raising defended

By Jim Drinkard

WASHINGTON - Defending telephone calls he made to raise money for President Clinton's reelection, Vice President Al Gore pointed to his 16 years on Capitol Hill, where dialing for dollars is a big part of life.

But Gore's experience in Congress also includes ample warnings about a critical prohibition in fund raising: Don't do it in a government building.

That's about the first thing they tell you at freshman orientation," said Michelle Davis, press secretary to House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas. Modern campaigning, and particularly the costs of television advertis- Gore

ing, have led members of Congress to spend increasing chunks of their time soliciting money. Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., estimates lawmakers now must raise a combined average of $1 million a day, and he said the costs of running for office have grown 73 percent in just four years

Clinton defended his vice president Tuesday, saying Gore's fund raising was important to "get our message out." At the same time, Republicans said the disclosures add fuel to their push for appointment of an independent counsel to investigate administration money raising.

Gore's role as a fund-raising point man is far from unique for vice presidents. Dan Quayle often was host for cocktails or dinner at the vice president's mansion for donors to Team 100, the inner circle of $100,000 givers to the GOP.

Amid all the frenzy, some rules remain clear. Both the House and Senate ethics manuals - and a White House counsel's memo, too point out that federal law bars solicitation of political contributions in federal office space.

So both parties set aside cubicles in their headquarters near the Capitol where their candidates can come to make fund-raising phone

"It's inconvenient," said Laura Nichols, Minority Leader Dick Gephardt's spokesperson. But lawmakers who want to make fundraising calls know they must walk the two or three blocks to a separate office, she said.

Many senators and senior House members, including Daschle and Gephardt, D-Mo., rent their own private office space on Capitol Hill for campaign and fund-raising

At his news conference Monday, Gore said he "understood to be lawful" the 50 or so solicitation See FUND RAISING, Page 6A Irving attended the UI Writers' Workshop as a student from 1965-67, and he later taught at the UI from 1972-75. In addition, Irving, a voracious wrestler, trained with the Iowa team during both stays, which he said helped train him as a writer as well.

Besides "Widow," Irving currently is writing two screenplays for his novels "The Cider House Rules" and "A Son of the Circus," both set to go into production sometime next year. Currently, he is promoting "Trying to Save Piggy Sneed," his collection of memoirs, short stories and homages that was released in paperback last month.

With so many projects on deck, Irving expects to finish "Widow" as late as fall 1999. Right now he's on page 679 (only two-thirds of the final version), and the story follows three "windows" of the title character's life: as a 4-year-old girl in Summing up a year of debates, confusion and uncertainty, UI graduate student and Hawkeye Court resident Gary DeBoer asked the Iowa City School Board, "Will there ever be a school for the Hawkeye Court Apartments?" during a public hearing Tuesday night.

The hearing continued the discussion over the issue of boundary changes, which would send about 100 Hawkeye Court students from Weber Elementary School to Coralville Central due to overcrowding.

Change is nothing new for the a channel to make friends and as residents of Hawkeye Court. The students of Hawkeye Court have switched schools three times in the last five or six years. The most recent move was in 1994, when they sent the students to Weber.

"Hawkeye Court shouldn't be moved again," UI graduate student, parent and Hawkeye Court resident Ningping Yu said. "It would be a bad idea to make Hawkeye Court move again."

Yu said her son Thomas has many friends at Weber, and he is unhappy about the move. Students on the bus have been signing a petition not to move to Weber, she said.

NEW YORK (AP) - Paintings or Penthouse? Bob Guccione's original oil paintings might bring him a bigger weekly paycheck than his sexy magazine.

Four of his original works are up for sale in a gallery at prices ranging from $200,000 to $350,000, the New York Post reported Tuesday. Selling one would earn him more in manhours than his $28,000 per week salary at Penthouse, the newspaper said.

"I began my adult life as an artist and started the magazine only as a way to make money for supporting my art," said Guccione, who describes the works as cubist abstract style.

UI Student Government OKs next year's budget

By Kristin Bauer The Daily Iowan

Despite anticipation over the election results, the UI Student Government met and unanimously approved next year's budget at the Union Tuesday night.

The budget for the priority I and II allocations, classified by the Iowa state Board of Regents, was voted upon. Priority I student groups are recognized by the regents while priority II groups are not. The Hancher Auditorium subsidy, a priority I

The university had denied unequal treatment toward McGriff and two others: Allan Nosworthy and Meron Wondwosen.

The probation meant they could not hold campus office. McGriff is a student senator; Nosworthy is a student senator and chairperson of the Black Cultural Center board; and Wondwosen is president of the Black Student Alliance.

Another student, Theresa Thomas, was found guilty of the same charges as the others, but she received a written reprimand.

Dan Robinson, ISU interim vice president for student affairs, decided to reduce the punishment after the students agreed to appeal their cases directly to him rather than to the All-University Judiciary.

hat a drunk person doesn't think as he stares at his car with keys in Man, those new laws against drunken driving are tough. I wonder if I should drive home? If I get caught I am in real trouble, not kinda in trouble like I would be under

Think about it. If I kill someone when driving home I get 25 years in the clink as opposed to 10. Ya know, 10 years wouldn't be so bad. I could catch up on some old reading, get in shape and maybe even get a law degree while I am in there. I couldn't booze though, that is one negative. Then again, I wouldn't have to see my mother in law ...

But 25 years ... man, that would be rough. I might have to become someone's boyfriend, ya know, because people in there are looking for longterm relationships. And I'll be pretty old when I get out. My law degree won't be worth too much, either. And my bod might be starting to get a little flabby due to age. Adding that extra 15 years sure makes a difference. If only they woulda' kept it at 10, I might actually drive home. And besides, I do not want to kill anyone anyhow.

Double crappola. If I get caught, I will have an OWI on my record not just six years, but forever. Anyone can handle having it on there for a measly six years, no problem. Now, no matter where I go, one night will trail me forever even if it never happens again. Even if I have been a good boy. It is like it is branded on my forehead. It is good that they changed the law to forever, though, because it would be horrible to take into account that people reform or people make mistakes.

Is this the three knockdown rule? Now I can only have a .08 blood alcohol level instead of a .10. I had it perfectly calibrated when I was just under a .10 so I could drive home, but now I dunno. I wonder if that last beer put me over the limit or not? Let's see, I start buzzin' at about a .07 and I was buzzin'

Letters to the Editor

What the UISG does for students

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to two articles in the Feb. 26 issue of The Daily Iowan that discussed safety and the UI Student Government. In one article, the DI discussed the UISG's tabling of a resolution authored by Sen. Dan Pinegar. This resolution's function was to urge the UISG to develop a concern with student safety, a fine idea and one I support. I could not, however, support the resolution's language; as a rhetoric instructor, I must point out that language is always crucial in convincing others to support

The language of the resolution seemed to state that the UISG was not concerned about safety issues; nothing could be further from the truth.

The UISG not only funds the Rape Victim Advocacy Program (RVAP) and SAFEWALK, but every senate executive encourages student senators to become SAFEWALK volunteers. The three senate executives, the vice presi dent and the president of the UISG have advocated SAFEWALK in a consistent and firm manner, taking care to include mention of SAFEWALK at every senate assembly and working with the SAFEWALK coordinator to encourage students at Late-Night Study in the Union to utilize SAFE-WALK's services.

Furthermore, UISG funds the Whistlestop! program, in which safety whistles are distributed to students through residence halls, the Greek system, the Women's Resource Action Center (WRAC) and other outlets, Members of the UISG serve on the Campus Lighting Committee and are dedicated to improving the quality of lighting for students on campus. We as members of university, city and national communities have much work to do in anti-violence training and education, safety coordination and general respect for other human beings. I am proud that the UISG is already working for the benefit of students in these areas, and that we do not need a resolution in order for us to think about the safety concerns of students. These concerns already direct senators in our daily work.

In the "Viewpoints" section, most students said the UISG did nothing visible for them. Besides the priority Student Government places on safety matters, there is some fairly obvious UISG work - funding the Bijou, River-Fest and every student organization on campus — that affects all students.

I encourage each student to get involved in directing the course of her or his own life. Take five minutes to pop into Room 48 in the Union to find out what goes on in the UISG offices. Take five seconds to call SAFEWALK (353-2500) if you need to walk somewhere on campus at night. Volunteer for SAFEWALK, WRAC or RVAP. Most of all, take care in your personal life not to perpetuate violence or degradation any human being. This will accomplish more than any resolution, however well-worded, that we pass in Student Government.

Former Cambus employee resonds to editorial

To the Editor:

This is in response to Mark Lyons' article on Thursday, Feb. 20 ("Still waiting for the Cambus"). As a former Cambus employee, I feel am qualified to refute his statements.

First, regarding the "loss" of service to Rienow and Slater, the Interdorm Route that was eliminated was the :06 and :36 past the hour. This particular bus was barely ever ridden and those who did ride it were the ones who had missed an earlier bus and were already late for class.

Contrary to popular belief, extending the Red and Blue routes to include Mayflower all day will not work. It takes 30 minutes to complete one circuit of the campus on each of these routes. In the evening there are less riders, so the bus schedule accommodates for this in its time schedule by going out to Mayflower.

During the day, when ridership is heavy, this would not be possible, because when more people ride the bus, it takes longer to load and unload and stopping distance increases because of the added weight. This is why buses are "late" during the daytime but not in the evenings. If you add the possibility of inclement weather, the extra time it takes to go to Mayflower and the time it takes to load passengers, it would be necessary to break speed laws, thus endangering the lives of all those on the bus. This is Adding another bus will not change the fact that it still takes a half-hour to circle the campus, and it would just add to the congestion and confusion of Iowa City traffic as it is. Mark, I suggest you do research before making a statement such as this one: "the addition of Mayflower would add almost no time." On a 30-minute route, five to seven minutes is a lot of time.

I can think of plenty of reasons to have to wait 30 minutes for a bus. Such as: When the weather is bad, the driver has to drive more slowly to ensure the safety of passengers. There are always more passengers on snowy/rainy days, which will use up more time. I shouldn't even have to mention that the traffic congestion caused by accidents, sporting events and the Cambus favorite, trains, all will cause large delays. We also have new drivers in training almost every week Would you rather get to class on time or get there safely? I'd rather be safe than sorry.

The bus schedules are posted at almost every stop. They are on all of the buses. There is no reason not to know when the bus will arrive at your stop. It would be much easier for all of us if we would just get our lazy butts out of bed 15 minutes sooner and get to the stop five minutes before the bus gets there. Instead, we all get up 15 minutes before class and expect a bus to be there when we need it. It would take a lot less energy to get out of bed earlier than it takes to moan and complain about the bus service all day. It's free. We ought to be thankful and more courteous to our drivers.

The curse of racial gerrymandering

Last week, the Supreme Court struck down another racially gerrymandered voting district in New York City. The district lines changed direction more than 900 times to include as many Hispanic-American voters as possible, and was known as the "Bullwinkle District" for its bizarre moosehead shape.

The impetus behind this districting strategy comes from liberal civil-rights leaders trying to guarantee a place in Congress for racial minority members. Creating a district with a minoritymajority gives a white politician, particularly a white conservative, all the chances of a blue whale in the Sahara. Gerrymandered districts have been drawn all over the country, and ever since the Supreme Court began knocking them down last year, liberals have howled. Bill Clinton is in a huff over it, and conservdeclaring a

Most people seem to believe liberals created the districts, but they didn't. Civil-rights leaders came up with the idea, but the Reagan and Bush administrations created them for shrewd tactical reasons.

For each minority-majority district created by racial gerrymandering, the byproduct is three to five lily-white conservative districts around it. One district guarantees a liberal victory, and the rest are shoo-ins for conservatives. Liberal civil-rights leaders never thought of that, but Reagan and Bush, not distracted by identity politics, saw the whole story clearly and couldn't believe the liberals

The creation of these districts significantly helped the Republican Party take over the House of Representatives in the 1994 election.

But liberals still don't seem to see it that way, even though it is demonstrably true. And the conservatives, always glad to see a liberal Congressional seat threatened, have forgotten (or most likely never realized) why they were drawn in the

Some have suggested the politicians elected in these ghettoized districts are purposefully ignoring the segregated inner cities. The reason? If ghettos were suddenly deconcentrated, the elected official would lose the minority-majority voting district that put them into power.

Oh, liberals would never sell out their own people, the naif say. Only conservatives do that.

But consider last year's welfare-reform bill. Attached to it were massive cuts in food stamps for working families. There were no policy reasons for the cuts. You can't call the recipients lazy, because they are already working. And you can't say the food stamps were too expensive, because if they were, Congress wouldn't be talking tax cuts. The food-stamp cuts were just mean. Yet, every Democrat in the Senate running for re-election voted for that nostrum (except Paul Wellstone of Minnesota.) If you believe a liberal would never sell out his or her own people for political gain, you may want to reconsider your position.

This is not to say that abolishing the gerrymandered districts will help the inner cities. But it would undercut incentives for resistance to it and help rebuild a liberal majority in the House. Congressional liberals are less likely to starve the poor or abandon the ghettos when they don't have to answer to the root-canal economics of the Republi-

The liberal defense of gerrymandered districts is not a cause but a symptom of why so many Americans today perceive liberalism as irrelevant. The Democratic Party of late has become a machine that advances identity politics with no discernible gain, and co-opts Republican economics to the detriment of the wage-earning majority. The typical American simply does not feel welcome in the Democratic Party, even though the Democrats throw the occasional scrap to the poor or middle

The typical American does not feel welcome in the Republican Party, either. Vlora has been at the center of violence that began six weeks ago to protest failed investment schemes in which nearly every Albanian lost money, and has since escalated into general anti-government unrest.

Troops sent to Albania amid chaos

The government has imposed censorship, forbidding reporters to travel to the area and restricting what Albanian news media can say about the unrest. Because of that, it was impossible to gather a complete picture of the situation Tuesday.

But even the government has acknowledged that much of southern Albania is out of its control.

In Vienna, former Chancellor Franz Vranitzky said he would lead a delegation of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe to help facilitate dialogue between all political groups. The European Union also said it would soon send ministers to the country, and NATO Secretary-General Javier Solana on Tuesday ruled out military intervention. "Politics has to be done, diplomacy has to be done," Solana said in London.

"Human cloning would have to raise deep concerns, given our most cherished concepts of faith and humanity," Clinton said. "Each human life is unique, born of a miracle that reaches beyond laboratory science. I believe we must respect this profound gift and resist the temptation to replicate ourselves."

Current law prohibits spending federal money on human embryo experiments, but the prohibition expires Sept. 30. Sen. Christopher Bond, R-Mo., has urged Congress to make that ban permanent.

Those restrictions, however, did not explicitly address cloned embryos, nor did it apply to all federal agencies, so Clinton moved to close that loophole.

"Science often moves faster than our ability to understand its implications," Clinton said. "Any discovery that touches upon human creation is not simply a matter of scientific inquiry. It is a matter of morality and spirituality as well."

Clinton also asked private researchers — who are not covered by his directive - to voluntarily hold off at least until the National Bioethics Advisory Commission can study the matter, a move with which biological and medical researchers agreed. "It's a wise idea to call a time out. This has happened a bit sooner cloning could make in agriculture, than people expected," said Carl

Andre Woolridge hopes to survive his final days as a Hawkeye and enter the NBA Kent McCausland

By Chris Snider The Daily Iowan

There is no telling where Andre Woolridge would be if not for the game of basketball. There is a possibility he might not even be alive. All his life, basketball has been the Iowa senior's ticket to the world. It has conference. taken him across the country - to a tournament in Hawaii, one in Alaska, and back to Hawaii. It took him on a two week tour of Europe in the summer of 1994. And now, it appears to be taking him to a career in the NBA.

It was the game of basketball that got a young Andre Woolridge off the streets of North Omaha and into a gymnasium, where some years later he blossomed into one of the premiere college basketball players in the

one of 10 finalists for the Associated Press National Player of the Year Award and a leading candidate for Big Ten player of the year honors. His 19.25 points per game heading into his final game in Carver-Hawkeye Arena tonight is tied for the league lead. His 5.82 assists per game is the best in the

But through it all, the all-time assist leader in Iowa history has kept his focus on the task at hand - living life one day, and one game, at a time. His ability to avoid looking too far into the future comes from an understanding of the value of life.

There are a lot of people missing that I grew up with in Omaha," Woolridge said, referring to the gang-related deaths he was forced to deal with early in life.

pletely avoid the gang scene, he was able to separate himself from it in certain ways. Gang members supported Woolridge's career, telling him when things were about to 'go down' and when not to be around. They also encouraged him to play basketball.

't wasn't long before members of the community began recognizing Woolridge's potential as well. He remembers a day the pastor of his church pulled him aside and gave him some

"He witnessed a fight at the basketball court that I was playing at. But I was just watching the fight because they had stopped the game," Woolridge said. "He pulled me aside and told me I needed to stay alive. He saw the talent. I was probably a seventh grader or eighth grader. He saw that I could play basketball, but with the gang problem

Woolridge took the advice to heart. Although he didn't start going to church on a regular basis until the age of 16, he did start doing things to beat the streets. He began going to the Omaha Boys Club to play sports, read books and stay out of harm's way. The Boys Club taught Woolridge

"everything" he needed to know. An only child, he referred to the other boys there as his 400-500 brothers. Unfortunately, all of his brothers didn't make the right decisions, Woolridge said.

"You start going to the boys club about six or seven years old until 17 or 18, but around ages 13 or 14 they start disappearing," Woolridge said. "So many guys I grew up with (were)

Iowa coach led medal charge in Munich

By James Kramer The Daily Iowan

The city of Ames was forever immortalized in wrestling history during September of 1972.

It was then that four United States wrestlers with close ties to the home of Iowa State University brought back medals from the Olympic Games in Munich. Two of those wrestlers swear their Olympic appearances 25 years ago were made possible by 1972 - 1997 one man - U.S. teammate and former Cyclone wrestler Dan Gable. A world champion in 1971, Gable was heavily favored to win a gold at 149.5 pounds in '72, and he succeeded without a challenge. Brothers Ben and John Peterson were not even expected to make the team, but by training with Gable in the months leading up to the Games, the Petersons elevated themselves to medal status as well. Ben, an Iowa State alumnus, won gold at 198.5. John competed for the University of Wisconsin in Stout, an NAIA school, and took home a silver at 180.5. The fourth medalist with Ames

"I would have never made the Olympics if I hadn't been training with Dan," John Peterson said. "He had a way to help you reach your potential."

A two-time NCAA champion, Ben Peterson was more highly-touted than his older brother. Still, many of the "experts" in the wrestling world did not feel either sibling belonged on the American team.

"John and I didn't let those kinds of things bother us," Ben Peterson said. "Gable was a key factor of that.

Pete Thomspson/The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's basketball coach Angie Lee has seen it all this year. From Michigan's first win in Iowa City to an upset of Western Kentucky on the road, her team has both soured and been grounded. But with Monday's Big Ten Tournament championship, the Hawkeyes qualified for the NCAA Tournament and kept alive their preseason hopes of a Final Four appearance. Daily Iowan sportswriter Wayne Drehs spoke with Lee Tuesday, one day after her team's upset of the No. 16 Fighting Illini in the championship

DI: You shed a few tears yesterday during the cutting down of the nets after the win. What was going through your mind at that point?

AL: I think those tears were tears of, "It's been hard, real hard this season." They were tears of pride because that's what that team had to play with to do what they did. There were a lot of doubters, but the team didn't doubt themselves. They talked confident all week long about going in and doing what they did. DI: Would you say it's more ful-filling to prove the doubters wrong rather than fulfill expectations?

AL: We wanted to fulfill those expec-See Q&A WITH ANGIE LEE, Page 2B

Gritty Penn State to test Hawkeye momentum

Mike Triplett The Daily Iowan

The intensity and emotion of the Iowa men's basketball team during its victory over Purdue Saturday created a tournament-like atmosohere - exactly what a team needs heading into the NCAA's Big Dance.

But first things first. The Hawkeyes will need to keep up that momentum this week for their final two regular-season games against the bottom two teams in the Big Ten, Penn State and Northwestern.

The Nittany Lions visit Carver-Hawkeye Arena tonight, with tipoff scheduled for 6:35 p.m.

"I think our intensity can be sustained for another week, though you never can count on it," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "I think this team, because they're so new to this And two years ago, then-freshman

Rowing facts

Rowing is actually the oldest profes sional sport in America. In the early 1900's, rowers were making $6000 a race and were national heroes much like NFL players are today.

■ One rowing tradition is throwing the coxswain in the water after winning a race. Also, at major championships, every team bets their shirts and whoever wins the race wins all

■ Wisconsin has the only varsity men's crew in the Big Ten. The Badgers have been rowing since 1870.

■ New eight-man boats cost $18,000. Four-man boats are $10,000. Oars alone are $240. The peaker system coxswains use in order to shout commands costs $750.

■ Men row at two classes, lightweigh and heavyweight. Lightweight boats can not exceed an average of 155 pounds per person. In the heavyweight division, men are usually etween six foot and six-foot-eight.

"Unlike Hayden Fry and Tom Davis, when it comes to competition I have no control over what happens," he said. "I can talk to the team and get them ready, but once the boats go out on the water, by the rules of rowing I can say nothing. I can cheer and things like that but it isn't like I can call time out or anything if I see something that could be changed."

Until the water level tapers and the Iowa River is deemed safe enough, the team will have to continue packing into the make-shift training facility in the basement of Halsey Hall. However repetitive it may seem, junior J.D. Jorgenson said crew members have no problems maintaining motiva-

"Motivation comes from wanting to get back on the water," Jorgenn said. "It also comes from wanting to take our crew to the championships and winning."

Jordan moves up on scoring list

By Mike Nadel Associated Press

CHICAGO - It's been fun, Nique. Catch up to you soon, Hondo. Big O? Gotta go. One by one, the NBA's big-time scorers are being overstepped by Michael Jordan. The Chicago Bulls' star is seventh and climbing after racing past Dominique Wilkins on Monday. Just how high will Air Jordan

He should surpass John Havlicek and Oscar Robertson and climb into fifth place by the end of the season, should ascend to third if he returns for 1997-98, and could catch Wilt Chamberlain for No. 2 if he stays around for two more years. Only Kareem Abdul-Jabbar seems out of Jordan's reach. "You're not surprised at the incredible amount of scoring Michael does," coach Phil Jackson says. "With Michael, just about anything's possible.' Gunning for an unprecedented ninth league scoring title as he tries to take the Bulls to their fifth championship in seven years, Jordan obviously isn't slowing at age 34. He's scoring 30.8 points a game in his 12th season, down only slightly from his NBA-record 31.9 career average

He put in 31 Monday against Milwaukee to give him 26,277 points - 19 more than Wilkins.

"That's a lot," Jordan said with a shrug and a smile. "I feel old. Some of the things I've done over the years are starting to add up.'

Wilkins is San Antonio's top scorer this season but is expected to miss several games with a hamstring injury. Assuming Jordan stays healthy and maintains his 31point average, 'Nique has little chance to catch him. Within two weeks, Jordan should pass Havlicek, who has 118 more points. Robertson, 433 points ahead, should fall behind Jordan next month.

Jordan trails No. 4 Elvin Hayes

by 1,036 points and No. 3 Moses Malone by 1,132. If Jordan returns next season, and he has hinted that he will, he'd likely zip past Hayes and Malone before the calendar turns to 1998 That would leave the Big Two of Chamberlain and Abdul-Jabbar. strong now as it was in the 1960s. Chamberlain is 5,142 points ahead of Jordan, Abdul-Jabbar

"The scary part about it is: What happens if I hadn't retired for a year and a half and hadn't been hurt in my second year?" said Jordan, who quit the game in October 1993 only to return in March 1995. "I'd probably have Wilt Chamberlain yelling at me It's all debatable who's the great-

The only player other than Jordan to average 30-plus points over a career, Chamberlain has criticized Jordan's accomplishments while making the talk-show circuit to promote his new book. Chamberlain contends the league isn't as

"It's his competitive juices still flowing," Jordan said. "When I'm 60 years old, I'm pretty sure I'll be just as competitive.

"I respect him. He's given me motivation to chase what he's done. don't try to get into a confrontation with him about what he did in his era and what I do in this era.

cover songs are only a tape player away, as bootleg recordings become more accessible to a wider audience.

With assistance from the Internet, the purchasing, trading and collecting of unauthorized live recordings of bands have become a rapidly expanding market.

The appeal of bootlegging is listening to a live performance and the novelty of owning a copy of a concert you attend, said Bill Patterson, special projects director for Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment said.

"It is kind of taking ownership in the band itself when you have a tape of that," he said. "I've heard people scream at lull sections of a

While taping concerts for retail sale is illegal, bands such as The Dave Matthews Band, Rusted Root, Widespread Panic, Phish and Blues Traveler allow people to tape shows for their own private use, Patterson said.

Some bands sell "taper section" seats at their Shrieking fans, guitar feedback and obscure concerts for fans to record the shows, with ticket prices running about the same as tickets on the floor, Patterson said.

"In the balcony of the Rusted Root concert, I think people were taping," he said. "We didn't sell taper seats for that concert, though, but Rusted Root allowed the taping."

Patterson said SCOPE signs a contract with an artist that outlines whether taping is allowed at a show for private use.

"We confiscate all audio and video equipment during shows that don't allow it," Patterson Pad Timmons, manager of the In Flight music store in Ann Arbor, Mich., would not release names of the bands they have in their tape library, but said the store will tape a live concert onto a blank tape for their customers. "If you buy a blank tape, we charge you $3 for the tape," Timmons said. "It is just the price of a retail tape. If you want, we will tape you something from our tape library. In Flight keeps a complete listing of the live shows recordings - only sold to in-store customers - in a log book. Some artists allow taping directly through their speaker systems, Timmons said.

"I know a lot of people who would put a cards." Arsenio returns to TV

By Jennifer Bowles Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Arsenio jumped at the opportunity. Hall's back in the house - everybody's house, that is.

After a three-year hiatus from Hall admits he made some mistelevision, the one-time dapper denizen of the late-night talk show scene is returning today in a sit-com called, well, "Arsenio." It's on ABC at 8:30 p.m. (rated TV-PG).

But don't be confused. Unlike "Roseanne," "Ellen" "Cybill" and other star-driven shows, Hall's character is not named Arsenio. plays Michael Atwood, Atlanta sportscaster who is newly married to an attorney (Vivica A. Fox of "Independence Day"). They're surrounded by a Hall racially mixed cast of friends and co-workers.

"What I wanted to do was 'Friends' integrated. I'm a huge fan of (David) Schwimmer's and I wanted to call it 'Schwimmer with a Tan,' " Hall joked recently inside his bungalow at CBS Studio Cen-

Hall, somewhat sensitized by focus groups who said his latenight show was "too black," hopes his sitcom will have a wider

"It's not a black show," Hall said. "It's a show about people and rela-tionships and I think people of every color will have these same problems and experience these same laughs in their life."

Hall says he got the sitcom bug a couple years back when he did a cameo on Fox's "Living Single."

Shortly thereafter, he was approached by Jeffrey Katzenberg and Steven Spielberg with the idea of doing a sitcom for their company, DreamWorks SKG. He UI junior Miki Walsh sco apartments all over Iowa before finding a place that w allow her to keep her two "m mates" without putting her i doghouse with landlords.

Higher rent and arduous sees for distant, off-campus a ments are two disadvantag keeping pets for

Walsh, yet they say the rewards of therapet having four-legged companions are worth the hassle. "The animal through the animal through the sand a call through through the sand a call through through the sand through the sa hassle. and a ca Walsh said it was extremely difficult to find an UI senic apartment where she could keep her two geretrievers, Montana and Nalsh calls the dogs her mates, and said she would be without them.

"I'm very fortunate to live loo and be able to have a dog said. "They each have their personalities. They're just friends."
