone early, going on an 11-0 run to start the game — a lead the Hawkeyes would never lose.

"I have just one question," Michigan State coach Karen Langeland said after the game. "Who was that team and where did they come from?"

"That was the Iowa team that I remember. That was the same team that beat us last year. They played an outstanding ball game and beat us at every phase of the game."

The Hawkeyes' dominance started in the paint, where they outrebounced the Spartans 36-26. In addition, Iowa's post players, Amy Herrig and Tangelia Smith both had double-doubles. Herrig led Iowa's scoring attack with 23 points and added 12 rebounds, while Smith chipped in 14 points and had 10 boards.

"I came in with a different mentality today," Herrig said. "I just relaxed and didn't put any pressure on myself, played my game and had fun. We won as a team and had fun."

Freshman Burke leads Hawkeyes to second

By Chuck Blount
The Daily Iowan

Anchored by two individual championships and a strong team performance on the floor exercise, the Iowa women's gymnastics team finished second in a four-team meet Sunday at the UI Fieldhouse.

Southeast Missouri State won the team all-around with a score of 191.650, followed closely by Iowa (189.750), Winona State (185.300) and Wisconsin-Lacrosse (184.575).

Led by freshman Courtney Burke's 9.825, the Hawkeyes set a season-high floor total with a 48.375. Teammate Lori Whitmer finished second with a 9.800.

"Courtney is like poetry in motion," coach Diane DeMarco said. "Between her movement and the music, it just captivates you. If I can look at her critically and say this, the spectator prob-

Iowa records top score in nation

By Chris James
The Daily Iowan

Maybe the Iowa men's gymnastics team should only have two home meets each season. It seems to bring out the best in the team.

Just ask Minnesota.

The Hawkeyes ripped the 11th-ranked Golden Gophers and recorded the highest team score in the country with a 229.625-223.875 victory Friday night at the UI Fieldhouse.

The fifth-ranked Hawkeyes placed at least two scores in the top three of every event and took first through third in the vault and rings.

Senior Tyler Vogt was back with a vengeance after missing almost all of last season with a knee injury. Vogt won the parallel bars with a 9.55 and grabbed second place on the rings with a career best 9.775.

Minnesota has read this script before. Last year in a loss to Iowa, then-senior Jay Thornton returned from injury to burn the Gophers by winning three events.

Junior Chris Camiscioli's 9.8 lead the Hawkeye's dominance on the still rings. Vogt and Dave Nemovitz were second and third respectively in the event. Vogt's 9.775 and Nemovitz's 9.750 were both career highs, as was Camiscioli's score. The teammates' combined score of 38.975 was also a team record.

Iowa also set a team record on the vault with a combined score of 38.300. Iowa was led by freshman Anthony Petrocelli who finished first with a 9.700. Travis Rosen was second with a 9.650.

Iowa coach Tom Dunn was pleased yet cautious about Iowa's record-setting performances.

"I was obviously very pleased with our rings and vault performances," Dunn said. "This is by far the best we've performed this year. But there were still some misses and areas that could have been better. We're going to have to shape those up if we want a shot at beating Ohio State next weekend."

Hawkeye freshman and Bloomington, MN, native Doug Jacobson, didn't disappoint the crowd of family and friends he performed for, finishing tied for second with teammate Todd Strada on the pommel horse with a 9.650.

A pair of UI freshman put Iowa's worries about the floor exercise to rest with a 1-2 finish. Brian Hamilton snagged first place with a 9.725, while Petrocelli was the runner-up Hawkeye Pete Masucci competes on the rings Friday night at the UI Fieldhouse.

MEN'S COLLEGE BASKETBALL ROUNDUP

Knight benches Reed, IU loses

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Bob Knight didn't have to look far to find Indiana's biggest problem. The 17th-ranked Hoosiers scored just one point in the first four minutes of the second half.

"How important was it? You don't need ... Einstein to answer that question," Indiana's coach said after Illinois won 78-74 Sunday, its first victory at Assembly Hall in seven years.

Knight benched Neil Reed at the start of the second half, and started three freshmen.

"We need leadership, and I'm going to get it with freshmen, it's just that simple," Knight said. "I've done everything I can to get leadership out of those juniors, and the hell with it."

Kiwane Garris scored 28 points for the Illini (15-6, 5-4), including seven free throws in the final minute.

"We knew they were shooting a lot of free throws, so we just had to come in and shoot more than they did," Garris said. "Basically, we were just trying to drive and make them foul us instead of sending them to the line."

Indiana (17-6, 4-5), which came in as the Big Ten leader in free throws at 76.9 percent, managed only 62.1 percent. Indiana had nine more attempts and three more points from the foul line, but it was the Illinois free throws down the stretch that made the difference.

"We didn't want to send them to the free-throw line. We still did that way too much, but we got them deep in the second half before they got to the bonus. And our zone certainly contributed to that," Illinois coach Lon Kruger said. "I don't think the zone was great, but it did accomplish some things we were after."

Indiana trailed 46-34 early in the second half but fought back to take the lead. The Hoosiers led for the final time with seven minutes to go, but Kevin Turner's 3-pointer put the Illini in front for good at 66-65.

Temple 67, No. 9 Louisville 44
PHILADELPHIA — Louisville was held to its lowest point total in 16 years as Temple smothered the No. 9 Cardinals 67-44 Sunday behind Marc Jackson's 20 points and 14 rebounds.

It was just the third time in 10 seasons the Cardinals (18-3) failed to score 50 points, the first since a 53-48 loss to Temple during the 1994-95 season. Since Denny Crum took over as coach in 1971, the only time Louisville scored fewer points was in a 42-31 victory over Cincinnati on March 7, 1981.

Washington 92, Arizona 88
SEATTLE — Mark Sanford scored 18 of his game-high 26 points in the second half Sunday to lead Washington over 10th-ranked Arizona 92-88.

The Huskies (12-5, 5-4 Pac-10) took an 83-73 lead with 2:48 remaining, matching their biggest lead of the game. Arizona (13-5, 6-3) closed within 90-88 on Michael Dickerson's 3-pointer with 24 seconds left. Sanford then made two free throws with 16 seconds remaining.

Washington shot 59 percent, its best in 76 games since March 3, 1994, also against Arizona.

Duke 70, Georgia Tech 61
DURHAM, N.C. — Trajan Langdon scored 17 points and held Georgia Tech's Matt Harpring in check with his defense despite giving away four inches, and No. 12 Duke defeated the slumping Yellow Jackets 70-61 Sunday.

The Blue Devils (17-5, 6-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) moved into a second-place ACC tie with No. 5 Maryland and No. 7 Clemson heading into their Wednesday night showdown with No. 2 and league-leading Wake Forest.

In addition to Langdon's offense, Roshown McLeod added 17 points for Duke.

The Yellow Jackets (8-11, 2-7), the defending ACC regular-season champions, fell to 0-7 this season against ranked opponents. Dating back to last season's ACC tournament, Georgia Tech is winless in its last nine games against top 25 teams.

No. 1 Huskies crush Providence

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Another game, another blowout for No. 1 Connecticut.

The Huskies (20-0, 11-0 Big East) dismantled Providence 95-68 Sunday to reach the 20-victory plateau for the fourth straight year. It also was their 27th straight league victory.

UConn has been so dominating — the closest victory was 11 points and the average margin is 28 — that coach Geno Auriemma and his players entered the game looking to atone for their performance in a 21-point victory over Boston College on Thursday.

"After the Boston College game, Kara (Wolters) came into my office. She said the BC game felt like a loss. So, we came out today and we felt like we wanted to prove a point," said Auriemma, whose team is a nation's best 119-7 in the last four years.

Old Dominion 88, Richmond 65
RICHMOND, Va. — A halftime pep talk made a big difference for Nyree Roberts, and the change in her helped No. 2 Old Dominion shake a case of the blahs in an 88-65 victory Sunday against Richmond.

It was the Lady Monarchs' 18th straight victory, their 35th in a row in the Colonial Athletic Association and 84th in the last 85 CAA games.

N. Carolina 75, Wake Forest 71
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Jessica Gaspar made a 3-pointer with eight seconds remaining, and Marion Jones added two free throws in the final two seconds to lead No. 6 North Carolina over Wake Forest 75-71 Sunday.

Jones finished with only 10 points, well below her 19.7 scoring average.

Chanel Wright scored 22 points for the Tar Heels (19-1, 10-0 ACC), and Tracy Reid added 20 points and 14 rebounds. Gaspar added 13.

Tennessee 74, Mississippi 72
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — For awhile, it looked as if No. 9 Tennessee was going to blow out Mississippi in the first half Sunday.

"During that stretch I didn't think we were coming back. I didn't think they'd ever miss a shot," Lady Rebels coach Van Chancellor said. "That was the best I'd ever seen them play. When we were down 16 I said, 'Is there any chance the TV satellite will go down?'"

But the Lady Rebels fought back to tie the game twice in the waning minutes, only to lose 74-72 on Abby Conklin's long jumper with eight-tenths of a second left.

Kansas 67, Nebraska 59
LINCOLN, Neb. — Freshman forward Lynn Pride scored 15 of her 19 points in the second half as No. 12 Kansas rallied for a dozen points down to beat Nebraska 67-59 Sunday night.

With the Jayhawks (16-3, 7-1 Big 12) trailing 46-34 and 10:17 remaining, Pride made two free throws to ignite a 23-6 surge that paved the way for Kansas' ninth straight victory over Nebraska.

The spurt was capped by a basket from Patience Grayer that gave Kansas a 57-52 lead with 3:56 remaining. But Nicole Kubik hit a 3-pointer, and Anna DeForge made one of two free throws to pull Nebraska (16-2, 6-2) within 57-56 with 2:43 left.

Northwestern 93, Wisconsin 62
EVANSTON, Ill. — Megan Chawansky scored 21 points as Northwestern beat No. 16 Wisconsin 93-62 Sunday in the Big Ten.

The Wildcats (12-8, 5-6) shot 61.5 percent in the first half, going 3-for-4 on 3-pointers, and took a 45-25 lead.

The closest Wisconsin (14-5, 7-4) got in the second half was 50-34 with 16:59 remaining.

Northwestern shot 52.5 percent for the game, going 8-for-11 on 3-pointers.

Notre Dame 75, St. John's 47
NEW YORK — Beth Morgan and Mollie Peirick scored 15 points apiece as No. 19 Notre Dame extended its winning streak to nine games and stayed unbeaten in the Big East by defeating St. John's 75-47 Sunday.

Katryna Gaither added 14 points and nine rebounds for Notre Dame (19-4, 11-0), which led 41-21 at halftime and by as many as 33 points in the second half.

Duke 77, Florida St. 70
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Tyish Hall had 23 points and nine rebounds, and No. 22 Duke rallied in the second half for a 77-70 victory Sunday that kept Florida State winless in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Blue Devils (14-6, 6-4 ACC) trailed 37-31 at halftime, but outscored the Lady Seminoles 46-33 over the final 20 minutes.

Illinois 94, Penn St. 79
CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Tajua Catchings had 21 points and 13 rebounds as No. 25 Illinois defeated poor-shooting Penn State 94-79 Sunday to extend its winning streak to five games.

ably found it especially pleasing." Burke notched the highest all-around total on the team, placing fourth overall with a personal best 37.725.

"I really felt good about today," Burke said. "It's great to just go out there and go after it. I wasn't really doing my most difficult skills on the floor, but everything in my routine went well."

Hampers with a knee aggravation, Iowa was without the services of Whitner in all-around competition. Whitner was kept out of vault competition, but did compete on the beam, floor and uneven bars. She set a new personal-best on the beam with a 9.650.

"(Having Whitner) hurt us," Burke said. "She's one of our vaulters and the team really responds when she's performing. But the vault is really hard on the knee, so we didn't feel it was worth risking injury this early in the season."

Robyn Gamble continued her success, taking first-place in the uneven bars (9.675). She also finished second on the balance beam (9.800) and ninth on the floor (9.600).

"This was Robyn's first meet competing in the floor and she looked great," DeMarco said. "We've been gradually moving her along and we hope to have her in the all-around at mid-season."

The difference between first and second place for the Hawkeyes in the meet was the balance beam. Iowa, ranked No. 25 nationally in the event, had problems staying on the beam. Four of the six Iowa gymnasts who competed in the event had falls.

"Right there we lost two points, which was pretty much the meet," DeMarco said. "The falls on beam were disappointing. We've been great on beam all year, so it's frustrating for this kind of thing to happen. We practice very assertively on beam, but we didn't seem to show that confidence today."

week to face Illinois-Chicago and Ohio State. The Hawkeyes were beat by the Buckeyes three times last year, but Dunn said it could be different this time.

"Before this meet tonight I was a little concerned," he said. "But after this performance I give us a much better chance against Ohio State."

Top 3 teams disqualified at world championships

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (AP) — A Swiss medal sweep at the four-man bobsled world championships degenerated into chaos Sunday when the top three teams were disqualified for equipment violations.

Germany, which finished fourth, was at first declared the winner, but organizers then relented and said the Swiss would remain on top pending a final decision.

"There is no world champion at the moment. There's nothing," said Florian Blumer, one of the organizers.

The International Bobsled Federation will review the evidence in two weeks at its meeting in Nagano, Japan, and decide whether the Swiss or Germans should be world champions.

Graf hurt; Hings takes title

TOKYO (AP) — Steffi Graf will be sidelined at least a few weeks because of an ailing knee, an injury that forced her to withdraw from the Pan Pacific Open finals Sunday and give Martina Hingis her third straight title.

The match was to have featured the world's top two ranked women players, and Graf apologized to the capacity crowd of 8,800 during the award ceremony.

"I'm very sorry that I couldn't play today," she said. "I'm disappointed in myself."

The spectators, who booed the initial announcement of Graf's withdrawal, responded to her remarks with loud applause.

NBA ROUNDUP

Bulls still better than Sonics

SEATTLE (AP) — Not much has changed since last season's NBA Finals. Michael Jordan remains the best player in the league and the Chicago Bulls are still a better team than the Seattle SuperSonics.

Jordan, who led the Bulls to a 4-2 series victory over the Sonics last June, poured in 45 points Sunday as Chicago beat Seattle 91-84 in the first meeting between the teams this season.

Jordan shot 19-of-28 from the floor as the Bulls, playing without the suspended Dennis Rodman, won their seventh straight game.

For the 34-year-old Jordan, it was his third highest scoring total of the season. He had 51 against New York and 50 against Miami. He had the points by a Sonics opponent this season despite being guarded by Gary Payton, last season's NBA Defensive Player of the Year, for part of the game.

The Bulls opened a 19-point lead early in the second quarter, led 50-39 at halftime and watched Payton lead the Sonics back within 2 points. Then, they let Jordan perform his magic again.

When Jordan sank a 3-point shot with 5:33 to go to put Chicago in front 88-70, a discouraged Payton, knowing he'd met more than his match again, exchanged looks with a smiling Scottie Pippen. For once, Payton didn't have anything to say.

Hornets 99, Knicks 93
NEW YORK — Glen Rice scored 40 points, breaking the 30-point barrier for the ninth time in 10 games, as Charlotte snapped New York's 15-game home winning streak.

Rice, coming off a 43-point performance Friday against Milwaukee, reached 40 points for the third time in seven games.

Magic 103, Rockets 90
ORLANDO, Fla. — Rony Seikaly scored 29 points and Orlando took advantage of Charles Barkley's absence to beat the Rockets.

Kevin Willis led Houston with 23 points and 16 rebounds. Hakeem Olajuwon scored 17, and Clyde Drexler, back from an injury that's slowed him the past week, finished with 12 on 5-for-19 shooting.

Pacers 92, Nets 90
INDIANAPOLIS — Travis Best hit a go-ahead 3-pointer with 39.4 seconds to play. Reggie Miller scored 28 points and Indiana came back from a 20-point deficit to beat New Jersey.

New Jersey, which got 32 points from Kendall Gill, had only one field goal in the final six minutes after leading 79-72 with 8:49 to play.

Twolves 103, Trail Blazers 102
MINNEAPOLIS — Tom Gugliotta scored 27 points and Kevin Garnett recovered from a 1-for-9 start to spark a third-quarter rally that led Minnesota over Portland.

Thirty-year-old rookie Dean Garrett had 14 points and 16 rebounds for the Wolves, who won their third straight to improve to 22-24 — their best record ever.

Heat 80, Cavaliers 76
MIAMI — Reserve guard John Crotty hit two straight 3-pointers to put the Heat in front for good against Cleveland.

A four-year veteran signed by coach Pat Riley last month to bolster the Heat's backcourt, Crotty finished with 13 points to back Tim Hardaway's game-leading 20 and Voshon Lenard's 13 in a productive night for the Heat backcourt. Center Alonzo Mourning had 15 points and 11 rebounds.

Grizzlies 102, Celtics 92
BOSTON — Bryant Reeves scored a career-high 33 points and added 18 rebounds as Vancouver snapped an eight-game losing streak by stopping Boston.

Suns 106, Pistons 97
AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Reserve Mark Bryant scored 21 points and Phoenix ended a six-game losing streak by beating Detroit.

Nuggets 115, Hawks 104
DENVER — Dale Ellis scored 21 points to lead seven Denver players in double figures as the Nuggets spoiled Dikembe Mutombo's homecoming with a 115-104 win over the Atlanta Hawks on Sunday night.

Lakers 129, Bulls 99
INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Shaquille O'Neal scored 24 points before leaving in the third quarter with a strained right knee and the Los Angeles Lakers routed the Washington Bullets 129-99 Sunday night for their sixth straight victory.

AFC wins Pro Bowl in overtime

Blanchard, who missed two field goals earlier, kicked a 37-yard field goal to seal the victory after an investment banker made a 35-yarder for one million dollars

By Ken Peters Associated Press

Tony Cheng/Associated Press

Quarterback Brett Favre of the Green Bay Packers looks to pass for the NFC team in the first quarter of the Pro Bowl Sunday.

Blanchard had missed a 41-yarder that would have won the game four minutes earlier. Carolina's John Kasay missed three attempts, the last from 39 yards with 11 seconds remaining in regulation.

The best kickers in the NFL were 3-of-8 in the game, and 26-year-old Lance Alstodt was 1-of-1. At halftime, Alstodt got one chance at a 35-yarder for a $1 million, the climax of a nationwide contest. He drilled it.

Jacksonville's Mark Brunell, who interception against Kerry Collins in the fourth quarter gave the AFC a 16-15 lead.

With Brett Favre not returning for the NFC after the first series of the second quarter, and other big-name quarterbacks missing the game because of injuries, Brunell, who replaced John Elway, and Gus Frerotte, filling in for Troy Aikman, provided a lot of late fireworks.

Brunell completed 12-of-22 passes, including an 80-yard TD pass to Oakland's Tim Brown that tied it at 23-23 with 44 seconds left in regulation. Frerotte immediately marched the NFC back down the field, but Kasay's kick was off and the teams headed to overtime.

Frerotte completed 13-of-25 passes for 193 yards, including a 53-yard TD throw to Cris Carter of Minnesota.

Brown had five catches for 137 yards, and St. Louis' Isaac Bruce had seven receptions for 104 yards for the NFC.

Detroit's Barry Sanders was the leading rusher with 11 carries for 59 yards, including a 6-yard touchdown, and Curtis Martin of New England led the AFC with 13 carries for 48 yards and a 3-yard touchdown.

Favre led the NFC to scores the first two times it had the ball, including a 5-yard TD pass to guard Randall McDaniel of Minnesota on a trick play where he lined up as a receiver. Favre completed 6-of-11 passes for 143 yards.

NHL ROUNDUP

Sabres, Capitals settle for 2-2 tie

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Michal Grosek scored with 4:31 left in the third period Sunday night, lifting the Buffalo Sabres to a 2-2 tie with the Washington Capitals.

Buffalo had its winning streak stopped at three. The Sabres finished their club-record seven-game homestand with a 4-2-1 record.

Grosek's 11th goal was his first since Jan. 5. Steve Konowalchuk had given the Capitals a 2-1 lead with 6:12 remaining.

Dominik Hasek made 27 saves for the Sabres. Jim Carey made 22 saves for Washington.

Red Wings 4, Stars 3, OT
DETROIT — Vyacheslav Kozlov scored 80 seconds into overtime as the Detroit Red Wings ended a six-game home winless streak with a victory over the Dallas Stars.

Kozlov's 17th goal — and fifth game-winner — came after Dallas defenseman Sergei Zubov couldn't control a bouncing puck played high into the Stars' end by Detroit's Tomas Sandstrom.

Kozlov dug out the loose puck and backhanded it past Dallas goalie Andy Moog. Sandstrom's assist was his first point in three games since Detroit acquired him last week in a trade with Pittsburgh.

Bruins 3, Rangers 2
NEW YORK — The Boston Bruins scored three goals in less than four minutes of the first period and held off the New York Rangers behind the goaltending of rookie Rob Tallas.

Tallas, one night after recording his first NHL shutout at Tampa Bay, protected a one-goal lead for virtually half the game after Mark Messier scored at 11:19 of the second period.

The biggest of his 28 saves came in the third period when he stopped Vladimir Vobobiev on a breakaway with 11:44 left and then Niklas Sundstrom on another breakaway 30 seconds later.

Tallas has started 14 of the Bruins' last 15 games in relief of No. 1 goaltender Bill Ranford, who is out with tendinitis in his shoulder.

Avalanche 5, Mighty Ducks 2
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Stephane Yelle scored the tiebreaking goal 21 seconds into the third period and the Colorado Avalanche beat the Anaheim Mighty Ducks.

The Ducks had won four in a row at home, one short of the team record.

Keith Jones capped Colorado's three-goal third period with his 19th of the season. He also had two assists.

Strong finish keys Hawkeye onslaught

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

What started off as a neck-and-neck battle in the water, turned into Hawkeye domination as the Iowa women's swimming team closed out its home schedule with a 185-115 victory over Illinois State Saturday.

The Hawkeyes lead by just a single point, 65-64, heading into the one-meter diving competition, but captured first place in eight of the final nine events to take control of the meet.

"I don't think we swam as well as we could have the first half of the meet," coach Mary Bolich said. "My concern was to get them swimming to the level of their ability, so I talked to them at the break about getting back on track and taking care of business."

"They responded very well. I was much more pleased with our swims in the second half of the meet. It was kind of a mix in the beginning because some people were doing a great job, but others weren't."

Overall, Iowa took first place in 11 of 16 events. Freshmen Beth Katz and Ileana Buciu, along with sophomore Kara Schmitz, were each triple first-place winners for the Hawkeyes.

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Kristen Belleson dives into the pool Saturday at the UI Fieldhouse. Belleson placed fourth in the 100-yard butterfly.

Katz captured the 100-yard freestyle (53.66), 200-yard freestyle (1:54.84) and was a member of the winning 400-yard freestyle relay.

"Beth had a super meet today,"

Bolich said. "She kind of busted out today so we are pretty excited about that."

Buciu won the 1,000-yard freestyle (10:08.91), 500-yard freestyle (5:02.45), and also

"We dedicated today's meet and performance to our seniors in recognition and thanks for their commitment to the program for the last four years. It was important for us to do well today for the seniors."

Iowa coach Mary Bolich

teamed up with Katz, Sara Cotter, and Stephanie Homewood on the 400 free relay.

Schmitz touched the wall first in the 100-yard and 200-yard backstrokes, and the 200-yard individual medley.

Bolich said the team had an extra reason to perform well in its last home meet.

"We dedicated today's meet and performance to our seniors in recognition and thanks for their commitment to the program for the last four years," Bolich said. "It was important for us to do well today for the seniors."

Iowa will have a week to prepare before heading up to No. 8 Minnesota for its final duel before the Big Ten Championships.

HAWKEYE SPORTS ROUNDUP

Patton's crew splits pair of weekend duals

They may have been in Evanston, but the crowd for the men's swim meet last Friday against Northwestern and Ohio State was decked out in black and gold.

"This was great," said Tim Schnulle, who like several other Iowa swimmers, is from Illinois. "We're all pretty much in our home town, and the more people you get here, the more fun the meet is. This is just like a home meet for us. It's not our pool of course, but we've got probably more fans here at this meet than we do at Iowa."

The Hawkeyes beat Northwestern easily, 201-151, but lost to 22nd ranked Ohio State 204-148.

"Overall, I was pleased with this weekend," coach Glenn Patton said. "We had some season-best times and I was really pleased with our last event, the 400 free relay. We're trying to get all our relays highly seeded for the Big 10 Championships."

Dan Abel gave the Hawkeyes their first win, taking the 1650-meter freestyle with a time of 15:53.70.

Senior Jory Blauer continued his success in the 200-meter individual medley, taking first in 1:53.04.

Tete Gil fought off illness to give the Hawkeyes their only other overall win, taking first in the 1-meter board with 295.30 points.

—Tony Wirt

several individual Hawkeyes continued their winning ways.

Iowa State took home the mythical Big 4 Championship title and placed second overall behind Kansas. The Jayhawk's tallied 62 points, with Iowa State coming in with 56. The Hawkeyes took fifth place with 32 points.

Northern Iowa and Drake also finished ahead of Iowa with 43 and 35 points respectively.

Colleen Prendergast took first place in the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 8.09 seconds.

Senior Ann Paré continued her successful season in the 600-meter run by taking first place in 1:35.23.

Ellen Grant was the Hawkeye's other winner. Grant took the top spot in the 400-meter dash with a time of 55.42.

Men's Track and Field

The Iowa men's track and field team took six event championships and beat two out of three intrastate rivals at Saturday's Northern Iowa Invitational, edging out the host Panthers for second place.

Iowa State ran away with the invitational championship scoring 160 points. The Hawkeyes took second with 95 points, followed by UNI (94), Kansas (75.25), Minnesota (37.25) and Drake (33.50).

The invitational provided Iowa with one of few scoring meet opportunities before the Big Ten Indoor Championships.

"Coach Wiecek told us coming into the meet that he wanted to approach it as a team," Iowa sprinter Dion Trowers said. "We have some of the best sprinters around and our distance runners are coming along, so we felt we had a chance to win it."

"It is going to put us in better position for the Big Ten's, because now we know where guys need to step up."

Iowa swept the middle-distance events behind performances by Monte Raymond, Jim Donovan and Michael Layne. Raymond captured the 600-meter championship with a time of 1:19, while Donovan won the 800-meter in 1:53.57. Layne held off UNI's Jay Brock to win the 1000-meters in 2:32.68.

Trowers nipped Jason Woods of Iowa State by one-hundredth of a second to win the 55-meter high hurdles.

In his second meet of the season, Bashir Yamini remained perfect in the long jump. Yamini won the event with a season-best leap of 25' 2 3/4". He also provisionally qualified for the NCAA Championship with the mark.

For the third time in three meets, Iowa grabbed the 4x400-yard relay championship. Finishing in 3:17.60, the Hawkeyes blew away second-place UNI, which finished in 3:19.26.

Men's Tennis

Iowa men's tennis coach Steve Houghton never lost to Northern Illinois as a player or a coach at the UI — until Sunday night.

The Huskies got revenge for all those Iowa wins, dominating the Hawkeyes 6-1 in Moline, Ill., by winning five of six singles matches and two of three doubles matches.

"Obviously, it's disappointing," Houghton said. "I thought it would be an even match-up, but they were better than I thought they'd be and we've got some work to do."

No. 2 doubles players Damir Seferovic and Ben Bamsey gave Iowa one of their few bright spots with a 9-8 (7-5) win over NIU's Mattias Ardfelt and Ryan Rader.

No. 6 singles player Justin Pohn gave the Hawkeyes their other win, defeating Chris Hallowell 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

"This was by far the best Northern Illinois team we've played against," Houghton said. "They were more match-tough and ready than we were."

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Hawkeyes start spring season with victory

By Becky Gruhn
The Daily Iowan

If there was any rust remaining on the rackets of the Iowa women's tennis team, it was removed during Saturday's season-opening match against DePaul.

The Hawkeyes, who haven't faced an outside opponent since November of 1996, lost two of the three doubles matches and allowed DePaul to gain a 1-0 advantage before dominating five of the six single matches. The lone Iowa doubles victory came from the No. 3 tandem of Lisa Harris and Natalya Dawaf.

"I think there were a lot of nerves in the beginning, but there were no service breaks really early on our serves got broken," coach Wenny Mainz said. "We were double faulting and dug ourselves in a hole at No. 1 and No. 2 doubles because we couldn't get the points started."

"After we lost the doubles point it was a matter of everyone really having to step it up. We knew we'd have to sweep at least four singles and we won five, but it was a battle. I think some of our players literally raised the level of their game because they knew they'd have to."

Kristen McCracken, playing at the No. 1 singles slot, battled back from a 1-4 deficit in the first set to win 7-5, 6-4.

"Kristen had a very big win at one," Mainz said. "DePaul's one and two players were very tough."

Iowa's only singles loss came at the No. 2 slot as Dawaf fell 1-6, 2-6.

"Natalya had a tough match at two. Salopek was just hot and made very few unforced errors," Mainz said.

Iowa then swept the No. 3 through No. 6 singles matches. Erin Wolverton notched a 6-3, 6-4 victory at the No. 3 slot, while Shera Wiegler won at four (6-2, 6-4).

Carolina Delgado had no trouble during the No. 5 singles defeating Stephanie Turner 6-3, 6-1; while Robin Niemeier blanked her opponent 6-0, 6-0.

"Robin has been notorious for coming out and taking charge," Mainz said. "She made her mind up before she came out that she was going to win. She went straight to work and literally destroyed her opponent. She never gave the girl any chance to get into the match."

Although the victory over DePaul was convincing, Mainz sees plenty of room for improvement in her team.

"It's still early and like I said before, we needed to use this as a measuring stick to see what we need to work on and where we need to go," Mainz said. "And from this meet I think we do need to focus a little bit more on doubles and getting off to quick starts."

NBC equips 'Nightly News' broadcast with less traditional format, content

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK— If, while chatting with Dan Rather, you happen to refer to the "CBS Evening News" as "a show," don't be surprised when its anchorperson corrects you.

The "Evening News" is not a show, Rather will gently insist, it is "a broadcast."

On the other hand, "NBC Nightly News" clearly is a show. By design. And with great success, to judge by "Nightly" edging out the longtime ratings champ, ABC's "World News Tonight," in six of the past eight weeks (last week, they tied).

"About a year ago, we embarked on a very clear plan for how to retool 'Nightly News,'" executive producer David Doss said. The plan, in a nutshell: Stop telling viewers news they heard earlier, and stop showing them news video they have seen already on cable or their local newscasts. Give them something fresh.

But to judge from watching "Nightly," there's more to the strategy: Instead of resolutely standing apart, adopt a style compatible with the game shows, talk shows, syndicated magazines and anything-goes local news that "Nightly" rubs elbows with, or butts its head against.

In short, soften "Nightly." Flash it up. Make it zig. Which is just what they've done. After almost a half-century of network-news anchors planted behind desks, check out Tom Brokaw, now on his feet in front of a throbbing video wall.

Perhaps "Nightly" has responded sensibly to the hemorrhaging of audience for it and its two rivals, whose collective household ratings have dropped some 10 percent since 1993, and whose total share of viewers has plunged 20 percentage points in 20 years.

Meanwhile, "Nightly" has boldly re-established itself as the clear alternative to so-called "traditional," "serious" newscasts mounted by CBS and by ABC, whose "World News Tonight with Peter Jennings" has crowded for years about its devotion to Beltway politics and foreign affairs — the very topics "Nightly" has shoved to its back burner.

According to an analysis of last year's Top 10 stories in "The Tyn-dall Report," which tracks the three networks' evening newscasts, NBC was significantly behind in airtime for politics (Bob Dole's presidential campaign, the GOP convention and Whitewater) and global affairs (the Balkans war and the Middle East conflict).

NBC was ahead with coverage of O.J. Simpson's civil trial and the ValuJet crash, and left rivals in the dust with its reporting (and promotion) of the Atlanta Olympic Games, which the network was televising.

In expressly ditching the basic "daily diary" function, "Nightly" has become not so much a chronicle as an experience. A good-looking production with not so many stories as to wear the viewer out, it stresses news you can use, news you can feel, news with the personal touch.

"Nightly" gives you a laugh, gives you a cry, gives you moments of moral outrage, then sends you on to the next TV show. Much like most other TV shows.

But not like the other networks' newscasts, their bosses declare. "Nightly" may be leading the charge into its vision of the future, but its rivals vow they won't follow.

"We still think it's important to cover the world," said "Evening News" executive producer Jeffrey Fager. "And even if you know in general what happened today, we think you're still looking for some meaning behind it."

Modern Rock tries to stick around

By Katharine Horowitz
The Daily Iowan

With the arrival of techno and Euro-pop music to the mainstream scene, modern rock is making an equally concerted effort to climb back up the charts.

Along with the Offspring's latest Ignay on the Hombre, silverchair's Freak Show, and an upcoming album from Live, a series of new modern-rock releases are spawning a revival of the early '90s punk/grunge sound, following lukewarm sales of albums from well-known artists such as Pearl Jam, Soundgarden, Stone Temple Pilots and Green Day. However, said Scott Parrett, manager of Vibes Music, 119 E. Washington St., punk and grunge never really left.

"Punk never really went away," Parrett said. "It's its own independent thing. It came around with the Sex Pistols and never left. If anything, punk music comes in waves. It's always here, and it's kind of on a crest at the moment."

Playing off of such mainstay bands as the Sex Pistols and Nirvana, today's rock music is now putting a new take on old favorites with a bigger sound and grabbing people's attention, Parrett said.

"It's kind of like that old adage: 'Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery,'" he said. "Bands like silverchair and Bush are putting a fresh spin on old grunge. The '80s were inspired by Led Zeppelin, KISS and Van Halen, and bands like Nirvana or Pearl Jam are the trendsetters for music popularity, Parrett said. The revival of grunge in the early '90s, after a decade of hair and glam, led to an overpopulation of these bands in the mainstream. Now, bands like Nirvana and Pearl Jam are the norm, he said, making '80s bands like Poison and Def Leppard alternative.

Joe Nugent, program director and DJ at KRNA, said the station's music rotation depends on reliable bands that have stuck in the music scene for some time. He defines it as a railroad track, with one track dependable bands with a stable audience, and the other track focusing on more recent and popular musical groups, he said.

"Punk will always be around" Nugent said. "It's a cyclical thing. Glam and metal were hot in the '80s, but they come and go. Poison was hot for a year or two because they were what audiences wanted at the time. Then they fell out of favor. It's the same now with bands like 311 or Alanis Morissette, how long will they be around? But punk has always been there."

News Brief

'Star Wars' returns to astronomical box-office debut

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Twenty years after its debut, "Star Wars" proved it still has the force to demolish all other contenders at the box office.

The second opening of the refurbished film was the top-selling January weekend release ever, figures released Sunday showed.

"Star Wars" collected an estimated $36.2 million over the weekend, dwarfing the nation's No. 2 film, "Jerry Maguire," which took in $5.6 million.

The movie, with enhanced special effects and a few new scenes, had the ninth-highest three-day opening ever, according to estimates from Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

Americans still captivated by "the ultimate story of good and evil" flocked to theaters to see it again on the big screen, and many brought their children, said Tom Sherak, chairperson of 20th Century Fox Domestic Film Group.

"It's part of our culture," he said. "It's one of those rare instances where a movie becomes our best friend. We remember the best friend."

In its 1977 release, "Star Wars" grossed $323 million in North America — then a record and still fourth on the all-time list. The re-release is sure to push "Star Wars" higher on that list, Sherak said.

The top 10 films at the box office from Friday through Sunday:

1. "Star Wars," $36.2 million.
2. "Jerry Maguire," $5.6 million.
3. "Scream," $4.8 million.
4. "Metro," $4.4 million.
5. "Beverly Hills Ninja," $4.3 million. (tie)
6. "Evita," $4.3 million.
7. "In Love and War," $3.9 million.
8. "The Relic," $2.9 million.
9. "Gridlock'd," $2.8 million.
10. "Mother," $2.6 million. (tie)
- "Michael," $2.6 million.

"Punk never really went away. It's its own independent thing. It came around with the Sex Pistols and never left. If anything, punk music comes in waves. It's always here, and it's kind of on a crest at the moment."
