By Brendan Brown The Daily Iowan

The UI may be getting along in years, but those who have planned its birthday celebration say it will have no trouble tonight summoning up the breath to blow out all 150 candles on the cake.

UI President Mary Sue Coleman will be joined by Gov. Terry Branstad, former Gov. Robert Ray and scores of legislators, local residents and UI community members at the Old Capitol to commemorate

Communication with the UI student population and promoting UI Student Government were among the top issues discussed by the candidates for UISG president and vice president Monday night. With more than 30 students in attendance, presidential candidate Chad Doellinger and vice presidential candidate Michael Crayne also debated with presidential candi-

DI: Why is professor contact time such a big deal at the UI?

Coleman: There is always a lot of interest from outside the university because (the public) doesn't realize all of the ways professors and students interact. Sometimes people think about contact hours like in a high school, and one of our jobs as a university is to explain that while time in the classroom is important, there are many other things that happen that are equally important. For instance, the time that professors have to spend preparing lecture and reading the materials for the classroom. We want to have everybody understand what's going on, and at the same time provide the best undergraduate education

DI: Are you saying that Rep. Chuck Larson's report may have been misleading?

Coleman: I think it's just a little slice of the big picture. I've likened it to saying that it's sort of like looking at the time a legisla-

Shaw art to be displayed at futon store

Almost six months after the shooting death of Iowa City artist Eric Shaw, two UI juniors will take over his futon business and strive to make their grand opening a tribute to Shaw and his artwork.

The Krauses said Eric Shaw's memory is still alive.

Morning-after pill OK'd by FDA for use in U.S.

By Lauran Neergaard Associated Press

WASHINGTON - American women who are raped, whose birth control fails or who just forget in the heat of the moment can use high doses of ordinary birth-control pills to prevent pregnancy, the government said Monday.

The Food and Drug Administration said six brands of birth control are safe and effective "morningafter pills," the first federal acknowledgement of the emergency contraception European women have been prescribed for years.

"The best-kept contraceptive secret is no longer a secret," FDA Commissioner David Kessler said. "Women should have the information that this regimen is available."

The decision opens the door for companies to specially package birth-control pills for women to have on hand in case of an emergency, just as the pills are routinely

Contraceptive manufacturers so far have refused to sell what the government terms emergency contraception here, citing litigation and political fears.

So while it is legal for doctors to prescribe emergency birth control and the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology in December endorsed it - few physicians know the proper doses and few women even know to seek it.

The FDA's decision could change that. One small company, New Jersey-based Gynetics, is developing a specially packaged version of birth control it hopes to sell for emergency use next year.

And the FDA's instructions were purposefully detailed enough to tell family-planning clinics and private doctors the right dose to hand to women today.

"This should be in everyone's medicine cabinet," said Janet Benshoof of the Center for Reproductive Law and Policy.

Milos Forman censors own posters to end controversy

PARIS (AP) — Director Milos Forman is taking down French posters for his film, "The People vs. Larry Flynt," which were too revealing for some French Catholics.

Ga. rescue: 17 minutes of terror

By Chelsea Carter Associated Press

TIFTON, Ga. - Four-year-old Ryan Eschleman was trapped in Grandma's car as it filled with the brackish, frigid water of the pond. On the other side of the rear window, a man pounded against the glass, desperately trying to break it.
Other would-be rescuers were in trouble nearby. A woman was floating, face down. Under the water, a man was unconscious, unseen, and a valiant police officer struggled beneath the surface.

Ryan's knuckles were white as he clutched the headrest of the back seat. The water was almost up to his neck.

Real-life trauma

When accidents happen on television, they often happen in slow motion - orchestrated, like a ballet.

But when accidents happen in real life, the world is helter-skelter. The most crucial minutes of Ryan Eschleman's young life were like that. There were 17 of them in all, and they were filled with chaos.

In those few minutes, six men and a woman put aside thoughts of their own safety to try to save a 4- 'Unlock the door!' year-old boy. You could call them heroes, but heroism was not their intention; sometimes in life, valor comes uninvited.

It was 11:28 a.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 11 - a cool 40 degrees and sunny in this south Georgia town of about 16,000 residents

Ryan's grandmother, Peggy Cardona, was running late for work as a hair stylist at the Total Image: Take 2 salon. She had two minutes to spare. She eased her light blue 1990 Nissan Stanza into the employee parking area behind Tifton Mall.

The parking spot was on the border of a well-manicured, grassy 40foot incline that ended at the edge of a pond - a catch basin for rainwater, 150 yards long and as wide as a football field.

shift was broken, so if she put it in park, it was impossible to change gears. She was used to leaving the car in neutral and setting the emergency brake. This time, she forgot.

Cardona reached to open the back door for Ryan when the car lurched forward and started to roll. It picked up speed as it moved down the slope. It slid effortlessly, almost gracefully, into the pond.
"Nana! Nana! Nana!" Ryan

screamed. He craned his neck for a glimpse of Grandma. She was gone.

They both heard the cry: "Help! Help! My car's in the water and my grandson's in there!"

Pham, an immigrant from Vietnam, speaks little English. But terrified screams cross language barriers. He and Batten ran outside, where they met Pham's 28-year-old sister, Charlene, who was arriving for work. The three ran to the water and

Help is on the way

Dick McClung, 32, a supervisor at Belk's department store, heard a commotion. He followed the cries and ran to the water.

His heart was pounding. There was a woman in a white shirt holding a hammer. No one knew where she came from. She was just there. She raised it as if to throw it toward the car.

"Don't! Don't throw it! You! Bring The Nissan's automatic gear me the hammer!" Fountain screamed at McClung, who had already shed his sports coat.

He dived in. The cold was paralyzing. "Oh, Jesus. I'm not going to make it," he thought, halfway to the car. "Come on! Come on!" Fountain

By now, the car was tipped nose first in the water, only the rear window and trunk visible. The water had reached Ryan's chest and was steadily rising

Precious time

When the glass shattered, water poured into the car. Fountain and McClung - the Winn-Dixie clerk and the department store supervisor - pulled Ryan out. He clambered onto Fountain's back.

Fountain took three deep breaths and started to dog-paddle. McClung swam alongside. They were not two feet from the car when it sank. "Man, you gotta take him. I can't

Recovery

Paramedics pumped Daniel Tucker's chest for more than a minute before he spat up water and took a breath. He does not remember anything after wading into the water. He spent six days in the hospital with pneumonia. Charlene Pham came to in the post and changed clothes. Batten went home, his hair uncut.

"Nana! Nana!" Ryan screamed, wrestling free of the paramedics. He ran to his grandmother, arms outstretched, tears streaming down. 'My coloring book!'

The water had claimed only the book and the car.

Two days later, most of Ryan's rescuers came together again, this time for a picture. As Ryan clowned around with the hammer, they shook hands, laughed, retold their stories, and wondered at how hero-He saw Fountain smash the ism can visit average lives.

"I think the shortage in parking is really just a false perception. I realize that people want to park right downtown, but if I can't find a place I just park in the lot across from City Hall. It's only a half a block away ... no further than if I was going to a big mall, and park my car and walk."

UI President Mary Sue Coleman, on Iowa City's parking problems, during a DI interview

Keeping the honor in death

hen I was 10, my father received the call we all dread. His mother was diagnosed with eight inoperable brain tumors. At first I didn't understand the hopeless expression on my father's face. He stared at the telephone receiver where his sister's sobs still could be heard, hung up the phone and said, "She doesn't have long."

My sister and I were stunned. Radiation could shrink the tumors and make them operable. What about chemotherapy? What about hope?

A month passed. Grandma started wearing a pink turban to cover her bald head. Her skin was yellow, her eyes gray. This woman who had once torn a denim jacket in half with her bare hands could barely lift herself from bed. This woman who had taught four children not to fear the dark could no longer sleep without a night-light. "Don't turn out the lights," she would say. "What if I never wake up?"

She screamed in her sleep about blackbirds and darkness. If we shut the windows, she screamed that her soul was trapped.

Three weeks later and she could no longer speak, only gurgle saliva at the back of her throat. Her last days were spent gagging on spit between "throat cleanings," when a nurse relieved her by vacuuming saliva out of her mouth with a dental instrument.

No life support. Plugging her into the wall like a lamp could only serve the interests of her grieving family. Holding on to her dying body was an illusion. It was the headstrong, red-haired country woman we all missed. She was absent from this room

Looking back, I wonder about her decision to reject life support. She struggled longer than expected, even without it. Had she been conscious, she would have thrown us out of the room when the nurse "cleaned" her throat. I wonder if she would have chosen to die a month earlier, given the option.

There is no way to be certain. She was unpredictably proud. Euthanasia might have been her savior from degrading bedthroat vacuums and ightmares. Or he might have seen it as a

Karrie Higgins

Would it have been fair for me to stop her? Would I have been "playing God" to preach the spiritual value of losing bowel control and gagging on her own saliva? Accepting the imminence of death, making amends with lost friends, writing a will and coming to terms with your past also are spiritual rites of passage. They bind the past with the future and ensure a legacy on one's own terms. Death need not be a passage based on druginduced sleep and hallucinations. It need not be based on suffering.

While it is true that much suffering could be relieved through educating doctors more thoroughly about pain management, it is also true that much suffering is the result of science's refusal to accept human mortality. In his book "How We Die," Dr. Sherwin Nuland says, "In the anticipation that the great majority of people die peacefully, treatment decisions are sometimes made near the end of life that propel a dying person ... into a series of worsening miseries from which there is no extrication - surgery of questionable benefit and high complication rate, chemotherapy with severe side effects and prolonged periods of intensive care beyond the point of futility."

This is not to say my grandmother, or anyone, should not "rage against the dying of the light," but rather that the rage at some point should become acceptance. My grandmother accepted her unfair fate and chose to die without the last-ditch effort of life

Perhaps she would have chosen euthanasia. I cannot say. What I can say is she saw little difference between choosing to die and refusing life support. "I'm choosing to die like a human being," she said.

I remember the final day. Her "death rattle" was the only noise in the room, the smell of decay too strong to ignore. One of her sons arrived late. When he finally came, her children joined hands in a circle around the bed. My mother whispered to my sister and I that we should leave. I resented being denied these final moments, but something private was happening here. Between a dying mother and her children. Like my grandmother's decision to die, this moment demanded no intrusions.

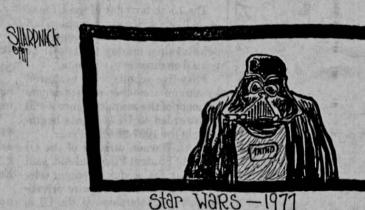

She died within a few minutes of her son's arrival. "It's over," my father said when he called with the news. Indeed, it finally was.

The students of the Sept. 29 movement have earned the respect and support of several Iowa State faculty and staff members. They deserve every ounce of it. Throughout their movement, they have remained dignified and respectful after having been clearly disrespected. They haven't started any riots or attempted to blow up or demarcate Catt Hall in any way. The Sept. 29 movement members have instead started an ongoing letter-writing campaign to the administration, held rallies and solicited the support of other schools. They have become very organized and unified.

It takes courage to stand up against those in power. No Sept. 29 movement would even exist if students had chosen to remain silent about their views and feelings. Their decision conflicts with They are to be commended for their spirit of determination and dedica-

We should be proud of the opportunities granted to us through the moral guidance of UI alumni. Our heritage is rich, like Floyd of Rosedale. Although the trophy is now used to signify an athletic rivalry with Minnesota, the concept of playing for the pig dates back to 1935 to pacify riots at Iowa Stadium, now Kinnick Stadium.

Iowa's first black all-American football player, Ozzie Simmons, was severely beaten during a game by members of the Minnesota football squad the previous year. Vowing revenge, UI students decided to take rocks and bottles to next year's game. That is, until a proposal by Minnesota governor Floyd Olson to bet an Iowa hog against a Minnesota hog was set to cool tempers. The ploy worked, but the mere threat of Hawkeyes taking care of their own was enough to prompt a response from Minnesota's highest-ranking official.

To this day, Simmons, a native Texan who now lives in Chicago, says during a time of severe racial conflict, Iowa City was a social anomaly.

The UI's commitment to the liberal arts has sprung many key firsts around the nation, such as the United States' first college-level Department of

Jan. 18, 1896 is a date I believe few in college athletics have taken the time or received the opportunity to recognize. When the NCAA men's basketball tournament commences March 13, take in "March Madness" while remembering the name Henry Kallenberg.

Kallenberg, a coach at Iowa, was friends with James Naismith, the father of basketball. Applying the rules developed by Naismith, Kallenberg and his Iowa team lost to Chicago, 13-12, in the firstever five-on-five intercollegiate basketball game.

While today's UI is a trailblazer for women's sports, it took until 1973 to establish the Department of Women's Athletics. Director Christine Grant's first office was a box in Halsey Hall, between the Union and Calvin Hall. Some highlights of the department's first 24 years are Nan Doak's 1985 triumph in the 10,000 meters at the NCAA outdoor track and field championships; 1986, when the field hockey team (along with wrestling, the UI's most dominant sport), won the national championship; and Feb. 3, 1985, when 22,157 filled Carver-Hawkeye Arena to the point of illegality to watch the Hawkeyes crush Ohio State, 81-41.

t's funny to look at topics that we perceive as real problems, especially considering the past. Students in the 1930s worried about the Great Depression. World War II drew the most concern during the 1940s. In the 1950s, it was a battle with communism. The 1960s and early '70s were consumed by Vietnam. And behind all of these years, there was character.

When I see what students before us fought for and against, today's debate over whether or not 4.8 contact hours by liberal arts professors is really enough seems pretty trivial.

Being a Hawkeye and an alumni of the University of Iowa is a truly amazing experience. It gets in your blood and infects your soul on the same as true love and deep laughter. With upkeep, the UI will continue to flourish, faculty will persist in their transfer of education and students will forever fight for their beliefs.

We are truly in an amazing place, blessed with infinite opportunities. Never forget the wars fought by 150 years worth of alumni.

Of higher importance, never forget we have the chance to do the same.

Ending no-fault won't solve problems ivorce isn't easy. Not for anyone. Not the husband, not the wife and definitely not the children. Long after the divorce papers have been signed and sealed, many families still struggle with the emotional and financial effects of separation.

So why would Gov. Terry Branstad want to make it even tougher?

Branstad is seeking to "modify" no-fault divorce. He would like to end no-fault divorce for couples with children: Divorce would be granted only if there was evidence of abuse, adultery or desertion.

Our society has changed since Ronald Reagan, then-governor of California, signed the first no-fault legislation back in 1969. When nofault became law in Iowa in 1971, it eliminated the requirement of specific grounds for divorce. It also eliminated fighting and fingerpointing in court and eased the financial burden of divorce.

We can't turn the clock back to 1971, nor should we. Iowa has changed too much. But that doesn't mean Iowa legislators should ignore the problems divorce has created - especially with children.

But getting rid of no-fault divorce won't solve those problems. In the next couple of months, Branstad will be appointing people to a new bipartisan Marriage and Divorce Reform Task Force. Hopefully, instead of getting bogged down under the rhetoric of family values, the task force will make recommendations that value the family instead.

You can't legislate love, but you can legislate things like maternity eave, tax relief for people raising children or co-parenting classes for divorcing couples. Legislators should encourage an environment that will help children, regardless of whether their parents are divorced or not.

It's true that divorce has negative consequences on children, but so does staying in an intact but unhealthy family. Many divorce researchers say the negative effects on children of divorce often were due to conditions that preceded the

Even in a society like ours, where 40 percent of first marriages end in divorce, it is still possible to value the family. While many children may not be raised in two-parent households anymore, children of divorce can still be raised in a two-parent structure. Following Johnson County's lead on this idea, Iowa passed a law in July requiring divorcing parents to attend a course called "Children in the Middle." The course teaches divorcing couples ways to co-parent. Evidence has shown a parent who is more involved in a child's life is more likely to pay child support than an excluded parent who is perceived as the bad, non-custodial parent.

Children need the emotional and financial resources of both parents, and our divorce laws do need to change. But instead of scrapping the positive aspects of no-fault, Iowa should let it evolve into something better with programs like "Children in the Middle

Kids are a part of the family, but not the whole. If the parents' relationship is unhappy and dysfunctional, that too has a negative consequence on the child. Families should be able to decide for themselves whether staying together or separating is the best answer. For many, the answer is divorce.

A recent DI editorial about the University Libraries ("Enter the library - if you dare," Feb. 13) included misleading statements about size and collections of the University Libraries that should be clarified.

It is important to note that the University of Iowa library system includes not only the Main Library (holding over 1 million volumes in the humanities and social sciences), but also 11 departmental libraries located throughout the campus. With over 3.7 million volumes and 25,000 journals, the University Libraries is the 27th largest research library in North America. We add about 90,000 each year to the collections, spending about $5.6 million annually.

Though not the largest library in the Big Ten, we are close in collection size to Northwestern University, for example, and larger than Purdue and Michigan State University.

In addition to collecting print materials, University Libraries provides access to hundreds of databases and information in electronic format. OASIS provides a convenient gateway, from workstations located in libraries and through dial-up access from home, office or residence hall, to much of the Libraries' collections as well as to important periodical indexes and other university library catalogs.

Only selected materials acquired prior to 1980 are listed in the card catalog located on the first floor in the Main Library. And, we are currently seeking grant funding to convert all of these records to OASIS.

Clearly the challenge for library users is to critically, effectively and quickly locate information and research materials needed for a particular course or research project. We hope library users will seek assistance rather than become frustrated or make assumptions about what is available on a particular subject by walking around the building. Help is available via the telephone, electronic mail and in person at all of the 12 University Libraries

We hope students and faculty will make full use of the valuable human resources found at the University Libraries as well as the books, journals and electronic information. We look forward to your questions and sugges-

Library criticism is just whining

To the Editor:

What's the deal with all the whining going on over there? Are your Sunday night meetings brainstorming sessions for what irritates you all around campus? Isn't there any news happening? Since David Schwartz took over as editor, the rest of us have been continually bombarded by complaints about faculty classroom hours, add/drop slips, rhetoric classes and instructors, the "paltry" offerings at the library (twice!), etc. ad nauseam. Is The Daily lowan becoming a forum for undergraduate petty grievances? I thought that's what student government was

for. (Is there a career move in Schwartz's future?)

It's one thing for freshman editorial writer Mark Lyons, to spout off about the library — his misplaced zeal can be chalked up to his youth, inexperience and the joie de vivre he hopes to find in journalism. He probably hasn't had a class yet that's challenged him to find more credible sources than Sports Illustrated. Maybe next year. Maybe not. We understand that it depends on just how much Mr. Lyons wants to

It's quite another when more seasoned reporters at the DI take up space other papers use for news. That the couches on the third floor are not 1990s overstuffed is obvious; the library is not the White House, to be redecorated every four years so as to impress the dignitaries and visitors. So what if there are wires hanging out and stains on the carpet? If we were this picky about every public campus space, we could spend millions of dollars in tuition money paying for it are you suggesting we double our tuition? It seems to me reporter Kevin Doyle is too much like Mark Lyons he hasn't got much of an idea of the larger picture.

The UI libraries have an astounding collection of resources, and ways to obtain what they don't have, and they have a knowledgeable, helpful and patient staff who are always looking out for students' needs.

If you at the DI are so interested in informing and empowering your undergraduate readers, try telling them about Special Collections or the Iowa Women's Archives or the great collection they have of black spirituals over at the Music Library. If all you want to do is piss and moan about places or goings on around campus without really knowing the whole scoop, then form your own political party. You can call yourselves the Know Nothings.

Try bringing us the news — it's what you are supposed to be learning over there - instead of boring us with your boogiemen.

UI libraries editorial poorly researched

To the Editor:

We are graduate instructors in one of the units of the UI responsible for the education of first-year students in writing and research. We were quite troubled to see that The Daily Iowan printed a narrowly focused, poorly researched and insulting description of the Main Library at the University of

Our primary concern is Mark Lyons' failure to recognize the structure of the library. It is quite apparent that his journey through the library never took him beyond the first and second floors. The description of "islands of books surrounded by tables and chairs' ("Enter the library - if you dare," Feb. 13) sounds suspiciously like the Reference Room on the first floor, and bears little resemblance to the fourth and fifth floors, where millions of volumes

Additionally, Lyons' description of the periodicals ignores the holdings maintained in the newspaper library, in government documents and in special collections. All of these sections of the library offer students a wide variety of important and useful resources for doing college-level research, well beyond the range of the simple magazine search that Lyons found difficult to perform.

Interestingly, had Lyons consulted the Information Desk of the Main Library (which he walked by on the way from the North Entrance to the card catalog) he would have learned that the library staff already had prepared a document called "The University of Iowa Main Library Self-Guided Orientation." This tour would have provided Lyons with access to all of the information he sought, but did not find.

Additionally, he might have learned the function of the Information

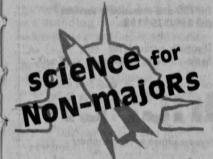

Arcade, the instructions for using those "cute" OASIS terminals, the location of the Interlibrary Loan Office and the floors holding all of those "books" that he asks the library to purchase. This information would have made Lyons aware of resources available to all students well beyond the library's immediate holdings.

Credit is due, however, on Lyons' observation regarding the condition of the computers on the second floor. Several banks of computers have not yet been completely installed. Lyons should realize that Weeg, not the library, maintains these computer bays. While the technology may be in disrepair, the people at Weeg have done an extraordinary job making these computers available for public use.

This criticism is intended as an intervention, not as a string of insults. It is, however, a defense on behalf of students for a unit of the university whose staff bends over backwards to meet the needs of all students.

We sincerely hope that the library staff recognizes Lyons' underresearched views are not those of the entire community. If a student feels lost, librarians always are available, helpful and courteous. They happily will provide you with assistance, and you will do better research. You also will avoid errors and insults like those in Lyons' editorial in your own writing.

Mad Cow Disease and how cows really kill you

Creutzfeldt-lakob Disease (CID). the brain disease like Alzheimer's disease that is thought to be caused by eating beef from cows infected with Mad Cow Disease (Bovine Spongiform Encepholopathy), has been causing deaths in the United States for years.

CJD has been reported as a cause of death in the United States since 1974, and has killed 2,614 people in the United States between 1979 and 1990.

While that may sound terrifying, CJD is a silent epidemic sweeping through the country causing slow demented deaths. Let's look at some facts before we swear off our Big Macs.

CJD killed .9 (less than one) person for every million people in the United States. The highest risk factor for CJD in humans is brain surgery or cornea transplants. About 10 percent of CJD cases probably are genetic.

To contrast, let's look at what probably will kill you. All these statistics are in number of deaths per 1 million people in the United states in 1994.

Heart disease8,76	9
Cancer (all forms)2,81	16
Stroke2,06
Pneumonia/Influenza31	5
HIV	61
Creut Adt-Jakob Disease	9

Heart disease, cancer and stroke, the three leading killers in the United States, are all linked to a diet too high in total fat, saturated fat and cholesterol. These are found mostly in meat and other animal products. You are 13,600 times more likely to die of one of these than CJD, and the government never told you that. Now that's a reason to give up your Big Mac.

Empire State tightens security | Gas-bill increase has people gasping

By Tom Hays Associated Press

NEW YORK - The Empire State Building was fitted with an airportstyle baggage scanner and two metal detectors Monday, a day after a Palestinian gunman went on a fatal shooting rampage. The mayor blamed the shootings on laws that allowed the man to buy a gun just weeks after he came to America.

Seven tourists were shot Sunday, one fatally, on the 86th-floor observation deck of the famous landmark, long a symbol of romance and tourism. The gunman, Ali Hassan Abu Kamal, then killed him-

An anti-terrorist task force was still part of the investigation, Safir said, but so far it had found no evidence that Abu Kamal was aligned with any terrorist group.

In Abu Kamal's hometown of Gaza City, relatives said he had been distraught over losing his life savings of more than $300,000 and had no ties to Palestinian radical groups. Abu Kamal called home Sunday and said he could not send tuition money to one of his sons, who is studying civil engineering in Russia, a son-in-law said.

A security camera showed Abu Kamal concealed his weapon under a long coat while entering the Empire State Building. He took an elevator to an observation deck visited by 3 million tourists each year.

Some witnesses said he was asking people where they were from, then said he was from Egypt before opening fire on a group of tourists, many of them foreign. As panicked sightseers stampeded toward exits, Abu Kamal shot himself in the head, police said.

The Chinese leader was cremated Monday, the day before his memorial service in the cavernous Great Hall of the People, off Tiananmen Square where he crushed a 1989 pro-democracy demonstration. Deng, 92, died last Wednesday.

An honor guard then carried the body in a clear coffin to a white bus draped in yellow and black ribbons.

Many of those gathered along the road wore white paper flowers or black arm bands of mourning. Some said they had been sent by their state-run industries and were positioned to fill any gaps in the procession. Few shed tears.

"I came to have a last look," said Liu Guilan, a 50-year-old retired worker at nearby Capital Iron and Steel, a state factory that prospered under economic reforms launched by Deng.

Liu said the crowds did not compare with those who mourned the death of Premier Zhou Enlai in

"When Premier Zhou came by, everyone cried," she said. "There were white flowers all around the gate (to the crematorium). We stood there for four or five hours

A retired official from the mining bureau cried quietly when the motorcade entered the cemetery.

"He really had an impact on the building of our country. We're eating, dressing better. That would have been extremely difficult before," said the man, who gave

Police were watching for any sign of emotion that could trigger unrest. The 1989 pro-democracy demonstrations - that Deng ended with a military assault - began with spontaneous protests after the death of ousted Communist Party head Hu Yaobang.

After much of the motorcade left the cemetery, a man climbed up a tree and tacked up a small white banner, saying: "Eternal Glory to Beloved Comrade Deng Xiaoping." Then a second young man from Shenzhen, the fishing village near Hong Kong that Deng's reforms turned into a boomtown, unfurled several sheets of computer paper

While crowds of journalists gathered around to take his picture and interview him, police nervously pushed the crowd away from the sidewalk across the street from the entrance to the cemetery.

Late Monday, armed police standing 10 feet apart cordoned off half of Tiananmen square.

Jiang was to give the memorial speech to rally the 10,000 Chinese mourners — foreigners were not invited - and the people behind him. After the memorial, Deng's ashes were to be scattered at sea, at his family's request.

Albright advises China on human-rights issues

Barry Schweid Associated Press

BEIJING - Declaring U.S. relations with China are the key to world stability in the 21st century. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright warned Chinese officials Monday that they must "act con-structively" and improve their country's record on human rights.

Otherwise, she said, China could face condemnation by the United States and its European

"I said I would tell it like it is, and I told it like it is," Albright said of exchanges she held with President Jiang Zemin and other top Chinese officials on the eve of a memorial service for Deng

She was the only Western leader permitted to visit Beijing during a six-day mourning period for the paramount leader. Albright said she considered that "an extremely good sign" that China will move toward greater cooperation with the United States.

Jiang put aside a speech he was preparing for the service to talk to Albright for 45 minutes. Prime Minister Li Peng gave her an hour and Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, two hours and 45 minutes.

Albright, speaking first at the U.S. Embassy and then at a joint news conference with Qian, signaled the Clinton administration's commitment to improving relations with Beijing. But she noted differences over human rights and a growing trade deficit - $39 billion last year up from $33 billion in 1995.

"There is no question our relations with the Chinese are a key to stability as we go into the 21st century," she told some 100 U.S. Embassy workers and family

Albright, on her first foreign tour as secretary of state, was received with respect by Chinese officials. Deputy Foreign Minister Li Zhaoxing greeted her with kisses on both cheeks at the airport.

But at the news conference, Albright said "problems do remain" in China's sale of missile technology and chemical weapons ingredients to other nations suspicions center on deals with Pakistan, Iran, Iraq and Libya and American and Chinese officials will meet in Beijing next month to go over them.

She gave no indication the Chinese yielded to entreaties she made on human rights after American officials handed over a long list of jailed political foes.

"We admitted we had a difference on it," Albright said of her plea that China treats its people better. "They understood the importance of the issue.'

Albright said if China did not ease up on dissidents, the United States would join with European nations in sponsoring a resolution criticizing China's record at a U.N. conference next month in Geneva.

"But there is still time," she said, mindful that political opponents are sometimes released without notice.

Fujimori: Police knew of rebels bringing arms to Lima

By Anita Snow Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — Police knew rebels were bringing weapons into Lima and failed to stop them before they seized the Japanese ambassador's residence, President Alberto Fujimori said, warning that some officials may be punished for negli-

Government and rebel leaders, meanwhile, held new talks Monday aimed at ending the two-and-a-halfmonth standoff at the residence and freeing the remaining 72 hostages.

Fujimori, in widely published comments Monday, said some National Intelligence Service and police officials shared responsibility for the hostage situation. He said investigations were continuing and those found guilty of negligence will be punished

The Intelligence Service gave information of a general character about the transport of arms ... from the jungle to Lima," Fujimori said during a visit Sunday to remote areas devastated last week by mud slides and flooding.

"Of course, it wasn't known where or at opportunity" the arms would used, he said. "There will be measures taken against those responsible."

Rebel leader Nestor Cerpa, who led the Dec. 17 takeover of the Japanese ambassador's residence, attended the talks Monday with his second in command, Roli Rojas Fernandez. The government was represented by Education Minister Domingo Palermo and attorney Jose Antonio Payet.

A white Red Cross sedan drove to the Japanese ambassador's residence, picked up the rebels and made the short trip across the street to the house requisitioned for the talks. The strains of the Tupac Amaru revolutionary hymn floated over the compound's wall as the car

After 2 hours and 40 minutes, mediators announced a new round f talks would be held today.

"The discussion took place in a cordial atmosphere," said Canadian Ambassador Anthony Vincent, reading a statement from the mediators. "The discussion dealt with a number of important issues."

Over the weekend, Fujimori and the Tupac Amaru warned that the talks were still at the "preliminary stage." The president reiterated the point Monday.

"In a preliminary talk, as its name indicates, you pave the road toward final talks so agreements can be reached," Fujimori told reporters after inaugurating a power plant in Masamari, 165 miles east of Lima. "Preliminary talks do not produce agreements.'

Rebel spokesperson Isaac Velazco said in a statement issued from the Tupac Amaru's European headquarters in Hamburg, Germany, that the government "lacks the will to accept the minimum point we established, which is freedom for our imprisoned brothers."

Since Tupac Amaru guerrillas stormed the diplomatic compound during a cocktail party, they have insisted their main goal was gaining the release of hundreds of comrades in Peruvian jails.

Fujimori repeatedly has rejected the rebels' demand to free prisoners, but recently both sides have toned down their public rhetoric.

The rebel statement also said no more hostages would be released and those who are sick could be treated inside the ambassador's res-

"I think it's cool that the university is celebrating it and that they're making a big deal out of it and having events for students," he said. "It's something to pass along when I'm older, to say that I was here for the sesquicentennial."

Coleman: I think the shortage in parking is really just a false percep tion. I realize that people want to park right downtown, but if I can't find a place I just park in the lot across from City Hall. It's only a half a block away ... no further than if I was going to a big mall, and park my car and walk. I realize that people feel really emotional about it and the university is doing what it can. I think having the Cambus is very helpful and we have been trying to keep up with the demand for bike racks for students who ride their bikes when weather permits.

DI: The DI is going to start looking into the alcohol problem we have at the UI. What is the UI doing to curb this prob.

Coleman: This is a project well need to work on with the city. We're trying to work between Iowa City public schools, both the high schools and the junior highs, because this is not a problem that usually starts when students get to college. One of the things we ought to try and pay more attention to and maybe we haven't in the past few years is the kind of alternative activities we offer. used for campaigning is weighing down the system.

"What we want to do is reduce the campaign spending so that the actual campaign is only a weeklong debate," Doellinger said. "It would give the students a closer look at the candidates and their issues, not on substance or name recognition."

The Miller-Henry ticket said their campaign speaks for itself by proving through experience what their ticket can do.

"Money is nothing that you can depend on in a campaign and it is definitely not an excuse for not being able to communicate with students," Miller said. "It is all about networking and the student body."

John Craiger, on the Miller-Henry ticket, said no one has "big pockets" - what matters is the candidates' stance on issues.

Interfraternity Council Vice President Mike Crystal moderated the debates, and said he was impressed by the turnout of students. Crystal said the number of students who did come proves there are some concerns that need to be addressed and the audience had really good questions.

"I have to thank Marc (Beltrame) and (UISG Vice President) Rob (Wagner), because it was their ticket that impressed the importance of student participation and helped

Another issue addressed at the debate was the possibility of rules that would keep tuition the same for students throughout their years at the UI. Doellinger and Crayne said they support the plan.

"When you come to the university as a freshman, you would pay that same price for your education all four years that you attend the university," Doellinger said. "That way, students can budget their money for college and not have to worry about tuition hikes.'

During Miller and Henry's rebuttal, the pair said they have been working with the Iowa state Board of Regents to develop a system that communicates how students' mon-ev is spent. UI communication studies Professor Bruce Gronbeck asked the candidates how much they thought the students really wanted something like a "dead day," or days allotted before finals week where no new material would be introduced. An audience member also expressed concern over how the UISG would accomplish getting the

The FDA announced Monday that high doses of six popular birth-control brands, when taken within three days of unprotected sex, are 75 percent effective at preventing pregnancy.

For every 100 women who have unprotected sex during the second or third week of their menstrual cycle, eight would normally become pregnant - but only two would if the women took emergency contraception, Dr. James Trussell of Princeton University said.

His research convinced the FDA that emergency contraception could prevent up to 2.3 million unplanned pregnancies a year, 1 million of which now end in abor-

"We're going to see a really big change here," said Trussell, who helped set up a hot line and Internet service that offers women information about emergency contraception and addresses of nearby doctors who already prescribe it.

He said women typically pay $21 for a cycle of birth-control pills plus the cost of a doctor's visit.

To work, two to four birth-control pills are taken anytime up to 72 hours after sex - not just the "morning after" - and then the same dose is taken again exactly 12 hours later. The brands include Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories' Ovral, Lo/Ovral, Nordette and Triphasil, and Berlex Laboratories Levlen and Tri-Levlen.

The pills prevent a fertilized egg from implanting into the uterus so it can grow into an embryo. If a woman already is pregnant, the pills will have no effect.

Emergency contraception is different from the controversial abor-final FDA approval and ends pregnancy by expelling an already growing embryo from the uterus.

The emergency contraceptive's side effects are nausea and vomiting, sometimes severe enough to prevent the pills from working. More than 4 million women have taken emergency contraception in Britain alone, and studies there have shown no serious side effects.

The FDA stopped short of forcing Wyeth-Ayerst and Berlex to relabel their contraceptives to add the emergency use, deciding instead to take the information directly to consumers and physicians.

It is highly unusual for the FDA to declare new uses for a drug when the manufacturer hasn't asked. The agency did name potassium iodide a radiation therapy after the Three Mile Island nuclear accident.

Legally, the FDA action is a request for the manufacturers to seek permission to advertise morning-after contraception - essentially a pre-approval pending the filing of the proper paperwork.

Wyeth-Ayerst reiterated Monday that it won't sell emergency contraception here and said it opposes any efforts to relabel its products. Berlex declined comment.

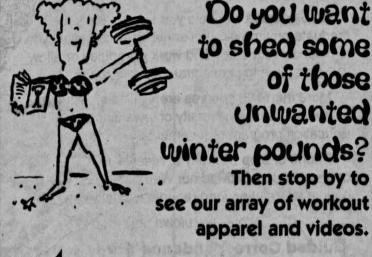

Litigation concerns aside, the companies also fear a backlash from abortion foes.

"We're outraged" by the FDA action, said Judie Brown of the American Life League, which opposes any use of birth-control pills but particularly objects to emergency birth control. "Our concern is over the fate of the preborn

Kentucky's Mercer to go pro

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky forward Ron Mercer will forgo his final two seasons of eligibility and opt for the NBA draft, coach Rick Pitino said Monday.

A news conference has been scheduled Wednesday, at which time Mercer will announce his plans, Pitino said.

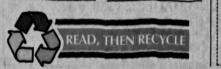

"If you say you're going, then he can concentrate on the NCAA Tournament and help us win another championship," Pitino said.

Mercer, who would not comment about his plans before practice Monday, but did say he has taken out an insurance policy to cover him until the NBA draft. Pitino predicted that Mercer will be one of the top four picks.

Mercer, a 6-foot-7 sophomore, is averaging 18.0 points and 5.2 rebounds for the No. 3 Wildcats.

Two more wins and the Hawkeyes

Although there is no specific formula to tell him so, Iowa basketball coach Tom Davis believes two wins in his team's final four games will get the Hawkeyes an invitation to the NCAA tournament.

"If we get to 11 wins (in the Big Ten), then I don't think we're in any danger," Davis said, "But it's going to be hard to get to 11 wins with the four games we have remaining.

Green Bay Packer Tyrone Williams to begin jail term

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - Green Bay Packers cornerback Tyrone Williams reported to jail Monday to begin serving a six-month sentence for shooting at a car two college championships and a Super Bowl ring ago.

Procedural delays enabled Williams to play at Nebraska and in the NFL after he was charged in the Jan. 30, 1994, shooting.

A two-time All-Big Eight cornerback at Nebraska, Williams pleaded no contest to charges of thirddegree assault and unlawful discharge of a gun in Lincoln.

He was convicted of firing two shots that struck the rear quarter panel of a car carrying Kevin Porter, then a player for the New York Jets, and university student Brooke Bohac. No one was

Bulls make easy work of Portland

CHIC (AP) — The last time the Chicago Bulls played Portland, they needed Michael Jordan's 22 fourth-quarter points to pull out a narrow victory. This time, Jordan and his teammates took care of matters early.

Jordan scored 30 of his 37 points in the first half Monday night and Chicago cruised to its seventh straight win, 116-89 over the Trail Blazers.

"We were much more ready physically tonight," the Bulls' Steve Kerr said of the 88-84 victory in Portland on Feb. 4. "That was the fifth game of the road trip and we didn't play well at all. Now, we're relaxed, rested and on a roll." On a roll, indeed.

The Bulls are 49-6 overall and 26-1 at home, both best in the NBA by far. They have won 19 consecutive home games. And they are on pace for 73 victories - one more than they had last season in setting a league record.

"We're in position to be able to beat that record," said Scottie Pippen, who had 22 points, 11 assists and nine rebounds. "It's the challenge of winning every night. We love to win to see if we can do what we did last eason — or better."

Magic 93, Pistons 84 ORLANDO, Fla. - Penny Hardaway scored 29 points and Orlando remained unbeaten under interim coach Richie Adubato, ending Detroit's six-game winning streak with a 93-84 victory Monday night.

The Magic improved to 4-0 since Adubato replaced Brian Hill, who was fired last week.

Hardaway atoned for a poor performance in a road loss at Detroit on Feb. 12 by going 11-for-16 from the field, including 4-of-6 from behind the 3-point arc. Rony Seikaly was the only other player in double figures for Orlando, finishing with 19 points and eight rebounds.

Arkansas admits four violations

By Harry King Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. - The University of Arkansas froze the salaries of athletic director Frank Broyles and basketball coach Nolan Richardson after admitting four violations of NCAA rules, but denied allegations it has lost control of its men's basketball program.

The school also said it would forfeit a basketball scholarship this year and next, and deny scholarships to junior-college transfers for two years.

In a 100-page-plus response to the NCAA, the university said it froze salaries for Broyles, Richardson and four other athletic department employees for a year.

The university, which won the NCAA championship in 1994, did not elaborate on the reason for the salary freeze for the 1996-97 fiscal year, beyond saying they were disciplinary actions.

The admitted violations include improper typing assistance by Kim Wood, daughter of Arkansas Chancellor Dan Ferritor, and the separate allegation that she lied to NCAA investigators. Wood resigned Aug. 26 as academic adviser for men's basketball.

The school also admitted "the inadvertent and technical administrative miscertification," of junior college transfer players Jesse Pate and Sunday Adebayo.

The school voluntarily declared Pate and Adebayo ineligible last February, shortly after the NCAA investigation began. Pate is playing minor-league pro basketball and Adebayo transferred to Memphis, where he is a starter.

The university also admitted that Brad Dunn, one of Richardfrozen, improperly transported a NCAA.

The school said it had or would name someone to deal specifically with certifying eligibility, move the academic adviser's office out of Bud Walton Arena, and suspended a summer-employment program for athletes at the Springdale Country Club. There were other corrective measures.

Classical quartet enlivens UI

By Greg Kirschling The Daily Iowan

Most hospitals are notorious for their Muzak, but for two weeks, the UI Hospitals and Clinics will enjoy authentic classical music by a prestigious classical quartet.

The Ying Quartet, comprised of four siblings, began a two-week residency Monday with the first of its several performances on the UI medical campus. The quartet's focus rests mainly on hospital performances, but they also will perform concerts at a few other untraditional venues, including high schools and the Ronald McDonald House, 730 Hawkins Drive

Their residency will culminate in a concert of Mozart, Bartok and Debussy in Clapp Recital Hall on March 7 at 8 p.m. But, for the quartet, the important thing is to reach audiences that aren't normally found inside concert halls.

"By its name, classical music suggests that the music has been around for a long time, and we really want to play for audiences who might not have had many chances to hear it and know why it is so important," said Phillip Ying, violist for the quartet.

During the residency, audiences on the medical campus and elsewhere can expect what Mark Towner, director of the hospital's Project Art program, called "interactive performances." Audiences will be smaller, and discussion may follow a few performances. Towner said this willingness to come face-toface with audiences is the quartet's biggest draw.

"It's world-class classical music," he said. "But equally exciting, maybe even more exciting, is that the quartet is made up of relatively young performers who have an incredible enthusiasm for alternative audiences.'

The Yings - Phillip on viola, Janet and Timothy on violin and David on cello - are familiar with this performance format. They have been involved in countless residencies, including a two-year residency in Jesup, Iowa, that was featured on CBS "Sunday Morning." In the future, the Yings plan to spend time at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., where they were all trained.

But first they must make it through a busy schedule here in Iowa City. Besides all the concerts, the Yings will also host master classes throughout the area. On Thursday, for example, the Yings Recital Hall at 9 a.m.

Deborah Dakin, UI visiting assistant professor of viola, said she is excited for her master class stu-
