Jury comes down hard on Simpson

Jury orders $25 million in punitive damages, on top of $8.5 million in compensatory damages

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — A jury Monday heaped $25 million in punitive damages on O.J. Simpson for the slayings of his ex-wife and her friend, saddling him with more than twice the debt even his pursuers say he can pay.

The judgment is on top of $8.5 million in compensatory damages awarded last week when the jury repudiated Simpson's murder acquittal and found him liable in the 1994 slaying deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

"Finding O.J. Simpson liable of the murders and acting with oppression and malice was one of the easiest decisions I have ever had to make," juror Laura Fast-Khazae, a white woman in her 30s, said at a post-verdict news conference.

Juror No. 266, a theater stage manager in her 40s, said she simply didn't believe Simpson's testimony. "Everything as it related to the evidence — the shoes, the hitting, where the gloves were, the sweatshirt."

As for Simpson's claim he was framed, juror No. 186, a white man in his 20s, said: "There's just no way anyone could have planted all that evidence. It doesn't make sense. ... There's no way."

The mostly white jury, in contrast to the mostly black jury that acquitted Simpson of murder, said race had nothing to do with its decision.

"We went by all the evidence and it had nothing to do with the color of Mr. Simpson's skin," said juror No. 400, a white woman in her 60s.

"Anybody who comments on something like that, without knowing what we went through as far as what information we go through, are being essentially a racist themselves," the white man in his 20s said.

UISG expects surge in candidacy

Increase in student interest poses threat to incumbent senators

By Chris Gardner and
Emily Shack
The Daily Iowan

Applications for UI Student Government offices are due Friday, and increased campuswide involvement has incumbent senators shaking in their seats.

UI junior Anne Walstrom, a current UISG senator, said senators are beginning to feel nervous about the prospects of re-election due to the anticipated surge of student involvement.

"The campaigning will be tougher this year," she said.

UI senior Heather Kramer, a UISG senator and public relations adviser for the Student Election Board (SEB), said due to increased interest in the UISG, more people will vie for UISG positions this year than in the past.

Kramer said in past years, some senators have run in Beltrame uncontested elections due to lack of involvement.

"A lot of senators are nervous that they will actually have to run this year," she said. "A lot more people know about student government."

Campaigning will begin Feb. 17, after the SEB holds a mandatory candidate meeting with policies and procedures for candidacy.

Twenty seats are available for the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate, which covers majors including pharmacy, business, natural sciences and nursing. Fifteen seats are available for the Undergraduate Activities Senate, which represents special interest groups and areas of residence.

The elections will be held March 3 and 4. A presidential debate also will be held prior to the elections.

UISG President Marc Beltrame said he considered his strategies prior to his campaign last year. His efforts began by building a coalition — contacting student groups to disseminate information and to encourage people to vote.

His campaign experience included flier distribution, preparing for the debates and raising money, he said.

"My favorite part of campaigning was meeting people and listening to their ideas and concerns," Beltrame said. "Our least favorite part was fund-raising, but it was an important part of the winning effort."

The spending limit for presidential candidates is $3,000. To raise

The early bird catches the summer sublesser

By Kevin Doyle
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City apartment dwellers who will head home for the summer are getting desperate about finding sublessees, but old timers say with a little preparation, the task isn't as hard as it seems.

Connie Stellinga, a property manager for Van Buren Village, 614 S. Johnson St., Apt. 3, said many students in the area are beginning to look for summer and fall sublessees now.

"If you wait until after spring break, you won't find anything," said Stellinga, who has been in the Iowa City real estate business for 13 years.

UI freshman Jamie Murphy, who lives at the Cornerstone Apartments, 600 S. Capitol St., said finding a sublessee has been an easy task.

"The first day the ad was in The Daily Iowan, we got millions of calls," she said. "There must be a lot of people in the Iowa City area looking for a place to live, because we still get calls all the time."

To sublease an apartment means to rent property the original tenant (the sublessee) holds by a lease to another who is looking to rent out the apartment (the subletter). This involves a process of running ads in local newspapers, putting fliers up around campus, interviewing the

Tips for subleasing your apartment:

- Advertise in your local paper.
- Go to the Union and put your name in the Housing Clearinghouse Directory. It is free of charge and found at the main information desk.
- Put fliers up everywhere (campus buildings, break rooms at work and telephone poles around campus).

subletter and talking about details regarding rent.

UI alumna Susan Verschoor said putting an ad in the newspaper in February is the key to successful subleasing.

"Last year, a couple of my friends talked a guy down (so we could) pay half of the rent and use his furniture over the summer," Verschoor said. "The man was desperate and put his ad in the paper late."

UI senior Karen Humphries said in her three years on the Iowa City apartment scene, she has always found a place to live. Location is the main issue for people looking for apartments, she said.

I.C. takes on look of Hitchcock flick

Boost in local crow population has many fearing the pesky birds

By Scott Lester
The Daily Iowan

Like a scene from "The Birds," Iowa City's crow population has descended for the winter, scaring students and slopping up cars.

Iowa City is witnessing an increase in the population of Corvus brachyrhynchos — more commonly known as the American crow, said Chris Rogers, UI adjunct assistant professor of biological sciences. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of crows line rooftops and fill trees every night in downtown Iowa City.

Crows are suited perfectly to survive in cities because they eat anything, including leftover food, trash, road kill and even the vomit of late-night bargainers.

"We leave the road kill for them to find and then pick it up later," said Linda Barnhart, an officer with Iowa City Animal Control. "We don't dare take it away from them — they chatter and get defensive."

The crows in Iowa City are fighters and territorial. But their beak is bigger than their bite — they'll only go after those who provoke them, Barnhart said.

UI freshman Buffi Sawyer said the downtown bird scene has not yet caused her any Alfred Hitchcock-type horror.

"All I think about when I see them is the movie 'The Birds,'" she said. "I just hope they don't attack me."

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

A flock of American crows perch in a tree in the Pedestrian Mall. The crows that inhabit Iowa City are here only for the winter, and disperse to the countryside to breed in the spring.

UI senior Beth Beard said although she is not intimidated by the crows, they can still interfere in the lives of their Iowa City neighbors.

"Once I was with my friend, and she parked her car down by the Engineering Building," she said. "When we got out, there was so much shit on it, it took four trips to the car wash before it came clean."

The crows' survival characteristics are no match for man's destructive tendencies. It seems the crows' purpose in life is to serve as target practice for kids with BB guns.

"Back home, we used to shoot at them — they didn't stand a fighting chance," said LaDonna Potter, an Iowa City parking official. "They have a better chance of survival in the city."

Iowa City resident Shawn Lewis said at his old house, there was a tree where a large amount of crows liked to hang out and make noise. One day he and his friends bought air rifles and had a target practice competition.

"The only problem that I have with crows is in the morning," he said. "It is annoying when they keep me awake."

Just like humans, crows learn from experience, especially when survival is at stake. UI graduate student Troy Fisher-Harper said if you walk past a large group of crows, stop and clap once. The ones that fly away have been shot at before.

Edley inspires thought on affirmative action

By Jennifer Cassell
The Daily Iowan

A Harvard law professor, former Clinton aide and author insisted at a UI lecture Monday night that affirmative action is not simply a matter of black and white.

Christopher Edley Jr., author of "Not All Black and White: Affirmative Action, Race and American Values," spoke in recognition of the UI Office of Affirmative Action's 25th anniversary.

Edley, as special counsel to President Clinton, led the White House review of affirmative-action programs across the nation, which resulted in the Clinton administration slogan: "Mend it, don't end it."

Edley said affirmative action falls into many gray areas and needs to be put into context before decisions about it can be made.

"You can't just jump in and say, 'Yes, I'm for affirmative action in employment,'" he said. "Context matters."

While some are in favor of affirmative action because they view it as a way to prevent or remedy discrimination, others support it because of the need for diversity in employment and in higher education, Edley said.

Advocating or refuting affirmative action can be a personal value choice that must be backed up with clear thinking, which is why Edley said he felt it was necessary to write a book examining it.

"The reason I wrote the book is because I want lots of folks to think more sharply about this issue," he

Stone, Burns include simple recipes in celebrity cookbook

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There are some useful recipes in "The Sinatra Celebrity Cookbook" — Barbara, Frank and Friends.

And then there are the contributions of Sharon Stone and the late George Burns.

Stone's recipe is called Pomme de Jour: "Walk to the refrigerator. Open the door. Open the fruit drawer. Take out an apple. Eat it."

Burns confessed, "I haven't cooked in the last 70 years, but I think I still remember how to make scrambled eggs."

He said, "I'm pretty sure you use eggs, put them in a pan (and it's better if you break them first). Make sure you move the shells to one side, then let them cook for about three minutes. When it's done, forget the eggs and eat the shells."

Presidents Clinton and Reagan, Paul Newman and Elizabeth Taylor chipped in recipes for the book.

Proceeds go toward treatment of abused children at the Barbara Sinatra Children's Center at Eisenhower Medical Center in Rancho Mirage.

McCartney denies farm is safe haven for wild boars

LONDON (AP) — Paul McCartney denied any responsibility for a proliferation of rampaging boars that are killing lambs and damaging crops near his farm.

The Times of London on Monday quoted farmers as suggesting McCartney and his wife, Linda, were harboring the fierce, tusked wild hogs.

"They are putting out carrots and so on for these creatures. They won't have hunters on the land because they are against killing animals, so their farm has become a safe haven," Diana Morrison, a sheep farmer, said.

Geoff Baker, a spokesperson for the 54-year-old ex-Beatle, said the claims are "total rubbish" and the McCartneys have never seen any wild boar around their farm about 50 miles southeast of London.

Stern singled out for romantic devotion to wife

NEW YORK (AP) — Howard Stern, a true romantic. Who knew?

Howard and his wife, Alison, were selected the most romantic couple of 1997 on Monday by the cable network Romance Classics.

The network said the radio shock jock's devotion to his wife of 18 years has never wavered "in the face of endless temptation."

"If you've listened to Howard's show, watched him on E! or read his books, you have discovered a side of him that is truly romantic," said Kate McEnroe, president of Romance Classic.

"It demonstrates that romance doesn't always come bundled in hearts and flowers," McEnroe said.

New York City subway passengers exit a southbound express train at 42nd Street, following an orange-painted path in the system's effort at passenger etiquette, Monday. Passengers on the platform are instructed by a conductor (left, wearing vest) to wait on either side of the marked area before boarding.

Good etiquette on New York's subway? Fuhgeddaboudit!

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

"It don't work. I've been here 13 years — it's still chaos."

NEW YORK — A campaign to get New York City subway riders to show some courtesy and step aside for fellow straphangers trying to get off the train has so far been greeted by a collective "Fuhgeddaboudit!"

"It don't work," huffed one conductor at the subway station under Grand Central station. "I've been here 13 years — it's still chaos."

After all, this is New York, a city too busy for common courtesy, where etiquette gets lost in the daily bump and grind of rush hour and the only rule for boarding trains appears to be: Every man for himself.

"STOP pushing me!" a woman yelled at a stranger behind her aboard the No. 1 train at Columbus Circle.

"I was just trying to get off!" he yelled back, stepping out and rushing on.

Conductor at the subway station under Grand Central station

"Step Aside, Speed Your Ride," reads the slogan on the transit agency's posters. But even with 30 "etiquette officers" posted Monday morning at one express platform under Grand Central, the message appeared lost on thousands of commuters.

Passengers waiting to get aboard were told to stay clear of orange squares painted on the platform in front of each train door. Conductors in orange safety vests were assigned to each door to guide pedestrian traffic.

"Move all the way into the car!" the platform conductors yelled.

The idea is to get everyone on and off and the train moving on its way in 45 seconds.

"Behavior modification ... will help customers acclimate and alight," transit supervisor Anthony Carestia said.

The transit agency will decide whether to apply the new subway etiquette to other major Manhattan stations — rudest ones first — after reviewing the results of the experiment.

College student Jennifer Walter pronounced the plan ridiculous.

"The problem is not on the platform, it's the trains — they're too crowded," she said.

"People are jerks!" added Sandy Brumley. "They stand right in front of the door."

Platform conductor Martin Crump agreed the people are the problem: "We should start issuing them summonses."

Study: School doesn't challenge teens

By Robert Greene
Associated Press

"I think kids are trying to get by with the bare minimum, and just get through with what they have to get through and not push themselves to their full potential."

WASHINGTON — Half of the high-school students in a new survey feel less than challenged at school. But that doesn't mean they are eager to take calculus, advanced science or Shakespeare.

Instead, basic reading, writing and math topped the list of what students found "extremely important" in a survey released Monday by Public Agenda, a non-profit research group. Ninety-four percent of students found those studies crucial. Computer skills also ranked high, at 75 percent, as did practical job skills, at 59 percent.

Good marks make them feel good, said the cross-section of 1,300 students interviewed in November. But teachers make it easy just to get by, they said.

Overall, less than half the students surveyed thought it so important to take biology, chemistry or physics; advanced math such as calculus; American history and American geography. Shakespeare was buried rather than praised at 23 percent. The bell tolled for Hemingway and other modern American authors at 18 percent.

"I think kids are trying to get by with the bare minimum, and just get through with what they have to get through and not push themselves to their full potential," said Patrick Burland, 16, a junior from Boothwyn, Pa., on a study tour of Washington.

There's a practical reason, too. Why risk getting a lower grade on a more difficult subject when you can keep a 4-point grade average taking something easier?

"You can maybe take algebra and get an A and then you take calculus and get a D," said Burland, who goes for the more challenging courses.

After all, 96 percent of the students said doing well in school made them feel good about themselves. Close to 90 percent felt schools should help students feel positive about themselves. Six out of 10 said they would do better, but would have to give up too many things they enjoy doing.

Like sports.

"Every year the phy-ed (physical education) department gets bigger and bigger and the English department gets a little smaller," said William Delfs, 16, a junior from Spring Lake Park, Minn., and member of the swim team. He said many juniors and seniors take multiple gym classes and a smattering of basics.

Jill Cope, 16, a junior from Shreveport, La., said because some students know they are college bound and others plan to go to work, class choice varies.

"I think it just depends on the type of student you are," she said.

Jean Johnson, a co-author of the study, said the students think less about specific content than adults do when talking about standards and what should be taught.

On other matters, the students said they want to learn values such as hard work, honesty and tolerance, even though cheating and disruptive behavior abound.

"Most of these teen-agers expect the adults of the school to tell them what they need to know to be good adults and hold good jobs in the future," Johnson said.

For instance, nearly nine students out of 10 found it "extremely important" to learn good work habits such as being responsible, on time and disciplined by the time they finish high school. Eight out of 10 found it extremely important to learn the value of hard work, honesty and tolerance of others.

"You can only apply calculus to things that are calculus," Delfs said. "You can apply the hard work to everything you do — in school, home, sports — everything. And you can apply it to the rest of your life."

But tolerance and disruptive behavior can be relative, noted Cope. An example? She doesn't understand why her principal found a classmate's pink hair disruptive, and told the girl to wear a wig.

Iowa Legislature slashes inheritance tax

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad signed into law a $45 million inheritance-tax cut Monday and said he may ask for another reduction next year.

"It is one that has hurt too many people for too long," Branstad said at a checkered ceremony where he gave official approval to a tax cut he had pushed the Legislature to approve.

Under the measure Branstad signed, lineal descendants such as children and grandchildren wouldn't be taxed when they receive an estate.

"Many Iowans feel the inheritance tax is really kind of a grave-robbing," Branstad said. Some conservatives had pushed for the elimination of the inheritance tax entirely, but legislative leaders worried the state couldn't afford the $90 million annual cost of wiping the tax off the books.

Branstad had little objection to the more limited measure, but said he might go further in his legislative recommendations next year. "We're going to continue to look at that," the governor said.

The inheritance tax surfaced as an issue last year, but didn't get heavy attention. This year, however, Branstad made it one of his top priorities and the measure sailed through the Legislature.

Even some lawmakers who were skeptical about the wisdom of cutting the tax conceded the issue had caught fire with voters and they were reluctant to oppose it.

Critics of the inheritance-tax cut said many of the benefits — as much as 40 percent — go to people living outside the state, and argue the money could be better used to cut other taxes.

Branstad rejected those arguments, and predicted the state wouldn't actually lose the $45 million that's been projected. That's because reducing the tax will stanch the flow of retired people moving from the state to avoid paying, he said.

The inheritance-tax cut was the first measure approved by the Republican Legislature elected in November.

It's also the first in a string of 10 percent across-the-board tax-cut measures lawmakers will consider. Branstad has proposed a

Council votes against more meter-feeding enforcement

By Renee Bovy
The Daily Iowan

UI students won't have to worry about an increase in parking tickets for meter-feeding after the Iowa City City Council decided against stepped-up enforcement to discourage the illegal practice.

The Iowa City City Council discussion focused on issues in the Downtown Iowa City Parking Study prepared by the Johnson County Council of Governments Transportation Planning Division (JCCOG) at the Monday night work session.

Jeff Davidson, assistant director of planning, said meter-feeding is a problem in the downtown area because it reduces the overturn in the close-in parking spaces used for short duration shopping trips.

"I've sat in a restaurant downtown and had the waitress go out and feed the meter," Davidson said.

Davidson said parking a vehicle in a 60-minute space means that past that duration of time, whether the meter has been paid or not.

In other parking matters, council members agreed to offer a larger number of monthly parking permits. The parking spaces offered to monthly permit holders will be in the parking ramps and may be restricted to the top floors.

Council members also discussed giving economic incentives to monthly permit holders who car-pool.

The City Council called for an investigation into the possibility of changing on-street parallel parking spaces to angle parking. The angle parking study will focus on Linn and College streets.

Davidson said although angle parking would provide additional spaces, the act of backing a vehicle into traffic particularly on two-way streets could increase accidents.

"Backing a vehicle is the most dangerous thing you can do. Angle parking would require backing into oncoming traffic," Davidson said.

Council members will discuss an ordinance to designate the East College Street district and the College Green District as an historic preservation zone at tonight's meeting.

Branstad says he doesn't fear possible race against Harkin

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad declined to speculate Monday about a potential matchup with U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin, but left little doubt about his view of the outcome.

"I've never lost an election and I've never been afraid of anybody," Branstad said.

Top Democrats raised eyebrows over the weekend when they said they've spoken with Harkin about making a run for governor next year, hoping to find a big-name Democrat to capture an office they haven't held for 30 years.

While Branstad has said he wouldn't seek another term, many Republicans assume he'd change his mind if Harkin ran. That would set up a race between two of the state's most successful politicians.

"I think everybody would enjoy that kind of a challenge," Branstad said.

Harkin has been tight-lipped about his plans. He won election to a third six-year Senate term last November, and has said he intends "at this time" to complete that term.

Separating the melting pot

My friend Ariella's appearance confuses people's notion of race. Her skin coloring is dark and her hair is coarse-black, but she is lighter than most African-Americans. She could be Latina or possibly biracial. Trying to place her in a category drives many people crazy. While working as a waitress, customers would stare at her, shifting in their seat while they asked, "What are you?"

Store clerks speak to her slowly, nodding their heads as they search for simple words. "¿Hablas inglés?" they ask, mistaking her wide-eyed stare of disgust for a dumb stare of confusion.

The daughter of an Iranian immigrant, she has lived in the United States her entire life. Obviously, her English is flawless. She answers the clerks in clear, unbroken English, and they blush. "Iranian," she says, "My dad is from Iran." Even this is not enough. She doesn't fit the American image of an Iranian.

When Westerners think of Iran, they think of oil tycoons, veiled women, sheiks and radical Muslim terrorists. Surprise. Ariella is Jewish. Now, how do we categorize her?

The real problem is why we need categories at all. Ariella's customers often were perplexed to the point of discomfort. It was as if they couldn't recognize her humanity without first recognizing her race. Her facial features and lack of accent crossed too many lines. When they asked if she was Muslim, her answer destroyed their final category.

"What?" they asked, "They have Jews in Iran?"

Our simple equations do not work because race, ethnicity, religion and language do not have absolute values. We can't add them up neatly and expect simple answers: Dark skin + Iranian heritage + immigrant father does not equal "fresh-off-the-boat" non-English-speaking Muslim radical.

I used to think Ariella's treatment was because of her so-called "exotic" looks. Her blurring of categorical borders was enough to make Americans squirm. Now I know it isn't that simple.

Last week, my office ordered Chinese food for lunch. When the delivery driver, who was Asian, parked his car, a security guard started yelling for him to park elsewhere. The driver could see my boss and I approaching with money, so he told the guard he would leave shortly. The guard leaned forward, screaming slow commands. His head bobbed almost violently.

"You leave soon!" he said. Note the broken English. The driver understood him without the high-volume, slow-broken English. He is an immigrant, and he also speaks English.

A few seconds later, a white man pulled into the delivery driver's spot and stepped out of his car. The security guard spoke to him softly, apologizing for the inconvenience. "I'm sorry, but you must park in the ramp," he said. "This lane is for patient pick-up."

The security guard assumed the driver was an immigrant who couldn't speak English. What made him categorize the driver this way? Surely he doesn't believe all Asian-Americans are recent immigrants. Large populations of many races have lived in the United States their entire life. Is it that race/ethnicity defines us above all else in this country?

It would seem this is the case, at least subconsciously. Our attempts to reclaim racial identity through multiculturalist ideas such as hyphenation (Asian-American, Mexican-American, etc.) have backfired in at least one way. No one of color is categorized as American anymore. Their ethnic heritage divides them into separate "nations" under our constitution. Their native country comes first in the hyphenation.

Obviously, hyphenation is not the culprit. It symbolizes many other problems. Hyphenation grew as response to racist, anti-immigrant sentiments in the United States. Also, it expresses the desire not to lose one's cultural identity.

Identity politics work toward one end only: segregation. Italian quarters, Latin quarters, black neighborhoods, Jewish neighborhoods, etc. instead of just neighborhoods. In the end, does it matter that Ariella is Iranian or Jewish? To her, it matters a great deal. But what is the concern of restaurant customers or security guards?

Perhaps more focus on what binds us together as Americans would bring us closer to the dream of the melting pot. We have the pot. All we need is the fire.

No role models in Washington

Can true leadership and role models be found in Washington? Unfortunately, the answer to that question doesn't include a long list of our nation's top elected officials.

In the first chapter of his book titled "To Renew America," Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich wrote, "Until we re-establish a legitimate moral cultural standard, our civilization is at risk."

His very wise words greatly conflict with the House Ethics Committee's decision to fine Gingrich for the misuse of tax-exempt funds. Gingrich denies any wrongdoing, yet acknowledges failure to seek legal expertise concerning the funds. In doing so, he has insulted the integrity of the position he holds.

Gingrich's position as Speaker of the House establishes him as the leader of one of our country's most powerful bodies, as well as a national role model. If he really is serious about renewing America and "re-establishing a legitimate moral cultural standard," shouldn't he have started with himself first? Gingrich holds a Ph.D. and has served in Congress for 18 years. He has no legitimate excuse for making such a costly and foolish mistake. Not many Americans could afford to make $300,000 worth of mistakes. On a daily basis, Gingrich makes decisions that greatly affect our nation; doesn't common sense tell him to constantly be on his P's and Q's as far as his position as a national leader?

Rep. J.C. Watts of Oklahoma, who was chosen by Gingrich to give the Republican response to Clinton's State of the Union Address, said, "The strength of America is not in Washington." His statement is the only logistic conclusion that can be made in light of Gingrich's ethics violations and the scandal-laden Clinton administration.

What can the future leaders of America learn from our current national leaders? It is sad, but the most obvious lesson is for us to learn from their foolish mistakes. Mistakes like establishing oneself as a moral leader and not following through with the moral standards that he/she creates.

Since many of our national leaders aren't very good role models, it is left to us to "renew America." The bulk of renewal includes simple activities like keeping up on current events, voting, taking a strong stand on local and national issues, being active in one's community and most important of all, practicing what one preaches.

Reaffirmation at Cultural Diversity Day

For every time life slaps you in the face as if to say, "What, you think there's actually a point to this world?", something else pops up to suggest the contrary. Apathy, the soul's greatest adversary, is far from king. The UI held its eighth annual celebration of cultural diversity Saturday at the UI Fieldhouse. Seemingly hundreds of people from several states were presenters of the festivities, enlightening thousands of students and Iowans eager to take steps to a larger universe.

For several hours, the conservative European-descended Midwest was dead, replaced by citizens of the world instead of people who look like characters from Renaissance art — and it was a beautiful thing. The county signifier on the bottom of Iowa license plates were laughable in their existence; the fact that my driver's license says Missouri and my girlfriend's says Iowa was equally funny. The two states are separated by nothing more than spelling, as was blurted out symbolically by Cultural Diversity Day.

There was food, singing, dancing and storytelling. Hell, there was even a fashion show, in which the models looked less like bulimia-induced ghosts and more like somebody you'd like to take out for a cup of coffee or an omelette. For a brief moment in time, the Fieldhouse mirrored the ideal. No longer was it necessary to say, "I was talking to that Indian guy," or, "Did you see what that big red-headed kid was doing?" Instead, attention was focused on people's actions, not their skin, their hair or their eyes.

It was the type of day to make you look at magazines like Cosmo and Men's Health and want to throw up in disgust of their kiddie pool-like depth. Cosmo, Page 98: "783 ways to improve sexual pleasure in bed because you and your partner are too damned insecure to just ask each other what you like." OK, I'm straying a bit.

Yes, life has its moments. Like when we're driving down the road and Tom Cochran's "Life is a Highway" comes on the radio. It's these moments when it doesn't matter if there's sleet or snow, for it might as well be 88 degrees and sunny on the way to Busch Stadium for a Cardinal game.

We need to appreciate the everyday things typically disregarded because we're too worried about finishing another story from "Canterbury Tales." Now that I'll be graduating from college in 95 days, I've finally figured out what it takes to get by without going insane.

Road trips are fun, as are going to concerts or sporting events. But just give me a cold beer, a few friends and the security to laugh as loud as a freight train without being embarrassed, and you'll see a man who can die tomorrow doing what he loves best.

It's a shame there's even a need for Cultural Diversity Day, but I assume that sounds somewhat idealistic. I might as well call for an end to human-rights violations, it's not going to happen anytime soon. If only change would happen more rapidly. Still, what would we annoying journalists rant about then?

Cultural Diversity Day reminded me of the good and the bad. The good, obviously, was the sense of renewal I felt in the Fieldhouse. I've always suspected there's hope for our children and children's children; Saturday was a reaffirmation.

It only took a speck of time to remind me of the bad. Actually, maybe bad is being a bit too harsh. We'll call it, "Something we need to work on." (Yes, I stayed up all night thinking of that witty little catch phrase.)

My friend Molly walked by wearing traditional Indian garb. I looked at her and smiled in amazement, and then went on about my way. Later that night, I told her how nice she had looked that afternoon, then realized the only reason I said that is because she was wearing something unfamiliar to my eyes. She did look nice, she always does, but I've never gone up to her and said, "Wahoo! I love them Levi's." In other words, the festival served as a notice to me. The foreign should not be so foreign, especially just three years away from the millennium.

The biggest rush for UI students is that we still have time to change that which appears wrong in our eyes, our hearts and our minds. Most of our parents have already succumbed to apathy because it's easier than fighting. And besides, Must TV was on.

But as long as we realize we can fight and fight and fight for what we believe in until we're either, A) dead from exhaustion, or B) successful, then we're not wasting the lives we've been given.

You've heard it 1,000 times, but I'll say it once more. Seventy-five to 100 years for a life is not a long time, so ask yourselves: Would you rather spend your life looking for that which makes you feel comfortable, or would you rather live knowing your battles are going to create a world of peace and enlightenment for the billions who will be born long after you are gone?

Unclear police policy was bound to lead to death

To the Editor:
Our son was killed under a police open-door "policy" that was so full of risk to officers that it was inevitable they would kill someone if they followed their "policy" long enough. No one knows how long it took the Iowa City police to kill someone under this "policy," because Chief Winkelhake did not bother to write it down, so no one is even sure when it was changed, or even if it was formally changed.

In fact, no one knows exactly what the "policy" was because it was passed from officer to officer by word of mouth. Such a sloppy procedure was a guarantee that individual officers would change the so-called "policy" when it seemed "right" to do so. Some officers might exercise lawful caution as did the officers who found an Iowa Vending door open several years back and called our number and asked "if there could be anyone in there." Other officers might push the door open with no thought at all for the safety to citizens.

Such a "policy" was not a policy at all, it was a general way of doing things that was accepted without question, it was a permissive attitude coming from the top down that encouraged some officers to bend and eventually break the law. This failure to define the "policy" and put it in writing demonstrates how little Chief Winkelhake was concerned with the danger of having his officers go through doors with guns drawn without warning.

Someone died as a direct result of the chief's failure to properly train his officers and ensure that a safe open-door policy was in effect. The chief would like to place all the responsibility for this killing on Jeff Gillaspie. Don't let him get away with it.

Dean Aikin clarifies "contact hours" report

To the Editor,

When reporter Kelley Chorley interviewed me about the claims of Rep. Chuck Larson and the "contact hours" report, I told her I did teach a regularly scheduled course during the fall semester 1996 and it had not appeared on the report because it was a graduate-level course. I told her teaching this course was not part of my current job description and I had taught it as an overload because of my love for teaching.

Furthermore, I told her that most of the rest of the faculty and some of the administrators listed on the report as having zero contact hours had taught graduate courses.

Rep. Larson is incorrect. We are teaching. We are in the classroom.

The reason the graduate courses were not listed was because the Legislative Fiscal Bureau that requested the report specifically directed that it was not to include graduate-level courses. The report is solely a report of contact hours with undergraduates. That is only part of the picture.

I also told her that about 20 percent of the students taking courses taught by faculty of the College of Liberal Arts are graduate students, and graduate students pay higher tuition than undergraduates. I explained that this is a comprehensive research university which has an important mission in educating graduate students as well as undergraduate students. I told her that around a third of the regularly scheduled courses taught by faculty are directed primarily at graduate students.

I also explained that there is a large difference between the mission of the UI and that of UNI which is related to the significance of the UI's graduate program and to the UI's status as a research university. This difference, I told her, accounts for the difference in faculty contact hours with undergraduate students.

Unfortunately, Chorley did not report any of these statements. It is time The Daily Iowan and its readers got the whole picture.

DI gets C- for opinions on Settles

To the Editor:

What makes the DI think Jess Settles owes them a single sentence? Jess is the type of individual who gives his all, and if he was able to contribute to this team without risking further injury, you'd find him on the court playing. Don't you realize that Jess stays quiet because he doesn't want to take any hoopla away from the fine season that the Hawks are having so far?

I grade the DI out at C-, and that's being generous.

Bill's article is an inspiration to us all

To the Editor:

Julie Bill's "Coming to terms with sexual assault" (DI, Jan. 31) should be cut out and used by clinics, teachers and parents for discussion and awareness purposes. It sheds a personal experience light on the act of sexual assault that should be used proactively to teach our kids, as well as college students.

It took guts to write this piece. Thank you, Julie, for the most insightful and courageous article I have ever read.

Women are more than just bodies

To the Editor:

It is interesting that The Daily Iowan has recently had an article on McCloskey in the wake of the reportage of a possible rape. It is also interesting that the DI continually chooses to run an ad for the Dolls establishment. Something about this media coverage is bothersome, and it has to do with the female body.

The body is only a shell for the soul. It shouldn't be used as a commodity. Females have more strengths than their appearances and more potential than a roll in the hay.

A woman is more than a beauty queen dealing with the "hard task of being beautiful." She is more than her hip-shaking stride, her fancy clothes and her make-up. For example, a female friend of mine lost her hair from chemotherapy. Does that make her less of a woman by current standards?

I hate to think the predominant role the media portrays women as playing is that of a Doll who performs a dance all day long for the enjoyment of men, who then have the power on whether to take advantage of her or not.

When will we stop seeing only the outside of women? Why do we have to see women abusing themselves or being abused because of their bodies? When will beauty queens and women in general be allowed to live, even with 40-plus extra pounds? When will the media start representing the muscles and the pearls inside the shells?

Slacker mentality infects population

To the Editor:

As a marginally employed person, I tend to read a lot of newspapers, and almost daily read both The Daily Iowan and The Press Citizen. It has been interesting to note a common change in attitudes for both readerships.

What started out as a humorous description of the "Slacker" mentality has become a common description for both age groups. Nowadays, a tendency to blame someone else for your problems, to demand that everyone else respect your various self-described "rights," to whine loudly until someone cuts you some slack and realizes your unique "specialness," to demand compensation for the vicissitudes of life and to ignore your own part in any negative outcome extends across all demographic categories.

I realize insurance coverage usually pays these award settlements, but as the insurance companies always warn us, in the long run, we're all paying by way of increased premiums.

Self-esteem, that much-touted commodity, isn't a product of whining. It comes from taking action (not just legal), and taking responsibility for the results. Those who are stuck thinking of themselves as victims, and think taking action means punishing their abusers, are still denying themselves the full range of human potential. Maybe the best description of this current state of affairs is "Diminished Capacity."

DAILY IOWAN PHOTO/AMERICA FEBRUARY 1997

This week: Everything you want to know about STDs

So we all know about AIDS, the usually sexually transmitted disease that kills. But there are other STDs you should be aware of.

Gonorrhea: the clap, the drip, the greenie weanie. Symptoms are discharge and burning upon urination. There are at least 16 strains of the bacteria, so you can't get immune, and some strains are antibiotic-resistant. Birth-control pills make women more susceptible by making vaginal conditions less favorable to normal bacteria that usually defend against gonorrhea by competition. Gonorrhea may cause sterility. If the bacteria gets into your eyes, it can cause blindness.

Syphilis: the siff, the pox. Syphilis causes a small, painless chancre (raw, open sore) that is swarming with the bacteria (spirochete) in the early stages. At any time, the bacteria can infect the unborn child of a pregnant woman. The early lesion goes away, and the disease goes into remission while the bacteria multiply in the mucous membranes, joints, bones, spinal chord and brain.

In secondary syphilis, more chancres and an itchy rash develop. Patches of hair fall out.

In the last phase, lesions and scars appear on the skin, liver, bones, aorta and other internal organs. Though few bacteria are actually alive in the body, the immune system overreacts to them, the immune reactions damage the brain and spinal cord and you become blind, paralyzed and insane.

More STDs on Wednesday.

Jim McDougal: President Clinton knew about illegal loan in 1986

WASHINGTON (AP) — Changing his story, one of President Clinton's Whitewater partners is telling federal prosecutors Clinton knew about an illegal loan issued to Susan McDougal in 1986, according to The New Yorker magazine.

ABC News reported Sunday night that Jim McDougal has told them the same thing, and Susan McDougal was quoted last week as saying her former husband planned to lie to try to avoid the 84-year prison term he faces.

The McDougals, now divorced, along with former Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, were convicted last May of fraud and conspiracy charges growing out of Whitewater. She is serving an 18-month contempt-of-court sentence for refusing to testify before a Whitewater grand jury.

Jim McDougal told The New Yorker he had suspected his wife was having an affair with Clinton in 1986 during the time a $300,000 loan was being negotiated, but said nothing about it to Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth Starr. Susan McDougal denied having an affair with Clinton.

In an interview Sunday with the New York Post, Jim McDougal said his ex-wife's desire to keep the affair private was a key reason why she went to jail for contempt of court rather than talk to Whitewater investigators.

"I think Susan has gone to enormous lengths, and personally damaged herself, attempting to suppress discussion of this matter," Jim McDougal told the newspaper.

In The New Yorker article, Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter

James Stewart said he interviewed Susan McDougal in prison and asked if she had had an affair with the president, as her former husband stated.

"No. He's lying," she said. "I'm a small-town girl, a Southern Baptist. I wouldn't do it."

In another development, Webster Hubbell, the former associate attorney general and one-time golfing buddy of President Clinton, is coming under increased pressure from the Whitewater counsel for more cooperation, Time magazine reports. The magazine said attorneys close to the investigation believe Starr is trying to compel Hubbell to provide more information after his release this week from 17 months of federal confinement.

Both Jim McDougal and Clinton testified under oath at last year's trial that Clinton did not know about a $300,000 loan to Susan McDougal and was not present at a 1986 meeting where it was discussed, as alleged by David Hale, the man who issued the loan.

Hale has said Clinton, then governor of Arkansas, pressured him for the loan on two occasions, including at a 1986 meeting where Jim McDougal was present.

The New Yorker said Jim McDougal declined to give specifics of what he was telling Starr's investigators but confirmed that he was now backing Hale's version of events.

Hale is serving a federal prison term after pleading guilty to charges stemming from his role in making the loan, which was backed by the Small Business Administration and never repaid.

The $300,000 loan in question was a major element of last May's trial where the McDougals and Tucker were convicted by a federal jury in Little Rock, Ark.

Some of the money from the loan was used to purchase land for a real estate development near Little Rock that originally was purchased for the Whitewater Corp., in which the Clintons were equal partners with the McDougals.

The development subsequently was transferred to a corporation owned solely by the McDougals. And The New Yorker said Susan McDougal took the lead role in attempting to sell and let the lots in a project called Orange Heights.

Army suspends top-ranking official

By Susanne Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Army suspended its top-ranking enlisted soldier Monday after the woman who accused him of sexual misconduct publicly complained of a "different system of justice" for the service's upper tier.

In explaining its decision, the Army said publicity about the allegations against Sgt. Maj. Gene McKinney made it difficult for him to perform his job.

Meanwhile, a military official said the Army has begun investigating a second case involving McKinney and a female sailor. The woman reported an allegation of harassment by McKinney to her supervisor, who then reported it to the Army, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"We don't know if there's anything to it. It's being investigated," the military source said.

On Sunday, Army Secretary Togo West had argued the case for letting McKinney continue in his duties, although West said the issue was not fully settled.

On Monday, Army Chief of Staff

Gen. Dennis Reimer issued a statement saying McKinney — his senior enlisted adviser — had been assigned to the Military District of Washington "pending resolution of the allegations."

The step was taken one day after the accusing woman, retired Sgt. Maj. Brenda Hoster, and two senators said in television interviews that McKinney should be suspended until the charges against him are resolved.

Hoster, who had worked on McKinney's staff, last week publicly accused him of having asked her for sex, grabbed her and kissed her in a hotel room in Hawaii last April during a business trip. McKinney denied the accusation.

The two senators, Republicans Olympia Snowe of Maine and Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania, said it was not enough that the Army had removed McKinney from a panel that is reviewing the Army's policies against sexual harassment. They said it was unjust that Army drill sergeants were suspended immediately after they were accused of sexual misconduct but that McKinney was allowed to stay on.

"Certainly, everybody should be treated the same," Snowe said. "If they're facing charges, they should be placed under suspension."

In her TV appearance Sunday, Hoster complained about what she said was the Army's unequal treatment of McKinney and the drill sergeants at Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland.

"It seems like people in a higher position and at a different level are exempt from those kinds of things because the sergeant major of the Army is still performing his duties," Hoster said. "I don't understand why he gets a different system of justice."

In his announcement Monday, Reimer said the decision to suspend McKinney was taken "in the best interest of the individual and the institution because continued public attention made it increasingly difficult for McKinney to fulfill his responsibilities."

Air Force extends training-flight suspension

By Susanne Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Air Force suspended all training flights over the Gulf of Mexico and the East Coast on Monday after two new reports of close encounters between F-16s and commercial aircraft over New Mexico and Texas.

Both of the close encounters occurred Friday, Air Force officials said.

The latest reports bring the number of incidents that occurred over a three-day period last week between the highly maneuverable fighter jets and passenger airliners to four.

Air Force officials were at a loss to explain why the rash of incidents had occurred.

Meanwhile, the Federal Aviation

Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board have all four incidents under investigation.

The two new cases are in addition to incidents off the coast of Maryland on Friday and off New Jersey on Wednesday.

Late Friday, Air Force Chief of Staff Ronald Fogleman suspended all training missions along the East Coast and extended that ban on Monday to include the Gulf of Mexico.

The incident over New Mexico involved two F-16s and an American Airlines passenger jet that came too close near Clovis, N.M., Air Force spokesman Capt. Leo Devine said. At 1:37 p.m. CST, two F-16 fighters flew out of a military training area without authorization. The military aircraft had just left a military operations area at the time of the incident.

A collision warning was triggered aboard an American jetliner, which was en route from Dallas-Fort Worth to Palm Springs, Calif. The pilot of the McDonnell Douglas Super 80 climbed to avoid going close to the military planes. The aircraft carries about 150 passengers, but it wasn't clear how many were on board.

American Airlines spokesperson John Hotard said the warning told the pilot to descend.

The second incident involved one F-16 and a Northwest Airlines Airbus, Air Force spokesman Lt. Col. Virginia Pribyla said. It occurred about 70 miles southwest of Palacios, Texas, at 3:47 p.m. CST.

The F-16 climbed above its assigned altitude over Texas, coming within 4.6 miles horizontally and 300 feet vertically of the Airbus, which was flying at 33,000 feet. The limits at that altitude are supposed to be five miles and 2,000 feet.

The Northwest plane was en route from Mexico City to Detroit.

Northwest spokesperson Marta Laughlin said the Northwest pilots had the F-16 in visual sight the entire time and were never concerned.

The Air Force, in a statement issued at the Pentagon, said training operations will be suspended over the East and Gulf Coasts "until all units review procedures," expected to be completed by today.

Anti-government protests leave 2 dead in Albania

By Santiago Lyon
Associated Press

VLORA, Albania — Anti-government protesters attacked riot police Monday, trapping and beating some police officers and stripping them of uniforms, guns and shields that were set ablaze in a bonfire in this southern port.

Police fired into the air and fought with the rock-throwing demonstrators, in the worst rioting during a month of unrest that began over a pyramid scheme-gone-bust. Two people were killed and 81 injured, state TV said.

Prime Minister Alexander Meksi went on national television to urge his countrymen, for decades the poorest in Europe, not to join unrest "that aims at pushing Albania into economic collapse."

But popular rage in this city, the flashpoint of riots over the get-rich-quick pyramid schemes, proved nearly impossible to contain Monday when the police were attacked. Police responded by firing in the air. Some stood on the roofs of buildings and threw stones down on the crowd.

State TV said Artur Rustemi and 53-year-old Maliq Banushi were killed Monday, but gave no further details. It said 81 people, including police officers, were treated at hospitals, most with head injuries. The first apparent victim of unrest in Albania was a man who died of a heart attack late Sunday.

Anger over the collapse of the high-risk investment schemes has turned into anti-government sentiment. Many people believe President Sali Berisha's ruling Democratic Party either directly benefited from the schemes or at least should have acted sooner to control them.

The government, in turn, has blamed leftists for the rioting, claiming they want a return to Communist rule.

Berisha's spokesperson said Monday protesters had used "firearms and dynamite" against police. The state should act "with all its force" against "this armed attack," spokesperson Genc Pollo told the state news agency ATA.

The Forum for Democracy, a loose group of opposition parties, claimed the government was exploiting the unrest to create "a police state."

On Sunday, clashes in Vlora, 60 miles south of the capital, injured 15 police officers and 15 protesters, according to ATA.

Monday morning, a crowd of 5,000 to 7,000 people attacked about 100 riot police and managed to isolate about 20 who fled into a building, where they were stripped of uniforms, guns, helmets and shields.

Santiago Lyon/Associated Press

Then the crowd surged toward a police station, throwing stones and flaming sticks wrapped in rags.

Late Monday, a police roadblock about 20 miles north of Vlora blocked the main road in and out of the city. No traffic was allowed to pass in either direction.

Vlora's violence followed the beating of opposition leaders Sunday in a Tirana cafe. Uniformed officers attacked the politicians, who have criticized the government's handling of the investment schemes.

For decades, Albania was the poorest country in Europe, but it had made widely praised progress since Communist rule ended in 1991-92.

Economists now fear much of that progress was based on the investment funds, which have wiped out the savings of Albanians working abroad and tempted many to sell homes and sink everything into companies that promised three-digit annual returns.

The government has promised a partial payback, but that effort — begun last week — has reached only a small pocket of the 3.2 million population.

Accustomed to having the state dictate their way of life, Albanians now blame authorities for their despair and disappointment with democracy.

United States confirms its jets fired uranium bullets near Tokyo

By Yuri Kageyama
Associated Press

TOKYO — Stirring up new ill will with authorities on Okinawa, the U.S. military acknowledged Monday that its jets mistakenly fired 1,520 uranium bullets during shooting practice near the island, then waited a year before notifying Japan.

U.S. officials said the bullets posed no environmental or health threat. It wasn't clear why they waited until Jan. 16 to tell Japan about the gunfire at a firing range on an uninhabited coral island in late 1995 and early 1996.

But the incidents occurred at the height of tensions on Okinawa over the heavy U.S. military presence there and the rape of a schoolgirl by three U.S. servicemen.

Okinawa's governor was furious at the delay in notification. "They keep saying they will make improvements, but it never happens," Masahide Ota said. "When I start wondering how much longer this kind of thing is going to continue, I feel miserable — really depressed."

Foreign Ministry official Sadayuki Hayashi said the delayed notification was as regrettable as the accident itself.

But the Japanese government stalled also the disclosure, hastily calling a news conference only after the report of the bullets first surfaced Monday in The Washington Times.

Japan failed to tell local Okinawan officials until after the newspaper report, the Asahi newspaper said in today's editions.

The U.S. government said the bullets pose no health or environmental danger, and they are only as radioactive as old color TV sets.

"These are conventional weapons, the gunnery range is isolated, and we felt this should not have caused undue concern," U.S. military spokesperson Lt. Col. Kevin Krejcarek told the AP.

Some Japanese were not convinced.

"This is outrageous. The U.S. military often tries cover-ups. This time, the notification came so late. It is insulting," Meisuke Kohirumaki, who works with a group opposing the U.S. military presence in Japan, told Asahi.

The uranium bullets are not classified as nuclear weapons. But Japan, the only nation to sustain an atomic bombing, is extremely sensitive to anything radioactive.

Uranium rounds are not allowed on training ranges in Japan under U.S. Marine Corps policy, although they are used during exercises on approved ranges in the United States.

An AV-8B Harrier aircraft fired the 25-mm rounds — each containing 5.2 ounces of depleted uranium — because they had been labeled incorrectly, the U.S. government said. Uranium is used in some ammunition because it can pierce armor and other hard material.

The delay in notification seemed contrary to reforms announced by the United States in December to make U.S. troops less of a burden on Okinawa. A major element of the reforms, promised as part of a renegotiation of the U.S. military presence on Okinawa, was to provide more timely information on aircraft accidents.

About three-quarters of the 28,000 U.S. troops in Japan are stationed on Okinawa, and residents long have resented their presence. The September 1995 rape of a 12-year-old girl sent tens of thousands of protesters into the streets.

Unlike the liability verdict, the decision on punitive damages was not unanimous. The only person with black ancestry on the jury, a Jamaican-born man who is half-Asian, was the lone vote against punitive damages. He was joined by one other juror who said she voted against the amounts because she felt they were a little high.

The only black in the jury box — an alternate who didn't participate in deliberations but did join the news conference — said she felt Simpson got a raw deal.

"I felt sorry for the families, but I felt they should still seek other people," said juror No. 295, who is in her 40s and works for a medical company. "One person couldn't have done this by himself."

Simpson was not in court for the verdict and watched reports on TV in the snack bar of a suburban golf course where he snacked on a chili dog. He didn't appear to be watching closely, and the volume was low, said a bartender who refused to give her name. She said friends ribbed Simpson about the verdict, and asked for the bar television at the Knollwood Country Club in Granada Hills to be turned up.

Meantime, the courtroom was hushed and there were none of the outbursts that marked last week's verdict. Fred Goldman, the victim's father who had championed the civil court battle against Simpson, sat silently wiping his brow. His wife, Patti, and daughter, Kim, showed little emotion.

Brown Simpson's estate, whose beneficiaries include her two children now living with Simpson, was allotted $12.5 million of the punitive damages. Goldman's father got another $12.5 million, while his mother, Sharon Rufo, did not ask for punitive damages. The long-divorced parents will split the $8.5 million in compensatory damages for the loss of their son's love and companionship.

"The money is not the issue," Goldman said afterward. "It's making certain that the man who murdered my son and Nicole is held responsible — that's happened."

"This was for justice," Kim Goldman said. "We always knew the truth would come out."

It took the jury five hours over two days to arrive at the punishment amount, ignoring the portrayal of Simpson as a tapped-out pariah and siding with a plaintiffs' lawyer who urged jurors to "Send a message ... you can't kill two people and get away with it."

The attorneys never asked for a specific amount in punitive damages, but said it should be enough to hurt Simpson and to force the football great to relinquish his luxurious lifestyle. Pointing to his mansion with tennis court and pool, the Bentley he drives and his huge staff, they suggested he was a "well-paid villain."

The $33.5 million in total damages dwarfs the $15.7 million that plaintiffs estimated Simpson is worth, based on the predicted $3 million he stands to make every year for selling his name, likeness and trademark. The estimate is important because by law creditors can garnish up to 25 percent of future wages.

Leo Terrell, an attorney who is an outspoken advocate for Simpson, grimly escorted Simpson relatives out of the courthouse to a car.

"They're angry," he said. "This is against the law. You can't award more money than the man is worth. This award is wrong."

Under California law, any punitive award is supposed to bear some resemblance to the defendant's financial state. It's supposed to hurt him, but not destroy him.

Before the plaintiffs can claim their money, the judge must decide whether the awards are reasonable, or inflated by irrational passions. He can pare them down if he chooses.

Simpson also could appeal, but that would not let him postpone payment.

money, Beltrame and his coalition spoke with local businesses, individuals, student groups and families to raise the campaign funds.

"The UISG is really a laboratory for leadership. It gives a person a chance to make a difference," said Beltrame, who plans to attend law school after graduating in May. "I believe public service is a person's highest calling."

The SEB also will ask candidates to submit a short biography that will be posted at the polling sites, so people who are unfamiliar with the candidates will know something about them before they vote. "The biographies won't be biased and will be used to inform the voters and hopefully get a better turnout," Kramer said. "All candidates will be limited to a number of words, and it's up to them what they want to say."

Each candidate running for a UISG office must complete a petition — senatorial candidates must collect 75 signatures and presidential candidates must collect 500.

Candidates sign a bond slip to ensure they will not violate any UISG policies. Although there are no written policies, if a candidate directly violates a rule, such as campaigning before Feb. 17, that candidate can be found in violation. Senators are charged $25 and presidential candidates are charged $100 if found in violation.

Kramer said increased interest in the UISG could be a result of the newly formed Freshman Council, which serves as a freshman governmental organization.

"SEB is really excited about the possibility of contested election seats because that shows there is more interest to get involved in student government, and that's what we've been hoping for all along," Kramer said.

SUBLEASING

Rogers said the crows inhabiting Iowa City are here only for the winter and flee to the countryside in the spring to breed. His students have been conducting a study for the last three years on crow migration.

Each day crows migrate to the country to feed, but always return to Iowa City at night to sleep because of the lack of predators.

"Crows are extremely intelligent. They know how to take advantage of new environments," Rogers said. The popular consensus has been that crows are loud, annoying and create a nuisance, but are not as bad as other feathered citizens.

"They are not as bad as pigeons," Potter said. "Pigeons cause a lot more problems than crows."

CROWS

"As long as you know people and get in good with the landlord of an apartment complex, you're OK," Humphries said. "Word of mouth is much better than advertising in the paper."

Looking for someone to sublet may be easy for students who live on campus, but students who live far from campus may have a more difficult time. Iowa City resident and former UI student Mike Ward has tried advertising in The Daily Iowan and The Iowa City Press-Citizen, but hasn't received many phone calls yet.

"I'm having trouble finding someone to sublet my place because I'm so far from campus," Ward said. "Finding a sublesser would take a big load off my shoulders."

UI junior Jennifer Lein said she is nervous about finding someone to rent her apartment — not just for the summer but also for the fall.

"If I find someone for both I will get my deposit of over $700 back," she said. "I will hold out if someone only wants my place for the summer. But if I wait and don't find anyone for the summer and fall, I might lose out."

said after attending Edley's lecture that opportunity should be available to everyone — even without affirmative-action regulations.

"The issue of affirmative action is about opportunity," Akyea said. "But race tends to be the pawn that people use to choose who gets opportunity, as if it's a privilege."

Second-year UI law student Derek Mays said he thought Edley's lecture was timely, since there is conflict in California over affirmative-action laws.

"I think it's a topic that needs to be discussed right now," Mays said. "Especially in light of recent court cases."

The talk, which was rescheduled from November, was held in the Pappajohn Business Administration Building and was followed by a signing of Edley's book.

Parcells to coach Jets...now

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Parcells will take over as coach of the New York Jets immediately, under a deal brokered Monday by NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue.

New England will get New York's first-round draft pick in 1999, the Jets' second-round pick in 1998 and their third- and fourth-round picks this year. In addition, the Jets will make a $300,000 contribution to the Patriots' charitable foundation.

New England had insisted that the price for Parcells would be the Jets' No. 1 pick this year — the top pick in the NFL draft. New York had the worst record in the NFL last season, going 1-15.

"Ultimately, there were wide differences on how this would have to be resolved," Tagliabue said. "But ultimately, we got it resolved."

Parcells didn't attend the meeting, but TV crews, fans and passersby waited in the lobby in hopes of seeing the coach, who led the Patriots to the Super Bowl this season.

Patriot owner Robert Kraft, Jets owner Jon Hess, Jets president Steve Gutman and lawyers for both sides attended the meeting.

Bowe begins different journey as U.S. Marine

By Pete Iacobelli
 Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — When Riddick Bowe takes the bus to Marine boot camp at Parris Island, South Carolina he'll leave his boxing titles, his $100 million and his celebrity career behind.

"He won't even be allowed to refer to himself as I or me," said Parris Island spokesman Maj. Rick Long. "He has to call himself 'this recruit.'"

Bowe surprised a lot of people on Jan. 30 when he announced that he had joined the Marine Reserves. "It's something I always wanted to do before I got too old," he said.

The former world heavyweight champ was scheduled to report to Parris Island sometime after midnight Monday. But on a 29-year-old multimillionaire used to life's finest things show up with 200 others carrying just the clothes on his back? "I don't think he'll find himself in any position to be a celebrity. He'll just be a Marine," said Maj. Rick Mill at Camp Lejeune, N.C., where Bowe will learn Marine combat skills after three months of basic training at Parris Island.

Bowe's regimen begins the moment he arrives at boot camp, and it will be as jarring as a series of short hard jabs to the ribs. "It's kind of a shock to some," Long said.

As soon as the plane lands, the Marine leaders start yelling, said ex-Marine Allen West, who went through Parris Island boot camp 15 years ago.

"Nothing you do is going to be good enough," he said. "They won't get out of your face for three months."

Recruits will not sleep the first night. They face a moment of truth, Long said, where they are encouraged to reveal addictions or legal run-ins that might affect their service.

Their heads will be shaved. They turn in their civilian clothes. They stand naked waiting for their Marine-issue soap, towels, shaving kits, uniforms, boots and underwear.

West remembers that Marine sergeants lined the recruits under shower nozzles, ordered them to soap their heads, then pulled on a chain cord for a few seconds of water. The suds dribbled down

Sports legends Robinson, Ali honored by presenters and winners alike

By David Bauder
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Comedian Bill Cosby, in his first live television appearance since his son was killed, honored baseball pioneer Jackie Robinson Monday in a serious moment on the usually irreverent ESPY awards show.

President Clinton also saluted Robinson in a taped appearance and boxer Muhammad Ali was honored on the sporting awards program sponsored by cable network ESPN, a show generally filled with jocks struggling to make jokes.

Cosby beckoned the applauding Radio City Music Hall crowd to sit down when he took the stage an hour into the program.

"Hello, friends," he said. Cosby has swiftly moved back to work after the still-unsolved Jan. 16 shooting death of his only son, Ennis, in Los Angeles.

Robinson, he said, "was a sportsman in the truest sense of the word and a role model for millions of Americans." Cosby was warmly hugged by Robinson's widow, Rachel, and thanked for his support of the late baseball star's scholarship fund.

Robinson, a World Series hero with the Brooklyn Dodgers, broke baseball's color line in 1947 and was the first black ballplayer elected to the sport's Hall of Fame.

Another great second baseman, Joe Morgan, recalled walking up to Robinson once when he saw him at a baseball game and saying, "thanks." Robinson greeted him with a smile.

"I'll never forget that smile, and I'll never forget Jackie Robinson," Morgan said.

Former heavyweight champion Ali, slowed by Parkinson's Syndrome, was given the Arthur Ashe Award for Courage. Super Bowl MVP Desmond Howard and Olympic sprinting champion Michael Johnson both saluted Ali when picking up their own awards.

"I love you very much," Howard said. "I love what you've done. I love what you stand for."

The awards show celebrated memorable sports moments of the past year like Dwight Gooden's no-hitter, Ohio State's last-minute Rose Bowl victory and Kerri Strug's Olympic vault into history.

It also ran tape of some lowlights, like Dennis Rodman kicking a photographer in the groin and a golfer vomiting on the course.

About three dozen ESPY trophies were handed out.

Field of 64 unrealistic for Iowa women

To those of you expecting to see the Iowa women's basketball team in the NCAA Tournament, I have two words of advice: Wake up.

With an 11-10 record, they must win the Big Ten Tournament to get in the Big Dance.

The people still counting on an NCAA berth need to realize this is a team that has not won back-to-back games this calendar year. There has been talk all season long not to count this team out and you still can't, but you can't count on them either.

I could give you several reasons why the Hawkeyes will win the Big Ten Tournament: Because they have more talent than any other team in the field, they have more athletic ability than any other team in the league and their defense is as good as any team they will face.

But I only have to give you one reason why they won't: Inconsistency.

To win the Big Ten Tournament, Iowa will have to win at least three and possibly four consecutive games. The Hawkeyes need to finish in the top five in the conference to get a first-round bye. With Iowa tied for fifth place at 6-6 and having to travel to Wisconsin and Penn State this weekend, that kind of finish will be tough.

Four teams have six conference wins and Wisconsin has seven, so if the Hawkeyes slip up in the last two

Williams finds way to win against Illini's Benion

By James Kramer
 The Daily Iowan

No matter how close Illinois' Ernest Benion has come to defeating Iowa wrestler Joe Williams, the Hawkeye's 158-pounder has always found a way to win.

Williams, the 1996 NCAA champion, beat Benion again Saturday as the Hawkeyes downed Illinois, 25-10. The victory gave Williams a 4-0 record against Benion, the 1995 NCAA champion. Their last three matches have been decided by a total of five points.

Things did not look good for Williams (20-0) midway through the third period. Trailing by a point, Benion took him down for a 3-2 lead. With about a minute left in the match, Williams got an escape to tie the score.

Williams scored a dramatic takedown with eight seconds remaining for the victory. Benion then escaped Williams' grasp, but it was too late as Williams held on for the 5-4 win.

As frustrating as the losses have been for Benion, the Illinois wrestler has kept a level head.

Wrestling Notes

"There's always a competitor who's better than you," said Benion, who fell to 20-2. "And that's fine, I can accept that. If I finish my career and have never beaten Joe Williams, I'm not going to be upset about that. If I don't ever get him, I don't ever get him."

In last season's 158-pound championship match, Williams defeated his Illini opponent, 9-8. At the Midlands Championships in December, he again beat Benion, 7-4.

Neither wrestler scored during the first period Saturday, and at the end of the second the score was 1-1. Williams said the slow start was entirely different from what he had planned.

"In the first period, I went out and was real aggressive," Williams said. "I was trying my moves, but I didn't really go through them all the way."

Williams, a junior, has won his last 49 matches and owns a career record of 86-8 while at Iowa.

McIlravy to stay on sidelines — Lincoln McIlravy, Iowa's two-time NCAA champion, is not likely to wrestle until the Big Ten Championships, March 8-9 in Minneapolis.

McIlravy returned to full-contact wrestling last Wednesday, and he said practice has been going well. He also said the headaches that plagued him due to concussion symptoms have

Jordan, Pippen skeptical about 'new' Rodman

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen no longer respect Dennis Rodman, whose most recent suspension showed the Chicago Bulls' stars that the "Worm" cares only about himself. Rodman returns Tuesday night after sitting out 11 games for kicking a cameraman — his third suspension in 1 1/2 seasons with the Bulls — and Pippen isn't sure Rodman is willing or able to avoid future trouble.

"All I know is that Dennis doesn't give a damn about most things," Pippen said. "I'm not sure he's capable of learning any lessons from his suspensions. I don't expect him ever to change because if he did, he wouldn't be the Worm, the personality he has invented for himself."

As for Rodman's relationship with Jordan, "We have no relationship," Jordan said.

When Rodman takes the court Tuesday against the Charlotte Hornets, he undoubtedly will be cheered by the sellout crowd at the United Center.

After all, the cross-dressing, hair-dyeing, referee-baiting forward helped the Bulls win the NBA title last season. And Rodman, the league's rebounding leader, has promised to demonstrate his love for Chicago fans by donating his salary from the next 11 games to charity.

But Jordan and Pippen are wary.

What will the Worm do next? Will it be bad enough for NBA commissioner David Stern to banish Rodman from the league forever?

Jordan is prepared for the worst. While leading the Bulls to a 9-2 record during Rodman's latest suspension, Jordan repeatedly said the Bulls can repeat as champions without the tattooed one. They went 72-10 last season even though Rodman missed 18 games and are a league-best 42-6 this season.

"We can be better with Dennis, we know that. But we can survive without Dennis, we know that, too," Jordan said after Sunday's All-Star game. "Our will to win is just as great without Dennis."

Asked what advice he'd give Rodman before Tuesday's game, Jordan said: "I'd tell him to wear pants all the time."

It was the first time Jordan took a public shot at Rodman's assortment of evening gowns, feathered boas and lingerie.

Pippen, meanwhile, is disappointed that Rodman "knocks the game so much."

"Someday, maybe, he'll realize that he wouldn't have all the movies and books and fans if he didn't have basketball," Pippen said Sunday. "He says he doesn't need the game, but it's the game that's made him who he is."

Neither Rodman, Jordan nor Pippen talked to the media after Monday's practice.

Another teammate, Steve Kerr, said Rodman didn't apologize.

"We don't expect an apology, at least a verbal one. His apology comes on the floor when he goes out and plays hard and gets 20 boards," Kerr said. "He knows that if he screws up again he could be in serious trouble. The team definitely has to keep an eye on him and try to keep him out of trouble."

Coach Phil Jackson said Rodman looked good in practice but might not start Tuesday. After serving a six-game suspension for head-butting a referee last March, Rodman came off the bench for five games.

Jackson said Rodman "is a very easy person to have on the team."

"That's the thing that people don't understand," Jackson said. "He does his job, comes to practice and keeps his mouth shut. He works hard. He is never delinquent. The fact that he's not there for every game is the only thing that's a problem for us. When you get to rely on a person as dominant as he is and he's not available, then it is a problem."

"A lot of people don't like his disruptive tactics. They don't like what they consider non-sportsmanship. That's another issue entirely. That has nothing to do with us."

Rodman appeared Thursday on the "Tonight Show" and told host Jay Leno that he was treated unjustly by Stern.

"It wasn't fair to me," Rodman said. "I haven't raped anybody. I haven't been thrown in jail. I haven't done this, I haven't done that. Tell me something I've done that's been harmful."

But Jackson said Rodman understood the message Stern delivered with the suspension.

"This morning, we had a brief chat, Dennis and I, just to reiterate that there have to be some stipulations about his behavior," Jackson said. "We just can't chance or risk the possibility that he's not going to be here for the playoffs."

Bernie Bickerstaff takes over as coach of the Washington Bullets Monday rejoining the team with which he was once an assistant coach.

Bickerstaff takes over reigns in Washington

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

BOWIE, Md. — The Washington Bullets addressed the future by dipping into their past Monday, hiring former assistant Bernie Bickerstaff as their new head coach.

Bickerstaff, who turns 53 Tuesday, signed a four-year contract with the team that gave him his start in the NBA.

"I feel lucky to be able to come back into a situation where I'm familiar with the community, the organization and the owner," Bickerstaff said at a new conference at the team's practice facility.

"I'm very fortunate to be back with the organization that gave me my start, and I'm excited about the prospect of getting things done here."

Bickerstaff stepped down as general manager of the Denver Nuggets to return to Washington, where he served as an assistant coach from 1973-1985. He was on the sidelines with head coach Dick Motta in 1978 when center Wes Unsel and the Bullets won their only NBA championship.

Unsel, now the Bullets' general manager, was the man in charge of bringing Bickerstaff back to Washington. Bickerstaff replaces Jim Lynam, who was fired Wednesday after the Bullets staggered to a 22-24 start that hardly matched lofty preseason expectations.

"This is not a buddy-hire," Unsel said. "I was looking for someone with the ability to handle talented players and get them to perform. I had the opportunity to get what I think is a pretty doggone good coach, and I took it."

Bickerstaff figured in the 1980s that he would eventually land the Bullets' top job. He finally grew tired of waiting and went to Seattle, where he led the SuperSonics to the Western Conference finals during the second of his five years with the club.

He joined the Nuggets in 1990 as president of basketball operations and general manager, but took over as Denver's head coach near the end of the 1994-95 season.

Test proves McCall was drug-free in fight

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Oliver McCall was drug-free when he stopped fighting and started crying during his WBC heavyweight title fight with Lennox Lewis.

Nevada boxing regulators said Monday that a urine sample taken from McCall after he lost in the fifth round Friday night came back negative when tested for drugs.

"He gave us a urine test with no complaints right after the fight despite his agitated state," Nevada Athletic Commission director Marc Ratner said. "It's important to know it was negative."

McCall's $3,075,500 purse from the fight continues to be held in escrow in a New Jersey bank pending Nevada's investigation into why he stopped both throwing punches and defending himself in the fourth round of the scheduled 12-round fight for the vacant WBC heavyweight title.

After the fourth round, McCall stood and cried in his corner, and referee Mills Lane finally stopped the fight at 55 seconds of the fifth round.

Lawyers for the athletic commission were putting the final touches Monday on a complaint to send to McCall, who will have 30 days to respond before a hearing is set before the commission.

By statute, the most the commission can fine McCall is $250,000, although the largest fine it has ever imposed has been $35,000. That fine was against Riddick Bowe's manager, Rock Newman, for an attack on a ringside photographer following the first Bowe-Evander Holyfield fight.

Ratner said the commission has little other authority than to fine McCall or suspend his boxing license. But he predicted others could go to court to settle grievances over the bout.

"This will not just go away," Ratner said. "It will likely end up in some civil court."

McCall stormed out of the ring after the fight without answering questions, but said at a press conference on Saturday that his actions were part of plan to tire Lewis out and win the fight in the late rounds.

Even McCall's own trainer, though, said there was no such plan and called the boxer "a lunatic."

Ratner, meanwhile, said he will seek a new regulation that gives the commission guidelines in determining whether to license a fighter who has been involved in drugs or is in drug rehabilitation.

McCall entered outpatient drug rehabilitation after being arrested for throwing a Christmas tree during a drunken rampage in a Nashville hotel in mid-December.

"We did test him, not psychologically, but for drugs and HIV, and everything was fine," Ratner said. "I think maybe if a guy is in some sort of rehabilitation situation we need to have a longer separation period before he fights."

Northwestern basketball coach Ricky Byrdson watches his players practice before Northwestern's game against Ohio State on Jan. 25. Byrdson will be relieved of his duties as coach after this season, the school announced Monday.

Struggling Wildcats dump Byrdson

By Mario Fox
Associated Press

EVANSTON, Ill. — Ricky Byrdson was fired Monday as basketball coach of struggling Northwestern but will remain on the job through the end of the season — unless his players want him to leave sooner.

"We are concerned with the lack of progress the men's basketball team has made during the past three years," athletic director Rick Taylor said. "The university believes the program needs to be headed in a different direction and that it is appropriate to make a change at this juncture."

Byrdson, 40, did not attend the news conference but released a statement that he would let his players decide whether he coaches the Wildcats' final seven games of the season. They next play Thursday at Ohio State.

"Consider it all joy, my brethren, when you encounter various trials knowing that the testing of your faith produces endurance," Byrdson said in the statement, quoting the Bible.

While Northwestern's football program has been one of the great success stories, the basketball squad has gone from bad to worse.

Saturday's 56-44 loss to Wisconsin dropped the Wildcats to 6-16, including to 1-10 in the Big Ten, a record shared with Penn State.

Now in his fourth season at Northwestern, the easygoing Byrdson has a 33-72 record. His teams at Northwestern have been hard hit by transfers and injuries.

Taylor said he would begin looking for a replacement.

"We will do a very diligent search and come up with a very good basketball coach," he said.

In February 1994, Byrdson took his infamous stroll, leaving the Northwestern team's bench during a game at Minnesota, wandering into the stands and slapping hands with Gopher fans and their mascot. After a leave of absence, Byrdson returned as Northwestern's coach.

Iowa golfers struggle against top competition

By Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team started the season off on a rough note Monday in the first round of the 18-team SMU/OSU Regional Challenge in Palos Verdes, Calif.

After 18 holes, the Hawkeyes are tied for 16th with cross-state rival Iowa State at a 56-over-par score of 340.

San Jose State leads the tournament with a first round score of 301. Defending NCAA Champion Arizona is in second place two strokes back.

Freshman Kelli Carney leads the Hawkeyes individually. The Centerville, Iowa, native is in a six-way tie for 38th place after firing consecutive rounds of 40. Carney trails the individual leader, Stanford's Mhairi McKay, by seven strokes.

With the exception of Carney, the Hawkeyes had their problems on the back nine. Freshman M.C. Mullen shot a 41 on the front, but struggled to a 47 on the back and is in a tie for 76th place.

Freshman Stacey Bergman and senior Karen Schroeder are in a five-way tie for 68th place after firing scores of 42 on the front and 44 on the back.

Defending NCAA individual champion Marisa Baena, from Arizona, is in 13th place, three strokes behind McKay.

The second round of the 54-hole tournament continues today.

Local music stores find success with early reservation system

By Melanie Mesaros
The Daily Iowan

Reserving a copy of Disney's newest animated video or a Hollywood summer blockbuster may be common, but now music enthusiasts are getting caught up in pre-sale mania.

In anticipation of a large batch of noteworthy albums this spring — including U2's latest, Pop, and a double-disc from the Wu-Tang Clan — local music stores are accepting reservations for albums weeks away from their release. The early sign-up process already is gaining momentum, said Rebecca Hansen, store manager of Musicland, Old Capital Mall.

"If you reserve a copy, you get a coupon for another CD in the store and a special reservation price," Hansen said. "They (Musicland) are going to try this more and more because it is a better deal."

Musicland is offering the reservation deal for the March releases of Aerosmith, Warren G and Nate Dogg, in addition to the U2 album, Hansen said.

Scott Parrett, manager of Vibes Music, 119 E. Washington St., said early CD reservations are used only for big-name artists.

"The last couple albums we did reserves for were Pearl Jam and Tupac," Parrett said. "It was really successful. The reason we haven't done it lately is because nothing has been big enough."

The new-release reservations usually begin two weeks before the set release date, and Vibes hasn't started reserving copies for U2 yet, Parrett said.

"We usually try to make people put down $5 for us so they are guaranteed a copy," Parrett said. "If we reserve copies of a CD, they often will add a special bonus to it like a special-edition poster."

Despite local stores' presale efforts, Sal Leanhart, owner of BJ's Compact Discs, 6 1/2 E. Dubuque St., said he doesn't offer CD reserving as a regular feature.

"It is not a policy of ours, but we will do it," he said. "We have never run out of a CD. What happens is you will have a list of 10 people and only two will pick the CD up."

The intense media hype over new releases is part of the reason why people may feel the need to reserve, Leanhart said.

"The trend will be towards people wanting to prepay," he said. "I do see it going in that direction, but I am going to resist. I wish everybody would just calm down. After this release (Pop), there are going to be 10 or 12 more U2s before you die."

Leanhart said he can't understand why people reserve a copy of a CD before they hear it.

Publicity photo

The anticipation for big-name music releases — including U2's latest, Pop, due in stores on March 4 — has prompted fans to reserve copies of the albums weeks in advance.

"I would hope that people would want to hear a few songs off the disk before they run out and buy it," Leanhart said.

Despite the initial popularity of early sign-up, Hansen said she is skeptical about the reservation trend.

"Very rarely is a CD a sell-out on the first day it is released," she said. "It is really more worthwhile for movies. We're not going to know how this is going over until 1997 is over."

13 Florida authors collaborate in 'Naked'

By Patrick Keller
The Daily Iowan

Any novel with a main character named "Booger" can't be all that bad, especially when that character is an affectionate manatee that has the bad luck of uncovering a few severed heads.

The adventures of Booger and those who get caught up in the mystery of the aforementioned severed heads is chronicled in "Naked Came the Manatee," a serially constructed novel with 13 different authors, each one writing a chapter before handing the work (not to mention whatever problems they might have dropped on Booger and his friends) into the lap of the next guy (or gal, as the case may be). Tom Shroder, an editor for the Miami Herald's Tropic magazine, brought together some of the best writers in Florida, including Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist Dave Barry, "Strip Tease" author Carl Hiaasen and "Get Shorty" author Elmore Leonard.

"Naked" is a playground for the authors, a place where their own characters can intermingle in a common world. Unfortunately, for those of us unfamiliar with the authors' work or their particular characters, the sheer number of characters can be confusing and trying at times. There are at least eight main characters in the novel, and a number of peripheral ones, including a detective, a Pulitzer-hungry reporter, a detective, a former NFL linebacker-turned-second-rate lawyer and a 102-year-old woman with a penchant for skinny dipping with sea mammals. Fortunately, the characters have been pared down to a handful and each one is easily recognizable by midway through.

The sheer number of characters and personalities with which to deal is greatly eased by the book's break-neck pacing. The average chapter is about a dozen pages long, and the serial structure keeps the reader hanging on for the resolution of each chapter's cliffhanger. The greater mystery of why there are so many severed heads of a certain Cuban dictator floating around hangs over every chapter, creating a mood of anticipation while not distracting from the action.

Of course, with this many authors, the stylistic differences can be jarring to the reader. Barry, surprisingly, supplies one of the most memorable chapters, with his quick wit lending humor to his excellent eye for description. Other standouts include Leonard, whose dialogue shows his mastery of simultaneous character development and plot revelation, and Tananarive Due, one of Barry's fellow columnists, whose poetic descriptions tell the reader volumes about the characters.

The book is a delightful, light read with plenty of humor. And it doesn't hurt that the action takes place mainly on sunny Florida beaches, making "Naked Came the Manatee" perfect for Iowa winter reading.

It's a girl for Melissa Etheridge and partner Julie Cypher

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's a girl for singer Melissa Etheridge and her partner, Julie Cypher.

Bailey Jean Cypher, weighing 8 pounds, 10 ounces, was born to Cypher early Monday, Etheridge spokesperson Gayle Fine said.

Etheridge, the Grammy-winning singer of "Come to My Window," and Cypher, the former wife of "La Bamba" star Lou Diamond Phillips, disclosed last year that Cypher was carrying their child. The method of fertilization and the identity of the sperm donor weren't disclosed.

Fine said only that the birth took place in the Los Angeles area.
