Hospitals not required to report rape information to police

By Bob Bird

The Daily Iowa recently reported on a situation where a rape victim sought medical care following a rape, and then chose not to file a formal complaint. The comments that hospita rs made to report rape to law enforcement are inaccurate. Iowa hospi tals are not required, under Iowa law, to report rape to law enforcement. Hospitals are required to report gunshot wounds, stab wounds or seri

Reporting a rape to law enforcement is a difficult decision for victims, and for those who work with them. If they do report it, the rest of us are ob

Words differ, but reaction is the worldwide: 'That stinks!'

Scientists discover how brain says 'yuck' to odors

The reaction to the worst stench—muller-beeping odor that saturated 'somewhere between rotting vegetables, rolling Gaza and a sewer'—is almost the same in both humans and rats, but more work is needed to understand why.

The researchers studied women who tended to find smells more intense and more unpleasant than men did. The results, published in the journal eLife, found that the female olfactory system has a higher threshold for certain smells, which could explain why women are more sensitive to certain odors.

The study involved 12 women and 12 men who were asked to rate the intensity of 180 odors, including those that are typically found in the home. The women were more sensitive to the smell of benzene, which can be found in gasoline and carpet fumes, and to the smell of ammonia, which can be found in urine and cleaning products.

The researchers also found that women were more likely to report feeling sick after being exposed to certain odors, which could be due to their higher sensitivity.

The study's lead author, Dr. Jon Cometto, said: "We wanted to understand how differences in olfactory processing might contribute to differences in how we perceive and respond to odors."

The findings could have implications for public health, as exposure to certain odors can cause health problems such as respiratory issues and headaches. The study was funded by the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences.

Former workers sue Coca-Cola

By Veronica Dahlke

Associated Press

NEW YORK — For 27 years, Jim Cribb worked at a Coca-Cola warehouse in Queens, earning just enough money to feed his two sons and pay his rent. Suddenly, Cribb and 10 others were suspected of stealing soda—sneaking out the doors they say they were promised as rewards for doing a good job—charges prosecutors have since dropped.

The charges were the latest in a string of cases involving workers at the company. The company said European governments had found lead in at least half of the hair-coloring products it produced, but it was clearly linked to the use of lead in the hair-dye manufacturing process. The company said it would examine the hair-dye manufacturing process to determine the source of any lead contamination.

They were fired in November 1996 along with two managers. The company then filed an official complaint, and they were criminally charged with theft, but the charges were dismissed in June 1998 by Criminal Court Judge Brannee Melendrez.

WASHINGTON — Certain hair dyes, including those used to administer trends in hair coloring, can contain harmful levels of lead, the Food and Drug Administration and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said in a report published in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study, to be published in the journal, found that lead was detected in at least two-thirds of the samples tested. The FDA said it would require warning labels on all products containing lead, but it was unclear how soon that would happen.

The police officer said, "We know, because they orchestrated the whole thing," said Anthony Rumore, president of Local 54 of the Buffalo Drink Brewery Workers Union, a Teamsters local that represents the fired workers.

Most of the cases they were being fired for couldn't be sold for some other reason, the union official said.

"I believe top management orchestrated the whole situation," said Rumore, noting that the theft came at a time when Coca-Cola was experiencing its business. But Coca-Cola said the missing soda was linked to the workers.

In October 1995, the company noticed a wave of soda shortages, after receiving a better-than-expected employment was stealing about $4,000 worth of Coca-Cola products a month from the warehouse, according to Lewis Boxenbaum, a spokesperson for Coca-Cola in New York. In the three months before the

Calf. bombings suspect surrenders

VALLEJO, Calif. — An en­couraging sign that the bomb­ing saga might be run­ning its course came when a man who said he was involved in the attacks surrendered Monday to federal agents and made a plea to the public not to resort to violence.

"I am not a terrorist," Robert Robinson, 29, told Federal Bureau of Investigation officials at the FBI office in San Francisco, according to the Associated Press.

"I don't want to see anymore violence," Robinson said.

He also asked the public to not resort to violence when he is arraigned Tuesday.

"It's not going to work," he said.

He was arrested early Monday as he was leaving a hotel near the site of an earlier explosion. He was later transferred to the FBI headquarters in San Francisco.

A national newsletter said it was "probably the most important development in the investigation of the bombings." The newsletter also said: "This is the first time we have had a confession from a man who was directly involved in the bombings."

The newsletter noted that the man had been under surveillance by the FBI for several months and that there were "high hopes" that he would confess.

The newsletter also quoted FBI Director Robert Sibert as saying: "This is a very significant development and we are very pleased with it."

The newsletter said that the FBI was "very pleased with the cooperation of the public and the media in this case."

The newsletter also quoted a source as saying: "It's a very good sign that this man has agreed to turn himself in."

Even big injuries, it seems, come in pairs.

The No. 2 Iowa men's basketball team is playing some of the worst basketball of the season without the services of Big Eight Player of the Year Ted Wilkins, who suffered a hip injury and has not played since Dec. 14. Now, the Hawkeyes may be without point guard Jeff Grayer, who has a sprained ankle. Hoiberg said that Grayer, who did not play in Saturday's game against Creighton, will not play in Monday's game against Northwestern.

"If I'm hurting the team, I'm not going to start," said Grayer, who did not start the Creighton game. "I'm not going to play unless I'm completely healthy, or I'll hurt myself even more."

Grayer said he sprained his ankle during practice the morning before the Creighton game.

Kent McCausland, Iowa guard who is expected to step in for the injured Grayer, also practiced for the first time since suffering a hip injury on Dec. 14.

"He's a maybe," said Hoiberg. "It's a day-to-day situation as far as deciding who's going to play and who's not."

On Monday, McCausland will have a team meeting with Hoiberg to determine whether he will play against Northwestern.

"He's been doing everything right and doing everything he can to get ready to play," Hoiberg said. "If his foot is short, he won't play."

Grayer said he expects to play when he feels ready.

Celtics get rare road win over Raptors

The Celtics got their 13th road win of the year, with a 106-98 victory over the Toronto Raptors, pushing their record to 36-22. The win also snapped a streak of five straight losses on the road.

The Celtics entered the game with a 3-7 road record, but they came out on top in this one. Jayson Tatum led the way with 28 points, while Jaylen Brown added 22 points and Gordon Hayward contributed 17 points.

Toronto starter Kyle Lowry scored 26 points and Pascal Siakam added 18 points, but it wasn’t enough to stop the Celtics from improving their road record.

The game was tightly contested, with the teams trading leads throughout the game. However, the Celtics were able to maintain their lead by the end, thanks in part to their strong defense.

The win is significant for the Celtics, who are currently the fourth seed in the Eastern Conference. With 12 games left in the regular season, they are in a good position to clinch a playoff berth and potentially a higher seed.

The Celtics’ next game is against the Milwaukee Bucks, on Tuesday, March 29. They will be looking to build on their momentum from this win and continue their recent improvement on the road.
For Mario Ken, left, appears at a press conference in Iowa City to announce that he has decided to end his football career after being awarded the third round pick in the NFL draft by the Jets. Ken left the press conference without answering questions about what his future plans may be.

Whatever anyone chooses to call it, the 2001 NFL season officially begins tomorrow, and the start of the regular season is just the beginning of a long season for the teams, their players, and their fans. The season is filled with ups and downs, victories and losses, and the ultimate goal of reaching the Super Bowl.

The New England Patriots, under the leadership of head coach Bill Belichick, have high expectations for the upcoming season. Belichick, who has been in charge of the team for the past four seasons, has led the Patriots to the Super Bowl each of the past three years. This year, the Patriots have added several key players to their roster, including quarterback Tom Brady and running back Kevin Faulk. With these additions, the Patriots are looking to make another deep run in the playoffs.

The Pittsburgh Steelers, on the other hand, are seeking to return to the Super Bowl after losing in the championship game last season. The Steelers have a strong defense led by linebacker James Harrison and a potent offense featuring quarterback Ben Roethlisberger and running back Rashard Mendenhall. If the Steelers can stay healthy, they have the talent to make another deep run in the playoffs.

As the season kicks off, fans across the country will be glued to their televisions, eagerly awaiting the start of the games. The first Sunday of the season features a clash between the New England Patriots and the Pittsburgh Steelers, with both teams looking to make a statement early in the season.

In conclusion, the 2001 NFL season is shaping up to be one of the most exciting and competitive in recent memory. With high expectations for multiple teams and a strong slate of games to choose from, fans are sure to be treated to a thrilling season of football.

NEW YORK - The hooking, electronic sound of U2's latest single, "Discotheque," has been all over the radio and virtually everywhere else since its release last week.

But a few lucky people were able to get in on the ground floor and listen to the new song before anyone else.

It was an odd marketing technique - one that advertising and record industry executives, if not the band, seem to be proud of.

"It's a fun series with a lot of action, and it's a little goofy," said Steven Samuels, a marketing manager for Mercury Records.

"It's a way to hook out of his ordinary work-a-day life to a wild world - but it's a world of popular music," he said.

The song, which has been on the radio for only four weeks, has been so successful that it has drawn complaints from some fanatics.

"It's not trying to be a disco track," Samuels said.

"It's not a disco track," Girardi said, "but it's a great song that incorporates the kind of coolness that comes with a new song, "Discotheque," because I remember the first time I heard it, it was on the radio."

The four-week lead period on "Discotheque" brings you back to the past, he said. "They were such great shows of the time, they were coming to the present day."

But there has been a lot of talk about the "Dukes of Hazzard" phenomenon.

"I think the show is not trying to be a disco track," Girardi said.
